Pilgrim visits

YOUNGSTERS IN THE ABC PRE-SCHOOL were entertained by the performance of Alice Dietz of Norfolk. In one part of her program, Dietz showed the youngsters how the Indians taught Pilgrims to plant corn, using two fish.

The Wayne Herald seeks children's letters to Santa

Christmas letters to Santa Claus are needed for the December issues of The Wayne Herald.

Young readers are asked to print or clearly write any letters to Santa Claus. If necessary, get Mom or Dad's help. Letters to Santa are invited from school groups, scouts and members of other groups, or individuals. The Wayne Herald will do what it can to see that Santa reads your letters.

Letters should be signed with the children's full names and the town where they live. If letters are being written as a school or scout project, they should be identified by class number, troop number, etc.

The newspaper will print as many letters to Santa as space permits prior to Dec. 25.

Retailers brace for city council

By Mark Crist
 Managing Editor

A battle is shaping up for the Wayne City Council meeting Tuesday night and local liquor retailers say they are ready.

The city council is considering whether or not to approve changes in Sunday liquor sales and extend the time beer and wine can be sold. On first reading, it passed 5-3. On the second reading, the council voted 4-3 against the ordinance with councilman Ralph Barclay absent. Barclay voted against the ordinance on first reading.

Liquor retailers say they want the city's ordinance changed to comply with state laws. City council members opposed to the change say under state law, the city has the option to make the change. The state law, passed earlier this year, permits changes in Sunday liquor sales.

"I don't want to see the city mandating morality," says El Toro Owner Gary Costilow. "That (morality) should be a personal decision."

"I don't think Sunday sales are going to contribute to alcohol abuse because the person (who's an alcoholic) is going to be stocked up whether it's Sunday or not."

Costilow says liquor retailers have the support of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce.

COUNCILMAN Darrel Heier, an outspoken opponent of the change, says he believes there's nothing wrong with current city laws.

"I think we have a good system already," Heier says. "I've only had people from the side which I've voted say they appreciate my vote. I haven't had anyone call to say they don't appreciate it."

The present ordinance prohibits off-sale liquor on Sundays and allows for sales from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m.

For beer and wine, off-sale is permissible from noon to 1 a.m. Sundays. The proposed change would permit on-sale and off-sale for beer and wine from 6 a.m. to 1 a.m. and off-sale and on-sale liquor from noon to 1 a.m.

Councilwoman Jane O'Leary says just because the state law says Sunday liquor sales are permissible doesn't mean it's necessary to change Wayne's law. She says her primary opposition to the proposed law is the off-sale liquor clause. She says she supports extending the beer and wine times because as it stands it's a nuisance.

"I've got mixed feelings about all of it," she says.

ONE RETAILER says if the law changes, it doesn't necessarily mean that she will extend her store hours to include Sunday sales, with the possible exception of times during the holidays.

"We're selling these items to adults," says Ilene Lutt, owner of Rain Tree Packaged Liquor. "Who are we to prohibit customers of their right to purchase alcohol? We don't say that they can't buy diamonds on Monday or clothes on Tuesday, so why should we tell them when they can buy alcohol and when they can't?"

All of the retailers interviewed by The Wayne Herald say they don't have a problem with the laws alcohol retail establishments have to follow. They note, however, that it's unfair that they don't have the same sales privileges that regular retailers have.

"I've had people come in on Sunday mornings wanting to buy the products I sell and I've had to tell them I can't sell them what they want to purchase," Costilow says. "That's a hard thing for any retailer to do."

COSTILOW SAYS since the issue first came to light a month

Hospital offers questions and answers over new advanced directives policies

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is an exact duplicate of the new advance directive policy adopted by Providence Medical Center.

Effective Dec. 1, federal law requires the Nebraska Department of Social Services to prepare a written description of Nebraska's law concerning advance directives. The federal law also requires Medicaid-participating hospitals, nursing homes, home health agencies, hospice programs, and health maintenance organizations to distribute this description to adult patients.

In Nebraska, adults 19-years-of-age who are capable of making health care decisions generally have the right to say yes or no to medical treatment. As a result, you have the right to fill out a paper, known as an "advance directive." The paper says in advance what kind of treatment you do or do not want under special, serious medical conditions — conditions that would prevent you from telling your doctor how you want to be treated. For example, if you were taken to a hospital in a coma, would you want the hospital's medical staff to know your specific wishes about the kind of medical treatment that you do and do not want to receive?

This information can help you understand your right to make decisions in advance of treatment. Because this is an important matter, however, you may wish to talk to your family, close friends, your doctor and your attorney before deciding whether you want an advance directive.

Question: What is an advance directive?

An advance directive is a written statement which reliably documents that you have made a particular health care decision or have appointed another person to make that decision on your behalf. The two most common forms of advance directives are: a living will; and a durable power of attorney for health care.

However, an advance directive can take other forms or be called other things.

An advance directive allows you to state your choices for health care or to name someone to make those choices for you, if you become unable to make decisions about your medical treatment. In short, an advance directive can enable you to make decisions about your future medical treatment. You can say "yes" to treatment you want or say "no" to treatment you do not want.

Question: What is a living will?

A living will generally states the kind of medical care you want or do not want if you become unable to make your own decisions. It is called a living will because it takes effect while you are still living. The Nebraska Legislature has not adopted any particular laws or form of living will; however, living wills are not prohibited in Nebraska. A living will should clearly state your choice with regard to health care.

Question: What is a durable power of attorney for health care?

A durable power of attorney for health care is a legal paper naming another person, such as a husband, wife, daughter, son or close friend, as your "agent" or "representative" to make medical decisions for you if you should become unable to make them for yourself. Your agent, or representative, is guided by your instructions and you can provide instructions about any treatment you do or don't want. Nebraska has laws on durable powers-of-attorney.

Question: When do advance directives take effect?

Your advance directive would take effect only after you no longer can make personal decisions. As long as you can make personal decisions on your own behalf, your health care givers will rely on you, not on your advance directive.

Question: Do I have to write an advance directive?

No. It is entirely up to you whether you want to prepare an advance directive. Without the advance directive, questions may arise about the kind of medical treatment that you do and do not want to receive. Your advance directive may help to solve those important decisions.

Question: Can I change my mind after I write an advance directive?

Yes. To change or cancel an advance directive, simply destroy the original or take some other action to notify those who might rely on your advance directive that you are changing it or no longer want to have it effective. If you have given the advance directive to your doctor, notify your doctor of your change of mind. If you have given the advance directive to your doctor, notify your doctor of your change of mind. If you have given it to another health care provider, such as a hospital, nursing home, a home health agency or a relative, notify them that you have changed your mind. If you have written a new document, you should give a copy of the new document to your doctors, other health care providers and anyone else who may be involved in your care.

Question: Must a health care provider follow an advance directive?

Each health care provider will have policies concerning advance directives. The health care provider you choose must inform you in writing of its written policy regarding advance directives. Therefore, you should review and discuss with the provider and others the provider's policy on following your advance directive.

The federal law regarding advance directives only requires health care providers, unless they object on the basis of conscience, to follow state laws or court decisions which recognize advance directives.

Question: Do I have to write a written document to express my wishes to my doctor?

No. Generally, your wishes stated in person directly to your doctor carry more weight than an advance directive, as long as you can decide for yourself and can communicate your wishes. The main advantage of the advance directive is to state your wishes in a situation when you are unable to make this decision and communicate on your own behalf.

Question: What choices should I include in my advance directive?

If you choose to write an advance directive, the content of the advance directive is entirely your own choice. If you have questions, you may talk with family members, close personal advisors, your doctor, or others who could help you understand your choices. Your advance personal directive should be personal to you and should reflect your own personal choices.

Question: If I have an advance directive in one state, will it be

Area 4-H professionals attend national confab

Vickie Genoff, state 4-H specialist from Concord, Lynda Cruickshank, Wayne County extension agent-home economics, and Maddie Pederson, extension agent-home economist from Madison County, recently attended the National Conference of Extension 4-H Youth Agents in Phoenix.

They were among 1,000 youth professionals from throughout the United States and Canada who attended the five-day meeting on Nov. 3-7. The extension agents shared program ideas for today's youth.

Approximately 90 seminars and research sessions were offered, covering such topics as youth development, educational design, community management, strategic planning, volunteers and diversity.

"IT'S LIKE fertilizer for the brain," said Cruickshank. "The new ideas and role models you see at convention help other agents to grow and become more professional."

Cruickshank added that the session she attended that might prove to be most helpful to Wayne County was "Developing a Juvenile Diversion Program."

Cruickshank pointed out that many states have educational programs for juveniles and their parents that help keep 90 to 98 percent of offenders from returning to the system.

PARTICIPANTS also heard a number of nationally known experts address youth development issues.

H. Stephen Glenn, educator and psychologist, outlined strategies for raising children for success. Donna Alvarado, president of Quest International, described curriculum and teaching methods that promote self-esteem and positive youth development.

Albert Yates, president of Colorado State University, addressed the importance of diversity in extension youth programming, and Scott Momaday, a Kiowa Indian and University of Arizona English professor, stressed the value of honoring heritage through oral tradition.

FOUR-H programs are conducted in all 50 states and several U.S. territories. In addition, 82 other countries have youth programs similar to 4-H.

Current programs focus on decision-making, critical issues facing youth, and developing life skills.

followed in a different state?

The laws are unclear about honoring an advance directive in one state if it was written in a different state. However, because an advance directive tells your wishes regarding medical care, it may be honored wherever you are, if it is made known. If, however, you spend a great deal of time in more than one state, you may wish to consider having your advance directive meet the laws of both states, as much as possible.

Question: What should I do with my advance directive if I choose to have one?

Make sure that someone, such as a family member, knows that you have an advance directive and knows where it is located. You might also consider the following:
 • If you have a durable power of attorney, give a copy of the original to your agent or representative.

• Ask your doctor to make your advance directive part of your permanent medical record.

• Keep a second copy of your advance directive in a safe place where it can be found easily, if it is needed.

• Keep a small card in your purse or wallet, which states that you have an advance directive and where it is located and who your agent or representative is, if you have named one.

ago, that he has gauged his Sunday business. He says 79 percent of the El Toro's sales are for food.

Black Knight Co-Owner Nick Sieler says most of his Sunday sales are for food items, not drinks. All of the retailers interviewed say the only reason they want the city laws changed is for convenience.

Currently, Wayne is the sole community in northeast Nebraska which doesn't comply with the new Nebraska law. Communities in the area which have changed city laws to meet state codes are Wakefield, Winside, West Point, Norfolk, Battle Creek, Beemer, Wisner, South Sioux City, communities in Dakota County and communities in Dixon County.

"The city council is getting away from the issue," Sieler says. "I don't think people will do anything on Sunday that they would do on Wednesday. We're getting hung up on philosophical problems."

"... I'm not going to argue over morality. The issue isn't juveniles with alcohol or alcohol abuse. What we're trying to do is just provide another option" to customers.

Wayne High selects Bell

Each year one sophomore from Wayne High School is eligible to attend the HOBY seminar. Applications are taken from interested students and selection is made by a committee of teachers.

Selected to represent Wayne High in 1991-92 is Robert Bell. He is the son of Robert and Penny Bell of Wayne.

Audra Sievers, daughter of Mike and Lynelle Sievers, was selected as the alternate.

Last year, nearly 13,000 sophomores participated in the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation (HOBY) Leadership seminars in all 50 states, the Bahamas, Canada, Jamaica, Japan and Mexico. All tenth graders are eligible to participate. The program is available to students at no cost to the student or the school.

HOBY is an all-expense-paid seminar which provides the opportunity to meet, interact with, and question regionally, nationally and internationally known leaders. The organization's purpose is to bring together a select group of high school sophomores who have demonstrated leadership ability so that they can interact with groups of distinguished leaders in business, government, education and the professions to discuss present and future issues.

Work progressing along

State College Board of Trustees offers 45 full tuition scholarships for colleges

The Nebraska State College System will award more than 45 full tuition scholarships to eligible high school seniors planning to enroll at Chadron State College, Peru State College or Wayne State College in the fall of 1992. The scholarships, sponsored by the System's Board of Trustees, are renewable full-tuition grants. The value of each scholarship, if renewed for four years, is approximately $5,000. Deadline for application is Jan. 15, 1992.

The Board of Trustees' Scholarship program has been in effect for nearly two decades. More than 1,500 Nebraska high school graduates have received scholarships during that time.

"These scholarships help outstanding Nebraska students get a first rate education at one of Nebraska's excellent state colleges," noted Gretchen Hirschbach, chair of the State College Board of Trustees. "Our goal is to keep outstanding Nebraska talent in Nebraska. Because of the quality of our scholarship recipients, the program is an investment in the future of Nebraska."

To be eligible for a Board of Trustees' Scholarship, the applicant must be a graduating senior of a Nebraska high school; be enrolling for the first time as a full-time college student; be in the top 25 percent of his or her high school graduating class; score above the 85th percentile on a college entrance exam (ACT score of 25, SAT score of 1100); and provide at least one written reference from a high school teacher or administrator.

A candidate may apply to only one of the colleges. Applications and information are available from all public and private high school guidance counselors in Nebraska, or from individual state college financial aid officers at Chadron State College, Peru State College or Wayne State College.

Wayne woman on staff

Pamela Mentzer of Omaha has joined the Rural America Radio Network (RARN) staff as National Underwriting Manager. RARN is a consortium of 45 public radio stations throughout the United States that have joined together to develop underwriting and programming projects. It was created by the Nebraska Public Radio Network (NPRN) and is headquartered at the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center in Lincoln.

With member stations from Maine to California and Alaska to Florida, listeners to RARN stations are a diverse and wide-ranging group. Listeners to these station's form a pool of potential consumers for corporations interested in reaching this multi-faceted audience. The stations, by themselves, would be too small to attract national underwriting dollars.

Mentzer will be working with RARN Executive Director Steve Robinson, also the network manager for the Nebraska Public Radio Network.

"The potential for the Rural American Radio Network to become an important source of new revenue for our member stations is strong," says Robinson, "and I expect Ms. Mentzer to do a very effective job of tapping that potential."

Mentzer comes to RARN from a nationally known telecommunications firm where she was marketing coordinator and director of advertising.

Mentzer holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Communications from Wayne State College.

Snow helps but officials say moisture still needed

While recent snows have provided a welcome blanket for winter wheat, a lot more moisture is needed to saturate the soil before the next growing season, said a University of Nebraska-Lincoln soils specialist.

Alice Jones said as much as 12 inches of moisture are needed to fill depleted soil profiles for next year's crops. However, the early snowstorms will provide only a fraction of that amount, the soil erosion control/conservation tillage specialist said.

Only three to more than 12 inches of snow fell across the state, she said.

"On the average, it takes about 12 inches of freshly fallen snow to equal one inch of rain," Jones said. "For hard-packed snow on the ground, it takes about eight inches of snow to equal one inch."

What's more, not all snow soaks into the ground when it melts, she said. On cold, windy, sunny days, some snow will evaporate directly into the air, Jones explained. Or it can run off if it melts rapidly.

While the storms don't provide much water, they did protect winter wheat from severe stress, Jones said.

"Usually, winter wheat is just now beginning to harden off for the winter," she said. "The early cold weather could have killed a lot of wheat. But snow is a great insulator for wheat."

"The snow has protected the wheat from low air temperatures," she added. "If we get back to more normal November temperatures, the winter wheat will still have plenty of time to harden off for the winter."

Getting the lights working

CITY MAINTENANCE CREWS KEPT BUSY LAST week preparing for the holiday season by making sure all the lights downtown were in good working order. In this instance, city crews work over a building in the middle of the block between 2nd and 3rd Streets. The city crews found that on many occasions they had to use the city's cherry picker in order to reach the top of buildings along Main Street. The lights were officially turned on Friday night, to begin the holiday season.

Students see chance to take part

Wayne High School students will have the opportunity to participate in a unique social studies program which could lead to prizes and scholarships and a study trip to Washington, D.C., in June 1992. The school has registered to participate in the Close Up Foundation Citizen Bee.

The Citizen Bee is an academic program which focuses on social studies and progresses through school, regional, and state competitions. Three students from the school will advance to regional competition and top students there will advance to the state final later this spring.

State winners earn a trip to Washington to participate in the Foundation's government studies program and the national competition. Winners of the national event receive college scholarships totaling $48,000 presented by the American Honda Foundation. The national Citizen Bee has been funded by Burger King Corporation, the Milken Family Foundation, KPMG Peat Marwick, and Kraft General Foods. On the state level, sponsors have included a number of businesses, individuals and school districts across the state including Continental Airlines and Lincoln High School.

More than 150,000 students, representing 4,000 schools across the country, will participate in the Close Up Citizen Bee this year.

William Sharpe, an educator at Wayne, will be coordinating the Citizen Bee at the school.

Close Up also sponsors local government studies programs in communities across the nation, produces academic publications and videotapes, telecasts public affairs programming nationwide via C-SPAN (Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network), and conducts the Civic Achievement Award Program for students in grades five through eight.
