System may require two forms

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

If you thought the first personal property tax schedule you got from the county assessor's office was enough, check again. You may have to fill out two.

The change comes on the heels of the Nebraska Legislature's passage of LB 1063. "If you were to file a schedule today, you should file one based on market value and one based on depreciated value," says Wayne County Assessor Joyce

Despite the change, the assessor's office is not sending out personal property tax forms, but rather they're having the public come into the office to pick them up. Reeg says they're walting to see what

"Our office is not going to the expense of mailing out these forms at this time as the market value approach may not be used to tax personal property," she adds.

ACCORDING TO Reeg, the personal property schedules that list depreciated value are being drafted by the Nebraska Department of Revenue and are not available at this time.

Businesses and farm owners, as well as those who have been putting it off, have until June 1 to submit new forms listing equipment, machinery or breeding livestock that is being depreciated.

Under LB 1063, assessors are supposed to have all personal property values compiled by June 20.

According to published reports, most taxpayers are not expected to file their personal property tax forms until after May 12, when voters decide whether to change the state's constitution to provide for the legal backbone of the personal property tax system.

LINCOLN, NE - This past week the Legislature voted to submit a proposed constitutional amendment to the people at a special election at the May primary. This vote represented major progress in addressing the state's personal property tax problem. It required 40 of the 49 legislators to vote favorably, a feat that is seldom real-ized for issues that are so controversial. However, it was time for all to recognize that for the long term best interests of all Nebraskans the final proposal was as equitable and that proposal was as equitable and balanced as it could be. The constitutional amendment, LR 219 CA, would authorize the Legislature to separate personal property from the uniformity and proportionality provisions which apply to real property. If the amendment fails at the polls, all personal property will be on the tax rolls for this year as for the Supreme Court's ruling last July. I do not believe that anyone that understands the diverse economy of Nebraska could justify that re-

Earlier that same day, the Unicameral passed an amended version of LB 1063, some times known as the 3R bill. The consensus among Legislators was that LB 1063 balanced the economic, political, and constitutional concerns shared by the representatives from across the state. This was accomplished after many hours of debate with compromises on various amendments that were offered.

Bill was in Nebraska's best interest

The final form was achieved with a proposal to exempt farm machinery from sales tax if those benefiting from the exemption replace some of the revenue lost to local government. This was to be done with a 1 1/4 cent tax on be done with a 1 1/4 cent tax on energy consumption. However, late Monday evening, the large energy users successfully lobbled several of the farm senators to substitute a $4 per ton tax on fertilizer rather than the energy

Substituting a tax on fertilizer for the sales tax on energy goes against the basic concepts that we have abided by since introducing the bill. A tax on fertilizer shifts some of the burden to those who receive little of the benefits of the sales tax exemption on machinery while the energy tax would have rested with the large operators that are purchasing machinery, primarily the large irrigators. I fought against this provision during debate and will continue to seek its repeal in the future.

I voted for the passage of LB 1063 and LR 219 CA even though I do not agree with every provision. However, I believe that our elected representatives should establish local tax policy not the Courts and these measures are needed to accomplish this. I am proud to say that fellow Northeast Nebraska Senators Hefner and Schellpepper joined me in the vote count that was necessary to present the issue to the voters in May.

Judging from the many phone calls and letters, there has been a great deal of misunderstanding due in part to misleading information as well as amendments to the proposals that were discussed. LB 1063 in its final form basically:

1. Eliminates the need that ALL farm and business equipment, machinery, inventory, livestock, and stored grains are on the personal stored grains are on the personal property tax rolls because of the court order.

2. Eliminates the 5 percent sales tax on new and used farm equipment and machinery.

. Establishes a $4 per ton tax on fertilizer.

4. Establishes a system where agricultural personal property and business personal property are treated the same

5. For tax purposes personal property will only include property that is depreciated on the federal tax forms for purposes of off-setting an income tax liability. (This does not include depreciated improvement to real estate). The value of this property will be established by taking its purchase price and subtracting all depreciation taken. Once the property is tion taken. Once the property is fully depreciated it is no longer taxed.

If you have questions as to the final form of these proposals and how any of these changes affect your operations, please do not hesitate to call (471-2716) or write my office for information.

Other reasons

Congressional leaders and the power elite are rushing around these days trying to convince the American voters that the congressional check kiting scandal is not a good enough reason to implement term limits.

They are right. The fact that scores of congressmen abused a special privilege that allowed them to knowingly write rubber checks without penalty or interest, is not reason enough to put legal limits on the amount of time an individual may enjoy such privileges.

Taken alone, the house bank scandal may not be reason enough for the implementing of such a drastic change in our system of government as term limits on elected leaders. But, the new scandal taken in context with the attempted secret pay raises congress people granted themselves two years ago, and taken in context with the rampant abuse of privilege in other areas, and taken in context with the thinly veiled efforts to make political gain out of Judge Thomas' Senate confirmation hearings and taken in context with the namby pamby approach congressional leaders take to the misconduct of peers, it is indeed time to discuss ways to tear down the insulation that political leaders have placed between themselves and the real world.

Congress was never intended to be a body of career elitists. The whole idea was to avoid aristocratic government abuses by creating a system of citizen involvement. Pay and privilege were not the original incentives for getting people to put their hats in the ring. It was service and obligation. Serving in Congress was a noble endeavor in the early days of our republic. Citizens left their careers for a time, sacrificed for the service of their country and then returned to gainful employment, albeit, generally better off personally.

Citizen legislators knew what life was like on the outside They knew that ordinary citizens had to balance a checkbook, obey the laws and live without the benefit of self imposed pay

Career legislators have lost touch with that reality in the rarified atmosphere of congressional gyms, free hairstyling and scores of tax-paid staff members to handle complaints from the

So far, the only lame arguments we have heard against term limits is that they would do us harm because good, righteous, upstanding and powerful people for their constituents would be turned out of office routinely.

And, if the power of the legislative branch is reduced, term limit opponents argue, that would increase the power of the bureaucracy and lobbyists. An entrenched evil Congress is better than an entrenched evil bureaucracy is the argument.

Are we to believe that there are only a few good people (the ones in office presently) who are able to serve? Are we to believe that no other good people would take their place after two terms

We believe a term limit plan would make Congress more accountable and thereby even make all-of government more

In the current climate of news about congressional antics, we don't think it is going to be all that difficult to get the necessary petitions signed to require a term limit vote.

Pay raises, Congress and the cut (so to speak) in our taxes

I have a golden opportunity for all of you this week. If you're fortu-nate enough, you can spend more money than you make, or you can spend all the money the federal government doesn't want to give you in tax refunds next year early only to have the feds charge you for it next April 15. for it next April 15

The first deal requires that you be elected to Congress. While I'm aware the filing deadline to be in Congress has passed, you can still get in by running as a write-in candidate.

If elected, all you have to do is spend more than your $10,000 as spend more than your $10,000 a month salary and you have it i REALLY don't blame U.S. Representatives for the zillion-plus checks they have overdrafted. I can see how it can happen. After all, if they can't balance the fedan, if they can balance the real budget, why should we expect them to balance their own checkbooks? It could easily be said that if they're overdrafting their accounts when they can deposit $10,000 each month, then they deserve another pay raise. I'm por deserve another pay raise. deserve another pay raise. I'm not saying that, I'm just saying it could easily be said.

On the occasion when you overdraft your Congressional ac-count, all you have to do is cry foul or get down on your hands and knees like Jimmy Swaggart and beg for forgiveness while admitting your misdoings

The advantage of having Congressional Representatives getting in trouble like this is twofold, If you're lucky enough, you get to see politicians and bureaucrats get on their hands and knees and squirm like nightcrawlers when the moisture dries up from the previous

"The noble old building on Capitol Square, which thirteen years ago looked down on a small village, and in the interval has witnessed the almost magical growth of a great and prosperous city. nights' rainstorm. If representatives aren't trying to hide, you get to hear a whole new array of excuses, never before dreamt of in the history of mankind; many of which are suitable for framing.

OF COURSE, if you're not brave enough to run for public office, the government has decided to do you a favor. They're giving you approximately $14 extra in each of your paychecks, starting March 1.

That's going to mean a lot to me. It means that I can go out to eat a budget-priced meal once a week and still have enough change left over to buy a six-pack of Coca Colar (Of course; if it's on sale, then I can afford two six packs).

The thing the feds have failed mention is that with this socalled tax break is that we have to pay for it come April 15, 1993. It's like having the federal government float an interest-free loan but because it's an election done to make politicians look

Maybe that will help the U.S. Representatives who take advan-tage of their interest-free, debt heavy checking accounts. Heaven knows, we don't want them to vote themselves another pay increase.

President Bush, during his first resident bush, during his first days in office, worked to upgrade the ethical standards of people in government by appointing an eight-member commission of seven honest lawyers (no, that's not an oxymoron) and one former astronaut (for balance) to study the government ethics and rethe government ethics and rec-ne government etnies and recommend legal reforms.

Bush pledged to establish a code of conduct for government (especially in the executive branch) that would "be simple, without the content of the cont uniform, fair, far reaching and intuitively correct."

A laudable goal even if it is impossible to achieve. Kind of like balancing the federal budget. How can we expect people who don't know how to balance their own checkbooks to figure out a way to balance the federal budget? (But that's another issue.)

The president's ethics commission dutifully issued its recommendations in the first year of his term. Has anyone seen them since? I doubt it.

Three years of check bouncing, sexual harassment hearings, leaking secrets and pay raises voted for in slight of hand fashion convinced us we were right.

To be sure, there were some good ideas in the recommendations, like the one banning all honoraria for all federal officials and employees in all three branches of government.

But none of the commissions key recommendations dealt with the Big Bs (booze, broads, books as in checkbooks and balms as in drugs).

The president naturally didn't want his restrictions to be so tough that they would "discourage able citizens from entering public ser-

I submit that the very reason many able (ethical) citizens chose not to enter public service is the reputation for low conduct that many people in government seem to aspire to. Neither did the president want to lose half the bureaucrats and lawmakers in office cur-rently, if the ethical standards were raised too high, it might drive a

Say, that might solve two of the most difficult problems facing our government. We could balance the budget and raise ethical stan-dards in one quick move. Nobody asked me, but I'm go-

 When in office, government officials at all levels should take their salary and expenses and nothing more from anywhere. That's enough, if you want more, get.out.of office and write a book or do consulting work. Also bălance your own checkbook.

Letters

A few observations

Mr. Mark Crist has been roundly taken to task for his views on country music. I would like to add a few observations of my own. To me it doesn't make a lot of sense either to criticize or to praise any particular musical style on the basis of personal preference. What you tell me about your likes and dislikes may reveal your personal preferences but tells me nothing about what is valuable in a musical style. All music is a product of the culture from which it comes, nothing more, nothing less. When he associates country music with excessive beer consumption, Mr. Crist seems to suggest that it is as much the type of people who like country music as the music itself which he dislikes. Music is only a combination of certain sounds. It is what those sounds mean to people that makes them important.

He seems to be headed for some reasonable criticism when he writes that other styles do not "translate" well into country music, but then all he can say is that (in the case of Steppenwolf), he liked the original version better —per-sonal preference again — or that (in the case of Dylan) he didn't like the original and the country version was worse. Again, not that there are no reasons given as to why the translation doesn't work. The bottom line is that Mr. Crist never does give any reasons for disliking country music that have to do with the music itself. Until he is able to do this, there isn't much point in arguing. Christopher Bonds

Brussels sprouts or rat poison: the choice legislators had to make

By Melvin Paul

Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN - It was Brussels sprouts time for a lot of rural senars in the Legislature last week.

They found themselves having to swallow something they didn't really care to. But the other op-tion, it seemed, was like swallowing rat poison. I guess, given such a choice, I would eat Brussels sprouts, too. (Hold that mail, Brussels sprouts fans, I don't have to like them if I don't want to).

What I'm writing about, of course, is the tax measures that were given final approval in the Legislature last week

In action that will likely long be remembered, senators voted in favor of Governor Nelson's plan that would return farm machinery and equipment and breeding live-stock that are being depreciated to local property tax rolls.

They also put on the May 12 election ballot a constitutional amendment that is needed to implement the Nelson plan.

The votes ended more than a month of emotional, exhausting gut-wrenching and high-pressure debate over solutions in the Legis-lature for dealing with the July Nebraska Supreme Court decision that said the state's current struc ture of property tax exemptions was unconstitutional.

Senators had to come up with a new tax plan if they were going to keep the court's decision returning all machinery, livestock, farm inventories and business inventories to local tax rolls from taking effect. The rural senators decided the best way was to eliminate all personal property taxes, and raise sales and income taxes to make up for the $100 million in revenue local governments would lose from

But at every turn they were outflanked by the urban senators, who shad the votes to stop them. Governor Nelson also opposed the plan because he said it would shift pian because he said it would shift business tax burden to individuals. That, he said, would assure that voters would reject the constitu-tional amendment most agree is needed to ultimately solve this tax

The focus turned to the 3R plan taxing farm machinery at its net depreciated value, a plan esti-mated to increase property taxes by about $15 million (4 percent) for farmers. Rural senators tried to make it palatable.

They did get a rebate for sales taxes paid on machinery and equipment purchases, which for many rural senators was a glass of flat beer to help those Brussels sprouts down. But it helped. The $14.6 million cost of the machinery sales tax exemption was funded in part by a $7.5 million tax on fertilizer, assessed at $4 a ton. That averages just over $100 for each of the state's 60,000

Story of the rise and fall of Nebraska's capitol erected on each side of the build-> moved to Lincoln, and since that time it has been very little used. Chicago builders, some time ago, examined the building, and declared it unsafe; and hence came what was considered to be the necessity for tearing it down, to make room for the construction of the proposed High School."

After some final day drama, the constitutional amendment proposal got the 40 votes it needs to go on the May ballot. So now it's all in the hands of the voters. It will take a sell job to get it passed.

The farmer naturally isn't going to like it very much. But maybe the homeowner won't either, considering if the Legislature had allowed the Supreme Court decision to take effect, homeowners would have received a hefty cut in prop erty taxes. As it stands, statewide homeowner taxes are projected to drop very little under the plan the senators adopted. We'll listen to the arguments.

But maybe it's one of those things where just about everyone will have to hold their nose and eat up.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Ne-braska Press Association.

For more than a year and a half after Nebraska became a state, В Omaha remained its physical capital. The State Legislature met in the old territorial capitol building while a new capitol was being constructed in Lincoln. An account of the building's rise and fall, pub-lished in the Omaha Weekly Her-ald in 1870, tells the story:

By the Nebraska State Historical Society

we shall see no more of a building which has been the pride of our city and State in years gone by. On yesterday the work of demolition commenced, and it will be continwithout delay until the last brick has been upturned, and the foundation displaced...."

"It was constructed in the year 1856, and was first occupied by the Territorial Legislature in 1857. A Government appropriation of A Government appropriation of $50,000, was made for the purpose of erecting a capitol. Under the management of Governor the management was soon Mark Izard, this amount was soon exhausted, with the building only half completed. The citizens then half completed. The citizens then took hold of the matter, under the lead of Jesse Lowe, who was then Mayor. City scrip was issued to the extent of $50,000, and the building was completed without delay, under direction of Hon. A.S. Paddock, Secretary of the Territory. The plan of the building was much more extensive than would appear from its present appearance. Large from its present appearance. Large columns, with heavy casting, were

Shopping in Wayne makes cents

Rose Rieken and Leona Hagemann both agree that shopping in Wayne "Just Makes Cents."

"I do most of my trading right here in Wayne," said Rose. 'I don't like the great big crowds stores in larger cities have."

Both ladies agreed easy access to stores and the great service Wayne merchants provide is very important to the senior citizen sector in the community.

Shopping in Wayne allows you to save on gas, said Leona. But she said the most important reason to shop in Wayne is that doing so helps "keep our businesses open and going strong."

"It hurts when you see shops close up in our small towns," added Rose.

Rose and Leona agree with the common sense advice of Jim Bodette on the radio commercials currently airing in Wayne. 'We all benefit when the local economy is strong," they say.

That's why they say "Shopping in Wayne — It Just Makes Cents.'

Wayne resident John Dall

now—some 13-plus years later, the seniors are still having a ball.

hors form around the Wayne area including those from Laurel, Concord, Carroll, Wakefield and Pender gather at Melodee Lanes for bowling and exercise. This league, however, is a little different than regular city bowling leagues because the stakes aren't as high. You're not competing for championships because the two teams are different every week.

teams are different every week.

That's not to say nothing is on the line either because the losing team is expected to buy coffee for the winger.

The league secretary, a post now held by Duane Creamer since 1991, divides the bowlers at random as they enter the door every Tuesday and Thursday during bowling season and just once a week during the summer.

Once the teams are divided handicapped is figured at 100 percent to make things easier. Then the bowlers bowl three

Then the bowlers bowl three games and scores are compared to decide the winner.

"I used to bowl in the Friday night couples league," Dall said.
"Then I had to quit because of back problems and was forced to switch to a lighter ball. I still loved the game of bowling so I called the game of any proached value." few friends and approached Val Kienast, (owner of Melodee Lanes) about the possibility of a senior league."

The rest as they say, is history because today the Senior League because today the Senior League is alive and thriving with 52 members bowling at one time or another this season. "We average between 24 and 29 bowlers a day," Creamer said. "So far the average scores have ranged from 109 to 181 and we've had a few 600-plus series."

Dall gives a lot of credit for starting the league to his daughter, Karen Hansen. "She did a lot ter, karen Hansen. She did a lot of work in organizing the end of the year banquets and with the organization of the league," Dali said. "One year she even got together some trinkets for awards at the banquet and that went over really well."

Dall said the reason why the league grew so fast is because of word of mouth. "We had about 20 members that first year and things just continually grew," Dall said. "Sometimes Otto Baier would just see seniors open bowling and he would approach them, and the next thing you knew they were bowling with us."

Bowlers-range from age 50 all the way up to 91 with some bowlers experienced from past leagues while others have no experience. Others simply are bowling after a long lay-off but every senior, regardless of experience, is encouraged to attend for some good clean fun and exercise.

Records show that the most ever in attendance for one afternoon of bowling is 38 with 19 bowling on each team. "We usually average bowling on between six and eight alleys," Creamer said.

The end of the year banquet draws the bowlers and their spouses for a night of eating out and to reflect on the past year's highlights. "I'm very pleased with the jobs that Otto Baier and Duane Creamer have done as secre-taries," Dall said. "I don't believe I would do anything differently than what they are currently doing." Things run smoothly for the seniors because of their simplistic approach to the twice a week outing. Even during the month when the high school takes over the alleys, the seniors gather at Melodee Lanes and then drive to bowl in Wakefield, Laurel, Pender or Norfolk.

One man in the league has held his curren't status as the "Cookie Man" since 1979. That's when Man since 1979. Inat's when Clarence May began organizing sign-up sheets to take turns buying cookies to go along with the coffee following bowling.

The seniors in the league all get along very well and when one of them is hospitalized for any reason, the league buys a get well card and everyone signs it.

This league may represent the seniors but one thing is for certain, When this group of 25 or 30 bowlers get together, the odds of them having a strikingly good time is postly and is pretty good.

JOHN DALL, left, founded the Senior Bowling League over 13 years ago and is still an a tive participant. Dall was also the first secretary of the league. A position he held until Otto Baler, center, took over in 1981. Duane Creamer, right, took over the reigns for Baler a few years back and is currently at the helm.

Basketball season ending thoughts

The Nebraska State Boys Basketball Tournament came to a close Sat urday and with it, the end of another season of hoops in Nebraska. Of course the biggest news of the year in hoops in our state—no, make that the biggest news in hoops in the nation on the high school level, came the biggest news in hoops in the nation on the high school level, came, when Wahoo had its 114-game win streak snapped by Ogallala in the semifinals of state on Friday night in Lincoln.

Twent to Lincoln last Friday to watch the state tournament with a good friend of mine, Steve Muir. On the way down we discussed all of the games that we'd be watching and of course we both had it figured out—who was going to win each game—and of course we were wrong.

I waited in anxious anticipation to watch the great teams from Grant and Wahoo play but it was Tecumseh, (my mother's home town) and Ogallala stealing the thunder and the ovation from a full house at the Devaney Center.

Devaney Center

It was obvious that both teams expended all of their resources in those semifinal contests as each were beaten in their respective championship semifinal contests as each were beaten in their respective championship games on Saturday.

Tecumseh had a tall order to fill to defeat the top two seeds in successive days and they nearly pulled the feat off but a Jay Korth jumper at the buzzer gave Battle Greek the championship.

Ogallala, on the other hand, looked like a completely different team against Pius than they did the night before playing Wahoo. I'll put it this way. If Ogallala had played Wahoo like they played against Pius, Wahoo would have won by 40 points and if Ogallala had played Pius like they did against Wahoo, then the Indians would have beaten Pius by 25.

At any rate, that's the joy of the state basketball tournament. I always get a kick out of watching the student sections compete against each other at the same time their respective teams are going at it.

The only thing that disappointed me was when the Ogallala student section began chanting towards the end of their upset over Wahoo. They were yelling, overrated phrases which is completely absurd.

Wahoo's feat will never again be duplicated in this writers opinion let alone in our state. Ogallala students can't even dream of ever coming alone in our state. Ogallala students can't even dream of ever coming close to such a record and it was a little depressing to see such an unclassy act as the finishing touches to a classy performance by the western based Enough about the state tournament. Now that the season is over for Wayne and Wayne State I'd like to just say, one thing—shame on you Wayne for your pathetic support of the high school and college basket-ball games.

I'm talking about fan support and attendance. This year may have been one of the worst I've ever seen for lack of attendance. What in the world is wrong with this town.

Like always, there are exceptions to the rule. The people that I see at the games are always the same and their patronage is second to none. This is not the problem.

The problem is people that don't show up for games but are always quick to second guess coaching decisions that are made in games that they aren't even at. I guess I can't understand why the attendance in this town is so poor.

town is so poor.

I love hearing the excuses of not being able to afford game tickets, or there is more to do in a bigger town than to go watch games. Granted, basketball isn't loved by everyone and that's perfectly fine.

However, I see many basketball fans everyday on the street and unfortunately, that must be where they stay because I sure don't see them in the gyms watching a good Wayne High or Wayne State hoop game.

Hey, it's not just the residents of Wayne that I'm talking about. How about the college kids and the high school kids. I've been to college games where I've barely seen enough students to fill up half of the bleachers and yet Wayne State boasts over 4000 enrollment.

I just think it's ironic that the smaller towns in our area draw better numbers of support for their respective high schools than we do in Wayne for our high school and college.

Again, this isn't directed to those of you who do a great job of coming out time and time again to support the Blue Devils and Wildcats. I'm not out time and time again to support the Blue Devils and Wildcats. I'm not even saying that you should come to every single home game because there are many circumstances which don't allow that to happen.

What I am saying, however, is that our high school and college deserve more respect than what they are being given.

Golf course to open soon

Alright, that's my monthly chewing out, now on to something that I know a lot of people have been wondering about—the golf course.

According to Wayne Country Club golf pro Larry Berres, the course will tentatively open on Saturday, March 28—weather permitting. Berres said that it could possibly open earlier for golfing only, (no pro shop), if superintendent Ken Dahl gives the o.k. but that depends on the weather and the course conditions.

County board holds meeting

It was either a dull day for the Wayne County Commissioners or they didn't see any-reason to give the go-ahead on any items on their agenda.

Of the topics discussed, the one which the commissioners made the most progress on was giving approval for the Logan Valley Golf Course to sell liquor on Sundays beginning at noon.

Jerry Royal, representing the Wakefield golf course, requested that the commissioners approve Sunday liquor sales since the Nebraska Legislature had made it possible under a 1991 law. Logan

Salute to agriculture

Couple shares thoughts of 45 years on the farm

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

Cliff and Leoma Baker sat quietly at their dining room table, sipping on a cup of morning coffee. Leoma, gazing out the bay win-dow, shared what she believes makes living on a farm part of Ne-braska's good life.

"Just sitting at this table and looking out, you can see the land, you can see the garden and you can see the church we attend a half mile away," she says. "That's what I like about living here: You're out in the open and it's your

The Bakers, married 45 years this summer, have done it all. They've harvested the land, growing corn, oats, beans and other ing corn, oats, beans and other grains. They've raised hogs. They've raised hogs. They've rared for horses. And they still tend to the cattle.

THIS IS THEIR livelihood. Agri-culture is in Cliff's blood and his love for his work and compassion for the lifestyle is something Leoma shares.

"I'll give you my two cents worth," Cliff says. "I have to go back to my first and second grade teacher. She always said that I was more interested in what was going on outside the class than what was going on inside.

"... In any profession, you have to have an interest in what you're doing and what you're doing has to be something you love."

Cliff, whose education was complete when he finished eighth grade, says farming is a full-time occupation. He admits today that there's times he'd like to get away and travel — to Florida, perhaps but traveling hasn't always worked out.

"He always says he doesn't have anything else to do, so he might as well do what he enjoys," Leoma says. "That's something we all can learn from.

While Leoma has never really helped with the day-to-day opera-tion of the farm, she's like many farm wives of the past. She stays at home and cares for the house, sews clothing, cleans and prepares

THE BAKERS, honored by Ak-Sar-Ben as a 100 year farm family in 1986, took over the farm from Cliff's father Will in the 1960s. He purchased the farm from his mother in 1973.

Will Baker, who took over operation of the farm in 1910, purchased it in 1918 from his father John Baker, Sr., who started the operation in 1886 after moving to Nebraska from Illinois in 1884.

During Cliff's school years, he says his mind wandered to farm life. That was especially true in the spring, when it was time to plant and care for new farm animals. Leoma teases him that his mind was on working the land, not on school studies.

"I've always had a great love for livestock," Cliff says. "My two greatest loves were horses and cattle. We had horses just up until LIFF AND LEOMA BAKER HAVE been married for almost 45 years, taking over the family operation in the 1960s. While they admit things have changed in the industry, they both agree that they wouldn't change their lifestyle for anything. On another occasion, they all came to support us when our barn burned down. They helped us clean up the mess and they brought us food to eat." Probably the greatest tragedy of their lives together was when the barn burned. In it, Cliff lost two horses he prized and approxi-mately 1,000 chickens. They also lost some hogs, although most were able to escape the flames.

TODAY, THE couple enjoys having their grandchildren visit. Cliff and Leoma have three children: daughter Cathy, and her husband Larry Echtenkamp; daughter Connie, and her husband Jim Schmeichel; and their son Kim and his wife Renee Baker. St. Mary's finishes parish mission

St. Mary's Parish in Wayne re-cently concluded ISAIAH 43 Parish Mission preached by Fr. Greg Comella, C.Pp.S. from Berkeley,

A Mission is a preached event that calls individuals to renewed living of Christian life, according to Rev. Fr. Don Cleary, pastor of St. Mary's.

The Parish Mission began with invitational preaching at all the masses on the weekend of Feb. 15-16, and then continued with a session each night from Sunday through Wednesday. Each night followed a different theme, with a different ritual action.

Sunday's theme was "God's Unconditional Love" with a ritual renewal of baptism and confirmation.
Monday's theme was "Conversion and Salvation" with a ritual celebration of reconciliation. Tuesday's theme was "Jesus: The Healer" with a ritual of anointing, and Wednesday's theme was "New Life" with celebration of Eucharist and a "missioning" ceremony. and a "missioning" ceremony.

Unique about the ISAIAH 43 Parish Mission was the participation of the members of the parish in witnessing and in ministering to each other through the ritual ac-tions, said Fr. Cleary. Several parishioners shared their personal stories of conversion and healing.
"ISAIAH 43 Parish Mission is the first component in a process to make the parish a more evange-lizing community," said Fr. Cleary. Taking place during Lent is the second component called "Coming Alive in Faith," a six-week program for personal, spiritual growth. It consists of six weekly sessions on the Fridays of Lent, each session begins with a formal presentation and is followed by small faith-sharing groups. "A third component," "Sharing Your Faith" will be offered sometime in the future.

Once a regular event in many parishes, a Parish Mission had not been held at St. Mary's for many years. One person who wasn't able years. One person with washt above to attend every night of the Mission said nonetheless that it helped him see the need "to be an active, caring and person-oriented Catholic."
Another said that "the Holy" Spirit was in evidence throughout."

Spirit was in evidence throughout, and suggested that some who at-tended the first evening's session were "hooked" and attended the entire Mission even though they had not planned to. A third individual noted that "lay people ea-gerly participating in the evening rituals and ministering to each other reflected the Mission's goal of evangélization."

Fr. Comella has had extensive experience in lay-spiritual renewal and spiritual direction. He is now in administrative work within his own community, commonly known as Precious Blood Fathers. lowa State, Ogallala upsets bring attention to basketball

The last couple of days have been so full of basketball, we could hardly keep track of the scores. There were some upsets, of course, like lowa State surprising Missouri in Kemper Arena. Probably the major one was Ogailala ending a 114-game winning streak when they beat Wahoo on Friday night at the boys state tournament.

Wahoo has been Class B champs for four years in a row, with Pius X coming in second. Then, last night, Pius surprised Ogallala and championship trophy. I'm always amazed at how many schools send both teams, let alone have them both make it to the finals.

Battle Creek guys avenged their girls' team loss to Sandy Creek and went on to win with a basket at the buzzer. North Platte including seven three-pointers, on Thursday night. To think that this game originated with peach baskets 100 years ago. A cylindrical basket of heavy wire was used in 1892. The rule was that the ball had to rest in the netting to be counted.

According to the Basketball Encyclopedia, at first a ladder was to retrieve the ball, then a pole and finally a cord was attached to the bottom of the net so that when the referee pulled it the ball was ejected. Until 1938, there was a center jump after each basket. From the start in 1891 until 1901 the dribbler could not shoot the ball.

Many gyms had balconies and fans would try to steer the shots into the basket or deflect the ball if an opponent was shooting.

Until 1921, the backboard was flush with the wall and players were permitted to climb the wall under the basket to make baskets

For me, the shot clock and the 3-point basket have made the game so much more exciting.

The season's winding down, cept for the two big tournaments. Six Big Eight teams have received NCAA bids. Is that some kind of record? On to the Final Four.

Medicines Can Cause Fainting Episodes

Fainting or swooning (the medical term is syncope) is a sudden but temporary loss of consciousness. Fainting often results when the body attempts to supply extra blood to the brain. According to the Family Medical Guide, the body reacts to not having enough blood in the brain by causing the person to fall. The pulling effect of gravity (which causes the fall) is an attempt by the body to overcome differences in the amount of blood present in the brain and the heart. Fainting also can be caused by emotional stress, a coughing episode, seizures, and strenuous physical activity. According to a recent issue of Patient Care, certain medicines can increase the possibility of a fainting episode. Such medicines include the diuretics, calcium blockers, nitroglycerin, and antidepressants.
