Set for April 24

Jaycees plan clean up

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Plans for the third annual community-wide clean-up day are being finalized for Friday, April 24.

According to Wayne County Jaycee Garry Poutre, the Jaycees are in charge of the program again in 1992.

As with years past, Wayne residents are asked to have everything they want hauled away on the curb by 5:30 p.m., the day of the clean up. The Jaycees, and other organizations participating, will begin collecting rubbish and between 5:30-6 p.m.

"It's intended to be an outdoor clean up," Poutre said. "We want debris that is clearly visible in people yards."

POUTRE SAID the Jaycees have contacted the Wayne Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary Clubs to help out with the clean up.

At the completion of the clean up, the service organizations will deposit the refuse at the city's transfer station, where it will be taken to the solid waste disposal site.

While there are a number of acceptable items, Poutre asks that residents limit the waste to yard debris, grass clippings and other visible waste.

He added that the clean up is not intended to be for the removal of garage, basement or attic junk. He said when the project was done in 1991, there were some things they didn't take because it did not fit the bill of acceptable waste.

"There are some things we won't take because we don't have a place for them," he said. "If possible, we would like debris in boxes and bags. If it's small enough, we'll load it up and haul it out."

For more information about the community clean up, contact Poutre at 375-4693 (H) or 375-2896 (W).

Clean up tips:

Suggestions for the Wayne Clean Up project include the following:

- Residents should check their own property first, focusing on plastics, paper, metal objectives and broken branches.

- Residents are encouraged to check the streets, terraces and alleyways in front of their property and around the block.

- Check all vacant lots in the neighborhood for debris.

- If possible, place the waste in a central location to make the clean up easier for those removing the waste.

- If desired, organize a neighborhood block party following the clean up where neighborhoods could enjoy a pot luck meal.

Conway reviews session

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

State Sen. Gerald Conway of Wayne looked a little frayed around the edges Thursday but no worse for the wear after the legislature finished its 60-day session this past week.

Foremost in the eyes of the state was the legislature's passage of a possible solution to the personal property tax crisis. Conway said the legislature had to balance all interests in dealing with the situation by finding what was fair, economically feasible and workable.

"The 3-R plan was really the only thing that came up that satisfied all of the dimensions," Conway said. "There were things we could have done politically but it wouldn't have been economically good for the state."

While voters will have the final say whether the state needs to change its constitution, thus adopting the 3-R package, Conway said he believes that voters will approve the package in the May 12 primary.

ALTHOUGH RESOLVING the personal property tax situation topped the legislature's agenda, there were other matters the state's lawmakers worked on.

One of those was Conway's priority bill which would have changed the way vehicle owners pay vehicle registrations. That measure, however, failed to advance.

"It didn't surprise me," he said. "It was a concept that raised the question that our current system isn't working. Whether this was the best solution to change the system is up to public debate. I was able to raise the question that the current system we have was inadequate."

Another system which Conway criticizes is the state's death penalty. The legislature killed a measure to approve lethal injection as a way to administer capital punishment. Conway said the method for dealing with criminal offenders and the death penalty needs restructuring.

ONE LAW WHICH did pass was the seat belt law, a bill the Wayne senator voted against. He said the attitude he received from constituents was that the state didn't need another seat belt law since voters repealed the last one a few years ago.

Conway said he didn't receive any letters from voters supporting the law when it was proposed but he did have a number opposing it.

"I encourage people to wear seat belts," he said. "I push people to wear them. The question is whether the state should be mandating that people wear it."

Conway said although the new seat belt law will keep federal tax dollars coming into the state, the legislature was split between implementing a "wear a seat belt campaign" or passing the seat belt law. Obviously, lawmakers chose the latter.

THE SENATOR said he thought the income tax measure proposed by Gov. Ben Nelson was a good deal but he thought it got introduced at the wrong time. He said he believes it will be back in future years.

Conway said while he supported parts of the governor's cigarette tax proposal, which was withdrawn, there were parts of it which were weak. He said the biggest problem was that it required senators to vote for the entire package although everything in it, he believed, was not workable.

Session

Conway added that he supported limiting petition circulators to circulating petitions within their own county while not allowing them to go outside their county. He said he believes that the petition limits need to be set because what's good in one county may not apply to another county.

With the session over, Conway said he plans to dedicate his time to his consulting firm he established after being forced to resign as a college professor. He also plans to gear up for his re-election bid.

"This session was very trying, not only in terms of the issues, but the grueling pace as well," he said. "The daily schedules became almost impossible in terms of the hours you're putting in and the pace we had to set for ourselves. I can honestly say I'm glad this one is over."

Criminal justice center receives $48,000 grant

The Nebraska Justice Center of Walthill has been awarded a $48,000 grant from the State Office of Dispute Resolution to operate a 24-county mediation program in Northeast and north central Nebraska.

The grant will assist the Justice Center in carrying out its mission to assist individuals and communities in the resolution and management of conflicts. Information about and requests for mediation can be made by calling the Justice Center at 402-846-5576.

WSC women's hoop team signs recruits

Wayne State College women's basketball coach Mike Barry recently announced the signing of two basketball recruits.

Robyn Wiese, a 6-0 forward from Odebolt, Iowa, and Marla Stewart, a 5-4 point guard from Blair will continue their academic and athletic careers at WSC.

Wiese led Odebolt-Arthur High School to a 22-3 record last season and a berth in the Iowa State Tournament. The forward averaged 23 points per game, and led the state with a .760 field goal percentage.

Wiese earned first-team all-conference, all northwest Iowa, and honorable mention all-state honors. She was a four-year letter-winner in basketball, volleyball and track & field.

"Robyn's the kind of player who is going to come here and be an asset to our program for four years," Barry said. "She has a nice shooting touch inside. We needed some height and scoring inside for the future, and Robyn has those abilities."

Stewart led Blair High School to a state championship in 1990 and a semifinal berth last season. She led Blair in scoring (17.6 ppg), three-point field goals, assists (5.3 per game), and steals (3.5 per game) while being named the team's Most Valuable Player.

She was selected as captain of the Omaha World-Herald and Fremont Tribune all-area teams. Stewart also earned second-team all-state honors.

"Marla has been tremendously important to our team the past three years," Blair High School coach Marty Rogers said. "She has a tremendous work ethic and excitement for the game. I consider her to be one of the top three players to have ever played basketball at Blair."

"The first things we noticed about Marla were her quickness, ball handling and leadership abilities," Barry said. "She controlled the Blair team well. She has a tremendous amount of experience behind her. Marla's an aggressive type player who will compete immediately for playing time at the point guard."

Legislature stumbles across finishing line as session concludes

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN - By the time you read this, the Legislature, mercifully, will have gone home. I don't know exactly what they will have done. We're writing a week in advance here. This is not daily journalism.

But judging by the way things have been going for the past few weeks, I can probably pretty confidently say that in the final days, not a whole lot happened.

I may be proven wrong. But most observers such as myself can't ever remember seeing a Legislature like this one, stumbling into the finish like it has.

For all practical purposes, they adjourned on March 12, the day they came up with their personal property tax solution and put it on the May 12 ballot.

From that point, the Legislature has been a rudderless boat on the sea of public policy, tossed this way, tossed that way, and generally not getting very far.

There will be other things to show for the session besides the tax stuff. For example, it appears like the mandatory safety belt bill is on its way to passage, unless Ben Nelson has something else to say on it.

But every day for the last three weeks, senators have started their day with an agenda filled with bills, from Governor Nelson's cigarette tax bill or income tax bill, solid waste bills, campaign finance bills, and others. And each day, they found some minor issue to get bogged down on, spending hours sometimes on seemingly useless things.

As a result, it appears a lot of those bills will be falling by the wayside.

Senators showed absolutely no sense of urgency after the tax bills were done. Some probably figured the thing everyone said they had to get done was finished, so there was not much else to do.

For others, they just got in a foul humor over how the whole tax things turned out. Being in bad tempers, things they would have let slide before all the sudden became big issues to them, and the whole process bogged down again. There were days the whole process broke down.

It's too bad the Legislature has to finish this way. Whether or not you agree with the tax plan they came up with, it was an accomplishment that they came together and were able to put something together. They did come through in the clutch on that one. But that seems like ages ago now.

Speaker of the Legislature Dennis Baack of Kimball is not the kind to kick rear ends and take names. He figures, not necessarily correctly it seems in some cases, that we're dealing with 49 adults here. He doesn't want to play their mom and scold them. If they don't feel the need to get in gear, he's not going to make them.

Whatever the case, the end of the session can't come soon enough, it seems. It's been a long 60 days. It's time to send these folks home.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

WSC salutes arboretum this week

The public is invited to visit the Wayne State College arboretum as the College observes Nebraska Arboretum Week April 19-25.

Persons wishing to tour the arboretum may start at the visitor's parking lot by Wayne State's Hahn Administration Building. Signs along the path serve as tour guides, or Dr. Charles Maier, curator of the arboretum, will serve as a tour guide for persons wishing to arrange a tour.

Governor Ben Nelson proclaimed the week of April 9 to recognize the contribution of 50 arboretum sites in 29 communities throughout Nebraska. The sites are part of the Nebraska Statewide Arboretum (NSA), an organization dedicated to tree research and display, outdoor education and community beautification.

Each community develops and maintains its own arboretum, each of which exhibits a different character. Some arboreta concentrate on native Nebraska plants, such as prairie grasses and wildflowers. Others have large collections of non-native plants that may do well in parts of Nebraska.

Season is good time for record keeping changes

The period between tax season and planting season is a good time to consider changes in farm and ranch record-keeping systems, said Gary Bredensteiner, director of farm management operations at the Southeast Research and Extension Center, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"Having recently gone through the last year's records for taxes and annual financial statements, many producers may wish their documents had been better organized," Bredensteiner said. "Now is the time to take action, before the busy season begins and the impulse is lost."

He said that a good system can be either computer-based or manual. The important thing is to take time every week or every month to keep records current. Based on personal preference, much of the work can be "farmed out" to professionals, he said.

"Don't be afraid to hire someone to help, if you don't have the inclination," he said. "There are lots of accounting firms that can help out. You'll still have to be involved in getting the information to them, but they can help shore up what is a weak point in many operations." Or help may be closer to home, he added.

"Some bookkeeping operations are family affairs," Bredensteiner said. "Mom and dad will hire the older kids to make routine entries in the books."

Whatever its form, filing is the heart of any records system, he said. Bills, receipts and other documents should be filed regularly. "If you establish a pattern it will become second nature after a while," he said.

The system also should provide for reconciliation of income, expenses and assets. This not only keeps information on cash flow readily available, but will be a big help in a tax audit, he said. "Computerized double-entry systems will simplify reconciliation. Doing it by hand is more work, but it can be done."

Another worthwhile accounting goal is committing to a consistent date every year to do financial statements. Profit and loss and net worth statements that are taken at different times each year are of little use for comparisons because of the seasonal nature of agriculture, Bredensteiner said. When consistent, comparison of financial statements will reveal valid trends over time. Gaining the ability to make comparisons with other, similar operations also is a useful goal, he said. Such comparisons reveal whether the operation's costs and returns are reasonable.

Getting access to valid data for external comparisons may involve joining an organization like the Nebraska Farm Business Association which Bredensteiner directs. The association takes annual member surveys and publishes average figures on costs and returns, he said.

Another option is to enroll in the Nebraskaland Farm and Ranch Business Management Education Program offered by Nebraska's community colleges, he said. This three-year program provides classroom-management instruction as well as comparison data. Additional details can be obtained by contacting the local community college.

4-H News

DOG CREEK

Dog Creek 4-H Club met at Grace Lutheran Church on April 3 with 20 members, two guests and 13 family members present.

President Brandon Williams called the meeting to order and Ryan Allemann led the 4-H pledge and flag salute. Hailey Daehnke called the roll, which was answered with theme booth ideas, and also read minutes of the last meeting. Jenny Edwards gave the treasurer's report.

Brandon Williams reported on the display at the A to Z pancake feed and Jesse Rethwisch reported that designs need to be given to Hansens for livestock signs. Jeremiah Rethwisch announced that the party committee will invite the Combination Kids to the Dog Creek party.

Discussion was held on the public speaking contest held April 10 at Wayne State College. Swine weigh-in will be from April 24 to May 4. Persons wishing to attend the area speech contest in Pender are asked to meet at Grace

Lutheran Church on May 1 at 6 p.m.

Project leaders gave dates for project meetings. Photography met April 7 and Decorate Your Duds met April 4. Babysitting will meet April 18 and the Chicken Show committee will meet April 16.

A demonstration was presented by Brandon Williams and Amy Hall. Speeches were given by Jesse Rethwisch, John Magnuson, Ryan Dunklau, Renee Felt, Jason Rethwisch, Emily Lutt, Jenny Edwards, Lindsey Edwards, Beth Loberg, Leah Dunklau, Hailey Daehnke, Erick Lutt and Casey Daehnke.

Lunch was served by the Loberg family. The next meeting will be May 8 at 8 p.m. at Grace Lutheran Church.

Farewell to an era

There was no snow; there wasn't even any rain, even though there was a cool mist in the morning. The sun peeped out at times, making a colorful scene of the green coveralls, red jackets, and seed-corn caps.

But it was cold, and the wind whipped around the feed bunks and machinery in the pasture northeast of the house. Folks did not stand around out there; they either bid or moved on to the next item.

As always, some things surprised; some disappointed. Some stuff has been cut up for scrap iron. Monte was amazed that two flat-bed loads of "items too numerous to mention" disappeared.

Monte roamed about with a video-camera, filming "the end of an era." There is Brian and Jon, setting up gates for livestock until it began to look like the County Fair. There's Ann and Sarah with one last ride on the three-wheeler; and Grandma and Aunt Mary, dishing up Ray Jacobsen's wieners, rhubarb pie and coffee.

We can see Joe Mundil and Larry Bowers, moving everything into rows; and Dick, hauling inside-out tires on the loader bucket. And the dogs, wondering what it's all about.

So far, it still seems unreal. But there were no tears. It was a decision not made hastily, and it wasn't forced, so that probably makes a difference.

The Farmer's Wife

By Pat Meierhenry

We're grateful for the opportunity to have raised our family where they were free to roam, to build treehouses, to ride horses, to see animals born and learn to care for them, to know the value of sweat-producing labor and the fun of building a raft for a farm pond.

There were good neighbors, real friends, and fun times. There were fireworks, 4-H projects, thistle chopping and hay hauling. There have been blizzards, hail storms, thunder and lightning, tornadoes, and mud.

We've fought flies, mosquitoes, mice, and an occasional skunk. We've remodeled, painted, carpeted, poured cement, and insulated. We've loved, fought, cried, laughed; in short, lived.

But life is never constant. Change must take place. And we'll soon be movin' on. I just hope to pray that farming will continue to be a proud profession. I know I'll always be a farmer's wife at heart.

Plan makes pricing easier

Livestock producers often monitor cattle and hog markets, only to find their forward pricing trigger finger frozen when a hoped-for pricing opportunity occurs. Having a marketing plan in place can help make forward pricing easier, said a University of Nebraska-Lincoln livestock marketing specialist.

Al Wellman said that each producer should set individual goals, because no single plan is right for everyone. A good starting point is to estimate the breakeven point. "Unless you have an idea of how much it costs to produce your cattle and hogs, a profitable marketing opportunity is tough to recognize," he said.

Producers also should get in the habit of charting the basis, which is the difference between a commodity's local cash price and a specified futures contract price on a given day. Charting allows more accurate estimates of what the basis will be on a given future date, Wellman explained.

The plan also should include marketing objectives, which will vary among operations, he said.

"For example, one producer may decide to forward price by cash contracting, selling futures or using options only if the market offers a reasonable profit," he said. "Reasonable profit" will mean different things to different people."

At some times profit may be out of the question, but losses still can be limited in the short term with a prospect of long-term profit by buying "put options," Wellman said. A put option can place a floor price below the break-even price, but still allows a producer to take advantage of price increases.

"The most difficult part of any plan is to carry it out," Wellman said. "When markets move up or down, outlooks and goals may change. It is important to develop a realistic plan that you will feel comfortable with in any market."

Wellman offered these additional tips for market planning:

- Monitor the futures or options contract month closest to the actual marketing date.
- Estimate the basis for the designated marketing month for a "localized" hedged price.
- Subtract the estimated breakeven price from the expected hedged price to see how much profit or loss the current market offers. This will help decide how soon action is needed.

Peek-a-boo

WITH TEMPERATURES STARTING TO climb and the season turning to spring, ground squirrels are starting to appear. This little fella was testimony to that fact as he found it was warmer outside than inside his hole.

Survey showing farm income down in 1991

A survey of 100 top Nebraska agricultural producers showed a decline in farm income during 1991, said the director of farm management operations at the University of Nebraska Southeast Research and Extension Center.

Gary Bredensteiner, who also serves as director of the Nebraska Farm Business Association, said the association has been making an annual survey of farm economic indicators for 11 years. He said 100 above-average producers took part in the "Whole Farm Analysis Program" this year.

He said average 1991 income for the 100 farms dropped more than 50 percent compared to 1990 income.

"The average total return on labor, management and investments was not adequate to cover living expenses, and pay income taxes, Social Security and self-employment taxes," he said.

He said the survey also showed that average return on investment declined to 8 percent for 1991. However, that is slightly better than the 7 percent average return over the 11 years the survey has been taken.

While income and returns declined, average farm debt increased from $200,000 in 1990 to $230,000, Bredensteiner said. That is a reversal of a longer-term trend of decreasing debt that began in the mid-1980s, he said.

The survey indicated that on average, irrigated corn and dryland wheat operations were the most profitable. Poor weather made dryland grain operations less profitable, while lower prices had a similar effect on livestock operations, he said.

Weevils hatching in region

Alfalfa weevils have probably hatched and begun feeding on alfalfa throughout most of the state, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln entomologist said.

While no Nebraska alfalfa weevil activity has been reported yet this spring, the insects have been active in Kansas and Oklahoma and calculations show they are probably active in all but northeast Nebraska, according to Steve Danielson.

UNL scientists gauge alfalfa weevil activity by determining the number of alfalfa weevil "degree days" since Jan. 1, he said.

Degree days are calculated by adding each day's maximum and minimum temperature, dividing by 2, and subtracting the minimum base temperature (48 degrees) that alfalfa weevils need to become active, he said.

About 200 or more degree days must accumulate before alfalfa weevil larvae begin hatching and feeding on alfalfa terminal buds, Danielson said.

By March 23, northeast Nebraska had between 125 and 200 degree days with degree day numbers increasing up to 250 in south-central Nebraska, he said.

Producers should begin sampling for weevil larvae and damage at 300 degree days, Danielson said. Larvae reach peak feeding at 600 degree days and adults reach peak emergence at about 1,100 degree days, he said.

Updated degree day maps will be available from the UNL Department of Entomology throughout the growing season.

RAY CLARK, START facilitator from UN-O, reviews results of a Wakefield community survey with members of the START steering committee.

Wakefield START group compiles survey results

Members of the Wakefield START steering committee met last Saturday to review results of a community survey completed in February.

Residents indicated they were proud of many community aspects by rating them in the good to excellent category, including elementary and high school, city parks and facilities, ball fields, nursing home, and fire and rescue units.

Many other categories were ranked good to satisfactory.

THE START steering committee narrowed the needs of the community expressed in the survey to 10 categories.

The areas were discussed in detail in relation to their importance to the community and by the amount of work already being done.

Task forces are being formed for the top five key issues and volunteers from the community are needed. Volunteers are asked to contact the chairman of the committee they would be interested in assisting.

The following is the list of key issues, the names of the chairmen, and their telephone numbers.

- 1) Business resource development (new and existing), Lowell Johnson, 287-2655, or Lori Utemark, 287-2001;
- 2) Housing, Ted Helberg, 287-2421;
- 3) Community image, attitude, vision, betterment and appearance, Alice Hartman, 287-2560;
- 4) Educational opportunities, Lynda Cruickshank, 287-2145;
- 5) Expansion ability of community facilities/services, Janice Gardner, 287-2937.

ACTION PLANS are to be completed within the next six weeks and presented June 6 during the next START meeting. This will be a half-day session beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Ray Clark, group facilitator from UN-O, will arrange for the necessary resource people to meet with the individual task forces and refine their action plans.

The survey results will be shared later this year when the START program holds a town hall meeting.
