

Developer plans building's conversion

Project restores location

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

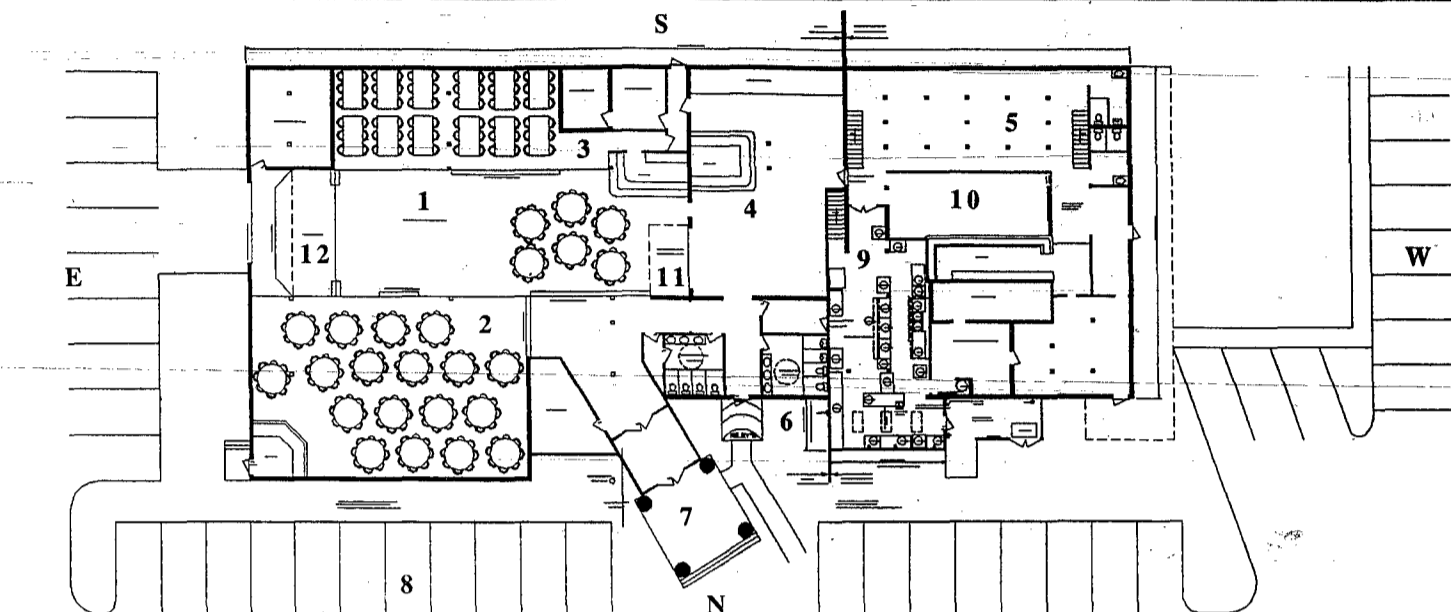

What could be called a visionary project by Wayne Developer Rod Tompkins may very well fit the bill of providing Wayne with a meeting place encouraged by the START public facilities task force.

Tompkins purchased the former Lumber Company restaurant from John Vakoc May 25. If everything goes as planned, the new monster facility will be operational by Oct. 1, 1992.

Under Tompkins' plan, the Lumber Company building will be added onto, with the building extending from Main Street to Logan Street. Tompkins also plans to create all-paved parking around the conference center and the architectural drawings show that the kitchen will be added onto.

"Some people have thought I'm nuts and my wife thinks I'm nuts," he said. "But this is something Wayne needs."

CURRENTLY, the Lumber Company building, which will house Riley's Cafe, is a 3,500 square foot building with 2,000 square feet in its balcony. There will be a 280 square foot addition to the kitchen and the conference center addition will be 9,360 square feet. Included in the conference center will be three meeting room areas and a 60'x28' oak dance floor. Everything with the new building is preliminary at this point.

Tompkins' announcement of his intentions came two days after a task force, which originated from the START public facilities task force, released its plans to adapt a portion of the Wayne County Fairgrounds to all year operations.

"I think it fits the needs of the START committee's meeting place," he said. "It just happens that the dates of the release and the information presented to the city council were two days apart."

UNDER THE deal struck between Tompkins, president of Heritage Homes, and Vakoc, owner of Vakoc Construction, Tompkins also purchased the building which houses Vakoc Construction.

According to Tompkins, Vakoc's business will be relocated. Vakoc was unavailable for comment Friday.

Under Tompkins' plan, Riley's Cafe will be managed by Paul Schaffer, a chef who has worked at the Up Town Cafe in Norfolk and the East Side Grill of North Hampton, Mass. Prices for meals will be more expensive than local restaurants but will still be reasonable.

Included with the cafe, Tompkins will open Riley's Pub in a portion of the new addition. The pub will be managed by Wayne native Doug Broderson, whose parents Larry and Martha Broderson are of Wayne.

"The pub will cater to Wayne's general population, filling in niches that aren't currently being met," Tompkins said. "There's some discussion of bringing in a comedy club and dances, featuring local combos."

ONCE THE conference center is up and running, it will have seating capacity of 420 people. A meeting room on the south of the building will have seating for 120 and a meeting room on the north of the building will have seating for 220.

The building will also have two main entrances, both on the north side. One entrance will be a grand 20-foot high entrance, similar to that of the Sioux City Convention Center and another will be the entrance to Riley's Pub and Cafe.

"I think it's exciting for everyone," Tompkins said. "If we can get Northeast Nebraska excited about it in the next four months, this will be a good development for Wayne."

Travel business humming

Air customers cash in on savings

People flock in to store

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

This week Becky Keidel, Melanie Krueger and Brenda Wittig may want to take any flight anywhere with any one of their customers.

Trio Travel of Wayne has been like many travel agencies in Northeast Nebraska. They've been deluged by customers wanting to purchase airline tickets at some of the lowest rates since 1984's deregulation.

Airline ticket agents and employees at travel agencies have been working nonstop this past week trying to keep up with the demand. According to Keidel, owner of Trio Travel, hundreds of customers have been cashing in on air fare bargains.

"We have no idea why the air fares are so low," Keidel said. "We didn't know this was going to happen. We came to work Thursday (May 28) and everything on the computer for domestic air flights had dropped 50 percent. At first, Melanie and Brenda tried to keep up with customers coming into the office to purchase tickets while I answered the phones. But we got to the point that we had to stop answering the phones and on a couple afternoons, we had to lock our doors early just to keep up."

THE REDUCED rates came after American Airlines announced it was reducing its fares to half price over a week ago in response to a promotion conducted by Northwest Airlines. Then, all other major airlines followed suit.

Keidel said she's had customers from Sioux City and Norfolk coming to Wayne because they had heard the lines weren't as long here. Despite shorter lines, customers still had to wait.

By Tuesday, so many customers had requested tickets, Trio Travel had to send out a special order for additional ticket stock. She said the fax number at their supplier was busy for most of two days.

"THE PEOPLE who have come in have been super," Keidel said. "But we don't like it when these things happen because we can't give our customers the service they've been accustomed to."

Fortunately, Friday was the last day for the reduced fares. Despite the well-publicized low fares, Keidel said some people didn't even know the price war was going on.

"We still have some people come in who ask us why the air fares are so inexpensive," she said. "... The pressure has been tremendous and there's been a lot of stress. We knew it would be hectic but not this hectic."

Best Fares

The following is a comparison of air fares prior to the discounted rates and the best prices which were available to customers who purchased single passenger airline tickets in Wayne during the discount period.

Balancing act

Rules hard on towns

Many small, rural communities cannot afford the compliance costs of Environmental Protection Agency-administered rules governing landfills, wastewater treatment and safe drinking water, according to Representative Doug Bereuter. Bereuter has written to EPA Administrator William K. Reilly to urge him to make a review of the ability of small communities' ability to comply with environmental mandates.

"We see this problem across the nation," Bereuter said. Small communities lack the dollars and, in many instances, the technical expertise necessary to operate a wastewater treatment plant, drinking water filtration system or subtitle D landfill. Our towns simply don't have the economies of scale to afford the infrastructure which is required in order to comply with these regulations."

Bereuter said he is concerned that the result may ultimately be widespread noncompliance with environmental standards, instead of steady progress in assuring the health of the citizens in small, rural communities. He encourages the EPA to make better use of the Regulatory Flexibility Act, which directs Federal agencies to determine a rule's impact on small communities and propose alternative methods of compliance which take into account the limitations of small communities.

Exon cosponsors bill

Legislation aids hospitals

U.S. Senator Jim Exon (D-NE) has cosponsored a bill extending the Medicare Dependent Hospital program, which provides financial relief to rural hospitals who are dependent on Medicare patients but receive a lower reimbursement from Medicare than urban hospitals.

The urban-rural inequity in base payments by Medicare will be completely phased out by 1995 under previous legislation supported by Exon. The current bill Exon is cosponsoring provides payments to rural hospitals until that year; a program currently providing payments to hospitals expires in 1993. Approximately one-third of all Nebraska hospitals qualify for this program and would receive payments under this bill.

"Our rural hospitals are already financially strapped," Exon said. "We cannot afford to wait until 1995 for Medicare to start treating them fairly. This program provides much-needed relief to hospitals and it must be allowed to continue before hospitals are forced to close their doors, further eroding accessible health care for rural America."

The bill Exon has cosponsored also reauthorizes two grant programs, one to aid rural hospitals adapting to changes in health care delivery and the second to improve care in rural areas that do not have accessible physical and mental health care services.

Judge's ruling helps West Point council

WEST POINT - Proof that the city's 1991 Ford LTD Crown Victoria was purchased at the state bid price has ended Allen C. Johnson's lawsuit against the West Point City Council.

District Judge Robert Ensz ruled in favor of the councilmen in their request for partial summary judgement, which asked that they prevail because of lack of facts against them.

Johnson filed suit against the West Point council in November, claiming the purchase of the car was illegal because the city failed to advertise for bids before buying it.

Officials are asking the public to provide any information that may lead to the apprehension of the suspected arsonist. Although a $1,000 reward is being offered for an arrest and conviction, anonymous tips are also being accepted.

Pattern means good news

Low rate should continue

Wayne is fortunate. Not only does it have a low crime rate, but the crimes which are reported usually don't happen in any pattern. The only one that has in the last two years was when a traveling bicyclist burglarized a number of homes in the northwest and southwest portions of Wayne.

According to Wayne Police Chief Vern Fairchild, low crime rates and no patterns of crime are each indications that the crime rate will continue to be low.

According to the 1990 and 1991 crime summaries, the most common crime was larceny/theft. In 1991, 108 reports of larceny were reported with 15 being cleared for a total dollar loss of approximately $10,200. In 1990, the reported crimes were at 99 incidents with 23 cleared. The dollar loss in 1991 was approximately $11,200.

"In most cases in Wayne, larceny is a crime of opportunity," Fairchild said. "The opportunity presents itself and if someone wants an item badly enough, they'll take it."

VANDALISM WAS the second highest crime in 1990 and 1991. In 1991, 85 reports of vandalism occurred with 14 cleared and in 1990, there were 43 reports with five cleared. Burglary came in last with 10 cleared reports in 1991 and only one in 1990.

In many instances where crimes occur, most are due to people not locking the doors of their homes or of their vehicles. Most commonly, thefts and burglaries occur because thieves are stealing cash or items they can liquidate to get cash, Fairchild said.

"If the opportunity to commit crimes are there, people will take it at opportune times," he said. "You like to think most happen at night when people are cloaked in darkness but you don't always see that."

WITH PEOPLE taking summer vacations, Fairchild recommends that they take a few extra precautions to protect their property. He said people should have neighbors check on their property while they're gone and he recommended that residents call the police when they know they will be gone so the department can check on residences.

One reason crimes don't occur in any pattern is because Wayne doesn't have areas broken down where wealthy families live and low-moderate income families live.

"People live where they feel comfortable and where they can afford to live," he said. "We've never really had an open housing market and that's left Wayne with a good mix."

Event helps Hohenstein

The Madison County Republican and Democrat parties will join together in hosting a fund raiser for Unicameral hopeful, Kurt Hohenstein.

Hohenstein, the challenger to the seat held by Wayne native Jerry Conway, is a Republican (as is Conway) from Dakota County where he serves as county attorney. The fund raiser is set for June 9, from 5-8 p.m.

Hohenstein defeated Conway in the May primary election which surprised most professional observers. Conway has held the Senate seat since 1984, and is a senior member of the Unicameral slated-for-important committee Chairman positions.

The fund raiser will be held at the home of John and Connie Day of Norfolk; 609 East Maple. Mrs. Day is the past chairman of the Madison County Democrat Party. The Day

Home is the "Christmas Light" house of Norfolk which boasts more than 200,000 Christmas lights every year.

Anyone interested in attending the Hohenstein fund raiser can call Connie Day in Norfolk at 1-379-4868. Admission is $15.

Knowledge unsafe

Almost three out of four adult Nebraskans surveyed by the State Health Department said they did not know their blood cholesterol levels.

Because high blood cholesterol levels are associated with heart disease and stroke, it is important for people to "know their numbers," according to the Health Department. Heart disease is the leading cause of death in Nebraska and the rest of the United States.

Cholesterol is a fat-like substance that the body needs to function properly. The body produces all of the cholesterol it needs. Saturated fat and cholesterol in an individual's diet can raise the level of blood cholesterol. Over time, too much cholesterol can build up in the walls of arteries. This makes the opening that the blood flows through smaller and smaller, reducing the supply of oxygen to the heart. When the arteries that carry blood to the heart muscle get clogged, the heart doesn't get the oxygen it needs. A heart attack or stroke can occur when an artery is completely blocked.

The good news is that something can be done about heart disease. Most people can lower their high blood cholesterol by changing their eating habits. They should:

- Eat less fat.
- Eat less cholesterol.
- Lose weight, if they are overweight.

Knowing your cholesterol level is the first step. A level of less than 200 (mg/dL) is desirable. People with levels above 239 should visit their doctors for a second measurement and for advice on reducing their cholesterol levels.

Series eyes watering

Lawn watering is the topic of a two workshop series scheduled for Monday evenings, June 22 and 29. The sessions will meet in the Wayne County courthouse meeting room at 6:30 p.m.

As summer gets hotter and drier, home and business owners become more interested in automated watering systems. Automated systems have become popular because of the ease of use and the efficient uniform application of water.

The workshop agenda will begin with Roch Gaussoin, University of Nebraska turfgrass specialist. Gaussoin will discuss water application: how much, how often. He will also explain problems that can arise with poor distribution or over watering. How to develop a watering plan that will keep your lawn beautiful is the goal of this session.

The second half of the June 22 session will be how to install and maintain your own automatic watering system. Arlie Sholes of Norfolk will share his own experience. Sholes has had several years experience installing and operating water systems.

Proper planning and design are the key elements of having a system that is uniform and efficient in water application. Watering systems are easy to work with. Sholes will outline the mechanics and layout for the best operation. In the second session, he will answer questions, explain different layout designs and demonstrate the operation of controls and sprinklers.

The workshop series is open to everyone who wishes to have a beautiful lawn. There will be a $10 registration fee needed to cover the expenses of the presenters. A pre-registration is required by June 18.

To register, contact the Wayne County Extension Office.

According to specialists, however, exposing cattle to too much sun isn't a good situation, since it can result in a loss in gain. Officials recommend that the cattle be provided with some shade during warmer summer days. Fortunately, the temperatures have been moderate enough not to bother livestock.

Topics ranging from water quality to globalization of agriculture are on the agenda for the 1992 annual meeting of the Great Plains Agricultural Council (GPAC) in Lincoln June 9-11.

Darrell Nelson, chairman of GPAC and dean of the Agricultural Research Division at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the event is expected to attract members and other interested persons from this region, other states and Washington D.C. All sessions will be held in the Cornhusker Hotel and convention center.

Larry Sitzman, director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture will be the main speaker at a luncheon June 11. His topic will be "The Role of State Departments of Agriculture in the International Marketing of Agricultural Products."

Another Nebraskan, Renee Saylor, associate director of industrial development, Industrial Agricultural Products Center at UNL, will give the "Industry Perspective" on the alternative uses of agricultural products in Section G of the U.S. Farm Bill.

Mylo Hellickson, associate dean and director of the Cooperative Extension Service at South Dakota State University at Brookings and GPAC program chairman, said speakers from the Great Plains and throughout the country will address four major themes during the event.

"Agriculture: Society, Marketing and the World" will be the opening theme on the afternoon of June 9 followed by "Water Quality in the Great Plains" on the morning of June 10. This session on water quality will include a technical report from a GPAC task force which has been studying the problem for about three years. Alternative uses of agricultural products in Section G of the Farm Bill will be discussed Wednesday afternoon. The final theme will be "GPAC Policy Analysis/Policy Formulation," on the morning of June 11.

Members of GPAC will hold their annual meeting at 3:15 p.m. June 10. The council was formed by a merger of the Northern and Southern Great Plains Councils in 1946, according to Melvin D. Skold, executive director of GPAC headquartered at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. Purpose of the council is to provide an organization for effective cooperation and coordination in responding to current and emerging issues of importance to Great Plains agriculture. Member groups of the council include interested agencies of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Experiment Stations and Cooperative Extension Services in land-grant universities in Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming.

The registration fee is $65 which includes a luncheon, dinner, refreshments and proceedings. Interested persons may attend portions of the meeting at no cost, but must pay for any meals. Those planning to attend all or part of the meeting should call Dora Dill, Agricultural Research Division, UNL, (402) 472-7082.

FmHA loans for socially disabled are still available

James L. Howe, Nebraska FmHA state director, announced that farm loans designed to help members of socially disadvantaged groups acquire land for farming, are still available through the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). Socially disadvantaged groups include Hispanics, Native Americans, African Americans, Asians and Pacific Islanders.

Under the program, FmHA will work with persons in those categories who are farming or did farm and qualify for an FmHA farm ownership loan to purchase land on the open market. FmHA can also provide other types of loans and technical assistance, if needed, to help the socially disadvantaged farmer.

Persons who are currently farming or who have experience in farming should contact the FmHA county office in their area to find out if they qualify.

Reason to celebrate

June is finally here. The crops can rejoice. May was a very tough month for spring seeded crops. The corn is really starting to grow. Beans are coming up, looking real good. The WEEDS. Here come the weeds!

We are now able to see the check strips we left when applying herbicide. Over all, the early pre-plant herbicide application for no-till or conservation till are looking very good. I am impressed with the number of acres of no-till this year. These fields are coming along very well. They definitely survived the frost and hard rains better than the fields that were tilled two or more times. As you drive through the country, take note of the fields and come back and look at them in July and August. I'm sure you will be impressed.

Now is a critical time for either post or rescue herbicide treatments. Scout fields closely for weed growth. Check to see if herbicides are performing as expected. There are many post options on the market. In many situations, the cultivator will be the best choice. However, it isn't always effective for weeds in rows. Solid seeded (drilled) soybeans are of most concern. Grassy weeds in particular can greatly reduce yield. With good field scouting and proper herbicide selection almost any weed problem can be handled now.

Nebraska weather so far this year has been effective against insects. Hopefully this will continue. When bugs are the topic, don't expect this year to be like last year. We need to anticipate problems for all crops and breathe a sigh of relief when the bugs don't come. The interesting thing about bugs is that they can catch us off guard. One of those unexpected bug problems could be just around the corner.

FIRST CUTTING alfalfa harvest is moving along real well. Hay is a little less in yield compared to what we usually expect for first cutting. However, the weather is more cooperative than last year. Alfalfa, with our current moisture and weather conditions, should green up in four to five days. If it doesn't, get down on your hands and knees and take a close look. Alfalfa and clover weevils are a good probability. Alfalfa weevils are usually found on the new growth parts of the plants. In the day time, the clover weevils usually are found on or in the top quarter inch of the soil. I suppose you could scout at night for clover weevils. You may want to invite

Registrations available for three day ExpoVision

Late registrations will be accepted until June 15 for ExpoVision, a three-day youth event in July, hosted by Cooperative Extension at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said Ken Schmidt, 4-H and youth development specialist.

The conference, scheduled July 8-10 at UNL, is open to all Nebraska teens. The registration, including late fee, is $115.

ExpoVision is designed to help students explore career interests, introduce them to UNL and have fun in the process, Schmidt said.

Fifty-two different learnships and 14 career tours and special programs are included in the conference, Schmidt said. Students who have not made decisions about college will find ExpoVision especially helpful, he said.

Complete lists of learnships and career tours are available in ExpoVision catalogues at local extension offices, Schmidt said. Interested students should examine catalogues and register as soon as possible, he said, because some learnships are filled.

In addition to the workshops and tours, students will have opportunities to attend a theatre performance of "Season's Greetings" in the Johnny Carson Theatre at the Lied Center, hear from UNL Chancellor Graham Spanier, and attend a banquet and dance.

Joanne Owens-Nauslar, member of the Nebraska Department of Education, will give the keynote speech on "How Do You Spell SUCCESS," and Tony Jurich, of the family life department at Kansas State University, will challenge students to consider the implications of lifetime decisions, he said.

Schmidt said that ExpoVision is "short on speakers and long on learnships," adding that past experience shows teens find that appealing.

Schmidt said he expects about 300 teenagers from across the state to attend the conference.

County Notes

your neighbors to help. Hard to say what the coffee shop would say if someone saw you crawling around in the alfalfa field about midnight. Weevils usually only affect isolated areas, no set or preferred spot. That depends on weather conditions when the adults laid their eggs. Check the spots you can't see from the road. Chances are that's where you are most likely to find some.

Alfalfa has the potential to be a better cash crop this year. The west has been very dry from central Nebraska to the west coast. The south has been extremely wet. Some areas have received their total normal annual rainfall in the month of May, 30-plus inches.

WEATHER CYCLES continue to happen. My father always reminded me of the May 28 snow in '47 (I think that's right. I was pretty small then). Late frost in the 60's and May 25 and 26 in 1992. Considering the changes in farming practices with less spring tillage and earlier planting dates, we fair real well with the frost. I know of five or six fields that have been replanted. Corn up to four leaves can tolerate a hard frost. The leaves will dry up and the stock will be set back some, but it will not reduce yield. It's when the six and seven leaves are out that that frost really kills. The bottom leaves usually don't contribute to grain yield.

We experience a late May frost about every 20 years. When thinking about this, if you are concerned about replanting costs, April 25 is a key date. I believe all the fields that needed to be replanted were planted before the 25th. In most years, planting to the four leaf stage is about four weeks. Field location is critical. Each farmer knows the frost line in his fields which is the dividing line between what the first frost kills and the kill it misses. The same holds for spring frost.

Soybeans are about 15 days behind corn and planting dates to avoid late freeze damage.

Access grows for educators

Teachers continue to seek factual information on a variety of subjects to help supplement their lesson plans. When it comes to nutrition and a variety of agricultural issues, the beef industry makes available 18 kits for different ages and covering topics from cookery and nutrition to the environment and animal welfare.

Two new programs, supported by Wayne County producers through the national beef checkoff, are nearly complete and will be ready for school this fall.

"Mirror, Mirror," is a weight counseling kit that helps ninth through 12th graders make healthful food choices. The kit covers nutrition factors including attitudes about weight, factors affecting adolescent weight, symptoms of eating disorders, guidelines for a balanced and healthy diet and guidelines for parents and school professionals. The kit is the result of extensive marketing research and was reviewed by school professionals and clinical experts.

Another new program, "Caretakers All," shows third and fourth graders how they can be caretakers of their community. The kit includes a discussion of farm animal welfare practices as well as several environmental issues including soil and water conservation. The program is adaptable for social studies, history, science and reading classes.

Beef producers in Wayne County and across the country also help support programs such as:

"Munchsters Talk About Food" — a preschool nutrition program that uses fantasy creatures to show children where food comes from, the different ways that foods are packaged and preserved, and the need to set good eating habits early in life.

"Coming To America" — a fifth through eighth grade social science program that focuses on the various aspects of pilgrim life and emphasizes the importance of food preservation methods.

"Digging For Data" — a sixth grade science program that helps students understand scientific problem solving while learning about changes farmers and ranchers have made to create leaner beef.

"Body Culture" — a high school sports nutrition program that demonstrates how a nutritious diet — including meat — can enhance athletic performance.

"Cooking Today's Beef" — a video program for high school students that shows how the beef industry has worked to develop a leaner product. Cookery methods also are covered in this program.

"Lessons On Meat" — a college-level reference book that is a valuable resource for food, nutrition, dietetic and home economics students and food professionals.

Wayne County producers provide these publications through educational programs funded by the beef checkoff. For sample copies, contact the Nebraska Beef Council at 1-308-236-7551, or write to the National Live Stock and Meat Board, Dept. RNS, 444 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Soybean board meets

The Nebraska Soybean Department, Utilization and Marketing Board (NSDU&MB) will meet Thursday, June 11 at Prenger's in Norfolk. The meeting is open to the public and begins at 9 a.m.

The June board meeting is when the budget for the coming fiscal year is finalized. The new fiscal year begins July 1. Research grants were made in early spring so University personnel could get to work planting test plots and doing other seasonal research. The remaining budget categories — consumer information and promotion, producer information and industry information — will be considered one last time at the June meeting.

Among important new projects this year are two very promising uses for soybeans: cancer prevention and soy diesel fuel. Preliminary projects have been completed this fiscal year and additional projects are proposed for 1992-1993.

Specialists plan annual weed tour

University of Nebraska scientists and specialists have scheduled the 1992 Nebraska Weed Tour, June 15-18, at regional research and extension centers from Concord to Scottsbluff.

The meeting at the Northeast Station near Concord will be June 15, starting at 2 p.m.

Alex Martin, UNL weed specialist, said the annual "show and tell" tour is open to the public. No reservations are necessary and individuals may join the group to visit some or all of the sites.

Consultants, dealers and sellers of herbicides and others attend to see what the future holds, he said. Many of the treatments are experimental and still in the developmental stages. The tour is timed so that the maximum number of conclusions can be drawn from viewing field plots. Participants will learn about weed control in major crops, new techniques and special problems.

Workshop aids pork producers

A workshop designed to help pork producers provide cost-effective diets for their pigs through feed analysis is scheduled July 15 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Animal Science Complex, according to Duane Reese, UNL swine nutrition specialist.

During the workshop, Reese and Dave Varner, extension agent-agriculture in Lancaster County, will analyze each producer's feed for pigs. Reese also will present a nutrition program and discuss swine diets with producers. Varner will demonstrate the computer program used to calculate diet formulations for pigs.

The pig diet analysis will determine if the producer's feed during various stages in the growth cycle contains too many ingredients to meet pigs' nutrients needs, more nutrients than the producer can afford or ingredients that are more costly than available alternatives. Producers also will find out if feed contains additives that cost more than the benefits they provide.

Producers must bring complete feed-use records, cost of ingredients, and complete diet formulations to the workshop as well as feed tags and nutrient analysis for all feeds being used or considered, Reese said.

This data will be collected in the morning and new diets will be calculated for producers in the afternoon. By the end of the workshop, each producer will have a copy of their new recommended swine diets, he said.

The swine diet computer program which will be used at the workshop can be purchased for $25, Reese said.

A registration fee of $15 and registration materials must be submitted by July 10 to University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County, 444 Cherrycreek Road, Lincoln, NE 68528. Reese said the number of participants will be limited.

Teaching him young

WAYNE RESIDENT CHARLES RAY keeps a watchful eye on his son Curtis as the little tyke goes over his father's lawn with a toy lawn mower. While there's really no way to tell if it worked, the youngster seemed ready for the next step — mowing Dad's lawn. Once Curtis had finished the little strip of lawn he was supposedly working on, he climbed into a toy car and got ready to drive away, putting his hand outside the play car's window in order to hold onto his lawnmower. This photographer figures that it's all in a day's work.

Attractions draw birds

Bluebirds are few and far between in Nebraska, but nesting boxes and trails can attract these colorful relatives of the robin, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln wildlife specialist said.

Bluebirds, not to be confused with bluejays, nest in windbreaks and other scattered woodlands areas near grasslands, Ron Johnson said.

To attract bluebirds, Johnson suggests placing nesting boxes five to six feet above the ground along these areas or along fence rows near grasslands where bluebirds can forage for insects.

Unfortunately for bluebird lovers, these human-made nesting sites also attract house sparrows and European starlings, Johnson said.

Holes in nesting boxes should be exactly 1 1/2 inches in diameter to let bluebirds in and keep starlings out, he said. Sparrows, however, are harder to keep out because they are smaller than bluebirds.

House sparrows, however, prefer nesting boxes 10 feet or more above the ground and avoid boxes built closer to the ground, Johnson said.

The Eastern Bluebird can be found in eastern and central Nebraska while the Mountain Bluebird can be seen in the Panhandle, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said.

Bluebirds have dark red chests and sky blue bodies so brilliant that it inspired Henry David Thoreau to write that "the bluebird carries the sky on its back." Bluebirds, however, carry less of the sky today than in the past.

Johnson said Eastern Bluebird populations have declined 90 percent in the eastern United States and Canada in the last 50 years primarily because older trees and wooden fence posts, often riddled with holes ideal for bluebird nests, have been replaced.

To help Nebraskans with a penchant for bluebird watching, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission keeps a directory of Nebraskans with bluebird houses or trails to track bluebird numbers and their nesting success, Johnson said. The commission also has other information on bluebirds in Nebraska.

In Wayne County

Birdwatchers being sought

Wayne county residents are being asked to participate in a national survey of backyard birds conducted by the Home Habitat Society.

Those who participate in the annual bird list will be asked to complete a questionnaire concerning the habitat surrounding their home. They will also be provided with a checklist of birds, on which they will record which species visit their yard in each season and the relative frequency of sightings.

Richard Van Vleck, the society's director, says anyone can participate in the survey. All that is required is access to a field guide to bird identification, which can be found in all libraries and book stores, and an interest in birds.

The number of different species of birds using your yard is a useful indicator of the quality of habitat you are providing, according to Van Vleck. Keeping a record of the birds visiting your yard over several years may offer evidence of the value if improvements to the habitat that you have made, such as planting for wildlife or providing a source of water or erecting nest boxes. In contrast, a shrinking bird list may demonstrate the effect of extensive development or changing agricultural practices around your property.

Homeowners from both rural and residential areas are needed to participate in this survey. Property size can vary from the smallest yard to an entire farm. Participants will be sent the 1992 forms to be returned at the end of the year. They will then receive 1993 forms and a summary of the 1992 survey. Recognition of those who have the greatest number of species for various size yards in each state will be included in the summary. The survey results will also be included in the Society's quarterly journal, Home Ground. To take part in the Annual Bird List, send a $3 registration fee to the Home Habitat Society, P.O. Box 412, Taneytown, Md. 21787.

Assistance sought

Red Cross seeks aid

Cost of Disaster Services

The American Red Cross needs your help to raise $30 million to continue disaster relief assistance and prepare for spring disasters. The Disaster Relief Fund has been depleted by two record-breaking disaster years in which the nonprofit organization provided more than $400 million in disaster assistance to Americans, according to Red Cross officials.

"We are in desperate need of financial contributions," stressed Red Cross President Elizabeth Dole. "If you've ever considered giving to help disaster victims, now is the time."

The American Red Cross receives no federal or state funds to provide this basic assistance.

In a personal appeal, Dole emphasized, "Every dollar that goes to help a disaster victim is a gift from the American people. When you see or hear of the Red Cross helping disaster victims, please remember that their help is made possible by people all over the country who know the Red Cross is a trusted vehicle for their donations. We turn their generosity into round-the-clock disaster relief."

Nebraska's six major disasters since March 1990 called for expenditures of $581,279. Area fund raising netted $52,050.

The American Red Cross responds to an annual average of 55,000 disasters nationwide. Red Cross volunteers provided hundreds of thousands of victims with food, clothing, shelter, necessary furniture, prescription medicines, minor home repairs and other emergency assistance.

■ Yearly Total — Ten-year Trend

The Wayne County Chapter of the Red Cross is urging the community to give to the Disaster Relief Fund so the Red Cross can continue to provide humanitarian aid when disaster strikes. The chapter's fund raising goal is $2,000.

You can help disaster victims by sending a financial contribution to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund to Wayne County Chapter, Ginny Otte, 515 West 2nd, Wayne or to the American Red Cross, 3838 Dewey Avenue, Omaha, Neb. 68105-1196. Credit card donations can be made by calling 1-800-842-2200 toll-free. All contributions will be applied against the chapter goal.
