Communication lines open Concerns raise

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

It appears as though a resolution has been reached between the Wayne County Sheriff's office and representatives from the villages of Hoskins and Carroll for improved police protection.

Board representatives from Car-roll and Hoskins met Tuesday with Wayne County Sheriff LeRoy Janssen at the Wayne County Commissioners meeting to discuss what the villages believe have been shortfalls in police protection. No representatives from Winside at-which the county's not in a position to do ... it sounds like there needs to be greater communication" between communities and the sheriff's office, said Chris Connolly, assistant attorney for Wayne County, who mediated the discussion.

VILLAGE BOARD members from Hoskins and Winside met June to discuss problems their communities have run into with police protection provided by the Wayne County Sheriff's office under contracts dated back to 1979. While no Carroll representatives were present at the June 1 meeting, Sue Gilmore, chairman of the Carroll Village Board, conducted most of the discussion with Janssen.

"If it takes sitting down with LeRoy, that's what we'll do," Gilmore said. "We don't have a lot of problems but we do have minors in possession and kids drag racing down our streets and highways What's it going to take, having someone get badly hurt or killed before we get adequate police protection?"

Under terms of the contract, the villages pay approximately $2 per month per person for police protection over what they are levied for sheriff's services. That totals up to be $5,688 for Carroll; $7,368 for Hoskins; and $10,416 for Winside.

WHILE AN hour amount has never been set for the communities, Janssen said his department tries to provide an average of 40 hours per week protection to the villages. He said complaint calls are handled ased on need and urgency.

If the communities were to withdraw from the contract, which requires a 90-day notice prior to June 30, since budgets are set July 1, the sheriff's office would be responsible for upholding only county and state laws. If the department was not under contract, protection could only be provided if there was sufficient overlap, Connolly said.

But Hoskins -representatives voiced their frustration that calls were not being returned and response time was slow.

"I've contacted LeRoy and he's never returned my calls," said Pat Brudigan, chairman of the Hoskins village board. "The thing I'm tired of is that people are passing the buck. One person says one thing and passes it on to another."

"It sounds like we have a simple case of poor communication, Gilmore said to the board. Janssen nodded.

"In defense of the department, we have a budget that doesn't allow more than three deputies," Janssen said. "We are strapped. I understand your need for protection but we can't afford to give 24-hour police protection.

JANSSEN SAID due to budget constraints he has to limit his deputies to 100 miles a night when they're on patrol. He said that's one reason why deputies spend some of their time visiting businesses in the three communities.

"If you can't get ahold of the deputies or myself at the office, you know where we are in the communities," he said. In an effort to resolve the situation, Janssen said he hopes dispatchers will inform callers how long it will take before deputies can respond to calls. If not, he said he encourages callers to ask.

Additionally, Janssen said he would be willing to attend village board meetings however regularly required for the villages to feel like they are properly being served. Board members agreed with Janssen that quarterly meetings would be sufficient.

Storms strike area

Fortunately, this time around the Wayne Herald area was not pounded by severe weather like it was earlier this spring but that's not to say that there weren't some hefty measurements of precipitation.

The greatest amount of rain Monday was reported in the Concord-Dixon area at the Northeast Research and Extension Center. According to officials there, 2.18 inches of rain were recorded from Monday's storm. The lowest precipitation measurements Monday night came from Wakefield, where 1.28 inches were recorded.

With humid air conditions all day Tuesday, the National Weather Service was predicting possible severe storms for the Wayne Herald area but by the time the storm clouds reached the Wayne area late Tuesday night, the punch behind the storms fizzled and rain totals varied from

ACCORDING TO Bryon Miller of the National Weather Service office in Norfolk, an extremely unstable air mass moved into the region on Sunday, bringing with it unstable, humid air moving north from the Gulf of Mexico.

The wet air, combined with high temperatures Monday and Tuesday set off the storms which dumped hail in some areas, caused tornadoes in others and downed tree branches and power lines in other areas.

According to reports, Wisner was without power for a time Tuesday night and tree branches were reported fallen in parts of Wayne. In some areas of Wayne, telephone service was lost for a time.

Despite uncomfortably humid conditions and warm temperatures, the air mass was expected to clear out late Wednesday or early today (Thursday), Miller said.

ONE OF the more popular items during the Country Store Days was the merchant's coupon books which are being distributed free to Wayne shoppers.

The valuable books are inchigh demand and can be obtained at any of the businesses or the Chamber office, he said.

Country Store Days activities, the brat feed and the coupon books are a way for the Wayne businesses to show appreciation for the support they receive from area customer's. the chamber executive said.

He said the committee is already discussing improvements in next year's event, including the possibility of holding the tractor pull and bathtub faces on Thursday night with the brat feed to provide more spectator interest.

"These are great events that peo-ple will enjoy watching," he said.

The low turnout for the races Saturday were attributed to so many other activities going on, he said.

Wilwerding said he was already looking forward to fall when the frenzied pace of this summer's events in Wayne will slacken.

Upcoming major events in Wayne include the Chicken Show, July 11; The Chautauqua, July 16-21 and the County Fair and Q-125 Celebration, Aug. 6-9.

Board approves extension

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

With the Wayne County Juvenile Detention Center running $27,000 over its 1990-91 budget, the Wayne County Commissioners approved a one month extension with plans for the facility to be taken over July 1 by the new Northeast Nebraska Juvenile Services, Inc.

According to Board Chairman Gerald Pospishil, the new non-profit corporation should take hold July 1. He said the governing body of the facility is in the process of being formed and the extra month is needed in order to get everything in place. In addition to being the Wayne County board chairman, Pospishil is also the chairman of the new governing board.

The county board approved 2-0 by resolution Tuesday to terms of the interlocal agreement. Board member Merlin Beiermann was not present at the meeting.

"On June 30, LeRoy (Janssen) will be out and an interim director will be appointed until the new one is in place," Pospishil said. Janssen, who is the county sheriff, has been the administrator of the facility.

ONCE A new administrator is hired, the Wayne County board plans to have the sheriff's department moved from the JDC into the courthouse. In order to facilitate the transfer, the Wayne County Social Services office will be relocated.

Although the board is still in the negotiating process for the social service's office relocation, Pospishil and Bob Nissen, a member of the county board, said three sites are in the running but they are not in a position to offer details.

Pospishil added that there is talk of placing the administrator in the courthouse until the sheriff's office has been relocated. The county istrator's office from the sheriff's office is to help facilitate an easier transition. WHILE NO administrator has chairman said separating the admi

been hired, 14 have applied for the position and Pospishil said people on the search committee have been pleased with the quality of the applicants.

With the budget running $27,000 over the 1990-91 budget, Pospishil said he expects there will be an increase in the per day assessment charged to the governing bodies included in the agreement. He added that the per capita will also increase but at this point he doesn't know how much.

"Percentage wise, the other counties are aware they will be spe-cially assessed to meet the current shortfalls," he said. "They're also aware that it will increase in the future."

For work with emergency service personnel Wayne woman receives outstanding peer award

By LaVon Anderson Assistant Editor

A Wayne woman has received statewide recognition for her work with the Nebraska Critical Incident Stress Debriefing Team (CISD).

Joanne Bock, government documents and circulation librarian at Wayne State College's U.S. Conn Library, was presented the Outstand-ing Peer Award at the Mid-American CISD Conference held recently in Omaha

The award was presented by the Nebraska Inter-Agency CISD Coun-cil which is comprised of the Department of Health, the State Fire Marshall's Office, Nebraska State

Patrol, and public institutions. Bock received the award for pub lishing the local CISD chapter's newsletter for the past three years. She will be acting as a consultant to other CISD teams on improving their newsletters

"One definition of a stressful situation is when abnormal events intesify normal reactions."

THE CISD team was organized during Governor Orr's administration as a way of helping emergency service workers cope with stress.

The Nebraska program was formulated after a similar program de-veloped in Maryland and based on research by Dr. Jeffrey Mitchell.

Mitchell developed a seven step program designed to help emergency service workers recover from work

"One definition of a stressful situation is when abnormal events in-tensify normal reactions," said Bock, and discusses procedures for dealing with stress. "We also leave our telephone numbers in the event Briefly Speaking

Wayne Juniors, Midgets see records dip

The Wayne Junior Legion base ball team lost a heart-breaker to West Point Saturday night at Hank Overin Field in Wayne, 2-1.

Tim Reinhardt was on the mound for Wayne and the lefthanded hurler held the visitors in check the whole night but Wayne's offense struggled which left the locals with a 2-4 record.

Wayne trailed 2-1 heading to the bottom of the seventh inning when they attempted its last rally. Scott Day led off the inning with a walk and Todd Fredrickson reached base on an error and advanced to second when Brian Gamble was hit by a pitch.

The bases were loaded with one out when Brian Brasch stepped to the plate. Brasch hit a line shot to the second baseman who dropped the ball. The fielder picked up the ball and touched second for the force out.

Day, amidst the confusion ran home but inadvertantly missed home plate. West Point catcher Jerry Wordekemper ran over and tagged Day and the game was over with a wild ending double play. West Point scored one run in the first inning and one in the third while Wayne's lone run came in the sixth inning when Brasch crossed home plate on a West Point error.

Reinhardt held West Point to just five hits and two runs. He struck out six batters and walked just one. All five hits allowed were singles. Wayne finished with one run on three hits. Scott Day singled in the first in-ning while Brian Brasch singled in the fourth. Wayne's third hit came on a fifth inning single by Dane

Last Friday the Junior Legion traveled to play Wakefield and the locals came out on the short end of an 8-3 score. Aron Utecht was the winning pitcher for Wakefield while Brent Gamble was given the loss for Wayne. Wayne finished with three runs on no hits while Wakefield had eight runs on five hits. Wayne scored one in the third inning and two in the fifth on Wakefield walks and errors. Wakefield scored two in the first inning, three in the second, one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Scott Ballinger led the winners with a single and a triple while Anthony Brown had a pair of singles. arry Johnson doubled for Wakefield's fifth hit. Midgets blasted

The Wayne Midget team was blasted by West Point, 18-0 in a game preceding the Juniors contest. West Point scored 15, second inning runs on nine walks, three errors and four hits.

In five innings of play, Wayne sent just 16 batters to the plate. Jason Starzl had Wayne's lone hit a single in the fourth inning. Jeremy Sturm was credited with the pitchOn Monday the Midgets traveled to Pender for a Midget, Juniors double-header, but rain forced the Junior game to be postponed to Thursday at 7 p.m.

The Midgets, however, played and Wayne was defeated 13-3. Ryder Hoffman was the losing pitcher for the 2-4 Midgets. Pender finished with 11 hits while Wayne tallied one hit,—a Kelly Meyer single in the third inning.

Pender scored once in the first inning and six in the second inning while adding six in the third. Wayne scored all three runs in the third inning.

Last Friday in Wakefield, the Midgets fell 5-4 in seven innings. Dusty Jensen got the pitching loss in relief of Craig Wetterberg. Wayne had four runs on seven hits while Wakefield had five runs on just three hits.

Jason Starzl was the only Wayne batter with multiple hits-two singles while Jeremy Sturm, Dusty Jensen, Kelly Meyer, Andy Lutt and Mark Zach each singled.

Miah Johnson crossed home plate four times for the winners.

MATT JENSEN is shown working on his skateboard ramp which he will use to demonstrate different tricks during Wayne County Old Settlers Celebration this weekend.

Celebration offers skateboard tricks

Winside will be experiencing its first skateboard demonstrations, Friday at the 91st Annual Wayne County Old Settlers Celebration.

Preparing for the event is 15-year-old Matt Jensen, a five year skateboard veteran, and also chair-man for the event.

"We will have a lot of different size ramps for the event, set up in front of the Winside Park on Friday from 4-8 p.m.," Jensen said. Matt will be joined by some of his Pierce friends, Scott Peeken-schneider, Chad Froehlick, Jerrod Gnat and Jason Koepke. All range from ages 14-17. "There might be a few other kids showing up as well, Jensen said. "Each will bring different size ramps."

The ramp Mait is currently constructing is three foot high, 24 feet in length and 12 feet wide. "My friend Jason Koepke and I have done most of the work on this ramp," Jensen said. "It's built with 2x4's and scrap lumber, covered with ply-wood, then masonite is put over the top to make the surface smoother and faster.

Jensen said the skateboards used for these demonstrations range in price of $100-150 and are all shapes, sizes, brands and have special wheels. "They're not the kind you can buy at a discount store," Jensen "We mostly skate on the street of Winside and Pierce or at our homes where we have built ramps There aren't any places specifically built for skaters." Some of the demonstrations that will be done include quarter pipes, rail slides, skateboard tricks, launch ramp and launches with decks and more. Matt is the son of Norm and

Shared use is best

Members of the Wayne School Board expressed shock and dismay recently when they were notified of fee changes for use of the Wayne State College football field for Wayne High School events. Previously the college had charged the city schools only $10 an hour for the time that the field was in use in addition to the requirement that the schools provide custodial and equipment service.

Under the new proposal, the high school will pay a flat fee of 600 per game with the college providing its own custodial and service personnel.³

The new fee structure, while it certainly represents a cost increase for the high school, still must draw envious glances from area high schools that do not have the opportunity to share facilities with the college.

High schools which maintain their own football fields, with lights, equipment, markings and maintenance spend far and away more than $600 per home game for their facilities.

The college, in its position as a state funded institution should (and does) make its facilities available for use by all the taxpayers of the state if those uses do not interfere with college uses and do not cause the college to bear any additional cost.

In its management of the state resources, the college should not subsidize any local school district by spending college resources for its benefit.

It seems to us that allowing the local high school to use the excellent facilities at the Wayne State football field for only $10 an hour, falls into the realm of a local subsidy that other area high schools wish they could enjoy. We doubt $10 would even cover the cost of turning on the lights.

Shared use of the facility certainly makes sense and the college and high school are to be commended for working out an agreement that makes the best use of taxpayer resources.

Ludicrous would be the state college town that maintains an expensive lighted football field for the high school to play five home games on Friday nights and another field for the college to play five home games on Saturday.

We're not sure what the fee for the use of the facility should be, but we are certain that the school board and the college administration will work out a reasonable structure that benefits everyone.....especially the taxpayers of the state and the school district.

Import dependence When Congress passed the Clean Air Act of 1990 it included

When Congress passed the Clean Air Act of 1990 it included specific guidelines to encourage the use of ethanol blend fuels. The provisions balanced the concerns about the volatility of ethanol (that is its tendency to evaporate into the atmosphere) with its proven ability to reduce carbon monoxide emissions.

Agriculture groups, the petroleum industry and environmental groups all agreed to those provisions in the act which resulted in a growth spurt in the construction of ethanol processing plants in the Midwest.

The ethanol industry was to have provided an additional $1.1 billion in grain markets to farmers and agri-business.

Now, that market is jeopardized by new Environmental Protection Agency regulations which circumvent Congressional guidelines.

The EPA says ethanol blend fuels should not be sold in the most polluted cities — the cities which need the greatest reduction in carbon monoxide — because the fuel evaporates too easily and might cause a different form of pollution.

The petroleum industry, with its heavy investment in foreign oil resources, has been hard pressed to hide its glee over the new EPA rules.

Even at 10 percent blend, the ethanol additive was going to cut into the profit potential of major oil importers.

It is little wonder then, that the oil companies were brought kicking and screaming to the acceptance of the fuel blend idea.

Neither will it be any wonder when the next middle east crisis erupts or the next environmental disaster spills forth that we will all be wondering — again — why we have allowed ourselves to become so dependant on imported, unclean, non-renewable energy resources.

A haunting memory— Buckle that kid—a good law to obey

A mane of bright red hair on the one-year-old head waved in the summer breeze coming through the open car window of the sedan next to me as we both waited at the same red light.

mother's car, the child was happy, carefree and smiling at the world. But the ominous situation startled me out of my daydreams about other matters as the light changed and the car began to pull away. "Where's a policeman when you

"Where's a policeman when you need one," I thought. "That woman ought to be locked up."

I sat there in worried amazement watching the car-turn the corner. The woman obviously didn't give a hoot about the little girl's safety or welt being: I thought before I realized I was blocking traffic.

The little girl's bright smile had reminded me, in an ironic way, of the time I learned about the neces-er sity of child restraints in vehicles and the need for a law requiring their use.

Cub reporters get the assignments few other newspeople want. Siren chasing is one of them.

The report came in of what appeared to be a minor traffic accident on a downtown street.

My editor, tired of having me fiddle with and muddle up wire copy, dispatched me to the scene with camera and note pad.

I headed off, figuring it would be a wild goose chase. Fender benders never make more than a couple of lines in the daily news fare and only the most unusual become published photo subjects.

However, arriving at the accident scene, in which an older model car had rear ended a left-turning pickup, I soon realized this was no minor accident.

Damages to the two vehicles appeared to be minor indeed, but the frantic rush of ambulance personnel and the hysterical screams of a woman standing over a huddle of firemen and paramedics tending to someone on the ground indicated no minor accident.

A very small child had been propelled into the dashboard during the accident.

There were serious head and neck injuries I was told by a worried looking police officer who was waiting to direct the ambulance through traffic.

"No, no, no, I was only going 20," the woman kept screaming as attendants tried to calm her. The police follow-up investigation indicated she was probably going less than 20 mph.

It was a scene I didn't want to record. I didn't even want to be there.

Property damage was only a few hundred dollars, but because a child was not buckled in, the accident would never be termed "minor."

The reports of that accident were later cited among the reasons for the state's legislature to pass a new vehicle child restraint law.

Even in controlled, low mph braking situations, unfastened children can be hurt and hurt badly I learned that day early in my career.

What I thought was going to be a no-story wild goose chase that nobody else on the staff wanted to handle turned into several stories. And an obit.

But, I was part right, no body else wanted to handle it.

I'm still haunted by the scene whenever I see a child-roaming around in the front seat of a moving vehicle.

Picking up the pieces— Mark didn't enjoy the 'dog days' of vacation

There's always something about going on vacation that's unsettling. It's hard to tell just exactly what will happen but there's always the potential.

It all started Wednesday after work (and before golf, of course) when I took the dogs to their hotel. While en-route, one of the dogs had though one of the church's organizations had just finished having an afternoon activity, so there were plenty of people there.

There's only problem in this scenario: The people at the church wanted to know why I needed paper towets. Twe heard the saying "ask and your shall receive" but having to take care of the problem I encountered was taking the saying a bit far. At any rate, thanks to the ladies who gave me the paper towels. Returning to Wayne Monday night, I discovered that the branch we've been waiting to have fall fell. Fortunately, it didn't fall on top of the house.

I talked to my neighbors, Al and Glendora, Tuesday morning and they said the huge branch had fallen off didn't damage the house. I just hope the tree wasn't irreparably harmed.

I should have known, by the storm cloud behind me, that there was trouble abrewing in Dodge (or-Wayne). Hostile takeover Dear Editor:

Attention citizens of District 17, a hostile takeover of our elected Constitutional Government is at hand. The threat doesn't come from any nuclear armed overseas enemy or former enemy as the case may be, but the threat comes from our next door neighbors, the Evil Empire itself, Madison County. A group of urbanite middle-of-the-roaders, who have no concept of the Constitution, especially the part that population shifts result in redistricting, are making a rear attack on District-17. What are these insurgents after? "Living Room?" Perhaps eggs?" No, it goes much deeper than that, they want to get ing to pour out great sums of money from their urbanite pockets to unseat a rural state senator and replace him with another of their kind, a Sioux City sub-urbanite. And why? Because, the rural state senator with one lonely vote chaired a constitutionally correct committee that after many public hearings voted to pass a redistricting plan on to the full body. There the rural state senator again cast his one lonely vote, along with other one lonely votes of the majority of the unicameral. So why pick on the rural state senator? Why not the other members of the committee, including the man who submitted the redistricting plan to the committee?

The plan is to buy the election nd put a sub-urbanite lawyer in place of our rural state senator. We already know how the urban areas of Nebraska, Omaha and Lincoln, treat us outlanders, like we don't exist. Do we really want our rural community and our sural needs represented by an urban lawyer? Do we want someone whose main constituents work and pay sales taxes in Iowa and not in hometown rural Nebraska? Do we want a state senator whose election is financed by urban interests? Do we want our election for our senator controlled by outside money and politics? I don't think so.

Senators called back to finally fix tax issue

By Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN - The Legislature is

LINCOLN - The Legislature is coming back to again talk taxes. But I don't think it will be near as much fun this time around.

The governor has called a special session beginning Aug. 5 to repass the personal property tax bill that the Legislature approved last March. But while the last time it was a really big fight, just the kind us legislative observer types live for (we ask for so little out of life), the special session doesn't figure to be that special. In fact, it looks like a yawner.

During the regular 1992 session, senators passed Legislative Bill 1063; which returned farm machinery and breeding livestock to local property tax rolls at its depreciated value.

That new tax plan should have become all constitutional and legal once voters approved Amendment 1 last month.

But Attorney General Don Stenberg and others have suggested that the bill should be repassed because LB 1063 was not constitutional when first adopted by the Legislature. That could make it subject to challenge in court.

Nelson said he still believes that a good cause can be made that LB 1063 would stand up in court now. But he said he's calling the special session to end any uncertainty. That's why he's calling it a "belt and suspenders session."

Now anytime the governor calls senators back, he could lose his pants no matter what he's got holding them on.

Nelson will draft his official call and narrowly as possible so that senators can't get into too much mischief. You still never know what they're going to do as far as the tax issue goes.

But the words last week from several of the senators who were most opposed to LB 1063 would seem to indicate just about all the fight has been taken out of this is-

"I already told the governor I don't plan on making it a fight," said Senator Scott Moore of Seward, one of the leading opponents of the new tax plan. "It should be an inand-out kind of session." After all, Moore said, voters pretty much spoke on the issue when they voted for Amendment 1.

Senator Loran Schmit of Bellwood had led a two-day filibuster against Amendment 1. But he said he's pretty much out of breath when it comes to this issue.

"If the votes were there in the regular session, the votes will be there this time," he said. "I have no intention of prolonging things. The straw has been threshed."

Throw in the fact that it's summer, after all. Senators probably have other things they'd rather be doing, which makes it pretty unlikely they will have the desire to stick around much longer than the seven days it will take to pass the bill again.

And if senators still persist in making it difficult, Nelson could always resort to his secret weapon: turn off the air conditioning in the Legislative chamber. That would send them all home real quick.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

4-H'ers donate book

The Wayne County 4-H club, the Mini Milkers, has added to the Wayne Public Library a reference manual on raising dairy goats.

Seven members, led by Julie Frye, felt it important to share their interest in the 4-H project they are all a part of. The Mini Milkers organized in 1991 with six members. This year's enrollment has increased the club to seven.

This week, June 14-20, is National Dairy Goat Awareness Week. When asked why the members enjoyed this project, a variety of responses came: Goats provide good companionship; the dairy goats give you all the aspects of showmanship but with a smaller animal that a younger person can control.

As you get to know your animal the members found each animal has its own character and personality, according to one club member. Also, it was mentioned this to be an economical project compared to some live animal projects.

It is the hope of every dairy goat owner to expel some of the myths associated with dairy goats. Dairy goats don't eat tin cans and you can't smell all goats a mile away, said one of the groups members.

The milk produced by these animals is becoming more accepted, as people are made aware of its high nutritional value and digestibility.

If you should have any questions don't need them all. I certainly don't use them all. But, I probably won't get rid of any either. Whenever an organization wants to make a little money, they print a cook book. Members submit recipes, a "committee" sorts them according to category, and they send them off to a printing company that has to have a minimum order. So each member buys ten, and gives them for gifts for the next year. I acquired my first cook book when I knew I was marrying the Big Farmer. I used my green stamps to acquire a Betty Crocker picture cook book. I learned to cook with it.

Ann is wearing a ring on her finger these days and is planning a crash course with Betty, so I had to leave it here. I also left one called Meals In a Hurry, and one for microwaves

I can do it. I swore off book clubs many years ago. I can even walk by book stores and book sales, if I put my mind to it. Besides, I have the rest of the books to pack yet. And I may not live long enough to read them all.

I know for sure I won't live long enough to try all those recipes. Ac-tually, what I should do is publish my own cook book.

Hearing slated for licensing services

A public hearing will be held on a proposal to license individuals who provide mental health counseling services in Nebraska. The Mental Health Services

Technical Review Committee is requesting input from the public and professionals about a proposal that would create a common license and scope of practice for social workers and professional counselors.

The proposal would require that anyone who seeks to provide mental health services in the state satisfy the standards of this licensing pro-posal unless they are already licensed as psychologists, psychia-trists, or as registered nurses. Clergy who provide counseling for mem bers of their congregation as part of their pastoral function would be exempted from the terms of the proposal.

EMT INSTRUCTION

One of the six meetings will be held in the North Dining Room of the Wayne State College student Center on July 1 from 6:30-9 p.m.

"While the meetings will touch on a number of important issues arising from LB 1257, the two issues that we have heard need the most attention are financing integrated solid waste management systems and forming interlocal agree-ments," said Joe Francis, NDEC Waste Recovery section supervisor. "We intend to concentrate on these two issues at the workshops. The need for additional workshops will be determined following this initial set of meetings." Integrated solid waste management stresses the coordinated use of waste reduction, recycling, treatment and disposal systems in a manner which results in minimal environmental impacts.

The meeting agenda includes a summary of LB 1257, financing solid waste management systems, Nebraska Investment Authority financing possibilities, Integrated solid waste management from a county perspective and integrated solid waste management from the municipality perspective.

The Wayne Herald, Thursday, June 18, 1992 A first for the 102-year-old village Winside residents get houses numbered

By Dianne Jaeger Winside Correspondent -

The village of Winside may be 102 years of age, but it is still-experiencing a "first."

Village board members gave their approval on June 2 to a plan to number houses in the community. The plan was presented by Don Wacker, a long-time busine sman and resident.

Wacker decided to pursue the idea after hearing a delivery man for United Parcel Service (UPS) complain about not being able to locate

A neighbor also had difficulty getting the telephone company to install a phone without giving them his street address.

"AT THAT point I felt there was a need," says Wacker. "I went to-the village board with the idea about three months ago and asked why we didn't have numbers.

Their response was, 'Probably because no one has taken the time to do it.' I told them I had the time.' Wacker began with a borrowed map drawn up by the UPS delivery mañ. From that map, he drew up one of his own with additions.

"I started the numbering with Jones Street on the west edge of town as the 100 block, and numbered west to east. From the south, I started at Graves Street (better known locally as Hog Alley) and numbered north, starting with 100. "Using this system, I eliminated the need for the use of north, south, east and west in addresses."

Wacker added that he tried to number each lot in town and that the house number should be the number for the lot the house is located on. ven numbers are on the right-side and odd numbers on the left.

"The only time it became confusing was when a house was located on a corner and sat side-ways," pointed out Wacker, adding that each owner was contacted to see if they had a street preference.

EACH HOME owner is re-sponsible for purchasing his or her own house numbers, however Wacker has volunteered his time to put them up for residents needing assistance. He also has purchased a quantity of numbers.

There are no specifications for the numbers. They may be any color or kind, and the average cost per set of numbers is $3 to $4.

Some senior citizens have exressed opposition to the idea," said Wacker. "I guess they don't feel there is a need. Perhaps their numbers would be a good gift idea for family members."

Persons wishing to know their house number are asked to contact Wacker, 286-4291, or call the vilage clerk's office.

Carol Brugger, village clerk, emphasizes that house numbers are not mailing addresses Brugger said Winside is a post office box community and resid must still use their post office box number to receive mail. The use of house numbers simply makes it easier for delivery persons, out-oftown visitors, rescue and fire personnel.
