

Satisfying career concludes

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Retiring Wayne School Superintendent Dr. Francis Haun carefully removed each pin from the foam bulletin board behind his desk Thursday, glancing at each picture before placing them in his briefcase.

Gazing around his office, he eyes two of the paintings which drape the walls. One, a picturesque view of an old barn on the plains, is one Dr. Haun says he'd like to take with him but can't. Another, which features a group of Native Americans rain dancing reads, "Let the young men dance, let the old men beat the drums."

"That's me. I'm the old man," Dr. Haun jokes, giggling the same way as any number of over 2,000 children who have graduated from the system since he came to Wayne. "I get to beat the drums."

In less than a week, Wayne's superintendent for the past 28 years will vacate his office to make way for the new superintendent, Dr. Dennis Jensen. After a score and eight years, Dr. Haun will end his tenure as superintendent June 30.

THERE'S MUCH Dr. Haun recalls about his career: The memories, the satisfaction of his life's work, the people with whom he's worked and the love of his profession ring as clearly as the school bells before the end of the semester.

"The satisfaction in my life's work centers around the influence I've had in bringing together a staff that works well with young people," he says. "Maybe I don't work directly with the kids but I've had the chance to influence their education by hiring the best people who do. I've always tried to build the best staff possible for the students' benefit."

Change, like time, has taken its toll on the 64-year-old administrator. He says his interest in education will continue throughout retirement, but it's time to move on. He says he realizes it's time for changes within the district and that was something he thought someone else should face.

HIS GREATEST personal satisfaction is the family he and his wife, Ruth, raised. He's proud that each of the five children from their 41-year marriage graduated from Wayne High School and still consider Wayne their home.

Like any parent, the Hauns made sacrifices for their family. In the early 1970s, after starting his doctorate, Dr. Haun postponed his advanced degree to afford his children's schooling. Dr. Haun earned his doctorate in 1977.

All five of the Haun's offspring earned college degrees and four earned advanced degrees. Carol, 38, is a nurse in Denver; Joyce, 37, is a surgeon in Denver; Jan, 34, is a director of human relations for the Omaha Public Power District; Brian, 32, is a financial analyst for Weyerhaeuser Industries in Seattle; and Brent, 28, is a transmitter engineer for a TV station in Grand Island.

"We're not rich people but we have wealth in our family," Dr. Haun says. "I've always said that some people have money, others have family."

Like his children's education, Dr. Haun says earning his degrees were important.

"I saw some of my teachers as role models and I wanted to aspire to be like them," he says. "I knew that quite young in life and I wanted to be like them."

WHILE THERE are things he'll miss, Dr. Haun admits there are a few things that he won't miss. He says he won't miss the late-night telephone calls from disgruntled people, getting up at 5:30 a.m. to check on snowy roads or the budget process.

But he will miss the people and the daily contacts he's enjoyed through the years.

"I'm going to miss the people a lot," he says. "I'll miss the daily contacts with the staff and the community of Wayne. I'll have a vacuum in my life not always being around that."

Dr. Haun says he wishes to say "thank you." He says the opportunity to stay in Wayne and watch his family grow is something for which he'll always be grateful.

"We're leaving the district in good hands and we wish Dr. Jensen all the success with meeting his goals," Dr. Haun says. "He'll come into a situation where change is expected and needed and that's a challenge. I'll give him my personal support."

LIKE HIS predecessor, Dr.

Haun faced the decision of whether or not to come to Wayne. He says it was difficult to leave Ainsworth because it was a community that "grows on you." But he saw the move to Wayne as a chance for professional development.

Dr. Haun retires from his position with some mixed feelings.

Shirt sales down

Sale of Chicken Show t-shirts are lagging this year and the committee which sponsors the annual event in Wayne is worried about whether there will be enough funds to support the one dozenth annual show.

"We've had several people comment about the image on the shirts this year," said Chairperson Jane O'Leary. "Some thought it was Madonna. Others thought it was vulgar."

The shirts show an opera singing chicken portraying a "Valkyrie," one of the Nordic Goddesses in a Wagnerian Opera. The theme of this year's show is "Chickens in Song."

"It's not Madonna and it's not vulgar," retorted Marla McCue, who annually draws the shirt art. The sale of the shirts funds the chicken show activities.

Mrs. McCue took mild offense at reports that some potential t-shirt buyers thought this year's shirts were vulgar because the opera singing chicken was wearing a metal breastplate. This is the first year the shirts have been the least bit controversial.

"They ought to be more upset that she is bottomless," said Mrs. McCue of the complaints.

Members of the chicken show committee discussed ways to react to t-shirt protests including a reported tongue-in-beak group called the Clu Clucks Clan, which is planning to burn a t-shirt in protest on one of the committee members' lawns.

"This could really get out of hand," said committee member Roger Polt. He said he was placing a call to the American Chicken Liberties Union (ACLU) to implement provisions for protecting the freedom of expression for chickens.

Members of the committee urged residents to buy their shirts now to show that they will not bow to censorship pressures. The t-shirts, available throughout town sell for $8.50 until July 1 when the price rises to $10.

The shirts are also available by mail for $11 by writing Chicken Show, Box 262, Wayne, NE 68787.

Parade entries sought

Parade entries are already coming in for the dozenth annual Chicken Show Parade Saturday, July 11, in Wayne.

Cathy Varley, parade chairperson said, judging by the number of early entries, the 1992 parade looks to be bigger than ever.

The parade will begin at 11 a.m.

Those wishing to register entries should write to Cathy at Wayne Eagles Auxiliary 3757, 1114 1/2 Main, Wayne, NE 68787.

Spending time together important

By LaVon Anderson

The attributes that first attracted Ruth Haun to her husband of 41 years are the same attributes that cause her to look forward to spending more time with him following his retirement as superintendent of Wayne Public Schools.

"I first met Fran when he was a sophomore and I was a freshman at Yankton College. At that time we had family room dining with designated seating which rotated from time to time.

"We found ourselves at the same table assignment about halfway through the year," recalls Ruth. "I was immediately struck with Fran's quiet demeanor, his humility, his mannerisms, and exceptional good looks. He had coal black hair back then," she smiles.

"I can't explain it, but I had total trust in him and I had no doubt that he would be a good husband and a good family man."

"And I was right!"

RUTH LAUGHS as she recalls her mother and father's insistence that both she and her sister complete their educations before marrying.

"I always thought I would meet the man of my dreams as a college senior. Then I met Fran, and wouldn't you know I fell in love during my freshman year."

Ruth obliged her parents' wishes and dated Francis four years before marrying him and settling into a life as wife (to Francis), mother (to five), administrator (of her home), and teacher (of her children).

In addition to raising a family, Ruth has also served as a substitute school teacher through the years.

dent, the Hauns resided in Freeman, S.D., Coleridge and Ainsworth.

Ruth speaks with pride when she relates the fact that her husband was just 26 years of age when he was named superintendent at Coleridge

Community Schools. "At that time, he was the youngest school superintendent in the state of Nebraska."

Before that, Dr. Haun taught two years in the classroom at Freeman, S.D. and served as principal at Coleridge. He also served as superintendent at Ainsworth before coming to Wayne.

"We always moved into a community with the idea we were going to like it," says Ruth. "The people in this community made us feel welcome right from the start."

IN REFLECTING on her years (36 in all) as a school superintendent's wife, Ruth says she has no doubts that she helped shape events to a degree on an inconspicuous level.

"But then, my belief is that all wives make significant contributions to their husbands in one way or another. That's the feminist side of me."

Despite the fact that she is a college graduate and has taught high school, Ruth says her main career has been serving as a support to her husband and as a mom to her children.

"Our first four children were all under the age of 6 1/2 and I really didn't have time to entertain thoughts of doing anything else. But at the same time, I knew without a doubt that this was where I wanted to be.

"I think it's difficult for most people to understand the constraints and the demands on time for someone in the profession my husband chose as his life's work."

"As Fran's wife, I've had to be, or learned to be, pretty much self-sustaining, yet supportive of the public schools and the community at large. Being perceptive of human nature and one's response has been important as well.

"That's no small task, and I don't imagine that anyone does it anywhere near perfectly."

RUTH SAYS keeping her own identity is important and having an interest in people is essential. "I learned that quite early as a PK

In memory of husband Prather plants tree on college campus

Patricia Prather of Wayne has planted a tree on the Wayne State College campus in memory of her late husband, Dr. Frank Peck Prather.

Mrs. Prather planted a river birch tree earlier this spring on campus near the Carhart Science Hall. She chose this location, near the current math and sciences building, because her late husband began his teaching career as a mathematics professor.

Dr. Prather served as the mathematics and sciences division head until his death in April 1987. He taught at Wayne State over 25 years.

"When my husband first considered moving to Wayne, he was impressed with the beautiful campus," said Prather. "I wanted to do something to add to the beauty of the campus in remembrance of him."

Kerrey looks for expansion

U.S. Senator Bob Kerrey told American Meat Institute representatives that jobs would be created and the U.S. economy strengthened if the Administration decided to aggressively pursue expanded markets for value-added products, more open markets, and improved investment opportunities in the former Soviet Union.

Kerrey, who spoke to the Meat

Institute during its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., said, "The USDA needs to present trade as an economic opportunity to create jobs. The State Department should work with USDA to identify value-added products and sell them in our best interest and in the best interests of our producers."

Kerrey contrasted the Bush Administrations' approach to helping the former Soviet Union with the policy being pursued by the European Community.

"When it comes to helping the former Soviet Union stay on the path to democracy and a market economy, all the Bush Administration can offer is an aid program. By contrast, the European Community has put in place a marketing plan -- a detailed strategic plan that's designed to help both the Russian economy and European industry. The EC is showing a business sense in the way it is providing foreign aid, and we should learn from that example," the Senator said.

Kerrey also told the 100 representatives that simply working to promote the export of raw materials no longer works.

"We need to lower trade barriers and move in the direction of helping to create opportunities for economic growth in countries so they can purchase our products. Giving handouts to developing nations is wrong for two reasons. First, we cannot afford it. Second, handouts do nothing to create sustainable markets for our products," Kerrey said.

Recalling Watergate Event changed history

By Mark Crist
Managing Editor

Watergate: [after Watergate, D.C. building housing Dem. party hdqrs., burglarized (1972) under govt. direction] a scandal that involves officials violating public trust through various crimes and abuses of power in order to maintain their positions of authority.

That definition is found in Webster's New World Dictionary, 1978 Concise edition. Watergate symbolizes, perhaps, America at its worst. Some say it revolutionized our nation's politics. Scholars say it established a new standard in American journalism, established a benchmark for government scandals and brought about the downfall of a president.

In essence, Watergate signaled the end of an era and the beginning of another.

MOST TRADITIONAL college students today are too young to understand what Watergate was. But Wayne State Professors Allen O'Donnell and Dr. Tom Cook agree with the saying that if we do not remember our past, we are condemned to repeat it.

"It had a very limited lasting impression," O'Donnell says. "The farther you get away from it, it becomes a footnote in history. We'd like to believe we'll understand history but we don't do a good job of teaching it."

"I wonder. Do we really learn from history? Our nation has become lousy at teaching about government and politics and that's why we have a poor turnout at elections."

Since Watergate, the nation has suffered through the Iran-Contra affair, the Savings and Loan Scandal, the Keating affair and the Congressional check writing scandal. Cook says the revolution brought about by Watergate has had a lasting impression on the way our nation's leaders do business and it has taken the media from relying on investigative work to sound bites.

Additionally, people have moved away from being involved with their government. Since 1960, the percentage of citizens casting ballots has declined and "the press and the public have been willing to settle for tokenism and lip service," Cook says.

O'DONNELL SAYS he thinks the whole Watergate affair

Watergate 20 years later was more damaging to American politics than any incident in the nation's past. He said the politicians involved in Watergate stabbed at the heart of the nation.

"It's not the first time government tried to go so deeply against its own people but it's the first time it went so high," he said. "What you had was professional, successful people who turned on the American people to protect their own interests."

Cook says Watergate was the final step in creating an aggressive media. He credits Watergate and Vietnam with the investigative reporter.

"All the background makes it easy to see how Nixon was in deep trouble, especially after the press found out about Watergate," he said. "Nixon thought he could save himself from the media the way other presidents had before him. If he had said he made a mistake like Kennedy had following the Bay of Pigs, he could have saved himself. He tried to protect himself but he didn't realize the respect for the office had declined."

The respect for the president was something which had hit a peak during the Roosevelt administration. It followed with Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy but it started to crumble under Johnson because he didn't have the repair with the media his predecessors had.

AFTER WATERGATE, the press and the public ask an entirely different slate of questions of candidates seeking the nation's highest office. Questions which were once taboo are now asked regularly.

From Watergate came several changes in federal laws. Congress became more assertive and presidential powers were reduced. But that reduction of power only lasted a short time and politicians learned, through public relations specialists, how to manipulate the media, according to O'Donnell.

Cook believes it reduced the quality of a politician who seeks the land's highest office. He questions whether the nation is better off after the Nixon administration's monster was discovered.

"Every politician needs a devil just as every preacher does," Cook said. "We can't allow politicians to define the issues and that's what we've allowed to happen. We need to set a higher standard. We need to find a way to get back to having politicians who will conduct constructive political dialogue."

Ford allowed wounds to heal following dark time in history

Wayne resident J. Alan Cramer remembers Watergate. After all, he was a delegate to the National Convention just prior to the break-in of the Democrat headquarters in Washington, D.C.

"I think probably it was part of an underlying mistrust of people in high government positions," he said.

The second break-in, which occurred June 17, 1972, was the one which brought about the downfall of President Richard Nixon, a Republican. The entry into Watergate came on Nixon's direct order and it eventually led to his resignation in August 1974.

Despite the strong distrust for what the Nixon administration did, Cramer recalls that many Wayne County Republicans didn't bail out. He said the party got behind President Gerald Ford but people were disappointed in Ford's pardon, a month into his presidency, of Nixon.

"As I look back on it, it was probably a good thing," he said of Ford's pardon. "The country needed to heal. Ford helped put the whole thing behind us."

Chautauqua dates approach

An old fashioned literary tent revival might be one description of the Chautauqua coming to Wayne July 16-21.

The Chautauqua tent show, featuring noted scholars portraying great American literary figures and related activities, will be at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

Activities to be held in conjunction with the Chautauqua include a community tent raising, workshops for children and adults, community meals, musical events, nature walks, exhibits, lectures, gospel singing and dances.

Individuals or families wishing to become patrons of the Chautauqua in Wayne this summer may do so by making their tax deductible contribution of $25 or more according to Tom Cook, one of the organizers of the event.

Chautauqua patrons will receive a complimentary season pass to all the events and will be listed in the official Chautauqua program.

Patrons should make checks payable to "Forward Wayne" and send them to Chautauqua, c/o Wayne Chamber of Commerce, 108 West 3rd Street, Wayne, 68787 no later than June 25. Patrons may also drop off donations with Dave Ewing, Jr. at Midwest Land Co. or with Cook at Wayne State College.

Season tickets are available for the Chautauqua performances at the State National Bank in Wayne. Season tickets sell for $10 per family, $6 for individuals and $3 for students and senior citizens.

She adds that it was also difficult raising children of the school superintendent. "Both Fran and I wanted our kids to be treated as other kids, but we had a rule that they never brought home secrets such as who did what to whom."

"Fran had to discover that on his own, and we really got along quite well as long as everybody remembered the rules."

IN CONTRAST to what some of their contemporaries may have believed, Ruth says the children were never handed an A. "In fact, they often had to work twice as hard to prove themselves. But it made them tough."

"There were times that I longed to brag about my kids and just be Ruth — mother of Carol, Joyce, Jan, Brian and Brent. They were my career and I'm really proud of them. But, as the spouse of the school superintendent, I had to be very careful and remember that I too represented the administration."

"I was, and still am, always happy with the many successes of other parents and their kids who have come through the Wayne school system and have done so well."

"It's sometimes hard not to just bubble over, as a mom, with the many honors your kids have made along the way. I wanted to tell about our kids too, but I didn't. It's a real lesson in humility."

Today, Ruth speaks more openly of her children and how each has become a success in his or her own right.

"I guess I should add that my definition of success is being basically happy and productive members of society. What more could you ask?" Through the years, Dr. and Mrs. Haun have gained sons and daughters-in-law, along with four grandchildren. "They're all a real joy."

RUTH SAYS she and Dr. Haun made it a policy years ago, and people seemed to understand, that she simply would not discuss school business. "A lot of entanglements get started that way."

Ruth adds that the total confidentiality between the office of the superintendent and those seeking council was one of the hardest things for her to accept as a young wife.

"Fran simply did not discuss school business at home, and for me there was a sense of isolation, of not being informed when others often were."

Ruth said it took her a while to eventually see the value in her husband's philosophy. "It not only established complete trust in the administrative office in regards to total confidentiality, but it allowed me to be warm and uninhibited, even to occasional antagonists."

"THERE HAVE been a lot of positive aspects — real pluses — of being a superintendent's wife," smiles Ruth. "You have wonderful associations that multiply over the years as you develop friendships."

Changes, he says, became too much.

"I just had a feeling that I wasn't able to adapt the way I could when I was younger," he says. "I couldn't change my very conservative lifestyle to be compatible with fiscal changes."

"I don't believe all the good things in life are predicated on money. There's people in society who think if you pour money into everything it will get better. I have a problem with that, so I don't fit anymore."

DR. HAUN SAYS he's thankful to the people who have served on the boards of education during his tenure. He said it's nice to have board members who place the welfare of students above everything else.

The retiring administrator says he's taking his final days as the Wayne superintendent one at a time. He says he looks forward to conversing with people the last full week of his career and he thinks those contacts will make the transition into retirement less emotional.

Aside from family, Dr. Haun places his greatest emphasis on the students who have gone through the schools over the last 28 years.

"I've always been proud of the students but I've never felt I could take credit for their successes," he said. "We just provided them the opportunity to develop their talents. We've had an environment which prepared them to be leaders in their professions."

Interns working in area

Fifteen students from Northeast Community College's automotive technology program are working with area businesses during the summer for their cooperative education internships.

Area students and businesses taking part in the program include Ken Larsen of Storm Lake, Iowa, working at Ron's Service in Hoskins; John Schuttler of Wayne, working at Atchley Ford Inc. in Omaha; Keith Wenstrand of Wakefield, working at Ekberg Auto in Wakefield; and Chad Winkelbauer of Coleridge, working at McLain Oil Co. in Belden.

COOPERATIVE intern education provides on-the-job training in a position related to each student's major field of study and career goals.

Students also receive exposure to practitioners in his/her chosen field, direct contact with potential employers, college credit while working, and a salary while learning.

Employers have the opportunity to preview candidates for permanent employment, train potential employees, reduce their cost of recruiting and training, and increase their company's visibility in the community.

WSC student working Reserve training

A Wayne State-College student is currently experiencing the uncooperative nature of Kansas weather during two weeks of Army Reserve training at Fort Riley, Kan.

Spc. Wayne W. Chloupek, of the 561st Support Group, Omaha, is one of more than 600 reservists providing field service and support to more than 3,200 Army National Guard soldiers during the Combat Service Support Tactical Readiness (COSSTAR) exercise.

The 561st oversees all COSSTAR activities and takes care of logistic requirements. It is responsible for managing site locations, providing administrative control and directing tactical operations for all assigned and attached units participating in the exercise.

During COSSTAR, reserve units provide field services including a bakery, showers, laundry, water purification, fire fighting protection, fuel handling, medical assistance and other services necessary for realistic field training.

The 561st is part of the 89th Army Reserve Command (ARCOM), headquartered in Wichita, Kan.

The 89th developed COSSTAR 13 years ago to provide field service support for more than 3,000 Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) cadets. Today, the exercise supports the field operations of the National Guard's 35th Infantry Division.

The 89th, one of 19 Army Reserve Commands in the United States, controls more than 5,000 soldiers throughout Kansas and Nebraska in more than 100 units. Units range in size from a three person military history detachment to a field hospital of about 350 people.

The weather has hampered life in the field during this year's COSSTAR exercise, with constant rain and drizzle creating treacherous roads and slowing down routine operations.

But as one soldier put it, "If it ain't raining, it ain't training."

Spc. Chloupek is a supply specialist and also handles the weapons for the 561st. He's been in the military since 1986 and just returned from temporary duty in Italy as part of a NATO exercise, Dragon Hammer '92.

"I really enjoyed getting to see another culture," he said, "and I hope to go back to Italy in July or August."

Chloupek would like to work overseas after completing his studies in finance management and computer science at Wayne State. He's two semesters shy of getting his degree.

The Omaha native is taking advantage of his military benefits, using the GI bill to pay for school.

the department commander.

As a member of the organization, he's been the area eight vice-commander of the American Legion Department of Nebraska and he has served as district III commander. He has also held most local offices.

Specialist offers tips

Bonding for life

Summer is a popular season for weddings. It also is a good time to evaluate and enrich relationships, said a University of Nebraska-Lincoln family life specialist.

"Approximately 80 percent of all marriages could be better if both partners tired harder to enrich their relationship," Herbert Lingren explained. Some questions marriage partners should answer to deepen their lasting relationship include:

•How good is your communication? How emotionally "safe" is your environment? Can you tell each other what your deepest thoughts and feelings are and be sure of a sympathetic hearing?

•Can you acknowledge and accept both the positive and negative emotions you develop toward each other? Can you tolerate and help to resolve each other's feelings of hostility? These are normal emotions and should be accepted as such by those who want a truly shared life.

•Have you worked out your particular pattern for gender roles, so you are both comfortable in them? No marriage can reach its potential until the two people recognize what masculinity and femininity mean to them.

•Does your partnership in marriage give both of you the freedom you need for personal development? In a good relationship, the development of marital and personal potential should go hand-in-hand.

•Does your relationship with your children support and enrich your relationship with each other and strengthen the ties that unite each of you to them? If not, you have some rewarding work before you.

"Honest, open discussion of these and other questions of mutual concern can be the beginning of a richer marriage," said Lingren. "For those who can't seem to work out their marriage potential as a couple, there are ministers, marriage counselors and marriage enrichment groups that have helped many people."

Capitol schedules August birthday bash

On Aug. 22, 1992, Nebraskans will celebrate the state's 125th year of statehood with a Q125 birthday bash festival on the capitol grounds. Event coordinators are looking for entertainers from around the state to be part of the celebration, expected to draw between 50,000 to 60,000 people.

As part of the Q125 bash, entertainers from around the state will perform on four stages placed around the capitol building. In addition, strolling acts to entertain people waiting in line will also be needed.

The four stages will be called The Meadowlark Stage, The Lincoln Stage, The Chautauqua Stage, and The Ethnic Stage. The Meadowlark Stage will be reserved for large acts and performances with the widest audience appeal. The Lincoln Stage will feature smaller acts and performers with the greatest appeal to children. The Chautauqua Stage, a large tent on the lawn of the governor's mansion, is reserved for quieter performances such as readings and character monologues. The Ethnic Stage is reserved for ethnic and multi-cultural performances.

Any group or individual wishing to help celebrate by staging a 15-25 minute performance on one of the Q125 birthday bash outdoor stages should complete an application and return it by July 1 to the address on the application. A Q125 birthday bash representative will be in contact to let individuals and groups know if their application has been accepted.

Performance applications can be obtained by calling Cheryl Dahl, Q125 coordinator, at the Nebraska Division of Travel and Tourism in Lincoln. Her phone number is 1-800-228-4307.

Girls fastpitch team keeps winning

Mary Ann Lutt's 18 and under girls fast pitch softball team remained undefeated in eight games, Thursday at Hank Overin Field in Wayne with a thrilling 10-9 victory over Pender.

The 16 and under squad slipped from the unbeaten ranks with a narrow 9-8 loss to Pender, leaving Wayne with a 3-1 record.

In the early contest, the 16 and under squad took the field minus four players, due to camps and other activities. None-the-less, Wayne rallied in the seventh inning and nearly pulled out the victory.

Pender grabbed a 4-0 lead after two innings of play on just one hit. Wayne scored twice in the bottom of the third inning to close the gap to 5-2. Wayne's runs came on a bases loaded hit to center field by Tami Schluns.

The Pender centerfielder dropped the ball, thus allowing Wendy Beiermann and Carrie Fink to cross home plate. Wayne's defense stiffened in the top of the fourth inning as the inning ended on a double play by Schluns.

The shortstop caught a fly ball and then rifled the ball to first base where a Pender runner had not tagged up. Traci Oborny stretched out to catch the ball at first base but the throw pulled her off the bag. Oborny, however, reached over and tagged the runner for the out.

Wayne did not score in the fourth inning, despite stranding the bases loaded. In fact, Wayne stranded 13 base runners on the night. Pender scored four runs in the top of the fifth inning to take a 9-2 lead.

Wayne scored three in the bottom of the sixth on four walks and two hits—singles by Molly Melena and Carrie Fink. Wayne stranded the bases loaded once again with the score 9-5 in favor of Pender.

Wayne pitcher Wendy Beiermann sat the Pender line-up down in order in the top of the seventh inning. Wayne attempted its final rally in the bottom of the seventh.

Twila Schindler led off the inning with a walk and advanced to second on Katie Lutt's single. Heather Nichols walked to load the bases and Beiermann ripped a two-run single. Molly Melena then drew a walk before Carrie Fink hit into a fielders choice which scored another Wayne run.

Oborny then drew a walk before Tami Schluns hit into a fielders choice. Wayne had the bases loaded with two out when Christy Hall hit a line drive to the shortstop for the final out.

Beiermann struck out three Pender batters during the contest and scattered six hits while Wayne had seven hits led by Tami Schluns with a double. Beiermann, Molly Melena, Carrie Fink, Traci Oborny and Katie Lutt each singled.

Wayne wins in seventh
In the 18 and under contest, Wayne jumped out to a 6-0 lead after two innings of play on just three hits. Lisa Casey singled in the first inning while Lana Casey singled in the second. Wendy Beiermann tripled in the second.

Wayne had already sent 16 batters to the plate in two innings while Beiermann had pitched to only nine Pender batters. Pender did score three times in the third inning to cut the lead in half.

The score remained 6-3 until the bottom of the fourth inning when Wayne added two more runs on two hits. The two-run rally came with two outs. Traci Oborny singled with one out but was thrown out at second on a fielders choice by Tami Schluns.

Schluns stole second and scored on a single by Molly Melena who later scored on a Pender error.

Wayne's lead was never safe, however, as Pender scored twice in the fifth and held Wayne before scoring four in the sixth to take a 9-8 lead.

Wayne fought back in the bottom of the sixth to tie the game. Oborny led off the inning with a single. Christy Hall later hit into a ground out to the pitcher with one out which scored Oborny.

Beiermann then took matters into her own hands by sitting Pender down in order in the top of the seventh. The score was tied at nine when Wayne's offense took over.

Beiermann led off the inning with a single and advanced to second on a walk to Kristine Swanson. Shawn Schroeder then singled to load the bases for Lana Casey.

LANA CASEY SPRINTS down the first base line to beat out a Pender throw during the 18 and under game on Thursday. Casey had the game winning hit in the bottom of the seventh to keep Wayne undefeated on the season at 8-0.

TAMI SCHLUNS grimaces as she tags a would-be base stealer during girls fast pitch action on Thursday.

Casey promptly hit a line single between second base and shortstop which scored Beiermann for the game winning run. Beiermann, the winning pitcher, struck out six and walked three while giving up seven hits and nine runs.

Wayne pounded out 14 hits led by Kristine Swanson with three singles. Shawn Schroeder, Lana Casey and Traci Oborny had two singles each while Carrie Fink doubled. Beiermann, Lisa Casey, Tami Schluns and Molly Melena each singled.

Wayne's 16 and under and 18 and under teams will travel to play Allen on Tuesday while the 14 and under plays in Norfolk on Wednesday.

Nebraska dairy picture is better

Although the outlook is bright for the dairy industry in Nebraska, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln dairy specialist encouraged producers to consider other alternatives for using extra income besides expansion.

Jeffrey F. Keown attributes the optimistic outlook for the state's dairy producers to a continued unexpected decrease in the milk supply of the Upper Midwest. Wisconsin's milk production fell 2.5 percent in April and Minnesota's fell 3 percent below earlier levels, he said, and it does not appear that other surrounding states will be able to make up for the decrease.

In addition, demand for dairy products has improved, Keown said. Figures from December 1991 to February 1992 show a 3.4 percent growth in American cheese sales, he said. Earlier this year the government announced it was sending 21,000 metric tons of butter to the former Soviet Republics.

The increase in sales and exports, as well as decrease in Upper Midwest production, are good signs for the industry, Keown said, but cautioned producers to consider other alternatives for using extra income besides expansion.

Keown's first suggestion to producers is that they use the extra income to pay off consolidated debts. A dairy producer without a large debt has positioned the dairy operation to remain in business over the long haul. He said producers also should consider adding a computer feeder, switching to a total mixed ration, adding additional feed storage areas or erecting hay storage sheds. These additions would allow producers to increase productivity without increasing the herd size or workload.

Other options Keown suggested were investing the capital in new heifer breeding facilities, dry cow housing, maternity barns or new calf hutches. These options would increase the comfort level of the herd and raise the producer's morale too, he said. Another good investment would be a computer to maintain herd health records in order to increase profits. Producers with a somatic cell count problem can have their milking equipment checked so it can be eliminated as a cause. Keown also suggested that producers spend the extra income on a short vacation or save it for their children's college education.

There are other ways for dairy producers to increase income besides increasing herd size, Keown said. Increasing herd size requires more management, time and managerial skills to maintain production. Modifying or upgrading management practices can increase herd production and income without increasing herd size or workload, he said.

Deadlines announced

Reminders sent out concerning certification

All owners and operators in the county should have received a reminder notice concerning certification of crops within the last 10 days.

Acreage certification is required for (1) ALL farms participating in the acreage reduction program to determine compliance; (2) ALL farms for establishing a record for program and non-program crop history or planted and considered planted records for history credit; (3) ALL CRP farms for payment eligibility and crop acreage base maintenance; (4) Non-participating farms requesting a "O" report for base protection. All crops on the farm must be certified.

June 15 is the final date to certify planted acreages of small grains; wheat, oats, barley, and rye. Any acreage, including set aside acres, with small grain or small grain residue must be certified by this date.

July 15 is the final date to certify planted acres on all other crops, including CRP.

As in the past, certification is done by appointment. If you do not already have a time set up, be sure to call the office between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. The telephone number is (402) 375-2453.

Producers must certify to the exact number of acres which are devoted to each crop. Irrigated and dry acreages must be certified separately.

Accuracy in certification is imperative as payment reductions will be assessed for inaccurate reports involving crops enrolled in the program as well as those used for base protection. This includes soybeans and conserving use crops as well as ACR.

Planting less than your permitted or certifying more set aside than needed doesn't make you "safe" from payment reductions. Measurement after planting service is available if you are unsure of an acreage. Remember, accuracy is the bottom line.

A GROUP OF LIVESTOCK breeders toured the Larry Koepke farm during a Simmental breeders field day recently north of Hoskins.

Field day held

Breeders tour area farm

The Larry Koepke family hosted a Simmental breeders field day at their Arrow K Farms north of Hoskins on June 13.

Livestock was on display from several Northeast Nebraska breeders.

Those exhibiting cattle, in addition to Arrow K Farms, were Behmers Simmentals, the Rich Behmer family of Hoskins; Roberts Simmentals, the Leonard Roberts family of Wakefield; Lazy L Simmentals, Jim Lehman of Norfolk; and Neidig Simmentals, Van Neidig of Battle Creek.

Featured speakers during the afternoon included Paul Johnston of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, who told about the opportunities available to Nebraska breeders through export of their livestock overseas.

Johnston said this is one trend important to the survival of the livestock industry.

Also speaking on the need for more and better care of livestock by breeders and owners was Dr. Strayer, formerly of the Agriculture Department and now working for a livestock pharmaceutical company.

The afternoon events were followed by a beef barbecue. Guests came from Norfolk, Bloomfield, Wayne, Arapahoe, Battle Creek, and several other communities.

BREEDERS FROM SEVERAL AREA communities had the opportunity to check out well-cared for Simmental cattle like this one. Tours like the recent one near Hoskins helps breeders improve operations.

Borer tours slated

Two Corn Borer Scouting Demonstrations will be held on Thursday, June 25.

The first will be at 7 p.m. at the Norman Slama farm located 1 1/2 miles east of Wakefield. This is just east of the golf course. The second site will be located 2 1/2 miles west of Wayne, north side of Highway 35 on the Dave Sievers farm. This will be at 8:30 p.m.

The programs will be conducted by Keith Jarvi, integrated pest management specialist with the University of Nebraska Northeast Center and co-sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service and Wakefield Coop (Wakefield location). A representative from FMC will also be present.

A granular application demonstration will be offered at the Wakefield site. Corn borers have been a major concern for corn producers the past several years. Moth counts taken from light traps have been lower in number so far this year. However, it is hard to anticipate if there will be a need to treat for borers.

The timing of borer flights and subsequent need for treatment may just be a week or two later this year. The only way to know for sure is by scouting your fields.

This is your opportunity to learn the current situation with borers, June 25 at 7 or 8:30 p.m. For more information contact the Wayne County Extension Office, 375-3310.

Youth get funds

The Wayne 4-H junior leaders were among four 4-H groups in Nebraska to receive 1992 youth in action grants for $500 to $1,000. National 4-H Council officials have announced.

Grants were awarded to applicants across the country who sponsor community service programs in their areas. Winners were chosen by a National 4-H Council Committee. The grants were provided by Metropolitan Life Foundation, according to William Caldwell, assistant director of 4-H and youth development at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Other community 4-H clubs which were recipients of the award include Thedford, Tryon and Whitman.

According to Wayne County Extension Agent Rod Patent, the $1,000 grant the Wayne group received will be used to better the community while working with the Wayne County Jaycees.

"The new project is to take young 4-H'ers and match them with Jaycees to help the 4-H'er learn how to do projects to better their community," Patent said. "We chose the Jaycees because they have one of the best member development programs in the state."

The program is designed to teach youth leadership skills, promote volunteer ethics and allow youth to actively participate in community decision making. The youth eventually will submit applications to program leaders for mini-grants that will benefit the community.

Deadline for applications is July 1 with plans to have the project done by Nov. 1. The community project is anything that involves people and community, Patent said.

Soybean industry targets Egypt market

Contacts have been made with private interests in Egypt to import Nebraska-grown soybeans to be processed for livestock feed. Jim Weyer, Managing Director of the Nebraska Soybean Program, traveled to the Middle East with Governor Ben Nelson, returning with news of the potential market for soybeans.

Weyer said responsibility of grain purchases by the private sector has only been possible in the last two years. Before then, the Egyptian government negotiated all commodity trade.

"The Egyptians are aggressively seeking soybeans and feedgrains for their poultry, beef and dairy operations," explained Weyer. "They feel they can get better deals and higher quality grains by doing the negotiating themselves and they are really motivated to buy."

A local contact led to a meeting between Weyer and the owners of a large poultry operation wishing to purchase 35,000 metric tonnes (MT) of soybeans. Weyer and other ag leaders participating in the trade mission met with a consortium of livestock producers as well. The producers organized themselves to share information on livestock management and the purchase of bulk commodities.

Next comes the task of working out the logistics of trading with Egypt. Weyer said that while port facilities are available, storage facilities for the grain simply do not exist.

"Once ships are unloaded at the port, bulk commodities are bagged in 124 pound sacks for transport," said Weyer. "Since they have an abundance of inexpensive labor available, this method makes sense, versus investment in high-cost storage technology. It's a labor intensive system, but it works for them. The only consequence is that it limits the amount of feed they can import at any one time."

Based on the short-term storage requirements of the poultry operation he contracted, Weyer said a shipment of soybeans and corn would better meet their needs and broaden the value of the market to Nebraska agriculture.

"The Nebraska Soybean Association will be working with the Nebraska Corn Growers on a shipment of the two commodities in September," said Weyer. "That way we'll be able to ship a total of about 40MT to Egypt in one vessel and not overwhelm their distribution system."

Weyer said he believes this trade mission was successful in terms of making the right contacts and opening up channels of communication between Egypt and Nebraska.

"We've just scratched the surface of the demand for U.S. grown soybeans and feedgrains," he said.

"We're going to focus on getting this first sale made and then we can look forward to expanding the sale of Nebraska commodities to Egypt in the future."

Lightning dangers

Weather threatens livestock

Livestock losses due to lightning can be considerable during this time of year and require accurate diagnosis, particularly if the animals are insured or groups are involved, said Dr. Duane Rice, University of Nebraska-Lincoln veterinarian.

"Invariably, there are lightning strikes and some domestic animals are killed or injured," Rice pointed out. "Prompt attention to those losses is important. Although lightning appears to be the cause, some diseases also can cause sudden death."

Most insurance companies require an examination of farm animal losses by a veterinarian before claims can be paid. A local veterinarian should be called immediately before dead animals are moved and before decomposition begins, Rice emphasized.

"The veterinarian frequently can determine the cause of death," according to Rice. "However, not all cases are distinctly defined. Singed hair lines from the top of the animal downward to the round on one or more legs usually is positive evidence of lightning stroke although these singed lines are often difficult to see."

He said other important factors that need to be in the veterinarian's report include: weather history, number of animals killed and when and where the damage occurred.

"In all cases, other causes of death such as infectious diseases, poisoning from pasture plants or chemical-caused deaths must be considered," Rice emphasized.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Alan Petersen, Wakefield High School math instructor, asked the Wakefield Board of Education to accept his resignation at their regular meeting June 8. He has accepted a job in Kansas City, Kan. as a professional programmer for a computer company.

Coleen Jeffries, music instructor, met with the Board to discuss the purchase of choir robes for the high school vocal department. The board voted to purchase 40 robes to be delivered for the 1992-93 school year.

Superintendent Derwin Hartman said new carpeting is being laid in the west half of the elementary library this summer.

Other improvements taking place this summer are the installation of ceiling fans in the high school classrooms. New volleyball equipment has arrived and the supporting brackets have been installed in the gym floor. The gym floor will be refinished.

The board approved the replacement of the folding wall in the high school study hall with a more permanent type wall as the double room is currently being used as two classrooms. They voted to purchase a self-contained standby generator to be installed in the furnace room before the next heating season.

In other action, the board acknowledged a request from Christy Roberts of rural Allen to provide bus service for Kamie, a first grade option student for the 1992-93 school year. Hartman was instructed to figure the cost and notify the Roberts.

The board approved a contract with Mike Nesbit, a behavioral psychologist, for the 1992-93 school term. Nesbit has served the Wakefield school in this capacity for several years. Doug Stanton, Lisa Anderson and Kristen Miller were named as unpaid weight room supervisors for the summer program.

The administrative and classified staff salaries for the upcoming school year were set by the board.

TREES PLANTED

This spring the Wakefield Trée Board undertook a pair of beautification projects. One was to plant a variety of trees on the school grounds with a dual purpose of providing a mini-park area and arboretum for studying different species of trees.

Planted in two rows along the playground equipment were a Norester Cottonwood, Shademaker Locust, Hackberry, Celebration Maple, Ginkgo, Kentucky Coffee Tree, Sycamore, Burr Oak, Redmond Linden and a Clump River Birch.

Future plans of the tree board are to landscape a small picnic area on the east edge of the school grounds to complement the trees already planted.

The second project was to enhance the cul-de-sac area in the Lund's housing addition. An Emerald Luster Maple was placed in the center, surrounded by Old Gold Juniper, Crimson Pygmy Barberry, Armstrong Juniper and Bumball Spirea.

In the future, the board would like to place a circular bench around the tree with paths to the center.

SKATING CONTEST

Nick Woockman and Shaun

Hammer skated June 6 until they literally nearly dropped. The two boys each skated 21 1/2 hours. LuAnn Tiesck, rink manager, said that after skating that long both deserved to win a bike.

The skating rink sponsored a Skate Till You Drop contest and offered as prizes a new bike and a pair of skates for second place. Fifteen skaters started out at 8 a.m. Saturday morning and throughout the day one-by-one dropped out until about 10 p.m. Just the two contestants remained.

Tiesck said that after over 21 hours of skating, she proposed to the boys that they flip a coin to determine a winner. Nick won the coin toss, but the skating rink decided that both boys deserved to win, so awarded Shaun the money to purchase a bike.

Five members of the Wakefield Happy Homemakers extension club met at the home of Lois Berns. The collect was read in unison. NORTHERN NEBRASKA'S CATARACT SPECIALIST

"The results are fantastic."

Wayne Dornhoff had cataracts:

He had "Single-Stitch" Cataract Surgery.

"I kept remarking to my wife that it was hazy out. She'd say no it isn't. That's how I found out I had cataracts. Plus, my vision at a distance was poor and driving at night was difficult.

Cataract surgery wasn't difficult. I didn't feel anything. The first time I got my vision checked after surgery they told me I had 20/20 vision.

Being afraid of cataract surgery is no reason not to have it done. There's nothing to be afraid of. The results are fantastic. Colors are more vibrant, that's the thing I noticed most. I can see at a distance again and the haloes around lights have disappeared.

I've known Dr. Feidler for years. He's taken care of all my family. He's a good doctor."
