

District 17 or 19 may be eliminated

Decision puts boundaries at risk

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

A ruling Thursday by the Nebraska Supreme Court, throwing out the Legislature's 1991 redistricting plan, may have some residents in Madison County satisfied, but Sen. Gerald Conway of Wayne thinks it could damage the integrity of the rest of the legislative boundaries in Northeast Nebraska.

"The courts are no longer acting as an equal with the other branches of government," Conway said. "They're trying to supersede the other branches, which are elected by the people."

"Their ruling shows to me their total lack of understanding for federal law. Luckily all they ruled is that Madison County had to remain a district. But this will force the 18th and 40th Districts to change."

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruling, which leaves Madison County in tact as a legislative district, throws a monkey wrench into what was made into District 18, represented by Senator Stan Schellpeper. District 18, due to shifts in population under the 1990 census, gained the eastern third of Madison County, and much of Norfolk, under the plan deemed unconstitutional by a 6-1 vote of the Supreme Court. Due to the ruling, District 18 will now have to gain approximately 16,000 people. Madison County, which was District 21, was relocated near Lincoln, so Madison County will probably wind up being renamed.

In a published report, Schellpeper said he wasn't upset by the ruling. He said the court made the proper decision, adding that there has to be a better plan to redistrict legislative boundaries in Nebraska.

Cap Dierks, senator for the 40th Legislative District, reportedly said he thought the redistricting plan was done in haste and thought the proposal passed by the legislature was unfair.

But the Supreme Court's ruling left the state's top officials humming in Lincoln, according to the Associated Press, trying to determine what the next step would be. Thursday, after the ruling was announced, Gov. Ben Nelson met with Attorney General Don Stenberg and others to discuss the next step. Dierks, Schellpeper, Conway and Richard Peterson, who represented Norfolk in the 21st District, all agreed that a special session would have to be held soon.

"They didn't declare the whole bill (LB 614) unconstitutional but they decided it was unconstitutional to break up Madison County because its population falls within the threshold like Lincoln County, which includes North Platte," Conway said. "This means Madison County will be a drain off of all of Northeast Nebraska. ...To give Madison County their right, the rest of the communities in Northeast Nebraska become subservient to their needs."

The courts are no longer acting as an equal branch of government. They're trying to supersede the other branches which are elected by the people. Their ruling shows to me their total lack of understanding for federal law.

Sen. Gerald Conway

"One of the things I need to know, at this point, is if people of the 17th District want their district saved," he added.

Conway, who chaired the Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee, which oversaw the redistricting process, said he believes the energy a number of Madison County residents put into achieving the Supreme Court decision was based on the political agenda of a few Madison County politicians. He alleges that Madison County Democrat Chairwoman Connie Day only did it because she wanted to run for the seat held by Peterson, and Republican Party Chairman Jim Scheer couldn't stand the thought that Madison County would have been represented by two Democrats under the redistricting plan even though Nebraska is a nonpartisan state. Both Schellpeper and Dierks are Democrats.

According to published reports, Madison County residents fought the redistricting plan because it violated a clause in the state constitution that reads: "County lines shall be followed whenever practicable, but other established lines may be followed at the discretion of the Legislature."

Norfolk Attorney John Gerrard, who assisted in the battle, said the opinion stated that the Legislature failed to follow the lines and the Supreme Court found that "shall" means "shall," he said.

As a result of the ruling, and the probability that legislative boundaries will have to be redrawn in Northeast Nebraska, District 19 and 17, currently held by Conway and Sen. Erloy Hefner of Coleridge, may be completely changed. That means a special primary election may have to be held prior to the end of September.

Conway said only three districts can be eliminated — the 19th District, the 17th District or the 15th District, which includes Fremont. He added that it will probably be the 19th District or the 17th. Even numbered districts, like the 40th and 18th Districts, cannot be split because changes can only occur to odd numbered districts due to the fact that they are up for election in 1992 and the constitution says that senators will serve for four years, regardless.

"I'm concerned for the most part that Northeast Nebraska could be structured in a way that common interests won't be met," Conway said. "First and foremost is to keep communities of interest in tact. I hope it's done in a way that the electorate won't be so confused that they'll just say to heck with it and not vote."

"As a candidate, and being the senior-most candidate in Northeast Nebraska, that may mean I will be forced out. If that happens, all of Northeast Nebraska will have rookie senators and that will be injurious to the region."

Politically, Conway said he isn't worried about the fallout, since his committee was the one which sent the plan to the Legislative floor in 1991. He said no other plan submitted came up with the right amounts for the districts — 32,212 — and the only other plan, structured by Peterson, was not introduced to the floor by the Norfolk senator even though staff workers had put over 100 hours of time into making it work. Peterson's plan would have salvaged Madison County had it been introduced and ultimately approved by the Legislature, Conway said.

"I refuse to take a hit for this because it wasn't my plan," he said. "As chairman of the committee, it was my job to adhere to state laws and that's what I did."

Rental fees appear fair

How much is too much for Wayne High School to use the Wayne State College football field?

That may be a question Wayne School Board members are asking themselves since the college has submitted a new fee schedule, which will cost the public schools a minimum of $600 a game to use Memorial Field.

That's a sharp increase over the $667.61 price tag Wayne High School paid to use the field during all of 1991, and its approximately 2.5 times the amount the public schools paid to use the field in 1990. Officials with the college said in earlier reports that they had mistakenly undercharged the high school in 1991. In 1990, the college assessed a $10 per hour fee for using the field.

IN A SURVEY of other Nebraska colleges, both private and public, the fees Wayne State College wants to assess don't appear out of line. One official said Wayne's lucky to have a low fee schedule.

"My personal feeling is that Wayne isn't out of line," said Bob Moderow, the athletic director at Hastings High School. "If we were to have decided to use our practice field for home games it would have cost us $250,000 to get the field up to snuff."

Moderow said Hastings High

School pays between $4,000 and $5,000 a year to use Hastings College's field. The rate varies from year to year, he said, depending on the number of home games.

The highest rental was assessed by Doane College in Crete. Officials there said the college charges $11,000 a year for use of the track and field, but that fee includes all track events and games and practices for varsity, junior varsity, junior high. The high school also helps the private college pay for lighting the field, in addition to the fee.

RIGHT IN line with the fees being assessed at Wayne State are those charged by the University of Nebraska at Kearney and Peru State College.

While UNK only charges Kearney High School $100 for use of its field, it does assess $500 for other rentals. Officials at Peru State, which does not have any high schools play on its field, said they charge $500 to rent the facility. Chadron State College officials said the high school does not play on the college's field. Rental figures from Chadron State were unavailable.

Other colleges reported that no high schools use their field. Neither Nebraska Wesleyan nor Concordia

Family starts operation

By Mark Crist Managing Editor

If you meet with Ernie and Lyla Swanson at their farm 7 1/2 miles north of Wayne, you might be treated to a tasty cinnamon roll and a fresh cup of coffee.

If you're a guest in the Swanson home, it's more than likely you'll get the same treatment.

The Swansons recently opened a bed and breakfast operation out of their home, something somewhat unique to Northeast Nebraska and definitely unique to most of the Wayne Herald area. The only other bed and breakfast in the area is in the home of Harold and Marie George of Dixon.

"We have enjoyed it," Lyla says. "I enjoyed it more than I thought I would. You meet so many different people, it's like traveling only you don't go anywhere."

THE SWANSONS opened the bed and breakfast in March. Although they haven't had many customers to this point, they agree that they have enjoyed those who have stayed in their home.

Commission plans Carroll meeting

The Wayne County Planning Commission will be sponsoring four resident meetings at locations throughout Wayne County during the next few months.

The Wayne County Planning Commission and the planning firm of Hanna-Keelan Associates, P.C., of Lincoln, will conduct the public meetings.

The first meeting is scheduled to be in the Village of Carroll Fire Hall on Thursday, July 16 at 8 p.m. All local residents are invited and encouraged to attend the meeting.

THE DISCUSSION will inform residents of the Comprehensive Planning Process. Residents are invited to participate in identifying the key issues and discussing the future of Wayne County and the Village of Carroll. Issues to be discussed include land usage, zoning, housing, public facilities and others.

Remaining resident meetings are planned for the Villages of Winside and Hoskins and a location to be announced in southeast Wayne County.

College not sweating budget talks

Wayne State College officials aren't sweating over the possibility of facing 10 percent cuts into their next biennial budget but they are making a priority list of areas that could be cut in an emergency.

That's according to Andy Soll, vice-president for finance at Wayne State. He said WSC is operating under the assumption that cuts will not affect the college. Reductions may become necessary due to shortfalls in Medicare support from the federal government.

"What could be trimmed is still being determined," Soll said. "We have developed some internal options but we're only looking at it as a way to review what could be cut."

Under Gov. Ben Nelson's request, all state agencies have been asked to prepare a list of how each agency would reduce their budget if it became necessary.

WAYNE STATE is projecting an operating budget for the 1992-93 year of $14.1 million and bond revenue of $1.7 million. With federal aid programs, Wayne State is anticipating a budget of $19 million, Soll said.

"Our main areas of concern are in our operating and capital construction budgets," Soll said. "We're pursuing money to renovate Connell Hall and to conduct some other smaller projects around the campus."

Despite the threat of budget cuts, the new business building is not at risk of falling under the budget ax. The building is already funded, Soll said. The Connell Hall renovation, however, is expected to cost $3.6 million.

FOR THE 1993-94 budget year, Soll said Wayne State is anticipating $15.3 million in general operating costs. In 1994-95, the budget is anticipated to be $16.4 million. The biennial budget being prepared this year is good for the 1993-94 year and the 1994-95 year.

If budget cuts affect Wayne State, Soll said he thinks the college will be prepared, but adds that it's not a good idea to reduce a budget undergoing extensive growing pains due to rises in student enrollment.

"We've tried to find things that could be pared back on a short-term basis," he said. "We're trying to protect the core of our program to assure students that they can complete the programs they're enrolled in."

June good for observer

June's weather seemed to be one for the record books but that's not because it was abnormally hot or cold, rather because it was near perfect.

For the month, the average temperature was a comfortable 78 degrees and the average low temperature was 67 degrees. The high temperature for the month was 87 and the low was 44, according to data compiled by Pat Gross, the local weather observer.

Precipitation was also near the 10 year average for the month. In June 4.17 inches of precipitation fell, falling short of the 4.31 ten year average by .14 inches. According to Gross, not only was the precipitation near the average but it was very timely.

For the year to date, precipitation was 2.24 off the norm but for the year it was only .50 off what the area received in 1991.

The greatest daily rainfall for the month was recorded June 16 when 1.40 inches fell to the ground.

Lyla and Ernie got the idea to open a bed and breakfast after seeing how much fun the George's had. After visiting another one in Osmond, they decided to start their own.

To date, the most unique couple the Swansons have had stay in their home were newlyweds, who stayed the first night after the wedding. Lyla says she wanted to make their stay extra special, so she served them breakfast on fine china in the formal dining room.

"I thought it was nice for a honeymoon couple to stay here their first night," Lyla says. "After their stay, I gave them a brochure so they'd have a memory of where they stayed their first night."

ANOTHER interesting family were Seventh Day Adventists. After discussing what they wanted for breakfast the morning after their stay, they discovered the family was vegetarians. Since the Swansons live on a farm, and run a cattle operation, it was something unique.

"I took them down and showed them our fat cattle but they didn't say much," Ernie jokes. "I had another guy who couldn't quite figure out how I knew what all the birds were. I told him 'that's hard to say — I just know.'"

At $35 a night, the Swansons will readily admit that they didn't start the bed and breakfast to make money. The did it because they enjoy meeting people.

"It's a home and we live in it," sity of Nebraska Omaha could not be reached for comment but it is known that high school teams use the UNO field. At Midland Lutheran College in Fremont, officials there said the city owns the field and both college and high school teams use it for no charge, but all three entities share costs of operation.

Ron Carnes, the athletic director at Wayne High School, has prepared a list of reasons to continue using the Wayne State field. He plans to present his list to the Wayne School Board. In his list, he outlines why he believes the agreement should continue.

"Most importantly, the athletic programs are for students," he wrote in his list of reasons. "How can we ask our football team to play their games on a practice field. (sic) Asking a football team to play a varsity game on such facilities gives them the impression that we don't care about them. No one in the state plays in such a situation."

LYLA AND ERNIE SWANSON say that they're glad they opened a bed and breakfast out of their home.

Lyla says, "We treat the people who stay here like family and they can watch TV with us if they want. It's especially nice for someone who wants to see a working farm. They can go down and watch Ernie feed the cattle or just sit out and watch the pheasants or see the coyotes from a distance. It's something unique to us and to them."

Officials look forward to event

One of the highlights of the Wayne County Fair each year is the free barbecue.

Started in the 1960s as a way to boost attendance and excitement at the county fair, the barbecue has been one of the best attended events at the fair in recent years.

Bringing together the business and agriculture communities for a fun evening is one of the goals of the barbecue, scheduled this year for Thursday, Aug. 7 at 6 p.m.

One of the originators of the fair barbecue, Leland Herman, related recently that the idea for the barbecue was born in the front of Al Bahe's bowling alley in 1961 as an effort to get more people to come to the fair and leave their television sets.

"Groves and windbreaks within a 20-mile radius of Wayne were the nearest in the state," said Leland as barbecue volunteers in the 60's cut windfall to stoke the firepits for the full steers and hogs that were roasted.

Back then, as today, the food materials and expenses for the barbecue were all donated.

"The Wayne barbecue has accomplished far more than the original intent of providing an evening of entertainment," said fair board member Leland Herman. "It helps accent the fact that Wayne County is the 'Meatheart of the World.'"

The fair's barbecue committee is sending out letters this week asking for support for the annual event.

"We need bodies as well as bucks," said Herman. He added the makin's for the barbecue this year are all Wayne County products.

Chautauqua time nears

With the Wayne Chautauqua Celebration just two weeks away, the members of the committee are scrambling to make the final arrangements and raise the funds needed to pay for the gala event.

The tent show and many related events, which harken back to the days when traveling troupes of performers and orators went from town to town for the entertainment and edification of local residents, will be in Wayne July 16-22.

"This is not just an academic oriented event," stressed Curt Wilwerding, Wayne Chamber executive and member of the Chautauqua committee.

The Wayne event includes concerts, dances, youth activities, nature walks and studies, workshops on a variety of subjects and vendors and exhibitors.

"It is not necessary to have read or studied anything to understand and fully enjoy the celebration," said Tom Cook, also a member of the committee.

Performers portraying great American literary figures like Henry David Thoreau and Nathaniel Hawthorne will be the center of attention at the nightly tent show.

The committee still is seeking contributions of patrons to help fund the more than $9,000 budget needed to bring the troupe and its equipment to Wayne and to fund the promotion of the event throughout the region.

Tickets for the event are also on sale throughout the community. Patron contributions are $25 and entitle the contributor to listing in the official program as a patron plus a family season pass-to-all-the-events.

Send patron contributions to Forward Wayne at the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, 108 W. Third, Wayne, NE 68787.

Fair work

A GROUP OF UNIDENTIFIED volunteers work to construct a fence at the Wayne County Fairgrounds. Fair volunteers have been working steadily for the past several weeks on Thursday nights.

A clarification

A Wayne Herald story in the Thursday edition may have left the wrong impression that the committee sponsoring the retirement celebration for Hank Overin had achieved all its funding goals with a donation from the City of Wayne.

The city's contribution fulfilled the funding for the fireworks display only.

Celebration committee member Jim Keating said many more dollars are needed in contributions and special drawing ticket sales before the celebration will approach a break even basis.

If you have not yet contributed or have not bought your ticket, contact Keating, Gary Pick at Logan Valley Implement or inquire at any of the Wayne banks.

New program planned

This fall Northeast Community College begins its new paralegal program which will prepare students for employment as skilled professionals working under the supervision of attorneys.

Students will study a variety of specialized areas including bankruptcy, criminal law, family law litigation, trusts, wills and estate administration. Graduates will be capable of performing a wide variety of paralegal duties enabling them to work in private firms, government agencies, business corporations and financial institutions.

Paralegals work closely with attorneys while performing a variety of tasks including preparing, summarizing and interpreting legal documents and proceedings; compiling, analyzing and utilizing information from legal, factual and technical sources; conducting client and witness interviews and investigations; and handling office administrative duties.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics projections, the demand for paralegals will increase by more than 100 percent through the year 2000.

Northeast's paralegal program will offer a choice of two degree options — associate of applied science or associate of arts — as well as a diploma option. Paralegal classes will be held in the evenings to allow students with daytime jobs to obtain a degree.

4-H'ers hold beef clinic in Concord

The Dixon County 4-H Council hosted a beef grooming clinic at the Dixon County Fairgrounds on Saturday, June 27.

Barbara Ohlrichs, 1991 National Chianina Association Herdsman Winner demonstrated proper grooming and fitting techniques. Ohlrichs used a step by step approach to explain proper methods and alternative ways of grooming the animal.

The workshop was attended by over 40 4-H'ers and their parents. Those attending were all very impressed with Ohlrich's demonstration.

The workshop was funded by Security National Bank of Allen and Laurel, Wakefield National Bank, Logan Limited Feedyards, HyVee and supportive individuals.

The session was video taped and is available for check out to area 4-H'ers.

For more information, contact Rod Patent at either the Wayne or Dixon County Extension offices.

Terri's tidbits

Government can be good

On Wednesday, July 1 I attended the Rotary meeting at the Vet's Club. It was a pleasure to explain the impact that ASCS has on Wayne County and the surrounding area as a farming community. Many times I get the impression that just saying the word "ASCs" or "government" leaves a bad taste in a person's mouth. We tend to get labeled as a necessary evil, right up there with taxes. I hope that the following information will help dispell some of the attitudes and show a truer picture of how we help the community as well as the producers.

There were payments made to producers administered in Wayne County in excess of $6.6 million in 1991. To date in 1992, over $2.5 million have been paid out with another $1.9 million due on Conservation Reserve to be paid in the fall. The following is a breakdown of producer payments:

Terri's Tidbits
By Terri Post

have been loans made prior to the first of the year for the 1990 crop also:

1990	Amount
Corn	$789,738
Soybeans	$482,033
Total	$1.27 million
1991
Corn	$1.8 million
Soybeans	$747,783
Honey	$45,810
Total	$2.6 million

Other various programs earning payments are as follows:

1990	1991	1992
WOOL	$14,211	$17,434
MOHAIR	$100	$927
ANNUAL CONSERVATION PROGRAM	$38,537	$92
		$17,467

DAIRY REFUND PROGRAM PAYMENT (new starting in 1991)

1991 $9,325

CROP COST SHARES IN 1991 $11,296

Total payments to producers in 1991: $6.68 million.

Total payments to date to producers in 1992: $2.54 million.

CROP payments in October of 1992 will be: $1.92 million.

There will be price support loans and possibly some final deficiency payments yet to be paid in 1992.

All figures used for this report are considered approximate due to possible adjustments made for maintenance defaults and contract violations. The figures will not add up as written by year as some of the amounts for 1991 were actually paid in 1992. The final total are the figures that were actually paid in the year shown.

Administrative expenses were approximately $157,516 for 1991 and are approximately $77,698 to date in 1992. There are several full time employees and three temporary field employees. This figures out to approximately 2 percent of the total outlay compared to expenses.

I hope that this makes the overall picture of how the payments to producers from this office makes an impact on the local economy. I also hope that maybe it takes a lot of the "bad taste" away from the word "ASCs."

Deficiency payments are made to producers when they have participated in the farm program and are in compliance with all rules. The following is a breakdown on farm payments by year and also by crop: (M denotes million)

1991	advance	final	total
Corn	$1.24M	$957,415	$2.2M
Sorg.	$356	$386	$742
Oats	$8,801	$38,884	$47,685
Barley	$263	$632	$895
Wheat	$1,691	$2,440	$4,131
Total			$2.25M
1992	advance	(Final payments not made yet)
Corn	$1.04M
Sorghum	$2,179
Oats	$9,539
Barley	$264
Wheat	$385
Total	$1.05M

Disaster payments were made for 1990 and 1991 program years. These payments were reduced by a percentage of the deficiency payments and also adjusted by national procedure. They were as follows:

Year	Amount
1990	$5,242
1991	$32,608
Total	$1.9 million

Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) also known as the 10 year program, has increased each year due to new bids. They are as follows:

Year	Amount
1987	$1.55 million
1988	$119,440
1989	$140,541
1990	$84,023
1991	$2,988
Total	$1.9 million paid in 1991
1992	$27,771 additional for 1992
Total	$1.9 million will be paid yet in 1992

Price support loans are available for eligible crops. The 1990 figures do not reflect the total for the crop year, it only shows the loans paid out since Jan. 1, 1991. There would

Study confirms reports

Work good for beef

A recently completed Colorado State University study confirms what food safety experts have been saying for years -- the United States has the most wholesome supply of beef in the world. The study was funded by Wayne County producers through the national beef checkoff.

Researchers gathered more than 1,700 samples of beef from five different processing plants throughout the U.S., searching for residues of growth promotants, animal health products, contaminants and 25 individual pesticides. The survey included muscle, fat, kidney and liver tissues from slaughter steers and heifers raised under a variety of conditions. The results showed that in each sample, residues were well below governmental tolerance levels for each individual substance.

"We feel very comfortable in concluding that U.S. beef does not contain problematic or violative levels of pesticides or of any compounds considered to be potential hazards to the public health, here or abroad," said Dr. Gary Smith, a Colorado State University animal science professor and the leader of the study team.

The United States allows the use of animal health products in livestock, but maintains strict withdrawal periods, residue control and monitoring procedures administered by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The results of the study corroborate conclusions of three FDA studies -- the All Food Study, Total Diet Study and Feed Contaminants Compliance Program -- which found very low rates of violative levels of pesticide residues in the entire U.S.

food supply. The findings also support the results of the USDA National Residue Monitoring Program with respect to the low incidence of violative residues of steroids and health products in the U.S. beef supply.

This study reiterates to the consumer that the livestock and meat industry believes in the importance of providing safe, wholesome beef products and is committed to following governmental regulations to accomplish that responsibility, says Tom Scott, Executive Director of the Nebraska Beef Council.

Demonstration tour to be held

AREA - The Northeast Research and Extension Center faculty have been conducting a sustainable agricultural demonstration for the last two years. On July 7, at 6:30 p.m. a tour will be conducted of 1992 plots at the center.

The public is invited to listen to discussions on reduced tillage, previous yields, crop rotation, beneficial insects, reduced chemical inputs and future ideas.

The tour is jointly sponsored by the Nebraska Sustainable Agriculture Society.

Corn borers slowed by cool temperatures

AREA - Officials at the Northeast Station in Concord are reporting that the European corn borer development in the area has been slowed by below normal temperatures.

According to Keith Jarvi, most of the area weather stations are now reporting growing-degree day accumulations from four to six calendar days behind the average. He said on Monday last week he observed very small larvae in the whorls of corn in Antelope, Holt and Dixon Counties. Egg masses were either not to be found or were very few in number.

ASCs issues reminder on reserve program

AREA - Current participants in the CRP are reminded to maintain their acres. Annual status reviews by SCS and annual spot checks by ASCs are currently being processed.

According to officials at the Wayne County office, it is required to follow instructions to control any weeds that may be found on the acres. If weeds are not controlled there may be a reduction in payment this fall.

Corn borer growth slowed

Cooler than normal temperatures this spring have slowed the development of European corn borers, but reports from south central Nebraska last week indicate that first generation corn borers have begun damaging crops, said an entomologist at the University of Nebraska South Central Research and Extension Center in Clay Center.

Bob Wright said that reports from several Nebraska locations indicate that corn borer levels seem relatively low. Many of the early emerging moths and their offspring probably were killed by the cool, wet weather this spring, Wright said. Fields that were replanted after the freeze also may escape much egg laying from corn borer moths.

Growers need to check fields to determine whether treatment would be profitable, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist recommended.

Taller areas of corn should be checked first because corn borers prefer to lay eggs there. Eggs laid on smaller corn (less than 17 inches in extended leaf height) have a low chance of survival. Corn plants have a natural resistance factor in the form of a chemical called DIMBOA (abbreviation) that inhibits corn borers' feeding and causes the larvae to wander, limiting survival, Wright said. This chemical becomes diluted as plants grow bigger and corn borer survival increases if eggs hatch when plants are 22 to 36 inches tall in extended leaf height.

Wright listed several instructions for producers to determine the necessity of treatment. Survey fields for plants showing leaf-feeding injury, and count the number of live larvae present. Check at least 25 plants, in each of four areas of a field (100 plants total). Record the percentage of plants with shot-hole damage. Unroll two or more damaged whorls at each site and record the number of live larvae per damaged plant. This will provide an estimate of the maximum number of borers that might survive to enter the stalk. Enter the percentage of plants with corn borer feeding damage and the estimated number of live larvae per plant on the accompanying worksheet.

The worksheet will help producers estimate the potential yield loss if all the corn borers survive to bore into the stalk, the preventable loss if an insecticide is used and the control costs.

Producers should remember that mortality of young borers often is high because of insect predators and weather, Wright said. To take full advantage of this natural control, growers should delay treatment decisions until the borers are in the second instar stage or older.

Wright said treatment must be applied while borers are feeding on the whorl to be effective. Treatment after borers are about half-grown and boring into the stalk will not be effective.
