

"ATTENTION WAYNE AREA SHOPPERS! Watch for the special bargains where you see the flashing chicken," was the message delivered Friday night at many businesses in the community as the dozzenth annual Wayne Chicken Show got underway. The problem Theresa Grove of Hubbard discovered is that the trench-coated chicken interpreted "flashing" differently.

Poultry zaniness draws thousands

By Les Mann

If you build a good Chicken Show they will come, says Wayne Chamber of Commerce Executive Kurt Wilwerding.

Wilwerding had words of praise this week for the efforts of the Wayne Chicken Show committee which he said has built an attraction that is the envy of most communities in Northeast Nebraska or even in all the country.

Entering its 12th (dozzenth in Chicken show parlance) year, the Wayne event has captured the imagination and attention of millions throughout the country.

"WE HAVE A real neat sense of community with all the people working together," said Jane O'Leary, the chairperson of the zany event which started Friday night with shoppers being directed to look for bargains in downtown stores where they see the flashing chicken.

The big chicken was dressed as a flasher in a trench coat.

Mrs. O'Leary estimates that over 500 people in the community have participated with time and contributions to put the show on this year. "It proves neat things can happen when the community comes together," she added.

The community efforts have not gone unnoticed either.

Wilwerding said the Chamber has been contacted by CNN and ABC television networks who have said they have plans to have news crews in town Saturday. Mrs. O'Leary said a story about the t-shirt controversy went out over the national Associated Press news wire and as a result, calls have been coming in to Chicken Central which is the Word Works business Mrs. O'Leary operates.

"TICKETS ARE getting scarce," said Wilwerding about the sales of tickets for the Chicken Feed Saturday afternoon. He said the chamber increased the number of chicken dinners it will be preparing to 1,500 this year and it still appears they will be running out.

Another scarce commodity is likely to be 1992 Chicken Show commemorative t-shirts. Sales of the shirts picked up dramatically after the town became the subject of publicity about complaints that the shirts were vulgar.

The shirts depict Brun Hilda, an opera-singing hen complete with Nordic helmet and metal breast plate. Some critics thought the image was supposed to be Madonna, others thought it was just plain vulgar.

FEARING ECONOMIC disaster if 1,500 pre-screened shirts didn't sell, the Chicken Show committee issued a statement that said they would not be threatened by groups like the Clu Clucks Clan that might want to burn a t-shirt on the committee members' lawn. A call, allegedly, was even placed to the American Chicken Liberties Union (ACLU) to try to preserve the right to freedom of expression for chickens.

The story about t-shirt plight caused a dramatic upturn in sales, said Mrs. O'Leary. That is a good thing too, since nearly all of the funding for the over $10,000 budget of the show comes from t-shirt sales.

AMONG THE big-ticket expenses for the show is the cost of the popular free omelet feed on Saturday morning. More than 2,000 excellent omelets are served.

We're just really "eggcited" to have everyone join us for a fun time," said Wilwerding.

More doin's next weekend

Argue politics with Frederick Douglas; discuss environmental issues with Henry David Thoreau; write poetry with Walt Whitman...all of these opportunities and more are available to participants in the Great Plains Chautauqua which begins Friday in Wayne.

The event hearkens back to the days when traveling troupes of orators and entertainers took their tent shows on the road. Chautauqua was called the first attempts at adult education.

A restaging of the historic "humanities fair" will be under a big tent at the Wayne County Fairgrounds. The show will feature scholars who have conducted intensive studies of Whitman, Douglass, Thoreau, Louisa May Alcott, Margaret Fuller, Herman Melville and Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The seven scholars will appear on stage as these famous characters.

The Wayne Chautauqua committee has many other events planned surrounding the festival. These include nightly community dinners, band concerts, dances, arts and crafts show and sale, play performances and more.

Tickets for admission to the tent show performances are only $10 for a family season pass.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting the Wayne Public Library.

At a Glance

Press conference

WAYNE - A 10 a.m. press conference is scheduled Friday for the media and the public to meet the Chautauqua performers and to "kick-off" the five-day tent show in Wayne.

The press conference and many of the Chautauqua activities will be held at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

Chautauqua central

WAYNE - Headquarters for information about Chautauqua activities in Wayne next week will be at the Wayne Public Library. Books by the featured Chautauqua authors are available for sale at the library.

Library hours will be extended during the Chautauqua season. Friday, Monday and Tuesday the library will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It will be closed Sunday.

During the hours that the library is closed, visitors may obtain information at the Chamber of Commerce or Dairy Queen.

The big three

WAYNE - This weekend is the Chicken Show, next weekend is the Chautauqua and next month is the 70th annual Wayne County Fair which includes more activities and excitement than usual.

The county fair souvenir books which list premiums and schedules of events as well as historical features and information about fair participants have been distributed. The books are available at the Wayne County Extension office and other locations throughout the county.

Still in court

NORFOLK - A Madison County group was back in district court in Lincoln Friday arguing for immediate reinstatement of legislative district 21 serving Madison County. The state has asked for a delay of implementing a Supreme Court ruling that the state's redistricting plan was unconstitutional because it split Madison County.

No new judge

WAYNE - Wayne County has no new judge. A story in Thursday's issue mis-identified District Judge Robert Ensz as Paul Ensz. The publisher, whose error it was, apologizes.

Gives rural residents addresses—

Countian plans to save lives

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

A Wayne County employee has come up with a proposal to number section lines throughout the state of Nebraska, which could lead to faster 911 service to rural residents requesting emergency assistance.

Sid Saunders, Wayne County highway superintendent, said the proposal is designed to provide rural residents with a system of identification, similar to houses in urban areas, whereby emergency personnel would know exactly where to respond in the event of a crisis.

Saunders said the idea for identifying all county roads, throughout the state came about following a request by Norfolk Police Chief William Mizner.

Mizner appeared before the Wayne County Commissioners last November and asked them to consider including a portion of Wayne County in an Enhanced 911 (E-911) system being developed in Norfolk.

SAUNDERS explained that at the present time many rural residents must dial the number of the nearest fire department, police department or other rescue service in the event of an emergency.

In areas where residents are served by the ordinary 911 number, residents dial that number and are put in touch with a dispatcher who asks their name, telephone number, nature of emergency, location, and how to get to that location.

"With the E-911 system," said Saunders, "rural residents simply dial 911 and their name, telephone number and location automatically appear on a computer screen.

"The only thing they need to communicate is the nature of the emergency, and that can save valuable time for someone who is experiencing a crisis situation and to rescue personnel who are responding to the emergency.

"The E-911 system is a great idea and one that is spreading very rapidly across the state," said Saunders. "The problem comes in identifying county roads and houses so that they can be programmed into the E-911 system."

IN JANUARY, Wayne County Commissioners gave their formal approval to participate in the E-911 system proposed for Norfolk.

The system, which Saunders expects to be up and operating in approximately a year, will presently include just those residents living in the southwest corner of Wayne County who are served by the Norfolk telephone exchange.

Following the commissioners' approval, Saunders was given the task of identifying the county roads so that they could be programmed into the Norfolk E-911 system.

"That's when I first came into the picture," explains Saunders, adding that he began by developing a system of identifying rural roads in Wayne County.

While looking at the map, the highway superintendent said it became obvious to him that the road identification system could and should be extended to include all four counties which will be served by the Norfolk E-911 system — Wayne, Pierce, Madison and Stanton.

"It seemed to me that it would be less confusing if all four counties were treated as a unit, with the road numbering system extending across county lines."

As the project developed, Saunders saw the advantage of a statewide system of uniform county road numbers, and extended his plan to include all counties in Nebraska.

LAST MONTH, Saunders presented his proposal to a statewide meeting of county highway superintendents and received a generally favorable response.

Saunders explained that the statewide system of numbering north-south section lines begins with 201 on the Wyoming line and continues consecutively across the state to 665.

The east-west roads begin at the Kansas line with 702 and end with number 909 at the South Dakota line.

The highway superintendent pointed out that while most roads in Wayne County and Nebraska are on section lines, some are not and the

Preservation project benefits with help from Wayne group

A historic preservation project in Walthill has gotten a little help from some friends in Wayne.

The Nebraska State Questers presented its annual $500 Preservation Award to the Wayne Confusable Collectibles Chapter on April 9 in Lincoln. The Wayne organization had nominated the Dr. Susan LaFlesche Picotte Center in Walthill for the award.

Each year the Nebraska chapters have the opportunity to nominate a restoration project in their area for this $500 award. It is then voted on at the annual state day in April. Five other entries from across the state were nominated for this year's award. Past recipients have included Morrel Hall, Lincoln; the Henri Museum, Cozad; John Brown's Cave, Nebraska City; and the Opera House and FEVR Railroad in Fremont.

Chapter president Loretta Tompkins and Loreene Gildersleeve presented the $500 check to Chairman Lahmann, Picotte Committee chairman, at the Picotte Center in Walthill on July 1.

The Questers is an international organization of people interested in antiques and historical preservation. There are over 15,000 members throughout the U.S. and Canada. Nebraska has 19 chapters and 220 members.

Dr. Susan LaFlesche Picotte was the first Native American woman to graduate from medical school in 1889. She was from the Omaha tribe and a life-long resident of Thurston County. She established a hospital in Walthill in 1913 as part of her missionary work for the Presbyterian Church.

The hospital building, while not particularly ornate, features a screened-in porch the entire length of the building, reflecting the thinking of the era which emphasized sunshine and fresh air to aid in the recovery from illness. It is listed on the National Register of Historic Sites.

In 1988 the Center for Rural Affairs purchased the deteriorating building and set out to restore it. Funds have been raised from local contributors, former residents of the area, individual benefactors, corporations, foundations and public agencies. Local people provide about three-fourths of the volunteer hours, visitors the rest.

Emphasis has been placed on using the Center as a community educational facility, promoting Native American arts, "shared history" of Natives and whites in the area, and enriching Native American education programs in the local school system. There are also art exhibits featuring works by Native American artists. Several rooms are used by the Red Feather Services, a youth and family counseling program that provides service on the Omaha and Winnebago Reservations. Last year the gift shop's space and inventory were expanded.

By the end of the year, the Center plans to pay off the remaining debt on the building and complete the transfer of ownership from the Center for Rural Affairs to the Picotte Center, Inc.

Persons wishing to visit the Center are asked to call 846-5428 during the day, or 846-5966 after 5 p.m. and weekends.

In Allen Nutrition site opens

Today (Monday) marks the opening of the Allen Senior Center's noon meal nutrition site.

Joanne Rahn, senior center coordinator, said all persons over 60 years of age are invited to come and eat at the site. Persons under age 60 also are invited, however they must pay the full price of $3.

Rahn said each day's meal will consist of a balanced diet, low-fat and low-salt, and will provide one-third of the required daily allowance.

Those planning to eat at the nutrition site are asked to notify the senior center one day in advance, or no later than 9 a.m. on the day they wish to eat.

Rahn added that volunteers are needed to help at the center and also to deliver home meals.

THE MEAL menu for this week includes:

Monday, July 13, pork chops, parsley potatoes, carrots, raw apple salad, dinner roll and peaches.

Tuesday, July 14, cube steak, whipped potatoes and gravy, cooked cabbage, heavenly hash, rye bread, rhubarb.

Thursday, July 16, fried chicken, mashed potatoes, buttered beets, lime/pear/cottage cheese salad, mixed breads, purple plums.

Friday, July 17, ham, beans, stewed tomatoes, health salad, corn bread, fresh orange.

Library displaying American Girls dolls

In conjunction with the upcoming American Renaissance Chautauqua, the Wayne Public Library will feature a display of the American Girls dolls.

The dolls, which will be displayed at the library from July 20-24, are part of the American Girls book series which feature fictional families who lived in America, from colonial times to the 1940's.

Librarian Jolene Klein reminds the public that the library will observe different hours during the week of the Chautauqua, including Friday, July 17 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday, July 18 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Sunday, July 19; Monday, July 20 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; and Tuesday, July 21 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Governor names Wayne resident to State Board

Carlos Frey, Wayne, has been named by Nebraska Gov. Ben Nelson to the state's new Home-based Business Association advisory board.

The 18-member board will lead the association, created by an executive order signed by the governor, and will develop guidelines for its future.

Frey will represent the interests of artists on the board.

"The selection was difficult due to the excellent candidates who applied," Nelson remarked. "The desire for representation across the state and among the varied business fields was met with these charter members of Nebraska's Home-Based Business Association's advisory board."

Nominations for the board were made during 11 home-based business workshops held across the state February and sponsored by the Department of Economic Development and the Small Business Administration, with the support of Nebraska Public Power District and FirstTier.

Nelson added that the board members are well qualified to form the necessary network for information that will address the needs of other home-based entrepreneurs in securing financial, marketing and development assistance.

"Nebraska's communities will benefit greatly from the sharing of information, insight and expertise represented by this outstanding group of business men and women," Nelson said.

"It is a continuation of our efforts to involve more of our citizens in the large task of preparing Nebraska to enter the global economy. Through the Rural Development Commission and the Department of Economic Development, we've already launched the Nebraska Development Network, a coalition of public and private service providers who will assist communities and regions in rebuilding their economies," he said. "The Home-Based Business Advisory Board is yet another step in this process."

Lt. Gov. Maxine Moul will take the lead in the organization and development of the association and has set a first meeting of the board for July 21 at the Student Center at the University of Nebraska-Kearney.

Named to the Home-Based Business Association Advisory Board with Frey and their areas of interest are: Auburn — Susan Kruse, window decorations; Bee — Richard Hain, publishing/farming; Benkelman — Pamela Gaston, lawn service; Broken Bow — Connie Conner, weavings; Columbus — Jo Lee Lutnes, freelance writing; Harrison — Pepper Nunn, riding accessories; Hemingford — Mary Wernke, computer services; Kearney — Ward Schrack, consultant; Lincoln — Terry Kotschwar, architectural design and Susan Zink, consultant; North Platte — Jim Clinton, food production; Omaha — Sheri Hronek, marketing and Tom Sharman, audio production; Orleans — Betty Streff, crafts; Valentine — Robert Coupland, law; Verdigris — Debra Ruzicka, crafts; and Winnebago — Daryl LaPointe, catering.

Nelson noted that the U.S. Department of Commerce has estimated that nearly half of all jobs in the year 2000 will have been created by small businesses.

"We recognize the role that entrepreneurship can play in stimulating local economies as well as providing opportunities for employment. The Nebraska Home-Based Business Association will allow us to share resources needed by this growing business sector," Nelson said.

Carrying the torch

DANA NELSON, Danielle Nelson and Lisa McIntyre, left to right, were among Nebraska residents taking part in the torch run for the Nebraska Cornhusker State Games in Lincoln. Over 800 runners are expected to take their turns in the 927-mile run which ends July 17 at the games in Lincoln. The torch run is sponsored by Gillette Dairy.

Conway nixes blame on redistricting mess

By Les Mann
Herald Publisher

State Sen. Gerald Conway is getting hammered from all sides over the state legislative redistricting court decision and he has said he is getting a little tired of it.

The state media seems to be blaming him as chairman of the redistricting committee for the Supreme Court's unconstitutional verdict, he said and it's not fair.

"It wasn't my plan. I didn't even present a plan," he said. He said one of three fact errors in the Supreme Court decision alleged there were other plans that his committee should have sent to the floor instead of the one that was approved by the majority of the senators.

"No alternative plans were presented to the committee," he said and called the Supreme Court's research work "shoddy." He said the fact errors indicate the court may have had a political agenda of its own.

The court opinion ignores language in the constitution which permits the dividing of counties said Conway.

Conway quoted the constitution Article III, Section 5, which reads, "In any such redistricting, county lines shall be followed whenever practicable, but other established lines may be followed at the discretion of the legislature."

Conway said under the plan approved, the goal was to create more uniformity of district structure on grounds other than arbitrary (county) boundaries created over 100 years ago. Splitting some rural areas of Madison County away from rapidly growing urban areas, seemed like a logical thing to do, he said. Most senators agreed, and he added, even the state's major newspapers which are now criticizing the outcome, wrote favorable editorials about the process at the time.

The result of the Supreme Court's decision may give Norfolk County people what they want but it will hurt the rest of Northeast Nebraska, Conway added.

"I was fighting for my district, and that's what I am sent there to do," said Conway of his role in the process. He added he doesn't mind being attacked from outside the district as long as people in his district understand that he is working for them.

"Still I wonder and worry about the support within the district," he said concerning the continuing controversy.

Conway said the anticipated reworking of the district boundaries in Northeast Nebraska will not mean the area will get another senator.

"It's a mathematical process rather than a political one," he said. Where we had a population base to support five senators from Northeast Nebraska now we can only justify four.

Conway is facing an uphill fight to win reelection this fall, no matter what shape his district will take. He lost the primary to South Sioux City attorney Kurt Hohenstein.

WAYNE COUNTY HIGHWAY Superintendent Sid Saunders has developed this plan to number all roads in Wayne County. The plan is designed to assist emergency service personnel in locating rural houses. Saunders' plan will be presented during a public hearing on Aug. 18, preceding action by the Wayne County Commissioners.

Roads

public will be asked to assist in giving those roads an identifying name.

He also pointed out that his numbering system begins with 200 to avoid duplicating the numbers of most state and federal highways.

In addition, Saunders points out that the numbering system begins in the Panhandle region of Nebraska with the lowest numbers and increases across the state.

"By the time we get to Omaha and Lincoln, the numbers in my system are all over 500 so that I avoid the duplication of street numbers in metropolitan areas."

He also pointed out that in nearly all cases, he avoided duplicating county road numbers already in use by using three digits.

ALTHOUGH response to Saunders' proposal has been favorable, he does not expect the system to be adopted by imposed state authority.

Instead, Saunders said he has sent copies of his numbering system to each county highway superintendent in the state, and each county can choose to adopt the system on an individual basis.

Saunders added that counties which have already developed a rural road identification system are not likely to adopt his proposed statewide system.

"They've already made a big investment in signs, etc., and to adopt my system now would just be too great of an expense."

WHILE Wayne County Commissioners responded favorably to Saunders' road identification system for Wayne County, the highway superintendent said a public hearing will be held Aug. 18 at 1:30 p.m. in the Wayne County Courthouse meeting room to receive comments on the proposal.

Action by the county commissioners will be taken following the public hearing.

Saunders, who also serves as secretary for the Wayne County Planning Commission, said his next project will be to develop a system of numbering rural houses, similar to the system used in urban communities.

"The system I developed for numbering roads would lend itself well to house numbers as well," pointed out Saunders, adding that the post office is also interested in the project and would at some point in the future deliver mail to rural residents according to the road and house number.

SAUNDERS said his main purpose in developing the statewide road numbering system was to avoid confusion and duplication at county lines.

"It could get confusing if all counties go their own way and don't consult each other."

He also pointed out that it would be much easier for emergency personnel to deal with a uniform system of numbering, rather than a system that differs at each county line.

Saunders is quick to thank Wayne County Commissioners for allowing him to work on the project and he hopes it will receive favorable response from the public at the August hearing.

"Once I started, the project just seemed to snowball," smiled Saunders. "I tried several possibilities, and this system just seems to be the best."

"People know about the 911 service, but not E-911, and it's E-911 that presents the problem and requires the identifications."

Earns science honor

Jesse Kai, a Wakefield High School student, is among the three additional Nebraska high school sophomores and juniors who have been accepted for Science Enrichment for Nebraska Talented Rural Youth (SENTRY), a three-week summer learning program on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus.

SENTRY '92, sponsored by the National Science Foundation and Nebraska Wesleyan, began July 5 and will run through July 24. During the program students will study two of four subject areas: biology, chemistry, physics or computer science. In addition, each student, either individually or in a group, will work on a research project, which will be completed at home. Students accepted for SENTRY '92 are talented and interested in science and/or computers, and from small rural high schools. They will live in Nebraska Wesleyan residence halls during the program.

Instruction will focus on the laboratory, using modern equipment and techniques not normally available in small high schools, with research being an added focus this year. "Nebraska Wesleyan has outstanding science facilities and equipment," Coleman says. "This is an opportunity to share our equipment with Nebraska high school students."

Guest lecturers from government, industry and other educational institutions will provide information on science-related careers. In the past, tours of the Strategic Air Command headquarters in Bellevue and the Cooper Nuclear Power Station in southeast Nebraska have also been planned.

The other students accepted for SENTRY '92 with Kai include: Lori Rentschler from West Holt Rural High School in Atkinson and Pat Cooons, from Winnebago High School.

Weak demand

Cattle prices may be pushed lower

Fed cattle marketings have rebounded sharply from the low levels posted in early spring. The resulting larger beef supplies have pressured cattle prices lower, into the lower $70s per hundredweight in late June, said Al Wellman, University of Nebraska-Lincoln marketing specialist.

Peak fed cattle marketings likely have been reached, Wellman said. But seasonally weaker demand for beef this summer still may push fed cattle prices below current levels, he said.

Choice slaughter steer prices this summer are expected to average around $70, up slightly from last year, but down from the April to June average near $75.75 per hundredweight. Late summer prices still are expected to dip into the upper $60s, but a rebound back into the lower $70s is likely this fall, Wellman said.

The recent U.S. Department of Agriculture cattle on feed report indicated that cattle feeders have marketed cattle aggressively, while feedlot placements continue to lag, Wellman said. Fed cattle marketings during May were slightly higher than pre-report trade estimates, while feedlot placements were slightly lower. Any market optimism that combination may have generated has been offset by declining wholesale beef prices, he said.

Preliminary estimates suggest June feedlot marketings may be record large, near 1.85 million head, about 10 percent higher than a year ago. But in 1992, June had two more marketing days than last year, Wellman noted. When adjusted to a daily basis, estimated June marketings were about the same as a year ago, but still 3 percent over the five-year average.

Along with larger supplies of fed cattle, cow slaughter also has climbed above past years' levels. Following two years of declines, April to June cow marketings averaged about 4 percent above last year. Further gains are likely during the last half of the year. In fact, summer cow slaughter may average 11 to 13 percent over last year's average.

The expected increase in cow slaughter will offset anticipated declines in fed cattle marketings this summer, Wellman said. Therefore, total cattle slaughter during the July to September quarter may average close to last year, but will increase about 2 percent seasonally from the April to June quarter.

Average slaughter weights remained above 1991 during the first half of 1992, adding to beef tonnage. Marketing weights this summer may not exceed the record highs reached after the July to August 1991 price collapse. Still, no significant decrease in marketing weights is likely either.

"Beef production this summer likely will be close to last year's level," Wellman said.

Along with seasonally larger beef supplies this summer, pork production is expected to exceed a year ago by about 10 percent. And poultry output will increase, too, Wellman said. These larger supplies of competing meats may pressure beef demand, further tempering beef and cattle prices, Wellman said.

JOCK BEESON, Wayne, won the champion bred-and-owned heifer award at the Kansas Junior Polled Hereford Association Preview Show with JB Trustmaid 592A.

Youth excel at Kansas show

A large group of Kansas and Nebraska youth competed in a wide variety of activities at the Kansas Junior Polled Hereford Association Preview Show.

The cattle show on May 30 in Abilene was evaluated by Greg McCurry, Sedgwick, Kan. He selected WBR Winning Lady 74A as his champion heifer. She is an April 1992 daughter of SF TOO Crossroads Y206 shown by Chad Yost of Ong, Neb. Taking reserve honors was Tammy Riffel of Enterprise, Kan. on CDF Summits Review 675A. She is a January yearling by KJ High Summit 166Y.

Champion bred-and-owned heifer honors were picked up by Jock Beeson of Wayne. His winning entry was JB Trustmaid 592A, sired by

Riffel claimed the champion steer award with her 1,170 lb. entry by PVF Roadster 918. Just behind her was Darbie McMahon of Blue Hill, Neb., with her reserve champion by Captain R 847.

The showmanship contest was one of the most competitive events. Winning champion honors in the PeeWee division was Lyndse Peterson of Minneapolis, Kan. Junior honors went to Jay Loschke of Osage City, Kan., while Riffel wrapped up the senior division.

Potato consumption has declined

The Midland View
By Cheryl Stubbendiek
Farm Bureau Federation

Potatoes have been in the news lately, what with Dan Quayle's creative approach to spelling and all.

The vice president may wish he'd never heard of The P Word, but 14-year-old Kacy Corbett of New Jersey points out the pitfalls in her winning essay for a National Potato Board contest: "Without the potato, Mr. Potatohead would be just a pile of plastic parts; pretzels would have to sit alone at parties; mealtimes would be drastically reduced without the hash browns for breakfast, potato chips for lunch and mashed potatoes for dinner ... an empty space would appear between the words potation and potafeu in Webster's New World Dictionary."

Drastic consequences all, but it's the potatoes missing from mealtimes that most concern the Potato Board. Recent research from the National Eating Trends Diary shows that potato consumption has declined by one-half meal every two weeks. People participating in the diary research record everything they eat during a two-week period and what they reported shows that, on the average, we're each eating about a dozen fewer spuds a year.

What caused this change? Blame it on chicken. People are eating more chicken meals and fewer beef meals. For most consumers, potatoes are associated with beef while rice and pasta are typically paired up with chicken.

The Potato Board did focus group research in four cities to see how it might convince the family cook to serve potatoes more often. Small groups of women were interviewed and about how they felt about the dinner hour and the foods they prepared. In one startling finding, the research determined that most of the women interviewed had negative reactions to preparing weekday dinners! Each evening they struggled with limited time, uncooperative families and limited energy!

On a positive note, the women said they love potatoes, they're nutritious, they go over well with the family and they're easy to prepare if baked, mashed or boiled. Most of the women said they hadn't consciously cut down on the number of potato meals they served.

The research showed that the women divided the dinner plate into three parts: meat, starch and vegetable. But even though they agreed that potatoes are a vegetable, they would not put potatoes on the vegetable third of the plate. So while they might combine chicken, pasta and peas, they wouldn't serve the family chicken, pasta and potatoes at the same meal. It would have to be chicken, potatoes and another vegetable. Obviously, though the research subjects could identify the potato as a vegetable, they would regard it as a starch.

From this emerged the Potato Board's new promotional strategy: to convince moderate users of potatoes to serve them more often, especially with chicken, because potatoes are the only starch that is also a fresh vegetable. What this means is that the cook gets credit in two food categories for the price and effort of one. This is important when you're trying to figure out if you've honored all the food groups with the nightly dinner offering.

This approach makes sense to me, largely because I could have told them for free everything they learned from the research. Just to be nice, here's my own two-part strategy for serving my family potatoes more often: drive through a take-out place and order french fries.

Alfalfa producers plagued by leafhoppers

Early cutting may be one option that alfalfa producers in Northeast Nebraska should take to control leafhoppers, said a University of Nebraska-Lincoln entomologist.

Steve Danielson said potato leafhoppers are causing serious problems for the state's alfalfa producers. Unfortunately, damage caused by the small, 1/8 inch long, light-green insects is not apparent until after financial loss has occurred.

The insects insert their needle-like mouths into stems and leaves of alfalfa plants and inject a toxin as they feed, he explained. The damage is expressed as yellow or purple triangular-shaped areas on tips of individual leaflets. The leaf dies and may eventually fall off.

Leafhoppers represent an annual problem for growers in eastern and southern states, and about once every five or 10 years they invade Nebraska in economic numbers, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist pointed out.

Growers should sample fields now and look for leafhoppers, Danielson said. They can be controlled with pesticides or cutting. If leafhoppers are in the nymph (or immature) stage, growers should cut the field -- even if it is not at the proper stage of growth for harvesting. This will control the immature leafhoppers because they cannot fly or move on and they will die without green foliage to feed on.

Adult leafhoppers do fly and, if found, growers should apply insecticide treatments to their fields. Severely damaged alfalfa may need to be cut off to allow normal regrowth after insecticide treatment, Danielson said. Adult leafhoppers from surrounding fields may invade later, so frequent scouting is suggested and retreatment may be necessary.

Danielson said he expects the leafhoppers to stay in the eastern half of the state but it is possible that other portions of Nebraska could be affected. Bob Ramsel, an extension agent-agriculture in St. Paul, said it appears that growers in his area have found the pests.

Many pesticides are available for growers who decide that treatment is necessary, Danielson said. They include Sevin 80S; XLR Plus; Furadan 4F; Lorsban 4E; Cygon 400; malathion 57EC; Supracide 2E; PennCap-M; parathion 4EC, 8E, 8F; Ambush 2E, 25W; Pounce 25WP, 3.2 EC; Imidan 50 WP and Dylox 80SP.

Growers may contact local extension offices to obtain a publication on treatment guidelines, rates and restrictions, EC1511, "Insect Management Guide for Nebraska Alfalfa, Soybeans, Wheat, Range and Pasture." The price is $2.

59 counties represented

Ag youth leaders gather at NAYI

Ag youth leaders throughout the state will gather in Lincoln on July 13-16 for the 21st annual Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute (NAYI). According to Kathy Kunz and Bart Beattie, Ag Youth Coordinators for the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, 173 delegates representing 59 counties across the state will be attending.

The institute was originally founded to keep rural youth interested in agriculture. It has surpassed this goal and has served as a model for similar programs in other midwestern states. The institute is coordinated by the Nebraska Agricultural Youth Council, a group of 20 college-age men and women who are selected by the Nebraska Department of Agriculture. The Department of Agriculture, commodity groups and agribusinesses sponsor NAYI, which is held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

The institute will focus on this year's theme, "Meeting Tomorrow's Challenges Today." During NAYI, delegates will hear nationally recognized speakers address topics of interest for agriculture, participate in a computer simulated farm management game and develop critical thinking and decision-making skills.

Speakers scheduled to address the delegates include Larry Sitzman, Director, and Pat Ptacek, Assistant Director, of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture; farm management workshop instructor, Dr. Duane Jewell, from Northwest Missouri State University; William Westman, Agriculture Attache for the Foreign Agricultural Service; John Campbell, who formerly served as Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs and Commodity Programs at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and is currently Assistant Vice President of Corporate Relations for Ag Processing, Inc.; and Larry Heidebrecht, President and Chief Executive Staff of the American Polled Hereford Association.

Motivational speakers Jolene Brown and Mark Mayfield will challenge and inspire the delegates. Delegates will also attend workshops on leadership development, ag careers, chemical safety and animal welfare.

Delegates will form their own policy statements after hearing experts talk on water quality, soil conservation and zoning laws/right to farm. Georgia Stevens, Nebraska Extension Family Economics Policy Specialist, will facilitate the formulation exercise.

Charles Schroeder, Vice President of Development, University Foundation, will be the keynote speaker at Wednesday's State Dinner. In addition, the announcement of the 1992 Award of Merit will be made to recognize an individual who has demonstrated a continuing commitment to youth in agriculture.

NU Field Days are scheduled at Regional Centers, Laboratories

New developments in field crop, livestock and tree production will be presented in a series of field days scheduled by University of Nebraska officials at regional research and extension centers and laboratories.

In this area, the field day is scheduled at Concord Aug. 21.

Field days are also scheduled at Clay Center, Scottsbluff, Sidney, and Plattsmouth in July, August and October under auspices of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL.

The Northeast Research and Extension Center at Concord will be the site for a field day scheduled on Aug. 21 from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., said Ron Cleveland, communications associate. Topics and tours include swine and feedlot cattle operations, herbicide and insecticide use, anhydrous ammonia applications, irrigation projects, chemigation through center pivot irrigation systems, trees, nutrition and 4-H clubs, said Cleveland.

Members of the South Central Research and Extension Center in Clay Center have scheduled a field day July 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. with lunch at 11:45 a.m., said Kim Peterson, communications assistant.

Peterson said topics and tours at the center will include ecoculture of sorghum, corn, wheat, and soybeans; limited irrigation corn production; research soil samples; greenbugs in sorghum; tillage and rotation interaction on irrigation; specialty soybean varieties; rotating sorghum with soybeans and rye; mung beans; alternatives to atrazine; soybean row widths and wheat diseases and fungicides. The field day also will feature no-till drill and soil probe demonstrations.

Staff members at the Panhandle Research and Extension Center in Scottsbluff will hold a field day Aug. 6 from 9 a.m. to noon followed by a barbecue lunch, said Stan Haas, communications specialist. Topics to be discussed during plot tours include irrigated sugar beet, dry bean, and corn research.

A field day at the High Plains Agricultural Laboratory near Sidney is scheduled Aug. 14 from 9 a.m. to noon, Haas said. Wheat culture and production research plots and alternative crop research areas are scheduled for tours and discussions.

Members of the Department of Forestry, Fisheries and Wildlife have scheduled the annual open house at the Horning Forestry Farm near Plattsmouth on Oct. 17-18 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day, said Rich Lodes, natural resources district forester at UNL.

The educational, hayrack tours, which are open to the public, will focus on how products are made from trees and forest management, Lodes said. Other scheduled events include a historical presentation about sawmills in Nebraska, global perspectives on logging and the environmental concerns it causes, and educational booths.

There will be no registration fee to attend the field days. There may be a fee for lunch or refreshments at various events.

Swine conference at Lincoln Aug. 3-4

Approximately 150 producers, researchers, consultants and practitioners from several states will attend the 33rd George A. Young Swine Conference, which will be held at the Ramada Hotel (previously the Lincoln Hilton) Aug. 3-4.

The cost for the conference is $90 which includes the registration fee, a luncheon and a proceedings booklet. Applicants are encouraged to register prior to the meeting; however, individuals may register the day of the conference. Contact Lee Johnson at 472-8537 with further questions. "Management of Endemic Disease" is the emphasis of this year's meeting. Speakers will talk about genetic assessment, control of diseases, interpreting and using client records, nutrition and many other subjects. After each presentation, there will be a question and answer session for the audience.
