WAYNE, NE 68787

116TH YEAR — NO. 82

PACKED HOUSES or rather packed tents were the routine during the five days of Chautauqua performances in Wayne. The tent came down Tuesday night and the troupe departed for Pierre, S.D. but not before a record number of participants viewed the performances of the Chautauqua scholars.

Community counting Chautauqua benefits

By Les Mann

The benefits from the successful run of the Chautauqua in Wayne will be felt for years after the tent stakes are pulled and the scholars have left town, according to Chautauquans and the members of the committee which brought them here.

The Chautauqua season concluded in Wayne Tuesday night with the striking of the tent—in the rain. The troupe departed Wednesday morning following a send-off breakfast at the college.

"The organization and support in the Wayne community has shown in the success of the Chautauqua here," said Dr. Carol Peterson, a professor at Doane College in Crete, Neb. who was one of the Chautauqua performers, known on stage as Walt Whitman.

PETERSON SAID the troupe does not always see the level of participation and organization that it did in Wayne. A member of the troupe for the last four years, Peterson said the group travels for ten weeks in the summer, making stops in two towns in each of the plains states of Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and North and South Dakota.

The troupe departed Wayne for performances next in Pierre, S.D.

Other members of the troupe expressed amazement that Wayne could organize and promote so many major celebrations in one summer and do them all so well, a reference to last week's Chicken Show and next month's Q-125 Fair.

THE MEMBERS of the local Chautauqua committee, which has been organizing the event with weekly meetings for over a year, were literally full of glee Wednesday morning as the results of the event were discussed.

"As a community we have made a great impression," said Curt Wilwerding, chamber of commerce executive. He said the benefits to the community business were both direct, in the case of restaurants and motels, and indirect in the case of all other businesses, and that those benefits would be felt for years to come.

"Events like this improve the image of the community among outsiders and create a positive impression on our visitors," said committee member Dave Ewing. He said the whole project of Chautauqua is making Wayne a strong community. "It was an exercise in coalition building and teamwork," he added.

"WE ARE A group in search of a project," said Tom Cook, another committee member who stressed the benefits of the work that members of the committee did in organizing for Chautauqua. He said there could be other civic projects conducted as an outgrowth of the camaraderie and enthusiasm of the Chautauqua committee.

There even could be a nestegg for those civic projects as a result of the Chautauqua. The event, with an expense of over $10,000 will finish in the black, because of the ticket sales, contributions from patrons, and grant funding. Total receipts and expenses are still coming in, but it appears the event was a financial success as well as an entertainment success, said committee members.

The departing words of characters like Hawthorne and Whitman were that Wayne is a community worth returning to.

$400,000 shortfall—

Commissioners in yearly budget boil

By Les Mann
Herald Publisher

Their predictions of dire consequences made three years ago are coming to pass, say Wayne County Commissioners who entered their budget forming process this week with an anticipated $400,000 gap between what county expenses might be next year and what the county is expected to take in in revenue.

In other years, prior to the 1989 passage of strict tax limiting laws on local agencies, the county would have raised the necessary funds with additional tax levy, but no more.

"SOMETHING just has to give," said commissioner Robert Nissen as he stared at a pile of budget requests from county officials Tuesday. The commissioners were scheduled to go into what they expected to be heated discussions with those officials Wednesday in an effort to find $400,000 worth of cuts.

"We're not going to be the most popular guys around here," said Jerry Pospishil who added the Wayne County problem was being shared by other counties in the state that tried to hold down taxes in the late eighties by dipping into their cash reserves.

When the state passed the lid provisions in LB 1059 and LB 829 the formula hurt counties which had previously used reserves to hold down taxes, the commissioners said.

NOW THE reserves are gone and the cost of providing the services residents have come to expect is up higher than the lid will allow.

Other factors beyond the control of the commissioners are grating on the county budget as well. For instance, six jury trials have been scheduled for the last half of this year. Jury trials are expensive and no one can remember having more than two in any one previous year.

JUDICIAL AND law enforcement expenses were the biggest items of increase in the county budget. A new district judge's office, sheriff's expenses and court costs are showing as budget increases.

The potential addition of a county planning commission will be an added expense. Reductions in state aid funds contribute to the headaches as does the loss of interest income from reduced cash reserves and a reduction in the interest rates.

The commissioners were at a near boiling point Tuesday as the litany of expenses and revenue limits was recited by County Clerk Debra Finn.

"I don't know why anybody would want to become a county official," said Pospishil. He said the mandated programs by the state and federal governments along with limits placed on the county's ability to pay for those mandates were just impossible. "They have no idea how to foot the bill," he said.

"THERE ISN'T any way that we can do it without cutting employees," said Nissen.

The commissioners took the governor to task for statements he made this week attributing the financial crunch in local government to commissioner's inability to hold the line on their budgets.

"That was a stupid statement," said Pospishil. "He doesn't even know how county government operates."

Layoffs put 48 off jobs

A decision by M.G. Waldbaum Co. to get out of the over the road trucking business and contract its freight hauling with another company will put 48 truckers out of work.

Other jobs may also be affected, according to Waldbaum spokesman Ted Helberg but a total has not been announced pending discussions with the company's transportation officials, he said.

The company told affected employees this week that the layoffs were the result of an effort to consolidate the firm's transportation requirements and an effort to reduce the liabilities faced by the firm.

Helberg said his firm is currently negotiating with a contract carrier to provide freight services and that he expects the changes to be fully implemented by mid-September.

Drug dealer's stash helps law

Nearly $30,000 in seized cash and the proceeds from a semi-tractor rig seized from a convicted drug trafficker has been turned over to the Northeast Nebraska Drug Enforcement Program (NEDEP) to fund future drug law enforcement work in this area.

Heralding the success of the cooperative effort between local and state law enforcement agencies in the area, Dakota County Attorney Curt Hohenstein said the drug cash seizure means taxpayers in the region do not have to pay for the cost of the enforcement.

Federal grant funds pay for 75 percent of the cost of the NEDEP operation with the local counties expected to provide the remaining 25 percent. Hohenstein said the $30,000 from the Dakota County drug conviction means local taxpayers get the effective drug enforcement services free next year.

State Patrol Sgt. Gerald Sieck stopped a truck driver for speeding in March after observing him leaving Wakefield. While he was citing the trucker for speeding, he said he smelled marijuana and asked the driver if he could search his empty truck.

A small amount of drug and over $22,000 in cash was discovered in the search. The driver, Richard Shaffer of Pennsylvania, was convicted and sentenced to probation, which he is serving in Pennsylvania.

But NEDEP gets to keep the cash and the liquidated value of the truck Shaffer was driving at the time of his arrest.

Hohenstein said other vehicles are also waiting forfeiture proceedings which will benefit NEDEP operations.

In two years of operations, NEDEP has processed over 218 drug cases and removed more than 600 pounds of drugs from circulation in the area.

Preliminary hearing set for Wakefield man

A preliminary hearing date of Aug. 14 has been set in Dixon County Court in Ponca for a Wakefield man charged with six counts, including first degree sexual assault, false imprisonment, contributing to the delinquency of a child, and three counts of procuring alcoholic liquor for a minor.

The complaint was filed on July 18 against Randy Jensen of Wakefield.

Jensen was brought before the court on July 10 when the preliminary hearing date and bond of $35,000 were set. Jensen is presently out on bond.

Winning a battle

Taxpayers and citizens interested in law and order are being well served in Northeast Nebraska by a relatively new cooperative drug enforcement effort.

The Northeast Nebraska Drug Enforcement Project (NEDEP) is a cooperative effort between State Patrol, Sheriff's offices and local police departments as organized front to fight an organized villain, the drug trafficker.

Formed two years ago, NEDEP is already paying big dividends. This year alone, the local funding match for the cost of the program has been paid by the drug dealers.

Yep, drug dealers are funding the fight to take drugs off the street. To the tune of nearly $30,000 in confiscated cash and equipment, the program is rolling along without the outlay of local tax funds.

Normally, the federal government provides 75 percent of the cost of personnel and equipment for the NEDEP operation with local agencies ponying up 25 percent. But following the confiscation of a truck, cash and small amount of drugs in Dakota County in March, the operation has the local matching funds it needs to operate for over a year.

There may even be an opportunity to expand the operation by adding a third full-time investigator to the two who are already working the area.

The success of the program is a tribute to the law enforcement agencies involved and to the idea of cooperation and shared resources that is proving the drug war can be won.

On a crunch course

Wayne County Commissioners are right on course—a course they predicted three years ago when the legislature established the taxing limit regulations on local governments.

The problem is the course they are on is leading to trouble and there appears no other way to steer.

It's a trip they wish they could avoid.

The county is facing a nearly $400,000 shortfall between budget requests and anticipated income from taxes and state aid next year. County department heads were instructed to present lean budget requests this year, but even those lean budgets are going to have to be cut to bring the county budget in under the state mandated taxing limits.

The state says the county can only increase its taxes by 5 percent.

For taxpayers in the county this sounds great. But the problem is, the state aid which goes into the county budget is going down and the costs for operating the county are going up. Additionally, state and federal mandates require the county to maintain certain services and operations. There's only a few things that can be cut.

Get ready, the cuts will be coming and some residents may not like the decisions which will have to be made.

In 1991 the county dipped into its reserve to the tune of $131,000 to meet the spending and taxing limits. Last year the shortfall was $235,000. This year it is anticipated to be over $400,000.

Nebraska counties whose officials had not dug deeply into their reserves to save taxpayers money, are sitting better now, because their tax limit starting point was greater, but even they eventually will be in the same boat as expenses climb faster than the taxing limits will allow.

What are the commissioners to do? Short of getting out of office and leaving the troubles to someone else, as some have indicated, the only alternative is sizeable cuts in services and county personnel.

The commissioners' hands are tied. The cuts have to be made. Some county residents are not going to like the decisions. Others are going to say it's about time government spending is brought under control.

It behooves everyone to get involved in the decision process.

A chance to help a brother farmer

As the United States begins to provide its package of technical and humanitarian assistance to the former Soviet Union, American farmers are making their presence felt. Among the various programs that have been undertaken is a relatively small, little-known initiative called Farmer-to-Farmer. This program matches American farmers or agricultural experts with a specific agricultural community in Russia, the Ukraine, or one of the other former Soviet republics. The U.S. volunteers will then spend a month or so on the ground, teaching modern agricultural methods to their Russian hosts.

The great steppes of Russia are extremely fertile, and should be the breadbasket of all Central Asia. Yet food shortages and the risk of starvation have become commonplace. After decades of inefficient state-controlled farming, the Russian farmer has lost the knowledge or desire to produce large yields. Most of what is harvested spoils before it can reach the consumer. Basic, commonsense practices that every American farmer takes for granted are not followed by the Russian farmer simply because they have not been taught.

The Farmer-to-Farmer program seeks to provide that education. The American volunteers, who are drawn from across the country, have already begun helping Russian private family farmers to better understand the land they have only recently acquired. They are helping in the development of food storage, processing and distribution enterprises. And they are helping in the creation of farmer's associations and cooperatives that for the first time will actually help the individual farmers. In providing this basic help to Russian farmers, the Farmer-to-Farmer volunteers are becoming important ambassadors of goodwill to the newly democratic nations that once made up the former Soviet Union.

My Turn

I have had the good fortune to meet with some of the returning volunteers, and have found them all to be very enthusiastic about the Farmer-to-Farmer program. Indeed, at least one volunteer has told me that participation in Farmer-to-Farmer was the most fulfilling work he had ever undertaken. If there are any Nebraska farmers or agricultural specialists who think this program might be for them, they should send their inquiries to: Farmer-to-Farmer Program, c/o Volunteers in Overseas Cooperative Assistance, Suite 1075, 50 "F" Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001.

Even Huskers to get belted

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
Nebraska Press Association

Fasten your seat belt.

Well, you don't have to right yet, but you might as well get used to the idea. Nebraska's mandatory safety belt law will take effect Jan. 1.

That was assured this week when the group of Nebraskans circulating petitions to repeal the law came up short. We don't know how short. They won't say, which makes you think they fell well short of the 29,000 needed.

The group had been hoping for a repeat of 1985, when it easily collected the signatures it took to put a seat belt law on the 1986 ballot and get it repealed.

So why didn't history repeat itself?

The sponsors blamed it on a number of issues, but, frankly, the public support for repeal just wasn't there.

In the same period of time it took supporters to collect over 40,000 signatures in 1985, the group couldn't collect 29,000. And even though the group had collected 40,000 signatures in '85, the thing was only repealed by 1,200 votes.

With even less support for the petition drive this time, I would find it hard to believe Nebraskans would have voted to repeal the law.

An awful lot has changed since 1985.

While Nebraska was one of the first states to pass a seat belt law back then, now there are 41 others that have. We were one of the last holdouts. Anybody who has ever driven across the country knows that seat belt laws have become accepted nationwide as a way to encourage belt use.

Secondly, safety sells in 1992. Just look at how the car manufacturers are advertising their anti-lock brakes and air bags. It's just more important to people. And while I know there are people who argue otherwise, seat belts do promote safety. The lowest rate of motor vehicle accident injuries the state has ever seen came in the one year the state's seat belt law was in effect.

Will Nebraskans comply with the new law? Certainly there are a lot who won't.

The measly $25 fine, which can only be given if you've already been stopped for another offense, won't be enough of a deterrent for some.

And of course, then there are those rocket scientists who believe you are much better off in an accident as a human projectile than you are strapped in your seat. All I can say for those people is it's good they've apparently got hard heads.

But I think the large majority of Nebraskans will start to buckle up.

I truly think most Nebraskans believe seat belts are a good thing, but have just never been able to get into the habit of using them.

If the new law does give people an incentive to start using belts, putting it on eventually becomes as natural as putting the key into the ignition.

All in all, I think it's a law we can live with.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

'Thrilling'

Dear Editor:

It was by happenstance that I was in Wayne for the Chicken Show and the Chautauqua. What a lucky lady. My nose was measured for the chicken beak contest -- I caught candy with the best of them at the parade -- I took pictures galore and what happy memories they will make.

To top it all off was taking part in the Chautauqua. It was thrilling and truly unique. My grandfather was an actor in the Chautauqua shows in the early 1900s and it was like shades of yesterday to dance with the Indians in Bressler Park.

The portrayal of Louisa May Alcott by Dr. Anne Bail Howard was outstanding. Thank you Wayne for your Labor of Love.

'Gratitude'

Dear Editor:

The Chamber of Commerce and the Chautauqua Committee would like to express their deepest gratitude to everyone who helped make the Chautauqua a rousing success. We also hope that the energy and momentum that emerged for the Chautauqua will not now die, but will be channeled into other civic projects in the future. Out-of-town visitors universally commented on the great job our town had done and the positive image our community presented.

Many thanks are due to all concerned. Specific organizations and institutions deserving of extra notice for their major contributions include the churches and service clubs, the media, the educational institutions, the library, the Fair Board, and of course the city itself. It was our pleasure to work with all of you, and we hope you had as much fun as we did!

Members of Wayne
Chautauqua Committee

Please don't make me read 'Moby'

The Wayne community has broken several records this week.

Members of the Chautauqua troupe in town for the American Renaissance Chautauqua have been jubilant about the community response, participation and involvement during the Chautauqua.

The largest audience ever for a Great Plains Chautauqua performance attended Saturday's show, forcing the placement of more chairs outside the tent to allow the overflow crowd to view the performance.

Prior to that, the largest crowd ever had shown up on Thursday to raise the tent. The largest tent ever was erected since in most towns the audience limit has been in the 200 range. Here the average has been over 350.

"IT'S JUST BEEN a phenomenal week," said Jane Renner Hood, Executive director of the Nebraska Humanities Council, whose grants help fund the appearance of the Chautauqua.

Even more phenomenal than the attendance and organization, she said, is the fact that less than a week before, the community had hosted 10,000 people at the Chicken Show.

Okay, I'll admit I was skeptical, prior to the arrival of the big tent, about the number of people who would attend and enjoy the shows. I predicted only a couple hundred brainy type people would pay to see the shows.

I EVEN MADE personal plans to be elsewhere. I'm not that old that I don't remember laboring through forced reading of Billy Budd, The Scarlet Letter, Leaves of Grass, Moby Dick and other greats of American Literature in those required courses in high school and college.

If I had had a choice back then, I would have watched television instead of reading those long, boring works by long dead writers.

But, I didn't want to look like a total fool when test time came, so I read them. If I remember right, I still looked like a fool on the tests.

Mann Overboard

By Les Mann

Anyway, while I couldn't avoid the reading of the greats of American Literature back then, I hadn't really intended to relive the laborious allegories and symbolism of the Scarlet Letter and Moby Dick and others of the romantic ilk this time around.

I'D JUST POP in there, snap a few pictures and escape before anyone started asking deep questions, I figured.

Oh, don't get me wrong, I thought the Chautauqua was a good program for the community, but my entertainment tastes run more to the likes of Mork and Mindy rather than Hawthorne and Melville.

Imagine my surprise then, when the Chautauqua performers took to the stage and I found myself riveted to their discussion of the meanings behind their works, the circumstances of their period in history and the jokes between the great authors.

I was almost dismayed to find myself wanting to return each night to the performances. Even worse, I looked on the family bookshelf and there were copies of Billy Budd, The Scarlet Letter and Leaves of Grass, as well as other lesser known works by Melville, Hawthorne, Whitman, Alcott, Douglass and others. I have blown the dust off of them and have so far found it interesting (even entertaining) to reread these works from a whole different perspective.

IT IS AMAZING how much more enjoyable things are, I thought, when Miss Cherigino isn't threatening to expel you from school if you don't read your Melville.

I'm finding a whole new appreciation for the classics since the Chautauqua came to town. The perspective of Hawthorne, Thoreau, Melville, Fuller, Douglass, Alcott and Whitman all relate to how we live our lives today. Issues then are issues now.

The last thing I want people to think is that I'm some sort of intellectual, though the readers of this column (both of them) assure me there is little danger of this.

But, if you missed all the Chautauqua performances, you missed an entertaining, enjoyable and enlightening experience—one that was enjoyable even for us television sitcom rerun fans.

Stress and High Blood Pressure

Although high blood pressure affects all age groups, it is most commonly seen in the elderly, especially black elderly. There are many potentially harmful effects of high blood pressure, including heart attack, loss of vision, stroke, and loss of kidney function. Therefore, it is wise for everyone to have his or her blood pressure checked periodically. Also it is advisable to eliminate or modify factors that increase the blood pressure. One such factor is stress. Dr. David Nash, Clinical Professor of Medicine at State University of New York Health Science Center has studied the effect of stress on blood pressure. According to Dr. Nash, writing in a recent issue of Pharmacy Times, the role of stress and high blood pressure in persons who previously had normal blood pressure is not fully understood. However, research has shown that persons with stressful jobs, such as air traffic controllers, experience more high blood pressure than do other groups. Dr. Nash calls this condition "hyperkinetic hypertension." Eliminating risk factor, such as smoking and obesity in the hyperkinetic hypertensive person may help control blood pressure. Exercise, relaxation, and biofeedback may help also. Prescription medicines such as beta blockers, ACE inhibitors, and calcium blockers may be needed if nondrug approaches are not effective.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK'S SENIOR CITIZEN CORNER

TO WORK OR NOT TO WORK? For many Social Security recipients, there simply is no choice. They must take jobs to supplement their incomes because of economic conditions. Under current law, anyone age 65 to 69 loses one dollar for every three dollars earned over the limit of $10,000. (Those who work beyond age 70 currently have no income limit.)

This, of course, refers to earnings derived from jobs, and it's ironic that those who need to work are penalized by the system, while those fortunate enough to be able to rely on income from their investments can continue to collect checks regardless of how much they make each year.

In an editorial by Horace B. Deets of the American Association of Retired Persons, he states, "Productive older persons who want or need to work should not have to choose between restrictive earnings or losing earned Social Security benefits. Increasing the Social Security earnings limit is long overdue."

The Social Security Administration (SSA) recently estimated that nearly three quarters of a million workers 65 to 69, and some 170,000 dependents had their Social Security benefits either partially or fully withheld because of excess earnings. Many others didn't even bother to file for benefits because of the limitations put on earnings.

New legislation passed in the House would allow beneficiaries 65-69 to earn $12,000 in 1993 without losing any benefits.

Of course, if I could arrange it, I'd say, let's be fair and put a similar earning limit on those who live on investment income. After all, with few exceptions (such as life insurance proceeds) income, per se, is taxable regardless of its derivation. Therefore, the same rule should apply in all instances involving social security income limits.

BLASTING THE MYTH: The hard, economic fact of life is that in the past decade, some people became very rich. The great American middle class, however, which has been the backbone of our economy through most of our history, has been in steep decline. The lower economic classes have slid down even further. All age groups have been affected, most of all, the elderly. But in spite of these unpleasant facts, there's a false impression that most older Americans are well-off, and those who are not, are protected by government programs. The truth, of course, is quite different. What's more, it takes only one unexpected hospital stay or substantial raise in rent to reduce a person already living on the edge to below the poverty level.

The GOLDEN YEARS by Pat Achty

The New York State Bar Association chose Ree Adler of Buffalo as its outstanding young lawyer of 1992. She is 63. She met the association's standard as "a young lawyer" because she has been one for less than 10 years. It wasn't high fees that won the award. She has earned a total of $8 — at $1 per year as a legal aid lawyer. Wife of a surgeon and mother of five children, Mrs. Adler enrolled in law school at age 56 so she could more effectively help individuals and advance community programs.

In Doylestown, Pennsylvania, a free program called Rent-a-Senior matches people 55 or over with employers seeking mature help for jobs as varied as computer operator, painter and driver. In 10 years, the program has placed more than 800 men and women in satisfying jobs that pay more than minimum wage. Most are part-time, but some are new, fulltime careers. A 63-year-old industrial manager, idle for a year, was hired as a manufacturers-representative sales engineer, "a completely new field to me...stimulating, exciting."

SOME OF THE GREATEST and most influential authors during the period of The American Renaissance were highlighted when the Chautauqua tent show came to Wayne on July 17-21. In addition to nightly tent shows, the Chautauqua offered a variety of other programs throughout the five days for area residents of all ages. Captured on film during the event were Louisa-May Alcott, top left photo, during her nightly program; the Central City Lone Tree Singers, top center photo; 92-year-old Jim Wilson of Polk, top right photo, who composed the music for the Lone Tree Singers concert; the Ho-Chunk Dancers and Singers of Winnebago performing at Bressler Park, middle and-bottom right; Charles Everett Pace honing up before taking the stage as Frederick Douglass, center; scenes from the performances, including the only time that all of the scholars were on stage in character together, above and left.

We agree:

Shopping in Wayne just makes cents

Even Walt Whitman thinks it makes sense to shop in Wayne.

Speaking on the stage at the recent Chautauqua tent show here, Whitman, portrayed by Carrol Peterson, a professor at Doane College in Crete, Neb., told his audience to patronize the local businesses, most of which supported the Chautauqua. Said Whitman, it is businesses that keep a town thriving and provide the support to bring and sustain worthwhile programs like Chautauqua.

Whitman, 'er Peterson, said he was impressed by the number of businesses who advertised their specials in the Chautauqua program and thereby displayed their community-minded support.

Many towns go crying for business support the likes of which Wayne has in abundance. Consumers should support the businesses that support their town, the great poet said.

The wise old poet knows a good deal when he sees it. That's why he thinks Shopping in Wayne, just makes cents.

Seymour chosen Q125 parade marshal

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

The Seymour family name has been familiar to residents of Wayne and Wayne County since 1929, when Edward Seymour purchased the Wayne Creamery and moved his family to "The Good Life" state.

"My Nebraska upbringing definitely helped shape my life," says Edward's son, Dr. Lyle Seymour, who has continued to maintain a proud relationship with Wayne, Wayne County and Nebraska.

Dr. Seymour, who was seven years old when his father purchased the Wayne Creamery, received his education in the Wayne school system and later went on to serve as president of Wayne State College from 1973 until 1982.

It's because of the contributions made by the Seymour family that Dr. Seymour has been chosen to serve as grand marshal of the Q125 parade, scheduled to take place in conjunction with the Wayne County Fair on Saturday, Aug. 8.

The parade is being held in recognition of Nebraska's 125th birthday.

"THE Wayne County Agricultural Society wanted to select someone as grand marshal who has contributed to the well-being of Wayne County," said Leland Herman, fair secretary, "and Dr. Seymour seemed the perfect choice."

Herman added that the Q125 parade, with a theme of "Past, Present and Future," will begin at 10 a.m. at the corner of First and Main Sts. and proceed up to 11th and Main Sts.

The parade is being sponsored by the Wayne Eagles Club and will include prizes for first, second and third place.

Information about parade entries is available from Harold Olson of Wayne.

"I'M VERY honored and surprised at being chosen grand marshal," said Dr. Seymour. "I think there are so many worthy people in the community and I consider it a single honor."

"I think of grand marshals of the past who have made significant contributions to the community, and to be recognized with them is a great honor."

"I'll sit and wave as best I can," he adds with a smile.

DR. SEYMOUR says he remembers playing in the band at the Wayne County Fair for many, many years during high school and grade school.

A graduate of Wayne High School, Dr. Seymour attended

LONGTIME WAYNE RESIDENT Dr. Lyle Seymour will serve as grand marshal of the Q125 parade, slated to take place in Wayne on Aug. 8 in celebration of Nebraska's 125th birthday.

Wayne college for two years. In 1947 he earned his bachelor of science degree in chemical technology from Iowa State University, and his master of education degree in vocational education in 1954. He received his doctorate degree in biochemistry from the University of South Dakota in 1961.

During World War II, he served as a bomber pilot for the U.S. Air Force. He taught science at Wayne City School before joining the Wayne State College faculty as a chemistry instructor in 1953.

He became interim president of the college in 1973, following the resignation of Dr. William Brandenburg, and was appointed president on a permanent basis in April of 1974.

He continued to serve as college president until 1982, and then worked for the Wayne State Foundation until his retirement in 1983.

ALTHOUGH retired, Dr. Seymour and his wife, Ginny, continue to make their home in Wayne.

They are the parents of three grown children and the grandparents of five.

The couple's daughters are Linda Hillman, who runs a senior center in Wayne, Penn., and Pam Johnson, a teacher in Des Moines, Iowa. A son, Ron, is an attorney in Seattle, Wash.

"We love to travel and visit our children and friends," smiles Dr. Seymour, "but we're always happy to come back to Nebraska and to our headquarters in Wayne."

"I think the fact that Ginny and I have chosen to make Wayne our home, even after we've retired, speaks for itself."

"Ginny grew up in Minneapolis, but I'm still amazed at what an ardent Nebraskan she has become," adds Dr. Seymour with a grin. "She sure considers Wayne her home."

Dr. Seymour said both he and Ginny especially love to show off Nebraska to visiting relatives and friends.

"We love to show our guests the fantastic places in Nebraska," adds Dr. Seymour, listing several historical spots in the state.

"That's what Ginny and I do now."

DR. SEYMOUR is noticeably proud of his association with the Wayne community, including the years he wrapped butter and made ice cream bars in his father's business.

"Basically, my job was to unload the cream cans and eggs when farmers came to town on Saturday night, and to load the cans back up when they went home."

"There were always a lot of odd jobs to do around the creamery, and I got to know a lot of farm families."

"My dad purchased the Wayne Creamery in 1929 when it was located where the Chamber of Commerce office is now. He built a new creamery in 1931, located across the alley west of the Chamber, and at one time had up to 16 employees."

Dr. Seymour adds with a certain amount of pride that it was his father who brought pasteurized milk to Wayne for the first time.

"My dad was a real inspiration. He was uneducated in the sense that he only went through sixth grade — but he was very educated."

"Not only did he build the creamery, but he built several apartment houses, began renovating old homes, and built three from the ground up."

DR. SEYMOUR is also proud of his relationship with Wayne State College. "I had a real advantage," smiles Dr. Seymour. "I was the college's sixth president and I had various ties with the first five."

Dr. Seymour went to high school with the late James M. Pile III, grandson of college founder J. M. Pile.

He remembers attending the retirement of Dr. U.S. Conn, the first college president, and was enrolled in Wayne State College under the second president, Dr. James T. Anderson.

"I did some substitute teaching under the third president, Victor Morey, and I was hired as faculty member at Wayne State in 1953 by the fourth college president, Dr. John Rice."

Dr. Seymour served as vice president during the years of Dr. William Brandenburg, the fifth college president, and succeeded him as Wayne State College president in 1974.

During his years at Wayne State,

Dr. Seymour served as an instructor, division chairman, dean of instruction, vice president for academic affairs, interim president and president.

DR. SEYMOUR has received several honors for his contributions to Wayne and Wayne State College, including Chamber Citizen of the Year and President Emeritus of Wayne State College.

In addition, he is an Admiral in the Great Navy of the State of Nebraska and continues to remain active in his church and the community.

"I truly believe Nebraska is 'The Good Life,'" says Dr. Seymour, "and Ginny and I like to help contribute to that."

Apartment life different; nice

We are currently waiting to move into our house northeast of Lincoln, still in an apartment close to Wesleyan University.

The Big Farmer mentioned yesterday that we could get used to this life very easily, and I agreed. I've never lived in one before, so it's been a new experience. Mike lived in several while in college, but they tended to be basements of large homes.

This is a modern brick building I've driven by many times and never dreamed I would ever live in. I don't pay for water or heat; but suppose the air conditioning will increase the electricity bill this month.

I don't have to worry about plumbing or sewer. When the water wasn't draining one rainy Saturday night, I called the management, and they called Roto-Rooter. One day the handyman fixed the refrigerator.

The laundry is just down the hall, and it only costs 50¢ a load to wash and dry.

The snow gets pushed away, the lawn mowed, hedge trimmed, garbage hauled, and halls cleaned on a weekly basis.

Most of all, I appreciate the convenience of a grocery store four blocks away for the days I run out of milk; or a Runza Hut ten blocks down the street when I don't feel like cooking; or a pizza place that will even deliver.

I'm seven blocks from church or from my Mom's; five minutes from work (if I hit the lights right); and that much time from a shopping center. After the years in the boonies, this seems too good to be true.

Of course, I have to lock things, and have to remember where my one in the ash tray of my car. I've lost the one in the car.

I also made a spare set of car keys, and last week, true to form, succeeded in locking both sets in the car! I have a magnet container for a spare set under the frame, but have not got them made yet.

It probably wouldn't be necessary to lock the car so much, but they gave me this neat little cellular phone and I am afraid someone will steal it.

It's the ultimate status symbol, but what a time saver! I can call patients, doctors, and the office all while on the road. I've even learned to fax this drive to the paper every Tuesday morning. Technology, it is amazing! Next year it is hand held computers. I may learn to program the VCR yet.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA'S CATARACT SPECIALIST

"I went from cloudy to sunny days."

Estella Schmer had cataracts. She had "No-Stitch" Cataract Surgery.

"My vision continued to get impaired. I went from cloudy to sunny days as a result of cataract surgery. When I had cataracts I was afraid of steps. I had to be careful not to fall. After cataract surgery I was ecstatic. I worked out in my flower garden the afternoon of the day I had cataract surgery. The surgery was so easy and I had been afraid it would be worrisome. There was just nothing to it. I do anything I want to do now. It's wonderful. I had "No-Stitch" Cataract Surgery and I could see immediately the next day when they took the patch off. At Dr. Feidler's they were so good to me I got over any fear I had. Just as soon as your doctor says do it, have it done, don't wait."
