For county workers—

Wage freeze, less benefits are in budget

By Les Mann
Herald Publisher

Wayne county employees face a wage freeze for the coming fiscal year and will get less health insurance benefits under budgeting decisions made Thursday by the commissioners.

Other major provisions of a budget package which is expected to be finalized Tuesday when the commissioners reconvene, includes elimination of capital expenditures including a sheriff's cruiser and a road grader which the county has already opened bids on.

"THERE'S JUST no way we can afford it," said commissioner Merlin Beiermann, in whose district the used road grader was scheduled to be used. The lowest bid for the equipment came in at more than $60,000.

County relief fund for indigent services including burials, was cut by $10,000 and nearly $16,000 was cut from the assessor's office for new cadastral maps. The fund for new maps was created last year with the intention of building it annually until the $60,000 plus expense for producing the new maps was generated.

Not only will the county not appropriate funds this year for the maps, the commissioners decided to use last year's map funds for more immediate needs.

ELIMINATING the anticipated 4 percent raises will save the county $9,866 and the insurance change saves another $7,000 in premium payments. County employees will see their individual health insurance deductible doubled from $100 to $200 next year.

The mood among county employees and officials is not entirely upbeat, admitted Clerk Debra Finn Friday, but she said most were understanding of the budget problem and were willing to work with the board.

During earlier budget discussions, the commissioners had asked elected officials if they and their employees would prefer no raises or reduced insurance coverage. Most had indicated insurance was the priority. The end result is they will get neither.

THE BUDGET which will be introduced to the public at a hearing later this month, is several percentage points less than what was actually spent last year.

County road budgets were cut over $18,000 in each of the three districts and funds were shifted out of snow removal and equipment capital reserve funds into operating.

The county had accumulated over $390,000 in the snow removal, equipment and supplemental funds for federal aid bridge projects in the last three years.

THE LION'S share of that fund was shifted into operating budget for the roads department for the 1993 fiscal year.

'Ewe aren't playing Fair'

Tim Puntney, 8, of Carroll found out the ground is not as soft as the back of the sheep he just parted company with in the "Mutton Busting" competition during the Wayne County Fair Thursday night. Youngsters tried their hand at the difficult task of riding woolly steeds. Tim had scored well on his ride before he went heels over head. He, and the other youngsters who braved a ride on the uncooperative sheep, each won a dollar for their trouble.

Fair '92 is record-setter

By Les Mann
Herald Publisher

The 1992 Wayne County Fair has chance to be a record setter. If it doesn't go down in history as the biggest of the annual celebrations of rural ag-based heritage, it should go down as the wettest.

"The rain slowed us up some," said Mick Topp, Agricultural Society chairman, "but, it didn't hamper the crowds."

With rain the night before the fair started and over an inch dumped on the Agricultural Park Friday morning, there was talk among the crowds in line for Friday's free barbecue to turn ducks loose in the newly created "lakes" on the fairgrounds.

Upwards of 4,000 enjoyed the community barbecue Friday.

"We bought a ton of meat," said Topp. Very little of it was left when everyone had their fill, he said.

Gate receipts during the first two nights of the fair were up over previous years, said secretary Leland Herman. He added participation at the popular midway rides also appeared to be up.

Going into Saturday and Sunday's tractor pull and demolition derby events, which traditionally draw different crowds than the stage and music shows the first two nights, Topp said he expects the 70th annual fair to be a true record setter.

Results from the 4-H competition at the fair will be found in an enlarged edition of the Wayne Herald on Tuesday.

Plan may divide county more

By Les Mann
Herald Publisher

Another big chunk of Wayne County rural area is going to be split off into a different legislative district if a plan advanced by the Nebraska Unicameral is passed into law.

Meeting in special session last week, the legislature advanced LB 7 which redraws boundaries of Northeast Nebraska districts because an earlier plan which split Madison county was declared unconstitutional.

The new proposal, which needs 33 votes to pass, drew quick opposition from outgoing State Sen. Elroy Hefner of Coleridge, whose 19th district would be swallowed up by Madison County and other districts under the plan. The proposal also drew criticism from the two primary candidates in the 19th district who were set to face each other in the November general election.

UNDER THE plan, candidates in both the 19th and 17th district races would each have to obtain 600 petition signatures to be placed on the ballot in their newly redrawn districts.

Another vocal opponent to LB 7 is Curt Hohenstein, challenger to incumbent Gerald Conway of Wayne, for the 17th district seat.

In a prepared statement Friday Hohenstein accused Conway of trying to further divide his district to eliminate rural precincts where the incumbent has fared poorly.

"Senator Conway did poorly in the rural areas of Wayne County and wants to get those people out of his district," said Hohenstein. "This is the most abusive use of the political process regarding redistricting that

Schools improved by grads

More than one third of the students who graduated Friday at Wayne State College received master's degrees in education.

Thirty-two teachers, counselors and administrators were awarded master's degrees during morning ceremonies in the Willow Bowl. Sixty-one students received bachelor's degrees and four persons received education specialist degrees.

"These educators will strengthen our northeast Nebraska schools considerably," said Dr. Larry Harris, division head of education at Wayne State. "All of them are trying to improve their school systems and themselves."

Two of last year's four full-time teachers at St. Ludger Elementary School in Creighton received masters degrees during the ceremonies. They were Deborah Wragge, a kindergarten teacher who has just accepted the principal position at East Catholic Elementary School in St. Helena and Sherry Loos, an elementary teacher.

Kerrey favors rural development zone law

Calling the concept "fair, exciting and cost effective," U.S. Senator Bob Kerrey today endorsed legislation designed to create rural enterprise zones that would provide a variety of tax and regulatory incentives in order to bring industry and jobs to rural America.

"Our government has and should provide incentives for business to locate in urban areas through urban enterprise zones. I just do not feel that we should exempt rural areas from these incentive packages. The Rural Enterprise Zone Legislation includes zones in both urban and rural areas and as such, I support the legislation and intend to fight for these provisions when they come before the full Senate," Kerrey said.

The legislation calls for the administration to designate up to 25 zones, eight in rural areas, 15 in urban areas and two on Indian reservations. Businesses would be offered a variety of federal, state and local tax incentives to locate a business within the zone, or hire employees living within the zone. All zones would receive the incentives for then years.

"Increasingly, states like Nebraska find it more difficult to compete with larger states for industry and jobs. This bill will help rural areas compete on a more equal footing. I am convinced that once industry is attracted to rural America they will see the many other advantages that we offer and will be inclined to stay and expand their operations," Kerrey said.

The Rural Enterprise Zone Bill has passed the Senate Finance Committee and will likely be before the full Senate sometime next week.

Term Limits group seeks politicians votes

Ballots were sent Aug. 6 by the executive committee of Nebraskans for Term Limits to all state legislators, candidates for the Legislature and to all U.S. Congressional district candidates and incumbents.

"We want to record their votes for or against our term limit proposition which will be on the general election ballot this fall," said Fred R. (Bob) Sikyta, chairman. Those who do not return their ballots in the postage-free envelopes supplied by an Aug. 20 deadline will be marked "refused to answer," Sikyta said. All results then will be published, he added.

Nebraskans for Term Limits turned in 76,997 petition signatures on July 3, believed to be the largest number of signatures ever collected in this state by petition. A total of 58,665 valid signatures was needed to place the issue on the ballot. Ballot certification by the Secretary of State's office is expected later this month.

The term limits proposition, an amendment to Nebraska's Constitution, calls for a maximum of two consecutive terms for U.S. Senators, four consecutive two-year terms for Members of Congress and two consecutive four-year terms for members of the state legislature and all other state constitutional officeholders.

Exon seeks change on electoral process

Sen. Jim Exon (D-NE), in testimony before a Senate Subcommittee this week, said the process used by Americans to elect their President, the Electoral College, is "a ticking time bomb in our Constitution" which could someday subvert the will of the nation in selecting its President.

Exon was asked to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on the Constitution about the bill he introduced earlier this year to abolish the Electoral College and require the direct election of the President. The Electoral College is a group of citizens chosen by the voters from each state to elect the President and the Vice President. Each state has as many electoral votes as it has senators and representatives in Congress.

"In the 1992 election cycle, the end of the Perot campaign assures that the ultimate election of the President and Vice President will not shift to the House and the Senate," Exon said. "It does not, however, mean that the nation has necessarily averted the ever-present Electoral College crisis. A close election could produce a victory (for the candidate) in the Electoral College even with a loss in the popular vote, especially if Ross Perot keeps his name on some state ballots."

Exon said although he was proud of his home state, Nebraska, and Maine for reforming their procedures and awarding electors by district, a direct election would bring the election closer to the people than using the Electoral College system. Under the Electoral College, a presidential ticket needs only to receive 270

Chiropractor participates in national study project

Darrell Thorp D.C., a chiropractic practitioner in Wayne recently participated in a milestone research project for the chiropractic profession.

Dr. Thorp was among the approximate 10 percent of the nation's licensed chiropractors who represented their profession by providing information for a Survey of Chiropractic Practice.

Working in conjunction with state licensing board members, educators and field practitioners, the survey was developed and conducted by the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners (NBCE). The NBCE is the international testing agency for chiropractic health care.

The NBCE project was undertaken to define the tasks, duties and professional responsibilities common to license U.S. chiropractors. The resulting Report of Chiropractic Practice in the United States will have numerous applications in chiropractic testing and other areas.

Similar surveys developed by the NBCE have to date also been provided upon request to the chiropractic regulatory boards in Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

July was a record weather-breaker

July proved to be a truly unusual month as far as weather is concerned. According to weather observer Pat Gross, the high temperature for the month was 90 degrees, reported on July 8.

The monthly low temperature was 48 degrees which happened on four different occasions including July 3, 5, 6 and 31. The year's highest temperature so far is 91 degrees on May 1, with the low being nine below zero on Jan. 15.

July averaged .77 degrees for a daily high and 56 for a daily low. It rained 6.82 inches during July which gives Wayne 19.43 inches of precipitation during the calendar year to date.

The largest amount of precipitation in July came on the 12th with 2.83 inches of rain. Wayne is 1.61 inches of moisture over the average.

"July was a cool and wet month," Gross said. "Not often do we get that kind of combination. Many records were set for total moisture accumulation and low temperatures."

to get the job," Ms. Wragge said. "Now, I want to help teachers become better teachers."

Harris said educators with master's degrees earn higher salaries and they usually have better opportunities for career advancements.

Wayne State associate professor of art, Dr. Pearl Hansen, gave the commencement address. The Randolph native told approximately 500 persons that she is pleased that she pursued her career in northeast Nebraska.

"Northeast Nebraska was the last place I wanted to spend the rest of my life when I graduated from college," she said. "But (former Nebraska Governor) Val Peterson told me that I would be back someday, and he was right."

After spending time after college graduation in Australia and Arizona, Hansen returned to the Wayne State faculty in 1976. She was a finalist last spring for the Nebraska State College Board of Trustees "Teaching Excellence Award" and she has gained national attention for her involvement in chemical safety awareness.

Districting

this state has ever seen."

HOHENSTEIN out-pollled Conway in the primary and the two will tentatively face each other in the general election for the District 17 seat. Hohenstein said the new proposal would eliminate all the precincts west of the city of Wayne and keep only two other Wayne County precincts besides the city as part of his district.

Conway said he was confident LB 7 will get the needed 33 votes to be enacted as an emergency measure which would change the boundaries before the November general election. It was advanced on first round by a 26-9 vote.

He said the state needs to move ahead to redraw the districts as ordered by the Supreme Court or risk further expensive and disruptive court action.

CONWAY HAS SAID the loss of population in the region means Northeast Nebraska will only have four senators were it once had five. He said that is not a political decision, it is a fact of the population shift.

Sen. Hefner said LB 7 will prompt lawsuits from the two candidates for the general election in the 19th district. He accused the legislature of meddling with the "hallowed" election process by not allowing duly nominated candidates to face the voters.

Debate on the redistricting plans was scheduled to resume on Monday.

to do next year," lamented Jerry Pospishil, commission chairman. He said the county has, during the last three budget years, depleted nearly every dime of reserve and set-aside funding it had accumulated for future equipment and emergency needs.

The county is limited to collecting only 5 percent more in taxes this year than it did the previous year.

Looking sheepish

Jodi Miller's lamb looks a little sheepish about getting a bath in public as 4-H youngsters prepare their animals for competition at the Wayne County Fair last week. A large number of animals were entered in the fair this year.

Tick population raises concern for lyme disease

Ticks may be more of a problem than usual for Nebraskans this year, because of large numbers and the potential for carrying Lyme disease, Nebraska officials point out.

Leon Rottmann, human development specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the wet, mild weather this spring and summer may have contributed to an extremely thick, tick population in Nebraska.

That tick population includes the lone star tick, which is thought to carry Lyme disease. These ticks are found in southeastern Nebraska, according to Wayne Kramer, medical entomologist for the Nebraska Department of Health.

Since Lyme disease was first identified in Nebraska, 28 cases that meet the case definition of the U. S. Centers for Disease Control have been reported to the State Department of Health, Kramer said.

According to the University of California at Berkeley Wellness Letter, Lyme disease symptoms can vary considerably and may be vague. In fact, not all persons bitten by an infected tick develop the disease. Symptoms may include a red bump on the skin at the site of the bite, surrounded by a rash which grows and fades. The individual also may experience symptoms similar to flu such as fatigue, chills, headache and pain in muscles and joints, especially knees.

National statistics show that 60 to 80 percent of infected people develop rashes, Kramer said. Individuals with symptoms should see a physician.

Lyme disease is treatable and usually curable, particularly in its early stage, according to the Wellness Letter. Kramer said some physicians may prescribe antibiotics for people with rashes, but there is no overall consensus on proper treatment at the present time.

Because symptoms similar to flu can be associated with many other illnesses, people with Lyme disease symptoms may be mistakenly treated, particularly in areas where physicians are unfamiliar with the disease, according to Kramer. Education campaigns are underway to inform physicians and the public about the disease, but there is still much progress to be made.

Researchers are working to isolate the spirochete bacteria from ticks, Kramer said, but until this is done, the transmission cycle of the disease in Nebraska is unknown.

A large portion of the public is still unaware of what kind of ticks may transmit the disease and may fail to recognize them, he said. The suspected vector ticks are smaller than normal dog ticks, and difficult to spot. In some stages they are about the size of a pinhead. When engorged on the body, they may resemble a small blood blister.

While Lyme disease is a serious problem, people do not need to avoid the outdoors or certain geographic areas, Kramer said. People need to be aware and take precautions. The steps below to block ticks were included in the California Wellness Letter.

-Cover as much of the body as possible. Wear long pants tucked into shoes or socks, a long-sleeved shirt and closed shoes. Light-colored clothing makes it easier to spot ticks.

-Check occasionally for ticks when outside, especially in underbrush, wooded areas or tall grass close to seeding. Conduct a thorough check of the entire body, gear and clothes upon arriving home.

-Inspect children daily during summer months.

-Check pets when they have been outdoors. Pets can carry ticks inside or develop the disease themselves.

-Use an insect repellent, preferably with DEET or permethrin.

-Remove a tick with thin-tipped tweezers. Always carry tweezers on outdoor trips because it is almost impossible to remove a small tick using fingers. When removing the tick, exert a slow, steady pull. Do not twist the tick. This may break off the mouthparts and lead to a secondary infection. Removing an infected tick within 24 hours greatly reduces the chances of developing the disease.

-Put the tick in a jar containing alcohol so the insect can be taken to a doctor or health department for identification.

Farmers should respond to notices

Larry E. Sitzman, Director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, announced that Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) borrowers must respond to the FmHA new loan servicing guidelines to obtain assistance in resolving their financial disputes. Sitzman said, "The FmHA published an interim rule on April 30, 1992, to implement required modifications to debt restructuring programs contained in the 1990 Farm Bill. Borrowers have 60 days to respond to the new notice with an application for debt restructuring. Otherwise, 'borrowers' may lose their ability to assess FmHA debt-restructuring programs. For many farmers, this deadline was Aug. 3." In Nebraska, 834 delinquent borrowers received notices from FmHA to obtain assistance in resolving their financial disputes. They must submit the information within 60 days of receiving their debt-restructuring applications in order to prevent loss of servicing options.

FmHA offers several "primary loan servicing" options, including rescheduling, reamortization, deferral, interest rate reductions, and write-downs.

Mark Galvin, Nebraska Department of Agriculture Farm Medication Administrator, said, "We are concerned that farmers are not fully aware of the importance of responding to the FmHA notices. Farmers need to know this is a firm deadline. A failure to respond will take away these debt-restructuring opportunities. This is an excellent time to make debt manageable, and farmers need to let the FmHA know within 60 days if they want to pursue these options."

"We want farmers to know that if they have any questions about how to fill out the forms, they can call the Farm Mediation Program at 800-446-4071, said Sitzman.

Farm families know the importance of protection

Nearly 100 percent of farm residents believe that "wearing protective clothing is important to your health," yet only 47 percent report that they always wear protective clothing when applying chemicals, according to a recent survey of farm residents conducted by the Nebraska Department of Health. The survey results were announced July 21 at a news conference on a farm north of Hastings by Dr. Mark Horton, Director of the Nebraska Department of Health.

The telephone survey of Nebraska farm families was undertaken by the Department in March, Horton said. It was the first phase of "Harvest for a Lifetime!," a research project funded through a grant from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH). The three-year project is designed to identify and help reduce cancer risks in the Nebraska farm population, Horton said.

The survey assessed cancer knowledge, attitudes about the disease, and risk behaviors. Surveyors queried 837 farmers or their spouses in 18 counties in Nebraska. Farmers were defined as those individuals who were currently farming an average of 40 or more hours per week. Surveys were also completed with 411 city residents living in Hastings, Grand Island or Kearney. All responded were between the ages of 18-64.

Some of the most notable survey findings:

•Slightly more than half of all respondents said they believed they were very likely, or somewhat likely, to get skin cancer, yet only 24 percent reported that they had ever had their skin checked for cancer by a doctor.

•Although over 98 percent of respondents believe that the early detection of skin cancer increases the chances of cure, less than 1/3 knew skin cancer's two common warning signs: "changes in a wart or mole" and "a sore that does not heal."

•60 percent of city dwellers who smoke said their doctors had told them to quit, while only 40 percent of farm residents who smoke reported their doctors had advised them to kick the habit. Forty-six percent of urban smokeless tobacco users said they had been advised to quit by their doctors, but only 10 percent of rural users said their doctors had told them to quit. Still, 58 percent of chewers and dippers in rural areas reported they had tried to quit during the last three years.

Horton also announced the initiation of the second phase of the "Harvest for a Lifetime!" project, an educational and public awareness program to be pilot-tested over the next 18 months in 10 counties in south-central Nebraska. The program will attempt to reduce three risk behaviors in the Nebraska farm population: unprotected exposure to the sun, unprotected exposure to pesticides and tobacco use, Horton said. The 10 counties to be targeted in the "Harvest for a Lifetime!" educational effort are Adams, Hall, Hamilton, Sherman, Nuckolls, Clay, Webster, Franklin, Kearney and Buffalo.

When completed, Harvest for a Lifetime! will be evaluated to determine its potential to serve as a model for the development and implementation of a full-scale cancer control project for farmers and farm family members across the state, Horton said.

Livestock judging featured at clinic

The annual 4-H Area Livestock Clinic and Contest was held July 24, at Pender Livestock, Inc. in Pender. Forty-five 4-H'ers, as well as five adults, participated in this 4-H event.

Participants learned current standards and judging tips for beef, sheep and swine from Northeast Community College Animal Science Instructor, Jerome Settles, who also served as official judge. Classes of market hogs, breeding gilts, breeding ewes, market lambs, market heifers and feeder steers were judged. Oral reasons were given on the breeding gilts and market heifers classes.

Featured luncheon speaker was Jill Jensen, Consumer Relations Coordinator with the Nebraska Beef Council. Jensen discussed the "Meat Quality Assurance Program", urging consumers to help dispel the false advertising and misinformation that some groups have caused. The luncheon was sponsored by the Northeast Nebraska Pork Producers.

Competitors and their ribbon placings in the judging contest were:

Cedar County - Blue: Quincy Joslin; Red: Josh Graham, Jeff Gra-

Kearney hosting women in ag conference

Agricultural women from across the Midwest are scheduled to gather at the Kearney Holiday Inn Sept. 17 and 18 to learn more about farm and ranch management at the eighth annual Women in Agriculture conference.

Deb Rood, program coordinator for the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, expects between 300 to 400 women from Nebraska, Wyoming, Kansas and other states to attend the conference.

Farm and ranch partners who want to learn practical management skills, enhance the well-being of their families and improve their marketing expertise attend, Rood said.

Participants acquire skills and information through 18 workshops that occur during the two-day event. Some of the topics are: basic or advanced income tax management, estate planning, farm and ranch efficiency, obtaining a loan, nurturing the family system and buying a computer. Several new programs have been added this year, including one on rural women's health issues.

Participants also will hear from three women speakers -- a farm and ranch partner, a relationship therapist and a Henderson farm wife and writer, Rood said.

The conference begins at 10 a.m. Sept. 17. The registration fee is $50 per person. This includes workshop materials, registration, breaks, lunch and dinner on Sept. 17 and lunch on Sept. 18. The cost to register without meals is $25.

Interested applicants should call 1-800-535-3456, or contact local extension offices in Nebraska.

Registration deadline is Sept. 11.

The conference is sponsored by Cooperative Extension, the Department of Agricultural Economics and the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL.

Mushrooms hard to remove Mushrooms that sprouted after recent rains have prompted two questions by homeowners: How can they be removed? Are they edible?

According to David Wysong, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln plant pathologist, mushrooms sprouting in lawns and gardens can be difficult to remove and as a rule, should not be eaten.

Mushrooms are the fleshy reproductive bodies of fungi that feed on wood and other organic material, aiding in the breakdown and decay of these materials and releasing nutrients back into the soil, Wysong said.

Mushrooms often appear after rainy weather and often survive on the remaining roots and stumps of trees or shrubs that have been removed, he said.

Because the body of the fungus is underground and because removing mushrooms' food sources requires too much work for the average homeowner, there is no easy way to chemically or physically remove mushrooms permanently, he said.

Recent wet weather cause

Chiggers are on the way

Nebraska's recent wet weather means chiggers and the red, itching welts they cause on human skin are not far behind, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln entomologist said.

David Keith said chiggers, which are the immature nymph stage of a common red mite, usually are found in wooded or brush areas or in tall grasses and weeds that are wet. They can also be found in lawns of newer homes, he said.

Although the adult version of the tick is harmless, chiggers move upward on human skin until they find a place to feed, usually collecting around the tops of socks, along the beltline or under armpits, Keith said.

After about a day of feeding, red welts appear and intense itching begins, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said. Scratching will kill the mite, but provides little relief from the itching which can last from several days to two weeks, he said. Scratching chigger bites can result in secondary infection.

Keith suggests these tips to avoid chiggers and lessen their irritating bites:

• Avoid woodlots, pastures, roadside ditches, fence rows or moist areas of tall weeds and grass.

• Wear a repellent containing DEET when entering chigger-infested areas. Dusting sulfur also can be used on socks and pant legs before entering an infested area.

• Wear light-colored trousers with pant legs tucked into socks and a long-sleeved shirt.

• Take a bath and scrub with warm, soapy water after returning from areas where chiggers are suspected.

• Treat chigger bites with antiseptic, rubbing alcohol or an anti-itch remedy available at pharmacies. Do not scratch chigger bites.

• Spray lawns if chiggers are present in significant numbers. Diazinon, Chlorpyrifos (Dursban), or malathion can be used.

A homeowner can determine if his or her lawn has a chigger problem by placing black paper cards on edge into the soil at various places in the lawn, Keith said. Tiny, yellow specks against the black background mean chiggers are present, he said.

Men need tips on safer cooking

More men are cooking today and a University of Nebraska-Lincoln survey shows they need more information about safe food handling to avoid food-borne illness.

Many men lack information about crucial areas of food preparation, said Julie A. Albrecht, an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources food specialist, who last year quizzed 426 Nebraska households about food handling knowledge and practices.

For example, only a third of the men surveyed said they knew raw ground beef should be kept refrigerated only one or two days before use. More than half the women knew this.

"Men tended to keep cooked meat and poultry longer than women, too," said the specialist. Three to four days is the longest those items should be kept refrigerated.

Men also were more likely to cool large pots of soups or stews on the counter before refrigerating. Only about 25 percent knew the food should be transferred to smaller containers and refrigerated immediately, versus 40 percent of women.

However, more men than women said they use a thermometer when cooking meats and poultry, approximately half the men but only 30 percent of women. Using a thermometer can ensure that the temperature required to kill harmful microorganisms is reached.

"Apparently, more women tend to go by how the meat looks or by intuition, since they cook a lot," said Albrecht, "but a thermometer is safer."

"More men are cooking with today's increasing number of dual career families and single household families," she said, "and they need to know safe food preparation procedures."

In addition, most men do not have a ready source of food safety knowledge such as women have in consumer magazines. Many may have learned what they know from observing other cooks in their families, she said.

Safe food handling is important because harmful microorganisms can grow and multiply under the right conditions, causing illness in humans who eat the food, she said.

The survey was carried out with funds from the Innovative Grant Program of the UNL College of Home Economics.

Hearing Set For Fiscal 1993 Budget

The public budget hearing for the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District's fiscal year 1993 budget has been set for August 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the NRD Office in Norfolk. The proposed budget for fiscal year 1993 is $1,867,350.

Major Lower Elkhorn NRD programs included in the proposed 1993 fiscal budget are land treatment programs. Clean Lakes grant improvements for Willow Creek Reservoir and Maskenthine Lake, and a potential study on Butterfly Creek project in Stanton County.

Water resources programs continue to be a high priority for the district. The district's water resources activities include such programs as the well abandonment program, wellhead protection, soil sampling and livestock waste control systems cost-share assistance.

The previous year's fiscal budget for the Lower Elkhorn NRD was $2,253,150, resulting in a property tax levy of 2.85 cents per $100 valuation.

In other action, the board approved to give cost-share assistance to the city of Howells in constructing a flood control structure. The structure, designed by the Colfax County Soil Conservation Service, will consist of terraces being installed on the 200 acre drainage directly west of Howells.

The estimated cost of construction is $20,000. The Lower Elkhorn NRD will pay 75 percent of the construction costs and the city of Howells will pay the remaining 25 percent.

In other business, the board approved the recommendation to obtain bids on a safety inspection of Willow Creek Dam and outlet works. The dam inspection is a routine, five-year safety check.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD board meeting will follow the public budget hearing on August 27 at 8 p.m. at the Norfolk office.
