new community child care facility in Wayne.

Mary Kranz, president of the Wayne Child Care Board, said grant funds were awarded previously with the stipulation that they be spent by February of 1993.

PRINTED WITH SOY INK

Kranz said progress of the facility was delayed last July when the board rejected a lone bid for construction that came in over budget.

We couldn't in good conscience proceed at that time because part of this is being funded with taxpayers' money and the rest we need to come up with in bank loans and pay the

This will not be federally funded when we get up and running, so we have to be able to cash flow it like any other business," explained Kranz, adding that the board is looking at a building plan that will cost approximately $225,000 including the land.

The center will be located across the road from the new ESU building on East 14th Street.

KRANZ SAID the board has hired Krhounek Povondra Architects of Omaha to redesign the child care facility so it comes in closer to the

She said that although square footage on the main floor will stay close to the original plans, the facility will probably be redesigned without a full basement as originally intended.

She added that plans are for the construction bidding process to begin again in January, with ground breaking in March or April of

"Because of this we need to extend the Community Development Block Grant," explained Kranz, adding that the city council is requesting the extension in the duration of six months, which would require the money to-be spent by August of 1993.

The grant, which totals $165,000, will be used for a portion of the land purchase, along and administrative costs

Kranz added that the Child Care Board will still need to take out a loan anywhere from $85,000 to $100,000 to complete construction.

KRANZ pointed out that the child care facility will be furnished by applying for other grants, along with fund raisers and donated items.

"If anyone has a question about donating items, please contact myself or any other board member, emphasized Kranz, adding that donated items need not only be toys, but such items as magazines for children to look at or cut out pictures, and low-heeled shoes and clothes for the youngsters to play

'We can probably make just about any donation fit into the pro-

The board is currently selling raffle tickets as a fund raiser, with the drawing scheduled this Saturday during the Fantasy Forest display in Wayne city auditorium. Tickets are $1 for a chance at two prizes — a $100 gift certificate to be used at Trio Travel (good up to one year), and $100 in Wayne Chamber KRANZ SAID she would like the new child care facility to be up and running in July or early August of 1993 — before the start of the new school year.

When completed, the facility will be able to care for up to 60 children, of which 12 can be six weeks to 18 months of age.

If at capacity, the facility will employ at least 10 to 12 full-time people, plus part-time positions which Kranz said could be filled with college students working on internships or volunteers who just like to be around children.

Dark clouds hang over big harvest

There's always some dang dark cloud hanging over the harvest parade, explained Terri Post, Wayne County ASCS director about the situation with the local corn harvest.

With about 70 percent of the county's corn crop reported in, the income potential from massive yields is being cut into by high moisture content and reports of molding.

The county may average corn yields of better than 150 bushels per acre, this year. That is up by 50 percent over a normal year, she said, but the down side of that is the losses the individual farmers are experiencing to drying costs and mold loss.

'What was going to be a great year is not turning out to be as good as we thought," said the ASCS official.

She told of one farmer who calculated that the cost of harvesting his corn would be higher than he would get paid when deductions are taken for drying costs and quality

"He's going to leave it in the field until it dries," she said.

Some farmers are getting as little as $1.03 per bushel by the time deductions are taken, she said. "You can't hardly afford to cut it for that," she

Now with the mold scare, she said there has been concern about feeding the corn to hogs. The weather and moisture conditions, the difficulty in handling the Bumper crop is no help

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) - Despite the nation's record corn crop, farmers won't benefit much because they're still being paid low prices, spokesmen for producers groups said.

The problem runs deeper than the bank account - the social fabric of rural America is being damaged, said Gary Goldberg of Kearney, state president of the American Corn Growers Association.

"The quality of life has not improved and the price has a lot to do with it," Goldberg said in a story published in Sunday's Grand Island Independent.

She said everyone is working "pretty intensely" to get the harvest

Fantasy on display

Fantasy Forest 1992—an array of Christmas trees at the City Auditorium decorated by different organizations and businesses, both from youth and adult, will be on display to the public on Thursday from 6-9 p.m.

During that time there will be a tree lighting ceremony at 6:30 p.m. sponsored by the Interior Design Club at Wayne State College. The Jazz choir from Wayne High School will also perform and Santa Claus will make a visit. Santa's arrival is sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

The Fantasy Forest will open again on Friday to the public from 6-9 p.m. in a little bit different format than in previous years. At 6 p.m. the United Methodist Church

Bell Choir will perform.
At 6:30 the Stepping Stones pre-school children will have a program and at 7 p.m. Connie Weber and Coleen Jeffries will team up to entertain those in attendance.

The weekly Chamber Coffee will also be held at the City Auditorium's Fantasy Forest on Friday morning at 10. During that time the Wayne third and fourth graders will sing.

On Saturday, Fantasy Forest will be open for public viewing from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Santa Claus will be available during this time for photos with children

There will also be a bake sale on Saturday, sponsored by St. Mary's. The Wayne Day Care Board will be selling hot dogs for lunch. Golden-rod Hills Community Services will have a Toys for Tots adoption tree at Fantasy Forest, where you can get information concerning the adoption of a child to help provide things for a better Christmas for

If you do not wish to adopt a child through this program, but would like to purchase a gift to donate anyway, you may do so.

The Toys for Tots Christmas tree will be available all three days of Fantasy Forest. For further information on the Toys for Tots adoption tree program contact Goldenrod Hills Community Services at 375-4960 or by calling 529-3513.

WAYNE - R-Way in Wayne hosted a state meeting for residential mental rehabilitation providers Tuesday at is office on Main Street. The 19 attendees from all over the state discussed issues and new trends in community-based services for mental health clients.

Civic center group encouraged to go

The need for a multi-functional community center in Wayne is still evident according to members of the Wayne City Council who have encouraged continued action by the community task force intent on seeing a center built for Wayne.

Earlier this year the task force, headed by Lois Shelton, issued a study recommending a new multipurpose facility located adjacent to the county fairgrounds.

The facility would need to be upwards of 37,000 square feet to house such uses as theatre and concert productions, trade shows and other large gatherings. Other planned uses could include youth center, recreational spaces, fitness facilities, locker rooms

Last month Ms. Shelton asked for direction from city council and was encouraged to proceed with efforts to implement the task force recommen-

"THERE IS A consensus of interest to see the idea developed," said Mayor Bob Carhart. Special needs mentioned by city council members for possible inclusion in the proposed center include a teen meeting place and possibly the library.

The sturctural shortcomings of the existing library will cost considerable funds to correct to make it compatible with the new Amercians With Disabilities Act guidelines, said Joe Salitros, city administrator. Another

Senator Bradley special guest for live broadcast on tax issues sentative for the financial-services firm Edward D. Jones & Co., will host a live interactive broadcast for tax and legal professionals Wednesday, Dec. 9. The program is titled "Tax Policy and Priorities: A Yearend Update from Capitol Hill."

With the election behind us, many tax and legal professionals are wondering about tax changes in the near future. What are the tax and fiscal priorities of the Clinton Administration? Which recent tax proposals will be dusted off and moved to the top of the tax agenda? Which legislative and regulatory proposals will be driven by the deficit? Answers to these questions and more will be addressed during this most timely broadcast.

Tax season is almost here. which means that tax professionals will face many uncertain tax issues and will need answers in order to better advise their clients," Pflueger said. "We're thrilled to have such qualified experts on hand to help address some of the most troubling

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., will be the special guest for this program. Bradley is a member of the Senate Finance Committee and was also the author of the proposed Fair Tax, which eventually became the Tax Reform Act of 1986. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Debt, Deficits and International Debt, he continues to play a pivotal role in shaping our tax budget

This program will also feature Stephen Corrick, a tax partner in Arthur Andersen's Washington, D.C., Office of Federal Tax Seriees. Mr. Corrick is a CPA and attorney, and assists clients in analyzing the effects of legislative and regulatory proposals on individuals, corporations and partnerships

This program is the final continuing education broadcast slated for 1992 and will be the fourth in the firm's series of town hall meetings featuring elected officials. "The format of this program will allow for significant interaction between the speakers and participants," Pflueger said. "After a few minutes or prepared remarks, Senator Bradley will take viewer questions. Steve Corrick will continue with this format in the second hour, as he focuses on technical changes we

Make it safe

Wayne area teens may be upset with the new city ordinance making it illegal for motorists to turn around in private specified

Some have claimed the ordinance was a discriminatory effort to halt the practice of cruising.

The ordinance was written to address a dangerous situation created by motorists, both young and old, who use private property for convenience in making u-turns, often with little heed to pedestrian and other business traffic in the lots.

There have been several documented close calls as pedestrians have been threatened by motorists who appear more intent on socializing than they are on safe driving.

Parking lots are provided by businesses to allow customers to have easy and safe access to the store front. That purpose is thwarted when the pedestrians have to run a deadly obstacle course of u-turning cars.

A private parking lot is not a public thoroughfare.

The ordinance is not an indictment of youthful cruising, a smalltown pastime that most of the ordinance drafters probably indulged in themselves at one time.

Cruising is and should be a part of small town life. But the practice should be conducted in safety and without infringing on private

We think the new ordinance should help ensure this.

No pay, no play

Several towns and county governments in Iowa have hit on an idea whose time has come.

They want to see a law passed that says if new mandates are handed down to local governments from state and federal levels, that they must come with the funds to implement.

In recent years local governments have been besieged with new laws forcing them to add expensive new programs to address everything from trash to handicap accessible toilets.

The new regulations often require thousands of local dollars to implement.

A couple of recent cases in point, the new safe drinking water standards, enforced by federal and state mandate, will require thousands of dollars of private and public funds to implement here in Wayne alone. At the same time the city is forced to comply with the new law, it also must comply with spending limits.

The same double whammy hits local governments faced with new trash handling regulations and compliance with the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

As federal lawmakers face increased pressure to balance the federal budget, there is a natural tendency to pass the responsibility for funding desired programs on to governments lower down.

But the system is going to send some local governments into

Wayne County, which faces many of the same mandates also is limited in what it can spend.

We don't favor taking off the limits on local governments. But we do favor implementing reasonable limits at the federal and state level: If a new program like the ADA or clean water act is necessary, then the mandating government must also pass the funding for implementation.

No more 'range riders' in the Unicameral

By Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent Nebraska Press Association

The guys who make their home on the range, where the deer and the antelope play, seldom utter a discouraging word. Or so goes the

But if you talk these days to the rural range rovers who are members of Nebraska's Legislature, you get lots of discouraging words about how they all stack up in the State-

"I think the days of riding the range in the Legislature for rural senators are over," Sen. Rod Johnson of Sutton said recently Rural senators say the balance of power has shifted in the Legislature from rural to urban. As people have moved from farms to the city, so has the clout.

Rural senators for decades had the run of the Statehouse. What they wanted they pretty much had the votes to get. With the agrarian nature of the state, the rural guys just had more voice. Add to that the fact the Legislature refused to redistrict for population shifts for 35 years, leading to apportionment that seemed more like one-cow, onevote than one-man, one-vote, and agriculture had the power to get whatever it wanted.

But with four decades of reapportionment and population shifts, rural senators say we may have now reached the point where the urban guys have them out-numbered. They say that fact was painfully brought home in the past ear with the personal property tax

Rural senators were one vote short of the tax policy they wanted, eliminating all personal property and raising state sales and income taxes. Instead, the Legislature reimposed a tax on personal property that 20 years ago rural senators had the votes to get rid of. It was a defining issue. When you look at the senators that will take office in 1993, 24 just short of a majority - will represent parts of Douglas and Lan-caster County. With the passing of each generation, the city people get farther away from the farm life.

But you also have "rural" senators who represent districts that have large urban centers like Grand Island, Kearney, Scottsbluff, Hastings, Columbus and Norfolk. Is a senator who represents two-thirds city folks and a third rural folks urban or rural?

Does it all mean ag's days are numbered?

I don't think so. Nebraska will continue to be an agricultural state. The state's largest industry can't be

But it sure means a change in the way the ag guys work in the Legislature. They have had to in-creasingly negotiate and work with their urban colleagues and that will

It seems that the folks in rural areas are recognizing this, too. The people being elected from rural areas are more and more pragmatic, less and less the "this is what ag wants and you city guys be damned" types.

When you don't have the votes. that approach just doesn't work anymore. And right now it seems, ag doesn't have the votes.

Overboard

The holidays seem to get busier each year as we rush to make holi-day schedules and all the special events and extra activities.

Since the season begins at the first of November now or even sooner, I'm proposing we put in a breather day along about now. The First Sunday of Advent would be appropriate. Breather day should be when we stop everything. No parties. No gift planning. No special concerts or extra work schedules. Just pause for a few hours.

And remember the reason for There, I feel better already.

More lights?

Someone said there are more Christmas lights up this season. Whether there are or not, it sure is nice to see the community show its pride and spirit

I have a child at home who has requested no lights on our house this year. Could be because one year as I was working on a display which included "Noel" outlined in lights, the troublesome child asked what I was doing.

"Puttin' up a message on the roof for Santa," I replied.
"What's it say?" asked the pre-schooler.
It says "Dear Santa, Don't Bring Elysia any presents, she's been bad." The lights made a lasting impression, until she learned to read

In perspective

Still on the lighting and kids subject, I recall each year about this time, when another pre-schooler in the Mann household excitedly watched the when another pre-schooler in the Maint household excitedly walched the effort to put up Christmas lights.

There was unfathomable excitement that evening when they were first turned on. The impressionable child had a hard time going to sleep that first night the lights were on. There were numerous trips to the window to stare at the lights sparkling in the night sky

The reflection sparkled in the child's eyes.
Those same eyes were full of sadness the next morning when the youngster awoke before sunup and looked out to discover we had turned the lights off during the night.

With reproach in his voice, he asked why we would do so awful a thing as to turn the lights off in the middle of the night.

"Well," I said, "There's no reason to leave them on all night, no one sees them when it's real late

He fixed me with a pathetic and accusing gaze and cut me to the quick with two quick words.

"Jesus does."

Performing a yappendectomy

Hard times as the media spins

For one year prior to the election, media pundits reported nothing but hard times. Presto! Like an overnight miracle, with a new Democratic president, media spinheads started noting how things had improved! Jingo jockey! The promised land isn't far off according to media masters! Herkie Morefun being a little tired of biased report ing, gave his TV a yappendectomy.
Acre-ites rate the spectacular turnaround right up there with the Virgin Birth. And only a Noodlehead Acre-rite can accurately describe the perils of hard times. Just HARDTIMES is having fifty 24-cent stamps on hand the day the price went to twenty-nine. Hard times mean, even though you're ready to go home, you continue sitting at the parking meter until time runs out so you'll get your money's worth. Or like last week, Homer Moretun ordered 200 new envelopes with a printed return address. They came today but he moved to a new address yesterday. His wife Dora knows hard times too. As she was going into an intersection the cute little green light turned yellow, then red. So did the lights on the city's cute little police car behind her. She asked to ride the escalator at the courthouse where she was to pay her fine, but it iammed. She climbed the stairs fit as a fizzle. In fact, by the time she reached the court's office she was as worn out as a woodpecker in a petrified forest. Hard times!

DESCENDING the stairs, her slacks held on tight going around the curves, but she made it. Then it was on out to the grocery store where she had to be careful with her cash, as husband Homer is tighter than the top olive in a bottle. Like you, dear reader, Dora has never been able to walk right up to the checkout counter. Just as she decided to check out, so did everyone else including a lady with $250 worth of goodies in her cart, and even more bags under her eyes Now that is hard times! The gal had a personality like that of a dental drill so Dora let her go ahead of her, all the time desiring to tell her just exactly where she could push her cart. When you're standing in line, no one ahead of you has cash, of course . Dora waited as the lady ahead fumbled around in her mobile purse - actually a small model of a U-Haul truck. Eureka! She found her checkbook and identity. The sweetsie clerk tried to be patient during all this but you could tell she was suffering from hardening of the attitude. Dora finally made it home. Hard times!

THINKING MAYBE the Nebraska legislature might be able to help him with his hard times, Homer went to the Capitol in Lincoln. He found out that a little hair on the upper lip is sometimes the only thing that keeps some representatives from being bare-faced liars. One senator accused his rival of trying to rob the public..and now he wanted his turn. Hard times! Homer returned home believing he is the natural resource being

OPTIMISM is, however, eternal. Homer knows he is going to win the Publisher's Clearing House contest so he can retire. He knows life is a battle of wits and he is fighting it unarmed. Hard times! He knows life is less and less of more and more, oftener and oftener. Hard times! Born in the Acres, Homer came to at age sixteen. Sometimes his friends try to get the best of him but that is like trying to smuggle sunrise past a rooster. Most of Homer's hard times are not really his fault as he did not have the opportunity to drink at the fountain of knowledge. He just sort of gargled. Hard times!

HAVE A BAD day? Probably due to the media spinheads. Hard times are like when you go to work ing in the office. Even worse is their first question: "How did Sam Donaldson get here first?" Consequently you call suicide prevention and they put you on hold. Now we know what real hard times are like, or do we?

President Clinton is likely to find out for himself. Might be a good idea for him to start thinking of something patriotic to say should he ever be asked to speak at the veteran's Vietnam Memorial Wall, Hard times!

GOTTA GO! Save the crumbs from your timetable, dear. Nothing makes a man forget a passing fancy like something a bit fancier.

Laurel leads way with eight first-teamers

All-Area grid team released

By Kevin Peterson Sports Editor

The Wayne Herald released its All-Area Football Team today with 26 of the area's finest gridiron athletes earning special recognition. The all-area team is composed of players who performed well in the eyes of the Wayne Herald sports staff—coaches had no impact on the selections.

The Laurel Bears had the Wayne Herald area's finest team as they finished 8-3 and lost to the state runner-up David City Aquinas in the state quarterfinals.

The Bears placed eight players on the first team and two more on the honorable mention list. Wayne and Wakefield placed six players on the team while Allen and Winside placed the placed the place of t placed three each.

It should come as no surprise that Laurel's Tom Luxford is the Wayne Herald Area Coach of the Year. Luxford has led the Bears to their only two state tournament appearances ever in the last four years and he's gotten the most out of his players.

The Bears were a very cohesive team in '92 and they rallied around each other. The defense is what really shined as the Bears broke a school record in interceptions and overall team defense.

One of the hardest hitting defenders was also the quarterback in Travis Monson. His inspired play and consistency has earned him the Wayne Herald Area Player of the Year.

Monson edged Allen's Bren Mattes, Wayne's Chad Paysen and Wakefield's Ben Dutton for player of the year honors.

Laurel athletes earning first team all-area status include Monson, Kelly Arens, Mark Dickey, Kyle Schutte, Chris Hartung, Dustin Roberts, Steve Stanley and Derek Ehlers.

Most of these players played both ways on offense and defense and they did a tremendous job of giving Bears fans eight victories. Andy Smith and Ben Donner earned honorable mention from the Laurel team.

Wayne managed just two victories during the season but Blue Devil fans were treated to some outstanding play from several individuals. Regg Carnes, Bobby Barnes, Arnold Schwartz, Jack Swinney, Paysen and Tim Reinhardt earned first-team status for their efforts while Matt Rise, Jason Brandt and Dusty Jensen earned honorable mention status.

The Trojans suffered through a tough season much like the Blue Devils, with a 3-6 record but considering that Wakefield was forced to completely rebuild its offense and defense because of graduation the year before, they didn't fare all

Ben Dutton, Pat Jepson, Ryan Ekberg, Larry Johnson, T.J. Preston and Kelly Turney made first team all-area while Todd Mattson, Craig Anderson, Cory Brown, Miah Johnson and Dave Jensen make up the honorable mention list.

Allen started the season off with four consecutive losses but managed to win three of its last five games. One of the area's finest defensive players in Allen's Bren Mattes was a reason the Eagles turned a gloomy season into a somewhat respectible one.

Casey Schroeder was one of the best wide receivers in the area with great speed and Curtis Oswald earns first team honors with his play on both sides of the ball. Lane Anderson and Steve Sullivan played well enough to gain honorable mention recognition.

Winside came into the season hoping they could have a great year if they could stay healthy. Unfortunately, Randy Geier's Wildcats did everything but stay healthy and after winning their first two games of the season, injuries led directly to seven consecutive losses.

Brady Frahm, John Hancock and Jason Topp played consistent enough and well enough to earn first team honors for all-area while Cam Shelton, Trent Trautman and Cory Miller gained honorable mention.

Three NU Diagnostic Labs boon to livestock health and research

LINCOLN -- Great is the chance that any given Nebraska livestock producer or veterinarian has used the services of the University of Nebraska's three Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratories.

This past fiscal year, more than one-half million laboratory procedures were conducted at Lincoln, North Platte and Scottsbluff.

The laboratories are veterinarianreferred and depend heavily on user fees to supplement state funding. Diagnostic laboratories in many states usually are companions to veterinary schools and developed out of the teaching programs. Ne-braska is an exception. Nebraska does not have a veterinary college.
The Nebraska Veterinary Diagnostic Center in Lincoln, the Veterinary Science Laboratory at the West Central Research and Extension Center in North Platte, and the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory at the Panhandle Research and Extension Center in Scottsbluff make up the veterinary diagnostic system.

This system is part of the De-partment of Veterinary Science in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL.

The laboratories were initiated through strong support from pork, beef and poultry producers. Lincoln had a diagnostic facility long before its current building on East Cam-pus was constructed in 1977. The North Platte satellite was built in 1969, and the Panhandle laboratory in Scottsbluff began operating in

The laboratory in Lincoln, has,

350 new cases arriving, according to Dr. Alan Doster, director. Doster savs his staff can analyze up to 2,700 blood samples daily for pseudorabies virus antibodies in swine. From July 1991 until June 1992, the Lincoln lab conducted more than 468,000 procedures -more than five times the number they did four years ago, according to the annual report.

Doster attributes the heavy inrease to a couple of reasons. One is the state's emphasis on eradicating pseudorabics in swine. Another is the laboratory's reputation. Its turn-around time, Doster said, is faster than anywhere else in the Midwest, A final diagnosis for most cases can be completed within 48 to 72 hours, depending on the disease or syndrome in question and tests needed for diagnosis.

Decades-old laboratory procedures combine with state-of-the-art equipment and a dedicated staff for fast, dependable results -- at a reasonable price. The laboratory usually charges $35 to $45 per case, which is about 30 percent of the cost. The rest is subsidized by the state. Ceiling fees are observed for most kinds of cases.

The Lincoln center works closely with the state veterinarian, Doster said, and also has good rapport and collaboration with some pharmaceutical companies on information sharing. The Nebraska Diagnostic Laboratories have assisted in major scientific break-throughs, including development of tests for hog cholera and pseudorabies, and a vaccine to control viral diarrhea in baby calves. These proof the Agricultural Research Division at UNL.

South Main. Siefken said he anticipates another busy building season in 1993 with projects already on the table including the completion of the Riley's Convention center, the Day Care Center and the Wayne Care Center project.

While nine veterinarians and 30 technicians staff the Lincoln laboratory, the labs at Scottsbluff and North Platte are operated by a fraction of that number. And while the Lincoln lab's heaviest workload is in swine and pseudorables virus serology tests, bovine cases occupy the majority of cases in the other North Platte's laboratory is di-rected by Dr. Jerre Johnson. There, fewer than four people handled 1,904 cases last fiscal year and strive for a response time of a few hours to five days, Johnson said. The two satellites, Johnson notes, facilitate better accessibility for producers. Most states don't have satellite diagnostic laboratories, he said.

"Most states haven't made the effort to be as accessible as the University of Nebraska has," Johnson said.

Not only do the two satellites offer accessibility for the producer and veterinarian, but Johnson notes they help members of the Lincoln lab keep in touch with what is happening in the central and western parts of the state.

Additionally, producers appreciate the unbiased information the laboratories offer. Producers feel free to obtain staff opinions on herd health, breeding programs and drug purchasing, he said.

Like the North Platte lab, the Scottsbluff laboratory staff members work closely with the diagnostic center in Lincoln.

It provides a presence of veterinary diagnostic expertise in the Dale Grotelueschen, director. "We're able to provide a quality diagnostic service and work very closely with animal owners and veterinary practitioners."

The laboratory in Nebraska's Panhandle is "most beneficial to everyone," Grotelueschen says. It saves western Nebraska livestock producers infic and travel and provides quick access to diagnostic capabilities at Scottsbluff and other laboratories.

Prior to the Scottsbluff lab's 16 opening 16 years ago, Grotelueschen says a lot of testing simply wasn't done, or was done out-of-state. More than 28,000 laboratory procedures were conducted at Scottsbluff during fiscal year 1991-

"Diagnostic labs are used increasingly for preventative medicine and health monitoring purposes" as opposed to disaster management, Grotelueschen added.

All three locations carry antidotes for emergency use of accidental poisoning, in cooperation with the Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association. The antidotes have been used in cases of nitrate and lead poisonings, said Johnson and Grotelueschen.

Diseases are not only diagnosed at the laboratories, but research specimens are collected for ongoing veterinary science research projects. The labs provide resources for graduate and undergraduate instruction and employment, as well as Cooperative Extension educational programs for veterinarians and produc-

MORE THAN 100,000 BUSHELS of corn is being stored on Second Street between Logan and Nebraska as crews with Wayne Grain and Feed begin the difficult task of handling the excess capacity of the area's bumper grain harvest. The grain, which had grown to a mountain by Tuesday afternoon, is only expected to be stored in the street about a month until it can be transported to holding facilities and markets. Area harvest yielded as much as 50 percent more grain than previous years. See related grain harvest we're failing," he said.

Farmers are expected to harvest a record 9.3 billion bushels of corn nationwide and more than 1 billion bushels statewide.

The price of corn has been less than $2 a bushel, the lowest in four

Corn prices are only $1.59 more than the price 100 years ago, according to reports from grain elevators in central Nebraska

The price per bushel of corn was 41 cents in November 1892.

In 1919, the average yield was 26.8 bushels per acre and in 1991 it was 108, according to figures provided by the Nebraska Corn Board. Nebraska farmers produce 140 to 180 bushels of corn today with the help of irrigation, chemicals and modern machinery.

Costs for such production methods have skyrocketed, Goldberg said, leading to increased farmer debt and stress.

Goldberg said he knows farmers who borrow $100,000 every year just to operate until the crop is produced. He personally has $150,000 in debt in his small farm operation, he said.

With such high stress, there is also high alcoholism, spouse abuse and suicide in rural America, Goldberg said.

Don Hutchens, president of the Nebraska Corn Board, said the price of corn has fluctuated a great deal. It was $3.25 a bushel in 1983, he

"It's all over the board. That's one of the travesties of agriculture managing a capital intensive farm operation with fluctuating farm prices," Hutchens said.

Hutchens said there was speculation the corn price would be higher this fall because carryover stocks were down.

"But there seems to be more sophistication in the demand process," he said. And he said the export market has suffered.

The former Soviet Union had imported about 16.8 million metric tons of U.S. corn, but that market shrunk by half because of an unstable economic system in the former Soviet republics, Hutchens

"We also lost market share in Korea, which had purchased 85 percent of its corn from the U.S., he said. "Korea is buying more corn

Goldberg blamed the poor prices in part on the tremendous supply of corn in the United States.

The American Corn Growers Association had asked for 10 percent set-aside acres for 1992, but the set-aside was established at 5 percent.

"If the secretary of agriculture had listened to us, we wouldn't be in the mess we're in now. There would be a lot less corn around," Goldberg

Next year 10 percent of the acres will be set aside

CHAS hearing, Dec. 7

The Nebraska Department of Economic Development and the egal Aid Society are sponsoring a hearing on affordable housing in northeast Nebraska. The hearing is open to the public. Anyone interested in discussing Nebraska's plans for affordable housing is encouraged to attend. The hearing will be held at Northeast Nebraska Community College in Norfolk, 801 East Benjamin Avenue, on Dec. 7 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The hearing is part of a 30-day public comment period on the draft 1993 Nebraska Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS). The CHAS presents re-gional profiles of the state's housing issues and needs and also sets priorities for investing state, federal, and other resources to meet Hearings are being held throughout the state to give all citizens an opportunity to review the CHAS and to voice their oninions on the need for affordable housing as well as other local housing issues. After the public comment period ends, the Depart-ment of Economic Development will update the CHAS to reflect citizens' comments and will then 4 submit it to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Develop-

Bowl game trips not a hot ticket say local travel agents

Travel Consultant Brenda Wittig of Wayne says she's not at all surprised that no one has expressed in erest in attending the Orange Bowl in Miami, Fla. on Jan. 1.

Wittig, who works in the Trio Travel office in Wayne, said it's difficult for Trio Travel to estimate the amount of interest area residents have in attending this year's Orange Bowl because most people take advantage of travel packages offered directly by bus companies and air-

Wittig added that most area football enthusiasts will probably go with the package deals, where they receive travel, lodging and football tickets for one lump sum.

But some travel agents report business is slow this year even though it appears Nebraska seems bound for Miami for a New Year's Day game, whether it's the Orange Bowl as Big Eight champions or the Blockbuster Bowl.

"The interest so far has been a little lukewarm for a lot of reasons," said Ray Juengel, a manager of the group travel division at Lincoln Tour & Travel.

-Pairing are occurring later in the ear because of the bowl coalition of bowls, schools and conferences designed to bring about a matchup of the top two teams. That's making it difficult to plan and advertise tours and excursions.

-Iowa State's upset of Nebraska

two weeks ago burst slim hopes for a possible national championship.

-Nebraska's final game of the season against Kansas State in Tokyo next Saturday drew some travelers there instead of to a bowl

-Some Nebraska fans are less than enthusiastic about returning to Miami because of the city's reputation for crime and the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew Travel agents expect the situation to improve by the end of this week when pairings are firmed up.

"There are going to be some teams and fans that are really going to have to hustle because of the coalition," Juengel said. "We started getting a quite a few calls before the Iowa State game, but after that things just started to wither on the

John DuPont, owner of Travel Agents International, said a Miami plane ticket could be a tough one to get because of holiday travel, people flying in for cruises and two bowl games

Some Nebraska fans have stayed in Orlando, Fort Lauderdale or West Palm Beach and taken a bus to the game, he said.

"In recent years, Miami has not always been viewed as an attractive place to go," he said. "Rightly or wrongly it's not seen as the safest place in the world."

Author speaks at WSC

Author Bill Holm will be the featured speaker as Wayne State College continues its 1992-93 Plains Writers Circuit on Wednesday, Dec. 2 at 2 p.m.

The event, free and open to the public, will be held in the second-floor lounge of the Humanities

Holm has taught school for 25 years, most recently at Southwest State University in Marshall, Minn., from where he went as an exchange teacher to Xi'an Jiaotong University in central China. His book "Coming Home Crazy" describes his experience there.

Holm is the author of "Boxelder Bug Variations," a book of poems, essays and music that was staged as a performance piece by the Lyric Theatre of Minneapolis in 1988. 'The Music of Failure," a book of prose about Minnesota, was reprinted in hardcover by Saybrook Publishing Company in 1987 as "Prairie Days." A new edition, with more essays, will be published this year under the original title.

The Plains Writers Circuit is an ambitious effort to bring published authors to Wayne State College, according to Jim Brummels, assistant professor of English and published author at Wayne State.

This year marks the 15th consecutive year that authors have been hosted by the Circuit. Brummels says a consortium of four Nebraska colleges sponsor the writers. They include, Nebraska Wesleyan University, the University of Nebraska-Kearney and Northeast Community College

The Plains Writers Circuit also receives funding from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Lower Elkhorn NRD sets water boundary

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District board voted unani-mously to have the NRD staff begin the process of establishing a Groundwater Quality Management Area within the district at its November board meeting in Laurel.

The proposed area would most likely be located in Pierce County east of Pierce, near Weetown on Highway 81. After further study, the district's water resources manager will outline the boundary of the proposed groundwater manage-

"The proposed area has elevated nitrate levels found in water samples taken from irrigation wells on 19 sections of land east of Pierce, said LENRD water resources manager, Rick Wozniak. Irrigation well samplings have shown nitrate levels in the groundwater that exceed federal health limits of 10 parts per "This is only a preliminary step in establishing a groundwater management area," said Wozniak, First, a citizens advisory committee will e formed to address specific water quality issues within the proposed irea. Public hearings will then be held for open discussion on the issue. And, then action must be taken by the full NRD board before a groundwater management area may be declared within the district, according to Wozniak.

In other business, the board approved the hiring of Nickel Engineering of Lincoln to perform a feasibility study of the Butterfly Creek Project near Stanton. The board accepted the bid of $64,906.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's U.S. Sport Restoration Fund will pay 75 percent of the cost of the feasibility study. The Lower Elkhorn NRD will pay the remaining 25 percent for the feasibility study of the proposed project in Stanton County The next Lower Elkhorn NRD

Christmas Fair approaching
Final preparations are underway this week for the annual Christmas Fair at the Wayne First United Methodist Church, located at 516 Main St. This year's fair is scheduled Saturday, Dec. 5 and will once again feature an array of Christmas gift giving items. Pictured with some of the unique gifts which will be available are, from left, Mary Sensenig, Norma Ehlers and Marj Porter, all members of the United Methodist Women's organization. Doors to the fair will be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will also be a lunch of turkey, mashed potatoes and gravy, homemade pies, coffee and milk served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Persons may dine in or call 375-2231 to have their meal delivered.

'Settled' is a qualified answer

People ask us, "are you getting settled?" I guess the answer is "yes," but it's a qualified one. The Big Farmer is now the one going back and forth on the weekends. I'm simply going back and forth to Lincoln, a distance of 35 miles.

Supposedly, I'm a Cass County visiting nurse, with Tabitha's local office in Weeping Water. This works just like Lutheran Hospital's home health office in Wayne. But I'm also still involved with Hospice and will be developing it in this area. I see patients in Plattsmouth, Louisville, Ashland and Elmwood and still have a couple in Lincoln. Hospice is a separate entity from Home Health Care and I have to keep time and mileage separate. The hardest thing I do twice a month is fill out my time card and each department has a separate code for each county. Plus, a separate access number for the office long distance line and separate calling card num-

Shoot, I have a hard time with my own address and phone number! I've already been writing my zip wrong. We live on Church Road, which is also the Platte River State Park Road, off the Ashland-Greenwood exist on Interstate 80, east of Lincoln

It's called Church Road because there are two churches on it, just five miles apart. And there is a used to be part of another congregation, but the church is no longer there.

There are all kinds of "small world" coincidences. Mike's uncle was once the minister at the church that is gone. The minister at the east used to be our pastor in Winside. The one at the west is Doug Bereuter's cousin and hails from Bloomfield. The Methodist minister in town used to be in Norfolk. We've been on our best behavior!

"Town" is Louisville, though our address is Murdock. Murdock is the size of Hoskins. Louisville, of course, is on the Platte River and is the home of a state recreation area. It's also the site of a large cement plant and there are numerous lime-one quarries around. Mike has hung his single in an ffice in Louisville. There are several interesting antique shops there. The grocery store and drug store are both open seven days a week. I'll get spoiled!

The community seems to be German. I guarantee that isn't what brought us here, but we do feel right at home. I guess we are get-

Local man headlines Pork Expo

There is no shortage of chal-lenges testing pork producers' ability to survive and remain profitable.
Those attending the Nebraska Pork Industry Exposition in Columbus Feb. 3-4, 1993 will learn more about "Factors That Could Wreck Your Future.

Mike Brumm of Wayne, University of Nebraska swine spe-cialist, will lead off with this sobering topic, followed by John Gadd, an international swine consultant from Dorset, England, on the topic, "Your Challenges Aren't

The Pork Expo educational program begins at 10 a.m. Feb. 3 at Platte County Agricultural Park. A trade show with approximately 260 displays will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. Like previous years, there will be no admission charge and plenty of free parking, said Bob Voboril, Columbus, Pork Expo manager. The event is cosponsored by the Nebraska Pork Industry Committee, Nebraska Pork Producers Association and NU Co-operative Extension.

Brumm, who is stationed at the NU Northeast Research and Extension Center near Concord, has identified at least eight factors pork producers must take into account in making short and long-term management and marketing decisions.

Increased environmental concerns are likely to cause many eastern Corn Belt swine operations to move further west, into less densely populated areas such as Nebraska, Brumm predicted. The "NIMBY" (Not in my Back Yard) declaration, which is becoming more prevalent in consumer circles, zeroes in on odors and waste disposal problems associated with even well-run pork production units.

A forced move westward by the swine industry translates into increased opportunities for Nebraska pork producers and allied industry, he said. But producers will need to cope with or solve a number of other problems, which Brumm will cover in the kickoff talk.

Other areas of concern include: intergenerational transfer, "making it possible for the kids to take over dad and mom's pig farm;" record-keeping, "pork industry survivors are recordkeepers;" and market ac-cess, "are you raising hogs the packer wants; if not, there may not be an available market." Other topics are contracting to finish feeder pigs, labor, full utilization of assets, including facilities and crop land and business structure in Nebraska's Initiative 300 climate.

Gadd, who also writes a column for National Hog Farmer, will cover a laundry list of production challenges, including some which dovetail with Brumm's comments and others that are basic to production, such as sow nutrition, stockmanship, disease control, maximizing fertility and embryo survival. Nebraska producers must recognize the global perspective of the pork industry to remain competitive, Gadd warns.

Rounding out the Wednesday morning session on "Is There a Future in Pork Production," is a presentation by Delmar Gerdes, Wymore pork producer. Gerdes, with a topic, "I can Compete with the Southeast," will discuss his new "plastic" farrowing house. This facility costs less than $1,100 per crate and is a key factor in comparing his costs to those of large farrowing units in North Carolina. Gerdes was employed by Murphy's of Iowa, a division of Murphy's of North Carolina, for six

The afternoon general session will center on "The Road to Lean" (ultimately in retail cuts of pork in the meat case). Topics and speakers include: "Balancing Lean with Production Realities," Ron Bates, University of Missouri-Columbia extension swine specialist and geneticist; "We're Cooperating on our Genetics," Dan Gosch, Ida Grover, Iowa, pork producer and member of Western Iowa Genetics; and "TOBEC Proves We're Serious About Our Lean Payments," Stan Lammers, president, Supreme Packing Co., Sioux Center, Iowa.

Dr. Barbara Straw, D.V.M., UNL veterinarian, will discuss Pork Quality Assurance, Level III in a separate session from noon to 2 p.m. both days.

During the perennially popular Four Corners session on Thursday morning, specialists will be on hand to field questions from producers. The corps of NU experts will include Don Levis and Jerry Bodman, UNL swine specialist and livestock housing specialist, respectively, on solving sow and boar problems and solving building problems. Bates will be back to help producers considering "genetic decisions for (more) lean." Wayne Gipp, Montana State University extension swine specialist, will discuss "lean gain nutrition."

For the first time in the history of the Expo, a program is being offered especially for women, Voboril announced. A craft and hobby show will be held, beginning at 9:30 a.m. on both days. Nebraska Computer Association members will help women participants improve their basic and advanced skills in computer technology, with training at three skill levels. A pie judging contest at 10:30 a.m., open to the public, and pork preparation demonstration by Eunice Ruth of Rising City will round out activities the first day.

On Thursday, representatives of the nationally known Bluebird Nursery at Clarkson, will be on hand at 10 a.m. to discuss landscaping the farmstead and home grounds and answer other "green-

'Roadkill' marketing gimmick may be a great collector's item

Farm Bureau Federation By Cheryl Stubbendieck Vice president/information

It was a coincidence, I think, that I acquired a box of "Roadkill Helper" the same week I was to cook my first Thanksgiving dinner. In the winter of my 41st year, my luck ran out and it was, inscapably, my turn to host the meal that accompanies endless hours of football watching.

Thanksgiving has come and gone, but my box of Roadkill

Helper is still unopened and probably it will remain so, at lease until my grandchildren go through my personal effects and wonder what the old lady was saving it for.

For Roadkill Helper is a limited edition, not available in grocery-stores. At first glance, it looks for all the world like another in that great series of Hamburger Helper, Chicken Helper and Tuna Helper those pasta-and-sauce mixes that let you transform a modest quantity of rotein into a main dish. And that's the problem: the folks who manufacture the real thing got an injunction against the gagsters who dreamed up and marketed the product for roadkill, claiming it disparaged their product.

The settlement between the Roadkillers and the Real Thing allows all existing boxes of Roadkill Helper to be sold, but prohibits manufacture or more. So someday my box will be worth something, like those old comic books I wished shows roadkill and pasta in a skillet, the true preparation method calls for driving: just wrap a pound of road-tenderized meat in foil with spices, onion, whatever, and place it on your vehicle's manifold. Then drive to desired doneness. At higher altitudes, you'll want to cook longer - but check your brakes. True road warriors will want to experiment with new ways to use Roadkill Helper: squirrel souffle, quartered-pounder with fleas, cat-for its frankness. If you don't like t, you can't get your money back, because the package warns, "There are no guarantees this time around."

And at nearly $4 for a quarterounce, it truly is "less than you'd expect per serving," as the box points out. I don't actually know what's inside the box — sounds like six pieces of macaroni; could be lima beans - but to open the box would reduce its collector's value, so the mystery will remain.

Roadkill Helper is the brainchild of folks at a company called GAG foods in Woodland Park, Colo., who promise that a portion of the proceeds will help fund research to fight and cure arthritis.

I can imagine all kinds of uses for Roadkill Helper, so it's really too bad it's in limited supply. The cook who wants to renege on her offer to fix dinner could leave a box where her date could see it, for example, and maybe he'd suggest ordering takeout instead. Me, I'm going to keep it handy as a signal to the family that tonight's a very good night to eat out.

Senators speak at Farm Bureau's 75th meeting

Two U.S. Senators will speak at Nebraska Farm Bureau's 75th anniversary convention, Dec. 6 to 9 in Lincoln's Cornhusker Hotel.

Nebraska Farm Bureau was founded in 1917 by representatives of several county Farm Bureaus Harry L. Keefe, a city father of Walthill, was Farm Bureau's first state president. The 75th anniverwill be recalled with special observances throughout the convention, including publication of a hard cover history of the state. organization and Nebraska's county Farm Bureaus

U.S. Sen. and former Nebraska governor J. James Exon will be the featured speaker at a breakfast Dec 8. Sen. Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, assistant Senate minority leader, will speak at the Farm Bureau banquet Dec. 7. Simpson was elected to the Senate in 1978 and re-elected in 1984 and 1990.

In 1984, he was elected by his peers in the Senate as assistant majority leader (majority whip), when the Republicans controlled the Senate. He has been re-elected to the position of whip in each subsequent Congress, most recently on

The personal property tax issue and water concerns will highlight discussion in the Farm Bureau House of Delegates, which makes policy for the organization. For the second year, the personal property tax was the most talked-about issue at county Farm Bureau annual meetings this fall. Farm Bureau's policy development process origi-nates in the state's 88 county Farm

Everything from taking personal property off the tax rolls to exempting purchased breeding live-stock from the tax will be debated, according to Trent Nowka, Farm Bureau vice president/public affairs. "Our members seem to support the elimination of all personal property tax but are divided as to how lost revenue will be made up if personal property taxes are repealed," he said.

Some county Farm Bureaus have sent policy resolutions forward to the state organization advocating that personal property taxes be replaced with sales and income taxes or with an increase in real property taxes, Nowka said. "But last year's concern of how to get replacement revenues back to local subdivisions dollar-for-dollar still faces the membership this year," he said.

In national policy discussion, delegates will focus on ethanol, term limits and budget reductions, Nowka said. "Our members feel ethanol needs to be taken more seriously by the Environmental Protection Agency and the federal gov ernment. Farmers want federal officials to be more supportive of ethanol. Resolutions from the county Farm Bureaus favor keeping ethanol in the limelight in order to satisfy clean air requirements in bigger cities." he said

The House of Delegates also will elect or re-elect five members of Nebraska Farm Bureau's 13member Board of Directors, including two at-large positions and three district positions. Currently the District 6 position is vacant be-cause Sen elect Jim Jones of Eddyville resigned from the Farm Bureau board to run for the Nebraska Legislature. Don Moore of Tyron is not seeking a second term representing District 7. Tom Weber of Dorchester is eligible for election to a second term in District 4.

Youth at-large board member Ken Iverson of Papillion is eligible for a second term, but Treva Gangwish of Wood River, woman atlarge member of the board, has served two terms and cannot be reelected. Directors are limited to two consecutive three-year terms

Nebraska Farm Bureau's most prestigious award, the Silver Eagle, will be presented Dec. 7. Past recipients have included former Ne braska Rep. Virginia Smith and the late State Sen. Maurice Kremer. A convention trade show is scheduled for Dec. 6 and 7. Seventy-fifth anniversary events on Dec. 6, 7 and 8 will honor past members of the Farm Bureau Board of Directors, the State Young Farmers and Ranchers Committee and the State Women's

Grain shipping shows changes over the years

LINCOLN -- Knowing where their grain goes and how it gets can help Nebraska producers satisfy their buyers, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln researcher said.

Agricultural Economist Dale Anderson tries to provide those answers. The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources researcher has studied the transportation of soybeans, com, sorghum and wheat during his 25 years at UNL.

Things have changed dramatically in that time," he said. The advent of the large specialized, cov-ered rail cars, or grain hoppers, has been the biggest change factor for grain shipping in the past quarter century, he said

Anderson and his predecessors have conducted grain movement studies in Nebraska every few years since 1954, the latest in 1985. The work provides snapshots of how grain has reached its destination over the years.

Nebraska and other states sometimes conduct surveys at the same time, yielding a nationwide picture of movement patterns for major grains. The most recent Nebraska data are from personal interviews with 100 grain elevator operators, 24 grain processors and 27 livestock feeders.

Grain hoppers are more efficient because they hold more grain and are easier to load and unload. Because of this, grain gradually began being shipped in unit trains composed solely of hoppers, which traveled from the elevator to final destination in one train.

In the 1970s and 1980s, this trend spurred changes at elevators across the state. Managers recognized they would need to accommodate unit trains to remain competitive. The number of Nebraska elevators able to load unit trains grew from eight in 1977 to 106 by 1982 and 120 by 1986.

This is far more capacity than needed to meet demand, and may result in some elevators going out of business or operating at lower efficiency, Anderson said.

Years ago, a farmer brought grain to the local grain elevator where it was mixed with grain from other area farmers. Before unit trains became widely used in the 1980s, grain moved in predictable patterns from the farm to a nearby country elevator to subterminals or terminals, and from there to its destination at domestic mills, feedlots and, less often, export ports, he

Most rail shipments today move in train lots of 25 to 75 cars. Some larger elevators load 110-car trains for the Gulf and Pacific ports. They move together to their final destination, and are not mixed with other grain cars or cars carrying other goods as in the past, he said.

Even the traditional classification of elevators as country, subterminal or terminal has lost most of its meaning, Anderson said. The latter two now may be simply long-term storehouses as grain moves in dedicated trainloads from country elevators to final out-ofstate destinations.

'As Nebraska has become a part of the world economy, we are more closely linked with producers and consumers in nearly every corner of the world," he said.

Analyzing grain movement pat-terns is necessary to understand the economic and political environ-ments in which grains are produced and marketed, Anderson said.

Flow information helps in evaluating the effectiveness of government programs, in oversight of freight rates and other transportation issues, in long-term planning of marketing facilities and in identifying trade opportunities. Farm organizations, marketing firms, policymakers, and public and private re-searchers use this information.

"It is important that we understand where these grains go. There is not a concrete picture from any other source," Anderson said. The data allow economists to speculate about changes in markets, and provides some perspective on trends

Two important trends illuminated by the study were the development and waning of the Pacific Coast market in the mid-1980s, and the overwhelming use of trucks for in-state grain shipping.

A small amount of grain is barged down the Missouri River, limited by the river's navigability.

Nebraska ranks fifth nationally in commercial grain storage capacity with 702 million bushels of space in 1986. Farmers could store nearly twice as much, 1.2 billion bushels

Nebraska's relatively large amount of on-farm storage capacity - a little more than enough to hold the entire 1986 soybean, sorghum and wheat crops -- gives farmers Producers can store grain until they can truck it to an elevator that offers the best price, or deliver it later in the crop year.

The latest grain survey research is supported by funds from the Ne-braska Soybean Development, Utilization and Marketing Board; Nebraska Com Development, Utilization and Marketing Board; and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in cooperation with the IANR's Agricultural Research Division.

'Crash' Victims

Andy Brasch, left, of Wayne, joined other members of the Northeast Nebraska Composite Squadron of the Civil Air Patrol in a mock disaster exercise recently in Missouri. The local youths served as "victims" in the drill for Air Force and Guard units. They were airlifted from Lincoln to the "crash" site after getting their made-up injuries at Offut Air Force Base. Other members of the groups shown are, from left, Michael Frohberg, Norfolk; Jeremy Wiedeman, Battle Creek, and Joey Zierks, Norfolk.

Congress to amend and revise the Endangered Species Act, seeking to provide a balance which recognizes the need for economic benefit and the importance of private property rights and to provide a mechanism to ensure balanced considerations

In addressing re-authorization of the federal Clean Water Act (CWA), the cattlemen resolved that the CWA not be expanded, construed or applied to create a national program that supersedes or impairs the state's water laws, allocations, management systems and property

Regarding taxes, the cattlemen rededicated themselves to work to shape personal and real property tax laws which are fair and help stabilize the state's economy and its climate for business.

The cattlemen also went on record as opposing any effort to reduce the level of the federal estate tax exemption below $600,000. And in an effort designed to preserve family farms, ranches and small businesses the cattlemen said they will oppose any effort to reduce the unified gift tax credit below $10,000.

A resolution generated in the Animal Health and Nutrition Committee and passed by the membership says cattlemen will work with other organizations willing to promote a total quality management program, an effort designed to build on the cattlemen's successful Beef Quality Assurance program.

In a related subject from the Marketing and Commerce Committee, the cattlemen, noting that carcass defects and condemnations are not fully communicated between packers and producers, said they support the development of standarized communications and procedures for the handling of carcass defects and condemnations

The Nebraska Cattlemen association serves as the spokesman for the state's beef cattle industry and represents nearly 5,000 cattle breeders, producers and feeders, as well as 54 county and local cattlemen's associations.

The GOLDEN YEARS Pat Lichty

World War If brought about remarkable changes in the U.S. do-mestic scene. Vast numbers of women and minorities were welcomed into the work force to achieve unprecedented industrial output. Desegregation was first tried out in the Armed Forces, on limited scale. At war's end, the GI Bill enabled millions of veterans to get college educations and buy homes with low-interest mortgages. To give today's young people insights into the significance of the war years and sacrifices of American men and women of that time, the Depart ment of Defense has set up a committee to commemorate the 50th anniversary of World War II.

Freddie Moore began his jazz ca-reer by running away from home in North Carolina to join a travel-ing show. That was early in this century, and he went on to be-come one of the great early jazz drummers, performing with Bessie Smith, King Oliver and Euble Blake. For the last 15 years he played at a New York jazz club the only one in the combo who never missed a show. At 91, he bowed out as a regular.

NEBRASKA DEPARTMENT OF ROADS NEBRASKA HIGHWAY 35 IMPROVEMENT STUDY INFORMATION OPEN HOUSE

The Nebraska Department of Roads has been studying possible improvements to a segment of Nebraska Highway 35 in Wayne, Nebraska. The area of study begins at the west corporate limits of Wayne and extends easterly for about 2 1/2 miles to a point just east of Industrial Roads Assets of Indus dustrial Road. As a part of the study process, the department has scheduled the following information open house to present the results of the study to date and to receive the public's opinion concerning this information.

Date: Wednesday, December 9, 1992 Location: City Auditorium 222 Pearl St. Wayne, Nebraska υυ p.m. 6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.

FACTS ABOUT THE SESSIONS

- 1. Interested persons may attend at any time during the above not ed hours, spending as much time as they wish.
- 2. The information open house will be informal. No formal presenta tion will be made nor will a structured meeting be held.
- 3. At each open house session, there will be opportunity to view aerial photo displays and discuss the improvements under study.
- 4. Those attending will have the opportunity to submit written comments which will be compiled into a record for review and consideration by the department.
- 5. These open house sessions are among the early information meetings which the department may hold during the development of a highway improvement. The information to be presented is in no way final as it reflects the results of only a study of possible Highway 35 improvements. If improvements are eventually programmed, specific information on design features will be presented at future—meetings/uplic hearings. meetings/public hearings.
- 6. A traffic-engineering review study document has been prepared. A copy of the study is available for inspection by any interested person at the Wayne City Clerk's office and at the Wayne Public Li-
- 7. For additional information concerning this open house, please call the Department of Roads' Project Development Division 479-4417.
