

City plan has plea for housing

for new workers.

The Wayne City Planning Commission sent a unanimous message to City Council Monday night.

In a vote rescinding an earlier 3-2 recommendation for the council to adopt a new comprehensive plan for the city, the commission voted 9-0 Monday to ask council to approved the draft plan without revision.

The unanimous vote came after discussion on several issues brought out by the public in an earlier hearing on the plan and after several pleas from business leaders to take unified action on the city's housing needs.

HOUSING shortages may potentially hamper expansion at the Great Dane Trailer Plant, said Terry Hanson, manager of the 385-job manufacturing facility.

He said the plant is considering new equipment upgrades which could provide another 100 jobs by the end of 1993, but he added the shortage of housing in Wayne may make recruitment difficult.

The Wayne plant is in consideration for the expansion project along with other communities with Great Dane plants, said Hanson. He indicated the decision may come down to something as basic as what community has better housing capabilities

WHEN HE arrived in Wayne four years ago 45 percent of the then 250 workers at the plant lived in the 68787 zip code. Now he said only about a third of the plants labor force lives in the Wayne zip. He said a quarter of his workers commute from Norfolk and Hoskins areas and another quarter come from Laurel, Carroll, Wakefield and Randolph.

With better, more affordable housing, the Wayne community could expect many of the families relying on the plant for employment to move here, he said.

Hanson said the plant expansion being considered for Wayne would boost production by an additional 25 trailers a week. He said the plant is working at full capacity now and would need to add equipment and jobs to address the increasing backorders for trailers.

"YOU SHOULD approve the plan and send it on to City Council with the strongest possible endorsement," said Andy Soll, vice president of Wayne State College. He said he was not speaking on behalf of the college but he added the one glaring need he sees in Wayne is housing.

Soll said he spent "countless" hours

On the home tour

The Wayne Rotary Club hosted the Christmas Tour of Homes on a snowy Sunday afternoon in Wayne and welcomed more than 200 tourists in out of the cold. Mark Ahmann left, served as a "Dickens" of a doorman at the Wayne County Historical Museum which was on the tour. He is shown at the old mansion's pump organ which wheezed Christmas Carols coaxed out by Norma Jean Wilber and Cari Sorensen. Also shown is Jane Ahmann who served as hostess at the mansion.

'Fantasy' draws crowds, raves

Organizers of this year's eighth annual Fantasy Forest display are terming the event a huge success.

Although no figures were available on the number of persons visiting the display last Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Wayne city auditorium, Nancy Schulz, administrative assistant at the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, said there was a steady crowd the entire time.

The display of Christmas trees was sponsored by the Wayne State College Interior Design Club and Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

Opening ceremonies were held

Thursday evening and included the welcome and acknowledgements by Lori Maruska, president of the Interior Design Club, along with lighting of the trees and Christmas carols sung by the jazz choir of Wayne-Carroll High School.

Santa Claus also arrived on Thursday evening and his visit was sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

SCHULZ said an estimated 150 persons attended the weekly Chamber coffee on Friday morning at Fantasy Forest and were treated to special music by third and fourth graders of West Elementary School in Wayne.

Presentations Friday evening

featured the First United Methodist Church bell choir, Stepping Stones Preschool, Connie Webber and Coleen Jeffries.

Schulz added that many youngsters visited the display on Saturday to have their pictures taken with Santa, and said a bake sale on Saturday sponsored by St. Mary's Church was a "huge success."

Lunch on Saturday was sponsored by the Wayne Child Day Care Board.

THIS YEAR'S Fantasy Forest display featured 40 trees decorated by several area organizations, businesses and individuals.

Schulz said no prizes for decorated trees were given this year because each tree was unique in its own way.

"From the time we are little kids we learn to compete," said Schulz. "Christmas trees are beautiful no matter what we have on them, and if we look at them in the true spirit then how can we judge one to be prettier than the others."

"We just wanted persons visiting

No shortage here

Volunteer fire districts around Nebraska are facing tough times keeping full compliments of firemen amid changing societal attitudes and increased training requirements, but Wayne seems to be running counter to the trend.

Wayne Fire Chief Dutch Sitzman said he knows other chiefs in the state have talked about manpower shortages and lack of enthusiasm for volunteers to serve on their departments, but Sitzman said he is fortunate to even have a waiting list of volunteers who want to join his department.

WITH SEVEN lawsuits pending against fire departments across the state, Sitzman, said it is little wonder the old tradition of volunteerism has fallen on hard times.

"Everyone is suing everyone and it seems like after an emergency the first person they want to sue is the fire chief," he said. Other contributing factors to the reduction in the number of volunteers coming forward willing

Road talk is Wednesday

Informational sessions to review plans for the proposed widening of Highway 35 through Wayne will be held Wednesday at the City Auditorium from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Maps and plans will be displayed for the project which is anticipated to cost over $2.2 million. Construction of the project is not scheduled until after 1997.

The plans to be presented Wednesday are not final, reports the state highway department, but rather present the findings of an initial engineering study for recommended design features.

The plans call for widening the route throughout town to provide a center turning lane. New grading alignments and resurfacing are also planned.

A major feature of the project will be to realign Dearborn Street to meet Pine Heights eliminating a problem three-street intersection near the Pamida Discount Center.

An issue created by the planned work has been the loss of 37 large trees which currently border the street but are destined to be removed by the widening project.

City plan has plea for housing

for new workers.

The Wayne City Planning Commission sent a unanimous message to City Council Monday night.

In a vote rescinding an earlier 3-2 recommendation for the council to adopt a new comprehensive plan for the city, the commission voted 9-0 Monday to ask council to approve the draft plan without revision.

The unanimous vote came after discussion on several issues brought out by the public in an earlier hearing on the plan and after several pleas from business leaders to take unified action on the city's housing needs.

HOUSING shortages may potentially hamper expansion at the Great Dane Trailer Plant, said Terry Hanson, manager of the 385-job manufacturing facility.

He said the plant is considering new equipment upgrades which could provide another 100 jobs by the end of 1993, but he added the shortage of housing in Wayne may make recruitment difficult.

The Wayne plant is in consideration for the expansion project along with other communities with Great Dane plants, said Hanson. He indicated the decision may come down to something as basic as what community has better housing capabilities

WHEN HE arrived in Wayne four years ago 45 percent of the then 250 workers at the plant lived in the 68787 zip code. Now he said only about a third of the plant's labor force lives in the Wayne zip. He said a quarter of his workers commute from Norfolk and Hoskins areas and another quarter come from Laurel, Carroll, Wakefield and Randolph.

With better, more affordable housing, the Wayne community could expect many of the families relying on the plant for employment to move here, he said.

Hanson said the plant expansion being considered for Wayne would boost production by an additional 25 trailers a week. He said the plant is working at full capacity now and would need to add equipment and jobs to address the increasing backorders for trailers.

"YOU SHOULD approve the plan and send it on to City Council with the strongest possible endorsement," said Andy Soll, vice president of Wayne State College. He said he was not speaking on behalf of the college but he added the one glaring need he sees in Wayne is housing.

Soll said he spent "countless" hours

'Fantasy' draws crowds, raves

By LaVon Anderson

Organizers of this year's eighth annual Fantasy Forest display are terming the event a huge success.

Although no figures were available on the number of persons visiting the display last Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Wayne city auditorium, Nancy Schulz, administrative assistant at the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, said there was a steady crowd the entire time.

The display of Christmas trees was sponsored by the Wayne State College Interior Design Club and Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

Opening ceremonies were held

Thursday evening and included the welcome and acknowledgements by Lori Maruska, president of the Interior Design Club, along with lighting of the trees and Christmas carols sung by the jazz choir of Wayne-Carroll High School.

Santa Claus also arrived on Thursday evening and his visit was sponsored by the Wayne Chamber of Commerce.

SCHULZ said an estimated 150 persons attended the weekly Chamber coffee on Friday morning at Fantasy Forest and were treated to special music by third and fourth graders of West Elementary School in Wayne.

Presentations Friday evening

featured the First United Methodist Church bell choir, Stepping Stones Preschool, Connie Webber and Colcen Jeffries.

Schulz added that many youngsters visited the display on Saturday to have their pictures taken with Santa, and said a bake sale on Saturday sponsored by St. Mary's Church was a "huge success."

Lunch on Saturday was sponsored by the Wayne Child Day Care Board.

THIS YEAR'S Fantasy Forest display featured 40 trees decorated by several area organizations, businesses and individuals.

Schulz said no prizes for decorated trees were given this year because each tree was unique in its own way.

"From the time we are little kids we learn to compete," said Schulz. "Christmas trees are beautiful no matter what we have on them, and if we look at them in the true spirit then how can we judge one to be prettier than the others."

No shortage here

Volunteer fire districts around Nebraska are facing tough times keeping full compliments of firemen amid changing societal attitudes and increased training requirements, but Wayne seems to be running counter to the trend.

Wayne Fire Chief Dutch Sitzman said he knows other chiefs in the state have talked about manpower shortages and lack of enthusiasm for volunteers to serve on their departments, but Sitzman said he is fortunate to even have a waiting list of volunteers who want to join his department.

WITH SEVEN lawsuits pending against fire departments across the state, Sitzman, said it is little wonder the old tradition of volunteerism has fallen on hard times.

"Everyone is suing everyone and it seems like after an emergency the first person they want to sue is the fire chief," he said. Other contributing factors to the reduction in the number of volunteers coming forward willing

Road talk is Wednesday

Informational sessions to review plans for the proposed widening of Highway 35 through Wayne will be held Wednesday at the City Auditorium from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Maps and plans will be displayed for the project which is anticipated to cost over $2.2 million. Construction of the project is not scheduled until after 1997.

The plans to be presented Wednesday are not final, reports the state highway department, but rather present the findings of an initial engineering study for recommended design features.

The plans call for widening the route throughout town to provide a center turning lane. New grading alignments and resurfacing are also planned.

A major feature of the project will be to realign Dearborn Street to meet Pine Heights eliminating a problem three-street intersection near the Pamida Discount Center.

An issue created by the planned work has been the loss of 37 large trees which currently border the street but are destined to be removed by the widening project.

Jones Intercable will be providing remote outlets for three rooms in the high school for production and broadcasting. The art room, the assembly hall and the media center will be wired for broadcasting.

Phone records of state senators should be open

The high-handed Nebraska legislature's leadership board has rejected a request by the state auditor to review phone records of state senators.

Citing the need to keep information passed between senators and their constituents confidential to protect the constituents who often discuss sensitive topics and issues, the senate leadership has told the auditor to go fly a kite.

All other state officials have their phone records checked to make sure they are not abusing the taxpayer funded phone system for private use. But not state senators.

We can understand why the governor's phone use should be open for scrutiny but the senators should not. The senators are taking an unreasonable position. If there is something sensitive, (or unethical and illegal) that they feel they should discuss with a constituent why not call them back on a private line.

Taxpayers should not be expected to foot the bill for every Tom, Dick and Harry that wants to use the statehouse phone system to lobby on an issue or court a favor. Since when do lobbyists have a right to privacy when they are trying to persuade their state lawmakers to pass some new law? Even the most minute change in the state system of government or minute expenditure of state tax funds should come under public scrutiny.

Revered Sen. Jerome Wamer argues that senator phone privilege is no different than the shield law which protects reporters from divulging their sources.

We submit there is are huge differences. First, reporters are not using tax dollars to fund their phone use. Secondly, reporters are not given the responsibility (thank goodness) of passing laws and taxing their constituents.

The phones used by those with these special privileges should be open to scrutiny. We encourage the state auditor and the state attorney general to proceed with legal action to settle the question in the courts.

Former senators not taking defeat lightly

Capitol News
By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Apparently, some people aren't taking the Nov. 3 election results very well.

At least, for sure, they're not taking them sitting down.

State Sen. Carson Rogers of Ord, who apparently lost the seat in the Legislature he'd held for eight years, went to court to try to keep it. He said his 41st District opponent, Jerry Schmitt, was ineligible to even run for the Legislature because he already had a state job as a state trooper.

To Lynda Thorpe, the losing candidate in District 3, apparently that sounded like a heck of an idea. She is now planning a similar challenge against her opponent, Mike Avery, who works for the State Game and Parks Commission.

Rogers lost a bout in court trying to get Schmitt disqualified, but it seems likely that both Rogers and Thorpe will take their cases to the Legislature when it convenes in January. The Legislature decides election disputes involving its own people.

So now we're with faced the possibility, depending on how the Legislature views things, that the candidates who most of the people wanted to represent them in Lincoln may not end up getting there.

And you know what? Regardless of what you think about the propriety of the challenges, which a lot of people think stink, legally, they may be right.

Our constitution says no person holding "any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in the Legislature."

So is being a state trooper or working for Game and Parks a "lucrative office under the authority of the state?"

Well, it sure seems to be when you consider the Nebraska Supreme Court decision last year where they made Jerry Conway quit his job as a teacher while in the Legislature because the judges considered a teaching position to be "a lucrative office."

So, like I said, legally, they may be right. But should they have filed?

I think I know where Rogers is coming from. He thinks the reason Schmitt beat him was because he was a state trooper, traveling around the district, in effect campaigning while on the job. So if being a trooper helped him win the election, being a trooper should also knock him out, in Rogers' mind.

But to come in after the election and try to get someone disqualified smacks of being a sore loser. And the fact of the matter is, if Rogers and Thorpe win, they could end up representing a district in which the majority of people voting didn't want them. How can that sit with the people they represent?

That would be a heck of a deal. Kind of makes you wonder why we even had the election.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

In courts and politics:

There is some good, common sense

Sounds to me like we should put this common-sense barrister on the Supreme Court.

More good common sense

We haven't heard the last of Ed Jaksha. Fresh from his victory in the term limit campaign, Ed is sounding like he wants to fight to place some other limits on the government process like campaign financing reform, the number of days the legislature can meet, requiring a vote of the people for any tax increase, and establishing new systems of accountability.

Many in the state would call Ed an extremist. Heck, Ed himself might admit to being a little outside the mainstream of political herdsmanship. But, there should be a beatitude about extremists. "Blessed be the radicals, for they shall occasionally cause the meek to do what is right."

For what it's worth, I think we should be campaigning now, for the Presidential line item veto, extension of the term limits to every state and a federal balanced budget amendment.

That's "out of the mainstream" thinking too, but then a year ago the idea of term limits in Nebraska was thought to be pretty radical too.

But, nobody convinced Ed.

His vote counted

Then comes the story out of Randolph, N.Y. about the voter who went to the election last month and seeing no names on the ballot for town judge, he wrote in his own name.

You guessed it, he's the new town judge. He won, one vote to none. The town voted to abolish the judge's position after 1993 so no one ran for the one year office that handles minor city court cases.

But the position carries a salary of $8,000 a year, which the city appears to be obligated to pay to its duly elected judge.

Who says it doesn't pay to vote.

Teenagers often complain that there is nothing to do.

Since there is "nothing to do" they use that as an excuse when they get into trouble.

A clipping dropped off by a reader recently has a message worth repeating for the benefit of these teenagers and their parents.

The clipping quotes advice by Denver Judge Philip Gilliam under the headline, "Nothing to do."

"GO HOME," the judge says. "Hang storm windows, paint the woodwork, rake leaves, mow the lawn, shovel the snow. Wash the car, learn to cook, scrub the floors."

Repair the sink, build a boat, get a job. Help the minister, priest or rabbi. Visit the sick, help the poor, study your lessons. And when you are through—and not too tired, read a good book.

"Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your city and village does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and your talents so that no one will be at war in poverty or sick or lonely again."

"In plain simple words: Grow up, quit being a cry baby, get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like a man or lady. You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years. They have nursed, protected, helped, appealed, begged, excused, tolerated and denied themselves many things so that you could have every benefit."

"This they have done gladly, for you are their dearest treasure. But now, you have no right to expect them to bow to every whim and fancy just because selfish ego dominates your personality, thinking and requests. In Heaven's name, grow up and go home."

How about a tie—NOT!

Gift hints for family members

Noodlehead Acres

By Raisin I. Brows

aka Merlin Wright

Thinking about family Christmas gifts? Haven't started? The bad part of not starting - you can't stop and rest. Following your morning transfusion of coffee, maybe you should start? How about a shirt for dad? Might be difficult getting the right size. He must have had a super build before his stomach went in for a career of its own.

Forget the shirt, get a tie as one size fits all. On second thought, ties are on the way out, at least for non-business occasions. President Bush is often without a tie, and President-elect Clinton runs around without a tie that binds...except for Hillary. What historical schmuck first tied a rag around his neck, looked in a confused mirror, and thought he was handsome? Poor duck. In years past a young man in his early thirties might wear the neck-rop and look extinguished. Bobby Lookgood, here in the Acres, is one of those guys who occasionally lets his mind go blank, then forgets to turn off the sound, nevertheless, he has six ties - each a different width - in his closet. As the width style changes, he just digs into his stockpile for a currently stylish width. He's sworn never to wear a tie even at his wife's splurging.

Men with lived-in faces need a tie. They're often seen in church wearing taut ties causing them to lean back and twiddle their eyelids. Airline pilots wear ties. Company policy. One pilot flying for Dis-united Airlines wore his tie so tight it made his eyebrows look like they were on stilts.

A wife may order her hubby to wear a tie. Of course a man is free to choose his own form of government. She can be blonde, brunette or redhead. Ladies are lucky. Instead of wearing a patterned $20 noose around the neck, they prefer wearing a $1,200 diamond on the wedding finger. Both items shut down one's circulation. Before you buy a gift for hubby, decide whether you're the hitched or hitchee, the attached or attachee. Then buy.

HUBBIES WILL likely wait until Dec. 24 before getting that special something for the better half. Homer Morefun is getting his wife Dora a bathing suit. He says it's hard to get the right size as all the ones he's seen her wear permitted "standing room only". Dora works as a deceptionist in the front office of a law firm. She must look her best so she's suggesting Homer buy her cosmetics. She says her problem is that as the day wears on, her face wears off. She claims her smiles use a lot of face and she therefore needs a cover up.

Many wives would be happy if hubbies would just give them the gift of having the last word occasionally. As you know, buying for her can be a real challenge, since you're torn between vice and versa. Be candid with your sweetheart, as was Homer who, in a moment of confession, told Dora "I'm a self-made man, but in retrospect, if I had to do it over again, I'd call you in as an expert."

TOGETHER YOU must decide what to get the kids. Most families would do well if they worked on getting the following year-long gifts for their children. How about giving them a mother and father; a family around-the-table-dinner at least once a day; a bedroom of their own where they can fantasize, dream, and hide from a screwball world; a warm hug everyday; a look of pride from mom and pops while performing in the school play, band or choir; memories of the family sitting together in church each week; a gift of discipline mandating the child learn respect for himself, herself and others; entertaining your children's friends on special occasions; yelling yourself hoarse cheering for your offspring in athletic competition; more surprise hugs; being a role model having lips that always tell the truth; a moment of sharing with your child even if it is your busiest hour; permit your child to see you weep in a moment of sorrow due to the loss of someone you loved; more hugs; turn off the television sewage; visit grandparents and share smiling faces; above all, the gift of three words, on a regular basis, "I love you!" Most children would trade any material gift in the world for these "mustables". If you haven't already given such treasures, try it, they'll like it, and love you for a lifetime.

Guaranteed.
GOTTA GO! As Wayne goes to sleep at night, window by window, think about tomorrow and remember how upsetting it is to have company drop by when the house looks the way it always does!

Reader applauds the disbanding of buses

Dear Editor:

My hat is off to the District 17 school board and the new superintendent.

It took a lot of courage to get rid of the buses - a procedure that had been in existence for that long a time.

I think the benefits of this decision are tremendous. First on the list is the school can forget about keeping buses running and use that time to concentrate on education. Next is a new company will be in town hiring drivers and mechanics and buying their own buses and equipment.

Besides saving the district a lot of money, they will also be paying taxes to help support the schools and all the other tax supported organizations.

Thanks a lot school board. You have given us a nice Christmas gift.

Lee Swinney

P.S. Now if only some of our other leaders could see that same light.

'TIS THE SEASON

Moderation. Moderation. Moderation! That's the word that is important every day, every week, every month! This time of the year, it becomes even more important. Most of us cannot resist the "goodies" of the season. Remember to limit those calories. Don't neglect your exercise program. Muscles will grow if exercised regularly. Your body uses more calories to feed the muscles and eventually draws on body fat. Exercise and keep the "goodies" to a MODERATE intake.

Blue Devils down Battle Creek in season opener

Wayne defeats number one C-1 team

The Wayne Blue Devils opened up their basketball campaign on the road at Battle Creek last Friday, as Bob Uhing's troops tackled the defending state champs in Class C-1 and the pre-season favorite to win it all again this season.

Wayne is also seeking to have a quality season and they got off to a good start with a 74-71 victory over the Braves. The Blue Devils found themselves trailing 41-32 early in the third quarter before scoring eight unanswered points in less than two minutes.

"The eight-point run was a matter of our defense stopping them and getting out on a fast break and converting," Uhing said.

Wayne led the host team 20-17 after the first quarter but the Braves doubled the score on the Blue Devils, 20-10 in the second period to take a seven point lead into the locker room at 37-30.

Wayne tallied 26, third quarter points and out-scored Battle Creek by eight to take a one point lead into the final period at 56-55. With time running down in the third quarter senior Jack Swinney came off the bench and connected with a long three-point field goal as time ran out to put the Blue Devils on top.

"Jack hit a very big shot," Uhing said. "That turned out to be the difference in the game." Wayne led most of the fourth quarter and had stretched the lead to five with under two minutes remaining. Matt Blomenkamp and Regg Carnes hit crucial free throws down the stretch forcing the Braves to take errant three-point field goal attempts in which time expired.

"I thought we played well and hard," Uhing said. "Our juniors really did a nice job throughout the game and in the fourth quarter our veterans kind of took over."

Uhing said his squad did a nice job of playing together. "We just took what their defense gave us," Uhing said. "I think the key to our season will be how we improve from week-to-week."

The Blue Devils showed good balance in scoring as Blomenkamp led the way with 17 while Carnes poured in 15. Bobby Barnes scored 10 and Brad Uhing added nine while Robert Bell and Mike Fluent scored eight each. Arnold Schwartz and Swinney rounded out the attack with four and three points respectively.

Wayne's height advantage was a factor on the boards, 42-29 as Bell and Fluent led the way with nine and eight caroms respectively. Wayne had 19 turnovers in the opener while Battle Creek had 10.

Wayne connected on 12 of 16 free throws while the host team was 19-28. Unfortunately, for the Blue Devils, there won't be a lot of time to savor the win because Saturday, they play pre-season number five Columbus Lakeview in the home opener.

Wayne's reserve team was defeated by the Braves, 63-33. Ryan Pick led Wayne with nine points.

Blue Devils defeat Pierce by 15

Wayne gals win opener

The Wayne girls basketball team opened the 1992-93 season at home, Saturday against Pierce and the Blue Devils debut was a success to the tune of a 15-point victory, 56-41.

Wayne and Pierce were tied at 12 after the first quarter but the Blue Devils out-scored the visiting Bluejays, 15-1 in the second quarter to open up a 14-point halftime lead of 27-13.

Pierce cut the lead to 12 at the end of the third quarter at 37-25 but Wayne scored 19, fourth quarter points to win by the final margin of 15. "The second quarter really hurt Pierce," Wayne coach Marlene Uhing said. "You take that away and we only out-scored them by one point."

Uhing said she was pleased with the inside play of her team with post players Erin Pick, Jenny Thomsen and Angie Thompson. "I thought all our post people played well," Uhing said. "Erin really had a nice game. Her quickness is an asset but I think she's stronger this year than she was last season and that helps."

The Wayne mentor said her team shot the ball pretty well for the first game and they took better care of the basketball than they did in most of their games last season.

"I guess the major thing we need to work on is improving our defense to play hard for four quarters," Uhing said. "We really let up in the second half and we can't afford to do that. Also, we had a lot of scoring opportunities in the second half on fast breaks after breaking the Pierce press but we didn't convert like we should have."

Pick led Wayne in scoring with 16 points while Liz Reeg and Susie Enz poured in 14 apiece. Jenny Thompson added six points while Carrie Fink and Angie Thompson netted two each. Daniell Nelson and Amy Post rounded out the scoring with one point each.

Wayne narrowly won the battle of the boards, 29-28 as Reeg and Pick finished with six and five rebounds respectively to lead the Blue Devils. Wayne had 16 turnovers but forced Pierce into 20. The Blue Devils were 16-24 from the foul line while the Bluejays were 3-8. Nelson led Wayne in assists with seven.

Wayne will remain at home on Thursday for a contest with Battle Creek.

Seven medal at Creighton Invitational

Winside wrestlers third

Paul Sok's Winside wrestling team gave him a pleasant surprise at the Creighton Invitational, Saturday with a third place finish and 126.5 points.

"Coming into the meet we had projected a fourth or fifth place finish and about 85 points," Sok said. "I was pleased with our overall performance."

Neligh-Oakdale ran away and hid from the rest of the field in the team race with 217 points while Creighton placed runner-up with 164. Following the Wildcats was Norfolk Catholic with 109.5 and Norfolk reserves with 61.

Pender placed sixth with 45.5 and Plainview was seventh with 42 while Osmond tallied 36 points for eighth place. Clearwater/Ewing was ninth with 25 and Tilden-Elkhorn Valley with 20 points placed 10th. Pierce rounded out the field of teams with five points.

Seven Winside wrestlers came away with medals including two champions, three runner-ups, one third and one fourth place effort. Nine Wildcat grapplers won matches.

At 103 pounds Scott Jacobsen decided Mike Matteo of Norfolk Catholic, 10-3 to win the championship while at 135 pounds Chris Mann won a 5-3 decision over Jason Overholt of Creighton to win first place.

Jason Topp was pinned by Neligh's Josh Cameron in the championship leaving him with a runner-up finish while Brady Frahm at 152, lost a 2-1 decision to Creighton's Todd Zimmerer.

Frahm wrestled very well on the day, defeating Class D's state runner-up from a year ago in Eric Beckman of Pender (for the second time this season) and losing a 2-1 decision to Class C's state runner-up from a year ago.

Heavyweight Donnie Nelson was pinned by Jeremy Martunson of Neligh in the finals for Winside's third runner-up finish. Freshman Josh Jaeger at 119, pinned Neligh's Nathan Johnson for third place honors while Jason Wylie was decided by a 4-0 count from Norfolk's Jerrod Sanderson in the third place match.

Although they didn't place, Adrian Boelter at 125 and Dave Paulsen at 189 won their first matches of the season. Steve Svatos, Lonnie Grothe and Kyle Frederick also competed for the Wildcats but did not win a match. Lucas Mohr also competed at 112 as a reserve but did not place.

Sok's troops will step out of the frying pan from the Creighton Invitational and jump right into the fire this Saturday when they travel to compete in the North Bend Invitational which features competition from Class B and predominantly Class C teams.

Laurel girls and boys lose at Crofton in Warriors gym debut

Both the Laurel girls and boys traveled to play Crofton last Friday and both Bears teams were defeated. The number 13 proved to be unlucky for Laurel as Mike Zimmerman's girls team fell by a 64-51 margin while Clayton Steele's squad was defeated, 66-53.

The Lady Bears led the fourth-rated Crofton team 29-27 after the first half in the first basketball game ever held at the new Crofton gym. Crofton came out and out-scored Laurel, 15-6 in the third quarter to lead by seven, 42-35.

"We had several chances in the fourth quarter to cut the lead but Crofton responded every time," Zimmerman said. "In the second half they changed their defense and it really slowed us down."

Amy Peters led the Bears with 18 points while Samantha Felber poured in nine. Betsy Adkins tallied eight points while Leann Stewart and Brandi Mathiason scored six each. Heather Thomas rounded out the attack with four points.

Laurel was just 1-4 from the free throw line while Crofton was 12-16. The Bears will host Winside on Tuesday.

In the boys game Laurel led 15-12 after the first period but trailed 29-27 at the half. The host team, however, doubled the score on the Bears in the third quarter, 16-8 to take a 10-point lead into the final period.

"Crofton really hurt us on the offensive boards," Steele said. "They played a very aggressive game and we ended up losing two players because of fouls."

Sophomore Jeremy Reinohl led Laurel with 18 points while Andy Smith scored 14. Travis Monson finished with 11 while Jared Reinohl and Cody Carstensen scored three each. Kris Kric and Derek Ehlers rounded out the scoring with two points apiece.

"Besides checking out on the boards better we also have to handle the ball against the press better," Steele said. The Bears will get a chance to do that on Tuesday when they host 2-0 Winside.

Winside boys win again

Shannon Pospisil's Winside boys basketball team converted back-to-back victories for the Wildcats for the first time in several years to start the season as they blasted Wynot, 61-45 last Friday in Winside.

"We led the whole way but I was never comfortable," Pospisil said. "We'd get a good lead and Wynot would connect on a couple three-pointers to close the gap a little more."

Winside led 9-6 after the first quarter and 22-10 at the intermission. The Wildcats led by 19 after three quarters at 40-21. "We executed our offense very well," Pospisil said. "In fact, we did a much better job of running the offense against Wynot than we did the night before against Allen."

Pospisil said one of the keys to his team's early success is the way they are hitting the boards hard and hustling. "We have some younger players who are producing and our seniors are getting the job done both on the boards and in scoring," Pospisil said.

John Hancock paced the Wildcat offense with 21 points while Cory Miller added 16. Cam Shelton finished with 11 and Ryan Brogren scored nine. Jayme Shelton and Colby Jensen rounded out the scoring with two each.

The Wildcats won the battle of the boards, 37-28 as Miller hauled down a game-high 18 caroms. Brogren had 11 boards and Shelton had 10. Winside also did a nice job of handling the ball with just 11 turnovers while Wynot had 18.

Trojans off to 2-0 start

The old sports adage that offense wins games but defense wins championships is how Wakefield's boys played the game with Bancroft-Rosalie, Saturday in Bancroft.

Brad Hoskin's team gave the host Panthers a loss in their first game of the year with a 47-42 victory, leaving Wakefield with a 2-0 start on the season and both wins coming in enemy territory.

"It's a tough way to open the season with two straight road games against quality teams," Hoskins said. "We feel great to come out undefeated." Wakefield led 14-8 after the first quarter and 24-20 at the intermission.

Bancroft tightened the gap to one point at the end of the third quarter, at 34-33 but Wakefield out-scored the host team, 13-9 in the final stanza.

The Trojans defense proved to be the key as they recorded 21 steals in the game leading directly to 33 Panther turnovers. Wakefield suffered 25 turnovers but Hoskins believes that it wasn't a matter of his team being sloppy but being tired.

"We were mentally tired and physically drained," Hoskins said. "We're still basically playing with just seven guys and the wear and tear from two straight games on the road had its effect."

Larry Johnson led Wakefield

with 14 points while Cory Brown was in double figures with 10. Ben Dutton, T.J. Preston and Cody Skinner each tallied six points while Miah Johnson scored three and Ryan Ekberg, two.

Wakefield won the battle of the boards, 37-28 with Dutton and Brown hauling down 12 caroms each while Larry Johnson, Miah Johnson and Preston had four rebounds apiece. Larry Johnson had five steals while Brown and Miah Johnson each had four thefts.

The only area Wakefield struggled in was free throw shooting where they went 7-18 while Bancroft was 7-12.

Wayne State women notch first wins at Loper Classic

The Wayne State women's basketball team traveled to take part in the Best Western Tel-Star Lady Loper Classic in Kearney over the weekend and Mike Barry's squad came away with their first two wins of the year with a 2-1 record.

The Wildcats played South Dakota in the first game and fell, 74-68 after trailing by 11 at the intermission, 37-26. Lisa Chamberlin led the 'Cats with 18 points while Linda Heller poured in 14.

Jodi Otjen was also in double figures with 11 while Mary Schnitzler scored eight. Brenda Te Grotenhuis finished with six points and Lynn Nohr scored four while Kristy Twait added three. Cheri VanAuker and Robyn Wiese scored two each.

The Wildcats were stung by USD's Shelby Peterson who poured in 28 points including four, three-pointers. WSC was out-rebounded, 35-33 with Otjen leading the 'Cats with eight caroms. Chamberlin led WSC in assists with three.

WSC suffered 24 turnovers while USD had 20. In the free throw category WSC was 10-15 and USD was 6-9.

Last Friday the Wildcats notched their first win of the season and it came against a top notch team in Metro State of Colorado, 70-66.

Lisa Chamberlin enjoyed her finest career day as a collegiate basketball player, scoring 29 points and hauling down 16 rebounds including six offensive caroms.

"Beating a team like Metro State is a big confidence booster for our team," Wayne State coach Mike Barry said. "They won 22 games last year and they're talking about winning more than that this season with what they had coming back."

The 'Cats opened up a seven-point halftime lead at 34-27 but Metro State came out strong in the second half and led by three at one point. "We had our backs to the wall in the second half but we didn't give up and ended up beating a pretty good team."

Barry said his whole team put forth a quality effort despite the fact that Chamberlin had career highs in both scoring and rebounding. "We came out against Metro State ready to play," Barry said.

Jodi Otjen was also in double figures with 12 points while Lynn Nohr scored nine. Brenda Te Grotenhuis added seven and Cheri VanAuker netted five while Mary Schnitzler and Linda Heller scored four each.

The 'Cats dominated the boards, 48-35 and Chamberlin's 16 caroms were followed by Otjen's nine rebounds while Heller and Te Grotenhuis hauled down five apiece.

Schnitzler dished out five assists to lead the winners while Nohr and Chamberlin had two steals each. WSC had 20 turnovers while Metro State had 13. The 'Cats were 25-35 in free-throw shooting and Metro State was 21-35.

On Saturday the Wildcats defeated the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, 67-59 out-scoring their opponent's by eight in the second half to break a 29-29 halftime tie.

Mary Schnitzler paced the WSC offense with 22 points with a 7-11 shooting performance from the floor. Brenda Te Grotenhuis tallied 14 points and Linda Heller scored 12 while Lisa Chamberlin added nine. Cheri VanAuker added four points while Ann Kramer, Jodi Otjen and Lynn Nohr added two each.

The 'Cats were out-rebounded, 39-33 despite seven caroms from Otjen and six from Heller. Nohr dished out five assists and Chamberlin had three blocked shots—both team bests.

WSC suffered 22 turnovers while UCSS had 23. The 'Cats were 21-29 from the foul line while UCSS was 15-21. "A lot of players really came through for us during the whole tournament," Barry said. "We went out there with just 10 players because of injuries and sickness but we performed well."

Barry said the six-team tournament was very even as four of the teams went 2-1 and Kearney went 1-2 while UCSS went 0-3. "Hastings came in with a 9-0 record and Metro State came in with a 5-0 record," Barry said. "Metro State beat Hastings and we beat Metro State. Overall, it was a good tournament."

WSC will now stay at home for the next five games, hosting Concordia on Tuesday night and South Dakota in a rematch on Wednesday.

Drowsiness: Beneficial Drug Side Effect?

Most drugs cause side effects. Medicines used for depression often cause drowsiness. During daytime hours, this "side effect" seldom is desired and may last for only a few hours. However, the antidepressant effect may persist 24 hours or longer, and some of these medicines can be taken as infrequently as once daily. When such an antidepressant is taken before bedtime, the drowsiness produced as a side effect helps the user sleep. Because many depressed persons have sleeping difficulties, bedtime drowsiness is a beneficial side effect. Similarly, the antihistamines used in over-the-counter (OTC) cold and allergy products, can be sedating. An antihistamine is the active ingredient in many OTC sleep aids because of its side effect drowsiness.

Waldbaums honored by Extension

Members of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Association (NCEA) presented awards and elected officers for 1993 at their annual meeting in Grand Island Nov. 18 to 20.

The organization, composed of extension agents and specialists throughout Nebraska, presented the 1992 Friend of NCEA Award to Butch Utemark, director of operations for M.G. Waldbaum Co. of Wakefield. The Waldbaum firm was cited for contributions to northeastern Nebraska and to extension in support of economic development, farm management, small business development and local and state awards.

Susan Rissinger, farm director of Radio Station WJAG of Norfolk, received the 1992 NCEA Media Award. Rissinger and the station were cited for daily interviews with extension staff, public service announcements, coverage of county fairs and support of educational programs.

The NCEA Outstanding Service Award went to Madeline Pedersen of Norfolk, extension agent-home economics in Madison County. Pedersen was recognized for contributions to home economics, 4-H and educational programs for people of all ages.

New officers of NCEA for 1992 are Dottie Callahan, extension agent-chair in Douglas County, Omaha, president; Larry Schulze, pesticide coordinator, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, president-elect; Myrna Powell, extension agent-communications in Douglas County, Omaha, vice president; Dianne Zeilinger, extension agent-chair in Seward County, Seward, secretary; and Don Huls, extension agent-chair in Dawes County, Chadron, treasurer.

NCEA sections for agricultural agents, home economists, 4-H agents and specialists also elected officers and presented awards during the meeting. Agent and specialist members of NCEA are members of University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension, a division of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Local extension agents also hold joint appointments with counties. Following is a summary of the new officers and award winners in the four professional sections.

Agricultural Agents Sections: Bob Stritzke, Fairbury, president; Andrew Christiansen, Aurora, president-elect; Jim Hruskoci, Grand Island, vice president; Larry Howard, West Point, secretary; Larry Peterson, Grant, treasurer. Awards: Keith Glewen, Wahoo and James Peterson, Blair, distinguished service; Larry Howard, West Point, agricultural achievement.

Home Economists Section: Jeanette Friesen, Aurora, president; Leanne Manning, Wilber, president-elect; Sharon Nielsen, Minden, vice president; Leslie Crandall, Holdrege, secretary; Connie Francis, North Platte, treasurer. Awards:

Sharon Skipton, Papillion and Jeanette Friesen, Aurora, distinguished service; Jayne Decker, Grand Island, outstanding new agent and continuing excellence.

Specialists Section: Vickie Greve, Wakefield, president; Linda Boeckner, Scottsbluff, president-elect; Terry Mader, Wayne, secretary-treasurer. Awards: Jim Emal, Wilber and DeLynn Hay, Waverly, distinguished service; Larry Schulze, Lincoln, outstanding new specialist.

Smokers out in cold

Smokers will likely be out in the cold at Wayne school buildings after the Jan. 12, school board meeting.

The board has heard the proposed draft of a new smoke free policy for school buildings which is expected to be passed at the January meeting.

The buildings will be posted for no smoking and both faculty, staff and members of the public will face penalties including banishment from the schools if they violate the policy after a first warning.

Fire

to risk life and limb for others, includes the new requirements for fire training, the safety concerns over chemical and other contaminants in an emergency setting and the load of paperwork that now accompanies the job.

"The paperwork is unreal," said the Wayne chief. He added the chief's job takes about half of his time and of that, the bulk of his duties are made up pushing paper. "We have to fill out four reports on every fire call," he said.

HE SAID HE fears that the volunteers will soon be required to hold firefighter certification certificates. There's a move afoot to require certification in Iowa. He said he is authorized to conduct the 72-hour training sessions and that already several of the Wayne firemen are certified.

In spite of all the problems facing firemen, Sitzman said his department is very fortunate to have a supportive community and a good group of volunteers with a courageous attitude willing to help others.

He cited as an example, the support his department gets from the community for the Firemen's Dance, which was held last week. The fund raiser helps pay for training and new equipment.

An Associated Press report this week outlined problems other fire chiefs are having in the state.

"WE'RE LOSING the old-timers faster than we're recruiting new people to replace them," said Jim Lawson of Gering, president of the Nebraska State Volunteer Firefighters Association.

State Fire Marshal Mike Durst said he notices the aging departments on his visits across the state.

"I'll look around and everybody there is my age and older - 40 or something. Some are even 50," he said.

Nationally, the ranks of volunteers dropped by 12.6 percent from 1983 to 1990, according to statistics compiled by the National Fire Protection Association.

There aren't similar statistics available on Nebraska volunteers, but officials say it's happening here.

For instance, when Dale Thomas joined the Auburn Fire Department in 1978, he had to wait for an opening. Now, as fire chief, his roster of 35 is five short of being full.

"Years ago, if you were a fireman, all you had to know was where your boots and coat were," Durst said.

Now, most volunteer departments include training for dealing with hazardous wastes, medical emergencies and new ways of fighting fires.

An average firefighter spends 40 to 80 hours a year in training, said Mike Stromitis, executive board member of the state association and a member of the North Platte Volunteer Fire Department.

"That takes a lot of time out of family life," he said.

Some say departments don't receive as much respect as they did in the past.

"In the old days, we put the wet stuff on the red stuff, and when we were done, everybody patted us on the back and said what a fine job we did," Stromitis said. "Today they say: 'How come you let all this damage or poked a hole in the roof?'" participating as a private citizen in the formulation of the new plan for Wayne and added, "I'm convinced that for us to progress, we need to address the housing issue."

He said jobs growth indicated by Great Dane, The First National of Omaha Credit Card Center, Heritage Homes, Restful Knights and the college all were evidence of the strength of the community but he said we should take action to keep from sliding back.

CARL JOHNSON, whose farm borders the city and whose land is designated as urban reserve in the plan, again appeared before the commission to ask that the urban reserve identification be changed to strictly agriculture.

He said he understands more about the process and the reason for the designation and acknowledges that the official zoning and use of his land will not change unless he decides, yet he said the removal of the urban reserve designation might eliminate nuisance calls from developers and speculators who might eye his family farm for future housing developments.

"I wonder if there is really a need for it," he said.

Commission Chairman George Phelps pointed out that Johnson's farm is bordered on three sides by urban developments now.

Contract is renewed

The Wayne Community Schools board of education voted to extend the contract of Superintendent Dennis Jensea following an executive session to review his salary and performance.

Dr. Jensen, who joined the district last summer, had been initially given a two year contract but the board's action last week extended the contract through the 1994-95 school year.

The board also set his salary for next year at $58,200.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK'S SENIOR CITIZEN CORNER

MINING ELDERS' FEARS FOR PROFIT: Several shameless persons are, once again, trading on the fears of seniors to turn big profits for themselves. This time, the fear comes in an official-looking envelope that carries a blazing message on the front — "All the Social Security Trust Fund Money is Gone." Inside, the letter — signed by George Murphy, the late former senator from California — invites the reader to join a group called United Seniors that will fight to save the fund, and suggests that along with the membership dues, the reader should contribute more money to — as they promise — keep the fight going.

The fact is, the Social Security trust fund is not — I repeat, NOT — in danger. Keep that in mind no matter who, or what organization may try to persuade you otherwise — for a price. Also be wary of another letter about to be sent out by another group warning that the government is taxing seniors on their Social Security benefits. This, too, is intended as a fund raiser to fight a non-existent battle.

As for United Seniors, the New York Times (November 12) notes that the organization has no lobbyist working in behalf of seniors' causes — especially Social Security and Medicare — and has no one on its staff known to be an expert in matters of interest to seniors. It's headed by Richard A. Vigurie, a leader of the New Right Movement. Ironically, the late Senator Murphy, whose name was used on Mr. Vigurie's letter, voted against Medicare in 1965, and Patrick Buchanan, whom Mr. Vigurie supported for president, suggested Social Security be made voluntary — a move that would have destroyed the system in a few years.

The best means of protecting these benefits is by putting pressure on your congressperson — and the only expense you'll incur is the price of a letter or phone call. And if this preceding column sounds vaguely familiar, it's because just a few years ago, another shameless former politician used similar scare tactics to raise funds for his use.

OWL'S NEW FLIGHT PLAN: Last week, I told you that OWL (Older Women's League) received a $100,000 grant from the Administration on Aging to fund a 17-month national eldercare information project. I've since received more news: Much of the focus will be on the nearly seven million Americans — most of them women — who are the unpaid caregivers for elderly people. They will be given essential information that will aid them in their caregiving. They will also have the opportunity to share their perspectives on caregiving with medical professionals. For more information on caregiving issues, call OWL toll free at 1-800-825-3695.

SECTION B

Thai winter not just the same thing as Nebraska

November 20: Greetings from Thailand! Quite an interval has passed since I last wrote a column for publication "back home." I'll try to give you an update on what I've been doing and some of the highlights of the past few months.

One of my ongoing activities has been to teach village mothers' groups how to make "natural shampoo." This consists of standard shampoo base products which they must combine and cook. Then peeled and strained aloe vera leaves are added along with filtered juice from kaffir limes. Both the limes and aloe vera are readily available in most villages.

The resulting shampoo product is inexpensive to make and can be sold in the market for a good profit. Primarily, it's an easy and fun way for me to introduce myself to a village.

ANOTHER project I'm currently working on is a small scale pig-raising project with a village rural development group. I helped them locate funds for their project.

They are currently raising the pigs with the resulting profits to be used for a revolving fund for group members.

I have also been doing some traveling. In July I accompanied a group of university students to see the annual Candle Festival, marking the beginning of Buddhist Lent, in Ubon Ratchatani province.

There was a spectacular evening celebration complete with fireworks, as well as a parade the following day featuring 20-ft. high yellow-orange wax sculptures depicting mythological figures, scenes from the life of the Buddha, etc.

There were also troupes of Thai classical dancers arrayed in their stunning traditional costumes, Northeastern Thai music and a bewildering variety of things for sale — food of all sorts, Thai silk products, clothes, jewelry, etc.

FOR MY birthday in August, I journeyed to Nongkhai, the principal border town with Laos on the Mekhong River. The Laotian capital of Vientiane is situated directly across the river.

My Turn Guest Column

There is a fascinating market here with cheap silver products from Laos, even cheaper (in quality) goods from the former Soviet Union — watches, military surplus, etc. — French bread, baskets, silk, ad infinitum...a mind-boggling array of goods!

I stayed in a guest house upon the banks of the Mekhong and spent my mornings eating French bread (a visible sign of former French colonial rule) on the porch overlooking the river, watching a small ferry boat ply the waters between the two nations.

In September my parents and sister visited. It was great to finally see them again after nearly 1 1/2 years. During their visit we traveled to Kanchanaburi — location of the famous bridge over the River Kwai; Chiang Mai province in Northern Thailand, reputed to be the most beautiful area in Thailand; and Sukothai, an ancient former capital studded with impressive ruins of great halls, temples, pillars, and the ubiquitous Buddha images.

MORE recently I've been sticking pretty close to home. The rice fields have changed from their lush green to beautiful shades of amber.

The harvest is in full swing now and soon the fields will be bare, the earth cracked and hard awaiting the next rainy season.

The other week I had the opportunity to harvest rice for several days. From six in the morning till six at night we stood in the fields, sickles in hand, cutting rice, separating it from the grass, gathering it in bundles and laying it in the sun to dry.

Exhausted, we would bathe in a nearby fish pond, eat a quiet meal and carry ourselves off to sleep till the dawn.

AS I WRITE this I have seven months left of my time here in Peace Corps Thailand. The time seems to pass quickly and I often wonder if I'll be ready to leave.

Some days I want to leave RIGHT NOW! Those are the days when my old bike has a flat tire for the third time in as many days. I walk the bike 4 kilometers in oppressive 110-degree F. weather to have it repaired.

Everyone along the way asks why I'm walking my bike instead of riding it. I repress the urge to say something sarcastic, smile and explain the obvious.

Arriving at the repair shop the repairman coerces me into having a drink with him and comparing the merits of Thai women as opposed to American women before he repairs the bike — a 10-minute job which will take 2 hours, but only cost me 80 cents.

OTHER DAYS Thailand appears in a different light — a beautiful, graceful country, its people unhurriedly living their lives, enjoying the present.

Lush, verdant fields of rice stretch to the horizon. The brilliant red and orange roof of a Buddhist temple glitters with the final reflected rays of the spectacular setting Asian sun.

I do miss the States, especially Nebraska. It would be wonderful to see snow again, to feel really cold, to enjoy that feeling of solid security — being in a warm house reading a book as a blizzard rages outside the window, causing the panes to rattle.

So, I do look forward to returning, though I know I'll miss what I leave behind.

Service to the schools

Recognized for their years of service to the Wayne Community Schools are outgoing board members Ken Dahl, center, and Neil Sandahl, right. The two were presented with plaques to commemorate their service to the district and its students. The plaques were presented by Dr. Sid Hillier, board president, during last week's board meeting. It was the last meeting for the pair of retiring board members. Dahl has been on the board for 4 years and Sandahl has served for 16 years.

Countians are for the birds

Wayne County residents are being asked to participate in a national survey of backyard birds conducted by the Home Habitat Society. Those who participate in the Annual Bird List will be asked to complete a questionnaire concerning the habitat surrounding their home. They will also be provided with a checklist of birds, on which they will record which species visit their yard each season and the relative frequency of sightings. Richard Van Vleck, the Society's director, says anyone can participate in the survey. All that is needed is access to a field guide to bird identification, which can be found in all libraries and bookstores, and an interest in birds. The number of different species of birds using your yard is a useful indicator of the quality of habitat you are providing, according to Van Vleck. Keeping a record of the birds visiting your yard over several years may offer evidence of the value of improvements you have made to your home habitat, such as providing food and nesting sites. In contrast, a shrinking bird list may demonstrate the effect of extensive development or other habitat changes around your property. Homeowners from both rural and residential areas are needed to participate in this survey. Property size can vary from the smallest yard to an entire farm. Participants will be sent the 1993 forms, to be returned at the end of the year. They will then receive a summary of the survey, including recognition of those who have the greatest number of species for various size yards in each state. The survey results are also printed in the Society's journal, Home Ground. To take part in the Annual Bird List, send $3 registration fee to The Home Habitat Society, PO Box 412, Taneytown, MD 21787.

Census 'blessing' due in mail

By Cheryl Stubbendieck
Nebraska Farm Bureau

Paperwork is one of those "extra blessings" that comes with farming or ranching. It's an inescapable part of making a living in agriculture. Many times farmers and ranchers question the need for a particular form to be filled out, and they wonder whether anybody actually reads the darn thing when it gets to where it's going. At times like these, there's a real temptation to move a decimal point or make up a phony name, just to see if somebody somewhere does indeed notice. Every five years, farmers get an extra paperwork bonus from the government: it's the Census of Agriculture, courtesy of the U.S. Department of Commerce. It arrives like clockwork in farm mail boxes in years that end with a 2 or a 7. Forms will be coming to farms near you in late December, and they're due back by Feb. 1. Unlike some other government forms, there are several good reasons why farmers should fill out the ag census with accurate information. First, it's the law: Title 13 of the U.S. code requires those who receive the form to respond. Those who don't will get follow-up letters and phone calls. But more importantly, the Census of Agriculture is the most thorough source of data about the structure and activities of the U.S. agricultural industry — the only source for uniform, comprehensive data on ag production and operator characteristics for each county and state. And that makes it invaluable for a number of purposes.

Insights into careers

Laurel native Troy Heitman, an official with Norwest Banks in Sioux City was one of the panelists who provided Wayne State college students with insights into the work world and the process of transition from academic environment to the work environment. The discussion was held last week during a workshop sponsored by the Business department titled "Exploring Success." Five panelists, all Wayne State graduates, helped fill students in about what to expect in the work world.

Good neighbor nominees sought

For the 49th year, Ak-Sar-Ben and the Omaha World-Herald invite nominations from citizens throughout Nebraska and western Iowa for the annual Good Neighbor Awards. The program honors individuals and groups cited by neighbors for performing unselfish, neighborly deeds during 1992 without compensation or personal gain. Nominations will be accepted from organizations and/or individuals and must be sent to the Ak-Sar-Ben Ambassador for the community. Names and addresses of Ambassadors are available, as well as nomination forms, by writing the Ak-Sar-Ben Good Neighbor Awards Committee, 6300 Shirley, Omaha, Neb. 68106. All nominations must be received no later than March 15. Framed citations and gold lapel emblems are awarded annually to those selected by a statewide judging committee. Honorees will be announced about June 1.

Wet grain needs special handling

With grain refusing to dry down to safe storage moisture levels this fall, much of the harvest going into bins is at risk for spoilage during the coming months, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln crop drying specialist said.

Thomas Thompson said that meanwhile, about 25 percent of the state's corn and 11 percent of grain sorghum remained in the field as of Nov. 30. He said leaving it there for the time being may be the best.

"It may be less at risk in the field than in the bin if adequate drying capacity isn't available," he said. Thompson said producers who are unable to dry grain to safe levels should run fans to cool grain, check bins at least weekly and be prepared to take action if signs of spoilage appear.

"These recommendations are applicable to all grain in storage," Thompson said. "But they are especially critical this year for grain that was not dried to a safe storage level."

He said that while none of the available alternatives are particularly attractive, they are better than losing whole bins of grain. Among the alternatives are selling the grain at a discount calculated on the moisture content, or paying the price for continued on-farm drying and aeration, he said.

Given current weather conditions and grain moisture levels, monitoring and treatment will need to continue throughout the winter, he said.

Producers also need to be aware of dangers they will encounter in bins later when they attempt to empty them, Thompson said. These include exposure to mold spores that cause respiratory illness, and suffocation and entrapment from collapsing bridged grain, he said.

Thompson noted that drying-time calculations need to take into account moisture content, aeration capacity, bin size and other factors that vary on a case-by-case basis. He said that local Cooperative Extension agents recently have been furnished with charts and formulas used to determine drying requirements, safe storage times at various moisture levels, discounts for selling wet grain and other information to aid decision making.

State's groundwater continues decline

Groundwater levels continued to decline in 1991 in most of Nebraska's 93 counties, according to the annual state and federal report, "Groundwater-level Changes in Nebraska, 1991," recently released by the Conservation and Survey Division at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Fall 1991 groundwater measurements showed that water levels continued to decline in the eastern half of Nebraska due to prolonged drought, said the report's authors, Gregory V. Steele, U.S. Geological Survey, and Perry B. Wigley, director of the division, a unit of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL.

The report, based on the latest data, said that in the fall of 1991, 77 percent of observation wells in the state had groundwater levels lower than the previous fall.

"Water-level declines were most prominent in the south-central and southeastern parts of Nebraska, where precipitation continued to be below normal, and groundwater irrigation was needed to supplement supplies," according to the report.

Most counties had water-level declines of 1 to 5 feet from the previous year, with the largest area of decline extending from Phelps County in the west to Gage County in the east. The largest water-level decline was measured in Fillmore County, where one well showed a one-year decline of 23 feet.

By contrast, the report noted that above-average precipitation in the western half of Nebraska resulted in large areas of water-level rises in Box Butte, Dawson and Perkins counties. The largest water-level rise from fall 1990 to fall 1991 was recorded in Custer County, where one well had a water level rise of 20.92 feet.

Many areas also continued to have declining water levels from estimated predevelopment levels (from about the mid-1930s to the mid-1950s, depending on the part of the state) to fall 1991. Exceptions to this trend include large areas of water-level rises south of the Platte River—as great as 113 feet -- and around large reservoirs.

Intensive irrigation and below-normal precipitation continued to lower water levels from predevelopment throughout much of the Upper Big Blue and Little Blue groundwater control areas in 1991.

"Groundwater withdrawals for irrigation during the past 41 years have caused water levels to decline at least 5 feet below estimated predevelopment ... levels in an area of about 1.41 million acres" in the groundwater control areas, the report showed.

Box Butte County, in spite of a one-year water-level rise from 1990, continued to show water-level declines from predevelopment to fall 1991 of 5 to 70 feet over 420,000 acres.

More than 70 percent of the water used for irrigation in Nebraska is pumped from wells. During 1991, the report noted, 708 new irrigation wells were drilled -- 39 fewer than were drilled and registered during 1990.

The report estimates that 5 million acre-feet of water were pumped from irrigation wells in 1991. That volume is 16 times greater than the amount used for domestic, livestock, municipal, industrial and other purposes.

Some fields need lime treatment

The surface layers of some eastern Nebraska low-till fields have dropped into the acid range of the pH scale and may require treatment, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln soil fertility specialist said.

Ken Frank said acid soils normally are easily corrected with the addition of lime. However, that can be a problem with minimum or no-till systems because to be effective the lime should be thoroughly incorporated in the soil. A couple of alternate strategies are available to solve the problem, he said.

One approach is use prilled or fluid lime, either surface applying or incorporating at planting. This may correct pH in the top one or two inches of the soil after repeated applications. Frank said only this shallow surface layer should be sampled for the pH and buffer pH tests because the laboratory needs to know the depth when formulating recommendations.

But Frank said that since most low-till systems could include disking or chiselling every six to eight years, a better solution often is to incorporate lime at that time and treat the entire plow layer. The effects of the lime will last eight to 10 years, meaning the field won't have to be retreated until it's time to do more intensive tillage again, he said.

Farmers National Company is hosting a free Agricultural seminar in Omaha on Dec. 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The seminar will discuss grain marketing alternatives and how to handle the 1992 crop by Jim Stephens, the President of Farmers National Commodities. Dale Millis, Specialty Seed Manager for Pioneer Hi-Bred International, will discuss specialty markets, and what's new for 1993.

The balance of the program will

Ag Census to help show state ranking

According to the most recent census of agriculture (1987), Nebraska ranked second nationally in the inventory of beef cows with 1.8 million head.

Nebraska also reported 34,701 farms with cattle and calves and an inventory of 5.8 million head in 1987. The state had an inventory of 105,168 milk cows and dairy products sold totaled $130.9 million in 1987. Nebraska ranked third among states in cattle and calves sold with 5.9 million head in 1987.

The evidence comes from the census of agriculture, taken every five years dating back to 1840. Further trends will be measured when the 1992 Census of Agriculture is taken early next year. It is the only source of uniform, comprehensive data on agricultural production, inventories, sales, expenditures and other items for each county, state and the nation. The census of agriculture, an integral part of the other economic censuses, helps local, state and federal governments and organizations determine regional economic health and vitality.

Meanwhile, here is more of the state's agricultural story as shown by the most recent census of agriculture and related census information:

Nebraska ranked third in number of feeder pigs sold. Hogs and pigs accounted for $746.5 million in sales. The state's 1987 inventory of hogs and pigs numbered 3.9 million head. The number of hogs and pigs sold totaled 7.4 million head of which 1.8 million were feeder pigs.

Nebraska ranked 11th in bushels of wheat harvested. Wheat for grain was harvested on 2 million acres, producing 76.8 million bushels. Wheat represented $177.8 million in agricultural sales.

Nebraska ranked seventh in bushels of soybeans harvested. For 1987, soybeans for beans were harvested from 2.3 million acres and produced 78.1 million bushels.

The state's harvested acreage of sunflower seed increased in 1987 to 28,194 acres as compared to 6,249 acres in 1982. The number of farms also increased to 282 in 1987 from 87 farms in 1982.

Farm organizations, farmer cooperatives and agribusinesses, universities, state and federal agencies and legislators use the information reported in the agriculture census. Here are some examples:

•Congress uses the census of agriculture to help develop, evaluate and revise farm production and rural development legislation. Information can be used to target farmers and farm communities with specific needs.

•State and local governments use census data to analyze and develop policy on land use, irrigation needs, farmland assessment and rural development.

•Farmer cooperatives and agribusinesses use census data to develop sales territories and to determine the most effective and efficient locations for distribution centers for farm equipment, machinery and supplies.

•Farm organizations use census data to devise farm programs and policy proposals.

•Universities use census of agriculture data to understand trends in farming and the rural economy. Specialists analyze data which assist planners and developers in directing state and local development.

•The Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service uses crop information to devise payment schedules in the administration of soil improvement, set aside and related conservation programs.

•U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service uses census of agriculture data to plan operations during outbreaks of disease or infestations of pests. The agency estimates the extent of the problem to appropriately distribute resources.

•The Extension Service and Cooperative State Research Service (USDA) rely on census information to determine the number of farmers by race, gender and type of operation which enables county extension agents and university professors to better serve farmer and community needs.

•USDA's Economic Research Service uses the census of agriculture to prepare farm income and cost of production estimates, as well as assess patterns and trends in resource use and management. Census data serve as a reference to USDA survey data.

These are some of the reasons why it is important to identify current trends in agriculture by collecting data for 1992. The Census Bureau will mail the 1992 Census of Agriculture report forms to agriculture producers in late December 1992. Title 13, U.S. Code, requiring farmers and ranchers to report in the census also protects the privacy of their reports. Only sworn Census Bureau employees may see report forms. Other government agencies cannot obtain individual reports. Information is used for statistical purposes and only summary information is published.

Sampling is used to collect data for selected items and to account for nonresponding farm operations. Thus, the results are subject to sampling variability as well as reporting and coverage errors. Dollar values have not been adjusted for changes in price levels.

EPA's ag experience limited

KEARNEY -- The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency decrees agricultural policy, yet only a fraction of its staff has agricultural backgrounds, according to Richard Wiese, a liaison between EPA and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, where he is an soil science professor.

Wiese welcomed more than 200 agriculturalists at the sixth annual Crop Pest Management Update in Kearney Dec. 3-4. The conference was sponsored by UNL's Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

EPA was created in 1972 as society's response to water contamination in the Great Lakes and Chesapeake Bay areas. The agency now has 17,000 employees nationwide, Wiese said.

Out of the 660 Kansas City EPA employees, Wiese said he has met only half a dozen with agricultural backgrounds.

Consequently, he is asked questions such as "What do farmers do with their cornstalks?"

While this may seem like basic knowledge to someone with an agricultural background, Wiese asked his audience to consider this: When EPA was created, most of its experts were engineers designed to handle industrial pollution concerns. But now in the environmental picture is non-point source pollution -- 60 percent of which is attributed to agriculture -- and EPA's staff is learning about a whole new field.

Wiese likened the situation to the agribusiness audience having jobs in writing medical literature.

"You are under pressure to do your job, but are unsure of what it is," Wiese said of his scenario. He did, however, credit EPA for improving its willingness to learn about agriculture.

EPA staff, Wiese noted, has a definite, serious interest to serve people and assist them with information to help them comply with environmental regulations.

Wiese said he also believes most of the 2.95 million United States farmers try and comply with what is believed to be environmentally correct. He believes non-point source pollution is best handled through prevention and Best Management Practices.

"Let's do things as we are, but let's do them better so it's more environmentally sound, without risking profitability," said Wiese.

Believe it or not, it's not going to take large changes," he said, exemplifying housekeeping details to prevent spills and contamination.

"It costs way too much to do the wrong thing," Wiese added.

Following Wiese's presentation, several other UNL experts made presentations on topics such as potato leafhoppers, leafy spurge, shattercane, farm research methods, corn rootworm soil insecticides, the certified crop advisor program and pesticide container recycling.

The conference continued Friday with topics on pesticides and herbicides, new nitrogen testing techniques, food-safety risks, adult corn rootworm management and corn nematodes.

'93 program info to be available

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) will open sign-up for the 1993 Wheat, Feed Grain, Cotton and Rice farm programs on March 1. The sign-up period closes April 30.

To qualify for target price protection and price support loans, ASCS official Terri Post said participants must reduce their acreage bases by at least 10 percent for corn and five percent for grain sorghum.

There is zero acreage reduction for wheat, oats and barley and a preliminary 7.5 percent acreage reduction for upland cotton. The acreage reduction percentage for extra long staple cotton and rice will be announced later.

"Target prices protect producers' income if market prices fall below the established levels," Post said. She said farmers also need money to operate and, through the price support loan program, they can obtain interim financing while waiting for a better market.

Details of the 1993 farm programs soon will be available to producers through the county ASCS office.

Grant to provide shelter

Northeast Nebraska Region has been chosen to receive $16,275 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the area.

Goldenrod Hills Community Services was selected by a National Board consisting of representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Council of Jewish Federations, Catholic Charities, USA, National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA and United Way of America which will provide the administrative staff and function as fiscal agent.

The Board was charged to distribute funds appropriated by Congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas around the country.

A local board made up of government, United Way, Salvation Army, Red Cross, Native American representation, National Council of Churches of Christ and Catholic Charities will determine how funds awarded to the Northeast Nebraska region are to be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by the local services organizations in the area. The local board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds and any additional funds which may become available.

Under the terms of the grant from the National Board, local governmental or private voluntary organizations chosen to receive funds must: 1) be non-profit; 2) have an accounting system and conduct an annual audit; 3) practice nondiscrimination; 4) have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and/or shelter programs; and 5) if they are a private voluntary organization, they must have a voluntary board.

Qualifying organizations must follow a formal application process with application being mailed to Goldenrod Hills Community Services by Dec. 17.

Goldenrod Hills Community Services has distributed emergency food and shelter funds previously in northeast Nebraska with Nebraska Indian Inter-tribal Development Corporation, Salvation Army, Task Force for Domestic Violence, Good Neighbors, The Link, Norfolk Community Soup Kitchen and the Norfolk Food Bank.

Further information on the program and the required application procedures may be obtained by contacting Jim Deitoff, Goldenrod Hills Community Services, 529-3513.

Holidays time to think safe

The holidays are a time for decorating your home with colorful flowers and festive ornaments. However, as spirited and beautiful as they are, holiday decorations can present hazards. Protect your family from home accidents this season with these tips from the Safety and Health Council of Greater Omaha, Inc. and the National Safety Council:

- A dry Christmas tree is a fire hazard. When selecting a tree, bend the tips of the branches. If the tree is fresh, they should bend easily without snapping. Also, bounce the butt of the tree on the ground to see if the needles fall.

- When you get the tree home, cut off two or three inches from the trunk and stand the tree in a container of water. Set your tree up in a cool place safely away from radiators, registers and fireplaces. Add water to the tree stand every day.

- Avoid hanging breakable ornaments on lower branches where children and pets can reach them. Many decorations contain poisonous substances, so caution children that ornaments are for fun, not food. Never hang candles on a tree.

- Inspect strands of lights for fraying, bare wires, loose connections and broken sockets. If you are buying new lights, be sure they carry the Underwriters Laboratories

(UL) label. Unplug lights whenever you leave the house or go to bed.

- Avoid draping greenery, tinsel and garland on mantels or near other heat sources. Keep candles away from greenery, fabrics and papers. Extinguish candles when leaving the room.

- Several types of holiday plants are toxic when eaten. If you have small children or pets, keep in mind that holly berries, mistletoe, Jerusalem cherry and amaryllis are poisonous. Contrary to popular belief, poinsettias are not poisonous, but eating the leaves may cause an upset stomach and inflammation of the mouth and throat.

Census

For example, Congress and the presidential administration use the ag census data in drafting legislation to help resolve agricultural problems. State and local governments use it for planning rural development, ag research and extension programs. Agribusiness uses the data to help in locating new plants and service and distribution centers, allocating research funds, forecasting markets and making advertising and other marketing decisions. And economists use it in a whole bunch of different reports, including the farm income accounts and producer price index. Data from the 1992 census will be available beginning in fall 1993.

All of the information farmers provide in the Census of Agriculture is kept confidential; the Census Bureau uses it only for statistical purposes and publishes data only as tabulated totals. The census asks basic information about land use and ownership, irrigated land, crop acreage and quantities harvested, livestock and poultry, value of products sold, acres set aside, payments for farm program participation and amount of Commodity Credit Corporation loans.

Twenty-five percent of respondents will receive a longer version of the form with additional questions about production expenses, fertilizer and chemicals, machinery and equipment, market value of land and buildings and income from farm-related sources.

For the first time in 1992, the census asks about the number of hired workers, amount of direct sales and number of injuries and deaths. These new questions were developed with the help of ag organization representatives to be easily understood and the census form itself was field-tested with more than 40,000 farmers.

It will take some time to fill out the Census of Agriculture. But there may be some comfort in knowing that farmers aren't the only ones being surveyed for 1992. The manufacturing, mining and construction industries, the retail and wholesale trades, service industries and the transportation industry are also required to provide similar information.

THANK YOU

THANK YOU Lutheran Brotherhood Branch 8212. How can I find the words. I will always be grateful for the many branch friends, for the many times that we could help the folks in need and Lutheran Brotherhood gave me the chance to serve the community as Branch President. I could not have done it without the fraternal consultant Loren Stutheit, my unit advisor, Helen Njus and my branch officers. The gift of the anniversary clock and corsage will always remind me of Branch friends. So many nice people of the community have helped those needs of others around them. Thank you. Past President, Mabel Sommerfeld.

WE WOULD like to thank everyone who made our 25th anniversary dance such a success, and to those who sent cards, flowers and gifts. A special thanks to our girls Angie, Kim, Jenny and Tammi for all their help. Also to Sheryl, Jan and Barb for their help with Lunch. To Ron and Nat for video taping it, and to Mom for all she did for us. We don't want to forget all those who stayed and helped clean up, you were great. Last but not least an extra special thank you to our good friends Danny and Layna who came so far to be with us, and to make it a night to remember. It is truly nice to have such wonderful friends and relatives. Thank you again. Lonnie and Wilma Fork. D8

I WISH to thank Dr. Martin, Sister Gertrude and the hospital staff as well as all who remembered me with cards, flowers, food, phone calls and gifts during and since my recent surgery. Thanks to Russ and Twyla for looking after me. Muriel Lindsay. D8

The GOLDEN YEARS by Pat Lichty

Gregory Peck made his first movie, "Days of glory," in 1944 and went on to make as many as two or three films a year. He won an Oscar in 1962 for his role in "To Kill a Mockingbird," and has received many other distinguished awards. At age 76, he declined to write his autobiography. "I don't want to spend a year looking back over my shoulder," he told an interviewer. Instead, he was busy filming "Painting Churches," to be shown on TV in 1993. Lauren Bacall plays his wife. And the role of his daughter is played by his real-life daughter, Cecilia Peck, 31.

Not so long ago, careers as airline flight attendants were open only to single young women who had to "retire" at age 32. The 32-and-out rule was shelved in 1963. Men began to be accepted for the jobs, too. Now, at least one major airline has successfully recruited men and women in their 40s, 50s and 60s. Among graduates of this flight attendant school is a 63-year-old grandfather who had found retirement boring.

Remember When? 1936 — Topping the best-selling book list were Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" and Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and Influence People."
