Holiday fire leaves family homeless

By Les Mann Herald Publisher

Wayne Fire Chief Dutch Sitzman said a Wednesday evening fire at the Mark and Robin Steinbach home at 904 Walnut was the result of a holiday candle that apparently overheated and caught the furniture on fire. The Steinbachs were a block away at the Christmas program for Wayne World Outreach Center, (Assembly of God) when the call came in that the church parsonage was on fire

MARK IS THE pastor of the Outreach Center. The couple moved to Wayne in September. They have four children, aged 8, 6, 4, and 2.

Most of the upstairs portion of the home was destroyed by the fire, according to Sitzman. The house suffered extensive smoke and heat damage, he said, even though the quick rrival of the fire crews confined the flames to the living room area

Sitzman said the family lost furni-ture, food, clothes and Christmas preents in the fire Touchingly, however, the family dog, "Tucker survived the blaze by taking refuge in the basement. But there were some tense moments while the family awaited news of the dog.

THE STEINBACH children, who were at their grandparent's home in Fremont, were very relieved to hear the dog made it through the fire with apparently little ill effect.

"They were concerned about the dog," said Barb Thiele, a member of the church. "We thought he would be She said the kids forgot all about the loss of Christmas presents in their relief at the news that Tucker was safe.

The Steinbachs left for Fremont Wednesday night where they had planned to spend the holidays. Meanwhile, a search is on for temporary housing for the family while the par-sonage is repaired said Mrs. Thicle. She said the Steinbachs had no renters insurance to replace their belongings, but she added they still had some family items in storage in Fre

THE WAYNE AREA Chamber of Commerce has also issued a plea through its hotline for replacement Christmas presents, clothing and fur-niture for the family. Those interested may call 375-2763.

According to Sitzman, passersby smelled the smoke and phoned in the fire report at approximately 8 p.m. Firemen had the blaze under control in a matter of minutes he said.

Accounts have been established at each Wayne bank to benefit the Steinbachs.

Firefighters made quick work of the flames which broke out in the Mark and Robin Steinbach home Wednesday night, but the family were still left homeless, and without many of the Christmas presents they had planned to celebrate with. A drop off point has been established at 720 Douglas for gift items

Dog survives fire

The Steinbach family and friends were thankful Wednesday night that the fire which destroyed much of their home did not harm the family dog, Tucker. The dog took refuge in the basement and came out smelling smoky and shaking but otherwise unharmed. Mrs. Steinbach is holding Tucker shortly after his rescue while others comfort the frightened pet.

After surgery

Santa' hangs up boots

WAYNE, Ncb. (AP) -- The man recognized as the "real" Santa Claus by hundreds of area children has decided to retire.

Roy Sommerfeld, whose natural white beard caught the attention of youngsters for eight years, chose to step aside from playing Santa after heart surgery last year.

The Wayne resident was forced to shave off his long beard prior to the operation, and he's chosen not to grow it again.

Fully recovered from the quadruple bypass surgery, Sommerfeld, 72, says the demands of appearing as Santa Claus up to 10 times each day during the Christmas season began wearing him out.

"I had a lot of believers," Sommerfeld said. "But that December got to be pretty hectic, and I was kind of glad to see it get over.

'We went up to Hartington one day, and there were 200 kids there. That got to be quite an afternoon by the time you sat each one on your lap.

Sommerfeld was always joined by his wife, Mabel, who portrayed Mrs. Claus. They rode into Wayne on fire trucks to hand out treats, appeared at dozens of parties, schools and churches throughout the Christmas season, and seldom turned down volunteer Santa opportunities.

Mrs. Sommerfeld, 67, decided to appear alone as Mrs. Claus during one outing but said, "it's just not the same without Santa," so she joined him in retirement.

without his beard, Sommerfeld said local children still believe he's Santa Claus when they

'Mele Kalikimaka" is the proper thing to say to Krista Siebrandt of Wakefield these days. That's "Merry Christmas" in Hawaii Over the holidays, Krista and her family will be traveling to Hawaii for a week of snorkeling, volcano watching, zoo tours and a helicopter tour.

The trip is being provided by the Make a Wish Foundation of Omaha.

The foundation grants wishes, usually trips, to children under the age of eighteen who are suffering from lifethreatening or terminal illnesses. Krista, the daughter of Larry and Julie Siebrandt of Wakefield, was diagnosed with epilepsy when she was 10 months old.

illness had been controlled with medication, but she suffered a severe seizure in 1991.

Brain surgery to remove scar tissue believed to be connected to the sei-zures left her paralyzed on the left side of her body and bound to a wheelchair. Further complications have included scoliosis brought on by he muscle loss from the paralysis.

Now, at 11, she is also wearing a back and leg brace.

Through the complications surounding her illnesses Krista has not been depressed, reports her mother.

She has handled it all so well, and that's how she was in the hospital too," said Mrs. Siebrandt. "She was never scared. She never cried. The only time she ever cried in the hospital was when they put her on medication that made her real depressed, with an engaging smile said she had no doubts about what to ask for when approached about a possible "Make-A-Wish" trip. While most children in her position request a trip to Disneyland, Krista was very specific. She wanted to fly to Hawaii on a plane with movies

An interest in fish resulted in prominent placement on her Christmas list of an aquarium, but while in Hawaii, the family plans to see tropical fish in their natural setting while snorkeling. She is especially looking forward to that, she said. The family, including Krista's folks and her sister, Jennifer, will stay in Hawaii a week.

Her mother said Krista has been excited about Christmas and the

Bobsledding delightful in all weather

It may be a new twist to an old familiar tune, but Hosking resident Ron Lange prefers making his own

Especially when created by the sounds of sleigh bells ringing and rosy-cheeked grandchildren laughing as both bounce in rhythm with a team of horses pulling a bobsled down the lane and across a blanket of fresh fallen snow.

And although many of us dream of such an adventure, especially during the Christmas season, Ron has the distinct advantage of being able to make those dreams come true.

"I just enjoy it," smiles Ron as.
he unloads frozen grandchildren and unhitches the horses from the bobsled so they can feast on a hay bundle. "You don't have to be crazy, but it sure helps."

Wayne fares well in mock trial

Wayne High School's teams in the Mock Trial Project sponsored by the Nebraska Bar Association fared well in the competition this year, reports team coach John Murtaugh

Wayne fielded two teams of three student attorneys and several wit-nesses. The students were responsible for role-playing the respective parts of a mock trial. Wayne County Attorney Mike Pieper assisted in the coaching of the students.

Both Wayne teams advanced to second round competition before being ousted by eventual state championship qualifiers. State Championships were held last week in Kearney.

The competition is designed to give students a better understanding of the steps and procedures of the justice

This year's mock case surrounded a fictitious accident victim, Billy Alexander, 20. At 18 Billy was involved in a serious car accident that left him in a vegetative state. Two years after the accident his only surviving parent went to court to request that he be removed from life support.

In the trial competition the students are evaluated by real attorneys who act as trial judges during the case.

Wayne's team one included attorney's Scott Day, Megan Cornish and Tami Schluns. The team's witnesses included Davin Flatmore, Krista Remer, Tasha Luther and Samantha Thompson.

Team A members for Wayne High were attorneys Jessica Wilson, Carrie Junck and Teresa Witkowski, and witnesses Jenny Thomsen, Audra Sievers, Emily Wiser, Chad Paysen and Alicia Dorcey.

Special holiday letter

We have many times wanted to voice our opinion on several subjects in your newspaper but it was most often of a negative nature, like two years ago when a Christ-mas wreath worth $98 was stolen from the front of our home or last summer when our American flag was also stolen from our front porch. A dear neighbor had their Santa Claus stolen and another had their Nebraska and Wayne State windsocks stolen.

A letter to the editor about these thefts would probably not have even slightly affected the conscience of these thieves because they have no consideration for others property or feelings in the dark. He went on to explain that we were not home to be told about the accident, that he was very sorry and hoped the five dollar bills he left with the note would cover the repairs. (I assume this was his allowance money because he's too young for a job.) This was a very sincere note that we will save for a long, long time.

Congratulations to the parents of this young man. You should be very proud of the morals, manners and honesty of your son. He will no doubt be a great asset to this community and the world. It is exciting to have one's faith in mankind recharged once in a while (especially from a child).

GRANDCHILDREN OF Ron and Vi Lange of rural Hoskins enjoy a ride on a bobsled which belongs to Ron and was renovated by Carl Mann, also of Hoskins. time when his dad picked him up from school during a blizzard in a bobsled.

Maybe it was those memories or the new memories he would create with his own children and grandchildren, that prompted Ron to unload a heap of iron (which he paid $5 for years ago) on retired Hoskins Postmaster Carl Mann.

"That's just what it was," laughs Ron, "nothing but a pile of iron left over from an old bobsled I found rotted down in a grove where someone had just unloaded it."

And although the bobsled holds no special meaning or family ties, having come from the Don Harmeier farm near Carroll, Ron couldn't resist challenging Carl to putting it all back together

"I called Carl — no I didn't even call him," recalls Ron. "I just took in the pile of iron, dumped it in front of him, and said 'here's your

CARL, retired Hoskins postmaster since 1986, is a cabinet maker and has his own wood working shop in Hoskins.

He says he has pittled in wood working for some 30 year, but ad-mits that Ron provided him with a whole new challenge.

"There literally was nothing but a pile of iron and no pattern to go by," smiles Carl, adding that the bobsled, except for the original iron runners, was fashioned from an ash tree cut down by the Missouri River near Wynot.

"All I had for the pattern was the iron, and I just shaped the wood to fit it," said Carl, pointing out that although he sawed the wood to fit, years ago it would have been steamed heated and bent to fit the runner

Carl said the project also included making two bolts that hold the steel runner to the wooden runner. "It's a special type bolt, and I couldn't find another one in the

"The whole thing was a challenge, but fun," says Carl, who presented the finished bobsled to Ron about a month after he received the iron heap and tree

"I'VE ALWAYS wanted a bobsled and this seemed like the only way to get one," smiles Ron, who is also the owner of a cutter presented to him years ago as a Christmas gift from his sons.

"The cutter has 1873 written on the back," says Ron, "but I can't prove it's that old."

Ron said he did some research and discovered that the cost of a cutter in the 1800's was about $12. Of course cutters were just for the rich people. Farmers could never afford such a thing.

RON AND VI have resided on their farm near Hoskins for 22 years and are the parents of five children and the grandparents of five.

"I just ride along on the bob-d," says Vi. "It really brings the family closer together.

"We have a lot of fun," smiles Ron, adding that probably the most fun was when he played Santa Claus for a family gathering and pulled up in front of a picture win-dow to a house filled with young children. "You should have seen the faces on those kids.

"But let me warn you that if ou're ever going to play Santa Claus and make deliveries in a bobsled in zero degree weather, don't wear the mask. It steams up

Ron remembers bob sledding as youngster and having "more darn fun." He is quick to credit Carl for renovating his present bobsled and allowing him to create those same memories for his grandchildren.

"It's Carl we owe our thanks to. He's the one who made our sled," says Ron. "What he doesn't know is that I have another pile of iron stashed away in the barn.

A celebration of lights

Hundreds of motorists have been driving through the Knowles Addition in Wayne to view the display of more than 500 luminaries which neighbors have joined together to display. Don Buryanek and his family are shown lighting the traditional Christmas decorations, a candle in a weighted bag, on the first night they were displayed, Tuesday. The neighborhood also plans to have the lights lit Christmas Eve from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. and gawkers are welcome. The neighborhood group says they hope in future years to see the new luminary tradition spread throughout Wayne as a show of traditional holiday celebrations. The neighbors made the luminaries a block party of caroling and winter refreshments.

The American Cancer Society is teaming up with the Nebraska Beef Council on the roll-out of a senior high school nutrition education program titled, "Changing The Course." The comprehensive program will provide students with an opportunity to reduce diet-related risks associated with certain cancers, as well as heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and obesity. The curriculum is intended to alert and educate people at an early age about the importance of developing health-promoting eating patterns that will serve them through

A second component of the program is a school foodservice provider's manual which outlines a plan to lower the fat and increase the fiber content of school lunches. A section on lowering fat in meat and meat alternates has also been included in the manual.

The program is being made available through beef checkoff

Whew! 900 goal reached

She didn't think it could be done, however Wayne Middle School Librarian Fauncil Bennett was pleas antly surprised this week after discovering that Middle School students reached their goal of reading 900 books before Christmas.

The librarian said the students were about 100 books short of goal last Friday. "They came through at the last minute," said the librarian, adding that as of Tuesday morning the book count totaled 904.

In celebration, all of the lights were finally untangled from a Christmas bear who became entwined in them in his rush to deco-rate the school library. The strings of lights had been untangled and removed one-by-one during the past several weeks as students worked toward their goal.

Mrs. Bennett said all students participating in the read-a-thon were treated to cookies compliments of thatArchway company

'Jolly time' may not be merry for all

Although the holiday period may be "the season to be jolly," it may not be the time of the year that is merry for everyone, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln family and consumer science specialist said.

Herbert Lingren said that lack of money and time may result in stress during the holiday.

"Families will lose the true meaning of Christmas if activities become to overwhelming and they don't pay attention to those who mean the most," the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources faculty member said.

Christmas is a celebration of life and forgiveness, he continued, and families need to take to heart the people around them. Reaching out and helping someone who may be less fortunate than you, could re-lieve some stress for both parties.

Lingren said that the gift of time for yourself, spouse or children is a gift that at times can be far more appreciated than any purchased gift.

The holidays can be special and less stressful for everyone, if planning for just the most important events occurs, he concluded.

Safety tips can reduce farm shop injuries

Injuries in the farm shop increase as machinery is brought in during the winter for repairs, modifications or general maintenance. Most common injuries such as fractures and open wounds can be avoided, according to David Morgan, University of Nebraska-Lincoln safety engineer:

Many farm shops are dark, poorly-lighted buildings converted from some other use. Often they are cluttered with parts, tools, debris and pieces of iron and wood. Failing to properly ground electrical tools, failing to wear welding gloves, failure to provide adequate ventilation, and failing to use machine guards and face shields are other shop hazards, Morgan said.

A little time, effort and money can go a long way toward shop safety and organization, thus reducing hazards and risks, said the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources

Organizing hand tools on a tool rack reduces the chances of stepping on or tripping over them. One or two sheets of quarter-inch negboard and assorted hooks will quickly tidy up a shop and begin safety improvement, Morgan stated. Outline the shape of the tools on the pegboard with a waterproof marker or paint. A portable tool rack on wheels is a real shop improvement that can bring a complete assortment of tools to the job.

Morgan offers these additional shop hints: -Ground all electrical tools. Anything that "bites" is never safe. The electrical integrity of tools insulated with non-conducting plastic cases is very good.

—Never remove the ground third prong on a safety plug. Replace plugs where the ground prong has been removed; this will help prevent electrical shock.

-Use shields and face masks for grinders, drill presses, power saws and other power

-A panel of parts bins for nuts, bolts and other small items is handy and safe for getting them off the floor and workbench. Ideas are available from farm magazines.

-Wiring is a big factor in shop safety. Many shops are wired haphazardly, with several densions on an already unprotected fuse or circuit breaker. The shop should have separate circuits for lighting, workbench, wall outlets, welder and outside light. Ground fault interrupter circuit breakers and outlets should be used for electric power tools used outside or where floors are likely to be wet.

—Adequate ventilation is necessary for some types of heat and for removing fumes. Welding fumes are noxious and toxic. A separate exhaust fan and hood over the welding area prevents fume and smoke accumulation. The same system can be used to remove paint fumes. Heating units that use an open flame or pilot light are hazardous in the presence of flammable liquids and gases. Heating the shop with hot water in pipes under the floor has been successful.

—A first aid kit is important in the shop because injuries should be treated promptly. The kit should be readily accessible at a sink with hot and cold running water. A good kit contains septic ointments, chemical cold packs, tape, scissors, tweezers, antiseptic soaps, cleansing pads, and bandaging materials from finger size to gauze pads.

Local Cooperative Extension offices may have more safety material, as well as resources for shop layouts. Power companies are sources for proper wiring, Morgan noted

Wagner gets early Christmas

Wayne State College football school talent. coach Dennis Wagner received an early Christmas gift with the signing of six transfer recruits, includa pair of top receivers and a division I quarterback.

Jerry Garrett, the California Ju-nior College Offensive Player of the Year, and Byron Chamberlin, a former standout at the University of Missouri, headline the receiving talent while former University of Oregon quarterback Brett Salisbury is set to guide the Wildcats after sitting out last year.

Linebacker Shaft Baker and offensive lineman Mark Christensen and Leonard Barra join the Wayne State recruiting class.

"We definitely needed some junior college players to fill some gaps of the 13 seniors we lost," Wagner said. "They were a great class, and we needed some kids who have experience at the college level. We'll see how fast they adapt to our system, and we hope to sign another linebacker and offensive lineman at the junior college ranks, and fill the rest of our needs with high

Jerry Garrett, a 5-11; 185-pound wide receiver from Oceanside, Calif., led the nation with 95 catches for 1507 yards and 18 touchdowns for Palomar Junior College in San Marcos, Calif. He was named California Junior College Offensive Player of the Year for his accomplishments, and also earned first-team Junior College All-America honors.

-Byron Chamberlin, a 6-2, 236pound wide receiver from Fort Worth, Texas, set a Missouri sophomore record with 39 receptions for 464 yards and four touch-downs in 1991. Chamberlin set a chool record with 10 catches for 110 yards against Baylor, and added seven receptions for 88 yards against Oklahoma.

He was leading the Big Eight in receptions, and ranked in the top five nationally, before injuring his ankle in '91, but still led Mizzou in all-purpose running.

Chamberlin played in all eleven games as a freshman in 1989 and including a 41-yard TD pass against Kansas State. He sat out 1990 due to academic ineligibility. Brett Salisbury, a 6-3, 200-pound quarterback from Escondido, Calif., is set to guide the Wildcats after sitting out the 1992 scason following his transfer from Oregon.

Salisbury started five games for the Ducks in '91 completing 42 of 93 passes for 546 yards and two touchdowns, with seven interceptions. He led the nation in passing as a sophomore at Palomar Junior College, setting national records for ason completions and one-game touchdown passes.

Salisbury carned first-team Junior College All-America honors while completing 273 of 431 passes for 37-7 yards and 37 TDs in 1990. He guided Palomar to a Hall of Fame Bowl victory by throwing for 379 yards and four touchdowns before suffering an injury in the

Salisbury set a single-game record by completing 36 of 50

passes for 500 yards and eight-TDs in a win over Grossmont. Salis-bury's brother, Sean, was a former USC standout, and is currently quarterbacking the Minnesota Vikings in the National Football League. Shaft Baker, a 6-0, 235-pound linebacke from Cedar Rapids, Iowa earned first-team all-conference and all-region honors at Ellsworth Ju-nior College in Iowa Falls.

Mark Christensen, a 6-4, 280-pound offensive lineman from Omaha, earned first-team all-conference and all-region honors at Northern Iowa Area Community College. He earned honorable mention all-conference honors in 1991, and was an all-metro and honorable mention all-state selection at Omaha Westside High School in 1989.

Leonard Barra, a 6-4, 270 pound offensive lineman from Brawley, Calif., earned all-conference honors at the College of the Desert in Desert, Calif. He earned honorable mention all-conference honors in

Allen man places in NASTAR

ALLEN-Allen resident Randy Ellis received word from the Copper Mountain Company in Aspen, Colo., that he placed among Nebraska's top in the Budweiser Challenge NASTAR racers. According to Commissioner Bob Beattie, Randy ranked ninth in the 50-59 yearold category, as part of the first ever Budweiser All-Stars rankings

The All-Stars honors the top men and women in all 50 states across the country. Skiers were ranked in each NASTAR group, based on their single best handicap of the 1991-92 season.

Racing at Copper Mountain, Randy's handicap was a 35, which means he was just 35 percent behind the time posted by the NA national pacesetter, U.S. Olympian Matt Grosjean.

Beattie, a former coach of the U.S. Olympic Ski Team, says the winners should be very proud of their accomplishments. "With more than 300,000 races last year, competition was tough. We have racers from all over the United States, and these really are the best," he said. Winners receive awards and prizes and are listed on special rankings posters distributed nationwide. NASTAR is celebrating its 24th anniversary as the world's largest recreational ski racing program. Last year, a record 292,000 race starts took place at 180 ski areas across the country.

Be good. Mind your manners. Don't touch that!

These are just some of the remarks children may have to adhere to during the holidays due to their tendency to become overanxious, according to a family and consumer sciences spe cialist at the University of Nebraska-

Herb Lingren said that Halloween eems to be the starting point for children's anxiety and it continues on through Christmas. Adults become overanxious and over-tired, which eventually trickles down to the chil-

If the holidays are spent away from home, children's daily routines may be interrupted if they are skipping naps, staying up late, eating too much or sleeping in a strange bed.

Lingren said children have a limited ability of language and don't always know how to express the anxicty they may be feeling. This results in unattractive behavior that is exerted because of the anxiety.

Lingren gave adults this advice:

1. Talk to the children before the holiday event and explain to them how their daily routines may be affected.

2. Set limits for relative's homes that are to be visited and for those relatives who are visiting. Explain to them the importance of not disrupting a child's daily routine. 3. Be clear about the rules that are to be followed. Be firm, but also compliment the children when they are behaving well.

4. Schedule activities that would be interesting for the children as well.

Sunday: Public meeting, 10 Understanding Christmas Watchtawar-study 10:50

By Pastor Frank Rothfuss Redeemer Lutheran Church

The other day a woman asked me, "When are you going to have Christmas?

I quickly responded, "December Sunday: Worship, 8:30 and 11 a.m.; intergenerational Sunday 25! When else would you have Christmas?"

"Well," she said, with a note of disgust in her voice, "we're getting together with my family on Sunday and that's when we'll exchange

That's when it dawned on me What she meant by "having Christmas" was getting together with her family and exchanging gifts. That's not an uncommon understanding of Christmas.

The World-Herald had this headline on the front page this week: "Five Kids Will. Now Have Christmas." The article was about a family that was being helped by the Goodfellows in Omaha and it talked about how now their mother would be able to give them Christmas presents.

Something about that headline bothered me. It implied that Christmas is giving and receiving gifts, and that if there are not gifts, there is no Christmas. I suppose that for some people that's true. But not for Christians

CERTAINLY, Christmas is a time for Christians to get together with those we love. But what about those senarated from loved ones by distance or by death?

Certainly, Christmas is a time to exchange gifts, but what about cannot afford much or those who have no one to give to

Certainly, Christmas is a time for joy and celebration, but what about those who are depressed or oppressed?

CHRISTIANS, Christmas is God's self-giving love. For Christians, Christmas is the Son of God born into a sinwracked world to bring the peace of forgiveness.

For Christians, Christmas is the Christ-child being born again in our hearts and lives and filling us with the joy of knowing God.

This kind of Christmas does not depend upon getting presents or putting up decorations or being with family members.

It depends upon God. And it is available to everyone, no matter what the situation or circumstance.

So I hope that your Christmas this year is full of the love, the peace, and the joy that God gives. Then, yours will truly be a "Merry

Family shares newfound holiday blessings

By Dianne Jaeger — Winside Correspondent

This year's holiday season is full of many new blessings for Norfolk resident Michelle Langenberg.

After 26 years of wondering about her heritage, Michelle can now fit together all the missing

"I couldn't have had a more wonderful family," says Michelle of her adopted parents. "But there was always that void in my life of not knowing where I came from."

MICHELLE is the adopted daughter of rural Hoskins residents Glenda and George Langenberg Jr. Just six months ago, she met her birth mother for the first time.

"We always told Michelle from early on that she was adopted," says Glenda. "I remember she was about three years old the first time I tried to explain it to her.

"I told her how very special she was because she had another mother who gave birth to her and loved her so much that she gave her to George and me to raise and love. Michelle said, "I don't want to be adopted. I just want to be Michelle."

THE Langenbergs received Michelle when she was six weeks of age of age.

"George and I had to go to Omaha every month for parenting classes for a year before we could be approved," recalls Glenda, adding that they were also assigned a case worker who made regular visits to their home.

"After the classes and after all the paper work, it took almost nine months before we received a call.

"It was on a Friday in June, two days before Father's Day, when the agency called and said they had a baby girl for us and we could pick her up Monday morning. "We were so excited and ner-information we were given about her was that her birth mother was 18 years old, her father was in the service and had no contact during the pregnancy, and that the father was allergic to penicillin.

"We now know some of this information was not accurate."

GLENDA says they discussed the adoption with Michelle several times and everything seemed fine until she was about 14 or 15 years of are.

of age.

"She then began to have a hard time dealing with it. In school she had been given an assignment to make a family tree. She came home in tears saying she couldn't do the assignment because she didn't know who her birth parents were.

"We talked a long time and I explained that it was perfectly fine for her to use our family tree, but she said that wouldn't be true, it would be like lying.

"We went to the school and talked to her teacher and Michelle was excused from the assignment.— It was at that time we tried to help Michelle find out more information about her birth parents.

"We hired an attorney to contact the adoption agency in Omaha, but to no avail. There was no way we could find anything out until she turned 25."

MICHELLE again tried to find out more information she was age 18, but was told nothing.

By the time she turned 25 years of age in May of 1991, the dire need for information had lessened and she never pursued the matter until around October when she received a letter from the agency.

"A letter was received at Winside High School during the summer and addressed to the Winside Alumni Association," said Michelle. "It sat at the school for a while before Jean Gahl, secretary, and Joan Jensen, a teacher, determined who they were looking for and forwarded it to us.

"The letter said they were looking for me and would I please call the adoption agency at the specified phone number—so I did other a very long time.

"They then told me that my birth mother was searching for me and asked if I was interested. They sent lots of paperwork to fill out and return, and then I didn't hear from them again for a month."

MICHELLE'S birth mother is Mary Erickson of Superior, Neb.

Mary's story began in 1965 when she became pregnant by her high school sweetheart and fiance.

"We had both moved to Omaha after graduation and were working there. My fiance started seeing someone else, but by then I was pregnant. He wanted to get married but continue to see this other woman.

"Of course I said no, so we broke up. Through pressure from family and our church, I started working with an adoption agency."

It was also during those early months that Mary began dating her present husband, Bob. "Bob and I

"After we started dating, I told him I was pregnant. I continued with my plans for adoption even though Bob and I got married in March of 1966. My family and friends continued to pressure me that adoption would be the best thing for our marriage.

"My baby was born on May 4, 1966. Even though I never got to see her, I gave her the name Deanna Lynn.

"The agency told me my baby was being adopted right away, so on May 6 I signed the final papers. I now know that they weren't honest with me. My baby went to a foster home for the next six weeks."

MARY AND Bob went on with their life together and the following year Mary gave birth to their oldest son, Jon. During the next 25 years, their family grew to five children.

"Mary never forgot about her first baby," says Bob. "She wondered many times over the years how she was doing and if she was

"I never stopped thinking about the baby girl I had put up for adoption," says Mary. "Every time we moved, I always contacted the agency and gave them my address, just in case my little girl needed something or was looking for me."

Mary contacted the agency again in April of 1991 because she knew Michelle would turn 25 in May.

"Of course I wasn't given any information. They told me they could search for her, but she would have to initiate a reunion.

"At that point I was going to just let it go, but they convinced me I should go ahead and search. Of course it would cost $60 an hour."

MARY HEARD from the agency several months later and learned that Michelle had been located after searching just two hours. They said they would contact Michelle to see if she was interested in a reunion.

On July 2, 1991, Mary learned that Michelle had agreed to a reunion. "Of course I wanted to make direct contact, but the agency discouraged me and suggested we correspond first.

"I insisted they give me her phone number, so they set up a date and time for me to call her. Our daughter, Rachelle, traveled 60 miles home to be with me when I made the call.

"All of our children, except the youngest, knew about my first baby's birth. Rachelle herself contacted the agency when she was about 18 years of age to try and find out some information.

"When I told my son Chris, who is now age nine, he was very angry and upset. He couldn't understand how I gave away a baby and asked me why I didn't love her.

"This made me even more nervous and scared to meet Michelle. If my son couldn't understand, what was Michelle going to say to me?"

MARY dialed the number she had been given at the designated hour, only to learn it was a wrong number.

"We tried every combination of numbers we could, even checking with information, but we never were able to reach Michelle.

"I was so disappointed and angry, but I believe everything happens for a reason. I had waited 26 years, I could wait a little longer. I used the address they had given me and wrote her a letter."

Michelle, who was sitting by the phone waiting for Mary's call, was also disappointed.

"I thought Mary had changed her mind. Then her letter came on July 6 and I immediately called her. We made arrangements to meet on Monday, July 9."

BEFORE Michelle met with her birth mother, she went to the family farm to see her parents. She told her dad what had been happening.

ing,
"Michelle and George have always been very close," says Glenda.
"When she told him, he just said,
"Whatever makes you happy
Michelle is fine with me."

Michelle then called Glenda at work and asked to meet her for lunch because there was something she needed to talk about.

"Of course I was a nervous wreck by lunch because I thought of all the possibly horrible things she might tell me."

"Mom, before I tell you this, I want you-to-know that if it hurts you in any way, I won't do it," said Michelle.

"Then she told me," recalls Glenda, "and we just cried and hugged and I told her how happy I was for her."

ON JULY 9, 1992, Mary and Michelle met for the first time in 26 years outside a little cafe in Chester, Neb.

"Michelle said she would be coming with a friend in a semitruck so I knew what to look for," says Mary.

"When she pulled up, I just froze. I couldn't get out of the car until Bob asked me if I was ever going to. I couldn't believe how tiny she was. She's a whole five-feet, three-inches, and about 118 pounds."

"I liked her right away," smiles Michelle. "We just clicked."

Michelle and Mary spent four hours together, with Mary's daughter video taping most of the reunion.

Both had brought albums of photos. Michelle of her younger years and her family, and Mary of her past 26 years and even of Michelle's birth father.

During their visit, Michelle and Mary discovered they had both sent letters to the agency inquiring about each other, sometimes within weeks of each other, but neither received any information.

MICHELLE united both of her families on Thanksgiving Day when she prepared a turkey dinner at the home of a friend.

Both mothers agree they were nervous. "I didn't sleep at all the night before," says Mary. "I wasn't sure how they would feel towards us."

As it turned out, there was an abundance of love and thanks exchanged that day. "We spent a lot of time crying, hugging and getting to know each other," says Glenda. "We also looked at family albums.

"Michelle handled everything beautifully. No way did she or Mary make me feel like I was losing my daughter and Mary was gaining one. We just thanked each

"George and I thanked Mary for giving Michelle life and putting her up for adoption, and Mary thanked us for loving her and giving her such a nice home."

MICHELLE'S birth father was killed in Victnam when she was about four years of age. He did marry, however, and it is believed he had three children.

Mary does see his sister occasionally and has informed her of Michelle's whereabouts. His sister is looking forward to meeting with Michelle in the future.

Michelle now has peace of mind as well as lots more relatives, many of whom she is still looking forward to meeting. As of Mary, she has acquired

As of Mary, she has acquired two new grandchildren. Michelle is the mother of two sons, nine-yearold Zachary and eight-year-old Adam.

In addition to Michelle, the Langenbergs are the parents of another adopted child, son Jeremy, and a foster daughter also named Michelle. "I would never recommend abor-

THANK YOU

I WOULD like to say thank you to everyone who said prayers, sent cards, phone or stopped in to see Jeremy since his accident. Thank you to Gary West for knowing what to do right away to relieve the pain and the staff at PMC for making his stay at the hospital a comfortable one. I would like to say a special thank you to Coach John Murtaugh, Aaron Schuett and the Wayne Wrestlers for coming to see him and giving him so much support when he needed it. That was very important to him. It is a good feeling to know that Jeremy is associated with such a fine group of young men. Thanks again to everyone. He is going to be okay; our prayers were answered, Jeanie Sturm.

FOR GARRY. Aug. 21, 1942-Dec. 12, 1992. Thank you for a love always, For aughter lighting all our days, A mate to struggle through the haze, I needed you — so many ways! Thank you for a loving heart, And laughter sprung from every part, A temper that was slow to burn, Returning goodness every turn. Thank you for those loving years. The time we laughed ourselves to tears, And comported each others' fears, Or raised our cups and offered, "Cheers!" Please comfort me in all my sorrow, Help me through each sad tomorrow, So memories are all I've got? I guess I think that's quite a lot... (Marty Potter) From the family of Garry Schroeder, we thank all of you who have helped us in any way. The cards, phone calls, visits, food prayers or even just a hug has really helped us through this tragedy. We love you all. Luanne Schroeder, Casey, Davis, Wendi and Tyler.
