

Concord mourns deaths

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

Residents of communities throughout Northeast Nebraska, including Concord, were jolted last week after learning of the deaths of a St. Paul, Neb. couple and their young daughter.

The Rev. Albert Sieck Jr., age 40, his wife Sandra, 38, and nine-year-old Ruth Sieck were killed last Thursday afternoon when a semi-truck collided with their van on the southwest edge of Lincoln.

Mrs. Sieck, daughter of Norman and Betty Anderson of Concord, was born at Wayne and grew up in Concord, graduating from Laurel-Concord High School in 1972.

The Siecks' three sons, Ben, age 12, Norman, 5, and Matthew, 1, remain hospitalized in Lincoln General Hospital with injuries sustained in the accident.

Ben is listed in critical condition with head injuries. Matthew also is listed in critical condition and Norman was in fair condition.

SOME 600 people, including 84 ministers, gathered Monday in St. Paul to attend funeral services for the Siecks.

A burial service for all three was conducted today (Tuesday) at 11 a.m. at the cemetery in Concord.

Memorials are being established to benefit the St. Mark's Lutheran Church building fund in St. Paul, where Sieck served as pastor, along with the couple's three surviving children.

According to a report in the Omaha World-Herald, family members said the three boys eventually will live in Dixon with their mother's sister, Mrs. Jerry (Alvina) Stanley.

THE SIECK family had traveled to Lincoln to watch the St. Paul girls compete in the state basketball tournament.

They were reportedly traveling to visit another family in the Denton area, located southwest of Lincoln, when the nearly head-on collision occurred at 4:25 p.m. on U.S. Highway 77 West at West Pioneers Boulevard.

According to authorities, the driver of the semi-truck, 31-year-old Donald Sherman Jr. of Warrenton, Mo., was southbound on the high-

High water marks?

Many communities in Nebraska are experiencing flooding conditions as the warming trend melts our heavy blanket of snow and the runoff can't soak into the still-frozen ground. Only isolated cases of minor flooding have been reported in Wayne County. We seem to have more of a problem with graffiti than high water, as this scene on the Logan Creek Bridge Northeast of Wayne indicates.

'Celebrate Wayne' is theme

Calling on all members of the community to live the theme of 1993 in the community, newly installed President of the Wayne Area Chamber, Nancy Endicott, said everyone needs to be reminded about what a fine community we live in.

"Celebrate Wayne," is the theme for the year, decreed by Mrs. Endicott, who said it was an honor to serve as the chamber president.

attended the annual banquet held this year in the newly opened Riley's Convention Center in Wayne. The evening included western dancing and dance lessons and allowed most Waynians to don western duds and not feel too ill-at ease.

In her inaugural message Mrs. Endicott said as a relative newcomer to Wayne it might be easier for her to see and appreciate all the good things going on in the community. She recounted a long list of positive developments and efforts in the community.

Besides changing the mantle of leadership for the Chamber from Jim Markham to Mrs. Endicott, the event also celebrated the change of leadership for the Wayne Industries and Wayne Ambassadors organizations. Industries leadership moves from

Dr. Jay Liska was named Wayne's Citizen of the Year 1992 during the annual chamber of Commerce banquet Sunday night. In a departure from the norm, the award was presented posthumously.

Liska, a community and state leader in both vocational and civic service, died of a heart attack November 14.

The citizen of the year award was presented to his widow, Donna Liska.

The emotional presentation was made by 1991's Citizen of the Year, Jane O'Leary.

"Our community has had the good fortune to be accustomed to his leadership for nearly twenty-five years and this award is merely untimely, not belated awareness of his impact," she said.

HE WAS A member of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, Wayne Industries, the Wayne Hospital Board, and an executive member of the Wayne State Foundation. He served on the Board of Directors of State National Bank, was a volunteer fireman, a member of the Masonic Lodge #120, a member of the American Angus Association, and the Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association for 31 years, for which he also served as president.

"Dr. Jay was an important part of the agricultural, business, industrial and educational integration that is the fiber of our community," said Mrs. O'Leary.

DR. LISKA was 57 when he died and was recalled then for his years of service to scouting organizations and support for other youth activities.

He was born near Niobrara, Neb. where he attended rural school and was active in 4-H. He set school records in discus and excelled in music, scholastics and other athletics.

He earned his Doctor of Medicine degree from Iowa State University in 1961, the same year he and Donna were married. They have three children. Liska's parents Alex and Stella live in Wayne.

PRIOR TO his death he had been a partner with his brother Ken, and Dr. Dave Swerczek in the Wayne Veterinary Clinic. He also raised prize registered Angus Cattle and was named as Nebraska Ambassador in 1992 for his efforts to promote economic development in the state.

In accepting the plaque for her late husband, Donna said he would have been extremely honored to receive the award.

"Our dreams were fulfilled here in Wayne," she said, citing her husband's love of the community and its people who were willing to volunteer to make it better.

School issue is resolved ---for now

By Les Mann
Of The Herald

Wayne Schools Superintendent Dennis Jensen has rescinded an earlier decision to eliminate the strings music program and German classes.

Citing the need to eliminate the negativism, Jensen told a group of approximately 150 parents, teachers and concerned residents Monday night that he will not eliminate the two fine arts programs, this year.

Numerous parents had objected to Jensen's notification to German teacher Edith Zahniser and strings music instructor Bonnie Day, who both have part time contracts, that their programs would be eliminated next year in a cost cutting move.

JENSEN SAID the move would have trimmed approximately $32,000 from the budget. He told the group that he was not convinced the district could afford to offer those two programs in the future and invited the audience at Monday's public meeting to offer suggestions on how the schools could get through the current budget crunch without cutting favored programs.

Many members of the audience objected to the proposed cuts in fine arts programs at the same time the schools are planning to spend more on computers and technology.

We must not delete fine arts to feed this technology revolution," said James Day, professor of fine arts at Wayne State College. He said the same steps are being taken all over the country in eliminating fine arts programs to make way for technology. If there need to be cuts, they should be made equitably across the

'Don't blame the board'

Calling the brouhaha over proposed elimination of the strings music and German programs in Wayne Schools "unfortunate" Wayne Schools Superintendent, Dennis Jensen said the communication surrounding the issue has nevertheless been very good.

He said he didn't like the heat the members of the school board were taking over the issue. He said the board has put a lot of effort and study into needed changes for the district and doesn't deserve the criticism being leveled at them by fine arts supporters in the community.

"I'm the one that should be taking the heat," said Jensen. He said the proposed cuts were his ideas and the board took no action on them. He said he had informed the board about his intentions. "Good change takes time—I'm a bit impulsive," he said, adding that he may have moved too fast on the proposed cuts.

Jensen said in all his years as a school administrator he currently has the best board he has ever had. He said the Wayne board members have worked very hard and have professionally considered all the options for improvement of the Wayne schools.

Wally Seiler as Mark Twain

Mark Twain visiting Wayne Public Library

Wally Seiler of Alliance will present a program, "Mark Twain on the Lecture Circuit," on Friday, March 19 at Wayne Public Library.

The program, which will begin at 7:30 p.m., is open to the public free of charge.

During the program, Seiler, dressed as Twain, will recreate the spirit and feeling of the lectures by which Twain captivated audiences throughout the United States and Europe during the noted author's later years.

Seiler, a trust officer at The Abbott Bank in Alliance, has presented his program throughout the United States. He once won a nationwide Mark Twain look alike contest and, as a result, served as the host of the Calaveras Jumping Frog Jubilee in Angels Camp, Calif. The event capitalizes on one of Twain's best loved stories.

Seiler's presentation for Wayne Public Library is being underwritten by the Nebraska Humanities Council, an affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Preparedness key to surviving tornadoes

Tornadoes, nature's most violent weather phenomenon, are spawned by thunderstorms that usually build up in Nebraska in the late afternoon of hot, humid early spring and summer days.

This year during Severe Weather Awareness Week, March 22 through 28, the State Civil Defense Agency (SCDA) and the National Weather Service are urging Nebraskans to pay heed to the dangers of thunderstorms and tornadoes.

"The best warning and prediction system is worthless if people ignore the warnings," says Stanley Heng, the state's adjutant general and director of the SCDA.

That's why it's important that people pay attention to developing weather systems and have a plan for the family that will protect them when the warnings are issued or the civil defense sirens are sounded.

"A family disaster plan is the best insurance for your family against any potential threat including severe storms," Heng said.

Included in the plan should be where to take shelter. The best shelter in a home is in the basement under something sturdy like a workbench. If there is no basement, go to a small, interior room like a closet or bathroom. Stay away from outside walls and windows.

Heng also urges all families to assemble a storm kit. The kit should contain emergency food and water supplies, a transistor radio, flashlight, extra batteries and a simple first aid kit.

"All families should discuss where they can seek shelter if they aren't at home," Heng adds.

For example, at school or work, seek shelter in designated areas. He advises people to avoid large, open areas such as gymnasiums and auditoriums.

"If you're in a car don't try to outrun a tornado. The safest course is to abandon the vehicle and seek shelter in a ditch or some other low spot, below ground level."

Mobile homes are extremely unsafe and Heng advises anyone living in one to seek shelter elsewhere when the severe weather warnings are issued.

"If families will take a few minutes to sit down and discuss what each member should do and where they should go when threatening weather develops, many injuries and deaths can be prevented," Heng added.

board-and-not-just-in-the-fine-arts-programs.

DAY WAS joined by others who spoke with passion in support of the strings and German programs. He also said the residents of the district should question why elected board members give up curriculum decisions to the superintendent.

Both teachers talked to the group about their programs citing the need to retain them and the value to students who have graduated.

"Isn't cutting fine arts programs too high a price to pay for technology," asked Mrs. Day.

Preserving local German heritage, part of the family history of 40 percent of the Wayne population, should be considered in the decision as well economics and science, said Mrs. Zahnsier. She indicated trade Nebraska exports to Germany were growing dramatically and the students should be exposed to more language and culture than just Spanish and English.

JENSEN SAID he was a music major in college and took six years of German, said the original decision to cut the programs was not done by him to raise funding levels for technology. He said he has no intention to cut all fine arts programs to replace them with computer classes. He said he targeted the two programs along with other budget cuts as a means to address an anticipated shortfall brought on by legislative and state funding changes.

Jensen said Wayne schools would need to come up with $100,000 more in next year's budget to pay for funding changes in special education. Those costs were previously borne by the state. He said that cost will be reimbursed to the local district at the rate of about 75 cents on the dollar but those repayments won't come until the year following.

HE SAID A main criteria in the decision was the numbers of students being served by the programs. Currently 22 students are in German and approximately 35 are in the strings program. Other proposed cuts include elimination of a half-time physical education teacher and savings of nearly $30,000 from privatization of the school bus service.

Jensen said the elimination of the strings music and German program may have allowed the earlier implementation of an elementary Spanish program, which is one of the goals which has been established for the district.

Jensen said since arriving in Wayne last year he has researched the findings of accreditation studies for Wayne Schools, findings of university reports on the Wayne Curriculum, local survey findings and direct input from community members. He said those findings have all indicated a need for the schools to upgrade computer and industrial technology offerings.

"Schools have been criticized for always adding things and never cutting anything," he said.

Mini-grants available

The Nebraska Departments on Aging and Social Services have awarded mini-grants to the state's Area Agencies on Aging to help promote the availability of energy assistance to older Nebraskans.

Agencies on Aging will receive funds to distribute informational materials; to make application forms available to eligible people; and to assist persons with the application process.

The Nebraska Low Income Energy Assistance Program - administered by the Nebraska Department of Social Services - is available to help people with limited incomes offset the cost of heating and cooling their homes.

"The funds will help get the word out about the Low Income Energy Assistance Program," said Jacky Smith, director of the Department on Aging. "As it is now, eligible older adults may not be using the program simply because they aren't aware of it."

Wayne girls set record in wins

The Wayne girls basketball team came with in seven seconds of possibly earning a trip to the Class B State Championship game last week in Lincoln, but the Lady Blue Devils have nothing to hang their heads about.

Marlene Uhing's squad set a school record with 17 wins this season and four of the seven losses came against teams in the state tournament. Wayne lost twice to Schuyler who ended up placing second in Class B.

The Blue Devils lost to Wisner-Pilger who won the C-1 championship and they lost to Battle Creek who was at the state tournament. The other three losses came against O'Neill, Stanton and Hartington Cedar Catholic.

"I thought we played very well in the state tournament game with Schuyler," Uhing said. "We played very good defense and we did a good job on the boards."

Uhing said her squad kept their poise throughout the game, something they've pretty much done through the whole season. "We did a nice job of handling Schuyler's press and controlling the tempo," Uhing said. "About the only negative thing we did was shoot free throws. We didn't shoot them like we normally do."

Wayne was 10-18 from the foul line but the Blue Devils missed the front end of several one-and-one opportunities. Wayne out-rebounded Schuyler 28-21 with Reeg hauling down 13 caroms to lead the way.

Looking back on the season Uhing felt there was just one small stretch where her team lost their focus and didn't play real well. "Heading into the district tournament I thought our seniors did a nice job of making sure we were ready to play each game," Uhing said.

Wayne made its first trip to the state tournament in school history and the starting five—all seniors will have their names etched in the school record books forever for that accomplishment alone.

Jenny Thomsen, Angie Thompson, Danielle Nelson, Erin Pick and Liz Reeg comprised that line-up with sophomores Jenny Thompson and Carrie Fink coming off the bench in order. The varsity roster was rounded out with Audra Sievers, Amy Ehrhardt and Cori Langefeld.

Wayne will definitely miss the services of its seniors next season but none may be missed more than Liz Reeg. She will go into the Wayne record books as the first female in school history to surpass the 1000 point scoring mark—and possibly the last.

Reeg finished her career as a Blue Devil with 1215 points including 521 of them this past season with a 22 point-plus per game average over the 24-game schedule.

Reeg also led Wayne in rebounding this year with 177 caroms for a 7.5 per game average. She was also Wayne's top scorer last season at 17 points-plus per game and she's managed to hit the double figures mark in scoring in 50 of her last 51 games. She scored eight against Wakefield in last season's game in a contest she only played approximately half of.

Reeg will not only be remembered as Wayne's top scorer in the history of the school but her ability to shoot free throws has proven to be second to none. She connected on 194 of 239 attempts this season for 81 percent.

She made more free throws over the course of the season than Wayne's 24 opponent's combined to even attempt. The final tally reads: Reeg, 194 made, opponent's 183 attempted.

Reeg's accomplishments on the court this season should earn her a spot on the Class B All-State Team. This team has not been selected yet, but considering what she's done for Wayne, it would be a travesty if she isn't selected.

Uhing said that Reeg impressed many of the coaches that Wayne played against throughout the season. "Despite the fact that Liz was far and away our leading scorer, she is a complete team player," Uhing said. "As a coach, I've liked the way she's been consistent for us."

"We could always count on her to get things done everytime out. It made it a lot easier which you could depend on her to get her points. Another thing she really succeeded in, was having the ability to take nothing but good shots which is why she connected on nearly 50 percent of her attempts," Uhing added.

Of course, Reeg drew most of the media attention all season due to her stats but credit also has to be given where credit is due—to Erin Pick, Angie Thompson, Jenny Thomsen and Danielle Nelson.

When you consider the adversity the Blue Devils have overcome this season which is another subject that I don't even dare to venture into in this column, it makes what they've accomplished that much more special.

Each of the Wayne players had a role on the team and with out a doubt, they each made the most of that role which is a prime reason Wayne landed a spot in the state tournament.

Hats off to the Lady Blue Devils on a great season!

Living in Wayne the past five-plus years, I've gotten to know an infinite number of people and for the most part, I have to say the people in our community are hard working people who enjoy the place they live—Wayne America.

I usually consider myself a pretty good judge of people and have judged this community as a quality place where people care for their neighbors. However, my judgement is getting tested in the Levi Webb fund-raising efforts to represent this very community in a trip across the seas as part of the United States Powerlifting Team.

Come on people, let's wake up! I'm not saying we have to go out and re-mortgage our houses to help support Webb's quest to possibly earn a berth in the next Olympic Games, but if we all chip in and help, this may become a reality.

The Webb's have until the end of March to raise the money for the trip to Finland and Sweden. I've taken the liberty to break down the figures for those of you who are numbers nuts.

If just 400 people donate a tax deductible gift of $10, then the Webb's can represent Wayne, Northeast Nebraska, Nebraska as a State and America in next month's powerlifting competition.

If just 40 people donated a tax deductible gift of $100, Levi Webb would have the chance to become a world champion in the sport of powerlifting.

Can you understand the arithmetic here? Let me go one step further. If 800 people in the area donate a tax deductible gift of $5, the Webb's could make the trip a reality.

The bottom line here, is you can give what ever you feel comfortable with and if he gets to go and does become a world champion, then your contributions are part of a world championship.

Please send your tax deductible gift to Levi Webb, 216 Fairgrounds, Ave. #23, Wayne, Nebraska, 68787.

A WORD ABOUT JUICES AND "JUICERS"

A recent book promises much from the juices of fruits and vegetables. You can revitalize your body by using a "juicer" to extract the juices from the produce. Juice certainly has its place in a healthy diet. But by extracting the juice from produce, you might lose the fiber. And, many of us don't get enough fiber now. There is no juice better than the produce itself—So, to get your supply of juice and fiber, eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Eisenhower Grant awarded to WSC

Schools will benefit from grant

Nebraska's elementary and secondary school students will be the ultimate beneficiaries of a $11,800 Eisenhower Grant recently awarded to Wayne State College and the Nebraska Chapter of The Nature Conservancy.

In a joint effort, Wayne State biologists and the Niobrara Valley staff will use the grant to continue the long-range educational outreach program at the preserve. The program is designed to introduce elementary and secondary students to an array of biological topics during outdoor workshops at the preserve.

The grant will be used to conduct two teacher workshops at the Niobrara Preserve during the summer of 1993. These workshops — for 20 secondary and 20 elementary teachers from across Nebraska — will introduce the participants to field studies in aquatic, forest and grassland biology.

Dr. Al Steuter, Director of Sciences and Stewardship for the Nebraska Chapter of the Conservancy, and his staff have been committed to expanding science education opportunities at the preserve.

"The Eisenhower Grant will enhance The Nature Conservancy's efforts to extend these educational resources to all students in Nebraska," says Steuter.

Eisenhower Grants are administered as part of the federally mandated Dwight D. Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Improvement Act, which in 1992 awarded $237 million in grants nationally.

The Nature Conservancy was incorporated in 1951 in the District of Columbia for scientific and educational purposes. The Conservancy is a nonprofit, tax-exempt corporation. It has 680,000 members, including 3,300 in Nebraska, and has been responsible for the protection of more than 6.5 million acres of land.

"FIELD TRIPS make a big impression on students," she says. "Getting them into the field is basic to how I teach."

Wayne AWANA Club places in competition

Teams from the Wayne AWANA Club recently participated in a 12 club AWANA Bible quiz competition held in Lincoln. The competition included oral and written questions of club material.

Taking first place honors were Melissa Fluent and Beth Johnson, members of a combined Concord/Wayne Guards team.

Placing second were Faith Kroeker, Renae Johnson, Kristin Hix, Malissa Fredrickson, Nicole Trevett, Katie Walton and Stacy Kardell, members of Wayne's Chum team.

Contributing points for a Pals team were Judd Giese and Tony Carollo.

Excellence awards were received by Nicole Trevett, Katie Walton and Melissa Fluent for perfect scores.

All teams were coached by Bonnie Fluent and assisted by Lauren Walton and Peggy Johnson.

AWANA is a non-denominational international club for all ages. Wayne's club is open to preschool through sixth graders and meets each Wednesday from 6:45 to 8:15 p.m. in the Wayne National Guard Armory.

Visitors and new clubbers are welcome at any point in the club year.

The public is invited to the Armory on March 31 for a Grand Prix and flea market.

Students attend choral clinic

Tree planting helps everything

Planting trees can be considered a long-term investment in enhancing the beauty of a home or farmstead by protecting the soil, as well as providing oxygen, shade and shelter for wildlife.

"The massive root systems of trees help hold the soil in place, while leaves and branches help protect bare soil from the explosive force of raindrops," said Ken Berney, assistant manager for Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District. "Carefully planted rows of trees can serve as good wind breaks against blowing soil and snow."

In addition to these conservation benefits, trees are considered "environmentally friendly." Trees produce oxygen and provide shelter for many kinds of birds and animals.

According to Berney, planting field windbreaks, can often mean increased crop yields, reduced plant damage and reduced soil erosion. A field windbreak can protect the growing crop from wind damage from soil particles blowing across the land.

"Established windbreaks also help to distribute blowing snow more uniformly over the field," he said. As the snow melts, it helps recharge the moisture level evenly over the soil.

Farmstead windbreaks are planted with conifer tree species to stop the snow from blowing. "With this type of windbreak, the snow will be dumped immediately on the other side of the breaks, so it doesn't get spread out around the buildings, grain bins, feedlots, and driveways."

An evergreen windbreak placed to buffer the prevailing winter winds can also save significant amounts of energy required to heat a home. And, windbreaks that protect livestock in feedlots can increase feed efficiency and productivity.

"In order to design each windbreak, SCS personnel look at the objectives of each landowner, and whether the windbreak is for the farmstead or field, for wind erosion control or to protect the feedlot or farmstead," Berney said. Local Soil Conservation Service personnel can assist landowners in choosing tree species and designing windbreaks.

"Windbreaks are a long-term investment that doesn't give an immediate cash return," he said. Costs for the windbreak depends on the species planted, whether the landowner plants seedlings or transplanted trees, if a contractor plants the windbreak, and the weed control needed to prepare the planting area.

Several programs provide cost-share assistance for wildlife habitat plantings. Through the Lower Elkhorn NRD's Wildlife Habitat Improvement Program (WHIP), producers with CRP land can receive 100 percent cost-share assistance for tree seedlings and contract planting. Some local Pheasants Forever chapters offer assistance for tree plantings with NRD weed barrier.

County ASCS offices have several cost-share programs for farmers for establishing other types of tree plantings. Contact your local office for more details.

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District is once again selling tree seedlings through the district's tree sales program. This year, 29 different species of trees may be ordered in lots of 25 trees per species, according to Berney. Tree and shrub seedlings can be ordered by contacting your local SCS office. The seedlings will be available in late March.

For tree seedling prices and other cost-share information, contact your county SCS office or the Lower Elkhorn NRD in Norfolk.

President Clinton's farm plan discussed in S.D.

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) -- President Clinton's economic plan falls short in its support for family farmers, a senior congressional economist told the National Farmers Union convention.

"In the long term I think you need a different farming system," said Stewart Smith, a senior economist for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. "I don't think you're going to get it unless you get some federal policies changed, and I don't see it on the horizon right now."

Rep. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., said Clinton would leave fundamental changes in farm policy to the 1995

Erosion on decline

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Wind erosion on farm and range land in the Great Plains decreased significantly during the last two months of 1992 compared with the same period a year earlier.

Nearly 1.24 million acres were damaged, but that was almost 350,000 acres less than in November and December 1991, said Galen Bridge, acting chief of the Soil Conservation Service.

He attributed the decreases to implementation of conservation plans under the Farm Bill provisions and the Great Plains Conservation Program. The areas of least soil and crop damage had good moisture and growth in the fall and some protective snow cover.

In the Northern Great Plains, wind erosion decreased by 155,889 acres, a 13 percent drop from last year. In the Southern Great Plains, 183,196 acres were damaged, less than one-half of last year's amount.

About 91 percent of the damaged land was cropland and the rest was primarily rangeland.

Emergency tillage and surface roughening to prevent land damage was reported on 850,779 acres, 66 percent above the average for the years 1967 to 1992.

The Soil Conservation Service reports land damaged when small mounds or drifts of soil are observed, or blown soil covers vegetation.

The GOLDEN YEARS

by Pat Lichty

More Americans are living longer than ever before. The latest UN World Health Organization yearbook puts the average lifespan of U.S. women at 78.6 years and men at 71.6. In 15 other countries, women live longer, but in 21 countries, including Costa Rica and Cuba, men live longer. Japan ranks No. 1 in longevity — its women averaging 82.5 years, and men 76.2 years.

Charlie O'Connor, retired warehouse manager and widower, has many fans in Dumont, New Jersey. For years he coached young football and baseball teams. At 76, he is best known for ruling the same intersection for more than 10 years as a school crossing guard. Over six feet tall and husky, he's an authority symbol for motorists and a favorite of grade-school pupils. He calls each child by name as he signals them to cross, exchanges a "high five" as each passes by, and hands out a dollar bill on birthdays. He gets many Christmas presents, but says: "The best they give me is their love."

The Library Card

This column is written twice a month to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at Wayne Public Library.

We'd like to share a letter that reached us in December. It was addressed to Ms. Library Ms. from the American Biographical Institute, Inc. and began:

"Dear 916: I am delighted to announce your nomination for the prestigious title "Woman of the Year-1992." The Institute's International Board of Research decided on your nomination based on thorough research as described in the accompanying leaflet. This nomination is an obvious reflection of your overall accomplishments and contributions to society... Singling out a small number of recommendations to receive the accolade "Woman of the Year" has been difficult indeed... The American Biographical Institute is known to honor only a limited number of women each year with this award. My congratulations to your nomination, 916."

We hardly know whether to laugh or cry.

On a more serious note, National Library Week will be celebrated by the library on April 18-24, 1993. This year's theme is "Libraries Change Lives."

We are asking for testimonials for publication that would explain how libraries have shaped or changed lives. Anyone in the community is encouraged to participate in this event. Your account of the importance of libraries in your life should be neatly written or typed and be short — several paragraphs. Please sign your entry and include a telephone number. If you wish to allow us to include your name with your story in any publicity, please state your permission in writing. Testimonials can be given to a librarian or mailed by March 31.

Be sure to mark your calendars for our next program. The library is sponsoring "Mark Twain on the Lecture Circuit" on Friday, March 19. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is free to the public.

This living history presentation of Mark Twain, given by Wally Seiler of Alliance, will recreate the spirit and feeling of the lectures with which Twain captivated audiences world-wide in his later years. Seiler is a trust officer at the Abbott Bank in Alliance. He has presented his program throughout the United States. He once won a Mark Twain Lookalike Contest and, as a result, served as the host of the Calaveras Jumping Frog Jubilee in Angels Camp, Calif.

This program is underwritten by a grant from the Nebraska Humanities Council in affiliation with the National Endowment for the Humanities.

On March 16, the library will co-sponsor a program at the Wayne Middle School library on the Underground Railroad. Two hour-long programs, one for the fifth grade and one for the eighth grade, will begin at 1 p.m. This program is also underwritten by a grant from the Nebraska Humanities Council with the National Endowment for Humanities.

Sometimes authors write books with titles that are interestingly appropriate. For instance: "A Generation of Leaves" by Bloom; "Birds of North America" by Robbins; "Farmer Duck" by Waddell; and Robert Quackenbush has written a series of children's books about a duck named Henry. Have you seen any similar interesting titles and authors? Let us know. We are keeping a list!

Library hours are 1 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Fridays; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays; and 2 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Budget continues to plague legislature

By State Senator Kurt Hohenstein
District 17

The Legislature is over a third done for the year. We have considered many bills but the most substantial part of the legislation to be considered this year is still ahead of us. The Appropriations Committee held hearings on the Department of Social Services' budget as well as the Department of Public Institutions' budget, which include many of the medical issues we are facing.

The Health and Human Services Committee also held hearings on specific Medicaid cuts or changes. Needless to say, at those hearings we were hit with both barrels regarding the effect of the cuts on services and individuals across the state.

The cuts were not easy to make initially and will be more difficult to sustain down the road. However, we do have to resolve the Medicaid crisis and cuts or complete revamping of the system is necessary.

I am afraid that some of the costs we have up front will be increased in order to make some long term savings because we've let the system get so out of whack for so long. I'd appreciate any input on the Medicaid cuts being proposed and how they might affect you and whether you would support tax increases if we do not make those cuts.

Also you may have heard that some of the state's budget woes were solved by virtue of increased tax receipts by the tune of about $32 million over the next biennium. These are just projections and of course are not guaranteed monies. If we spend them, however, they will go back into the base budget for the next two years and increase our future deficit. That will only create a larger problem down the road.

The problems the state faces are not on the revenue side. We are generating plenty of revenues to support sufficient operation of state government. The problems have been the increase of expenditures, either directly or indirectly, and we really must get a handle on the state expenditures.

LB 588, which is the FIFRA bill, was advanced on first reading. That bill will bring us in line with all of the 49 states in establishing a statewide program for administration of fungicide, insecticides and rodenticides.

The EPA has indicated that if we do not get on that program ourselves, they'll take over operation and could potentially restrict the use of certain farm and lawn chemicals that are necessary for continued agricultural growth in Nebraska. The farm organizations have supported FIFRA and it looks like the time has come for its passage.

LB 112, which is a bill that would allow counties to consolidate services for titling, licensing and registration of motor vehicles in one county office, passed second reading. I offered an amendment that would allow all counties to decide which office to consolidate it under, whether it be the clerks, treasurers or assessors office.

Some county may want to do it under one office while another county may want to do it under another and they should have that option. This is not mandatory but would allow the county board to make that decision on their own. This will hopefully allow the counties, once the statewide automation project is complete, to set up a procedure in the local court-houses which will allow individuals to have one-stop registration of their motor vehicles.

I have designated LB 346 as my priority bill. That bill increases the ability to enforce out-of-state plate violations. The fiscal analyst office has indicated that it could generate approximately $2.5 million additional dollars across the state of Nebraska without any additional increase in cost to local or state government. That bill should be heard on general file this week and hopefully will receive favorable votes to advance to select file.

There will be a Rural Caucus on Children on statewide children's issues, in South Sioux City, on March 12, at the South Sioux City Hall beginning at 10 a.m. Also, the South Sioux City Chamber is sponsoring a breakfast, "Rise and Shine with Hohenstein" on March 12 at 7 a.m. at the Karousel in South Sioux City. Please attend either of these events.

With the State Basketball Tournaments upon us, I welcome any of you to stop in my office and visit with my staff. We are in session all week and will be most appreciative of discussing with you any problems or concerns or bills that you wish to discuss. Please feel free to contact me and my staff at State Capitol, Lincoln, NE 68509; or call me at 402/471-2716.

Senator Schellpeper responds to correspondence on issues

By Senator Stan Schellpeper
District No. 18

This week I would like to talk about a few issues on which I have received correspondence.

The first is the issue raised by Senator Ashford of Omaha, who introduced LB 83, requiring owners of firearms to keep them under lock. The parent or guardian of a child injured by an improperly stored firearm would be subject to a $300 fine. It is my belief that if a law were to be passed to protect children from the negligence of a parent or guardian, it ought to be broad enough to include other forms of negligence than simply negligence related to firearms.

When considering the many ways a child could be injured, to narrowly focus on firearms, suggests a bias of particular agenda other than the protection of children. Rather than adopt a narrow piece of legislation, we could, perhaps, work to educate and encourage firearm owners to keep them out of reach. An effort to revive the bill, after the Judiciary Committee voted to kill it, has failed and has probably signaled its end for this legislative session.

LB 125 is a bill I do support, which would prevent the harassment of anyone engaged in hunting, trapping or fishing, if they are not trespassing and are otherwise engaged in the lawful practice of these activities. These activities, which are lawfully permitted, give individuals the right to practice them without harassment by those who disagree. Some animal rights organizations have been involved in obstruction of these activities which, I believe, exceeds their constitutional right to free speech to the extent that it interferes with another individual's rights.

The last issue I will discuss this week relates to school finance. LB 320 would create a special fund into which would be placed a set percentage of state sales tax and income tax revenues. These set-aside revenues would represent about $535 million each year, which is approximately 1/3 of the revenue generated from these sources.

The money would be used to fund public education in the state and eliminate the budget setting and appropriations processes now used by the Legislature to fund schools. It is a simple idea with an immense impact on senators' ability to allocate and manage spending in the state.

I am supportive of education and believe funding it is among the highest of our priorities, however, to exempt such a large sum of money from yearly adjustments, makes state spending vulnerable to economic crises. If the state experienced a significant cash shortage, future legislatures would not be able to adjust spending for education as it now does, nor, would it be as likely to increase aid to schools if more funding was available.

Nebraska lawmakers pass bill requiring police to use radar

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Police would be required to use radar to corroborate that a motorist was speeding under a bill passed by lawmakers today.

Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha sponsored the measure (LB25) in response to two speeding cases before the state Supreme Court last July. In one opinion from the cases, the high court said the visual observation of a longtime state trooper was good enough to prove Chambers was speeding.

The bill says that visual observation shall be backed up by the use of a "radio microwave, mechanical, or electronic speed measurement device."

The bill also includes a reaction to the case of missing University of Nebraska coed Candice Harms who was found buried in a shallow grave southeast of Lincoln several months after she disappeared.

Chambers noted that prosecutors said that one of the two men who allegedly abducted her posed as a police officer. The bill requires an officer to be "in uniform and display his or her badge of authority."

The bill passed 36-0.

Lawmakers also passed: --LB31, sponsored by Sen. Doug Kristensen of Minden, to clean up laws dealing with the Department of Correctional Services. The language now would accurately reflect the correct names of facilities and divisions, make language gender neutral and amend language to more accurately reflect current procedures. Passed 43-0.

--LB36, sponsored by Sen. Scott Moore of Seward and others, to extend the life of Ground Water Conservation Districts from Jan. 1, 1995, to Jan. 1, 1997. The districts provide water conservation management and education. Passed 40-1. Lincoln Sen. Don Wesely cast the lone dissent.

--LB130, sponsored by Sen. Jennie Robak of Columbus, adds professional counselors to the laws that establish privilege between physicians and their patients. Passed 40-0.

--LB162, sponsored by Sen. George Coordsen of Hebron, brings Nebraska labor laws dealing with the employment of children into conformity with federal laws. Parents employing their children are exempt under the federal law and would not be under Nebraska law. Passed 39-0.

--LB176, sponsored by Coordsen, would allow farmers to obtain special overweight permits for their trucks during harvest season. Farm senators argue that overweight trucks are a problem during harvest season when they can't take time in the field to correctly judge the weight. Passed 25-17.

GRANDPARENTS AS PARENTS: A commercial for a certain coffee describes the special relationship grandmothers have with their grandchildren: you get hugs instead of backtalk, and you have all the fun and then send them home for the serious parenting they need.

However, we're seeing another trend these days. Grandparents are not being asked simply to play the traditional grandparental roles anymore. Increasingly, they're taking on the actual raising of their children's children.

We had previously seen the pattern develop largely in inner city areas where pressures of poverty and social crises, including drug use and drug-related crimes radically alter people's lives.

The new trend, however, is increasing among the middle class, largely white population where grandparents are changing their retirement and social plans, often sacrificing time, privacy, and friends, to raise their grandchildren.

Dr. Margaret Jendrek, associate professor of sociology and anthropology at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, surveyed 114 grandparents who provide regular care. Thirty-six had legal custody; 26 had grandchildren living in their homes — often with one or both of their parents as well, and 52 grandparents provided day care only.

The main reason grandparents have assumed these responsibilities is the desire to avoid having to place children in foster care because of situations in their home environment, for example, a parent's substance abuse, mental or emotional problems, or illness at one end of the spectrum, and the lack of sufficient financial support for Round-up is for children who will be entering kindergarten in the fall of 1993. All children entering school at this time should be five years old by October 15, 1993.

The children must be fully immunized before they begin school in August of 1993. The school nurse and kindergarten teacher will have an orientation session with the parents the day of round-up. Parents should bring the ORIGINAL (Raised Seal) birth certificate for their child. A copy will be made that day, and the original returned to you.

If you are planning to send your child to kindergarten this fall, please return this registration form by Wednesday, March 17 to Lynette Joslin, School Nurse, Laurel-Concord Public School, Laurel, NE 68745. An exact schedule will then be returned to let you know when to bring your child.

Ag Secretary promises support for Neb. farms

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP)--U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy said he knows that farmers are concerned about a proposed energy tax, budget cuts, a stop in U.S. grain sales to Russia and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"I know what a legislator would do, how a stroke of the pen can ruin a farm season here in Nebraska," and that won't happen, Espy said Thursday before more than 500 farmers and ranchers who gathered from around the state at the Governor's Ag Conference in Kearney.

Espy said that he is disappointed with a U.S. Treasury Department opinion last week that said ethanol should be included under President Clinton's proposed energy tax. The ethanol industry thought its product would be exempt from the proposed tax based on the British thermal unit of fuels because the Clinton administration said it would not apply to renewable fuels.

But he said the matter has not been resolved yet.

"I'm not here to pretend that a Btu tax is popular in Nebraska," he said. "It's not popular in North Dakota, it's not popular in Mississippi. But at least no one is getting singled out."

Farmers gave Espy a standing ovation after his speech.

He brought up some subjects that aren't going to be popular, such as the Btu tax and federal crop insurance, said Douglas L. Schmale of Lodgepole, a wheat farmer and member of the Nebraska wheat board. But he said Espy has shown a willingness to work on them.

"I think most importantly he mentioned and he understands that farm income needs to improve," Schmale said. "That's something we haven't heard from a secretary of agriculture in a long time. Admittedly, he's going to be restrained by budget. Budget is haunting everyone. But I think

Pork producers have 'beef'

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP)--Nebraska pork producers might have a beef with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy.

Espy, in Kearney on Thursday for a state agriculture conference, had high praise for the main course at a luncheon.

"This beef is remarkably sweet and tender and very good," Espy said.

But he was eating pork -- smoked Windsor loins with cherry sauce.

Some of the 500 farmers in attendance muttered among themselves about the remark.

But it appeared that everyone was too polite to point out the error to Espy, who never corrected the mistake in his speech to the Governor's Agriculture Conference.

Mike Espy understands what rural America needs, what agriculture needs."

In budget-cutting, Espy said he is working on streamlining agricultural agencies such as the Farmers Home Administration and the Soil Conservation Service to eliminate governmental red tape.

His speech evoked some of Clinton's talk of sacrifice in his economic plan.

Espy also talked about how complex it is to resolve the problem of restoring grain sales to Russia.

Since Nov. 30, 1992, Russia has defaulted on more than $350 million in payments on U.S.-backed loans for previous purchases of grain and other commodities.

"We want to feed our ally and our friend," he said. "We don't want the other nations, Australia, Canada and the EC (Economic Community) to swoop in and consume the bulk of this very important market."

The rights of the American taxpayer also have to be protected, he said.

There also is the problem of which debt to consider, the new Russian debt, or that plus the debt under the former Soviet Union, Espy said.

He said the matter is being discussed for the short- and long-term in an interagency council that includes the USDA, the Commerce Department and the National Security Council.

"I realize that this is important to you here, this is very important to me in Washington," he said.

"We are pushing ahead for commerce with Russia" in every way possible, he said.

Espy said that he is aware of concerns about the North American Free Trade Agreement, including sugar. Growers are concerned that the agreement would allow sugar imports from Mexico and other countries to flood the market and drive U.S. growers out of business.

"We think that a unified North American trade market will rival the European Community," he said. If done right, it will increase agricultural exports by about $2 billion a year, nearly double beef trade with Mexico and increase wheat exports, he said.

On the subject of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, Espy said he would fight against further limitations on commodity subsidies before negotiations are completed.

Birger Benson of Grand Island, a producer who grows corn and raises pigs, said he thought Espy seemed to

Fiddlesticks Falls

Erosion created by melting snow runoff and indiscriminate refuse dumping has created this unsightly scene north of Wayne at Logan Creek. The water was flowing at a rapid clip over the 20-foot falls over the weekend. The seasonable conditions are anticipated to continue through this week. Carrying much greater than normal flow of water, Logan Creek is seen in the foreground. Only isolated cases of water on the roadways has been reported in Wayne County while other areas of the state are experiencing difficult flooding conditions.

Farm

Johnson, chairman of the Agriculture subcommittee on general commodities, said he hoped to deliver a budget resolution by early April. And he predicted the Clinton plan would be largely intact when it emerges from the House.

"I think cuts may be a bit deeper and I think there are certain aspects of it that may be massaged... but overall I think it's going to pass."

Newly elected Rep. David Minge, D-Minn., said it's time to talk about farm policy in new terms.

"We have to make the people in our cities understand what a cheap food policy is doing to rural America," Minge said in a speech.

Smith's message was similar.

"I don't think there is a clear understanding in this country, including Washington, about what is needed to support (a family farm-based) system," Smith told the convention. "You may not agree with this, but it's not more commodity programs and it's not even higher commodity prices on those programs."

Between 1910 and 1990, marketing and input accounted for an increasing share of the agricultural economy. During the same period, farm activities dropped from 41 percent to 9 percent.

"When we were told that all these activities were moved off the farm to gain efficiency we were told only half the truth," Smith said. "The whole truth is that a great number of farmers have left the farm and the activities they used to perform have now been picked up by the other sectors of the system."

The linchpin of the change is technology, he said.

"There are a number of federal policies that actually encourage us to adopt technologies which basically put us out of business because they shift too much activity to the non-farm sector."

Smith said farm programs that encourage farmers to limit the number of commodities they produce are to blame. And so are tax codes and research that encourage high-input agriculture.

There are farming systems that increase efficiency and farming activity, said Smith, citing intensive rotational grazing by dairy producers.

Rotating cattle from pasture to pasture requires more management, but it improves pasture quality and reduces feed purchases. By contrast, bovine growth hormone results in more production per cow but more off-farm purchases.

More than $100 million in public research money was spent to develop bovine growth hormones. So far, none has been spent to promote intensive rotational grazing.

"I put the social equation this way," said Smith. "If we can have a system that's just as efficient as the current one but that results in more farming activity, then we should shift our policy toward that."

Go Nebraska (and Iowa?)

WAYNE CHAMBER of Commerce executive director Curt Wilwerding couldn't resist photographing the owners of Wayne's new Ben Franklin Craft and Fabric Store, Tom and Carmen Tilgner, during the Chamber's annual banquet Sunday evening. Tom is pictured showing off the double billed Nebraska-Iowa hat he received as a going away present from his "friends" in Iowa.

Downsized expressways touted

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Nebraska Highway Commission member Sam Jensen of Omaha says the state needs to look at downgrading plans for some of its highways.

Jensen said today that a low study indicates that super two-lane highways may be less expensive than four-lane expressways.

A super-two highway has two paved lanes, 12 to 15 feet wide with 10-foot shoulders, passing lanes about every five miles and turning and acceleration lanes where warranted, according to the Iowa study.

He said he doesn't have a specific plan for downgrading Nebraska's plan to build more than 500 miles of four-lane expressways to link major cities with Interstate 80.

"But, we need to look at that Iowa study and discuss the whole 1989 plan again," he said.

Such a discussion is likely to come up when the commission meets with members of the Legislature's Transportation Committee on March 23, he said.

"Building the super-tuos might make more sense than waiting for the money to build four-lane expressways later," the Omaha attorney said. Jensen said he doesn't want the state to forget the east-west highways, the trusty old two-lane roads that served long before there was an interstate system.

"If we don't look at Highway 30, and 34 and 2 and 20, we are in danger of losing them to poor maintenance and escalating repair costs," he said.

SECTION B

Wayne area entrepreneurs host meeting

A workshop designed to encourage entrepreneurs in northeast Nebraska will be held March 20 at the Student Center at Wayne State College. This is open to everyone, whether you have a business, an idea you would like to turn into a business, or just curious.

In June 1992, Gov. Ben Nelson signed an executive order creating the Nebraska Home-Based Business Association (NHBBA) and named 18 members to an advisory board to lead the association and develop guidelines for the state-wide organization. "It is a continuation of our efforts to involve more of our citizens in the large task of preparing Nebraska to enter the global economy," said Nelson. NHBBA was officially incorporated Nov. 19, 1992 with the advisory board becoming official board members.

Carlos Frey, artist from Wayne, Daryl LaPointe, food caterer from Winnebago, Delores Ruzicka, craftswoman from Verdigre, and Jo Lutnes, freelance writer from Columbus, are the board members representing northeast Nebraska.

The purpose of NHBBA is to form the necessary network for information that will address the needs of home-based entrepreneurs in securing financial, marketing and development assistance. The group's first newsletter was published in January and mailed to over 5,000 individuals working out of their homes.

"We know there are more than 5,000 individuals working 'at home' in Nebraska, we just don't know who they are," said Frey. "We want to locate them and encourage other entrepreneurs who have a product or service, or an idea for one, to join us."

The workshop will feature five speakers who have businesses in their home, or once did and have grown out of the home. One example of such a business will be discussed by Rob Stuber, of Wayne. He along with his partners in Restful Knights were named Nebraska Entrepreneurs of the Year in 1989 by then Gov. Kay Orr.

Other speakers on the agenda besides Stuber, will be Frey, who, along with his wife Sheri, make and market their "Small Frey Sculptures" through their own collectors club.

Ruzicka will also speak. She authors craft books and can be seen on television on the TNN network, demonstrating her crafts.

Beity Streff, Orleans, owner of Apple-Kay's which started on her farm in 1979, will also speak. She now markets her stuffed animals, quilts and wall decorations nationwide. Lutnes, owner of Studio 7, also will relate the experience of freelance writing and serving as president of the Nebraska Home-Based Business Association.

All of these individuals will relate "how and why" they chose to go into business for themselves and encourage others to do likewise, said Frey. "All have interesting and humorous stories to tell of their struggles to develop and market their product or service. We want to encourage others to do something with their ideas," Frey said. "We tell it like it is."

The workshop fee of $10 ($12.50 after March 13) includes refreshments, luncheon and materials. For a brochure or additional information, contact Frey at 620 Logan, Wayne, NE 68787 or phone 402-375-2395.

Ebmeier presents paper at national science academy

Nebraska Wesleyan University student Jonathan Ebmeier of Laurel was one of only 65 high school and college students nationwide, and only five from Nebraska, who were invited to present papers at the American Association for the Advancement of Science and National Junior Academy of Sciences Convention, held Feb. 10-14 in Boston, Mass.

Ebmeier, a 1991 graduate of Laurel-Concord Public School and a junior physics major at Nebraska Wesleyan, presented a paper titled "Formation and Analysis of Thallium-Based Superconducting Thin Films," which detailed the results of research he began in a University of Nebraska-Lincoln laboratory as a student at Laurel-Concord High School.

Also representing the state were Jason Bynum of Omaha, Tabor Fisher of Hildreth, Scott Fijie of Columbus, and Christy Rice of Central City. All five won the honor to represent the state during the annual Nebraska Junior Academy of Science Fair held at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

HILDRETH Public Schools, Laurel-Concord Public School, and Columbus Lakeview High School are all part of the Nebraska Rural Community School Association (NRCSA).

According to Bob Mandeville, superintendent of Mullen Public Schools and NRCSA president, Nebraska's representation at the national science convention reflects that tax payers are getting a good value for their money.

"Stressing scientific achievement has become part of our national and state educational agenda," Mandeville said. "For our sparsely populated state to have had such a high level of participation at this event is proof that we're doing some things correctly."

Seminar is on eating disorders

Clinical psychologist Dr. Mary Pipher will present a lecture on eating disorders at 10 a.m., Wednesday, March 17 in Northeast Community College's Activities Center Theatre. The public is invited.

This lecture is part of a Celebration of Women's history Month at Northeast.

Pipher is also the author of "Hunger Pains — The American Women's Tragic Quest for Thinness," a book for women who feel unhappy about their weight and are obsessed with food and diets. She is currently writing a book on adolescent girls entitled "Liberation Psychology: Saving the Selves of Adolescent Girls" which will be published this year.

In addition to her private practice as a clinical psychologist, Pipher is also an associate professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and Nebraska Wesleyan University. She presents workshops nationally on the topic of eating disorders, and is also a commentator for Nebraska Public Radio.

Students studying underground railroad

WAYNE - Wayne Public Library and the Wayne Middle School library will co-sponsor a program, entitled "The Underground Railroad," for the fifth and eighth grades on Tuesday, March 16, beginning at 1 p.m.

The program is funded by the Nebraska Humanities Council, a state affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, and by the Wayne Public Library.

Wayne Public Librarian Jolene Klein said the presentation focuses on Harriet Tubman, Sojourner Truth and many others who risked great dangers to free over 300 slaves during the Civil War time.

The presentation will also include hands-on items and a demonstration of how the house-to-house underground railroad worked.

Nick is the son of Mike and Susan Andersen and will now represent Wayne County at the midwest spelling contest on April 20 in Omaha. Runner-up in the spelling competition was sixth grader Jonathan Morse, standing at left, son of Dick and Carol Morse and also a student at District 25. Third place winner, standing at right, was eighth grader Kate Salmons, a student at District 57 and daughter of Ivan and Tammy Salmons.

Big Farmer's last train ride

For some reason, a couple of columns never got to Wayne. One, regarding a ride on Amtrak, bears repeating.

We needed to make a trip to Cheyenne for a funeral and we were worried about the weather. Plus, we wanted to get there and back in the shortest time possible.

Of course, we called the airlines first. There are five flights from Omaha to Denver daily. Without advance reservations, it would be $630 each! We thought we could almost charter a plane for that.

So, I called Amtrak. We could get on at 12:30 a.m. in Omaha and arrive at Borie, a way station ten miles out of Cheyenne, at 2:30 p.m. the next afternoon. The price was $125, which sounded a lot more reasonable. Kristi assured us that there was ample leg room between seats, and we could probably get a little sleep, even between stops.

We should have had a clue when it was two hours late arriving in Omaha. But, we had munchies, and stuff to read, and pillows.

The funeral was at 11 a.m. the next day, with the train scheduled to leave at 2:30 p.m.. At noon, I called Amtrak. Sure enough, it would be late. I called back at 2 p.m. It would be 4:30 p.m. We were at Borie by then. The train arrived at 5:30 p.m.

We were to connect with the California Zephyr at 9 in Denver. They announced that the train we were on had been delayed because a freight train in front of them had pulled the emergency stop for a herd of deer, and their could not get the brake back off.

Further, the California segment had been delayed by mud slides! When we got to Denver, we looked for a nearby restaurant. When we got back to Union Station, walking in rain and snow, the departure time said 1:30 a.m. We got on and went to sleep, or tried to.

At 3, I felt a "bump" and thought, "Good, now we can get going." At 6, the microphone woke us and told us there had been a derailment between Denver and Ft. Morgan.

We were loaded onto ten Grey Line buses, and transported through wet snow at rush hour, to Ft. Morgan. There was one pay phone in this station. Here, we waited on another train, while these passengers got on the buses for Denver. We also waited for Ryder trucks full of baggage.

We were tired. There was no coffee, let alone breakfast. One little gal from Sheridan, WY., was on her way to her grandmother's funeral in Creston, Iowa. We didn't Moms were running out of diapers and baby food. The snow continued and at least it was warm in the cars. I began to wish for a sleeping car.

Eventually, they fed us. And, eventually, at 8:30 p.m. that night, we arrived in Omaha and we could get off. But, we felt sorry for the folks who were going all the way to Chicago, or Buffalo, or Washington.

It was the Big Farmer's first train ride. I have a hunch it was also his last!

Nelson lauds Tootsie drive

Nebraska Gov. Ben Nelson launched a Knights of Columbus fund drive by signing a proclamation recognizing April 2, 3 and 4 as the Knights of Columbus Tootsie Roll Weekend to benefit individuals with mental retardation and their families.

During the Tootsie Roll weekend, Knights of Columbus members and volunteers will be at shopping malls and business districts requesting your help with a donation.

John Melena, Health Services Chairman for the Knights, said "The Knights of Columbus are pleased to be able to continue the Tootsie Roll Campaign which has been a tradition of ours for 18 years. Your help with this campaign gives others hope."

Over 120 Knights of Columbus Councils will be participating in this year's drive. The Knights hope to raise over $170,000 statewide for the 1993 drive. Fifty percent of funds raised by individual Knights of Columbus Councils remains in the local community and are used to support programs and services for children and adults with mental retardation locally. The remaining funds are given to organizations providing statewide services.

For more information about the 1993 Tootsie Roll Drive, contact your local Knights of Columbus Council or The Arc of Nebraska at (402) 475-4407 or (800) 666-7907.

No policy of exclusion

The current discussions in Wayne surrounding the revisions to the city planning and zoning regulations have been delayed by disputes over where and even whether the city should identify new areas in town for low income or high density housing.

A great fear seems to be pervading that the new plans may somehow permit a vast wasteland of mobile home parks and run-down tenement apartments to spring up and do irreparable harm to neighboring property values.

The whole idea of planning and zoning is to prevent unplanned development and to create property standards for the protection of the whole community. These standards can and should permit moderate priced developments for young families and low income wage earners.

Hundreds of these families are being excluded from our community now because housing is not available for them.

The community needs affordable housing desperately. Well-planned, well-designed and well-maintained mobile home parks and apartment complexes are needed to help alleviate the crunch.

We are pleased to see the new planning regulations being considered by the city will help make these types of developments possible in the Wayne area and should help create a healthy new mix in the community.

Go ahead, make our day

A capitol dispute nearly came to blows the other day.

State Auditor John Breslow and State Sen. Ernie Chambers, a pair of the two nicest fellows you'd ever want to (NOT) meet, got into a shouting match, used profanity and, based on conflicting reports, threatened to trade blows in a capitol hall.

While the state is facing a plethora of crucial problems, these two so-called leaders are acting like ill-mannered third graders in a childish dispute over who's tougher and who's got more political power.

Their verbal clash broke up before either attempted to carry out physical threats.

We deplore violence, but...

"No! Come here. I wanta show you somethin' in the Tilted Tabloid from the Disassociated Press." Homer said with corrugated frown.

"What's it about?"

"I'm head'n for a heart attack! A University of Iowa doctor sez a study he did shows dreams may be bad for the heart 'cause they turn on the body's emergency nerves and cranks 'em way up jist like they wuz real. Ain't that somethin'!"

"That puts you under the whether again don't it! Whether to believe it or not."

"I'm serious! If dreams are hazardous to yer health, I'm in big trouble!"

"Sounds like you've arrived at your wits end after an incredibly brief trip."

"Doc says the ol' nervous system shifts to high gear when dreams cause high blood pressure, speed the heart, and turns up those dern stress hormones gitt'n the body ready to flee or fight. I'm in trouble! How much more can I take after Watergate, Irangate, Nannygate and now Dreamgate!"

"No faster than you move, honey, I wouldn't worry. It's jist my opinion, but I think what makes you tick needs winding!"

"Honey, you've always had the fastest gums in the Acres. You're a real U.F.O. - Upset, Fussy, and Ornery!"

"Now sweetheart, don't git excited. Remember your concentration cramp. Febru-weary is gone. You'll feel better when spring gits sprung. That's my wifetime guarantee!"

"THANKS", Homer said from his chair, "but my dreams are tied up in nois! I always dream 'bout things I'm not s'pose to. Maybe they come from my phonographic mem'ry."

"Well, maybe you'd better tell me 'bout your dreams. I'll bet they're 'bout you on an island with a bunch of pretty girls!"

"I refuse to answer on the ground that it might eliminate me!"

"So they are 'bout other women!"

"Oh, that's jist a pigment of your imagination! Why it was jist this 'afternoon while nappin' I dreamed 'bout you. You were head'n up a group and appointed to office."

"Really! What was the office?" Dora asked with eyes flying open like a loose window shade.

"Whine steward!" Homer said chuckling.

AFTER eye-wrestling a few seconds, Dora threatened Homer to a mouth-to-mouth recitation. Then softly she said "You've an open mind, but it occasionally needs to be closed for repairs."

"Maybe so, but would that keep my dreams from kill'n me? You jist don't understand how it is to have

State finances getting sunnier

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Last week I walked outside and was struck with fear. There was a large, strange yellow fireball rising ominously in the sky.

Then someone explained to me it was just the sun. Boy, did I feel stupid. It had been so long I forgot what it looked like.

Just as things appear to be brightening up in Nebraska, things are also getting sunnier in the area of state finance.

The board that reads the tea leaves and predicts how many tax dollars are coming into state coffers raised its guess by $33 million for the next two years. They said the economy nationally, with or without Clinton's plan, seems to be picking up nicely.

BASICALLY, THE board cut in half the $68 million budget gap we were looking at previously.

It's the first good news we've had on the budget front in some time. But don't anyone think we're out of the woods yet. It's still pretty thick.

First of all, even with the reduction in the gap, we're still looking at $17.5 million a year in budget cuts. And that is a lot easier said than done.

The state has done enough cutting in the last two years that most of the easy stuff is cut. Now you're talking about cutting things that are important to some people.

That was evident last week when the Legislature held a hearing on proposed cuts in the Medicaid program, the medical program for the poor that is eating the state budget alive.

A PACKED room full of people in wheel chairs and suffering from a variety of medical conditions that are among those whose services could be cut put a face on just what it would mean to make these kinds of cuts.

I think it's a pretty safe bet none of these cuts will come to be. The real solution to Medicaid is long-term stuff looking at cutting health care costs in general, not in cutting needy people off at the knees.

The second problem you run into is even if the Legislature is able to balance the budget for the next two years, a budget gap of $60 million is projected for two years beyond that.

That's because even though the budget may be under control for now, the fact is some programs like Medicaid are continuing to grow much faster than state revenues. It's likely when the Legislature comes back two years from now we'll be in the same boat we are now.

YOU HEARD it here first: don't be surprised to see the Legislature turn to increased taxes to solve the whole problem. With the depth of the problem and the difficulty cutting budgets, increasing some tax will look more attractive.

And for the groups looking for money and trying to avoid the budget knife, raising taxes will also be a popular idea.

I don't know what tax will be raised. But I wouldn't be surprised if Sen. Dennis Byars of Beatrice, sponsor of a bill that would put the sales tax back on food, became a popular guy among his colleagues by the end of the session.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

It's your Earth and home, take care of it

Dear Editor:

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, 75 percent of our landfill capacity will be exhausted within the next 10 years. We're running out of places to throw away our garbage and, in the process, polluting ground water and using up land that could be put to such more productive use as agriculture or wildland recreation. Ironically a large percentage, if not most, of what we throw away can be recycled or re-used. We can no longer throw away our trash when there is no more "away!"

We throw away enough recyclable aluminum to completely rebuild the U.S. domestic airline fleet. We throw away 31 million tons of organic trash, very productive compost fertilizer, then turn around and use petroleum-based fertilizers which build up in our environment. Here in Wayne County we're surrounded by land where these chemicals are used and so is the water we use for drinking and bathing! Over a billion trees annually are cut down for liners to disposable diapers. This not only threatens grizzly bears in "far-away" Alaska's old growth forests but threatens the air we breathe and our global climates!

This is your nation, your continent and your planet. You can do so much by doing so little! You as a voter, taxpayer, consumer and college student can cast the deciding vote on your environment. When I worked in Glacier and Grand Canyon National Parks, I came across widespread receptacles, not only for aluminum cans but for glass, plastic and tin products. We can do the same thing here at relatively little cost.

As a consumer, you can make it profitable for businesses to re-use and recycle by your buying decisions and transactions. I would also urge writing to your congressperson. Civil leaders and conservation groups can't do it all and business interests and politicians won't see the value of recycling until you do. It's your earth and your home. It's up to you to take care of it!

Newspaper policies rankle some

Only a couple of readers have bothered to mention the nutty headline on a recent Herald front page. "Highway projects would be major plumbs for area" was the way it appeared. We should have caught the error.

Every first grader knows little Jack Horner pulled a plum out of that pie and not a plumb. Like I always say, when humans are charged with putting millions of words on paper each year, no matter how hard they try, some of them are bound to be wrong.

What I haven't been able to figure out yet is why it seems like all of our wrong words are printed in large headline type.

Why that policy?

While we are on the subject of newspaper work, it might be apropos to discuss again, a couple of paper policies.

It has, in recent years, been our policy not to print letters to the editor unless they are signed and the writer agrees to have their name appear with their comments. Recently we have received several unsigned letters that we would very much like to include on this page, but can't as long as that policy is in place.

The policy serves to help prevent unsubstantiated claims, cheap shots and potential libel from entering the pages. The goal is to keep anyone from being blind-sided by an anonymous letter mugging. Sadly, we know the policy also serves to prevent people with valid well-thought-out comments from submitting them for fear of embarrassment. Sadly, I say, because I like getting letters. Your opinions are more important, even to me, than those of the newspaper editorialists. Polls indicate you think so too. Traditionally, letters to the editor are about the most read item in the newspaper. They definitely get better ratings than a column like this.

So our policy is often at odds with our goals of encouraging people to write more letters. We want the editorial page to provide a free exchange of ideas.

I have always argued that if an opinion is worth expressing, it ought to be worth taking credit for it. I used that as an argument with a reader once about this very issue and she responded curtly, "then why aren't the editorials signed by the writer." Traditionally, editorials are published as the opinion of the newspaper or its editorial board and are designed to help create discussion or elicit letters on issues of the day. Personal opinions of the newspaper staff members are supposed to be contained only in columns like this one, and never in the regular news space.

Letter signing policy notwithstanding, I know there are a goodly number of people who prefer commenting anonymously and would submit more letters if they could do so without including their name.

What do you think? Would you prefer the newspaper dropped its policy on running only signed letters?

Not much of a favor

Another issue which often pits the newspaper editor in an adversarial role with one or two of his readers is the request to keep court news items out of the paper.

In truth there is no law that says we have to print the comings and goings and filings and dispositions in the county courthouse. Many people find it highly embarrassing and request that the paper keep their name out.

I have never granted one of these requests yet, and I can't ever imagine a circumstance that would tempt me to do it. I have lost too many friends, customers and readers by sticking to my guns on this issue to ever go back on my word to them now.

Yes, there has been an occasion (maybe two) when the editor's own name appeared among the comings and goings of the court. Embarrassing as it was, I was tempted to see it printed in bold type to prove that even the guy who buys the ink, gets covered by it from time to time.

It's a simple policy really, print it all or print none of it. We can't show favorites, not for relatives, not for friends, not even for big customers.

A wiser editor than I (and older too) once told me why he never grants request to keep names out of the paper. He had a friend in the 50s who was at a wedding dance and drove home after celebrating too much. The friend wanted to keep the drunk driving conviction report out of the paper. He pleaded and begged. He said he had never had any problems before and would never do anything like that again. He said he would lose his job if the court news contained his name. He said the folks at church would shun him. He said his kids would be picked on at school. He said his wife would divorce him. He begged for just one little favor from his friend the newspaper editor.

My editor friend relented and omitted the guys name from the court reports. Just a few months later the friend died as the victim of his closet drinking habit when he missed a bridge while driving home.

"I guess I'll always remember I helped him keep his secret until it killed him," said the editor. "I guess I didn't do him or his family any favors."

Poll shows farm ecology concern

Farmers are convinced their non-farm neighbors don't see them as good stewards of the environment, but nothing could be further from the truth.

According to data from two national opinion polls presented here at the annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association, perception and reality don't match up when it comes to farm stewardship.

The 1993 Sandoz National Agricultural Poll, a national study conducted by The Gallup Organization, reveals that only half of all U.S. farmers believe they are viewed as responsible stewards of the land by consumers and that almost as many (43%) think their image is getting worse, mostly because of negative publicity over incidents like the Alar scare.

But according to the Kaagan Environmental Monitor, a syndicated consumer study conducted annually, the public believes agriculture does the best job of protecting the environment of any major industry.

"And, it's important to remember that those high marks are based on agriculture as an industry," says Larry Kaagan, president of Kaagan Research & Associates. "The marks would probably be even higher if consumers were asked about farmers individually, because most consumers continue to view farmers as hard-working people with strong family values."

Dale Miller, president and CEO of Sandoz Agro, the agricultural company which commissioned the Gallup study, says, "Farmers need to stop kicking themselves. Not only do they have the respect of the public, but they're making the kind of proactive changes that will further increase safety and stewardship on the farm."

Other contrasts within the two studies:

•Based on the Kaagan study, only 42 percent of consumers consider the use of pesticides by farmers a "very serious" personal environmental threat, and only four percent consider it an urgent environmental issue. But the Sandoz poll shows that most farmers are changing their farming practices as a result of public opinion about the environment, mostly in the area of pesticide use. And, they see more changes on the horizon: 92 percent say they are very or somewhat likely to use safer pesticides in the future, and 71 percent are very or somewhat likely to use fewer pesticides.

•According to the Sandoz poll, while only 11 percent of farmers believe contamination of food supplies by pesticides is a serious problem, 38 percent believe consumers would rate it as their greatest concern. The Kaagan study shows that while 42 percent of consumers admit they are "somewhat worried" that their food may contain toxins, 36 percent are "not at all worried." And the number of consumers who are "very worried" about food safety has dropped from 34 percent to 21 percent in 1990.

•Only 25 percent of all U.S. farmers believe their public image as environmental stewards is improving, the Sandoz poll points out. But, based on the Kaagan data, almost half (44 percent) of consumers think agriculture does a good or excellent job of environmental performance, while another 40 percent believe agriculture has improved in this area.

Says Kaagan, "Bottom line, the public is developing a belief that, except for a few enlightened industries — and agriculture is one of them — Corporate America is mired in an ineffective, and increasingly unacceptable, environmental status quo."

Max Larsen, executive vice president of Gallup, says farmers believe education is the key to bringing perception in line with reality.

"Four of five farmers believe the current safeguards are sufficient to protect consumers and the environment, but almost as many are convinced the public doesn't understand these safeguards," he says. "The believe the key to reducing public concerns about farm-related environmental issues is education."

The Kaagan Environmental Monitor is based on interviews with 1,200 consumers and has a margin of error of plus or minus three percent.

The 1993 Sandoz National Agricultural Poll was fielded following the Presidential election and included a cross section of vegetable, grain and cotton growers. The study has a margin of error of plus or minus 2.8 percent.

Corn crop still being monitored

Much of Nebraska's record-breaking 1992 corn crop remains in storage, and the Nebraska Corn Board is urging farmers to closely monitor the condition of the corn to ensure quality. AT the same time, the Corn Board is assuring foreign customers that Nebraska farmers are well-equipped to store and manage the crop.

"We're fortunate that last year's extremely wet weather did not cause a significant drop in the quality of Nebraska corn," said Don Hutchens, executive director of the Nebraska Corn Board. "Harvest samples showed test weights were better than expected and overall the quality of the corn was good. However, farmers should keep an eye on their corn in storage to maintain that quality."

Dr. David Jackson, extension food scientist at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, has done extensive research for the Corn Board on the characteristics of corn needed for industrial uses. Jackson said the intrinsic value of the 1992 corn crop is not substantially different from previous years, despite the adverse weather conditions.

"In terms of fundamental quality, such as for wet corn milling, I don't see any problems. Moisture of stored grain is an issue, but if the corn is well-managed while in storage, I don't see any problems," Dr. Jackson said.

Dr. Thomas Thompson, crop drying specialist at the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL, said farmers will continue to be reluctant to move grain because of low corn prices. However, he said, they need to be aware of the potential risks since the corn now being stored was harvested wet last fall.

Thompson advises farmers with corn in storage to regularly check the grain for potential problems and to aerate the corn to maintain uniform temperature and moisture conditions.
