

Chamber looking to pin medals on area's 'Top Moms'

The Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce will be sponsoring the second annual Top Moms contest next month, it was announced this week.

The goal of the contest is to pin a medal on the "Top Moms" in the region, said Marie Mohr, chairperson of the event.

Elementary school children in the Wayne area are being invited to submit essays about their mothers. The essays will be judged by a group of retired school teachers and the winning moms will be the guests of honor at a Chamber Coffee and medal pinning ceremony on May 7 at the Black Knight.

The winning moms also will be treated to special gifts provided by Wayne Chamber of Commerce businesses. In addition, they will be featured in a special Mother's Day Tribute edition of The Wayne Herald to be published May 7.

Last year's honorees were Shelley Frevert, Linda Raveling, Virginia Grim, Vicky Jones and Debbie Ensz.

"WE WERE very pleased with the response received last year and we were encouraged to make the contest an annual event," said Mohr.

She said the judges had a difficult time selecting the top entries last year — both because of the excellent examples of motherhood and because of the quality of writing of the young people.

Students in grades three through eight will be eligible to enter their mom's in the competition by explaining in 100 words or less why their mom should be considered a "Top Mom."

Entry deadline will be Friday, April 23 and entries may be mailed or delivered to the Chamber office at 103 West Third St.

Doors open Thursday to Expo '93

If previous years' numbers are any indication, Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Curt Wilwerding says he expects anywhere from 1,500 to 2,000 people to pass through the doors of Wayne city auditorium this Thursday, Friday and Saturday during Wayne Expo '93.

Wilwerding said the free bi-annual event, which is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, provides an opportunity for merchants to display their items to the public and show off any new products they may have.

The Expo opens in the city auditorium on Thursday, April 15 from 5 to 9 p.m., and continues on Friday, April 16 from 5 to 9 p.m., and on Saturday, April 17 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

ALONG with the Expo, Wilwerding said families are invited to attend fund raising suppers on Thursday and Friday nights, along with an omelet feed on Saturday, all in the Woman's Club room of the city auditorium.

The Wayne Rotary Club will sponsor a soup and pie supper on Thursday night from 5 to 7 p.m., and the Kinship organization is planning a sandwich supper on Friday night from 5 to 7 p.m.

Saturday's omelet feed will run from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and there will be a $1 charge per omelet.

In addition, there will be a variety of entertainment throughout the three-day event, including a square dancing demonstration on Thursday from 8 to 9 p.m. Friday's entertainment will feature organ and accordion music by Cyril Hansen and Jay Morse from 6 to 9 p.m., along with a Jazzercise exhibition at 7 p.m. On Saturday, Expo goers will be treated to Jazzercise exhibitions at noon and 3 p.m., along with a Tae-Kwon-Do demonstration from 1 to 2 p.m. and a program by Winside baton twirlers from 2 to 3 p.m.

During Earth Week Jaycees plan to conduct annual city-wide cleanup Earth Week will have an added emphasis in Wayne this year.

Saturday of Earth Week (April 24) is when the Wayne Jaycees will be conducting their annual city-wide cleanup.

Jaycee members will traverse the city picking up and hauling off large refuse items that may otherwise be creating an eyesore.

Downed limbs, alley refuse and large items are the main fare the Jaycees will be looking for.

A spokesman said all residents need do is haul the items to the curb side, and volunteers will be by to pick them up.

He added the purpose is not to allow people to clean out their basements and garages and have that refuse hauled off. Instead, the goal is to get all the outside rubbish in the community picked up and spruced up.

As volunteer fire fighters City lucky to have 'super heroes'

By Al Kosse
News correspondent

Pledged to fight and defend at a moments notice, a volunteer fire fighter is truly a hero by any other name.

Unfortunately, unless they are donned in sooty overcoats and funny-shaped helmets, these volunteers of social service are hard to recognize; forgotten until the day something precious is at stake.

That is the good part, however. The city of Wayne has 40 "superheroes" with the same local telephone number who double as 40 of your closest friends in the time of need.

"You don't join a volunteer fire department for the praise, heroism or rewards you hope you claim along the way," Bill Kugler, the city's longest active fire fighter, said. "We are here to save lives and destruction when we can - that's all there is to it."

In 1992, "when we can" amounted to over 1,612 documented hours of community service to Wayne and the surrounding communities. The average amount of service put into the job by each of the fire fighters totaled over 31 hours per week. Training and reserve drills, meetings and continuing education accounted for 1,942 hours for the department.

"Nobody expects to get that continued pat on the back," Training Manager Ron Wriedt said. "It's nice to get and it keeps you going, but nobody comes to work expecting praise or is angry if it doesn't come. We are just proud to be able to donate our time to help others."

"Being a fireman gets in your blood," Kugler said. "You're going to protect life and property whenever possible. Even if people don't say anything, you know people appreciate your effort."

Ken "Dutch" Sitzman is happy to say he is a fourth-generation fire fighter and also the current city fire chief. "At one time there were three generations of Sitzman's working with a department, some where at the same time. My grandfather was working in Auburn, while my father and I were at Peru.

Then I spent five-and-a-half years with the Emerson department and have been here in Wayne for the past 29-and-a-half years," Sitzman said. "Now, a fifth generation of Sitzman's is fighting fires as Dutch's son volunteers his service in Pender."

Kugler has been with the department for over 45 years, and was recently given a ring to commemorate his service.

Wriedt joined the Wayne volunteer forces over 13 years ago after helping to water down the track at a county fair. The next day he was handed an application. "I've been involved with the police reserve, and CB club since moving back to Wayne, but none of it holds a candle to what I do with the fire organization," Wriedt said.

Similar reasons for joining could be told by the 37 other fighters who make up the department, but Sitzman insists that no one is begged to join.

"Volunteers are people who want to make a commitment on their own. We may ask somebody to join, but if you have to resort to begging, then that person will never live up to the expectations of time.

However, we are fortunate to have 40 helpful people and even more on a waiting list," Sitzman said. "There are three or four more waiting to join us," he added.

The process to become a volunteer fire fighter is rather simple and takes anywhere from four to eight weeks.

The initial step is to fill out an application with the fire department. That person, of legal age, must then be sponsored by a fire

'Part of our Past'

By The State National Bank And Trust Company

The Ley "German Store" was a center of commerce in early Wayne. Farmers did not come to town often, but when they did they backed their wagons up to the rear door and loaded on enough provisions to last several months.

Annual settlements were the rule. After crops had been gathered and sold, the farmer lost no time in going to the Ley store and wiping out his obligation. If sickness or some other unforeseen misfortune prevented the usual settlement there was no delay in asking and receiving an extension of credit.

Settlers seldom tried to sidestep their accounts. They maintained credit by paying promptly or explaining why they couldn't pay...a good rule to live by even today!

Letters

Is time saved worth a life?

Dear Editor:
I am writing this letter to parents of school age children. Please remind your children to heed all the bus rules, which includes waiting until approaching vehicles are completely stopped before crossing the street!
Several days ago, our seven year old daughter waited patiently while a truck, a car and a pickup drove between her and the stopped bus. Two of the drivers were later questioned by the sheriff's office and each had an excuse for driving through.
Since then, I have heard of other similar incidents where people have ignored the flashing lights and bus stop-arms and have driven on through. People do not seem to realize how potentially dangerous this situation is — children do not always do the expected! Thankfully, our children are obeying the rules — now it seems we must teach the adults.

Parents, if you see a situation like this happen, get the license number or description of the vehicle, call your bus driver to make sure it has been reported to the sheriff and follow up on it. If these drivers are fined, maybe they will think twice the next time. It could even save a child's life!
And to the drivers who don't have time to stop — are those few minutes saved really worth it?!

Stenberg bill shot down

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Attorney General Don Stenberg came into the Nebraska Legislature as a crime fighter. Heck, he may have even been wearing a cape.
But after the way the Legislature treated his get-tough-on-crime bill during first-round debate, it's clear many senators think he's more like the bumbling inspector Clouseau.
Just about every part of the bill got taken out by the Legislature during first-round debate. Sen. Chris Beutler of Lincoln summed up the feelings of a number of senators, calling Stenberg's bill "the biggest bunch of nonsense I've ever seen."

THE BILL originally included nearly a dozen proposals, including stepping up appeals in death penalty cases, refusing to ever parole people who committed crimes while on parole previously and toughening penalties for selling drugs near schools.

All that stuff is now gone. What's left is:
"Truth in sentencing." It's a rather innocuous provision that only requires a sentencing judge to indicate when, under current law, the criminal is eligible for parole. It would not lengthen the period of time anyone would spend in prison.

Boot camps. A new alternative to prison for youthful, non-violent offenders. The theory is that if they drill like soldiers, it will teach them to discipline and make them better people. Some say it just produces criminals in really good physical condition.
Community corrections. Another prison alternative, added to the bill on the floor, also for non-violent offenders.

sions deal more with the state's prison overcrowding problem than they do with stopping dangerous and violent criminals. All in all, the bill has come out looking like the pit bull with a muzzle on it, a police car with four flat tires, Superman with a weight problem.

Overall, I can't help overlooking the politics of the situation. I think a lot of senators enjoyed the chance to take a few shots at the attorney general, who they think was elected on a sound-good platform of "getting tough on crime." The Attorney General's Office historically hasn't been filled by caped crusaders, more country lawyer types.

I think it also shows some of the fallacy of getting tough. Sure, we can lock up every criminal for life, from car thieves to the vilest of murderers. We'd have a lot less criminals running around. But it would also cost a fortune.

SOMEWHERE you have to draw the line. Many senators objected to how much they said Stenberg's plan would cost taxpayers, who want to be tough on crime, as long as it doesn't cost them more taxes. Not possible.
The bill still has two more rounds of debate, and maybe Stenberg will be able to put some of the stuff back in. If not, I sure hope we don't hear any more talk about how this bill is going to reduce crime.
I don't think any criminal is really going to be deterred by the threat of having to do a few sets of push-ups.

Do you know where your kids are now?

What parent hasn't experienced that instant of panic just as they have thrown the car in reverse and begun backing out of the driveway, only to remember they didn't check first to see where all the toddlers were?
Usually the instant of panic is just that. Everything is fine and the panic is just a warning to be more careful next time.
Our children's guardian angels always do a better job of watching out for them than their parents do.

Mann Overboard
By Les Mann

A father in Illinois got a little bit more of a warning jolt the other day than the rest of us have ever had to experience. And when he gets his voice back, he'll probably be thanking the God for his two-year-old daughter's guardian angel.
The Wauconda, Ill. father backed out of his driveway without checking the other day and proceeded on his way, not knowing that his daughter had climbed onto the back bumper of his moving van. She was hanging on for dear life as he sped away.
Motorists, and an off-duty fireman finally got the father to stop on the freeway to rescue the screaming toddler.
The wire service story said the father, who had driven more than 6 miles from their home and reached speeds up to 60 miles an hour, was so shocked she was there and relieved she was safe that he couldn't talk for hours.
It would be one of those cases as a parent where you don't know what to do—beat the kid, hug the kid or beat yourself.
Imagine the lecture the guy got from his wife, and without a voice to even say he was sorry.
This business of raising kids is hard on voices and dads, and then to top it off, it can get your name spread on news wires all over the country as a careless father.
I would be surprised if we don't see this case on a future episode of one of those real life emergency television shows.
When I read that episode I was reminded about the story out of Omaha last year about the parents who mistakenly left their son at the fireworks display and didn't realize he was missing until the next day. It was a case of "I thought you had him," "No, I thought YOU had him."
All parents know how easily it can happen.
With the good weather (whenever it finally arrives) which brings kids out to play and results in more family outings, both of these cases provide healthy reminders for all of us to be more careful.
And, just remember... "There but for the grace of God, go we."

Only the strange....

I am continually attracted to the oddball (that says something) stories in the news.
There's one out of Kentucky last week about the founding of the "Ugly Necktie Society of America's" Ugliest Tie Contest. The effort is to seek the ugliest tie in America. We're not talking joke ties, according to Jim Erskine, the founder. He wants pictures of seriously ugly ties that were once thought stylish.
The catch is, you have got to wear the thing for the picture. Of course, you can get your picture entered into the official ugly tie hall of fame in Erskine's attic.
We could make Wayne the western regional headquarters for the organization I think.
I know I have a contest entry or two. From what I've seen, Tony Kochenash has several competitive entries in his closet and too often on his person. Ralph Barclay could scare up something (literally) with one of his ties.
If you have a contest entry, send it too Ugliest Tie Contest, PO Box 1282 Bowling Green, KY 42102. Be sure to send a picture of the entry and not the tie itself, says Erskine, he doesn't want to scare his kids.

Off by 100 years

Finally, this week, did you hear about the 104 year old woman who was invited to attend kindergarten roundup last week.
Yep, the school computer in Winona, Minn. sent roundup notices to every child born in '88 and up popped Mary Bandar.
But, Mary was born in 1888, not 1988. Her daughter called the school to tell them that her mother would attend neither the roundup nor kindergarten next fall.
School officials said they understood.
"My second childhood. What do you know about that," joked Mary.

UNL to face budget cuts

By Sen. Stan Schellpeper
District No. 18

Higher taxes or cutting spending is the issue we have been faced with all year. No one wants to see higher taxes; myself least of all. But choosing which programs will be cut is not easy. Two of the proposed cuts hit close to home and will be the subject of this week's report.
The University of Nebraska will most likely face a budget reduction this year. For the university's College of Agriculture, a reduction of 5 percent, as was originally discussed, would eliminate approximately $2 million from its budget. Recently, the Appropriations Committee recommended a 1.5% cut in the university budget. If this comes to pass, the College of Agriculture could see a loss of $600,000.

The research, education and extension services provided by the College of Agriculture are important to rural Nebraska. Research and development drives progress in the agricultural economy. Education and extension ensure that our farmers have at their disposal all the latest information and skills available. I am sensitive about cuts in the College of Agriculture budget.
It seems to me it is frequently the target of disproportionately large cuts. The message I get from this is that it is not a high priority to the University of Nebraska Board of Regents who decide the overall budget of each department. I do not feel the College of Agriculture should receive a low priority in a state like Nebraska. It should remain a strength of our University system, attracting good students and attracting the professors and researchers who will stimulate "spin-off" industries in rural Nebraska.

Ashfall Fossil Beds State Historical Park, north of Neligh, is another item that has been threatened by budget cuts. It is jointly operated by the University of Nebraska and the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. The university develops classes and educational programs for students and the general public and supervises the archaeological excavation conducted on the site and, in return, they receive receipts from the concession stand in the park.

The Game and Parks Commission is responsible for general operation of the park and they retain the fees collected at the park entrance. This is a first class facility with a well-functioning, 20-year agreement between the two entities that I will work to preserve.

Youth will be selling pro baseball tickets

Wayne City Recreation Director Jeff Zeiss announced today that from Monday, April 19 through Sunday May 2, area youth baseball and softball players will be out selling tickets to any home game played by the Sioux City Explorers baseball team this summer as part of a fund-raising effort to support the Wayne youth leagues.

"Youth between the ages of 6-14 will be given the opportunity to fund raise in conjunction with the Sioux City Explorers along with 19 other communities," Zeiss said. "It's a way of getting kids involved with trying to improve the conditions of their own leagues in a variety of ways."

The Sioux City Explorers Director of Operations, Tim Urup is the project director and he said the Explorers are proud to be working with youth baseball to strengthen baseball in Siouxland, and working towards providing each and every youngster, with the opportunity to participate under ideal playing conditions.

The "Let's Go to the Explorers" program is designed to: provide youth baseball with a substantial revenue contribution, annually; provide youth baseball with a powerful program to help encourage new participation; and to promote a strong and solid image for Siouxland baseball tradition.

The program will begin with youth going door-to-door, selling Sioux City Explorer Ticket coupons. For each ticket that is sold, 25-percent will go towards youth baseball in Wayne.

For instance, the general admission tickets the youth will be selling, costs $4 a ticket. For each ticket bought, the Explorers donate $1 back to the Wayne baseball and softball youth leagues.

A prize achievement program has also been structured to give the players, coaches and teams an extra boost and to reward their outstanding efforts.

The program has been specifically designed to impose as little hardship as possible on youth baseball officials, coaches and parents. All program accounting and reconciliation will be executed by the Sioux City Explorers office, and copies of all sales receipts will be made available to youth baseball organizations for additional program auditing. Checks will be presented by a sponsor to each league at the Youth Baseball Nights set for July 5 and July 7.

In addition to the goodwill of supporting the youth baseball and softball organizations, patrons of this program will have an advanced jump on securing Sioux City Explorers tickets, before tickets officially go on sale in June.

Those youth selling 10 tickets will receive free admission to one Sioux City Explorers game. Those selling 15 tickets will receive Explorers baseball cards. Those selling 25 will get an Explorers cap and batting glove. Those selling 30 will get an Explorers autographed ball.

Those selling 60 tickets will receive an Explorers autographed baseball bat and those selling 100 tickets will receive a baseball glove or an Explorers jacket. The top fund raiser may receive a baseball trip.

The top selling team of all 20 communities will receive a team banquet with the Explorers.

Once an individual buys a ticket from local youth, they take the ticket to the Explorers ticket office in Sioux City and exchange it for any home game they wish to attend.

"We encourage all youth to get involved and participate in this fund raiser," Zeiss said. Those wishing to obtain further information on the fund raising promotion can contact Jeff Zeiss at the City Rec Office at 375-4803 or call the Sioux City Explorers front office at 712-277-9467.

Zeiss said he encourages the parents of youth participating in this program to come with them when the packets are handed out April 19.

Standout Nebraska Cornhusker tightend Gerald Armstrong of Ponca, was in Allen recently, talking to youngsters on a variety of subjects. Here, he answers questions from fourth, fifth and sixth graders. When asked what specifics he recommended in preparing for a game he said, "keep your hat down, mind clear, rest and be ready to play."

Wayne State sluggers split away games with Peru State

The Wayne State baseball team split a double-header with Peru State, Saturday in Peru, winning the opener, 6-0 before dropping the nightcap, 3-2, leaving the Wildcats with a 6-14 record.

The football/baseball combination of Jeff Lutt and Cory Reeder led the 'Cats to a 6-0 win in the first game. Lutt and Reeder, starting linebackers in the Fall at WSC, formed an impressive battery.

Lutt tossed a two-hit shutout and struck out seven to improve to 2-4 on the year, while Reeder homered, doubled and singled in two of the six WSC runs.

Jeff Burger had a two-run single for the Wildcats, while Tim Kurtz, and Tim McDermott, each added base hits. WSC finished with six runs on six hits while committing one error while the host Bobcats had no runs on two hits and three errors.

The 'Cats scored twice in the first inning and added one in the third before scoring three in the fifth.

In the second game WSC came out on the short end of a 3-2 score. Sophomore pitcher Jon Janssen slipped to 0-3 on the season despite scattering seven hits. McDermott led the 'Cats offense with a double and single while Reeder, Russ Hamer, Mike Stauffer and Chris Looft all added doubles. Dave Shields rounded out the seven-hit parade with a single.

WSC finished with two runs on seven hits and one error while Peru State had three runs on seven hits and no errors. The Wildcats led 2-1 before the Bobcats scored two in the bottom of the fourth inning.

Funds for child care programs now available

Grant funds totaling $250,000 are currently available to assist child care programs in starting or expanding child care services to families in Nebraska, according to officials of the Nebraska Department of Social Services.

According to Deborah Mabry-Strong, the agency's administrator for Child Care and Development, this federal block grant funding is available in all states but tailored to each state's needs. In Nebraska, the Child Care Grant Fund may be used to make improvements which are necessary in order to meet State child care licensure and local ordinance requirements for licensure; to expand services; or to accommodate infants, children with disabilities, children who may be ill or school-aged children.

This round of grant funding opened April 1 and applications will be accepted until May 24. Grant awards will be announced after July 30. Sixty-one child care providers from across the state received grants in 1992, said Mabry-Strong.

Qualified applicants include individuals; groups; community-based organizations; public and private schools; and existing child care programs including family child care homes, and child care centers. Unlicensed and new providers may also apply for the grant money.

To receive applications, write to the Child Care and Development Administrator, Nebraska Department of Social Services, P.O. Box 95026, Lincoln, Nebraska 68509. Questions can be directed to the Department by calling (402) 471-9152.

Pierce doctor pledges $31,000 to Wayne State

Dr. Tod Voss of Pierce has made a $31,000 cash pledge to the Wayne State Foundation's "Building Bright Futures" national fund-raising campaign.

Wayne State launched the $11.5 million campaign in May of 1992. Approximately 60-percent of the goal has been raised during the first year of the three-year campaign, according to Wayne Groner, vice president for development and executive director of the Foundation.

"We appreciate Dr. Voss' service as a trustee and an officer of the Foundation, and express our sincere thanks for his financial commitment to the campaign," says Groner.

Campaign gifts will be used to support Wayne State programs, including scholarships, faculty development, physical campus improvements and endowment.

Dr. Voss, vice president of the Wayne State Foundation, received his bachelor's degree from Wayne State College in 1978 and his medical degree from the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha. After interning at UNMC, he started his practice in Pierce in 1987. He is a family practitioner and a surgeon, and he is president of the Northeast Nebraska Medical Society.

Bunny makes appearance

The Easter Bunny just couldn't pass up the opportunity to visit with Wayne area youngsters during the annual Easter egg hunt Saturday afternoon in Bressler Park, sponsored by the Wayne County Jaycees. The bunny (Eilene Jager) is pictured at right visiting with a group of children. The bunny was "high tech" this year and captured the event on film with the camcorder she is holding in her paws. In the top photo, a group of preschool children line up for the start of the hunt, which only took seconds after the word "go." Organizing chairpersons for the event, Leslie Keating, Jane Binkster and Laura Gamble, said this year's Easter egg hunt attracted even more children than last year. Although Saturday's weather was cool, the day was minus the snow of last year.

fighter currently on the staff. No experience is necessary. At that point, they must be approved by the city council.

Nebraska does not currently have certification requirements to meet in order to be on a fire department. There is training sponsored by the National Fireman's Protection Association with classes for the pumper truck, ladder and self-contained apparatus for breathing.

Training for the staff also includes controlled house fires, knowledge of hydraulics of water to calculate friction of the hose as well as fire anatomy and behavior.

"We are not yet required to take a 72-hour course like they do in Iowa, but it is available if we wish to be officially certified," Wriedt said. "Currently, you just need to attend two-thirds of the meetings, drills and fires to be mandated."

Once approved to the department, the new fire fighter is put on a six month probation, in which he or she can not be allowed to operate a fire vehicle.

Almost every Tuesday night of the year is decided away to service when one joins the fire department as well. On the first Tuesday of every month there is a regular meeting, the second Tuesday is drill night, and the third Tuesday is rescue drill night.

Then on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in October through May is Junior Fire Patrol night for fifth graders.

"Our primary goal with the Junior Fire Patrol is to teach self protection and prevention," Kugler said of the one-hour sessions.

"You might as well tell your family once you join, that your Tuesday's are gone," he added. "The department is only as good as the wives (or husbands) and the families behind the fire fighter. They have to put up with a lot knowing that not only is your time with them limited, but also your life is on the line literally every time you answer a call," Kugler said.

Sitzman adds, "It's sad that your family has to take a back seat, but I guess that is why they call it community service."

The Wayne Rural Fire Department belongs to both the Elkhorn Mutual Association to the west and the Northeast Nebraska Mutual Association to the east, meaning that their fire fighting range extends from the Missouri River to Neligh. All of the fire fighters in Wayne belong to the Nebraska Volunteer Fire Fighters Association.

Since the volunteer staff began functions as early as 1912, they have stretched their hoses from South Sioux City, Carroll, Norfolk, Wakefield, Winside and elsewhere with their 11 pieces of equipment.

The first so-called fire truck was similar to a soda and acid fire extinguisher that can be spotted these days in parades downtown Wayne.

"We are still priviledged to have a 1936 city pumper that we could use if we had to," Kugler said, "but that one has only been serving in parades as well as of late."

In 1941, the first truck considered for rural purposes was bought and in 1950, the Rural Fire District was formed and organized with a board of directors, which hold the same status and contract today.

"If there was ever a rural fire and a city fire at the same time, the rural truck would go the rural fire. However, the city was never left unguarded," Sitzman said.

One of the scariest moments of duty for Kugler was back in the early 1970's when the Viet Nam War protests were high.

"Around the time of the Kent State incident (when four students were gunned down by Ohio national guardsmen) the old administration building on the Wayne State campus was fire-bombed," Kugler said. "About the time when we were hooking up our hoses, somebody came running across the grass yelling 'the student center is on fire too'."

"That had had me really scared because you didn't know when it was all going to stop," he added. "Then to top it off, at about the same time, there were reports that somebody was running down the city streets with a torch. Supposedly, he ran in the front door of the Saint Paul's Lutheran Church and came out the back. Thank goodness nothing happened with that, though."

Sitzman and Wriedt recall the State National Bank's demise in 1985 as one of their more memorable moments.

"Right when we were supposed to go into the building, one of the fire fighters had trouble with his air pack," Sitzman said. "We had to stop and get that taken care of before we could go in. About then the floor dropped in. If he would not have had trouble with an air pack, who knows where we'd be right now."

Wayne man cited by Nebraska Planning, Zoning Association

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

Wayne resident George Phelps has been recognized for his community service by the Nebraska Planning and Zoning Association.

Phelps was presented a plaque during the association's annual conference on April 2 in Grand Island.

The plaque was given in official recognition and appreciation of his "outstanding community service and participation in the continuance of planning in Nebraska as a Planning Commissioner for the City of Wayne."

Phelps, who operates IDS Financial Services in Wayne, has been a member of the Wayne Planning Commission for approximately 10 years and has served as chairman for approximately seven of those years.

NOMINATING Phelps for the honor was Tim Keelan of Hanna-Keelan Associates in Lincoln, a community planning firm that has worked extensively with the City of Wayne and its community leadership.

"Our firm has had the opportunity to work with the City of Wayne in updating their comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance and in conducting a multi-purpose community center feasibility study," said Keelan, adding that Hanna-Keelan has also worked with the community on various housing issues.

"The plaque which George was presented is given to an outstanding volunteer for his/her contribution to the discipline of community planning," pointed out Keelan.

"Hanna-Keelan nominated George because we felt, and we have worked with a lot of communities and counties, that George's contributions went above and beyond his obligation as a volunteer in conducting these planning projects with us.

"It's obvious to us that anybody who is willing to serve as chairman of a planning commission puts his or her community first, before themselves, because it many times is a very controversial and often unpopular position."

GEORGE PHELPS is pictured with the plaque he recently received from the Nebraska Planning and Zoning Association in appreciation of his volunteer community service.

KEELAN went on to say that Phelps has handled his position on the Wayne Planning Commission with a great deal of success, due in great part because of his ability to work with people and to reach compromise on many important community issues.

"The plaque which George received by the Nebraska Planning and Zoning Association is a very prestigious award and we feel much deserved.

"George is outstanding and a real asset to the community of Wayne. He cares about the future of Wayne and he's involved in many other community activities. Quite frankly, I don't know where he finds the time."

PHELPS said he was pleased to accept the award but stressed that he accepted it on behalf of all the Wayne Planning Commission members for their many hours of work.

Fire causes minor damage

WAYNE - A grass fire Easter Sunday at approximately 3 p.m. caused minor damage at the Darold Beckenhauer residence located one mile north and three-quarter miles east of Wayne.

Wayne Fire Chief Sitzman said the blaze spread from a trash fire which had been started on the ground and got out of control. Although the fire was approaching some nearby buildings, Sitzman said Wayne's volunteer firemen were able to contain it and keep it from spreading.

Tourism conference cancelled

AREA - The 1993 Northeast Nebraska Tourism Conference, scheduled for this Friday, April 16 at Northeast Community College in Norfolk, has been cancelled.

The conference was cancelled because of a lack of registrations, according to conference coordinator Judy Johnson of West Point. "We're disappointed that we won't be able to hold the conference, because we had an excellent program and speakers lined up," she said. "This is a busy time of year, and that probably contributed to the low registration return."

Johnson said the conference, sponsored by the Northeast Nebraska Travel Council, may be rescheduled in the future.

Poultry group elects officers

AREA - Tim Bebee of Wakefield was elected vice president of the Nebraska Egg Council during the Nebraska Poultry Industries convention held earlier this month in Columbus. Sam Utecht, also of Wakefield, was elected secretary.

Other newly elected officers are Tim Graff of Beatrice, president, Jim Smaus of Prague, treasurer, and Susan Joy of Lincoln, executive secretary.

Charles Shapiro, UN-L soils specialist at the Northeast Research and Extension Center near Concord, presented research information on enhancing crop production with poultry manure.

The Library Card

This column is written twice a month to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at Wayne Public Library.

What's new at the library? Books and videos — that's what's new!

New in children's videos: a replacement video of "Fantasia"; Walt Disney's "Pinocchio"; and "Barney's Magical Musical Adventure." (Barney is the purplest, hottest dinosaur around! Children love him).

A new series of books on the countries that have emerged from the break-up of the USSR, "Then and Now," has informative text and attractive pictures about these countries: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Russia and Ukraine.

Richard Platt's new book, "Stephen Biesty's Incredible Cross-Sections," will afford hours of fascinating exploration of buildings, ships, trains, cathedrals in cross-section.

Sam and Beryl Epstein have written an interesting book, entitled "You Call That a Farm?" On their farm they raise otters, leeches, weeds and "other unusual things." Not your typical Nebraska farm, but a good introduction to alternative farming.

And, finally, there are two books about our universe. Anne Baird in "Space Camp" has written a book about NASA's space camp program for youngsters. Seymour Simon has added another planet in his series about the sky. "Venus" includes pictures taken by the cameras of the space probe, Mariner 10, as it passed Venus on its way to Mercury.

The library recently has received three books to complete the series published by the Library of America. This series has brought us classic American authors from John Adams to Richard Wright. The last books received were two by Mark Twain, "V.1 Collected Tales, Sketches, Speeches, and Essays, 1852-1890" and "V.2 Collected Tales, Sketches, Speeches, and Essays, 1891-1910." The author of the third book is William James and is a collection of titles: "Psychology: Briefer Course," "Talks to Teachers and to Students," "Essays."

New adult fiction in the library includes "The Talisman of Shanarra" by Terry Brooks; "Bastard Out of Carolina" by Dorothy Allison; "Devil's Waltz" by Jonathan Kellerman; "A World Waiting to Be Born" by F. Scott Peck; "The Client" by John Grisham; "American Star" by Jackie Collins; "Mary, Mary" by Ed McBain.

The library will be celebrating National Library Week, April 18-24, with several activities — Monday, April 19, 7 to 8:30 p.m., library tours and CD-Rom demonstrations; Wednesday, April 21, 7:30 p.m., "Night of a Thousand Stars" bedtime story hour for children ages four to seven (we have invited four celebrity readers, come in your P.J.'s); Thursday, April 22, Fine-Free Day for books returned overdue at the desk (books dropped in the book drop will not be honored. You must bring the book or books to the desk); Friday, April 23, 10 a.m., the library is hosting a Chamber of Commerce coffee hour.

Lambda Phi Omega sorority at Wayne State College is planning a special story hour for children ages four to seven on Saturday, April 17 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Lot's of fun is in store for those who come!

Final letter from Thailand

(Editor's note: Jeff Keidel, son of Dick and Becky Keidel of Wayne, went to Thailand in February of 1991. Following three months of training, he was sworn in as a Peace Corps Volunteer on May 22, 1991. His two years of service will be completed on May 31, 1993. Following some independent travel in the area, he will return to the United States. Following is Jeff's final letter from Thailand).

The sound of temple bells breaks the silence of the early morning. I lie secure and warm wrapped in rough, cotton blankets.

I am reluctant to arise and expose myself to the chill morning air. A village dog howls and soon is joined by others. The cacophony spurs me to sleepily-drag myself from bed.

I wrap a thick, brightly coloured blanket around my waist. Rubbing the sleep from my eyes I take a slow, appraising look at the thermometer: 49F.

I set my water to boil for my morning coffee. From the front of my house I hear water buffalo being led down the dirt road towards the fields. Their iron bells have a low, pleasant tone as they resonate in the cool morning air. The raucous cries of roosters intermittently pierce the air. I descend the stairs, slip on my sandals and tend to my own chickens in their pen underneath the house.

ALL THIS; these simple sounds of morning, routine and ordinary, to which I have long since become accustomed, begin to assume a certain poignancy as I prepare to depart.

Reflecting upon my time here, I find that it is not possible to sum up the experience, to distill it, into a few sentences. Yet, I anticipate that upon my return to the States I will frequently have encounters in which I will be asked to do just that. Both I and my questioner will have to settle for a reply that is less than satisfactory.

I am still struggling to fully appreciate and assimilate all that I have learned and experienced during my time here. Perhaps someday I will be able to put the experience into perspective and provide a concise two or three sentence summary of my two plus years here. Somehow I tend to doubt that.

I LOOK forward to my imminent return to Wayne, America with anticipation. I am eager to see and talk with you all. Please understand, however, if I cannot verbalize my experience in too eloquent a manner. One of my fellow Peace Corps volunteers may have summed it up best when she said it was a Zen-like experience.

Author's note: When I wrote this it was still rather cool here. As you read it, however, Thailand is in the midst of it's hot season with temperatures positively in the 100's!

Antiques serve to preserve memories

We do have a few antiques in our home: a Hoosier cupboard, a zinc-top table, Grandma Meierhenry's buffet and old hutch, my Grandfather's oak desk and an oak rocking chair that my Dad brought home from a farm sale. They go well in our one hundred year old house.

But the proliferation of antique shops amazes me! There are several in nearby Louisville and a large one in Plattsmouth, our county seat. I picked up a map of shops in "greater Omaha"; there are 43 locations.

I used to visit the Antique Arcade in Norfolk: a long building that was sectioned off and space rented to dealers. The ladies who managed it charged a commission for selling the merchandise.

Now I go to Venice. Venice is a little wide spot in the road on highway 92 between Wahoo and Omaha, near Two Rivers Recreation Area.

This building used to house John Deeres. Times were tough when farmers stopped buying new equipment, and the owners installed fluorescent lighting and partitioned a bunch of booths. By renting these, and again charging a small commission, I'm sure they are making a lot more money than they did selling tractors. They're fun to poke around in. I have a pair of hurricane lamps from my latest foray.

The only thing that bothers me are the things they call "antiques." An awfully lot of them were used by me and not that long ago. We have accumulated a number of enamel bedpans; I remember using them at York Hospital when I worked as a nurse's aide.

By Pat Meierhenry

Because everything is packaged in disposable containers, the old spice tins and cracker containers are now collectibles. My friend Gladys at Camp Kitoki has several shelves full in her basement.

The 121 year old general store at South Bend was auctioned off this weekend. All its contents went first. Crocks and jugs of all kinds, a Lionel train set, a Hamms beer bear; all brought a pretty penny.

There was a good crowd and the weather cooperated. The Big Farmers made channel 3 news that night; just observing, not buying.

I think people get nostalgic when they see this stuff. I know I do. It brings back memories of childhood and simpler times. I think it's about time we learned to appreciate our past. Thankfully, the store itself was purchased and hopefully, will be restored. A small piece of Americana preserved.

Where the investigation begins

National Medical Laboratory Week honoring health care professionals

"When you go to see your doctor, you expect at the very least you will find out what is wrong with you. A good doctor is a good diagnostician, and your doctor depends on accurate, rapid medical information," says Elizabeth Mohr, supervisor of the laboratory at Providence Medical Center in Wayne.

The medical laboratory is where all clinical investigation begins, and Mohr said medical laboratory professionals spend years perfecting their methods and learning to use state-of-the-art equipment to find everything from hemoglobin (iron) levels to life-threatening conditions such as pheochromocytoma, a rare tumor.

Without this precise and valuable laboratory information, medicine would simply become guesswork.

NATIONAL Medical Laboratory Week, April 11-17, honors more than 250,000 health care professionals who work hard to provide critical information for accurate diagnoses.

These professionals go by many names: clinical laboratory scientists, medical technologists and technicians, microbiologists, clinical chemists, histologic (tissue) technicians, cytotechnologists, phlebotomists, and pathologists.

They are found in a variety of settings, including hospital laboratories, independent medical laboratories, blood banks, research facilities, and physician's office labs.

"WHEN YOU provide a blood sample or a urine specimen," said Mohr, "the medical laboratory professionals will examine it or run tests to detect any physical problems you may have."

Mohr added that skilled laboratory professionals know how to evaluate and present laboratory information to physicians so they can easily and rapidly diagnose existing problems and avert potential problems.

Many medical problems can only be detected by a battery of tests using sophisticated techniques and complex instruments, so medical laboratory professionals must stay abreast of new developments in technology and laboratory science.

Medical laboratory professionals can also detect medical problems before they become life-threatening disabilities.

For example, they can perform simple but important tests to check blood cholesterol. They will alert a patient's physician if the cholesterol is high enough to be considered a risk factor for heart disease.

Other tests can detect too much sugar in the blood, or blood in the stool (which might be a warning sign of cancer).

PROVIDENCE Medical Center in Wayne employs two full-time and two part-time medical technologists, including Elizabeth Mohr, Maureen Wacker, Kris Giese and Jan Brown.

They also employ one part-time phlebotomist, Shana Carstensen, through Wayne State College's Cooperative Education program.

A bachelor of science degree is required to be a medical technologist, including three years of study at a college or university, plus a full 12 months of intensive study at a hospital with an accredited Medical Technology program.

All four technologists at Providence Medical Center graduated from Wayne State College with degrees in medical technology.

Besides her duties as supervisor of the laboratory, Mohr is an adjunct faculty member of Wayne State's math and science division. She teaches students with various majors in the health sciences a one-hour credit course each spring semester.

She shows the students through each of the seven departments in the laboratory, teaching them basic principles and theory using hands-on techniques.

GOOD HEALTH begins with the investigations performed by medical laboratory professionals — the behind-the-scenes lifesavers.

During National Medical Laboratory Week, residents are asked to recognize the vital contributions they make to the health and future of the nation's citizens.

Neihardt conference to feature renowned physicist and author

Internationally known physicist, systems theorist and author Fritjof Capra will be the keynote speaker at the John G. Neihardt Spring Conference Saturday, April 24 at the Neihardt Center in Bancroft. Theme for the day-long conference is "Exploring the Mystery: The Philosophy of John G. Neihardt."

Capra will speak at 1:15 p.m. on "Deep Ecology — A Shared Vision," a view of his theory of deep ecology and the implication of its key elements on science, business, politics and everyday life. A panel-and-audience discussion follows at 2:30 p.m. with Capra and the two morning speakers, Hilda Neihardt, president of the John G. Neihardt Foundation, and Arthur Amiotte artist, writer and consultant on Indian cultures of the Northern Plains.

Capra is founder and president of the Eimwood Institute, located in Berkeley, Calif., an educational institution dedicated to developing and promoting concepts and practices needed for building a sustainable future. Dr. Capra is author of three international best sellers, "The Tao of Physics," "The Turning Point" and "Uncommon Wisdom." He also co-authored "Belonging to the Universe" with David Steindl-Rast and wrote the screenplay for "Mindwalk," a film based on his books.

Focus of the afternoon panel discussion will be Neihardt's philosophy and a new holistic paradigm of science and spirit. Moderator will be Gretchen Ronnow, associate professor of English at Wayne State College, one of the sponsors of the 13th annual Neihardt spring conference.

Robin Neihardt, grandson of Nebraska Poet Laureate John G.

Neihardt, will open the conference at 9 a.m. Morning speakers are Hilda Neihardt, John G. Neihardt's daughter, who will speak on "The Forces That Shaped John Neihardt's Philosophy." She has compiled and edited three collections of her father's works: "The End of the Dream" and "The Ancient Memory," both short stories, and "The Giving Earth," a John G. Neihardt reader. She is working on a book about her participation in the 1931 interviews with Lakota Holy Man Black Elk, which led to her father's book, "Black Elk Speaks," now available in eight languages.

Amiotte will discuss "The Lakota Cosmos" at 10:45 a.m. Amiotte is the adjunct professor of native studies and art at Brandon University, Brandon, Manitoba. He is the great grandson of Standing Bear, who participated in the 1931 interview of Black Elk by John Neihardt.

The John G. Neihardt 1993 Spring Conference is supported by the Division of Humanities of Wayne State College; the Nebraska Humanities Council; the Gardner Foundation of Wakefield; the Nebraska State Historical Society and the John G. Neihardt Foundation and Center at Bancroft.

Conference registration prior to April 21 is $10 plus $5 for lunch and may be made with the John G. Neihardt Center, P.O. Box 344, Bancroft, Neb. 68004. Student and senior citizen advance registration is $5. Registrations at the door will be $12.50 for the conference.

Hoskins man enrolled in angus program

Hans Julius, Hoskins has recently been enrolled in the Angus Herd Improvement Records program of the American Angus Association, reports Richard L. "Dick" Spader, executive vice-president of the national breed registry organization in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR) is a comprehensive evaluation program used by registered Angus breeders to help them keep records of reproduction, and growth rate on individual animals. Each year hundreds of Angus breeders use AHIR records to produce more profitable, efficient Angus seedstock.

By weighing calves at 205 days of age and again at a year of age, breeders not only identify the cattle that grow the fastest and most efficient, they also identify cows that regularly produce above average calves, and bulls that sire outstanding calves.

The American Angus Association in 1957 was the first beef breed organization to offer its members a production records program. Since that date the AHIR program has grown to the point that breeders report over 3000,000 birth, weaning and yearling weights each year. This mountain of information is processed by the Association's modern computerized data processing systems.

Farmers and ranchers need to be counted

If all farmers and ranchers are not counted in the Census of Agriculture, decisions on farm programs, agriculture trade, extension programs and others will suffer. In the long run every farmer and rancher will be affected.

The data from the Census of Agriculture are essential in allocating billions in agriculture funds every year.

The distribution of extension program funds depends on the census.

The number of acres of cropland that can be put into the conservation reserve program in your county is based on the census.

Funds for farm disaster relief are tied to data from the census.

Farm loan money available to states and counties depend on the numbers in the census.

There are but a few examples of why an undercount in the Census of Agriculture could be detrimental to every farmer and rancher in this country.

In addition, the government's negotiators on agriculture commodity trade rely heavily on the census data. If the information is understated, then American producers

Worker protection, records added

Pesticide regulations set

Two changes are coming up regarding agricultural pesticides, according to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln pesticide coordinator.

In April, new worker protection standards will be allowed to appear on agricultural pesticide labels, said Larry Schulze. Sometime later this year, regulations will go into effect regarding private applicator records on restricted use pesticides.

New wording on pesticide labels is just one of several changes relating to the Environmental Protection Agency's Worker Protection Standards, Schulze said.

Other effects of the new standards include posting pesticide information for workers; having available emergency transportation; providing a decontamination or washup site; and observing restricted entry intervals where pesticides have been used recently.

Under the new worker protection standards, a minimum of four hours must elapse before workers may enter a treated area. Pesticides will be assigned restricted entry intervals of 12, 24, 48 or 72 hours before a treated area can be entered without protective equipment or clothing as required by the label. By October 1995, all agricultural pesticides must carry labels with references to the Worker Protection Standards, Schulze said.

The new standards are designed to protect both pesticide handlers and agricultural workers from accidental pesticide exposures, Schulze said. The regulations apply to both general use and restricted use pesticides.

The new private applicator regulation for record keeping comes into being as part of the 1990 Farm Bill. The regulation means producers must keep track of where and how much of a restricted-use product was used, no matter how small the amount, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist added.

The intent of the record keeping requirement, Schulze said, is to form a national data base for agronomic and environmental surveys by state and federal agencies. The data base will document pesticide use, address consumer concerns on food safety, and assure the public that the food supply is safe.

Record keeping requirements are expected to be enacted this year, 30 days after the details are published in the Federal Register. The records, which aren't required to be in any particular format, must be kept for at least two years. Schulze added that a sample record-keeping form available at UNL Cooperative Extension offices will keep private applicators in compliance.

Noxious weeds get head start

Warm weather and sunny days signal the start of long-awaited spring growth. Nebraska farmers are making preparations to plant this year's crop.

At the same time, Nebraska's six noxious weeds already have a head start. These weeds begin an aggressive invasion before farmers plant their first seeds.

To curb the potential noxious weed growth, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture and county weed superintendents will again be on the road looking out for possible infestations.

David Boschult, the northeast region Agricultural Inspection Specialist for the Department of Agriculture, is responsible for monitoring and surveying noxious weeds in this region. Boschult explains that the yearly survey and documentation of uncontrolled noxious weeds is one of the most important methods the Department has for evaluating individual county noxious weed programs that are required by law.

"I will begin checking problem areas beginning in mid-April this year. Counties are being put on notice that they must deal with noxious weed problems effectively or face regulatory action by the Department of Agriculture," said Boschult.

According to Geir Friisoe, supervisor of the state's noxious weed program, each county is responsible for enforcing the Noxious Weed Control Act at the local level and for ensuring that individual landowners know of their responsibility to control noxious weeds.

Friisoe recommends that reports of uncontrolled noxious weed infestations first be reported to the county weed superintendent or to the county weed board. If there is inadequate response from the county weed superintendent or weed board, then the county board should be contacted. If citizens feel their county is unresponsive or has failed to implement an effective weed program, Friisoe then recommends they contact the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

"The majority of counties do an excellent job of addressing noxious weed problems, however, sometimes the legal system simply takes a long time," Friisoe said. "People need to let their board know if they are having noxious weed problems or concerns and allow them the opportunity to respond."

Boschult explained that when he receives a specific complaint, he tries to investigate and inspect the problem area within five days of receiving the report. The infestation is then referred to the county for appropriate action. At a later date, Boschult conducts a follow-up inspection and investigating to determine if the county has taken appropriate action in dealing with the problem.

"The bottom line is citizens and landowners must cooperate and appreciate the problem of noxious weeds," Friisoe said. "This cooperation is needed in order for county and state officials to make headway in addressing the current 3.2 million acres of noxious weeds in Nebraska."

ers may not get the best benefits possible from current trade negotiations.

According to George Pierce, Assistant Chief of the Census Bureau's Agriculture Division, "More than 75 percent of America's farmers and ranchers have completed and returned their Census of Agriculture report. Others have requested time extensions until they complete their tax returns. But there are still quite a few that we haven't heard from. Response in some states and counties is better than others." What does this mean? Those states and counties with the greatest undercount may not receive their share of the agriculture programs, funding, trade considerations, educational funds and consideration in Congress.

Pierce said, "What we also think has happened is that a lot of people who are no longer actively farming pitched their forms in the trash. That's human nature. But we need to know who's not farming by sending the form back indicating their situation. Meanwhile, the slow returns from non-farmers combined with farmers and ranchers who haven't mailed back their forms keeps the returns below the level we need to publish complete and accurate data."

If someone needs help on questions or who should report or needs another form, call toll free at 1-800-233-6131. By completing and returning their 1992 Census of Agriculture forms they help "Make it Known ... America Counts on Agriculture."

Mowers should be ready before first time usage

The time to get your lawn mower ready is before it's time to use it.

If maintenance such as fine tuning, filter and spark plug changes, and blade sharpening and balancing wasn't done last fall, now is the time to do so, according to Robert Grisso, biological systems engineer at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

It's best to have a professional sharpen and balance your mower blade, Grisso said. If unbalanced, the vibrating blade is hard on the small engine and bearings, and requires more power to cut grass.

A sharp blade helps the turf to recover quickly while a dull blade damages it. The blade should be 1/16 inch on the tip. A knife-sharp blade edge is so thin that it will bend back after striking debris or rocks, thus dulling it quicker.

A riding mower is a piece of big equipment that must be greased and maintained. Review the owner's manual and remind the family of hand signals for effective communication, Grisso wrote in CropWatch, a UNL Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources newsletter.

Serena Lindahl, a 13-year-old junior high student at Winside Public School, wrote a poem when she was age 10 and entered it this past year in a contest sponsored by the National Library of Poetry.

Her poem, "Life of Loneliness," focuses on coping with childhood feelings and has been published in a book of poetry by the National Library of Poetry, entitled "Where Dreams Begin." Serena is one of the youngest authors in the book.

"I wrote this poem, despite the depressing nature of it, at a time when I was very happy, but sad for the people who maybe were feeling unhappy or depressed," said Serena, who is the daughter of Don and Barb Orris.

Serena added that she hopes to enter the contest again this year and would urge others interested to also do so. She found the contest in a teen magazine.

She has been writing for about three years and added that her favorite subjects deal with emotions and the relationship between reality and fantasy.

ALL POEMS entered in the national poetry contest are also entered in the National Library of Poetry's North American Open Poetry Contest, which awards over $12,000 in prizes annually.

Serena has also been nominated to be a member of the International Society of Poets and has been invited to a Poetry Symposium in Washington, D.C. in August.

The symposium would include various honors such as three cassette tapes which include Serena's poem, a plaque, the opportunity to read her poem before fellow poets and have her name in lights.

Serena said at this time it doesn't seem possible for she and her family to make the trip.

Serena's poem which appears in "Where Dreams Begin" is as follows:

Life of Loneliness
From child's loneliness
I draw deep within,
To force out this,
Fantasy fills it,
With so many dreams,
Filled with hope,
Filled with what it seems,
Love and Fantasy
Drawn together at last
In a jumble of hopes and dreams,
Seeming no more than a vast,
Life of loneliness.

Vitamin E: "Take It To Heart"

According to a report in a recent issue of American Druggist, two large studies have shown that taking vitamin E supplements daily substantially reduces one's chances of having heart disease. Harvard researchers presented findings from the Nurses Health Study. Women who took 100 international units (i.u.) of vitamin E daily for two years had a striking 46% lower risk of having heart attacks. In a similar study, men who took vitamin E supplements had a 37% lower risk of heart attack. Vitamin E has antioxidant properties and is considered by many experts to be a cancer preventive. (Vitamin C, vitamin A, and the mineral selenium also have antioxidant properties and may help prevent cancer.) Vitamin E may reduce one's chances of having heart disease by preventing oxidation of the low density type of cholesterol (LDL). This cholesterol type leads to hardening of the arteries.

WHO IS GOING TO PROTECT YOUR CROP INVESTMENT AFTER APRIL 15?

It can be a long time from spring to fall. And if the weather isn't cooperative — or is downright bad — the days and weeks can seem mighty long.

In times like these, it can be a big comfort to know that — come what may — your crop investment is protected.

But there's only one way you can be certain it's protected: By carrying crop insurance.

And there's only one time to do it: Soon.

Because after April 15, it will be too late to apply for insurance.*

* April 15 is the deadline to apply for crop insurance on most spring-planted crops in most areas. Check with an agent for information about insurance for the crops you produce.

Where Bright Futures Begin

Wayne State College is on the move. A dramatic enrollment increase is filling classrooms and residence halls to record levels, and our students continue receiving top-quality educations at an affordable price in a very helpful setting.

Why are so many students choosing Wayne State College? Because they like these popular features:

- ★ Affordable: Nebraska residents can attend WSC for under $4,500 a year (tuition, room, meals and books.)
- ★ A perfect location for being close to home but on your own in a friendly community of 5,100.
- ★ A comprehensive curriculum offering a wide variety of majors in the arts, sciences, business and teaching.
- ★ An outstanding faculty who prides itself on getting to know students in and out of small classrooms.
- ★ A dedicated staff of professional advisors and counselors who help students select a major field of study, work through personal or academic problems, and plan careers.
- ★ An attractive residential campus with a rich mix of extracurricular activities.
- ★ A size small enough to enable students to get involved in the extracurricular activities of their choices, but large enough to offer many study options.
