

Program designed to help seniors enter work force

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

Wayne County resident Robert Hank says he probably would not be on the payroll at Wayne State College if not for a program designed to provide temporary work experience for older Nebraskans.

Hank, a resident of Carroll, recently completed a work training program at Wayne High School provided through the Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP).

For approximately four months, he worked 20 hours a week at the high school while training as a janitor. Although the high school kept track of his time sheet, he was paid with federal funds provided through the SCSEP.

Shortly after completing the training program, Hank applied for and was hired as a full-time custodian at Wayne State College.

"I would have never gotten the job if not for this program," said Hank, who at age 62 decided he wanted to remove himself from the stress of farming but wasn't quite ready to retire altogether.

"I think the SCSEP program is terrific for someone like myself who is older and still wants to work, but lacks the experience.

"You can't get a job without experience, and you can't get experience without a job," points out Hank. "It's that simple."

ALTHOUGH the SCSEP program has been around for 25 years, Employment Specialist Lucille Podany says many older people are still unaware of its existence and how it can help persons age 55 or older sharpen and/or develop skills while searching for a permanent job.

The program is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and funded by the Department of Labor under the authority of the Older Americans Act of 1965.

In this area, the SCSEP office is based in Norfolk, under the direction of Carole Verges, and serves clients in the counties of Lancaster, Platte, Dodge, Cuming, Colfax, Wayne, Stanton and Madison.

"We want to get more Wayne County people interested in this program," says Verges, adding that eligible applicants are placed in non-profit or public service community agencies where they receive on-the-job training for 20 hours per week while earning at least minimum wage.

During their temporary employment, clients work with the director of the local project to locate permanent employment either on a part-time or full-time basis.

Verges stresses that SCSEP clients cannot be used to displace current employees.

"OUR GOAL is simple," says Podany. "We're here to provide the necessary training so that our clients can obtain employment outside of the program."

Podany said SCSEP clients train in a variety of job areas, including activities coordinator, bookkeeper, cashier, clerk typist, custodian, data entry clerk, day care worker, driver, food service worker, grounds keeper, mechanic, receptionist, salesperson, security guard and teacher's aide.

"We have a woman training right now as a teacher's aide at the Carroll Elementary School," says Podany. "She loves the job, and the kids just love her."

Podany said she believes it's a myth that most employers are looking to fill positions with younger people.

"I think many employers recognize that there are many benefits in hiring an older person," said Podany. "They're dependable, reliable, trustworthy — all these things."

WAYNE HIGH School Superintendent Dr. Dennis Jensen said the SCSEP program is an excellent program that not only benefits the clients but the school district as well.

"By taking part in this program," said Jensen, "we can free up our regular staff to get lots of other things done that normally they wouldn't have time for."

"It's a wonderful re-training program and I wish more people would take advantage of it. I also wish more non-profit institutions would look into participating in this program."

Jensen said he was especially pleased that the school was able to

Veteran hopes to teach students the perils of history, not the 'glory of war'

By Al Kosse
Herald Correspondent

Fifty-two years after he enlisted in the military service, Carroll resident Arnold Junck still does his duty.

On Tuesday, Junck gave a firsthand account of the invasion of Normandy, along with other day-to-day experiences during World War II, to a group of sophomore students in the world studies class at Wayne High School.

He was invited by his grandson, Bryan, to give the presentation to the class taught by Ron Carnes because it correlated with the course work.

"I give the talk to the kids because I think I have to," Junck said. "I don't enjoy talking about it, but the kids are always interested and I think they can learn something by the material I show them."

"All the classes I've talked to have been very attentive and the students always ask good questions," added Junck, who gives his personal account presentation only to classes which his grandchildren are in.

"ARNOLD asked if he should leave some of the gory stuff out, but I told him to tell the kids like it really was," Carnes said. "It's important for the students to know what really happened."

Most students leaned a bit closer in their chairs the more shocking the story. From the account of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini's execution to the legend of a German general's wife who ordered lamp shades made from the flesh of tormented Jewish people, all ears were peeled.

Junck's presentation also included memorabilia which he passed around to the class to give them a feel for the World War II period.

In addition to reconnaissance photographs of war-torn areas, he displayed foreign currency of the day, carbine shells, 50-caliber shells used in jeeps, guns and air planes, and V-mail — a censored and reduced photocopy of a Christmas card he sent home during the war.

He explained the process of registration with the military in Norfolk and how he joined the 67th Reconnaissance, attached to the First Army. He enlisted on December 7, 1941 under very crowded conditions, receiving all the registered shots and aptitude tests.

He received $21 per month as service pay, about seven of which went back home, taken out as insurance for his family.

THE CARROLL native received training in aviation mechanics, photography and electricity as he did special photography work for the First Army.

His job was to produce pictures of what needed to be targeted or proof of what had been destroyed.

They served the same purpose the high-tech satellites of today's military do.

While in the service for about five years, beginning at age 21, Junck served on seven tour campaigns, including Normandy, Central Europe, the Air Offensive Europe and the Rhineland.

"One of the saddest events I have ever witnessed was when Belgian people were killed and buried by the Germans without identification. Their family members were searching for them in only partially buried graves, trying to identify them," he admitted to the class.

AFTERWARD, Junck said, "I want the students to know that wars are political. They all are. Hitler hated the Jews and was out to exterminate them."

"I believe Hitler was the smartest man in the world at that

Switches to help reduce peak usage

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Someday the weather will be warm, even hot, promises Wayne utility officials. And when that time comes everyone will be thinking about turning on their air conditioners.

Air conditioner season is the toughest time of the year for area electric utilities. These peak power usage periods often determine what local utilities pay all year around for the electricity they buy from other power producers.

In an effort to keep the peak usage as low as possible during the air conditioning season, Gene Hansen, superintendent for electric production in Wayne is encouraging home owners to let the city install load control switches on their home central air conditioner compressors.

The radio controlled switches will allow the city's new load control computer to regulate the electricity usage during those hot summer days to prevent all the air conditioners in town provide training for Hank and that he was able to locate a full-time position afterward. "I felt good for him, but bad for us," smiles Jensen.

"I totally support the program," said the superintendent. "It's mutually beneficial to the worker receiving training and to the institution providing the training."

PODANY said 73 persons are currently participating in the program within the eight-county area the Norfolk SCSEP office serves.

"We're concerned with each and every one of them," she smiles. "We try to provide training in an area of interest to the client," said Podany. "And if someone isn't happy in a position for one reason or another, we'll move them to another position."

Podany stressed that the SCSEP program simply provides temporary training, usually lasting six to eight months, and that clients must meet certain income guidelines.

"We have a lot of people in the program who have wanted to work but were nervous about interviewing for a job," says Podany. "Not only does the SCSEP provide them with the necessary training, but it helps build their confidence to where they feel comfortable about applying for a job."

Podany said elderly residents interested in learning more about the program are encouraged to call the Norfolk office collect at 379-3049.

time. No one caused the world as much misery as he did.

"And he could have taken it further," Junck went on. "If Hitler had not gotten tied down in Russia, he would have been very tough to beat. There was his biggest mistake."

Junck told of a scary night in London when he and another serviceman decided not to race for the bomb shelters while Hitler's buzz bombs flew in. They opted for a less than quiet and peaceful evening underneath the hotel bed, thinking that maybe it wasn't such a wise decision after all.

He laughs when he tells of establishing the front lines at Omaha Beach. It seems they set up camp in an apple orchard. Under continual bombing, the apples were soon falling off the trees and into the soldiers' foxholes.

"It was very loud and we thought we were going to die," Junck says, "but the apples were making it sound worse than it really was."

WHEN he left the service, Junck put all of his memories in a footlocker. For 40 years, he never took them out, determined not to relive the terrible years of war.

However, about 10 years ago, his grandchildren began asking about the war they never knew. Cautiously, Junck revealed his memories, hoping to teach the perils of history, not the "glory of war".

"I'm no hero. The service folks who didn't return and died for our country are the only heroes, and people should understand that."

"I don't like talking about war, but I feel it's my job to let people know what it was really like."

Junck has been invited to return to Normandy Beach this summer to help dedicate a memorial to those fallen in service. As of now, however, he is still uncertain as to whether he will be able to make the trip.

Work load may be lighter

Discussion begins regarding protests on tax assessments

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

The Wayne County Board of Equalization convened for the first time Tuesday to begin discussion about possible tax assessment protests in the county, but it appears the board's work load may be somewhat lighter this year.

Only five protest cases have been filed so far this year, compared to 56 last year and 89 in 1991.

Property owners have until May 1 to file official protests over their property valuation figures. The board, consisting of the three Wayne County Commissioners, will begin hearing the valuation protests May 4.

The lower number of protests is not the result of universally lower valuations, explains County Clerk Deb Finn. She said a change in procedure is thought to have resulted in the reduced work load for the board of equalization.

When property owners come to the courthouse to question their valuation and assessment changes, they are now directed to Assessor Joyce Reeg who explains the background and legal requirements of the valuation decisions.

Many of the property owners' questions and concerns are handled at that point before the official protest is filed, said Mrs. Finn. In this way the tax payer and the county both save time and money, she said.

No one tries to talk the taxpayers out of going ahead with official protests if that's what they want, she said, but at least the new process allows the taxpayer to make a more informed decision before taking their claims to the commissioners.

Commission continuing zoning ordinance review

The Wayne County Planning Commission will be continuing its meticulous review of the proposed zoning ordinance for Wayne County when it meets again April 29 at 8 p.m. at the Courthouse.

The commission members have spent several months going over the ordinance line by line with representatives of Hanna-Keelan Associates, the planning firm hired by the county to help adopt planning and zoning.

Sid Saunders, Wayne County highway superintendent, said there is still a month or more worth of work to do on the zoning ordinance before it will be ready to be presented for public hearings.

Meanwhile, one proposal to come out of zoning discussions, that being to develop a joint county-village planning commission, was discussed by the County Commissioners at their meeting Tuesday.

County Attorney Mike Peiper presented a written report indicating that a merger for planning purposes was a possibility but the documents would have to be carefully crafted.

Saunders said the village boards would have to consider whether they wanted to give up some local zoning control to the county planning commission as part of the merger. He said basically the plan would have to pass muster by the village boards before the county would consider going ahead with the effort.

The county has been working on the effort to establish land use planning and zoning regulations for over a year.

Switches-

from kicking on at once and creating an unusually high peak.

At no cost to the home owner, the city is installing as many as 200 switches this season and will be building that number up to 800 in subsequent years, according to Hansen.

He said the home owner will notice little difference in the inside temperature of his home since the city computer will not allow the units to be shut down for more than 7.5 minutes in each half hour. That coincides with the way air conditioner units normally cycle anyway, said Hansen.

He said the new radio control system is designed only to be used as a means to prevent future rate increases and is not an effort to control the amount of electricity home owners actually use.

The city-owned utility is making the investment in the switches and equipment to benefit the whole city by keeping utility costs down.

Residents who would like more information about the load control switches may contact Hansen at the light plant at 375-2866.

Area students attending Citizen Bee

Congregate Meal Menu

An anticipated 25 high school students from across Nebraska will gather in the Old Senate Chambers of the State Capitol Building to participate in the Nebraska State Citizen Bee competition tomorrow (Saturday).

Christopher Mortenson and Michael McQuistan of Wakefield, Claire Rasmussen and Robert Bell of Wayne and William Haisch of Laurel will be in the competition.

The students were selected through regional competitions held throughout the state last month.

The Citizen Bee, patterned after a spelling bee and sponsored by the Close Up Foundation in Washington, D.C., will place the students in several rounds of written and oral questions.

Students will be awarded points for correct answers and the students with the greatest number of points will be declared the winner. The questions will be on U.S. history, geography, economics, U.S. government and current events and will be derived from a study guide prepared by Close Up.

"Close Up believes that by encouraging our young people to gain a better understanding of how past and current events shape the world we live in today we are making the country a better place to live," said Stephen A. Janger, president of the Close Up Foundation.

"For decades we as a society have been recognizing and rewarding students for excellence in athletics — isn't it past time we offered the same or even greater support for academic achievement? We can all work towards being good citizens; we can't all be athletes," he added.

The Nebraska Citizen Bee is sponsored by the Lincoln High School Close Up Club, the Nebraska Department of Education, the Nebraska Council for the Social Studies and Kavan Ag Services.

Jack Brestel, a teacher at Lincoln

High School is serving as the competition coordinator. On the national level, sponsors include KPMG Peat Marwick and Kraft General Foods.

The students will compete for savings bonds of $1,000, $500 and $250 and the top two students in the state event will proceed to the national competition set for June 27-28 in Washington, D.C. where they will compete for a total of $48,000 in scholarships provided by the American Honda Foundation.

The Close Up Foundation is the largest government studies program in the nation, and also conducts study-visits to Washington, D.C., for more than 24,000 high school students, teachers and others each year.

AREA - Mr. and Mrs. Dwaine Rethwisch of Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Prochaska of Wakefield and Mr. and Mrs. Armin Stark of Laurel joined nearly 300 others at the Nebraska Lutheran Laymen's League (LLL) convention held recently in North Platte. The convention theme was "Tell Another Generation."
The Rev. Terry Timm of Madison reported on the progress of the Orphan Grain Train, which was initiated by persons in the Norfolk area, now joined by the International LLL in providing help and assistance to the people of the former Soviet Union as well as needed areas in the United States.
The clergyman reviewed activity to date, pointed out that a shipment of rye, clothing, box springs and mattresses, and a grinder left recently and it was expected another load would be shipped within a month.
The 1994 convention of the organization will be held at Hastings on April 16-17. The summer retreat is scheduled at Camp Luther near Schuyler on Aug. 14-15.

Strike a Chord

Because we have trouble hearing God, we figure God has trouble hearing us.
God hears not only us, but understands what we want to say—and don't.
God knows our feelings.
One place to talk with God is at church this Sunday.

Soil and Water Stewardship Week

Promoting care of natural resources

Emphasizing that the greatest influence on the environment comes from individuals doing ordinary, thoughtful tasks in their neighborhoods, the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District is encouraging individuals from local churches and schools to join the nationwide observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, April 25 through May 2.

Now in its 38th year, Soil and Water Stewardship Week strives to promote care of our natural resources. This year's theme, "Hands of Healing," suggests that each individual has an opportunity and responsibility to lend a helping hand to the environment.

Stan Staab, general manager of the Lower Elkhorn NRD, said he hopes Stewardship Week will challenge individuals to begin, or continue, individual conservation actions that heal the area in which they live.

"The fact that you may now run less water to brush your teeth is just as important to our environment as farmers installing sediment control basins or terraces on the land. Both require individual action ... both make a difference," said Staab.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD, which works throughout the year on soil and water conservation measures, has provided over 45,000 Stewardship Week materials to 69 churches and 48 schools within the district. To enhance the annual celebration, the Lower Elkhorn and Lewis & Clark NRDs co-sponsor an annual Ministers' Tour. On Monday, April 26, participating clergy will tour conservation practices in the Creighton area in Knox County.

The Lower Elkhorn is one of nearly 3,000 conservation districts nationwide that works with the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) to encourage the wise use of natural resources through the annual week-long observance.

Traditionally, Stewardship Week had a more religious focus. In parts of the South earlier this century, a few church congregations began to set aside the fifth Sunday after Easter as Soil and Soul Sunday.

This designation was changed to Soil Stewardship Sunday when the publishers of Farm and Ranch magazine took on promotion of the observance. The response of clergymen and laymen was so positive that the observance of the special Sunday spread to other denominations in other states.

In 1954, the magazine publishers suggested to the officers of the NACD that nationwide promotion of the observance would help create greater national awareness of the need for soil and water stewardship. NACD took on national sponsorship of the annual observance in 1955, and the week-long event became known as Soil and Water Stewardship Week, to be celebrated between the last Sunday in April and the first Sunday in May.

The purpose of the study was to compare the influence on shoot growth and visual quality of Kentucky bluegrass when cut with a mulching mower versus a rear bagger. Results showed forty percent more growth when the grass was cut by a mulching mower. With the recent purchase of a commercial mulching mower, we can provide this service for you.
