Graduation fun turns ugly; man remains critical

By Kevin Peterson
Of the Herald

Former Wayne State football all-American linebacker Bob Sterba is in the custody of the Pierce county jail today, after being arrested shortly before midnight last Friday on charges of 1st degree assault.

Sterba

The victim, Robert C. Jones was taken to Providence Medical Center in Wayne and then transferred to Marian Health Care Center in Sioux City, Iowa with head injuries and severe trauma according to Providence Medical Center Administrator Marci Thomas.

The incident took place outside of The Max Lounge in downtown Wayne. The investigation into the fight that has left Jones clinging to life is continuing and Wayne County Attorney Michael Pieper says there could be more charges.

Sterba, a 1992 graduate of Wayne State is an Omaha native who graduated from South High in 1987. He got his degree in teaching with an endorsement in health and physical education and spent this school year as a substitute teacher in Omaha. He is currently being held on a $100,000 bond and faces arraignment Thursday morning.

Jones, a 1983 Omaha Burke graduate and current resident of California, came to Wayne to see his sister Carol graduate on Saturday. Sterba was in town to see some of his friends receive their degrees in commencement exercises as well but neither made it to their Saturday plans.

Eyewitnesses to this incident reported conflicting views of what transpired. Several accounts of what happened that have appeared in other newspapers have been discounted by witnesses.

Pieper declined to release any further details of the incident pending the outcome of the investigation.

Wayne State Athletic Director Pete Chapman expressed his sympathy for both families. "It's a tragedy no matter how you look at it," Chapman said. "I'm sure nobody thought this situation would come to a matter of life and death. It's just a senseless thing that happened."

Chapman coached Sterba and he knew Jones' father, the late Richard Jones, athletic director at Omaha Central.

Sterba was the leading tackler for the Wayne State football team during his freshman, sophomore and junior seasons.

'Henoween' new for Chicken Show

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Chicken Stamps specially cancelled by the Postal Service at a special chicken station in Bressler Park and several events surrounding "Henoween" are planned as new features of the dozzenth plus one Wayne Chicken Show this year.

Henoween, or all hen's eve, will be held Friday night prior to Chicken Show Saturday and will include a street carnival of activities downtown. Sponsored by the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, the Henoween activities will include food, crafts and game booths, bathtub races, a street dance, pony rides, a performing magician, country and western dance demonstrations, chicken chip chucking contests and more, according to Nancy Schultz Chamber administrative assistant.

THE AMAZING flashing chicken which lights the way to retail "blue light" bargains in Wayne stores is also rumored to be scheduled for a return visit this Henoween.

Second and Third streets from Main to Pearl will be blocked off for the activities as will Pearl from Second to Third.

"Chickens on the Tube," is the theme of the 1993 Chicken Show. Commemorative t-shirts depicting the theme are available now. T-shirt sales annually provide the funds to put on the show, which last year attracted an estimated 10,000 people to Wayne.

Chickens on stamps will be the theme of the Postal Service involvement in the 1993 show. A special cancellation stamp has been commissioned for the day of the show, and Wayne Postmaster Dave Kirkpatrick will open a special postal station at Chicken Show headquarters to hand cancel commemorative stamps paying tribute to 1993 as the Year of the Rooster on the Chinese calendar.

The effort is sure to be popular with stamp collectors, said Kirkpatrick.

BESIDES THESE new events, the always zany contests and activities will be held again at Bressler Park. The Chicken Show parade will again be a highlight of the weekend.

Food and fun is planned for everyone. The show falls on July 10 this year, just two short months away.

Husker Diplomats to 'think globally'

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Dozens of key business and government leaders were in Wayne Monday for the Nebraska Diplomats kickoff celebration of Business and Industry week; for tours of local industries and for an afternoon of rainy golf.

Nebraska Lt. Governor Maxine Moul urged the conference attendees to "think globally," which is the 1993 theme for the influential Nebraska Diplomats.

Helping Nebraska communities succeed in the new global economy was the goal of the discussion and of Mrs. Moul's talk to more than 200 at lunch.

"YOU, AS well as the communities in which you do business, are partners in building Nebraska's next economy," she said. She gave examples of the diverse nature of the

WSC graduates rained in; urged to get political

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Rains forced Wayne State College Commencement out of the Willow Bowl and into Rice Auditorium again this year as 268 students were awarded degrees Saturday.

WSC President Dr. Donald Mash said he annually makes the toughest decision of his career on the morning of commencement. Heading dire rain warnings, Mash ordered grounds keepers to set up indoors at 11:30 for the 2 p.m. ceremony.

At 1:15 the rains came confirming his correct decision.

GRADUATION IN Rice means there are not enough seats and an overflow crowd had to watch the ceremonies on closed circuit television from other locations on campus.

An estimated 3,000 attended the ceremony and heard former United States Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Dr. David Mathews, praise the students and Wayne State College for their efforts in political education.

"This institution is leading the way ... in teaching the skills of reasoning together," said Mathews. As president and chief executive officer of the Kettering Foundation, Mathews is the head of an organization which seeks a return to individual political activity and opinion formulation.

WAYNE STATE College will be hosting a Kettering Public Policy Institute to train moderators for community town hall meetings on various crucial issues facing the nation. The institute will be held this summer.

"You could not have found an institution anywhere that is doing more to open the frontiers of change... and struggling against a political culture where minimalist or weak notions of citizenship abound," said Mathews. He said the college and its faculty are taking steps to help students realize the importance of working with people of differing views to help solve the common problems facing our nation.

HE SAID THE college is teaching a new form of political thought that seeks to return control of the political process to the people. He said the pessimism about "politics" must be overcome in that process, and the new idea of politics, where people talk and reason together in ways that enable them to act together more effectively must be reached.

Kettering Foundation is sponsoring community discussion programs all over the nation on issues dealing with health care, education, international affairs and government in an effort to form grass roots consensus on policy development.

Wayne State College, one of only three institutions in the entire Midwest involved in the effort, has been associated with Kettering for three years.

Customers come first

Early settlers were very dependent on the businesses that developed in the communities of early-day Nebraska--and vice versa. Those early business leaders realized how important their customers were. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ley Sr. operated the "German" store for about 10 years, then sold it and went into banking.

As he had in the store, Mr. Ley continued to emphasize the importance of service to his customers and the community. For the next 100 years the Ley family would honor that commitment and today at State National Bank and Trust Company the customer still comes first.

Nix the parking ban

Dear Editor:
I would like to offer a few thoughts on the midnight-to-five parking ban on the streets of Wayne. In the 11 years we have lived here, my family and I have been ticketed or otherwise inconvenienced a number of times because of this ordinance. This is especially irritating now that the fine is $5, up from $2.

I am told by the police department that the ban was created to allow for streets to be cleaned and to make sure everyone has a place to park during daylight hours. I was also told that it is easier to enforce if the ban is year-round instead of just during snow emergencies. This is because if people are not in the habit of leaving their cars in the street at night, they don't do it during snow, either.

I am not convinced by these reasons.

For example: although I am usually not awake between midnight and five a.m., I find no evidence that my street has been swept clean during the night. But I do sometimes see the street sweeper out and about during the day. Also, the only time the snowplow seems to come is during the day, which is when I have to park on the street anyway, and then my car gets blocked in. As to the need to allow more parking space during the day, I just don't understand that at all. Most of the other towns in which I have lived have no such ordinance.

I believe that there are better reasons for allowing all-night parking except during snow emergencies. One is that it may not be possible for some people to park all their vehicles in garage or driveway. Many people entertain out-of-town guests who have no place to park. I realize that one may call the police and get permission to park on the street, but this privilege is limited to three consecutive nights.

It all adds up to a hassle for the public in general. I think the police can deal adequately with problems like junked cars being left on the street, snow emergencies, etc.

I would be very interested to know the outcome of a vote on the problem. I personally don't know of anyone (except the Chief of Police) who supports this. If the people don't want it, can the city force us to comply?

Medicaid gets budget blame

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

If state senators want to put blame on anything for the state's budget problem, Medicaid is probably a good candidate.

Its growth in the next two years is projected to be almost $70 million. That pretty well dwarfs the $35 million deficit the Legislature is trying to get a handle on.

So last week, senators took it out on Medicaid.

They gave first-round approval to a bill that saves $4 million annually from the program through administrative cost-saving measures.

AND THEN they really got mean, slashing another three million by actually moving to eliminate some services covered by Medicaid, including care by chiropractors, podiatrists, optometrists and dentists, heart and liver transplants, care by physical, speech and hearing therapists and transportation to adult day care.

Several senators voiced the opinion that if the Legislature really wanted to save money, this is the kind of slashing and burning they need to do.

The Legislature was in such a mood that day, such a state of frustration, if senators could have saved a few million more by shooting Bambi, they would have done that, too.

And there's no doubt there is public support for cutting off Medicaid.

THE PROBLEM is, the members of the public aren't the ones who will have to look Medicaid patients in the face and tell them their coverage is being cut off. They don't have to tell someone they're not going to get the life-saving transplant operation and are going to die.

Last week, senators didn't have to look those people in the face, either, and that made their vote easier. But they're going to hear a lot from those people in between now and the time the bills come up for second-round debate.

And senators will also be hearing from the health care providers themselves. The podiatrists or chiropractors will be all over their local senator at the country club, or the cafe, this week.

Like I said, the vote last week let some senators take out some frustration. But I'll becha a buck that though a majority of senators voted for the $3 million cut the first time around, a majority will back pedal real fast on most of the cuts next time around.

CUTS LIKE that are tough and there is an argument you really don't always save that much. How much money do you save if a person you said can't go to a chiropractor anymore has to have expensive back surgery instead?

Make no mistake about it, there is probably room for some Medicaid cuts this session.

But if you want to save big bucks over the long haul, you have to get at the root cause of why Medicaid is growing so much: the high cost of medical care for everyone. We have some people out in Washington who are looking at that right now.

In the short haul, expect to see more tax increases than Medicaid cuts to get us through it all.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

NO DEFERMENT THIS TIME, BILL.

Boosters appreciate support

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Wayne Area Youth Boosters I would like to thank the many community businesses that donated generously when Linda Raveling contacted them regarding donations for an "End-of-the-Year" party for area fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth graders at the Wayne Middle Center. Two separate evenings were set aside for the parties, one for the fifth and sixth graders and one for the seventh and eighth graders.

For those who are not familiar with the Middle Center, it is a large room located above the fire station. The room has several types of table games, TV's and Nintendo's and the like for the kid's use and enjoyment. The room does lack any type of acoustical improvements which one becomes acutely aware of whenever there are more than six kids there! This leads to my next thank you.

A big thank you to the many parents and City Rec employees who helped with both parties. Hopefully no one has suffered permanent hearing loss, especially those who were there when 115 fifth and sixth graders were there!

We would also like to thank the kids — they were super! This proved to be both a fun and rewarding experience. I was reminded last week in church how important it is for us to take good care of our lambs if we want a good flock.

Anyone interested in becoming a Wayne Area Youth Booster can contact Jan Magnuson at 375-2509 or Karen Hansen at 375-1583.

No end of embarrassment

There are only two kinds for newspaper column writers. Those that have written something they regretted later and those that will write something they regret later.

I probably fit in both of those categories.

Last week, my column came out a little short. So at the last minute I pounded out a few extra lines I thought would be mildly amusing and even complimentary to my friend Steve Schumacher, the funeral home owner.

Wrong.

After adding stuff, then the column was too long to fit in the hole on the page. So I took some of the added lines out.

I should have scrapped the whole thing because the end result was not what I intended, and hence I have the difficult, albeit often-practiced, task of apologizing this week.

There was this guy in California, see. And he had this idea of selling plans for coffin kits that you make yourself. Designed as such so you could use it as a bookcase until you really needed it, the coffin idea was written up on the news wires and I had clipped the item for future innocuous comment as a column filler.

My first hint of fallacious thinking came when someone asked me Tuesday night why I was mad at Steve Schumacher. I thought he was making a joke as I had attempted to do. Wrong again. So I reread the finished piece and had to admit that it didn't sound too funny and the intended humorous tone got lost somewhere. It even sounded like I was trying to encourage people not to have funerals. Which was not my intent.

So, I called Steve and apologized. He was gracious and accepted my explanation, saying he had also heard about the Californian with the do-it-yourself coffin plan. Steve explained that the idea does not always work as the departed had intended with makeshift coffins.

There is a liability factor for pall bearers and the funeral home. Plus, image the problems if the box were not well-made and should happen to come apart during bearing or transport. Not a very funny joke, really.

My whole intent with this explanation is to make sure people didn't take my column seriously last week—if ever.

And I also wanted to smooth my route to the hereafter.

You see, after my column last week I had this fear that once I'm gone, none of the local morticians would want to have anything to do with my sorry bones. Under the circumstances that won't bother me much but could cause my family no end of embarrassment.

This may be short, but I'll not be adding anything to it now...

Adam and Eve were first gardeners

"Homer!"
"Yes, dear."
"Where are ya?"
"On the front porch."
"Mail come?"
"Yep. Leaf'n thru it now."
"I'm lookin' for a new seed catalog."

"You mean the Kernal Journal?"
"Yeah, did it come?"
"Funny, my new thread mag came yesterday an' it sed a woman reaps what she sews. Guess those writers been readin' the Good Book."

"Might be. I've always sorta wondered what mighta been growin' in Adam's garden."
"Adam's garden! Where'd he git title to it? You know good 'n well the Bible sez it was the Garden of Eve!"

"Hon, ya jist better look agin, cause Gen'sus sez it was the Garden of Eden."
"Well, whoever owned it, I don't see how they got a 'crop without doin' some sprayin'."

"They had prayin' 'stead of sprayin', hon. But I do wonder where ol' Adam wuz able to git his readin' material showin' him seeds an' the 'how to' of plantin'."

"Beats me. Wonder what he used for tools?"
"Specially when he didn't have neighbors to borrow from. An' his wife never gardened before, so she couldn't tell him how!"

"My ol' Sunday School teacher sed God planted the garden."
"That sure 'nuff saved alotta work! Remember, Adam was alone for quite a spell."

"That always bothered me."
"Whatcha mean?"
"Him liv'n in that garden alone. There weren't no neighbor's gardens aroun' to see if they were better'n his. He didn't have no radio, teevee or CD. He couldn't putter 'round the house 'cause he didn't have a house aroun' in which to putter! An' no clock to watch!"

"He prob'ly spent lootsa time water'n the sweet corn. Only problem, I wonder where he hooked up the hose?"
"Silly, he didn't have no water works. He prob'ly used elephants."

You know how they suck up water an' spray ever'body?"
"Ther's somethin' else that bothers me."
"What's that, Homer?"
"How wuz Adam able to raise a garden when he had animals runnin' all over it?"

"It wuz a 'help yerself' garden. Adam jist sorta sat back 'n 'stead of puttin' out feedin' troughs, bird perches, an' feeders, he jist let nature take its course."

"Of 'course, not hav'n a wife at first, he had lotsa time. He didn't hafta fix this, fix that and hear'n her say 'Yer mother-in-law is comin' so yer better git the house painted!'"

"Arc ya tryin' to tell me somethin', dear? Jist remember Eve didn't hafta bother lookin' thru Adam's family album wond'rin' why they didn't print the jokes under the pictures! Heh heh!"

"He musta kept mighty busy namin' the animals. Bef' he sat on his front porch jist a dreamin' away what he was gonna call that two-legged feathered bird that layed eggs for his breakfast."

"If Eve woulda been there, she coulda organized a committee meetin' of some kind, you know, like Hil'ry does for Bill. They coulda had the first Easter egg hunt ever!"

"Adam didn't have no money to buy a book of names, an' no store to git it from, so he likely jist watched each animal as it crossed his bean an' tomat' patch, then called it a name."

"Oh, I'll bet he did that all right! Heh heh!"
"An' Dora, jist think, before Eve came along, Adam never had to come home with an alibi. He never had to give her legal proof that he wasn't where he wuz, and therefore couldn't do what he did!"

"Yer tread'n shallow water of man! I'm sure that after Eve got there she musta had an itchin' sensation caused by inflammation of her wishbone! No doubt she wished she'd met a man talented as a tailor so he coulda sewed her somethin' to wear! Adam didn't even wear clothes! Jist imagine wantin' to go somewhere an' not havin' a thing to wear!"

Noodlehead Acres
By Raisin I. Brows
aka Merlin Wright

"Eve surely first sed that, darlin'. Ever' married man has heard that one! The only place she wuz gonna go was runnin' over to the apple orchard. After she made that trip, with him runnin' to catch her, they wore Designer Leaves manufactured by The Maker Inc.—Talk 'bout name brands!"

"Wonder where Adam 'n Eve did their bankin'?"

"Don't rightly know, Dora, but with her wear'n his rib they had the first joint account."

"Eve was made so Adam would have somebody to listen to his sick jokes!"

"Hon, I'm mighty glad women came along 'cause I need yer help plantin' the garden!"

"No way! My freezer has all the vegetables ya ever thaw."

"Yer jist like Eve!"
"How's that?"

"Yer gonna wait 'til after the garden's planted to show up!"
"An' men think we're the stupid half of wisdom!"

Mayor proclaims Poppy Day

Mayor Robert Carhart last week proclaimed Thursday, May 20 as American Legion Auxiliary Poppy Day in Wayne.

On that day, the red crepe paper poppy will be offered to the public by the American Legion Auxiliary of Post 43 as a reminder of the sacrifice of thousands of servicemen in four wars. Funds collected on Poppy Day are used to assist needy veterans and their families.

The program is a self-help program and the poppies are handmade in poppy shops run by auxiliary volunteers. In these shops, disabled and hospitalized veterans make the flowers by hand as part of a physical and psychological therapy program by veterans for veterans. The poppies are purchased from the shop by the auxiliary and offered to the public for a contribution.

This memorial flower was adopted by the American Legion Auxiliary in 1921 and since that time, programs have been conducted throughout the United States each year.

The Lutheran Women's Missionary League (LWML) of First Trinity Lutheran Church, Altona, met May 6 in the morning for quilting.

A no-host salad and pie luncheon was served at noon with the Rev. Ricky Bertels furnishing homemade ice cream.

The afternoon meeting began with the singing of "God Bless Our Native Land" in honor of National Day of Prayer. Pastor Bertels gave the lesson, "Going Down for the Third Time," taken from the LWML Quarterly, and the group sang "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."

DARLENE Frevert presided at the business meeting and reported that the $1,000,000 mite goal of the International LWML has been met. The dedication song was sung as the mite box offering was taken.

Each member was encouraged to make a kit for the homeless consisting of one hand towel, one wash cloth, 3.5 oz. soap, toothbrush and toothpaste, 3-4 1/2 oz., 3-4 oz. shampoo, comb and a Christian tract.

A clothing drive will be held and items should be taken to the school in boxes marked with the contents. Members are also reminded to bring food items for the Wayne Food Pantry.

Each of the projects is to be completed by the International LWML Convention in June. A donation of $25 will be sent to the Native American Mission Fund at Winnebago.

IT WAS announced that the zone executive board meeting will be July 12 at Martinsburg. At least one name from the local society is to be submitted for the ballot for zone election at the Fall Rally.

Members were reminded of the Mission Fair to be held July 11 from 2 to 7 p.m. at Trinity Lutheran, Martinsburg.

The Altona congregation is to send in their zone project by June 1. The name of an LWML woman is also needed to serve on a committee.

Lois Ankeny had devotions and prayer, and the group sang "Back to God America." Rose-Sellen reported on the midyear meeting in Oakland on April 13. The state convention will take place in Kearney on Sept. 20.

Lieutenant Governor Maxine Moul was in Wayne Monday as part of the kick off for Business and Industry Week and is pictured taking time out from her busy schedule to join in a 100th birthday celebration for Beryl Harvey at Wayne Care Centre. The celebration was hosted by members of Minerva Club, of which Beryl has been a member since 1954. Beryl was born May 19, 1893 near Dedham, Iowa. She and her husband, Dr. E.L. "If I could just hear, I'd feel 100 percent fine," smiles Beryl, adding that her eyes are the only organs treating her the way she would like to be treated and she is an avid reader of newspapers. Minerva Club members are requesting a card shower in honor of Beryl's 100th, and cards and letters should be addressed to her at Wayne Care Centre, 918 Main St., Wayne, Neb., 68787.

Foot Ulcers: A Complication of Diabetes

According to a recent article in California Pharmacist, about 20 percent of all diabetic patient hospitalizations are due to foot problems. A report in a 1990 issue of Clinical Geriatric Medicine indicates that the average cost of treating diabetic foot ulcers in the hospital is between five and seven thousand dollars. Most diabetes experts agree that diabetic foot ulcers and associated complications can be prevented or at least managed and that hospitalizations can be prevented.

Prevention involves good foot care. Make certain shoes are not too tight or too loose. Seek the care of a physician or foot specialist if the feet are red, throbbing, or discharging a purulent secretion.

Treatment of foot ulcers may involve oral or injectable antibiotics. New treatments are also being evaluated which increase blood flow to the legs and feet.

State budget viewed

By Sen. Kurt Hohenstein
District No. 17

This week we will begin to examine the state budget. We are examining, in conjunction with the state budget, revenue bills and medicaid issues. The Appropriations Committee developed a budget that is balanced over the next two years and does not require any tax increases, but does contain approximately $20 million in cuts in each of the next two years. Our structural problem results primarily from the extreme growth in the medicaid portion of the budget.

With medicaid issues, ongoing spending will exceed revenues by a cumulative $175.5 million over the next five years. Without medicaid, there would have been a cumulative $60.5 million surplus over the same five year period. Unless something changes the current rates will show that major entitlement programs as a percentage of total general funds will grow from 24.82 percent this year to 44.19 percent in the year 2006. What that means is that unless we get medicaid under control, we will see substantially decreased revenues for every other area of state government. It will eliminate all of our education funding, the colleges and universities and still not have enough money to pay for the medicaid problem.

That is why we have begun to look at the medicaid issue and try to find ways to slow down the growth and restructure the program. The Health Committee sent out several bills dealing with medicaid, including managed care and some reduction in services, but the major optional services sought to be reduced were felt not to be a cost savings. However, the full legislative body on the floor did adopt an amendment to LB 804 which substantially cuts optional services for medicaid.

Part of the problem is that the Department of Social Services which manages the medicaid program does not have the information to specifically identify where cuts ought to be made which are cost savings. We are updating computers and giving them substantial additional resources to do that because even if the federal government does not act in this area, the State of Nebraska has no option but to be proactive and take immediate steps to develop our own program to limit these costs.

Unless the taxpayers are willing to spend an ever-increasing amount of the state budget on the medicaid issue, or have us raise taxes again and again, this problem must be brought under control. I am disappointed that we do not have more options to consider this year but the Health and Human Services Committee did not send out any other options to look at. They are, however, in the process of doing additional work on those areas and I'm sure there will be substantial work in the medicaid area this summer and next year. In the meantime, we have to find as many legitimate cuts that we can make, look at managed care to minimize the increases and try to find a reasonable balance in the state budget process.

Some revenue bills which have been sent to the floor for full consideration include a tax on all non-nutritional drinks. This would include pop, coffee, tea, flavored water and any other beverage with less than 50 percent fruit juice. This tax would raise about $10 million a year. This was originally proposed as a tax to more fully fund the HELP program for K-12 teachers' salaries but as it presently stands the money would go to the general fund. The Governor also has a proposal which would shift some money from hospitals in a complicated scheme to get more federal money but if that were unsuccessful, would tax gross receipts of hospitals across the state. The hospital tax is not a very popular idea but it is the Governor's fallback position to raise an additional $6 or $7 million.

I'd appreciate receiving your input on any of these ideas whether you agree cutting optional medicaid services or raising additional revenues so that does not have to occur. As always you can contact me and my staff by writing to me at the State Capitol, Lincoln, Neb. 68509; or call me at 471-2716.

Wayne joins power pool

Corrine Pedersen, community development director with the Nebraska Municipal Power pool is shown presenting the membership plaque in the association to Gene Hansen, electrical generation superintendent for the city of Wayne. Wayne has joined the energy cooperative to utilize its training workshops and load management software. While the community won't be purchasing electricity from NMPP, Hansen said membership will benefit the community in many other ways.

Abuse of privilege haunts legislators

The headline April 22 reads, "Public Officials Think Twice About Accepting Perquisites." The story had to do with Nebraska State Legislators being catered to with gifts of tickets to ball games, as guests at dinners, in accepting memberships (gratis) at the Nebraska Club and University Club in Lincoln, golf club memberships and many and varied gratuities with value in the market place.

Nebraska legislators are not alone; other officials in Nebraska receive goodies from grateful, or hopefully grateful persons. It can be argued that these gratuities come without any attachments, that they are really just a token of esteem and friendship. And, certainly, some are. We see that happen among friends and families and bosses and employees. There are many Biblical references to such acts; there are many obverse references.

We need not revisit the entire performance in its many acts that left us with dismay and distrust of the members of the national Congress. The track record in Nebraska has been smudged by some of our own. Some of the acts are still being played out among leaders in the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives. Suffice it to say that the odor of rubber checks is lasting, and that impeccable conduct and moral leadership is not universally found at the political leadership level.

That is a sad observation. Sadly, because some good people get tarred with the same dirty brush.

In Nebraska, at the general election of 1992, 68 percent of the voters emphatically announced a demand for ethics in the conduct of office when they voted for term limits. Nationally, 35 percent of the voters in 14 states sent the same message when they elected the largest contingent of new members in a generation of elections.

Is ethics at the political level a unique demand on those occupying public office? Because 'it's politics,' is it different than the demands placed on every person in the society? Not really — because acceptable and honorable conduct should be observed by all of us. Do we make mistakes, and will we make mistakes? The human animal is far from perfect, otherwise why the constant preaching from the most ancient orders of belief to the newest, most outrageous cults? Perhaps, for complex reasons that occur over time, there may be a decay in the moral fiber of the society which is the root cause of much aberrant behavior. Hopefully that decay is reversible.

I suggest that containment of that moral decay is a responsibility of the leaders in the society who sit in the highest, most visible chairs. Because of visibility coming from constant public exposure, and the height of the pedestal, I believe the greatest responsibility as role models rests with leaders in the political arena, a responsibility beyond that of 'lawmaking.'

Why should a driver of a car or truck have much concern with rules of the road when law enforcement is challenged and scorned in the halls of the legislature? And then bemoan the conduct of citizens when they bend the law? Why should morality be in the forefront of youthful thinking ... or their older models when they get reports of Senatorial or Congressional misconduct which provides raw material ... no editing required ... for throwaway tabloids?

My

It has been suggested by the Speaker of the Nebraska Legislature that the effect of perks on public officials is exaggerated. He is reported to say that refusal of gifts or perks is probably the 'politically correct' thing to do. The question the speaker should answer is, is the acceptance of a gift under the circumstances of public office, the honest, morally correct thing to do. The only politically correct thing to do is to understand the laws you are bound to observe and enforce under the jurisdiction of that office, to consider changes and to vote based on the arguments made regardless of outside gratuitous persuasion.

The inference that a gift with a value of less than $50 is "politically" without value, needs not require an accounting, is not correct. The response on the street would be, 'there ain't no such thing as being a little bit pregnant.'

An argument that a trip to Alaska really left no friendly impact on the recipient is subject to question.

The examples of questionable conduct in the area of influence peddling or gratuities in the political community are too numerous to list, even currently.

Kindnesses and gifts among friends and families are an accepted custom.

But gifts among strangers and new found friends are not seen like those in a familial relationship. Why do you think boxes of Crackerjacks have a trinket inside the box, or why do bottles of Seven Up hide a number under the cap just before the Final Four playoff for the Final Two? Are they giving away goodies just to be nice? Forget it ... you know the answer ...

In the case of gifts and other friendly gestures to a political office holder, the giver wants something. Maybe now ... maybe later ... but sometime, somewhere a favor will be needed. Any good salesman understands the value of friendship. A good lobbyist is a good salesman. Why do you suppose they have clients and why do you suppose they get paid by clients? There is something in it for somebody ... and in the process of such actions the political process may become twisted.

Several years ago a (former) Chief Justice made a public speech calling for greater respect for government, and the judicial system. My response to him was that public attitude responds to kinds of conduct reported in the media — and that becomes an ethical burden for the reporter — but it is the database upon which most citizens must rely in making political judgments. It is the performance, real and perceived, of a person in government which becomes the point of reference in awarding applause or criticism.

In delegating public power by election, which power is extended to appointees and others in government by reference, the citizen has given complete faith and trust to that public official — for as long as that person holds his office. In most cases that person cannot be removed from that position of power for the time in office. So, the citizen has said, literally, 'I entrust myself to you.' That faith and trust and confidence is placed on the line in the ballot box in every election. Once in office, the citizens are at the mercy of the officer holder. That seems to be a great demonstration of faith and trust — with limited recourse.

I respectfully suggest that the burden for an improvement in public attitude towards those in government, rests with those in government. The former Chief Justice was quoted as saying he was awed by those in government. This suggests that those in government should be placed on a pedestal — as something better than those in the 'private' sector — I disagree. Without the earners in the private sector, those in government would be without a support system.

Rather than awe, I offer respect, when earned — and from those in government an offering of humility may be due the citizens.

Do we need good people in government — and is this a good system — and do I (we) owe reasonable support for a reasonable government? You bet! And if we want to reward public servants for public service let's offer it openly and have it received openly, visibly. Suspicion and doubt are the creatures of whispered agreements and surreptitious rewards. Suspicion and doubt are the progenitors of movements for term limits, for campaign finance reform, for restrictions on the conduct of former government officials, for the need for an Accountability Commission.

It has always been true that the abuse of a privilege eventually comes back to haunt the abuser. This may now be the case in the political arena.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK'S SENIOR CITIZEN CORNER

MEDIGAP UPDATE: Last year, a federal law went into effect mandating the standardizing of Medicare supplementary insurance designed to provide benefits where Medicare leaves off. This type of coverage is called Medigap insurance.

The legislation was designed to clear up confusion about benefits as well as resolve complaints about abusive marketing of Medigap policies. Seniors testified in Congressional hearings about paying for the coverage they thought they were getting, only to learn their policies offered limited benefits. Some seniors said they bought two policies to be sure they were getting maximum coverage, but discovered that rather than complement each other, the plans duplicated the benefits.

What the law does is require private insurance companies who intend to offer Medigap policies to set up something called Plan A, which is a core package of basic benefits. They can also offer nine other plans (Plan B through Plan J) each of which would provide a different combination of benefits.

The key to the legislation is that for the first time, consumers could rely on the fact that each model plan is the same regardless of which insurer offers it.

Price can vary depending on coverage. Companies can also set prices relating to the policyholder's age, and where she/he lives. Some firms offer discounts to non-smokers, as well as to couples who each buy a policy. Although the standardization law is a federal measure, insurance regulation is a state matter, and approval of premiums for each Medigap plan offered for sale must be made by each state's insurance department.

While the law has been shown to be effective during the past year, seniors looking to buy Medigap insurance should shop around to get the best price for the benefits they want. They should also be aware that the cheapest may not necessarily be the best company to go with. It's important to investigate the financial strength of a company before buying a policy. Some firms barely hang on from month to month. No one should have to learn that his or her company failed at any time — most of all, when they've had a serious illness and have run up a large medical bill. You can check your company in a publication called "Best Insurance Reports: Life-Health," published by the A.M. Best Company, one of several ratings services. It should be available at your local library.

Finally, some analysts say if President Clinton can produce a health package more comprehensive than Medicare, the need for Medigap policies could end.

Wayne Rotary Club is top in district honors

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

The Wayne Rotary Club came home with the bulk of the hardware from the recent Rotary District Convention held in Omaha.

The Wayne Club beat out much larger clubs from Omaha and Lincoln as well as others in the region of Eastern Nebraska and Western Iowa for the top awards given annually at the district level.

Top honors for community service were given to the Wayne club for its rewarding mentor program which matches professionals in the community with high school students for fun and fellowship.

CHAIRMAN OF THE club's mentor program is Brad Coulter. Activities involving club members with high school students have included sporting event trips, car shows and local meetings.

School officials have indicated the program has been instrumental in reducing or eliminating the drop out rate at the high school.

The Wayne Club has the top leadership for clubs its size according to district officials. The plaque for the district's top club president has the Wayne president's name on it. Dan Rose, was presented the honor by District Governor Frank Goldberg of Omaha.

Membership growth brought another first place award to the Wayne Club. The club increased its membership by nearly 50 percent this past year, thanks to an energetic recruitment program conducted by president-elect Marion Arneson. The club currently has 45 members.

BESIDES THESE honors, the Wayne club was one of only 16 in the district which gained Rotary International presidential citation status. That award is presented for special efforts in all facets of Rotary Service, International, Community, Vocational and Club.

"We had a very good year," admitted Rose, who will be stepping aside in July. "Rather than being a task, it was really easy to do," he added, citing the work of all the club members. "We really have fun," he added.

Rose cited a long list of activities the Wayne Rotary Club is involved in besides the Mentor Program and district level activities.

ROTARY EVENTS during the year include the Christmas Tour of Homes, The Soup and Pie Supper, support services at the Chicken Show, sponsorship of scholarships for worthy Wayne students, hosting foreign exchange students and teams of visiting professionals from foreign countries, collecting and dispatching used medical equipment to foreign lands, raising funds for Rotary International humanitarian programs, organization of volunteers to assist the Wayne recycling program, and other community and club service activities.

All of these awards, activities and club growth is even more significant when you consider the Wayne club has yet to celebrate its 6th birthday, said Rose.

The club meets at 7 a.m. every Wednesday at the Vet's Club in Wayne.

Laurel Centennial bash 1 month off

By Nancy Wiese
Herald Correspondent

Come Saturday, June 12, Northeast Nebraskans will perhaps witness the biggest, small town parade in the world when the Laurel community celebrates its 100th birthday with a grand centennial parade at 1 p.m.

Jim Casey, centennial parade coordinator, has contacted the Guinness Book of World Records about the possibility of Laurel having the largest parade per capita in the world.

No category of this type exists in the 1993 edition of the Guinness Book of World Records, and with no previous record set Casey believes Laurel has a chance to set an international record.

CASEY'S love of his hometown is what motivated him to put Laurel in the record books.

"Laurel is a good town to live in," he said. "In my mind, a good time to show off our town to other people is during a parade. One hundred years only comes around once in a lifetime, so I wanted to get involved with it."

"That's my reason for writing to the Guinness Book. I thought the sky's the limit and if you're going to do something, you might as well do something as big or better than someone else."

Currently, parade entries have come in from as far as Minnesota and Grandview, Texas, and as close as Hartington, Neb.

One of the more unusual parade entries is a red Volkswagen Bug that blows bubbles and resembles a lady bug by sporting black spots and long eyelashes on the headlights.

Other entries include strange and unusual farm equipment, a milking cow on a flatbed trailer, along with the usual types of parade entries.

A car show scheduled for Sunday, June 13 will bring in additional amusing entries to the parade.

Each parade entry will be judged and small cash prizes will be awarded.

Jim Casey of Laurel is shown with the old fire truck which will be on display in the Laurel Centennial parade next month.

TO INSURE an enjoyable day for everyone, senior citizen parade viewers will be able to park in a specified area and then ride on flatbed trailers or buses to the parade site in Laurel. All viewers are encouraged to bring their own lawn chairs.

During the parade, area auctioneers will stand along the route and announce the entries. Other parade volunteers include members of the Laurel Volunteer Fire Department who will be directing the parade entries.

The parade line-up will start at the airport just northeast of Laurel. A lunch stand will be set up for hungry parade participants.

Parade entries will be accepted until Saturday, June 12, however Casey urges early registration by calling him at 256-3442 or 256-9129 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"Now is the time to be thinking about designing a parade entry to display our rural heritage," said Casey, adding that entries should be as creative and unique as imagination and family treasures allow.

"It's something that only happens once in a hundred years, so get involved."

LAUREL centennial activities are scheduled to kick off on Thursday, June 10 with a bank robbery and hanging on Main St. at 7:30 p.m., and will conclude on Sunday, June 13 with a ceremony in the city park from 9:30 to 10 p.m.

Hundreds of activities are scheduled throughout the three-day celebration, June 11, 12 and 13, and additional highlights will appear in upcoming editions of The Wayne Herald.

The last graduate

Today, May 6, is Nurses Day. I don't know when it became that, we didn't used to have a day and now we have a week! I appreciate the recognition, but had to agree with the card I received from a nurse friend, "Happy Nurses Day. We get to work another holiday!"

Tomorrow night I go to my Mom's annual Mother-Daughter banquet. And on Saturday, we have a date at the Willow Bowl on the WSC campus. Child #4, the last one, graduates.

This is the baby of the family, the one who started school at age four and turned five just two days before the Oct. 15 deadline. This is a time when people were beginning to wait that extra year.

This was the class of babies of the family that tried the patience of moms, teachers and coaches at Winside High.

This is the child whose ACT score was not what she had hopes; who really didn't want to go to college anyway.

So, we made a deal. Try a year at Northeast Community College. It won't cost much, she could live in Grandma Meierhenry's house in Norfolk and she could find out about college.

What she found out was that it wasn't so bad. Except for the non-traditional students who tended to dominate the classes. They are the older folks who have found out a college education is probably okay and are trying very hard.

All the NCC credits transferred, including the summer speech class with Keeler, the declam coach. She actually had to get up in front of the group and talk!

With Max's help, she learned how to study. She even lived in a dorm for a semester, a college learning experience all by itself. She runs computers, writes papers and does research in Conn Library.

Now, she's graduating. The "red-shirt year" at NCC showed her it could be done. In the process, we've become community college boosters. They are a tax bargain; take advantage of them and appreciate them.

I'm proud to wear a WSC sticker on my bumper. Friend Judy says my bumper stickers reflect where my money goes. Now, I'm going to have some money of my own, I think (I hope).

We're finished. They all did it. It's been a long 12 years, but they did it. In fact, now I'm the only one in the family without a college degree. I may have to become one of those "non-traditional" students.

What did I say about money of my own?

Soybean program, Huskers help needy

Workers at the Food Bank of Lincoln think the Cornhusker basketball team may have had its most successful season ever this year. And they say the statistics prove it.

As part of a Nebraska Soybean Program consumer-advertising project during the radio broadcast of Cornhusker basketball games, food pantry shelves across Nebraska were stocked with good things to eat containing soybeans.

How? This past season, every time a Husker made a 3-point shot during a home game, Nebraska soybean farmers — through their investment in the nationwide soybean checkoff — donated $20 to the Lincoln Food Bank.

The catch? The dollars had to be used to buy foods containing soybeans. Since soybeans are high in protein and contain no cholesterol, the requirement was easy to live with for Food Bank personnel. And this year the Cornhuskers sank 71 of the three-pointers, resulting in a donation of $1,420 towards the purchase of healthy food items.

Nebraska's head basketball coach, Danny Nee, was on hand to make the formal presentation of the check to Wendie Baker, director of the Food Bank. Lori Althouse represented the Nebraska Soybean Program at the ceremony.

Coach Nee said he was happy his Huskers could participate in the project. "Tying the three-point shot to the Food Bank donation was a unique idea," said Nee. "It's a fun way to make sure everyone comes up a winner!"

Althouse, staff assistance for consumer information for the Nebraska Soybean Program, explained how the project worked. "We ran commercial announcements about soybeans during both football and basketball season this year," she said. "The spots targeted consumers in an effort to provide education and information about all the many healthy foods that contain soybean ingredients."

"To do something beneficial for a large number of needy Nebraskans, as well as helping to draw attention to soybeans, we received permission from the Sports Information Office to link a good will project with our advertising," she continued. "If you listened to the games, you probably heard the announcers say something like 'there's another $20 for the Food Bank' after each three point shot."

"The coverage we received during the games was excellent," explained Althouse. "Not only did consumers learn more about soybeans, soybean farmers were able to help the hungry families throughout southeast Nebraska."

Food Bank director, Wendie Baker, said the city's facility serves far more than just Lincoln. "We service food pantries in 16 Nebraska counties," noted Baker. "Our responsibility is to make sure all the kitchens and pantries in our area of the state are fully stocked." There are also Food Banks in Omaha, Kearney and Norfolk.

Althouse said the number of grocery items which include soybeans is almost staggering. "You'll find soybeans in everything from crackers and cookies to frozen fish and canned soup!" she exclaimed. "We most often think of soybean oil as the main ingredients in salad dressing and mayonnaise. What we forget are the hundreds of foods that incorporate soy protein, soy flour or soy lecithin. That makes the list nearly endless!"

Althouse also said a proposal to expand the project to all of Nebraska's Food Bank facilities will be presented to the Nebraska Soybean Checkoff Board before next season's basketball games begin.

At or near the top of the list of worrisome noxious weeds in Wayne County are musk and plumeless thistles which can rob pasture land of its productivity.

Thistles a top worry weed

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

In a matched race to determine which is the most serious noxious weed problem in Wayne County it would be hard to pick a winner according to Marlin Schuttler, Wayne County weed control superintendent. "While leafy spurge is more difficult and costly to control, musk and plumeless thistle infest more total acres in the county and create a real threat to productivity of pastures and rangeland."

Current figures indicate Wayne County has 4,194 acres infested with musk thistle and 3,310 acres infested with plumeless thistle compared to about 1,250 acres with leafy spurge.

"SEVERE infestations of musk thistle and plumeless thistle reduce the production capabilities of grasslands in two ways," said Schuttler. "First, the large leaves of the rosette crowd out the grass. Secondly, cattle will often times refuse to graze near the thistles because of their sharp spines."

On the positive side, the thistles are easier and less costly to control and can be eradicated with proper management.

The key to control is to stop the prolific spread of the noxious weed by mowing, chopping or spraying before the seed heads form, according to Schuttler. He said each plant may produce up to 20,000 seeds which contributes greatly to the rapid spread of the weed.

A LIGHT infestation of just a few plants per acre can spread exponentially in just one season if left unchecked.

He said the old adage "one-year seeding, seven-year weeding" is doubly true for musk and plumeless thistle. "Successful herbicide treatments should be performed when the thistles are in the rosette stage, either early in spring or during the fall," he said.

Biological control efforts through the introduction of a seed weevil which feeds in the seed head, helps slow the spread of musk thistle but does not eliminate the infestation, said Schuttler.

THE WEED control superintendent said good range management which encourages vigorous grass stands will help prevent the invasion of musk thistle and plumeless thistle onto valuable grassland.

Schuttler said he is available to help landowners plan their strategy for combating these and other noxious weeds. He can be contacted at 375-3772 or write P.O. Box 24, Wayne.

Beef council to meet

The Nebraska Beef Council directors will meet on May 19 at 10 a.m. at the Nebraska Beef Council office in Kearney.

They will consider funding proposals for the 1993-93 fiscal budget.
