Dixon fire destroys business

An early morning fire Tuesday destroyed Anderson Service Station in Dixon but heroic efforts by three local fire departments kept the blaze from becoming a worse disaster.

Flames from the service station building threatened nearby above-ground fuel storage tanks containing over 7,000 gallons of gasoline, said Dixon Fire Chief LeRoy Bathke.

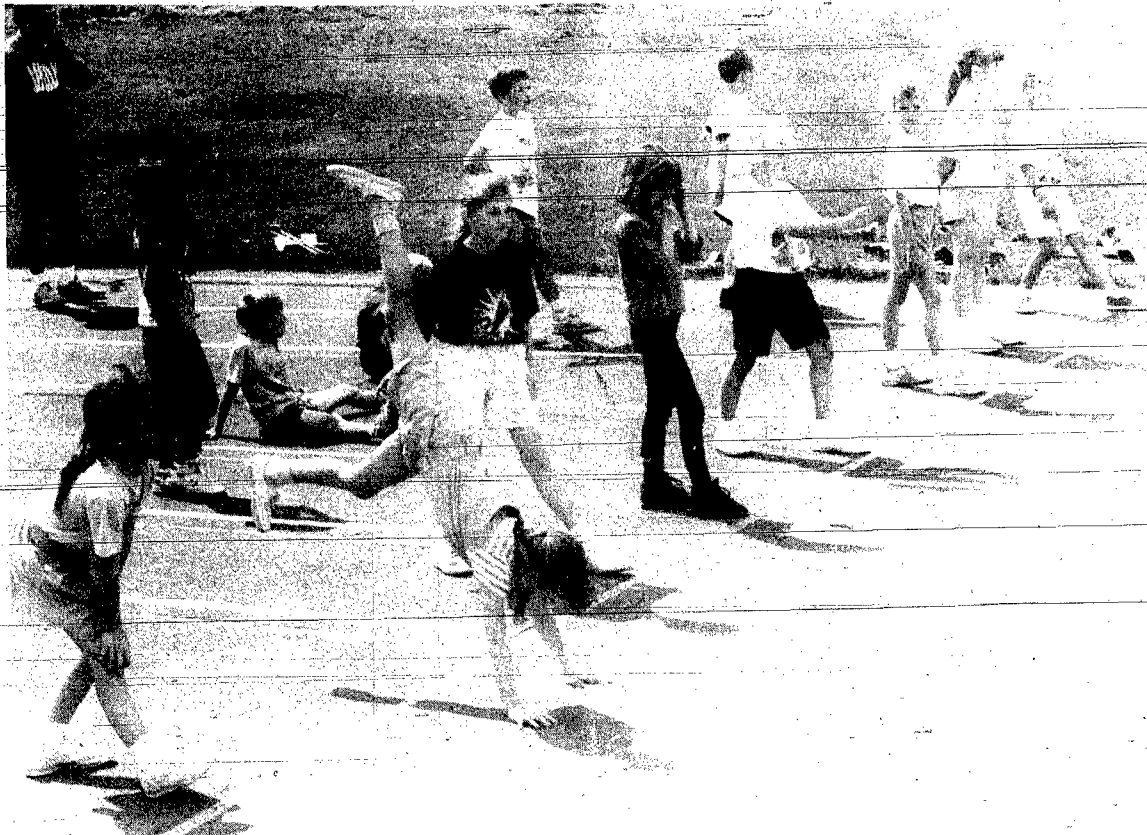

Firemen from Laurel and Concord also arrived quickly, said Bathke and helped in keeping the blaze from spreading next door to the community auditorium.

As it was when firemen arrived the flames were whipping over the top of the two story community building, he said. Firemen were on the scene until mid-morning keeping an eye on the smoldering service station. The building was declared pretty much a total loss, but owner Larry Anderson said he planned to rebuild.

These are the only gas pumps between Wayne and Laurel, said Chief Bathke. The state fire marshal had already conducted his investigation as to the cause of the blaze but that information was not being released pending completion of the report.

The fire was reported at about 3 a.m.

Some toe the mark differently

When race director Roger Reikofski said runners to your mark one little girl had a different interpretation during the 50-meter dash in Saturday's Lions Club Wayne County Track Meet. After being told that she could probably run faster on her feet than her hands, she stood up and responded admirably by running a solid race. The annual meet drew first through sixth graders from throughout Wayne County.

Winside to get 911 service

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Wayne County residents with 286 phone prefixes, generally people in and around Winside, will be getting 911 emergency phone service as soon as the inter-local agreements are ironed out, said Wayne County Attorney Mike Pieper.

Commissioners Tuesday voted to proceed with the inter-local agreement between Winside, Wayne and Wayne County in contracting with the phone company for the service.

The service will mean each phone customer in the exchange will pay an additional 50 cents per month on their phone bill.

In an emergency residents may dial 911 and reach the dispatch center at the Wayne Police Department. Dispatchers there will direct the proper emergency crews to the scene.

It was pointed out some residents with 286 phone exchanges might be in other fire districts because the phone exchange boundaries and the fire district boundaries are not the same. Thus dispatchers will have to be on top of the situation in knowing which district to dispatch to each scene.

While Winside is first getting 911 service, other areas of the county have begun discussions about adding Enhanced 911 to the service they are already using.

Enhanced, or E-911, means dispatchers will have a screen with automatic address readout and other information as soon as a caller places a call to the 911 number. Part of the procedure of implementing E-911 has meant the assigning a specific house and road number to every rural home in the county. That process is going on now.

Commissioners took Tuesday's action following a public hearing at which no one came to object.

Rule changes force school closings

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Legislation that requires Class I or elementary-only school districts in Nebraska to be affiliated with larger systems means closure to 33 small, rural schools, education officials say.

Among schools scheduled to close are Wayne County District

77, located two miles west and five and a half north of Hoskins, and Wayne County District 15, located four miles north and three-quarters west of Wayne.

Polk County's Riverside District 28 ended its 120-year history today. Eight students began class at the last rural elementary school in the county last fall.

Teacher Jo Peterson of Osceola had been at the school the last three years. She said every function was special during the year because she

Graduation season nearing an end

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

The busy graduation season in Northeast Nebraska concludes this Sunday with commencement ceremonies scheduled at 2 p.m. for both Wayne and Laurel-Concord High Schools.

Commencement speaker for Wayne High's Graduation will be Dr. Fred Brown, president of Doane College in Crete.

Brown will address a smaller than average graduating class scheduled for the Willow Bowl at Wayne State College. Sixty-nine students are scheduled to receive diplomas and over 90 percent of them will be going on to post-secondary training, according to Principal Dr. Don Zeiss.

He said Wayne students have maintained a better than 90 percent average of college or technical training out of high school over the years.

Zeiss also said this may be the smallest graduating class in numbers for some time, since class sizes in the lower grades have grown in recent years.

EAR PAIN

A change of air pressure in the cabin may cause ear pain for some passengers when the airplane is taking off or landing. If neither chewing gum nor yawning eases this discomfort for you when the plane is ascending or descending, try this suggestion: Take a decongestant a half hour before take-off and a half hour before landing if you're on a long flight. CAUTION: If you have high blood pressure, get your physician's advice first before you try a decongestant.

More time in the day

Wayne High School will have an extra hour to learn each day next year due to the addition of a eighth period in the schedule.

The move will reduce the number of schedule conflicts that have prohibited some students from taking full advantage of the school's elective offerings and will permit students who are interested to "load up" on additional academic offerings.

Education experts are watching an ever increasing amount of information students need to absorb in their school years and the expansion of time in classes is a logical step to help achieve the new educational goals.

With the growth of information and technology, estimates indicate the total amount of information in the world doubles every 29 days.

No one can expect students or schools to keep up with the information explosion by adding another hour to the day or even extending the school year, though that step is inevitable too.

School administrators are in a constant whirlwind of requests for adding programs to an already taxed schedule. Basic skills must be improved at the same time schools are being asked to expand health and life curriculum, new electives, technology and more. Time is also taken each day for only marginally productive programs like Channel One commercials and television features.

What schools must do is prepare students for a life of learning and give them the tools to gain and process information. Additional emphasis on liberal arts and life skills will be crucial to the preparation of students for an increasingly technological world.

That's why we are pleased to see the proposed vision statement and goals for the city schools include strong emphasis developing student creativity and love of learning. The statement outlines goals which include preparation of students with basic skills and advanced thinking ability.

We believe the Wayne Schools are moving in the right direction on these issues.

Working together

Dear Editor:

Tuesday night's city council meeting was a good example of representative government at its best. Several important changes were made for the good of all property owners.

It is often the sentiments of voters and homeowners that "you can't fight city hall." Indeed, it is the intrinsic right of all of us to be heard by our elected officials. In fact, they will respond when enough of the voters are present to make a reasonable case to be acted upon.

William Lyon Mackenzie King, Canadian statesman, is attributed the following quote: "Government, in the last analysis, is organized opinion. Where there is little or no public opinion, there is likely to be bad government, which sooner or later becomes autocratic government."

When a neighbor calls to invite you to a council meeting, oblige them the offer. It really is your opinion that makes your community. Without it, other opinions will prevail.

Rural senators seek tax break

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

I know no farmers will probably read this.

If you are a farmer, what're you doing? Corn planting's way behind, with all this rain we've been getting. It rained so much around here the other day I thought I saw animals begin to line up, two by two.

But if you happen to know any farmers, you might tell them the rural state senators haven't yet given up on trying to do something about taxes this session.

Not that it's going to be easy.

There's now only three weeks left in the session and senators are down to making their taxing and spending decisions. But rural senators say they're going to use whatever leverage they can to squeeze some kind of farm tax change into the budget.

RURAL SENATORS want to repeal the state's $7.3 million tax on fertilizer, part of that ever-popular LB 1063 tax package that passed in the Legislature last year to deal with the personal property situation.

On its own, there's no way it's going to happen. Urban senators would never agree to it, seeing the fertilizer tax was all part of the deal made last year. Now, some urban senators say, rural senators are trying to welsh on the thing.

But when you get down to the last days of the session, a lot of funny things can happen. If urban senators want something bad enough, they may have to give the rural guys a vote.

Some might call it vote trading. Senators would just say they are recognizing each other's needs. Either way, it's reality and it happens.

The biggest hope for rural senators may come in the form of a new proposal coming out of Omaha.

THE CITY OF Omaha wants to increase its sales tax a half-cent to fund an overhaul of the City Auditorium. The voters in the city last week approved it.

The only problem is, the city is already charging as much sales tax as the state allows. If they want to increase another half cent, even for a short time, the Legislature would have to say OK.

It's really only an Omaha issue. Omaha residents want to tax themselves to do this. But you can bet rural senators will find a reason to be really concerned about allowing the whole thing. They know a bargaining chip when they see one.

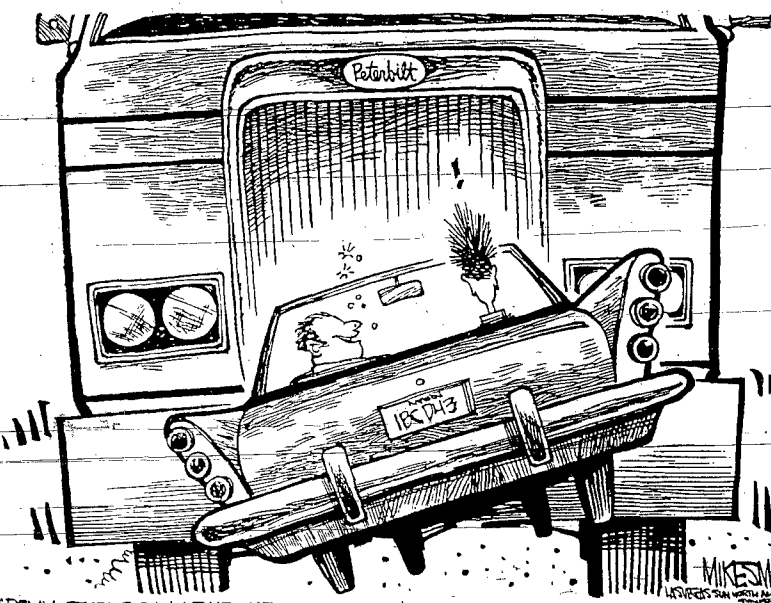

"WAIT A MINUTE," an Omaha senator may say. "Let me get this straight. We want to tax ourselves more. And you're willing to let us do that, if, in return, you rural guys can tax yourselves less. Is that the deal?"

"Yep," a rural guy might say. "And you better accept now, before this fit of charity I've been feeling passes."

It would certainly be a reversal from last year, when the urban guys held all the cards. The Supreme Court had put all ag property on the tax rolls, and aggies had their backs against the wall.

We'll have to see what happens. But isn't the political process just wonderful?

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Citizens oppose new landfill near Clarkson

Dear Editor:

We are members of the Maple Creek Concerned Citizens group who oppose the proposed landfill in our area.

It is hard to understand how the Northeast Nebraska Solid Waste Coalition can be allowed to build a landfill on property that has Wetlands on three sides and the fourth side receives run off from neighboring fields, the drainage from this land flows into Maple Creek which continues onto the Natural Resources District Dam one mile away and then onto the town of Clarkson, three and a half miles away. Most of the farm wells along the creek are shallow in which the water could be contaminated. There are 31 people living in the area, six families live approximately one-sixteenth of a mile or less from the site.

We know that there are less populated sites around. A central location should not be a priority. If the city of Norfolk had fewer miles to haul the garbage, they could compensate the city of Fremont with the savings.

It is interesting that the Norfolk city administrator and chief negotiator for the Northeast Nebraska Solid Waste Coalition took the time to look up an expert who notes it may take $250 million to build a mass incinerator for garbage.

Now, if only Mr. Nolan would also take the time to look up an expert who could tell him and the rest of the coalition board members and the people they represent, approximately how much it will cost to build this new landfill, he would be using his time more wisely, since it is the project he is working on currently.

At our last meeting with Mr. Nolan and the coalition board members, no one could answer the question, "Approximately how much will it cost to build this landfill?" They used the excuse that they did not know how much dirt, etc. will need to be moved.

Surely there are other landfills around that started out with approximately the same type and level of land as the Walla site, Mr. Nolan and the expert should be able to get the approximate figures from them.

It is unbelievable how Mr. Nolan and the coalition board members grouped together 73,000 people to follow their plan, with most of the people and towns involved, not knowing a thing about its cost and other things involved in the project. By not speaking out or wanting to find out what it will cost and other issues involved, these people, in a sense, are saying, "Go ahead, build the dump, we don't care what it costs or who it hurts in the process."

We do not believe Mr. Nolan and the other coalition board members have any empathy for us at all. It is not important to them that there are 31 people living right next to the dump site. Mr. Nolan's clock is ticking and time is of the essence for him. He and the coalition board members are not unlike those who oppress others in countries in which oppression exists.

In expecting so many of us to live so close to a landfill without any remorse whatsoever. We must put up with it, because they say so. We have no choice in the matter. This is not the American way!! There ARE less populated areas to build it on.

At the landfill acquisition meeting Wednesday night, which was held at the Stanton County Courthouse, we were appalled to find out that no one, not even one, coalition board member had gone to look at the Walla site to see for themselves how many people lived close to the area and to see if this piece of property would be approved by the people they represent, yet they voted "Yes." Is Mr. Nolan the only one allowed to pick and choose the site?

Did it ever occur to any of the coalition board members that the people they represent may not want the dump built in such a highly populated area? Do they even know how many people live there? There are other less populated areas for the dump. Put the dump there, is this too much to ask for?

Personal peeves

Useless stoplights, phone book charges, mangled mailboxes

Popular syndicated columnist Mike Royko has been running a series of columns on personal gripes from his readers.

I'm not the kind of guy who likes to complain, so I never thought of writing to Royko to submit my pet peeves. Until this week I didn't think I had any.

I chortled when I read the petty complaints from Royko's readers. I thought, "cum'on you people, get a life." If they don't have anything more important to worry about than motorists who don't use turn signals and whiney telemarketing solicitors, they should have some children. I was thinking myself pretty well-adjusted, not easy to rile, care-free, non-admittable, until I stopped at the traffic light at Second and Pearl. Looking in all directions during what should be the busiest time of day I could not see another vehicle within a block of the intersection, but there I sat for the full cycle of the red light.

Pounding the steering wheel as I waited, I forgot how well-adjusted I thought myself to be. In a boiling rage I thought of just going ahead through the red lighted but deserted intersection. However, the close proximity of the police station made me think better of it.

I was reminded that I had experienced the same waste of time and waste of fuel sitting there at that useless stoplight on numerous previous occasions. Over the last year I must have logged a good hour sitting there fuming and getting a kink in my neck trying to see the old, center-hung light.

Mann Overboard

By Les Mann

Wouldn't a four way stop work better on that corner for traffic flow? In addition, signs should be easier and cheaper to maintain.

There's only one problem with peeves like this, they are usually too personal. When you tell somebody what you think, their reaction is likely to be "Here's a dime. Go call somebody who gives a darn."

Speaking of calling somebody, that reminds me of another complaint. Several years ago, the phone companies decided they wanted to charge us for directory assistance calls. They sold the idea to the regulatory authorities by promising that if people who used directory assistance to get phone numbers from other towns would make requests for phone directories for those towns they would be sent to them free.

Now, guess what, we are paying for every directory assistance call, plus long distance charges. What's more, now if you call to get a phone book for Omaha or Lincoln, they'll be happy to send you one but they'll add better than $20 to your phone bill for each book.

You can't win. The county commissioners were talking about no-win situations Tuesday too. The subject was rural mailboxes and the damage they sustain from vandals.

I've had to repair vandalized mailboxes several times and I got madder each time. I have sworn that if I ever see anyone damaging a rural mailbox (mine or someone else's) or shooting signs or committing other types of useless, malicious mischief on the property of others, I'll not report it...until after I have followed them home, waited until they go in their house and are asleep and have taken a sledge hammer to their ear.

That's not a peeve-it's a promise.

I really don't have any peeves, but I sure enjoy pounding this keyboard when I think about useless stoplights, phone company shenanigans and mangled mailboxes.

Speaker shares 'Three R's' Wakefield High School graduates 30 seniors

By LaVon Anderson
News Editor

A former instructor at Wakefield High School addressed the school's graduating seniors during commencement exercises Sunday afternoon and told them the pressure is on.

"Are you ready?" asked Betty Heier, who taught English at Wakefield High School for 13 1/2 years before resigning to accept a position as staff development director with Educational Service Unit One.

"We want you to get out there and help fix up this messed-up world. Are you ready?"

Heier related a story of a very successful surgeon who was asked what he attributed his success to. The surgeon replied that he always talked happily over his patients as he worked with them.

"That's what I want to do today," said Heier. "I want to talk happily over you."

HEIER shared memories with the seniors and reminded each one that they have been blessed with creative abilities that when used right can help make the world a better place to live.

She also shared her "Three R's" for helping them reach their dreams, including respect, respond and reflect.

"I urge you to first respect yourselves," stressed Heier, "and to show respect for your fellow human beings. It will make a difference wherever you go."

The former instructor also pointed out that while technology draws the world closer, diversity draws it apart. "I believe you can make a difference by choosing to respond with respect rather than reacting out of fear. Respect automatically leads people to respond appropriately."

In closing, Heier said graduation day is one of those occasions that cause people to look back and remember. "Someday you may wish you had worked harder or paid more attention."

"Make it a habit to reflect frequently on all aspects of your life," said Heier. "The world is waiting for you and I wish you well."

THIRTY Wakefield High School seniors received their graduation diplomas Sunday afternoon during ceremonies in the school gymnasium.

Fatigue Syndrome Affects Millions

According to a report in The American Journal of the Medical Sciences, there are at least 10.5 million patient visits a year in the U.S. for evaluation and management of fatigue. A recent survey indicates that 20 percent of women and 14 percent of men report being significantly fatigued. If extreme fatigue lasts for at least six months, the person may be suffering from Chronic Fatigue Syndrome or CFS.

Symptoms of CFS include sore throat, headache, weakness and fatigue following periods of exercise, fever, muscle aches, and sleep disturbances. Non-drug treatment of CFS centers around a behavioral approach. One group of experts recommends moderate but gradual increases in regular exercise including stretching and slow re-exposure to avoided activities.

Wayne golfers get pat on back for quality season; Athletes set to embark on Omaha

By the time this column appears in your Wayne Herald, the 1993 Nebraska State Golf Tournament will be nearly completed in Hastings. No matter what the outcome the Wayne golf team deserves a pat on the back for another job well done this season.

It almost goes without saying that when districts come around each year, you can count on Wayne being in the hunt for a state trip and this year marked the ninth year out of the last decade that the Blue Devils earned the free pass.

Wayne has a very young golf team and the way they performed in winning the district title shows that the Blue Devils are going to be strong for the next several years.

Bobby Barnes is the lone senior on Wayne's team with Kelly Hammer being the team's lone junior. That leaves Ryan Pick, Ryan Martin, Jason Carr and Nate Salmon—all sophomores.

Salmon was the Blue Devils most consistent golfer this season and with the two more years he has left will make some waves when it comes to top golfers in all of Class B.

In fact, the whole sophomore class of Salmon, Pick, Carr and Martin will prove to be very tough next year as well as their senior years. One golfer, however, deserves some special recognition for what he's accomplished in his very short stint as a linker.

Bobby Barnes never even went out for golf until his junior year and then he often found himself fighting for a spot to compete on the reserve team. Barnes, though never gave up and kept practicing all last summer.

His hard work actually didn't start paying dividends until just recently. Barnes was the leading scorer on the reserve team for much of this season and was moved to varsity for the conference and district tournaments.

Barnes played reserve when Wayne hosted the Harold Maciejewski Invitational and he fired an 82. After earning a spot on the varsity for the conference tournament in O'Neill, Barnes carded an 85 which was second on the team to Salmon's 80.

Wayne hosted the district tournament and they won by seven strokes over Columbus, Scotus and Albion. Barnes was a major factor in the Blue Devils team victory after scoring a career best 81. The only negative thing about his play in districts is that he should have carded a 79 but he hit the wrong ball and was assessed a two-stroke penalty on one hole.

Never-the-less, what Barnes has accomplished in two short years is a perfect example of the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

Ryan Pick was Wayne's first tee-off at the State Tournament with a 9:02 a.m. start while Nate Salmon was slated for a 9:29 tee time. Those two golfers went to the first hole at Lochland Country Club while Kelly Hammer began his State golf tournament round on the hole number 10 at 9:31 a.m.

At 12:15 p.m. Jason Carr was scheduled to tee off on hole number one and at 12:26 Bobby Barnes was slated to tee off on number 10. A complete recap of the State Tournament will appear in Friday's Wayne Herald.

Just as the golf season culminates with State on Tuesday in Hastings, the track teams will end their seasons at the State Meet on Friday and Saturday in Omaha.

Again, the story line for Wayne is youth as five of the six state qualifiers are underclassmen. Danielle Nelson is the lone senior on her way to State while Tami Schluns is a junior. Jenny Thompson and Melodee Lage are sophomores.

On the boys side, Nate Stednitz is a junior and his brother Spencer Stednitz is a freshman.

The Wayne girls will be looking to break a long dry spell at the State Meet of not scoring any points. The chances look pretty good in all our events as Jenny Thompson looks to continue her success in the 300 hurdles and the 100 high hurdles.

Thompson has broken the school record in the 300 hurdles several times this year in being just a sophomore and she broke the district record in the 300 hurdles as well. Both Schluns and Lage have overcome injuries this season to earn state berths in the distance races and both appear to be on the road to a solid recovery.

Danielle Nelson's athletic ability alone could score her some points in the high jump. Although she hasn't cleared the height she did last year at 5-4, she is capable of leaping that at this year's State Meet with some good weather.

The Stednitz boys are genuine true runners. Both are capable of posting some extremely good times in Omaha Burke's Stadium with the fast track. This will be Spencer's first appearance on the new surface but it's one he's sure to like.

Turning to other area teams heading to Omaha this weekend, The Allen Eagles will be looking to score points with best chances coming in the hurdles as Curtis Oswald has yet to be beaten in either the 110 highs for the 300 intermediates this season.

Oswald, only a junior, will definitely be pushed at State. In fact, he's not even predicted to win either race based on district times and earlier season times but this writer thinks otherwise.

After watching Oswald in especially the 300 intermediates this season, an event which he's not even been pushed in yet, a sub-40 second time isn't a question at State—it will happen!

The Laurel boys fared very well at districts and they too, will be pushed pretty hard at State, but John Jonas' team looks to have a stare of confidence and who knows what will happen?

Chris Hartung, Derek Ehlers and the 4x100 relay team of Ehlers, Mark Stone, Jeff Wattier and P.J. Penna appear to have solid chances in scoring points not just based on performances this year but on desire.

The Winside girls will enter Burke Stadium as the defending Class D State Champs but that was last year. Jim Winch's team will enter this year's State Meet as a Class C School but that's not to say the well has dried up.

Sophomore Melinda Mohr appears to have the strongest chance of scoring points for the Wildcats as she looks to duplicate the success she enjoyed last season as a freshman.

Mohr will compete in four events at State including the 800, 1600, 3200 and as an anchor to the 3200 relay. She's a special type of runner with a giant heart and there is no substitute for a combination of talent and heart.

Kari Pichler will return to State this year as a junior in both hurdle races. She's another athlete that is extremely competitive and she always finds a way to help the team. Pichler broke the school record in the 300 hurdles at districts.

Wakefield may be sending just one girl to the State Meet but when that one girl is Riehelle Woodckman you have a chance at anything. Woodckman spent most of this season sidelined with a viral infection but she appears to be healthy again and will see in the 1600 and 3200 meter races.

The Wayne Herald would like to wish all our area qualifiers the best of luck at State.

WAYNE SECOND grader Erin Jarvi long jumps her way to a first place finish during action at Saturday's Lions Club Meet in Wayne. Jarvi leaped 9-6.

Fire destroys Dixon business

An early-morning fire destroyed the Anderson Service Station in Dixon. Firemen were fearful the flames from the building would ignite two large fuel storage tanks immediately behind the building. The tanks contained 7,000 gallons of fuel. The large community building in the background was also licked by flames but firemen kept a stream of water on the structure while working to bring the blaze under control. Carroll and Laurel fire units assisted Dixon firemen in battling the fire.

Homer and Dora reminisce

"Whatcha ya lookin' at Dora?"
 "I'm lookin' at the apple jelly."
 "With ten zillion things to look at, why're ya lookin' at the jelly jar?"
 "Well, see how the sunshine hits our breakfast table? I noticed it shinin' thru the jelly jar an' I jist that it looked sorta purty. It's jist one of those 'lil things in life that's free."

"I'm gonna call Dr. Bobblebrain to see if'n he can help ya!"

"Homer, ya gotta understand there's lotsa things - 'lil things - that'er not only free but they's up-liftin'!"

"What dear? Like an el'vator ride?"

"Don't put down el'vators. I kin member the first time my folks took me to the big city. My eyes sure done bugged out in one of 'em ol' fashion department stores an' I saw these folks a ridin' up 'n' down in the el'vator. Then when we got on that thing! Swooo-oo-ss-sh! Oh! I thot we wuz headin' for heaven! But comin' down! I closed my eyes an' sed to myself 'One for the money, two for the show, three to get ready and four to OO-oo-hoh-hh-oo-oo-ho!"

"Did droppin' down 'bout scare ya to death?"

"Took my breath away!"

"But ya loved it anyhow!"

"Oh my! Yes! Later, when the carnival came to town, I asked daddy if I could ride all the scary rides! 'Lil' things like that last forever."

"While we're skimm'n' chatter off the top of our minds, I can member when, on the spurge of a moment, my brother 'an me wuz wait'n for mom to buy somethin' an' we wuz bumfoozled watch'n the clerk put the money into a little thingamajig strung on an overhead wire. Lo 'an behold the clerk jerked a chain an' that thing went sail'n up right over ever'body's head an' right on upstairs to a balcony! There wuz a gal up there makin' change, an' when she put it in the thingamajig, then it wuz her turn. She pulled the chain an' it come a zoomin' back down the wire to the clerk wait'n on mama. If'n that wuzn't somethin'! Nowadays clerks take yer buyin's an' zip 'em over a laser an' there ain't no fun for a boy to watch!"

"THAT THERE is what I'm talkin' 'bout, Homer, 'lil' things in life a person gits a kick out of, ya know, like smellin' bacon 'an eggs 'n coffee in the mornin'."

"I hear ya, hon. My thots go back to those ol' days when dad would take me out to the barn. I could'n believe all the work he'd find to do. He'd feed the horses, hogs an' cows. Lotsa mysteries in that big barn! So big 'an smelly. Swallows mak'n nests. Nothin' in the world smells like a barn, ya know. Then, after he'd put ol' Bessie's head in a lock'n device an' fed 'er, he'd git a bucket 'an sit there on a stool milk'n 'er. He let me try pull'n on Bessie but I jist couldn't git her squeezed right. She wasn't a gonna give no milk long as I had hold of 'er! She jist up 'n turned off her faucets. Dad-wuz learnin' like crazy an' sed someday I'd learn. Course I did!"

"AIN'T MEM'RY somethin'! First time mama let me make gravy, it wuz so thick daddy sed he thot it could be used to stick the new paper on the front room wall! I cried. Mom sed I'd do better next time. An' I did."

"Guess you're right, Dora. Lotsa 'lil mem'ries - simple things a person sees an' duz - adds a bunch to the zest of livin'. Like bein' in the country an' not a lectric light around! You could stan' outside on a star'y night an' count a million of 'em! A lonesome coyote could always be heard howlin' in the distance. As I'd git to bed an' start doze'n off, the wail of an ol' puffin' freight train would often put me to sleep. An' I'd wonder what the man runnin' that big engine wuz like, an' where those tracks wuz takin' 'em."

"I gotta real special mem'ry, Homer! Member that day you an' me first met? I thot you wuz 'bout the most ever' thing I ever wanted. Course, my expectations were ridin' at low ebb! Heh heh"

"Sure I member. Love infects the tide an' untide. Member our first kiss? Like the Good Book sez 'When kiss'n, two heads 'er better'n one.' Kiss'n you wuz like the sunshine in yer apple jelly."

"Jist don't forgit, these tryin' times now are the good ol' days we'll be talkin' 'bout in a few years."

"In that case, git yer apple jelly back in the sunshine, hon, an' pucker up!"

"Gotta chase me first!"

The Library Card

This column is written twice a month to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at Wayne Public Library.

The library is looking ahead to its Summer Reading Program for 1993.

Plans are in process to begin the program on June 7 to run through July 12. This year's theme is "Books Come in All Flavors."

Registration begins on Tuesday, May 25-27. Children four years of age through kindergarten may be registered for the "Read-to-Me" group. Children completing grades one through six this spring may state the number of books they feel they can read during the program. Six is the minimum number of books we require, and contracts will be available for signing at that time.

Opening day, June 7, all children are invited to a multicultural party beginning at 1 p.m. in the lower level of the library. Tentative plans are to offer a sampling of ethnic stories and foods.

During the month of the program, there will be activity days for the various age groups with stories and handicrafts.

Mondays, the Read-to-Me group will meet from 1 to 2 p.m. Tuesdays, grades one through three will meet from 1 to 2 p.m. Wednesdays, grades four through six will meet from 1 to 2 p.m. The final end of summer reading program will be on July 12 at 7 p.m. in Bressler Park. An ice cream social is planned and awards will be given to the children at this time.

Coordinator of this year's summer reading program is Dawn Garrett. Mark your calendars and get here in time to register for summer fun!

The library will begin summer hours on June 1. We have added an hour each weekday this year. On Monday through Friday, the library will open at 12 noon. Closing time will be at 8 p.m. during the week. Saturday hours remain the same, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. We will be closed Sundays during the summer.

Each year we are grateful to the Eagles Auxiliary for a donation of monies to purchase large print books. The library has recently placed on the shelves the books purchased with this grant.

"Hunted Riders" by Max Brand; "The Rancher's Revenge" by Max Brand; "Rest in Pieces" by Rita Mae Brown; "Diminished Mind"; "The Firm" by John Grisham; "Every Living Thing" by James Herriot; "Vanish With the Rose" by Barbara Michaels; "They Called Her Mrs. Doe" by Janette Oke; "When Comes the Spring" by Janette Oke; "McNally's Secret" by Lawrence Sanders; "Colony" by Anne Rivers Siddons; and "Bygones" by LaVryle Spencer. We also subscribe to the large print edition of The Reader's Digest through the auxiliary.

Remember, winter hours will end on June 1. Summer hours are Monday through Friday from noon to 8 p.m., and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. There are no Sunday hours during the summer.

Chairman not surprised that some are disappointed with commission

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — The chairman of the Nebraska Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education says it shouldn't be a surprise some people are disappointed in what the commission is doing with higher education.

"We disappoint those who plead for more money for higher education at every opportunity," Eric Seacrest told Grand Island's Rotary Club, as well as "those who want us to say no to every institution that asks for money."

Seacrest said this reaction was to be expected. He said a number of people have told him that the commission faces "an impossible job. It's impossible to do it and keep everybody happy."

The fact the commission is working is almost self-evident from the complaints, he said. "Dogs don't bark at parked cars."

Seacrest said he is hearing fewer complaints in one area, the number of hours spent by administrative staff to prepare reports for the commission.

"I don't think I've heard that complaint in about three months," he said. He said the fact the commission is now probably helped generate those complaints. The commission needed to get information on every educational institution's budget and on every institution's facilities, he said.

Now that the information base has been established, it will not be necessary for administrative staff at institutions of higher education to duplicate those initial efforts, he predicted.

Seacrest, who lives in North Platte, said he disagrees with those who believe excellent health care, good retailing, fine schools and quality education are only possible in the metropolitan areas of the state.

He said Grand Island, with College Park and Central Community College, is evidence of the possibilities available in non-metropolitan Nebraska.

Higher education is a big business in this state, Seacrest said. It has $1 billion worth of expenditures every year and takes in $300 million in tax money.

"Higher education employs 20,000 people and it educates 100,000 students every year," he said.

All that is done over four university campuses, three state colleges, six community college areas, 17 independent colleges and 60 private schools that teach various career skills.

It is the coordinating commission's job to ensure that the schools continue to provide access to higher education, while doing so with a minimum of unnecessary duplication and a maximum of efficiency, he said.

Seacrest complimented Grand Island for being willing to raise the money to build College Park. He said it demonstrates the community's "belief in life-long learning."

With today's economy, it will be necessary for many people to work at a job for a period of time, then change careers, creating a need for continuing education, Seacrest said.

Seacrest also praised College Park for bringing several institutions together to provide continuing education, specifically Central Community College, the University of Nebraska at Kearney and the Cooperative Extension Service.

Seacrest said there is much that is right with Nebraska's system of higher education, including the fact that the state's residents participate in higher education at a rate 30 percent higher than the national average.

WSC earns computer honors

Wayne State College's Division of Applied Science has been recognized by AutoDesk, the premier personal computer, CAD (computer-aided drafting) software company, as a multimedia training center for 3-D Studio and Animator Pro.

Wayne State has worked with AutoDesk as a training center for five years.

3-D Studio is a computer animation software with almost unlimited abilities to create and design computer models, apply colors, textures and lighting to produce commercial quality presentations.

These software products are used for architectural walk-throughs of buildings that are not yet built, accident reconstruction, medical simulations, special effects in the movie industry, creating advertisements and inventing worlds that exist in imagination only.

The function of Wayne State's training center is to offer short, intensive courses, ranging from one to three days, for industry. The programs also permit Wayne State to offer its students the latest in computer aided drafting, computer presentation and animation software, according to Don Buryanek, manager of the training center at Wayne State.

Wayne State will offer a summer class on 3-D Studio and Animator Pro from June 17 to July 2. For more information contact Don Buryanek, Wayne State College, 375-7282.

DARE students graduate

Wayne Middle School sixth graders culminated their DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program on Monday morning with a program in the high school lecture hall. Several students are pictured presenting a drug-free skit during the event. Trooper Randy Morehead of the Nebraska State Patrol was the instructor for the program and was on hand Monday to congratulate the students. Each of the students received a certificate and Brookes Parker, Matt Sobansky and Brent Tietz were selected to read their "Taking a Stand" essays.

and the students knew it would their last time.

Linda Atkins and her four students at the one-room Baker School seven miles west of Nebraska City had a similar experience. School ends there Friday.

Baker school board member Ken Reese of Nebraska City said red tape and regulations led to the decision to close that school.

"We could have affiliated, but a combination of a lot of things led to our decision," Reese told the Omaha World-Herald. "Paperwork and state and federal regulations were becoming more than little boards can handle."

Baker school was built in the early 1900s. Reese said he, his parents, grandparents and his own children attended the school.

"It's really kind of sad when a four-generation era ends, but it was time to use some logic," he said.

Professors receive grant

Wayne State College professors Dr. Robert Sweetland and Carolyn Linster have received a Postsecondary Eisenhower Mathematics/Science Grant to conduct the Institute for the Improvement of K-6 Science and Mathematics Instruction on campus June 21-25.

Participants of the Institute will begin to plan and implement strategies to incorporate the learning cycle into their science and mathematics curriculum in the 1993-94 school year. The Institute will provide support for teachers to visit peers' classes and work as support teams for instructional improvement throughout the school year.

Sweetland, an associate professor of education, has been a member of the Wayne State faculty since 1987. He earned his bachelor of arts degree from Doane College, and his M.Ed and Ed.D. from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

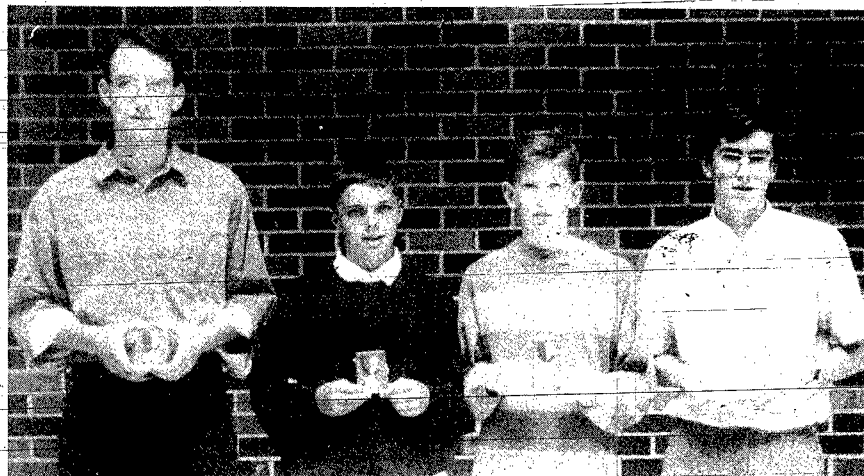

Linster, an assistant professor of education, has been a member of the Wayne State faculty since 1978. She earned her bachelor of science degree from Morningside College, and her master of science in education degree from Wayne State College.

To give paper

Dr. Gretchen Ronnow, associate professor of literature at Wayne State College, has had a paper accepted for presentation at the 34th annual International Congress of Asian and North African Studies.

The paper is entitled "Poetics and Place in the Fiction of Modern Arab Women Writers."

Ronnow, who is a first-year faculty member at Wayne State, earned her bachelor's and master's of arts degrees from Utah State University, and her Ph.D. from the University of Arizona.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK'S SENIOR CITIZEN CORNER

EYE-OPENING NEWS: Several people have written to ask for an explanation of what seems to be a harsh cost-cutting proposal for visually impaired seniors — especially those who have cataracts and who may need surgery to restore their vision. They are concerned that this condition, which tends to affect mostly older folks, might not be covered under a newly reformed health care system. Their concern is understandable in light of recent comments from government sources who have indicated that some cataract surgery is unnecessary, or ill-timed, and that "correcting" the situation could save the government a lot of money.

The American Academy of Ophthalmology is making some comments of their own to help resolve the concern and the confusion surrounding this controversy. Dr. B. Thomas Hutchinson of Boston, president of the Academy, says, "We firmly believe there is one best solution: informing people about when it is appropriate to seek cataract surgery."

Dr. Hutchinson makes the point that it's not the government who will make the decision, but rather the person herself or himself. "Armed with accurate information about cataracts and cataract surgery," Dr. Hutchinson says, "the individual — not a set of government guidelines — is the best judge of when cataract surgery is appropriate."

"When the decrease in vision from cataract interferes with activities a person does, or needs to do, or wants to do in life," Dr. Hutchinson said, "it is time to remove the cataract. If a patient meets all of their visual needs well (then) cataract surgery can be postponed."

So far as the effect of timing is concerned, Hutchinson cited a study released by the Senate Special Committee on Aging showing that those with moderate to severe visual impairment report dramatic improvement after cataract removal surgery. Those with relatively early cataracts, and only mild visual impairment, were less likely to report much improvement.

Of course, delay may not always be possible. Pilots, school bus drivers, and others whose work requires excellent vision, or those who derive much of their pleasure from reading, doing needlepoint, or sewing, might find it's better for them to have the surgery done earlier rather than later.

FORL: Your suspicions could be on target: it's possible your mother is malnourished even if she's served a sufficiently healthful diet. ## Jasjot Johar is awarded MD degree Jasjot S. Johar, son of Dr. and Mrs. J.S. Johar of Wayne, received his Doctor of Medicine (MD) degree from the University of Nebraska College of Medicine during commencement exercises held Saturday, May 8.

Jassi, a 1985 graduate of Wayne High School and a 1989 graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, will begin his post-graduate medical education (residency) in emergency medicine at the Methodist Hospital of Indiana, Indianapolis, in June.

Jassi was also elected by a vote of faculty to the elite honorary Alpha Omega Alpha to which no more than six percent of the graduating class can be selected.

His wife, Mrs. Amy Johar, also received her MD degree (with distinction) and will do her residency in pediatrics at the Indiana University Medical Center, also located in Indianapolis, Ind.

state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will participate in the "Women As Leaders" seminar, scheduled for May 17-28 in Washington, D.C. The Wayne State College student attending the leadership conference is Brenda Proskocil of Ord, Neb.

During the two-week seminar, the students will explore innovative approaches and solutions to issues currently facing college women who have the potential for future leadership positions. Nationally prominent women leaders from public, private and non-profit sectors will make presentations and assist as students participate in small group discussions and professional development workshops on such issues as conflict resolution, negotiation, pay equity and equal opportunity. There will be educational tours as well as volunteer service activities.

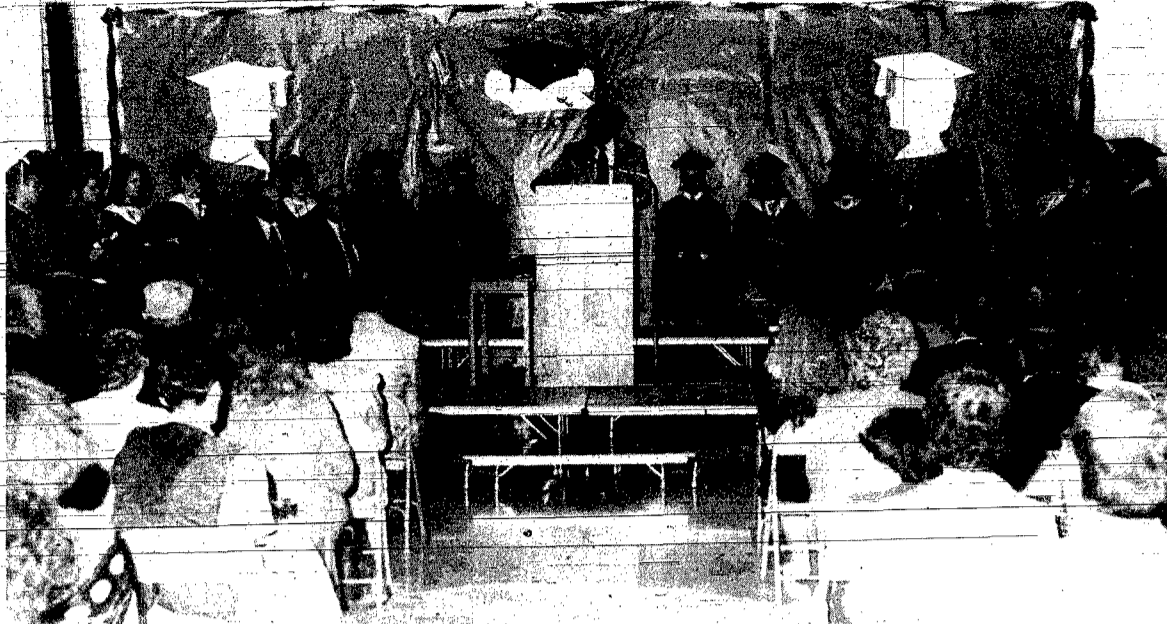

Heading an advisory board composed of women leaders in the Washington D.C. area are Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y. The seminar has been planned by this board.

Special events will include a breakfast session hosted by Good Housekeeping magazine. Mentoring will be the session theme and for that entire day students will each "shadow" a female leader at her work location, observing critical decision-making activities and engaging in professional interaction.

Varied activities during the seminar will provide the college women with a culturally-diverse forum through which they will explore women's leadership issues, further their self-understanding and determine future aspirations.

The Washington Center is a non-profit, bipartisan organization. Students were nominated by college or university presidents, then selected by a committee composed of educators, leaders and past seminar participants. Consideration was given to leadership activities on- and off-campus, letters of recommendation, grade point average and responses to essay questions which included issues that most significantly impact women on a local, national or international level.

Support by Sears will include tuition and housing expenses for each participant.

DON PACK OF PONCA addresses graduating seniors during commencement exercises Sunday afternoon at Allen High School. Pack taught the seniors when they were sixth graders.

Former Allen teacher returns to address school's graduates

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

"School life is multiple choice—life out of school, I'm sorry to say is nothing but essay questions," commencement speaker Don Pack of Ponca told the 16 graduates at Allen High School Sunday.

Pack, who taught the graduates when they were sixth graders at Allen, returned to give them a final lesson Sunday. He said their learning has just begun and that graduation is a joyful day that marks how well they have learned to continue learning.

The class of 1993 marked several milestones for Allen High School Sunday. It was the first class to graduate under the then 220 credit requirements, with the class averaging 249 credits per student. That average was buoyed somewhat by Sonya Plueger, who graduated with 323 credits.

This class also was the first to graduate with two salutatorians. Stacey Jones and Sonya Plueger both finished their four years of High School, with identical grade points averages calculated out to the hundredths of a decimal point said Glenn Kumm, administrative assistant.

Class valedictorian was Jeffrey Geiger.

The entire class was exceptional said Kumm, graduating with an average GPA of 90.7.

The class members were: Lane Anderson, Tonia Burnham, Lars Funke, Jeffrey Geiger, Marcia Hansen, Shawna Hohenstein, Stacey Jones, Justin Kelly, Bren Mattes, Ann Maxey, Christy Philbrick, Sonya Plueger, Heather Sachau, Tammy Stewart, Brenda

Sullivan and Michael Sullivan. The seniors chose as their class flower the red rose. Their class colors were red, white and blue and their motto, "The great thing in this world is not so much as where we stand, but in what direction we are moving."

Scholarships presented by Supt. John Werner were Northeast Community College Board of Governors, Lane Anderson; Security National Bank, Jeffrey Geiger, Stacey Jones, Sonya Plueger, Marcia Hansen; Masonic Scholarship Award, Christy Philbrick; Patefield-Green Memorial Scholarship,

Paper earns honors

Wayne State College student Sandra Broz of Norfolk received first place for a research paper presentation in developmental/health psychology at the Great Plains Student Psychology Convention held recently in Maryville, Mo.

Her paper was entitled "Extratreatment Factors and Life Functioning After Substance Abuse Treatment: Stressors, Coping Responses and Social Resources." Students from 23 colleges competed.

This paper has been accepted for publication in the spring issue of The Nebraska Counselor, the journal of the Nebraska Counselors' Association.

Another of Broz's research papers, "Expectations About Counselors," received first place in empirical research at the Nebraska Psychological Association's spring meeting at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Broz earned her bachelor of arts in education from degree from Wayne State, and is pursuing a master of education degree in agency counseling at Wayne State.

She and her husband, Daniel, have two children, Vincent, 15, and Daniel, 10.

Other Wayne State students making presentations in Maryville, Mo., were Deb Carlson, Hooper, "The Effect of Melanin on Eye Color and Reaction Time"; Judy Kramer, Wayne, "AIDS Education: Is It Working?"; Jed O'Leary, Wayne, "Visual Distractions and Color Memory"; Monica White, Rosalie, "The Effect of Music on Performance"; and Heidi Wriedt, Wayne, "Assigned Personality Traits Based on Physical Attractiveness."

Wayne student to join honors program

Samantha Thompson, daughter of Larry and Patricia Thompson of Wayne, has been selected to attend the Nebraska Department of Energy Honors Program this summer.

Seven students from across the state were chosen to participate in an all-expenses-paid research program being conducted across the nation.

Samantha, who graduates May 23 from Wayne High School, will be the Nebraska representative at the Environmental Sciences Program at Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Other institutes include Sandia National Laboratory, Albuquerque, N.M.; Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Livermore, Calif.; Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, Chicago, Ill.; Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, Ill.; Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, Berkeley, Calif.; and National Synchrotron Light Source, Upton, N.Y.

THE OAK Ridge program will run from July 17-31. The major theme of the program is identifying and solving environmental problems caused by conventional energy technologies, focusing on aquatic and terrestrial ecosystem analyses.

Samantha Thompson

Environmental science research at Oak Ridge is concentrated in one of the largest single-unit environmental research laboratories in the world with field sites throughout the East Tennessee region, including the Oak Ridge National Environmental Research Park and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Staff researchers, along with guest researchers from universities and industry, form interdisciplinary teams of biologists, geologists, chemists, and physical scientists to resolve environmental problems related to the operation of conventional energy systems.

Samantha and other student participants will form research teams to join the scientists in the investigation of these environmental concerns. They will also attend lectures, visit laboratories, and participate in field trips.

SAMANTHA received her award at the Nebraska Academy of Sciences annual meeting held in April at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln.

She will be attending Wayne State College in the fall to begin a degree in the sciences.

Seniors earn scholarships

Several northeast Nebraska high school seniors have been awarded Special Abilities Art Scholarships to attend Wayne State College in the fall.

They are June Frey, Tilden; Megan Cornish, Wayne; Megan Wade, Battle Creek; Sarah Jorgensen, North Loup; Michelle

Laska, St. Edward; Joan Clarkson, Concord; and Krista Wilbur, Wakefield.

Special Abilities Art Scholarship recognize outstanding students for their artistic accomplishments, according to Dr. Jay O'Leary, division head of fine arts at Wayne State.

'My heart belongs to an angel'

I've had a couple of other neat experiences the past month, besides graduation and Mother's Day. One was the Bess Streeter Aldrich Foundation dinner at Elmwood.

You already know that I'm an enthusiastic Aldrich fan. So I was delighted to join the Foundation.

On April 1st, her home in Elmwood was opened to the public for regular tours. It has been given to the Foundation and there is a live-in curator named Maxine Cline. Each of the four upstairs bedrooms is a reminder of one of her books; with handmade quilts that illustrate the story.

Maxine is a retired drama teacher who actually knew Bess. She greets you at the door with apron and dish towel and discusses the author and her life there, closing with a cutting from one of the books.

characters, I am in my glory. I am also rereading "A Lantern In Her Hand." It's great.

On the first of May, I drove over to Camp Carol Joy Helling, near Ashland. My friend, Fr. Rick, was to be on a panel at the state AIDS meeting. Just in case you don't know, AIDS stands for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

It reminded me of my visit to a Compassionate Friends meeting.

There is no pain like the pain of losing a child. The impact of that pain multiplied hits me in the gut. Some were wearing T-shirts that said "My Heart Belongs to an Angel."

There was a quilt on display, each panel in memory of a baby lost to SIDS. Each was beautiful in its own way. I was struck by one that said, "When I was born, I was the only one crying. Everyone else was happy and smiling. When I died, everyone else was crying and I was the only one happy and smiling."

It was Fr. Rick's task to remind us of that. He looks healthy as ever, staying busy as ever. When I complained about the rain, he said to me "our Father knows what He's doing."

Just the same, I'm enjoying the sunshine. Rainy days really do make us appreciate sunny ones. And that holds true for all the happenings of life.

Professor is outstanding

Robert Chamberlain, interim instructor of history, geography and political science at Wayne State College, has been awarded the Blue Key Outstanding Professor Award.

The award, which is voted upon by students, was presented by the Blue Key National Honor Fraternity during spring commencement.

Blue Key is a service organization involved in a variety of other projects including homecoming, graduation and sponsoring Big Brother/Big Sister activities.

Chamberlain, who has served on the Wayne State faculty since 1985, earned his bachelor of science degree and master of science in education degree from Wayne State College.

Visiting Scholar

Dr. Kathleen Conway, professor of education at Wayne State College, will serve as a visiting scholar at Stanford University during the fall semester.

Conway will be doing research on mid-term marriage, the implications of human information processing on reconsideration of the marital decision, and the implications for marital counseling.

I was under a lot of myth in regards to surgery. My understanding was that you lost your depth perception. That the surgery was only good for 5 years—a lot of things like that. I did a little investigating on my own. I called different 800 numbers, and asked a lot of questions about pain, hospitalization, different things like that.

There was absolutely no pain to the surgery. They told me that I would have some discomfort, but I didn't have any. I had both eyes done 27 days apart. ## Not too late to protest

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Some of the state's farmers and ranchers have been wrongly informed that there is nothing they can do to lower their property tax valuations, Nebraska Farm Bureau President Bryce Neidig said.

"That simply is not true because they still have the opportunity to raise the issue and perhaps get some relief," Neidig said Wednesday.

Farmers and ranchers have until June 15 to ask county boards of equalization to lower their property tax valuations, Neidig said. County boards have until that date to adjust valuations before they must send their final assessments to the state Board of Equalization.

Neidig said several farmers and ranchers from grassland range areas have complained to the farm bureau about higher property tax valuations this year.

The increase has been particularly large for some farmers in counties where the boards of equalization chose not to implement valuation increases last year, Neidig said. For these farmers, this year's valuations reflect two years' worth of increases.

Boyd County Assessor Wilma Audiss said a few farmers in the county filed protests and complained about higher property tax valuations.

Blaine County Assessor Edna D. Spencer said she encourages people to contact the county's board of equalization if they have a complaint because her office sometimes finds and corrects mistakes during the review process.

Spencer said that, to her knowledge, "nobody has been told there was nothing they could do about their valuations."

Neidig urged taxpayers to contact county assessors if they want to know why their property tax valuation increased. If a local assessor is unhelpful or withholds information, taxpayers should contact the state Revenue Department directly.

Time to certify program acres

On April 30, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service closed the 1993 farm program sign-up period. Producers who enrolled in the wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice programs should now prepare to certify their program acres, according to Wayne County Executive Director Terri Post.

Wayne County farmers have until June 15 to report the acreage and intended uses of their wheat, oats, barley, rye and other small grains to the ASCS office. This includes small grains on ACR acres. Small grain crops that are not reported by this deadline will be ineligible for program benefits.

Before reporting, farmers can request that ASCS measure their program acreage. The measurements are furnished at cost, and guaranteed for the crop year. "Measurement service is not only valuable to farm program participants, but to any producer who desires an accurate acreage for any reason," Post said.

Farm program participants are required to correctly certify their entire farm after planting to be eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments and other benefits. The reports contain crops and acreage planted, the uses to be made of these crops, acreage removed from crop production to the acreage conservation reserve, and conservation uses acres for pay.

SoyDiesel joining biofuels field

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) -- Diesel fuel from soybeans is joining ethanol in a push for environmentally beneficial fuel additives made from crops, according to industry officials.

SoyDiesel, made from processed soybean oil, reduces sulfur, carbon monoxide and particulate emissions when blended with regular diesel, according to early tests. It also is said to make semitrucks or city buses smell like a french fryer instead of a refinery smokestack.

"I think it's a product whose time has come," said Lee Derr, president of Interchem Industries, the Overland Park, Kan., company whose wholly owned subsidiary, Midwest Biofuels, buys the processed fuel from Procter & Gamble Co.

Derr and Jim Weyer, executive director of the Nebraska Soybean Board, said the fuel could help cities and vehicle fleets meet new federal air quality standards while giving farmers another market for their crop.

"If we could market more soybean oil, we could probably boost the soybean price," said Weyer. He also is a member of the National SoyDiesel Development Board, which was formed by six soybean-producing states to promote the fuel.

Tests indicate SoyDiesel is essentially sulfur-free and produces significantly less particulates, smoke and carbon monoxide than No. 2 diesel, Interchem says.

Cetane numbers, which like octane in gasoline indicate starting and anti-knock performance, are higher than regular diesel. Nitrogen oxide emissions are similar to those of regular diesel.

Straight SoyDiesel, made by processing soybean oil and removing the gummy glycerin, is biodegradable. SoyDiesel is one of a class of fuels called biodiesels, which can be made from canola oil, tallow and other vegetable oils.

"It's not much more harmful than pouring Wesson oil on the ground," Derr said.

All that could mean a lot for cities and agencies that must meet new federal air quality standards, Derr said.

The Federal Energy Policy Act of 1992, for one, requires federal agencies to fuel fleets with 25 percent alternative fuels within three years. The agencies must burn 75 percent alternate fuels within six years.

President Clinton signed an executive order last month that would require an increase of at least 50 percent in the energy act requirements for federal fleets.

The fuel offers a way to use up soybean oil left over from soybean processing, Weyer said.

Nebraska is No. 7 among the states in U.S. soybean production. Soybeans are the state's second-leading crop, generating $500 million a year for Nebraska farmers.

Annual ag tour set

The 13th annual Sustainable Agriculture Tour in August will focus on alternative crops and enterprises in south central Nebraska.

Nebraska producers wondering how to diversify their enterprises and products should get some ideas from this tour, said Chuck Francis, director of the University of Nebraska-

Lincoln's Center for Sustainable Agricultural Systems.

"Farmers, entrepreneurs and people interested in the food industry will get a vision of different crops and products from the tour," said Francis, who also is an Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources crops specialist.

For example, Dale Loschen of Wilcox produces white and waxy corn for specialty markets. He also produces confectionery and oil-type sunflowers, as well as mung beans and cotton.

Oak Creek Farms near Edgar is becoming well known for its commercial marketing of blue and white corn for corn chips. Oak Creek also raises amaranth, sunflowers, pumpkins and asparagus.

The Grain Place south of Marquette has both organic crop production and a world-class wheat processing and marketing operation. Dave and Don Vetter and their families have innovated with a number of organic products and now market across the United States and worldwide.

The tour is Aug. 5. It starts with a short tour of the South Central Research and Extension Center west of Clay Center. People may join the tour at 6:30 a.m. CDT from Lincoln, or meet the group at SCREC at 8:30 a.m.

The $25 registration covers transportation, lunch and snacks. Registrations must be made by July 26 to the Center for Sustainable Agriculture Systems, 220 Keim Hall, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Lincoln, Neb., 68583-0949. Telephone registrations are accepted, but fees must be pre-paid by July 26 to assure space on the bus.

The tour is sponsored by the center and the Nebraska Sustainable Agriculture Society. For more information, contact the center at 402/472-2056.

Direct markets growing

Farmers' markets are increasingly becoming a major marketing avenue for Nebraska's growing fruit and vegetable industry. To assist existing farmers' markets and help others get off the ground, the Nebraska Department of Agriculture's Ag Promotion and Development Division has planned a series of informational seminars.

"We decided to hold these seminars because a substantial number of producers sell their produce through farmers' markets," according to Bonnie Stauffer, Ag Promotion Specialist. "Fifty-two percent of the respondents to the 1992 Nebraska Fruit and Vegetable Marketing Study indicated farmers' markets were a major marketing source for them."

Seminars will be held in the following locations: Stockman Inn, 1-80 and Highway 83, North Platte, on May 24 from 7 to 9 p.m.; University of Nebraska-Lincoln, East Campus Union, Lincoln, May 25, 1 to 3 p.m.; and Northeast Community College, Norfolk, May 25, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Participants in these seminars will have the opportunity to learn more about producing fruits and vegetables for farmers' markets, how to start a farmers' market and the insurance issues involved. The Department of Agriculture's Weights and Measures and Foods Divisions will make presentations on state laws and regulations which apply to vendors and organizers of these markets.

The seminars are free and open to the public. However, for planning purposes, those wanting to attend are asked to RSVP by calling the Department of Agriculture at 800-422-6692 or 471-4876. For more information, interested persons may contact Bonnie Stauffer at those same numbers.
