Aid sought in housing for Wayne By Les Mann Of the Herald

The need for public intervention in the housing market in Wayne is being felt, according to members of the Wayne Housing Task Force. At its meeting Monday, the group discussed'different methods of intervening from implementing new occupancy and inspection codes that would force the upgrading of sub-standard rental units to the offering of tax incentives for housing developers.

Coordinator for the group, Tim Keelan, with the planning firm of Hanna Keelan Associates of Lincoln, will attend the group's next meeting with a list of possible assistance options for the city to consider to foster housing development.

AT MONDAY'S moeting, members of the Task Force were not favor-able to implementing new city regulations and occupancy permit procedures because of the added level of bureaucracy and cost.

But members did voice support for methods to force property owners with obvious safety or nuisance problems to upgrade their problems through nuisance rules.

Members of the committee exprossed interest in seeing the effort toupgrade the housing stock in the com-munity_be_voluntary_and_positive rather than regulatory and negative. Assistance with street, utility and other infrastructure improvements might be offered to developers through the city or through a combination of public and private sources-

WSC enrollment By Les Mann enrollment was posting increases Of the Herald from a year ago. The full time equivalent figures. Wayne State College enrollment is not dropping the way an Omaha World Herald story indicated last weekend, according to Jcff Beckman, the college's director of information This story has put us on the defensive when we really shouldn't have to be," said Beckman, who added there will be more students on campus this year again than there were last year.

"IT'S REALLY a numbers situation," said Beckman of the information used in the newspaper story which said Wayne State's enrollment had dropped over 13 percent this spring "We're still growing," he said, "We're not on decline, nothing could be further from the truth."

Beckman said head count numbers used in the article reflected a shift of several hundred off campus students from Wayne State to Peru State since the State College Coordinating Commission had given Peru State the off campus program Wayne State had previously conducted in Omaha.

ADDITIONALLY, several handred teachers had been required by the state to take a one-hour class called "Human Relations in a Plural-istic Society." That class was offered tast year but not this spring at Wayne State.

Those two factors alone lead to a drop of over 600 students in the school's "head count" said Beckman, while at the same time the on-campus

The college listed 2,800 students on campus this spring up 2.6 percent which account for the number of off-campus students and count part-time students as fractions, have shown steady increase since 1987. That number declined 2.4 percent from 2,760 last spring to 2,694 this spring due wholly to the missing 600 part time, olf campus'students

COLLEGE OFFICIALS were fearful the publicity about declines here might hamper student recruitment and state budgeting decisions, said Beckman. That is why, when the "head count" figures which count every enrollee, even those taking just one, one hour course, were showing dramatic increases in the last few years, the college was cautious not to promote that as part of the growth on campus, he said

WHILE THE HEAD count fig--ures show Wayne State dropping, the same figures credit Peru State with dramatic increases because of the Omaha programs it inherited from Wayne. Peru, the smallest college in the three-campus system, had 1,208 full time equivalent students this ring, Chadron State had 2,085 FTE students this spring according to the State College Board office.

Wayne's Lutt drafted by Pirates

Not so many years ago, Jeff Lutt was just like millions of other youngslers his age, dreaming of someday playing in the big leagues while going through his pitching stretch on the Little League base

Saturday, however, Lutt made history as he became the first Wayne aillete to be drafted by the Major Leagues and then he was drafted twice by mistake.

The Pittsburgh Pirates snagged Lutt in the 43rd found as a pitcher. In the 44th round, not knowing that Luu was taken, the Cleveland Indians drafted him. The Indians of course, re-selegted after finding out their pick had thready been drafted.

Lottery interest

WAYNE COUNTY --- To date, five businesses in Wayne County have expressed interest in becoming sales outlets for the new state lottery when sales begin in September.

Three stores in Wayne and one each in Hoskins and Winside have applied to the Department of Revenue for rights to be a lottery sales location. Prospective retailers must undergo a background check. Lottery tickets cannot be sold in bars and taverns and persons must be 19 or older to buy them.

I had been told earlier that I would be picked by the Pirates but I didn't know when," Lutt said. "1 told them to just leave a message on my answering machine if 1 wasn't at home because I had to attend my brother Steve's wedding on Saturday.

Pirates scout Hank Krause did better than that. He phoned Lutt at the church where the wedding took place. "I was in signing the mar-riage license for my brother when 1 was told I had a phone call from the Pittsburgh Pirates," Lutt said. 'I was very excited to find out I had been deafted."

The two-sport standout colle giate athlete at Wayne State will not be able to play his final two years of football where he was a starting putside linebacker for the Wildcats. He is also forgoing his senior year of baseball.

A tax on all of us

Omahans are complaining because the legislature failed to approve a proposal to allow the city to implement a higher sales tax to pay for renovation of the city auditorium.

The Ontaha voters approved the additional tax but the legislature failed to pass the enabling legislation. Some in the state's largest community see the situation as unfair since Omaha voters approved the tax

We don't see it that way. In recent years Omaha has rightly promoted itself as the commercial center for the state. The business community there has touted the amount of commerce conducted in the community for people who live elsewhere in Nebraska. Thus, when voters of Omaha decide to implement an increased sales tax, they are not just taxing themselves, they are passing a tax on to all of us who visit Omaha.

We are not opposed to upgrades to the Omaha Auditorium. It is a facility that benefits the entire state and we enjoy the opportunity to attend functions there just as the taxpayers of Omaha do. We are not complaining about the obligation for all to share the costs for the services we use when we visit neighboring communities.

The easiest way to share those costs with all is through sales taxes. However, we disagree with the current harsh criticisms of the legislature for its cautious approach to the question of allowing municipal-voters the right to raise the limits on taxes the rest of us share in paying.

Good approach to housing

Members of the Wayne Housing Task Force are working hard to implement mechanisms to upgrade the community's housing stock. Incentives for new developments including low and moderate income housing are being discussed for recommendation to the city ouncil for approva

One proposal that thank fully is not generating strong support on the task force is the idea of implementing an occupancy permit system whereby rental units would have to pass city inspection before new renters could move in.

While the system would help improve the quality of housing units available in the community, we believe it would set up another unwieldy bureaucracy in the city and place more restrictive regula-tions that could further reduce the housing opportunities rather than enhance them:

Rather than pass new regulations, the city should pass incentives for new units to be built.

An increased supply of good quality and reasonably priced housing units will do more through competition to improve or remove the substandard ones than all the new city inspectors we could put on the payroll

Cemetery work continues

Dear Editor:

Just a note to say thanks for the articles and pictures of the LaPorte Cemetery in the June 1 issue of The Wayne Herald. Those buried there deserve respect as the pioneers of what Wayne County is today.

Memorial Day was very special and we did have a lot of visitors. A special thanks to those folks and the nice comments from them. It made the effort worth while and affirms our commitment to continue our-project.

Those of us involved in the restoration really appreciate your time and the space in the paper. As you noted, a lot of work has been done, but a lot remains to do.

There are a few trees needed yet, the fence to replace, mapping the graves, grass to plant. flower beds to work on, raking, leveling to be done, stones to refurbish, research and genealogy to do, and much

Anyone wishing to donate a little time and/or money to help will certainly be appreciated.

Just one more note about a volunteer not mentioned in the paper. Pat Beiermann has spent many, many hours there with the rets of us. She has certainly made sure that we didn't starve to death while we were working. Thanks Pat!!

Capitol News — Non-smokers got a tax break

By Melvin Paul Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

If you're a smoker, be ready to cough up some more taxes. But Nebraskans, I'm happy to report, will still be able to drink pop and beer with impunity. (But please don't drink and drive.)

Those are the main results of the Legislature's annual tax and spending debate this year. All in all, for taxpayers, things could have been a lot worse

Senators did increase cigarette taxes by 7 cents a pack, up to 34 cents. So you coughers are going to be asked to pay about another $10 during the tinal days of the session million into state coffers. The pop tax fizzled. Teachers in

SERIES OF motor vehicle fee increases also passed, including one that will raise the cost of a drivers license $4, to $14

Considering we only renew our licenses every four years, that's a buck a year more for the right-todrive in this state. I'd actually pay twice that if they would just make it so I don't have to spend four hours waiting each time I renew the darn thing, but that's another gripe for another day.

But there were just as many tax increases that crashed on the rocks

the state were pushing a $10.6 million tax on pop, coffee, tea and other beverages, basically making them subject to sales tax, as a way pay for higher salaries

IT PASSED TWO rounds of debate, but in the end senators veren't willing to do it. I'm not surprised, having witnessed to amount of coffee and pop that are consumed on the floor of the egistature. In reality, I think the thing failed because a lot of people felt the teachers were being kind of greedy in a year a lot of other folks faced budget cuts. And the beer and liquor lobby managed to beat back a 9 percent tax increase on its products. The whole effort proved two things: grassroots lobbying_efforts do work; and some people will believe just about anything they're told.

Vietnam War Memorial

The liquor industry went to the people to fight the increase, putting cards in bars that decried the proposed tax increase (Your state sena tors want to raise your taxes!) and urging people to sign them and send them in. State senators received thousands of the cards and in the end they listened

WHAT THE LITTLE cards didn't mention was that the tax in-crease amounted to one-fifth of a cent on a can of beer. Heck, you could drink a whole case of beer and not feel that tax. (Of course, most people wouldn't feel much of anything if they drank a case).

I think bar owners missed a big chance. They had people so snowed on that one they could have raised the cost of beer a quarter, pocketed the extra 24 and 4/5 cents and then blamed the whole thing on the Legislature, and people would have bought it. I'll bet there wouldn't have been so many cards mailed in if the cards had mentioned what the impact of the tax really was.

ANYWAY, DESPITE all the dire predictions at the start of the session, if you're a taxpayer, you made it out of this session OK

In fact, considering Gov. Nelson's plan earlier that passed and gave low- and middle-income Nebraska families an average tax reduction of $30, most Nebraskans, if they don't smoke, probably got a small tax reduction out of the whole session.

A contemporary of mine tried to convince me recently that teenagers Mann ave it too summer jobs compared to the relative Overboard hardships we had to endure in our teens. By Les Mann Hooey, I said, for every soda jerk and car hop job of our era there are a dozen fast food burger flippers and order takers today. He said he wasn't talking about jobs in fast food. He said he meant real work like cleaning hog barns and bucking/hay bales. All that work is gone the way of air conditioned cabs and hydraulics, He allowed as how football coaches "back in the good ol' days" didn't need to start fall practice so early and have weight training programs. All they did was make sure their players had hired out on farm crews for the summer. A football coach with a team of kids who had worked on hay crews all summer could usually be assured of making the state playoffs. The kids would arrive at the first practice, in prime condition, and undoubtedly with pretty salty demeanors.

Bill A. Johnson Wayne

Summer jobs back then meant hard, physical work, my friend argued. There were no air conditioned, sittin on the stool type jobs then. What about detassling crews, that's no "can of corn job" I reminded my grumbling companion.

He contended detassling was not in the same league as bucking 80 pound hay bales onto piles over your head all summer long. I won't know, I never did either one, but I heard plenty of stories about both and I knew I was about to

Summer jobs where I grew up were no piece of cake, I told him as he gaveme a look which said he suspected my voracity-Humming the Volga Boatmen song under my breath joined his ranting.

A lumber millin eastern Oregon was no place for marshmallow's Hold him. Then there was the summer in a lumber camp--tell me a kid'll get soft fighting forest fires and being a "gofer" for log truck drivers and choker setters.

Not only was it tough work, but you learned quickly about your relative station in life. The men we teens worked with ranked us "snots" somewhere beneath spittle on the scale of respect. The only life forms given less respect by these guys were highway patrolmen and federal foresters.

Why, that was real work, I raved. There aren't any jobs like that anymore thanks in part to the spotted owl.

But before beginning my career as a creater lumber baron, 1 was in-commodities picking them that is. In Oregon, kids could work as young as 12, picking berries and beans. For sore back and sunburn, this work can't be topped.

I could tell my friends around the coffee table in the "grumbleks hall" didn't think my work history would protect me from the convented "whimp's inquisition."

But I won some grudging nods when Hargued that back then we didn't get paid anywhere near what kids get paid today for their soft summer jobs. And not only that, when we were done with our summer jobs we didn't have enough money to buy cars and gas. We had to walk six miles to school through the snow drifts, up hill, both ways.

Yeah, those were the days, my friend agreed.

Audra Sievers of Wayne has been selected to attend The National Young Leaders Conference from June 15-20 in Washington, D.C.

The National Young Leaders Conference is a leadership development program for outstanding high school students who have demonstrated leadership potential and scholastic merit.

Audra, the 17-year-old daughter of Mike and Lynnelle Sievers of Wayne, will be among 350 attending from across the United States.

Audra will be a senior this fall at Wayne High School, where she participates in varsity band, jazz band and flag squad, along with volleyball, basketball and track.

In addition to being a member of W-Club, she served as secretarytreasurer of Spanish Club and secretary-treasurer of the junior class. She was also a mock trial team.member and was selected as Wayne's delegate to attend Girls State this month in Lincoln

She belongs to Redeemer Lutheran Church in Wayne and is employed at the Milton G. Wald-baum Co. in Wakefield, Dick's Dairy Sweet in Wayne, and at the Wayne swimming pool.

THE THEME of the National Young Leaders Conference is "The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today." Throughout the six-day conference, Audra will interact with key leaders and newsmakers from the three branches of government, the media and the diplomatic corps. Highlights of the program will include welcoming remarks from a member of Congress on the floor of the United States House of Representatives and a panel discussion led by prominent journalists at the National Press Club.

Students will visit foreign cm-bassies and receive policy briefings from senior government officials. In addition, Audra will meet with Sen. J. James Exon, Sen. Robert Kerrey, and Rep. Douglas Bereuter or designated members of their staffs to discuss important, issues facing Wayne and the nation.

AUDRA WILL also participate in learning activities designed to"enhance students' leadership skills. In one activity, a simulation entitled "If I Were President," students role play the President and members of his Cabinet who must respond to an international crisis.

Culminating the National Young Leaders Conference is The Mock Congress on National Ser-vice, a half-day activity in which scholars assume the roles of United States representatives by debating, building coalitions, and voting on

Juniors defeat Hartington and Pierce Wayne baseball team wins two

JUNIOR LEGION player Tim Reinhardt lays down a perfeet bunt to advance a teammate to second base during ac-tion against Hartington on Saturday at Overin Field.

The Wayne Junior Legion base ball team had the final game of their annual Paul Otte Tournament rained out Sunday. The locals won the first two contests over Hartingand Pierce and were set to play Wakefield, also winners of its first two games over Hartington and Pierce before the cancellation.

On Saturday afternoon, Wayne got a brilliant pitching performance from Robert Longe as he blanked Hartington, 5-0. Longe provided both offense and defense in the game as he blasted a three-run home run in the second inning to increase Wayne's lead to 4-0.

Jim Fernau was Wayne's first base runner in the game as he drew a one-out walk in the second inning. Kelly Meyer then doubled followed by a single from Dane Jensen before Longe delivered the long ball.

Todd Fredrickson scored the lo-cals final run in the fifth inning. He drew a base on balls to lead off the inning and later scored on an error by the left fielder Wayne's offensive explosion in the second inning resulted in the only hits of the game as they finished with five runs on three hits and two errors. Hartington had no runs on five hits and one error. Longe-struck out-10; Hartington game In Sunday's game with Pierce Wayne won by a 10-2 margin. They broke the game open in the third inning with five runs. Tim Reinhardt was on the mound and carned the victory for Wayne, now 3-1 on the season.

Reinhardt tossed a one-hitter-a third inning single and struck out five while picking up the win. Pierce scored one run in the second and one run in the third inning while Wayne netted two in the sec ond, five in the third, two in the fourth and one in the fifth.

The Juniors pounded out eight hits in the game led by Jason Wehrer with a double and single. Danc Jensen rapped a pair of base hits while Robert Longe doubled. Todd Fredrickson, Mike Williams and Jim Fernau each singled for the vinners.

Wayne's game with Wisner-Pilger was rained out on Monday night, but the Juniors will play home games on Friday, Saturday and Sunday against Wakefield, Wisner and O'Neill.

The Midgets are slated to play at Homer on Wednesday and at Schuyler on Thursday. The Homer date is scheduled for a doubleheader

Petri clips Rose on final nine to claim June Open

By Kevin Peterson Sports editor

Sunday's Memorial Wayne Amateur Men's Golf Open was played amidst cloudy and cool conditions with occasional drizzle, but that didn't stop things from heating up in the championship flight as Laurel's Rick Petri and Wayne's Doug Rose battled 27 holes-the final nine in head-to-head competition, before the champion emerged. Petri fired his first 18 holes in one-under-par fashion for a 71 but still trailed Rose who blistered the front nine with a 33 before settling for a 37 on the back for a two-under-par 70. Rose thidn't have a bogey until the 17th hole:

In the final nine holes Petri played nearly perfect golf with pars on one, three, four, five, six, seven on one, three, four, five, six, seven and nine and birdies on two and eight for a 34. Rose parted one, four, five, eight and nine and birdied two and six but bogeyed three and seven to finish with a 36, thus leaving Petri with a one stroke lead and the championship. A total of 19 Wayne golfers

Other Wayne flight_champions included Steve Muir in the ninth flight with an 89 and Steve Meyer in the 10th flight with a 94. Doug Sturm finished second in the second flight with a 79 and Gene Claussen placed second in the fifth flight with an 86.

Don Preston finished runner-up in the sixth flight with an 82 and Kory Leseberg was second in the 10th flight with a 97. Tim Sutton carded an 85 for third place honors in the sixth flight and Larry Lucders placed third in the 10th flight with a 99

Kelly Hansen fired an 82 for fourth place honors in the second flight and Kevin Peterson carded an -82 for fourth in the fourth flight. Tim Keller finished with an 88 for fourth place honors in the fifth flight and Don Koeber's 88 was good enough for fourth in the sixth flight.

Scott Kudma was fourth in the cighth flight with a 93 and Ray Novak's 94 placed fourth in the ninth flight. David Stuthman rounded out the Wayne placers with a fourth place score of 101 in the 10th flight.

DESPITE WINNING the championship Petri virtually stepped onto a foreign course in Wayne, playing only the front nine holes once before. His first trip to the back nine resulted in a below par performance with a 35.

Petri has lived in Laurel since. August and has been appointed the new athletic director at Laurel High School for this fall along with being named the head girls basketball coach

The Westminster, Colorado native didn't play golf in high school until his senior year because golf and baseball seasons collided and he pitched on a state contending team each year. His senior season resulted in his golf team carning a state trip and the baseball team winning the state championship.

He went on to play golf at the University of Northern Colorado at Greeley and upon graduation decided to turn professional in golf. "I layed professionally for two years but I mainly played on the mini tours in Florida and California," Petri said.

Petri quit the tour in 1981 and had to sit out of all competition for about two years to regain his amatcur status. He and his wife Kathy moved to Laurel because it was closer to her parents who live in Yankton. "We also wanted to live in a small town," Petri said.

As far as playing golf in Wayne, Petri said he thought the greens were excellent. "It might not have appeared to be a great golling day because of the weather, but it really didn't dampen my game," Petri said. This was the first open tournament I've entered since I've moved to this part of the country

Petri said he really doesn't set in his mind a particular number he aims to shoot when he plays golf but he concentrates on each hole. usually know where I stand but I really don't worry about what I've done on the last hole," Petri said.

The June Open champion said he felt his chip-in for birdie on number eight is where he won the tournament. "I felt I played a pretty good tournament," Petri said. "As odd as it might sound, however, I felt I didn't putt particularly well." Petri said he doesn't have a set schedule Saddle-up "the horses and get ready to ride out with Jack Ka-vanaugh, the "Wagon Master," for Laurel's centennial trail ride on June 10, 11 and 12.

The fun begins on Thursday morning with a ride to Dixon. Rid-ers will meet at their campsite on Casey's ranch, located north of Laurel. At 8:30 a.m., they will be-gin their ride to the dam site west of Dixon for lunch in the open air.

Afterward, the group will head back to Laurel for a bank robbery, trial and hanging at 7:30 p.m. to kick off the community's centennial celebration.

The bank robbery will feature "good guys" and "bad guys" from the Laurel community. The robbers will enter Security National Bank in downtown Laurel at 7:30 p.m. The "good guys" will chase and apprehend the robbers and put them on trial. Following a brief deliberation, the robbers will be declared "guilty" and hung in the gallows on the street.

The bandits will be pronounced dead by a coroner provided by Schumacher-McBride-Wiltse Fu neral Home.

ON FRIDAY, the trail riders will head out to a location west of Belden for lunch. That evening, they will ride into Laurel and dance to the music of The Rumbles

The trail ride will conclude on Saturday with a ride to the old Claramont location (the original site of Laurel) for a ceremony. The group will then ride into Laurel and participate in the centennial parade. A ranch rodeo is scheduled at 1 p.m. on Sunday. Open penning will follow for anyone wishing to

REGISTRATION for the trail ride begins at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, June 9. Wagon Master Kavanaugh said he expects a good turnout with at least 200 participants.

Participants in the trail ride will need to hang a license plate on their horse. The license plates will be judged and several prizes will be warded.

The Cedar County Sheriff's office will provide patrolmen on horseback to assist trail riders and to arrest and fine any rider with an unlicensed horse. Riders in violation will be forced to wear ridiculous clothing.

Trail ride committee members include Richard Brandow, Candy McCorkindale, Annette Smith, Willard and Joan Malchow, Chris Bohlken, Jane Janssen, Marlin Bose, Don Cunningham, Cindy Taylor, Cory and Christi Linn, Kurt Saunders, Marty and Susan Birkel, Cheryl Ebmeier, Chuck Hirschman, Ron Hirschman, Mark Ebmeier, Garry Anderson, Jim and Dawn Casey, Jerry Wiemers, Jim and Marietta Linn, Jimmy Thompson and Karen Granquist.

A lesson in the 'Golden Rule Days'

By Nancy Wiese Herald Correspondent

During the weeks of May 10-14 and May 17-21, Laurel elementary students experienced the "golden rule days" in the Morning Glory

Schoolhouse in the city park. Harriet Munter was brought out of retirement to teach students the "three R's" for approximately two hours during those two weeks. Just as students did in the first

Laurel class of 1894, the young-sters began by standing beside their desks and reciting the Pledge of Allegiance.

As they sat down in their desks following the pledge, Mrs. Munter instructed the children to sit up straight and she would begin the class.

THE STUDENTS demonstrated their knowledge of how schools were set up 100 years ago. Mrs. Munter quizzed the class about various furnishings in the classroom. "Class," she would ask, "do you think they had pictures of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln one hundred years ago?"

"Yes," answered a bright first grader in the front row, "because they had presidents one hundred years ago

Next, Mrs. Munter pointed to a dunce stool in the front corner and asked the class if anyone knew it's purpose. A first grade boy in the back of the room shouted, "You sit there if you're naughty." In this particular class, as with other classes conducted during the two-week period, Mrs. Munter sent many boys and girls to the front to sit on the dunce stool --- for such infractions as screeching his or her chalk to wearing outlandish clothing such as neon green and orange shirts to school.

Each time, the students would giggle as they watched their class-mates sit on the stool and don the dunce cap

"Let that be a lesson to you," the teacher would warn the students as they were sent back to their desks.

Other activities included practicing penmanship on real slates, par-ticipating in a spelling bee, singing songs, and eating a packed lunch.

THE Contemporaries Commu-nity Club and other volunteers fixed nial project.

About a year ago we decided we tion with the ceatennial and hough of fixing up this school-house on the inside as a museum," stated club member Sue Stingley

The schoolhouse, built in the' carly 1900's, was brought to the city park from a location four miles cast of Laurel.

The cluberaised money for the renovations by sponsoring a Laurel tour of homes last November. Just over $1,000 was raised with this activity

Stingley, a teacher for Laurel-Concord Public Schools, attended a country school for a couple of years and wanted local students to have a similar experience. "I wanted the children to be exposed to this type of past heritage.

The Contemporaries painted the inside of the building and added curtains to the windows. The city has provided electricity, a sidewalk and a big bell just outside the door.

THE SCHOOLHOUSE will be open for public viewing when the Laurel community celebrates its centennial this Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 11, 12 and 13.

It's Sunday evening and I've just had a walk up and down Church Road. It's rolling, but not nearly the challenge that the road around Apey Farm were. We saw a little sun yesterday, but one radio announcer informed us the animals are lining up two by two

We've had B&B guests all weekend; a delightful couple who really didn't live that far away. We talked them into calling The Lofte Theater for tickets to "Life With Father" and they enjoyed it.

The "Lofte," located near Manley and Weeping Water, is a commu-nity theater in a barn. It's usually informal, but professionally done; and fun. Also inexpensive; which is лісе

I also had a nap as well as a walk today; a perfect Sunday afternoon, in my estimation. I believe there should be more naps!

I'm actually glad May's over, it was too hectic. I got a very small paycheck yesterday; there were too any social events

On Sunday, old friends from Omaha came for dinner and we attended Waco High Alumni banquet at the Chances R .- in . York that evening. We also celebrated a couple of 60th birthdays that evening. It's hard for me to believe I have friends who are that old. One of the "old friends" had joined the Oregon Trail commemorative ride. She was disgusted to see padded seats, rubber tires and portapotties! There are trail riders south of Waco yet. I've been reading about it with interest and wondering how people have time to go across Nebraska in covered wagons. I hope the "prairic schooners" are waterproof. Pray for sunshine!

It ain't broken'

By Cheryl Stubbendieck oraska Farm Burcat

Sometimes it seems federal regulators specialize in two areas: fixing things that aren't broken, and making problems where none existed before. The matter of the hazardous plant and animal oils falls into the latter category.

In February, the U.S. Department of Transportation, DOT to its friends, issued an interim final rulemaking which asked for com-ments on its plan to reclassify edible plant and animal oils as hazardous materials in transport. Evi dentally, DOT felt that federal oil spill prevent laws do not permit differentiation between petroleum and other chemical oils, and edible oils in transport.

To the casual observer, it would seem to make sense for DOT to seek to change the law, to recognize that spilling soybean oil on a road is much less hazardous that spilling, say, gasoline on that-same road. Did DOT take this common-sense approach? No-o-o-o. It did not. Instead, it wants to classify edible oils as hazardous.

This would be laughable, and nothing more, if the proposed change didn't have consequences. But it does; a lot of consequences. And most won't occur to the casual observer, whose common sense views don't seem to count anyway.

comments to DOT, the American Farm Bureau first pointed out thất animal oil and vegetable oil are fundamentally different from petroleum products, both chemically and physically. For starters, plant and animal oils are not corrosive; toxic; explosive; or radioac tive. They clearly do not have the same flammable and combustible characteristics as petroleum products. They do not représent the same threat to the environment or public health that rules governing transport of hazardous materials were designed to deal with. For example, refined vegetable oil has a flashpoint of 650 degrees Fahrenheit, flashpoint being — ac-cording to Merriam-Webster — "the lowest temperature at which vapors above a volatile combustible substance ignite in air when exposed to flame." The comparable number for erude petroleum oil is 100 degrees, or less Similarly, plant and animal oils are fundamentally different in terms of their ability to biodegrade and their toxicity. This makes sense because these edible oils are mostly used in food and feed. There is probably something inconsistent about invoking the name of the Environmental Protection Agency on the side of common sense and reason, but even the EPA permits

Weeds still persist after 120-year fight

By Cheryl Alberts IANR News Writer

For the past 120 years, Canada thistle has been on the state's hit list. In 1873, the maximum fine was $40 for landowners failing to chop or mow the prickly weed.

Apparently, some got away. Today Canada thistle covers an estimated 336,000 acres in Nebraska and is one of the state's six noxious weeds.

Joining Canada thistle on this year's noxious weed list are musk thistle. plumeless thistle, leafy spurge, spotted knapweed and diffuse knapweed. Altogether they cover parts of 3.25 million acres in the state

The noxious status of these weeds is designated by the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, advised in part by specialists from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and others,

"Noxious" means "dead body" in Greek. Legally, the word denotes a destructive or harmful pest. Free from mechanical cultivation, these weeds become "noxious" when they threaten the value of grazing lands and infest other agricultural land, according to UNL agronomy assistant John Mcĥamara.

State statistics show that musk thistle covers the most territory of all six noxious weeds. Their purple heads and needle-sharp stems wave over almost 2.5 million acres.

Leafy spurge has had an explosive spread in the past 30 years. It now covers 398,000 acres and is so threatening to rangelands that a state task force keeps tabs on it to help in its control.

The remaining three noxious weeds cover the fewest Nebraska acres. Plumeless thistle covers an estimated 62,000 acres. The newest additions, spotted knapweed and diffuse knap-weed, together cover about 10,000 acres in north-central and northcast Nebraska,

These noxious weeds live long; spread easy and are hard to control. Their lifespan is two years or more. They can spread by roots or seeds or both. They are best adapted to pastures, roadsides, vacant lots and other untilled areas.

In the instance of leafy spurge, the conventional cost of weed control is 'almost prohibitive" and in some cases might exceed the value of the land, Martin pointed out.

While timing and expense are con cerns for chemical weed control, some insects are doing the job naturally But biological control takes time and isn't a cure-all, according to Barte Smith, officer in charge for Nebraska of the Plant Protection Quarantine within the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service.

Nebraska's noxious weeds have European origins but natural predators keep-them under control there, Smith said. Martin notes UNL researchers are among those-traveling to Europe to study weed strains and to collect insects which might be used for eed control in the United States.

Typically, clearance for introducing European insects into the United States for weed control takes at least two years, to ensure they're host spe cific, Smith said, Biological control measures have been ongoing for about 35 years, but are gaining popularity as restrictions are placed on synthetic chemicals.

Since 1989, three types of flea beetles have been released to feed on leafy spurge in 37 different Nebraska locations, Smith reported As insect numbers build, they will be relocated to different areas. "It took 50 years to get-where we are with leafy spurge," Smith said. "It will take us 50 years to get out of it, biologically." However, Smith said within 10 years the flea beetles should significantly reduce leafy spurge populations.

UNL research is also underway in western Nebraska to help revegetate areas heavily infested with leafy spurge, Martin noted.

While the maximum thistle fine in 1873 was $40, today the maximum is $1,500, according to Geir Friisoe, agricultural program supervisor in the Nebraska Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Indus-to the property. Counties failing to enforce the law must answer to the state attorney general, which occurred in the last couple years with Valley and Knox counties, Friisoe noted. The state also has taken action against a few other counties. Each year, Friisoe receives "hun dreds of calls" from citizens regard ing-noxious weeds. He and his staff turn the information over to that county's weed superintendent, but monitor the situation. Friisoe said he prefers that citizens contact the landowners or counties before calling him.

Free NebGuides published by the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources provide information on controlling these noxious weeds. Since last July, nearly 7,400 noxious weed NebGuides were distributed from local Cooperative Extension « offices

Weed control is also one topic covered at the statewide spring Crop Protection Clinics attended by an estimated 1,400 growers annually.

As to what weeds might make future noxious weed lists, "a number of weeds are kind of knocking on the door," McNamara said.

A potential candidate is purple toosestrife, which thrives in wetlands and marshes. A single stem can produce 100.000 seeds a year. This weed is especially difficult to control because surface water would easily be contaminated, McNamara said direct application of vegetable oils to grains for dust control and toplants and soils in various agricultural applications

In terms of Food and Drug Administration regulations, animal and vegetable oils have been given a GRAS or Generally Regarded as Safe status. This needs to be taken into account if DOT should carry on with its plan to classify these oils as hazardous. The Sanitary Food Transportation Act now comes into play. This act was quickly passed a few years ago, to deal with concerns that food was being transported in trucks that had just delivered garbage for another client. If plant and animal oils are classified as hazardous, that designation could cause them to run afoul of the Sanitary Food Transportation Act. It's unclear what restrictions would be placed on hauling these "hazardous food products" in trucks that would subsequently be used for other food products not classified as hazardous If animal and plant oils are classified as hazardous, the cost of transporting them will increase and that cost will be passed on - to agricultural producers in the form of lower prices paid for their products, and to consumers who will pay more for foods with no corresponding increase in public safety. -DOT needs to think on this some more, and recognize that while similarly slimy, a vegetable oil spill is not the same as a petroleum oil spill

A living trust may be created to allow someone to manage the assets of another person, or as a way to pass property during one's lifetime. However, most legal authorities advise that even with a living trust, a will is needed to distribute property. While there are many positive factors involved in setting up a living trust — especially if there's a chance that probate could hold up the distribution of property after death, it's not necessary for many people. Examples: couples with joint bank accounts, or who own homes jointly, or who are beneficiaries of pension and life insurance policies, wouldn't ordinarily be affected by probate.

abuse in the marketing of living trusts often comes by way of distorting its benefits. For example, it does not help you avoid income taxes, as some promoters suggest,

The savings go to your beneficiaries after your death. Also keep in mind that in most states, probate costs come out of the estate after your death. The costs of setting up a living trust are up front. A living trust may be helpful in your situation, but it may be an uncessary purchase that will provide little, if any, beneficial return for the cost. In any event, be sure any living trust you create states, as a minimum (depending on your state law) the following: the amount and type of property in the trust, the length of time the trust agreement will last; a list of the beneficiaries, and their specific benefits; conditions, if any, beneficiaries must meet to receive benefits; explanation of how the benefits should receive benefits; explanation of how the benefits should be used if the trust conditions are not met, or circumstances change; trustee's name and guidelines or conditions under which the trustee will function; a statement on whether the trust is revocable or irrevocable.

To honor Wayne's rural customers

Country Store Days in Wayne this week are annually held as a tribute and show of appreciation from the business community in Wayne to the crucial rural neighbors who comprise the most important part of the local economy, said Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce Manager Curt Wilwerding.

A greatly expanded program is planned this year, but the traditional brat feed will continue to be the central feature of the event, which is orgatnized by the Chamber's Agribusiness Council.

The brat feed and field day events will be Thursday, June 10 but sales and special promotions in Wayne area businesses will be now through Saturday.

Many of the stores will be open late Thursday night. See inside for special offers form local businesses during Country Store Days and for details on the many events at the Wayne County Fairgrounds during the celebration.

Every year large crowds attend the brat feed in Wayne and with additional activities surrounding the event and Country Store Days in Wayne, it is expected that large numbers of brats will be consumed again this year.

Low cost night out

Talk about a low cost night out!

For a couple bucks you can take your sweetie out for a fine dinner, musical concert, ice cream social and visit with friends and neighbors at the Country Store Days Brat Feed and Ag Expo in Wayne.

The musical entertainment will add a festive concert air to the event and provide a showcase for some very talented and popular local performers, according to Bill Dickey, entertainment coordinator for the affair.

"For easy fistening, or getting up and kicking your heels, this music is will be perfect accompaniment to the brat feed," said Curt Wilwerding, Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce executive.

Funny People, the Wayne United Methodist Church Wandering Clowns will be at the Fairgrounds from 5 to 7 p.m.

The popular Jaeger Brothers will be on the. Little Theater stage for your listening enjoyment from 5 to 5:30 p.m.

Cyril Hansen and Jay Morse take the stage from 5:30 to 6 p.m. and the Wayne Dixie

Bargains galore throughout Wayne!

Dozens of Wayne area businesses will be offering special sales and promotions as part of the Country Stores Days activities this week in Wayne.

While the traditional brat feed and entertainment activities have been moved from downtown to the Wayne County Fairgrounds to accommodate ag demonstrations and the livestock show, there will still be a strong connection to the town's retail and service businesses who are sponsoring the feed and other activities, said Chamber Executive Curt Wilwerding.

He said shuttle buses will be running between the fairgrounds and downtown Wayne on a regular schedule during the day to give shoppers year are tillage demonstrations, a live the opportunity to take advantage of activities at both locations.

"There are many great bargains offered throughout town and we are working to provide something for everyone," said Wilwerding. He said typically, the spouses of those attending the tillage and ag demonstrations at the fairgrounds might prefer looking over the new products and discounts at the Wayne retail stores.

Wilwerding said the Country Store Days activities including the brat feed have traditionally been downtown, but the Agribusiness Council of the Chamber of Commerce elected to expand the activities this year and utilize the fairgrounds.

New to the country store days this cattle implant demonstration, the steer and heifer show, an agriculture and commercial products exposition, farm safety demonstrations-and-seminar, and a lawn and garden-seminar.

The traditional good food and fun, including the great locally produced bratwurst and pie and ice cream has been retained, said Wilwerding. Entertainment will be provided by local talented performers including the Jaeger Brothers, Cyril Hansen and Jay Morse, The Wayne Dixie Land Combo, Square Dancers and clowns from the Methodist Church in Wayne. Wilwerding encouraged area families to join the fun and festivities in Wayne on Thursday and throughout the rest of the week.

The committee has worked hard to provide activities and displays for the whole family," he said. "Come and make a day of it in friendly Wayne."

Square dancing will be a part of the fun again this year.

Tillage demonstrations to show off the latest

The latest techniques and equipment for maximum farm efficiency and production will not only be on display at the Wayne Country Store Days Ag Expo, but they will be demonstrated as well.

Field day tillage demonstrations are planned as part of the expanded activities this year surrounding the Wayne Brat Feed and Country Store Days Celebration.

Wayne County Fairgrounds will be #### the center of activities which will include numerous agricultural and commercial exhibitors in the county. fair commercial building and throughout the grounds.

The tillage demonstrations will be held west of the Dee Lutt place near the Fairgrounds. The demonstrations, organized by Dave Olson, a member of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce Agribusiness Council, will be held at 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. Thursday

afternoon

New minimum tillage equipment and techniques will be demonstrated

Also a feature for agriculture producers will be live cattle implant demonstrations during the afternoon. Demos will be east of the grandstand at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m.

The Wayne County Extension Service and the Wayne County Farm Bureau will team up to sponsor a farm safety seminar and demonstration as part of the day's activities. The demonstration will run continuously form 3:30 to 7 p.m.

These events are planned around the beef show, which begins at 1 p.m. and precedes the brat feed at 5 p.m.

Members of the Agribusiness Council have worked hard to prepare events that will be beneficial to local ag producers, said Nancy Endicott, president of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce.

-Serving as-chairman of the council this year is Bill Claybaugh, who is organizing the beef show and the implant demonstrations. Other members of the council include; John Witkowski, Larry Johnson, Sam Schroeder, Frank Teach, Mark Sorensen, Rick Burleigh, Bill Dickey, Don Liedman, Dick Sorensen, Dr. Ken Liska, Mick Topp, Ron Gentrup and Dave Olson.

Besides the demonstrations and beef show, dozens of ag-related and lawn and garden commercial exhibits will be displayed during the day in the commercial building at the Fairgrounds.

Commercial exhibits abound at expo

A large display of commercial exhibits booths will be a part of the Wayne Country Store Days Ag Expo .... The expo, held in conjunction with and Field Day, Thursday, June 10 atthe_Wayne County Fairgrounds.

More than 25 exhibitors have signed up for displays which include lawn and garden equipment and supplies, farm chemicals, feed and seed, farm equipment, cosmetics, consumer products and more.

'We are really plaesed with the response of businesses who want to display their products at the ag expo," said Curt Wilwerding, Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce executive. Country Store Days, the brat feed and expanded activities at the Wayne-County Fairgrounds, will be an exciting offering of new products, door prize drawings and special deals, he said.

Businesses who will have booths at the commercial building for the expo include: South Omaha Supply, Merck Agvet, Nebraska Harvestore, Logan Valley Implement, Broadcast Partners, Northeast Station, Country Nursery, Master Mix Feed, Wayne County Public Power District, Nutrena Feed, Farm Credit Services, TWJ Farms, Midland Equipment, Wayne Grain and Feed, Northern Pump and Irrigation, Mary Kay Cosmetics, Automatic Equipment, Reinhardt Repair, Moran Machine and Repair, Erickson Manufacturing, Agri-Cultures, Koplin Auto Supply, Nebraska Beef Council, R.B. Distributing and Bill Volume Sales.

The commercial exhibits will open at 1 p.m. Thursday, at the same time the cattle show opens.

Youngsters can participate in the pedal tractor pull for glory, prizes and the chance to compete at the State Fair.

Bring the kids

Bring the kids to the Wayne Country Store Days Ag Expo activities at the Wayne County Fairgrounds on Thursday, June 10,

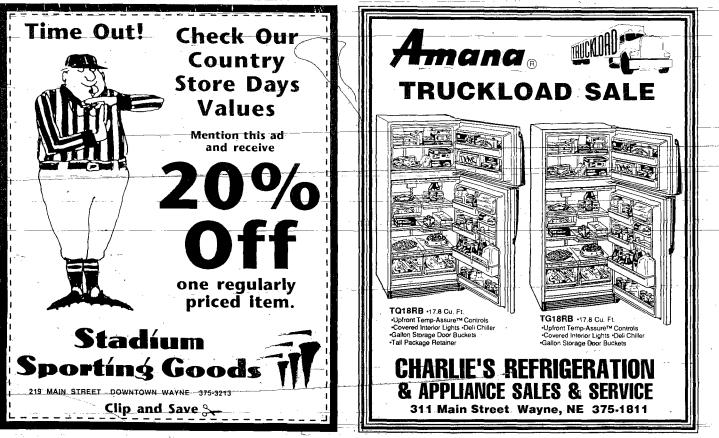

There's plenty for them to do while mom and dad shop and look at new equipment and learn about new agricultural techniques.

One of the features for the youngsters will be a state sanctioned pedal tractor pull. Patterned after the big power tractor pull competitions, the event allows youngsters in differentage groups to compete with a pedal tractor pulling a weighted sled. The contest will be held in the 4-H hog arena from 6 to 7 p.m.

Besides prizes, the winners of the local competition will be eligible to participate in the state finals to beheld at the State Fair in Lineohn.

Youngsters at the Ag Expo will also be entertained by clowns from the United Methodist Church in Wayne. If that isn't enough, they may want to sample the home made ice cream and pie at the Ice Cream Social sponsored by the ladies of the Eastern Star. There will also be pony rides and

Don't drown your plants with too much water

All new plants will need careful watering, and gardeners -- to avoid disappointment and costly mistakes -- must understand why this is so.

They also need to understand why watering requirements change as the plants grow, making it necessary to monitor growth and then water accordingly.

Although most people use a trialand-error approach, some basic concepts ease the learning curve.

For example, plants are more adequately watered if they are grouped according to their water requirements. Trees, shrubs and flowers that have high or low requirements should be. placed together, so they will tend not to be over- or under-watered.

While this is not always possible, it should remain a leading objective.

It also helps to know the signs of water stress: wilted foliage usually is a good indication of too little water. Sometimes leaves becomes dull or otherwise off-color. Or stress may appear as curling of foliage and then browning.

Experienced gardeners usually pick up such nuances with a glance but it probably is the most difficult challenge for others.

A good rule to remember: established plants can tolerate some wilting and probably won't die from lack of irrigation; they just won't grow very fast or look as well.

Conversely, new plants need watering before they reach the stress stage. They become established through root growth and a good top-to-root balance. Some species take one to two years, or even more. Until you're sure, give them close attention. Don't try to water on a fixed schedule.

And never forget that watering procedures probably top the list of cultural practices harmful to newly planted trees and shrubs.

The original advice from the nursery is usually to water every couple of days after planting. The plant looks happy for several months. But if such watering continues, it begins to wilt and drop leaves despite the water and attention lavished upon it.

Actually it is drowning -- what was good for it those first few weeks is now killing it. Applying more water finishes it off.

A good starting point is to water new plants every other day or so for the first couple of weeks and then reduce this to once or twice a week. The goal is an established plant with a deep, welldeveloped root system.

Since deep root systems are encouraged by deep watering, apply the water slowly so that it soaks in instead of running off. Conditions vary, of course, but start by assuming that one-to two hours of slow soaking will wet_the average soil to a depth of 2 feet, and six

Natural pest fighters better than chemicals

The scent of garlic can have your garden smelling like a rose.

Garlic is the best-known of a number of insect-repelling plants whose odor masks the smell of nearby desirable plants, Roger Marshall wrote in an article in the current issue of Country Living, and it is sometimes grown among rosebushes to fight aphids.

Garlic also combats Japanese beetles and plum curculios (weevils). It can be planted in the berry patch to keep many insects from your fruit.

If you don't like garlic, try another member of the allium family, Chives, with their purple pom-poms and green shoots, are almost as effective. Onion can help protect a raspberry patch and help keep insects away from cabbages. Do not plant onions closer than 12 to 18 inches from cabbages because they. stunt the growth of all brassicas.

sects at bay include some flowers, such as marigolds, which are reputed to emit a substance distasteful to nematodes. Try growing marigolds near carrots, cabbages and other crops attacked by these tiny worms.

Marigolds also protect beans from Mexican bean beetles and deter Colorado beetles when planted alongside potatoes.

A flower that appears to control Japanese beetles is the strong-smelling pelargonium (zonal geranium). Consider a colorful border of marigolds and geraniums to provide protection against many insects.

Plant nasturtiums among your pumpkins to discourage pumpkin beetles and around apple trees, where they attract aphids and repel whiteflies.

Herbs are particularly good at protecting other plants. Spearmint, for instance, keeps ants out of the immediate vicinity. Other mints are credited ing, which also attacks mealy bugs, with deterring aphids and encouraging the growth of brassicas. Rosemary keeps the cobage moth at bay.

Rue and renfrew also repel insects. Tansy is yet another strong-smelling herb used for centuries to combat insects. You might want to add it to your berry patch, as it grows fairly tall.

Use borage to prevent tomato hornworms from gnawing the tomatoes and plant tomatoes among your asparagus to keep the asparagus beetle in check. Borage also attracts bees, so you might want to sow it near plants that need insect pollination.

Another way to control bugs is to import "attack" insects, the way a town in the Old West would bring in a gunslinger. If throngs of aphids threaten plants, bring on the ladybugs. Another aphid depopulator is the green lacewwhiteflies, mites and the eggs of thrips.

Some large caterpillars may be controlled by spined soldier bugs, which go after the green cabbage loopers and Mexican bean beetles. These large shield-shaped insects can kill off a large caterpillar in a few hours. Another popular insect predator is the praying mantis,

Another method of ensuring insectfree crops is crop rotation. For instance, carrots grown in an area that contained marigolds last season will almost certainly enjoy nematode-free roots.

Leaving patches fallow or growing nitrogen-rich winterrye, clover or rapeseed in them will keep insects under control by eliminating their food supply for a year. It will also enable the soil to-regenerate and ensure better crops the following season.

Waste isn't a terrible thing to mind

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Picnic association is a private, nonprofit tables made from recycled plastic milk jugs will be part of an environmental exhibit at the Nebraska State Fair.

Meanwhile, a Broken Bow man plans to build a plant where garbage will be converted into valuable chemicals to be sold on the open market.

State officials say businesses are searching for innovative ways to use waste materials because forwardthinking company owners sense a future demand for recycled products.

"They see opportunities to make money and help the environment," said Patrick Langan, an environmental programs specialist at the Department of Environmental Quality.-

Enterprising businessmen have formed some new companies involved in waste conversion. Others such as Parco Inc. of Norfolk and Nucor Corp. of Norfolk have been turning junk into products for years.

"Companies and entrepreneurs have seen the writing on the wall and are renting buildings and gearing up for production," said Kay Stevens, executive director of the Nebraska State Recycling Association in Omaha. The group that promotes recycling.

Despite the industry's progress in Nebraska, other states -- such as neigh-_boring Iowa -- "are light years ahead" of Nebraska in solid waste conversion," Stevens said.

Entrepreneurs in Nebraska have had a hard time securing state grants for waste-conversion projects because the state's waste reduction and recycling fund awards grants only to publicsector projects, she said.

À new state law takes effect Oct. 1 that will allow private companies to apply for state grants from the waste reduction fund.

The state's litter reduction and recycling fund provides money to both public and private sector projects, but most of these grants are directed toward education. recycling and cleanup programs in the public sector.

Six private companies received more than $156,000 in 1993 for waste conversion projects from the litter reduction fund, about 19-percent of the $820,000 the fund awarded to all projects this year.

chase mold bases and cavities needed to make plastic "shake" shingles from recycled plastic milk jugs.

Another company, Sandhill Plastics, Inc., of Kearney, was granted $68,000 to purchase equipment for the production of lumber productsfrom recycled plastics.

Four companies -- C.A.R.E. Recycling of Omaha, Plum Creek Recycling of Lexington, Recycling Unlimited of Beatrice and Saunders County Disposal Inc. of Wahoo -received awards of $6,000 to $22,000 to purchase paper shredders needed to convert recycled newspaper into animal-bedding.

At the state fair in September, the "Earthbound" exhibit will feature picnic tables, park benches, bird houses, garbage cans and other products made from ground-up plastic milk jugs and pop bottles by Junkman's Recycling of Kearney.

Company owner Larry Andersen said he got the idea to convert waste plastic into new products about three years ago when he realized that "anything you can make out of wood can be made out of plastic."

Andersen said 20 Nebraska communities have purchased the company's picnic tables, park benches, parking stops and playground equipment. A Lincoln restaurant bought plastic carpeting from Junkman's.

In Broken Bow, Jim Lyddon is trying to build a plant that would convert garbage into valuable chemicals. The phenol solvent plant would process about 120 tons of garbage, feedlot waste, tires and used oil per day. The state is reviewing Lyddon's proposal.

Sandhill Plastics is turning ground plastic milk jugs and detergent bottles into 4-foot-by-8-foot, half-inch thick plastic sheets, said James Weber, company president.

Farmers use the sheets as livestock pen dividers and feed bunk liners, he said. The company also produces plastic products used in bridge construction, such as joint materials and bridge railings.

Some other examples:

-- Heinke Technology, Inc., of Lincoln turns ground-up waste plastic into muzzleloaders, rain gauges, office equipment, ceiling washers and other products, owner Dick Heinke said.

- Nucor Corp. of Norfolk converts abandoned cars old farm machinery and other scrap metal into fabricated steel bridge girders and other steel products, spokesman Nick Johnson said. The scrap metal is melted in furnaces, alloys are added and the resulting steel is rolled into various shapes, he said.

--- Pareo, Inc., is the third-targest producer of cellulose home insulation products in the country, owner Al Collison said. The company can take 15 tons of recycled newspapers, add fire retardant chemicals and produce 45 million square feet of insulation, he said.

peratures, soil types and evaporation to calculate the amount of watering needed.

These often are too complicated for the home landscape, however. Which means gardeners should develop the habit of observing growth changes and water accordingly. A soil probe -- even a long-handled screwdriver -- works well.

It's also important to understand that as plants grow, their water needs change. This holds true even for most arid-adapted plants.

Following transplanting, plants undergo a period of establishment. They require more frequent watering at this stage to allow for root growth and to achieve a good top-to-root balance.

In most cases the most convenient and time-saving method of watering a landscape is with an automatic irrigation system, eliminating the need to drag garden hoses to various locations.

Volunteers who are members of the Wayne Area chamber of Commece Agribusiness Council annually fulfill the important and rewarding task of grilling the brats served during the popular brat feed and kibitzing in the process.

Good food and more!

Delicious bratwurst, kraut, chips and drink are on the menu for the Country Store Days Field Day at Wayne County Fairgrounds on Thursday.

The traditional brat barbecue features Larry Johnson's popular recipe for bratwurst, a locally raised and processed product from start to finish.

Volunteers with the Wayne Area chamber of Commerce Agribusiness Council start early in the afternoon getting the barbecue pit ready and firing up the coals for the 5 p.m. dinner bell. Brats will be served until 7 p.m.

The brats will be served in front of the 4-H building at the Fairgrounds and diners will have the opportunity to listen to appropriate dinner music provided by several groups of talented local performers at in the Little Theatre.

Tickets, at $1 per plate, are available at the following Wayne businesses: First National Bank, State National Bank and Trust Co., Farmers and Merchant's State Bank, Pac 'N' Save, Quality Food Center, Sav-Mor Pharmacy, Johnson's Frozen Foods, FirstNational Bank of Omaha Service Center, Trio Travel, Vakoc Home Building Center, Koplin Auto Supply, Wayne' Veterinary Clinic, Wayne Herald, TWJ Feeds, Hazel's Beauty Shop, and the Chamber of Commerce office. At the gate, the tickets will cost $1.25.

After the delicious bratwurst dinner, and a stroll through the commercial exhibits folks will undoubtedly want to sample the home made pie and ice cream offered by the ladies of the Eastern Star, said chamber manager Curt Wilwerding.

Others may want to visit the beer garden which will be a part of the festivities at the Fairgrounds from 4 to 9 p.m..

There will be plenty of good food and great opportunities to socialize with all your friends said Wilwerding.

Gardeners get great tips

Why won't your tomatoes grow? make your yard and garden picture_ What makes your flowers look decidedly unlike the pictures on the seed packet? What can be done to control lawn weeds the easiest?

These questions and more will likely be answered during the lawn and garden seminar to be sponsored dura ing the Wayne Ag Expo and Field Day at the Wayne County Fairgrounds Thursday, June 10 beginning at 4 n m

Local and regionally recognized experts in lawn care, forestry, gardening and flower raising will lead discussions to help you learn how to perfect and how to do it easily and safely.

Gail Korn of Garden Perennials in Wayne, will provide information on raising flowers; State Forester Steve Rasmussen and Extension Specialist Frank Morse will talk about tree care and mulching practices and Brian Reinhardt with Reinhardt Repair in Wayne will talk about lawn and garden equipment and care.

Bring your questions and join in the fun at the expo said Chamber of Commerce executive Curt Wilwerding.

Big prizes at beef show

More than $500 has been added to the purse for the winners of the steer and heifer show which will be held during the Wayne Country Store Days and Ag Expo Thursday, June 10 at the Wayne County Fairgrounds. - -

A good-sized turnout is expected for the early season cattle show because of the added prize money, according to organizer Bill Claybaugh. Judging the classes will be Jerome, Settles of Hoskins, Neb. Animals should be registered between 10 and 11:30 a.m. with the show-starting 1 p.m.

An entry fee of $15 per head-will also be used to bolster the prize money. Registration papers are required on all purebred heifers.

Sponsors of the added prize money include: Liska Angus, Logan Bluff Farms, JB Ranch, Roberts Simmentals, Arrow K Farms, Behmer Simmentals, Bar Rocking J Ranch, Fence Line Farms and TWJ Farms.
