Another tough budget year for county looms

It's going to be another hold the line year for the Wayne County budget, elected county officials were told Tuesday morning. It may be another year of no raises for employees, no new equipment and cutbacks in every department.

Hoped-for easing of spending lid limit laws with the state did not come through the legislature this spring and that means "it ain't going to be good," said Commissioner Merlin Beiermann of the county budget beginning to be good, being stating budget process which is just getting

Several developers are working against the planning clock in Wayne

County Highway Superintendent Sid Saunders said Tuesday at the Wayne County Commissioners meeting that several projects are underway this summer or will begin very soon in anticipation that the county will implement planning and zoning regulations within a year Representatives of one such project, a 600-sow hog confinement operation five miles west of Win-side, met with commissioners Tuesto the proposed new facility. The $850,000 development is due to begin construction in August, said owners Danny Jaeger and Richard

THE TWO SAID the Wayne County site is their first choice, but that they have an alternative not located in Wayne County depend-ing on the outcome of the road dis-

The commissioners said they ould be legally bound to upgrade the road from its current designation as minimum maintenance to local road since the hog farrowing operation will include living quarters for an on-site manager.

The commissioners ask for and received assurance from the developers that they would help with re-moval of trees bordering the access road to the development site to permit road improvement.

UNDER ZONING regulations currently being discussed, the hog operation would not be permitted within a mile of an existing residence, said Saunders. He said neighbors within a half mile of the proposed facility have not complained but a woman who lives five miles proposal. However, he said she became satisfied when she heard the particulars about the proposed location and plans for the facility.

'Cable' offerings come to rural homes Wayne and Pierce Counties will be able to receive "cable" television service through the Wayne County Public Power District beginning next transmissions of over 100 channels and receive the signals into their homes on an 18-inch fixed position

Only home owners not currently living in areas served by conventional cable television services will be able to subscribe to the new service, according to Rick Robins, who is coordinating the new service for the utility.

He said the home owner will have to purchase and install the dish and receiving equipment for the signals from private vendors. The power company will not be selling or renting equipment. He said the anticipated total cost of the gear will be under $700.

The Wayne-based power company has received exclusive rights to offer the service in Wayne and Pierce Counties from the National Rural Telecommunications Cooperative.

Anticipated programming will include 20 basic channels of popular cable and broadcast television. Other premium channels may be obtained for additional charges.

Robins said the basic subscription cost should be approximately $15 per month.

The satellite which will carry the signals and beam them to individual homes throughout the country is scheduled to be placed in orbit by a NASA shuttle mission sometime in December of this year, said Robins.

He said the utility is already receiving applications from residents who want the service. "There's a lot of people who are interested," he

Ugly to be on parade

Ugly will be on parade at the Wayne County Fair this year. The fair board has decided to hold an ugly pickup contest to attempt to locate the ugliest working pickup in the county and Board member Leland Herman thinks his will be at the very least a finalist.

Work trucks tend not to get the credit they deserve for keeping many farms and homes running smoothly, said Herman.

The contest will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, August 5 in front of the grandstand at the fairgrounds.

Herman said he got the idea to parade ugly trucks from Chadron where an annual ugly pickup parade is a big event. He said the winner from Wayne surely would be a great qualifier for the Chadron contest which began several years ago.

Herman urged pickup owners to bring their old trucks to the contest for prize money and recognition.

State fire marshal Curly Mc-Donald said he is still gathering basic information on the accident which he will then turn over to the state fire marshal's office in Lin coln, but he declined to talk about anything further.

A Northeast Nebraska asset

It is apparent after hearing the glowing reports from state leaders about the performance and character of Wayne State President Dr. Donald Mash that other folks are learning what Northeast Nebraskans have long known.

Mash is a true asset to the region and the state as well.

After five years as president of the regional state college Mash has seen the fortunes of the campus reverse dramatically. Declining enrollment, low morale, lower public image and flagging respect and confidence from state leaders were all problems that greeted Mash when he walked on campus from a large metropolitan college

Since then enrollment has increased 50 percent, major campus construction projects which have been long-needed have been approved for funding and are proceeding, a private capital campaign is being met with glowing success, new faculty posts have been added and a better funding base has been secured from the

The State Senators were among the most vocal in praising Mash for the college's amazing turnaround. But immediate past president of the State College Board of Trustees, Wynn Nuckolls of Fairbury summed up his accomplishments best when she said: "He's an allaround nice guy.

"He is not alone in the fact that he, like all of our (college) presidents insist that our regional colleges serve their areas so appropriately that they serve the entire state," she said.

All of Mash's admirers, including Mrs. Nuckolls praise his articulate and positive attitude and cooperative spirit.

We in and around Wayne have long known and admired his abilities but it is nice to hear others from outside the area who have

Mash is a real asset,

Who ya' gonna trust?

The cable television industry and the local television station are embroiled in heated public debate over retransmission consent feet that stations are claiming they are due under the new federal cable television regulations.

Each side is trying to sway the public to put pressure on their opponents. The tactics have often been at best blustering and at worst outright lies in the effort to win the all-important public opinion.

In Wayne's case, an example of who should be believed in the debate has been provided by the local cable firm's tactics in dealing with city council.

For months the company promised to live up to its local cable service agreement and station a technician in Wayne, but the promise proved to be hollow.

Service lagged and complaints did little to solve the problem. In an effort to sidestep the new cable re-regulation measure, the local firm gutted the basic service offered, making it so unattractive that no one would want to chose that option, electing instead the new "tier" service that contained all the channels previously offered on basic. The new option level was implemented because it would not fall under the local regulatory controls. Now the cable firms want to enlist public support in their campaign to prohibit local television stations from sharing in the exorbitant profits derived from cable television charges. Some cable companies are telling their subscribers that the new government regulations will require them to raise cable rates substantially.

To which Rep. Doug Bereuter replies, "That is a bald face lie!" The government regulations he voted for will set limits on how much rates can be raised in communities like Wayne where there is limited competition.

As a society have we become so addicted to the television set that we will allow our local cable pushers to stop at nothing short of murder so long as they keep our signal fix coming?

Waste issue has long half-life

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Just when you thought it was safe to go back to Boyd County..

It appears the low-level radioactive waste dump could be coming back from the dead.

To use another movie analogy, maybe to the opponents in Boyd County, this thing is like Jason in those Friday the 13th movies. He gets burned up, bludgeoned, shot at and even has his library privileges suspended. But he still comes back to make another multi-million-dollar-grossing sequel.

It looked like the Boyd County

roject, being built to house low level waste from Nebraska and four other states, was dead in January when the state indicated its plans to deny a license for it.

The state said wetlands on the site made it a fine place for ducks and other waterfowl, but not such a keen place for glowing radioactive material. Just in case you were wondering, just because they call it "low-level" waste doesn't mean it's not hazardous to your health. It's basically anything radioactive produced in a nuclear plant other than the actual uranium.

Now the developer for the site. US Ecology, has proposed reducing the size of the project site as a way to avoid the wetlands.

State officials have said that might satisfy their concerns, the first time they had ever suggested that the state's intention to deny the permit could be reversed.

It all came to light recently when Nebraska was pleading its case for why it should still be able to use the current national dump in South Carolina.

South Carolina denied Nebraska future access, effective July 1, because it said Nebraska's indication it plans to deny the license shows the state is not making progress towards a disposal site of its own.

Nebraska rightfully declared, to the contrary, that the state has made progress. In fact, we're still ahead of just about every other state in this process, And the state also indicated US Ecology's plans to reduce the site to avoid the wetlands.

US Ecology discussed cutting the original 320-acre project site by two-thirds, to between 100 and 150 acres, to avoid 42 or so acres of documented wetlands. The company has said that none of the actual storage buildings would be situated on or near wetlands. So they just want to cut the wetlands out.

One opponent said it will mean a project site that looks a lot like Swiss cheese. And if they do it, it will probably be well-aged Swiss

This whole thing will take some time. Even if the wetlands concerns can be satisfied, there's still the issue of community consent. Gov. Nelson said a poll last fall showed there is not community consent for the project and wants to deny it on that basis, too. That whole issue will go to court this fall, and who knows how long that will take to settle

Maybe in the end this thing isn't dead and it will be built. But I'm still wondering whether it will be in my lifetime.

Proud of family association with Neihardt

Dear Editor:

In reading the story in your Wayne Herald of June 15, 1993 about the closing of District 77, I saw where the statement was made that John G. Neihardt began his teaching career at District 77. However, this is not true. I am enclosing the information from John G. Neihardt's book entitled "All is But a Beginning." (Youth Remem-bered 1881-1901). In the book p. 156 Neihardt states:

My first teaching job would begin December first, and there were those notorious big boys to think about. I had not forgotten the curious book on Moderator Jensen's face when he signed my contract, as though he were saying, "Remember you asked for this."

The Moderator Jensen he mentioned was my great grandfather who homesteaded 15 miles west and 1/2 mile south fo Wayne in Garfield Precinct. This particular school was District 55 Garfield Center, Jensen donated the land for the school. His son, Martin (my grandfather) Had Dr. Neihardt for his teacher and told his own children — in later years about those notorious big boys mentioned in the book. If you read on in the book you will see why Moderator Jensen warned Dr. Neihardt about them. My owner father attended this school and I began first grade at District 55 in September 1941 (no kindergarten in those days).

The school has closed now and the land returned to that farm. If you check the records at the Court-house, I'm sure you would find the exact year Dr. Neihardt began teaching at District 55. It is a treagrandfather recalled in Dr. Neihardi's book. Dr. Neihardt was truly a remarkable man. I saw and heard him speak at Wayne State. His speech was inspiring and the audience was spell-bound.

Parking is 'disgusting'

I'd like to say that I am just disgusted at the police department here in Wayne. This past Thursday night during the girls softball game, an officer was walking around ticket-ing peoples' cars for parking violations. Parents are there to support their kids. Kids are there being involved in a productive activity in-stead of running the streets in this town, while the police force is handing out tickets.

First of all, there isn't enough parking down at the ball field and since the police have been so enthusiastic about ticketing people the past few months, why doesn't the city use some of this incoming money to build some parking down there. The lot south of the ball park is vacant, why not put it to use. If this isn't an option, let people have their fun at the game and worry about people who are really causing problems.

The churches have special parking privileges, why can't some signs be put up that read, "No parking unless during a game." And as far as the streets being crowded, if people can see there are a lot of cars around there they could avoid those streets.

I was not one of those who got a ticket, but I know some other players from the other team and some spectators who did.

the announced plans to include an ugly pickup contest in the Wayne County Fair this year.

Ugly pickup contests have become popular around the country since the first one was established six years ago in Chadron. They are popular because there are so many old, workhorse trucks around. And them that own 'em generally aren't too proud to claim that their's is uglier than their pickup parade and contest was born. The older, more dented and rustier the pickup, the more status it bestows on its owner. This principle works only in rural areas. In the big cities they fine you and threaten to neuter your pets if you park your old truck in public.

That's how the idea of the ugly

But in rural areas, where the work ethic still thrives and planned obsoles. cences is thought to be some quacky form of birth control, the hard working old pickup shows the worth of the driver.

Put a guy behind the wheel of one of them shiny, chrome plated, custom wheel jobs and he usually thinks twice about getting his hands dirty and stopping to chain up and yank his neighbor out of a muddy ditch. But the same guy in an old beater will gladly stop and play muddy truck pull anytime, justto showh is old girl still has it in her. He sinvariably an ever-ready helpful kind of guy with a bed full of tools, chains, garden equipment and trash. Both he and his steed aren't too proud to work and or get a little dirtier.

That old truck will always start on the coldest of days and get you there. She also seems to have an animate sense born of constant companionship with her owner. She knows when not to start too ... like when your wife wants you to haul your favorite easy chair (not hers) to the dump or to get mulch for her

Up there muffling the static-prone radio speaker on the dash is you and your truck's personal history recorded in dashboard clutter. You can tell a lot about a man by the way he sits his pickup seat and by what he hordes as dashboard clutter. Fence staples, a "church key" (beer can opener), assorted hand tools, credit cards receipts, a traffic warning or two, pictures of the kids and a slip of paper with important dates and his wife's dress size tells you that the driver is ready to tackle almost anything on the spur of the moment.

Like a well worn pair of blue jeans an old pickup usually fits its owner with comfort and style combined. In these parts you wouldn't be embarrassed to drive your pickup to a social gathering at a fancy restaurant, nobody is going to look askance.

Just look around people of status and importance are driving them. Doctors, bankers, lawvers all know the value and low cost of having a good old American-made truck. Some of us would never had the opportunity to learn to drive if it hadn't been for the family beater. "If you think you're going to drive the car you've got another think a comin'," more than one teenager has grimaced

After so many years the old trucks become like members of the family. They generally even have colorful names -- "Old Blue, Yellow Peril, Big Red, Black Beauty (NOT) and Mean Green" are just a few I have known.

So, with all this status associated with ownership of an old pickup why, you may ask, should I harbor bittersweet feelings about establishment of a ceremony in Wayne to honor the rural institution that ugly old pickups have

Well, it's like this. I was there when the original contest was established in Chadron. Rather "Black Beauty" and I were. She was the finest old beater I have ever seen. I once wrote a column about her in which I extolled the virtues of old pickups and said I thought mine was the ugliest in all the land. Well, you can imagine the arguments that created. My banker, lawyer and accountant all threatened me with bodily harm if I didn't retract the statement and say that their trucks were uglier.

There was nothing to do but pick a panel of judges and parade the trucks through town to let the most ugly truck be selected by an impartial group.

I loved "Black Beauty" and I am sure she would have won if she had ever been allowed to compete. And I'm heartily sorry that she isn't still around to take the prize money at the Wayne contest. I have no doubt she would. But, I'm afraid I don't currently have a contestant to enter. Black Beauty inally hauled her last load of firewood a couple of years ago and was put out wildlife sanctuary and a monument to the American work ethic. It'll be years before I'm able to groom and shape her like again.

Last I knew she was in a pasture in South Dakota, on blocks, serving as a

But I'll be there during the fair, to cheer on the local ugly pickup competitors and check out the competition for the future.

Betty Johnson of Sidney visits Wayne after riding Oregon

Woman with pioneer spirit

This past week, "the old west' paid a visit to Dale and Karen Johnson and their two children of Wayne. In 1980, Don and Betty Johnson, parents of Dale left Wayne for western Nebraska, and on June 25, 1993, they encountered "the old west" by hitching a ride on the Oregon Trail Wagon Train.

This summer's Wagon Train Ride celebration on the Oregon Trail has stirred-up excitement among many pioneer historians especially Betty. Since she left Wayne in 1980, she has been working as a librarian for schools in the Sidney area. Her interest in Nebraska history was peaked by the Wagon Train Ride traveling through Nebraska along the Oregon She began clipping articles about the train ride and decided she would like to ride along with the modern pioneers.

She contacted the State Tourism Office and discovered when the wagon train would be moving through the Chimney Rock area. The wagon train would leave Bridgeport at 7 a.m. on June 25 and arrive at Chimney Rock in the Betty, attired in a blue chambray skirt and a red bandana print blouse, arrived with her husband, Don, at 6:30 a.m. in time to watch the horses being hitched to the wagons. Don's job for the day was to ride in his van and videotape the proceedings of the day.

Betty rode in a day wagon with 18 other modern pioneers. Unlike its predecessor, the wagon had rubber tires and foam cushion seats. Like 150 years ago, many people chose to walk along side the wagons and about 40 horses followed the wagon train.

The trip was narrated by the western Nebraska historians, Mr. and Mrs. Art Johnson. The couple a story about a Pony Express rider who had died along the trail and pointed out the original wagon ruts near Highway 92.

The trail ride traveled along the side of Highway 92 for part of the way. About three miles east of the Bayard junction, the wagons turned onto a gravel road for a catered funch of roast pork, potato salad and baked beans

After lunch, the wagon train moved west to the base of Chimney Rock where the wagon masters circled up the wagons. Of the site, Betty exclaimed, "I have seen it (Chimney Rock) many times, day and night, but it was a new experience seeing the rock from the covered wagon as the pioneers did

One of the many interesting people Betty encountered on the trip was Amanda Brine from another Sidney: Sydney, Australia. Amanda came to the United States Sidney: to visit pen pal in Lincoln and decided to tour Nebraska on the Wagon Train.

She will tour the rest of the United States by automobile, but was excited about seeing Chimney Rock and stated that the country is beautiful.

Betty, who was visiting family in Wayne with her husband Don, says that she wishes she could ride the wagon train again, and was excited to tell her grandchildren about the journey.

Don and Betty Johnson owned and operated the Airport in Wayne from 1951 to 1974.

I guess I didn't plan for middle age. I've always had a mental image of myself for old age, but I expected to go there directly from thirtysomething. Sometimes I don't recognize the grey-haired woman whose waist has disappeared gazing back at me in the mirror.

There are more aches and pains, less energy and motivation. After all, it has become obvious I'm never going to be rich or famous. And no company has offered early

But then, I never planned to be rich or famous; although I had planned to be retired by now. I had always intended to get really good

I've learned "never to say never," as in "I would never do that," "my kids would never do that," "I'll never go to a nursing home" or "I'll never put you in a nursing home.'

I've learned the healing power of forgiveness; no matter how long you nurse a grudge, it won't get better! And I guess I've always known that laughter was healthy; I've just reconfirmed it.

Pressure canner testing available

Individuals who have pressure canners with dial gauges can have them tested for accuracy on Tuesday, July 13, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Dixon County Extension Office, Northeast Center, Extension Office, Notureast Center, Concord, and the Wayne County Extension Office, Courthouse, Wayne. There is no charge. Gauges measuring over two pounds off should be replaced. Pressure canning is recommended for all vegetables and meats (low acid foods) so the heat rises above the temperature to kill any notential botulism spores that can be deadly if allowed to grow.

As for senior power, per se, it can be summed up in one four-letter word: Vote! If you want to watch a politician squirm, remind him or her that seniors vote. While that should be something to be proud of, some politicians dread it. To them, the use of the vote is abuse of their agenda.

First, let's laud anyone, senior or otherwise, for using the most powerful weapon citizens can wield — their right to choose their government, and how they'll be governed by those whom they've put into office. If seniors who exercise that right do nothing else, they show that it's possible to make government by the people work for the people.

son takes pride in their job by the way they act when they are not working. For instance, take the crew at the Wayne Country Club who work on the course.

A few weeks ago I played in an Open Tournament in Hartington and one of my playing partners was Dave Ellis, a member of the elite eight that maintains our golf

As we were playing Dave talked a lot about how things are cut or done at our course so it was pretty easy to tell that he was proud of the work he does as well he should be.

Ken Dahl, course superintendent, has a solid crew working for him with Bob Schwarzenbach, Eric - putting in time as well. (The elite

Those of us who are avid golfers often-times just go out and tee-up and automatically assume everything on the course is in tip-top shape with out even thinking about how much work or time goes into that look.

That's actually a tribute to the elite eight because we've taken for granted that each time we play, we're being treated to one of the finest courses in the state.

Naturally, then, when something goes awry at the course these guys take it personal. Some idiots or maybe just one idiot felt like they someone's property Sunday night and they chose the number 13 green to do the bulk of their damage.

What brave people it must take to come out in the dark and tear up a green. The damage to 13 green was very extensive and very unnecessary. Youth is attending agriculture institute

Agriculture is pleased to announce its upcoming Nebraska Agricultural Youth Institute (NAYI), NAYI is an annual event for high school juniors and seniors, designed to introduce them to agricultural issues and develop leadership skills. Approximately 180 students plan to attend this year's institute, "Breaking New Ground in Agriculture," scheduled for July 2-15

Attending from this area will be Sonya Plueger, Concord, daughter of Frank and Kathleen Plueger.

Delegates were selected to attend the institute based on their interest in Nebraska agriculture and leadership potential, During the four-day event, delegates will have an opportunity to discuss agricultural policy, international marketing and other issues important to Nebraska agriculture. Rachel Rezabek and Reid Hagstrom, Ag Youth coordinators for the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, are overseeing the day-to-day planning of the institute's program.

Sonya Plueger

"It is a real honor for students to be selected as an NAYI delegate," Rezabek said, "This is an opportunity for them to meet young Nebraskans from across the state who have a common interest in agriculture, and it's a chance for them to hear from people who are working in the industry."

"Motivational speakers, discussion groups and a simulated farm management game will challenge delegates to develop their leadership potential and strengthen their pride in agriculture," Hagstrom added

The NAYI program is coordinated by the Nebraska Agricultural Youth Council made up of 20 college-age men and women selected by the Nebraska Department of Agriculture. The council's purpose is to provide young Nebraskans with a better understanding of agriculture, including the agricultural opportunities for today's youth.

Carroll has 911

Now, when there is an emergency in Carroll, residents can simply dial 911 for fire, rescue or police service. The 911 call is immediately directed to the 911 Center in Wayne where the appropriate of-ficials are notified of the situation.

The Carroll Volunteer Fire Department recently joined the Wayne 911 Center to make calling for help in a crisis simpler. Carroll citizens need only remember 911 instead of multiple emergency numbers.

After the 911/Center in Wayne receives a call from a Carroll resident, the volunteer firemen and/or rescue squad are notified by a pager that their assistance is needed. The pagers will be carried by the Carroll volunteers at all times. When a call is for the police, the Wayne County Sheriff's Department will be con-

Theme recalls our television heritage

"Chickens on the Tube" is the theme of the 1993 Chicken Show zaneyness in Wayne, America.

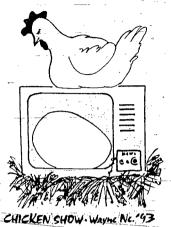

Local businesses will be decorating their windows on that theme and parade entries will score extra points from judges for portraying the theme in their entries.

The theme is annually depicted on the commemorative t-shirts that become collectors items. For 13 years the shirts have been serving the multiple-purpose of promoting the theme, spreading the fun idea of the Chicken Show and raising funds to defray the sizeable costs of putting on the show.

Chickens have long been associated with television, said Show Chairhen Jane O'Leary, in explaining the 1993 theme. She said chickens have helped make television the popular entertainment medium that it is today.

Who can forget classic shows like "Little Coop on the Prairie" or "Chicken Souperman?" she asked with tongue in beak.

There have been many other "fowl" associations with television that prompted the committee to choose "Chickens on the Tube" as the '93 theme. (The theme originally was to have been "chickens on the boob tube," but the committee felt citedlast year's controversial t-shirts with a breast-plated opera singer on them as reason to shorten the theme.)

'Chickens on the Tube' front and rear view

Other classic chicken television includes, "Maveregg," "Have Egg Will Travet" and other old westerns with stagepoach robberies in them; soap opcras like "The Egg of Night," "All My Chickens," "As the Egg Turns," "The Eggs of Our Lives," and "Heneral Hospital;" cantoons-like "Yokey Bear"; adventures like "The Incredible Edible Hulk" and "Rockford Crates"; and sitcoms like "The Broody Bunch".

The classics have been joined by modern television shows and popular characters on the tube. Committee members used a recent meeting to outline some of the notable chicken characters who can currently be seen on television.

Vanna Egg-White, Rush Lembawkabawka-bawk, Jay L-hen-o and his nemesis David Letterhen, Ted Egg-Turner, reruns of Alfred Hitch-cock, the movie Rooster Cogburn and Amold Schwartzenegger

Also mentioned was Jean-Luc Peckhard, captain of the F-egg-cration Starship Henterprise on the popular science fiction show Egg Trek. Peckhard leads his ship around the galaxy "Boldly going where no chicken has gone before."

American Gladi-eggers is another popular current show with a chicken connection. It is joined by Coop Improvement, 30-dozen Something, Love Conneggtions, Mr. Roger's Barnyard, Married with Chiekens, Unscrambled Mysteries, Impecktor Gadget and 5-dozen Minutes.

People who attend the Chicken Showare likely to see many other chicken characters from television when they attend the parade.

Show has growth history

Thirteen years ago when the idea for a new summer festival in Wayne was being discussed by the members of the Wayne Regional Arts Council, the plan was just to do it once, according to one of the founders of the Chicken Show.

The plan for that first event was for it to be an arts and crafts show with the purpose of generating grass roots interest in art by demonstrating that art can exist around everyday objects or situations, according to Jane O'Leary.

The theme of chickens was chosen because of the potential for art materials (feathers, egg shells), because nearly everyone has knowledge and familiarity with chickens and because chickens can be considered with humor.

"In fact, the arts council meeting that first discussed the project disintegrated into a series of chicken puns and jokes," said Mrs. O'Leary. Chicken Show committee meetings have changed little since then.

It was decided early on to have contests_ and a parade in order to make the arts and crafts show an "event."

When one of the committee members told her spouse about a possible contest to sound—like—a—chicken,—he—said—"Oh,—a Cluck-Off." It was also decided that there should be no admission or entry fees for the events. Exceptions implemented later were small fees for the bike ride "Tour de Poultry and the fun run.

The committee also decided to hold the Chicken Show outside and because rain is not usually and all-day situation in Nebraska in July, the second Saturday in July (somewhat separated from the Fourth) was set aside as the date for the show. That day has been set aside for the show for thirteen years and the weather has varied widely, from 105 degrees the first year to a cool 62 degrees a couple years ago. Rain has occurred but has never disrupted the events...so far.

The funds budgeted for the first Chicken Show were $50. Because the economy in rural communities was sagging at the time and because local businesses had already contributed to the arts council, it was decided not to ask businesses to donate eash to the Chicken Show. Instead, the organization borrowed funding to order 12 dozen printed t-shirts and sold those to generate funds for prize money.

The first year 350 shirts were sold. These days over 1,500 of the popular shirts are printed and sold.

When members of the first committee visited with the late Twila Claybaugh of TWJ Farms in Carroll, she suggested that their business, the state poultry council and the Milton G. Waldbaum (egg processing) Company of Wakefield could help provide an omelet feed for the event. For many years there was no charge for the event. This year the economics have forced the committee to charge a buck for the omelets.

On a whim, the arts council sent press releases to larger newspapers and television stations in the region, and one of those sources sent the release to a national wire service. Suddenly, there were inquiries from all over the United States.

"It was at this time that it seemed necessary to develop some contests with relatively large cash prizes," said Mrs. O'Leary-Letters were sent to corporations who had a logo, a name or a product that included

Collectors seek them all--

T-shirt sales a tradition for Wayne

The tradition of selling collectors Chicken Show t-shirts with humorous chicken pictures on them started with the first show back in 1980.

That year approximately 350 t-shirts were sold but there was no theme and no scene on the back. A scene was added to the back of the shirts in 1983. That year a there was the front of a chicken on the front and his back on the back.

The implementation of themes on the shirt and overall for the Show*came in 1985. The theme that year was "The 101 Year Oid Chicken." In 1986 the theme was legendary Chickens and the shirts featured a view of the Loch Nest Monster. Chickens in the Movies was the theme in 1987. Until last year the record for Chicken Show t-shirt sales was set in 1988 when the theme was the Wild West Chicken Show those shirts were red.

Chickens in Space was the theme in 1989. Chickens in History was the theme in 1990 and Chickens Around the World were featured on the 1991 shirts.

Last year Chickens in Song shirts set the new record for sales, partly because they became a matter of artistic debate.

The shirts depicted a Opera Singing chicken complete with breastplates which some people thought were offensive. Others thought the singing chicken was trying to portray rock star Madonna.

Though early sales of the shirts lagged last year because of the moral complaints, when stories about the t-shirt controversy were carried throughout the nation on the wire services, the sales quickly picked up.

Collectors have started showing interest in complete sets of the chicken show shirts causing speculation that the commemorative shirt may someday be much more valuable than they were when purchased.

The shirt art was drawn by Dr. Pearl Hansen of Wayne State College for the first three years of the show's existence. Since then the t-shirt artist has been Chicken Show committee member Marla McCue.

You can purchase your Chicken Show shirt this week at the Pac N Sav, Stadium Sporting Goods, Kids Closet, Word

T-shirt sales have been brisk in recent years. The humorous commemorative shirts are becoming collectors items.

Works, Save-Mor Pharmacy, Pat's Beauty Shop, Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce and Gary's General Store. The shirts sell for $12. They are available the day of the show at Bressler Park.

Official Chicken Show golf caps will be available for the first time this year as well. The caps can be purchased for $12 and come complete with optional "Poop a doodle doo" attached, That's the stuff that's featured in the Chicken Chip Chucking contest. It's authentic-looking but is actually made out of caulking material.

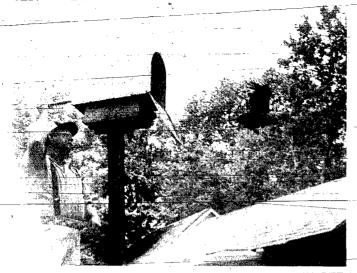

Besides the shirts and caps, the committee will be selling other Chicken-memorabilia at the coop in Bressler Park. Mugs, vicious eggs, old shirts and this year specially numbered collectors envelops for the commemorative stamp and Postal Station cancellation will be available as well.

Sasquawk?

The legend of Sasquawk, or big claw chicken, that unreliable sources have reportedly seen in the Dog Creck area near Wayne, will be retold around the chicken shoe pitching pits where pitchers try for ringer with a steel chicken shoe patterned chickens. Contributions were received and have been received every year from AT&T, The Faultless Starch/Bon Ami Company (the logo of Bon Ami is a chick and the words—"hasn't scratched yet") and Campbell's Soups.

One of the interesting aspects of the first Chicken Show is that while the arts council was responding to inquiries from all over the United States, there was not a lot of attention given by the region or local people to the event, said Mrs. O'Leary.

About three weeks before that first show, area newspapers and television stations began asking about the Chicken Show, and two weeks prior the local radio stationand newspaper began responding to the attention the show was receiving.

It was estimated that about 800 people attended the first show.

Over the years, attendance has grown. The Chicken Show continues to receive support from the poultry industries for the Omelet Feed and from larger corporations mentioned above for prizes. The Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce barbecues chicken during the show, and sells the dinners at a "cheep" price. Local businesses decorate their store windows and service organizations volunteer time for specific events such as the parade, omelet feed preparations, the Cluck-off, etc. A craft show and sale continues to be held as does the song contest, both original events with the Chicken Show.

In conjunction with the 1988 "Celebrate Nebraska" promotion, the Chicken Show made an appeal for former residents to "return to the nest."

Several class reunions were scheduled for that particular weekend and since then, at least four reunions are held on that corresponding weekend.

The Chicken Show is otherwise financed almost entirely by the sale of Chicken Shirts. Each year a local artist designs the humorous chicken that is shown "before and after" on the front and back of the shirt. Each year a specific color is chosen for the shirt.

There are a few Chicken Show supporters who have collected a shirt from every year. These complete collections are beginning to be sought by the collectors.

One of the most surprising aspects of the Chicken Show, according to Mrs. O'Leary, is the amount of publicity it has received. The Show has been featured on radio interviews in every state in the nation and province of Canada, has been the subject of major newspaper articles including features in USA Today, the Wall Street Journal and Stars and Stripes, television features on all the major networks, carried on the wire services which were picked up by countless newspapers and magazines, and even has been the topic of articles in foreign publications world-wide.

"The Chicken Show Committee is frequently asked why the Chicken Show continues to be popular and seems to grow every year, said Mrs. O'Leary. "There are two answers. The first is that it is in some ways self-perpetuating--it's fun, it's inexpensive and the idea is preposterous. The second answer is that the majority of the committee meetings are just plain fun. There is a contagious enthusiasm in dreaming up activities, sharing comments from visitors and, of course, in discussing many incredible ideas that never materialize."

Dan Gardner, center, was last year's Pullet Surprise winner but he was so busy cooking omelets for the Omelet feed he missed the ceremony.

Pullet Surprise is new

One of the more recent additions to the Chicken Show in Wayne is the annual presentation of the "Pullet Surprise." The prestigious award is presented to honor those who have "brought significant recognition to the coop."

Inaugurated in 1991 to honor Wayne native Marjie Lundstrom, a journalist who won the real Pulitzer Prize for journalism, the prize was presented last year to Dan Gardner of M.G. Waldbaum, Co.

Both have done excellent work in bringing recognition to Northeast Nebraska as well as other good works, said Chicken Show Chairhen, Jane O'Leary.

In keeping with the "Surprise" part of the name, this year's recipient is a close kept secret among the chicken show committee members. The award will be presented at 10:45 a.m. during a ceremony before the start of the parade.

The surprise winner then becomes tantamount to the grand marshal of the parade.

In keeping with the journalistic tradition of the Pulitzer Prize and now the Pullet Surprise, the Wayne Herald has agreed to sponsor the annual award.

There's plenty to eat

Upwards of 2,000 chicken dinners will be barbecued and that many or more omelets will be served during what some consider to be the most important part of the Chicken Show--the eating.

The Omelette Feed gets underway at 8:30 a.m. Formerly a free omelet feed, this year the omelettes will cost a buck apiece (still cheep). Tickets for the chicken dinners are available from numerous businesses throughout Wayne and from the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce.

Dinner tickets are $3.50 in advance and $4 the day of the show.

The tasty open air barbecue features a full half chicken grilled to perfection along will all the fixings. The chicken dinners are served from 1 to 3 p.m.

The "Chickendales" are a common sight at the Chicken Show Parade and it is apparent why they wear paper bags over their heads,

Pig kissin' is part of '93 show

Chickens don't have lips, so the Wayne Drug Free Youth Group "FRIENDS" had to turn to pigs for kissable barnyard friends in its fund-raiser which will culminate at 3 p.m. Saturday on the Chicken Show Stage.

That's when one of the eight volunteers which earns the most votes from their "friends," a one dollar a vote, will have to kiss the pig.

Deadline for voting for the candidates you would like most to see kissing a pig is this Thursday. The "votes" are on sale from members of the FRIENDS group.

Those who are in the running for the honor are: Dan Rose, Rotary Club representative; Mark Ahmann, Kiwanis Club representative; Richard Metteer, Lions Club representative; John Murtaugh and Marlene Uhing, teachers; Jolene Jager and Robert Bell, students, and Pete Chapman, WSC athletic director.

The proceeds from the voting will be used for activities for the drug-free youth

Stamp issue is popular new addition this year

Stamp collectors and chicken enthusiasts will have a unique opportunity to gain a collector's item during the 1993 Wayne Chicken Show.

A special Chicken Show U.S. Postal Station is being set up in Bressler Park Saturday to provide cancellation of commemorative U.S. Postage stamps paying tribute to the Chinese Year of the Rooster.

The commemorative postage stamps and postal cancellation stamp can be combined on a specially number Chicken Show envelope for a true collector's item, said Roger Polt, whose brainchild the postal effort is.

Displaying what it takes to be a winner in the beak contest.

The legend--

Incidentally, Dog Creek was named after a large prairie dog town that was just north of Wayne. But the dogs disappeared overnight at about the same time the large tracks were discovered.

Since then adventurers from far and wide have come to Wayne in search of the mysterious bird.

Only 250 of the number commemorative envelopes have been printed and already there have been several orders placed for them. Dave Kirkpatrick, Wayne-Postmaster said he also has received several orders from collectors for the special cancellation.

The envelops bearing the stamp and Chicken Show cancellation date can be purchased the day of the Show at the Coop in Bressler Park.

The envelopes will sell for $15 complete and are offered matted and framed for $50.

Chickens Indefinite organizes

Become a card carrying part of the Chicken Show tradition with the purchase of your official "Chickens Indefinite" membership. With few apologies to Duck Unlimited and Pheasants Forever organizations, the Wayne Chicken Show committee last year.

"Chickens Indefinite is dedicated to the preservation of chicken habitat and the reasonable control of roadkill." Annual banquets are planned but none have yet been held.

At the banquet the committee intends to offerdoorprizes including signed and numbered chicken art prints, a 10-gauge chicken hook, fox and weasel traps and complementary memberships in C.A.D. (Chickens Against Drivers).

The Chicken Show Committee established the new organization as a means to welcome larger groups into the coop. Membership dues are $3 plus a pledge not to be chicken about recruiting new members. All new members must also (maybe) demonstrate their willingness to "cluck like a chicken."

Memberships may be purchased at the Coop in Bressler Park during the Chicken Show, or may be ordered by writing to "Chickens Indefinite, PO Box 262, Wayne, NE 68787.

All funds raised by Chickens Indefinite are used to support the Chicken Show.
