

Price tag on school solution is $9 million

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Members of the Wayne Community Schools Facility Study Committee favor construction of a new $9 million middle school building and high school addition and will be recommending that the school board proceed with a bond issue vote on the project.

The 25-member committee of community leaders, parents and educators has met for several months to study the building situation and consider recommendations to the board for correcting problems identified by the study.

The most pressing problem is the condition of the Wayne Middle School.

"EDUCATIONALLY, your building is a mess," Architect Jim Dyck told members of the committee Monday night. He said he couldn't recommend remodeling the old facility because at the over $8 million estimated to bring the 80 year old building up to modern standards it would be more cost effective to build a whole new facility.

He said school districts which spend money to remodel old buildings almost invariably "kick themselves" later. He said problems which make the Middle School an unlikely candidate for refurbishing are lack of adequate space to expand, the structural condition of the building and the cost of interior demolition before new construction could commence.

be the concern about where to hold classes while construction was underway.

The proposal accepted by the committee almost unanimously was to build a new middle school classroom facility between the existing high school and elementary school with a shared facilities area between the high school and middle school.

Included in the plans which were estimated to cost approximately $9 million, would be a new 750 seat auditorium/theater, a new gymnasium, giving the complex four full basketball courts for physical education and sports practice, new science and music space for the high school, new media centers for both buildings, shared dining and administrative spaces as well as shared mechanical facilities.

BY SHARING space between the two buildings to address the facility needs of both, the district would save several million dollars from the cost of building a whole new building and remodeling another, said Dyck.

One of the options eliminated by the committee was a plan to build a whole new high school building and remodel the existing high school as the Middle School. This option was estimated by Dyck to cost $14.6 million.

He said construction of the high school facilities would be shared by the affiliated districts which would broaden the tax base, but he, the school administrators and the committee agreed that the plan would

Fund drive already at $55,000

More than $55,000 has already been pledged in the drive to raise more than half a million dollars as the private match toward construction of a new library and senior citizen center facility.

In addition, several large gifts are in the decision stage and should materialize within the next couple weeks, according to Pat Gross who is helping spearhead the drive as chairman of the Library Board;

"Some exciting things are happening here," he said.

An update on the special gifts campaign will be given at a meeting tonight at 7:30 at the Senior Citizen Center. Solicitors for the business/professional and community portions of the drive have begun their work. In addition applications are being sent to several foundations which may want to help the Wayne effort.

The Wayne Library Board and Senior Citizen Center have joined forces to raise the funds to match what they hope will be sales tax revenues to pay for the planned $1.2 million facility. Both facilities where they now exist have serious accessibility and space problems, said Gross. He said the need for the shared facility in Wayne is acute.

The library board and senior citizens board have purchased options on property at 5th and Pearl and according to Gross, will be making commitments to proceed with the project regardless of the decision by voters.

The Wayne Community lost a leading citizen Friday with the death of Dr. Robert Benthack, long-time physician and community supporter.

Benthack died at the University Hospital in Omaha after an extended illness. He was 69. Born on May 23, 1924 in Omaha, he is survived by his wife, Mary, of Wayne, and parents, Dr. Walter and Phebe Benthack also of Wayne.

He entered the practice of medicine in 1949 with his father. He graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in 1947. He served in the Army from 1952 to 1954.

For many years Robert and his father operated the Benthack Hospital, which is now Wayne City Hall. It was vacated as a medical facility after construction of Providence Medical Center in 1975.

Dr. Benthack was honored by the community in recent years for his involvement in many community service projects and contributions.

He also served for 10 and a half years on the Wayne State College Foundation board of trustees. He served as college physician for 30 years.

He was preceded in death by his first wife and one sister.

Speech team continues winning ways

Members of the Wayne High School speech team returned from the state tournament with a third place finish and three individual state champions. The event was held Friday on the UNL campus in Lincoln.

Titles were won by Claire Rasmussen, a senior, in extemporaneous speaking and the team of Matt Chapman, junior and Kerry McCue, senior, in duet acting.

No team in the state competition had more than two state champion events and all six members of the Wayne team to qualify for the state tournament earned placings. Besides the titles, points toward the Wayne total of 92 were scored by Robb Heier, a junior, with a fifth place finish in entertainment; Tim Heinemann, a junior, with a sixth place in humorous prose and Liz Lindau, a freshman, with a seventh place finish in poetry reading. Additional points were scored by Chapman who also placed third in serious prose and by Miss Rasmussen who placed fourth in persuasive speech.

Wayne finished behind Gretna, which won the state title with 112 points, and Raymond-Central, which finished with 96 points. Auburn and Plattsmouth were other team finishers with 66 and 58 points respectively.

The team is coached by Lauren Walton, who praised the assistance of high school drama teacher Ted Blenderman who provided support and guidance throughout the season, she said.

"It is a privilege to work with such a talented group," said Mrs. Walton. She said she will miss the seniors from this year's team but their departure will still mean the Wayne team will have four returning state finalists next year.

In addition, Mrs. Walton said she has a great group of underclassmen this year who show great promise for the future.

not be a fair approach to the problem. Construction of the middle school will be borne by taxpayers of the Wayne-Carroll School District alone.

ANY VOTE to be held on a bond issue would have to be approved by both city and affiliated school district voters however, since the rural affiliated voters would share in the cost of constructing the high school portion of the planned new construction.

Based on current valuations and assessments, raising $10 million from property taxes would require a levy increase of approximately 40 cents per $100 of property valuation. That would mean a tax increase of approximately $200 per year on property with a $50,000 assessed valuation.

Dyck said the next step is to take the committee's findings to the school board to get further direction. Still to be decided is what to do with the Carroll Facility. The architectural firm has not completed cost estimates for the options open to correct problems there, however, several members of the committee Monday said the Carroll building needs should be included as part of any bond issue vote.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS discussed the possible impact of the Wayne City Sales Tax vote to fund a new library/senior center building and other capital projects on a proposed school bond election which would be anticipated in the fall.

Dyck said he has been amazed at what voters have been approving in the state. He cited the recent $17.9 million bond issue in Plattsmouth, "a district with less valuation than yours. There's no way on God's green Earth that that bond issue should pass, but it did." He said it would be hard to predict what voters in Wayne would do, citing along with the Plattsmouth vote, several bonds issue which have failed recently.

Lincoln Architect Jim Dyck with the firm of Architectural Partnerships shows members of the Wayne Community Schools Facility Studies Committee a conceptual model of the proposed site for the new Wayne Middle School and addition to the High School.

"Farmers Home Administration has funds available for one-percent home-repair loans to qualified homeowners," stated Stan Foster, State Director for Nebraska FmHA. Foster said that qualified homeowners can receive up to $15,000 for home repair under FmHA's Section 504 loan program, designed to assist eligible, very-low-income homeowners improve and modernize their homes.

Foster explained that FmHA has not promoted the home-repair program in the past due to the limited funding received, however, that changed this year when the Agency received a significant increase in funding for the program.

Assistance is limited to homeowners in rural areas. In Nebraska, rural area is generally defined as any community of 20,000 population and less, but does include Norfolk and the Scottsbluff-Gering-Territory area. Repayments on the loans cannot exceed 20 years, and homeowners must provide adequate security to justify the loan.

"Personally," Foster said, "I believe this is an excellent program to assist qualified homeowners in making repairs to their homes which they may have been putting off for a number of years." More information on this program, and application forms, can be obtained from any local FmHA office. The location and telephone number of the nearest FmHA office can be obtained from your local telephone book or by calling the FmHA State Office in Lincoln at 437-5557.

Outcome based 'No one sure what it means'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Members of the Nebraska Schools Accountability Commission are pretty sure they know what they're doing: drawing up a way to measure and report how successful the state's public schools are in educating children.

But don't ask them how it will be done. Not yet. And don't ask about outcome-based education, which has sparked debate over academic standards across the state and in the Legislature.

"I don't think anybody knows what it means," said commission member Michael McCarthy, a North Platte attorney and former school board member. "To the extent you're testing what kids know, you are testing some sort of outcome. Now to what extent and how you test it ..."

The 11-member commission, formed in 1992, is to come up with a report on a possible state education evaluation system by September 1996. The panel is scheduled to meet Wednesday in Omaha to discuss a draft plan.

But commission members admit there's a lot to be done and they worry that debate over outcome-based education will slow their work.

Outcome-based education focuses on improving student achievement by measuring what a student gets out of his or her learning, rather than See OUTCOMES, Page 11A penses, and directing the UND summer basketball camps and coaches' clinics.

McDermott has also been the academic coordinator for all basketball student-athletes, and a classroom instructor of physical education skill development and theory classes.

Before being hired at North Dakota, McDermott spent one year as a Player/Coach in Wetzikon, Switzerland. Previous to that he was a team captain and two-time MVP at the University of Northern Iowa. A four-year starter with the Panthers, McDermott was a second team All-AMCU in 1986-87 and was a pre-season All-America Honorable Mention candidate in 1987-88.

McDermott graduated from the Northern Iowa in 1988 with a bachelor's degree in history and a minor in coaching. He also recently completed a master's degree in Sports Management from the U.S. Sports Academy.

Born November 25, 1964, the 6-8, 230 pound new head coach of the Wildcats is married to the former Theresa Adams. The couple have two children; Nicolas, 4 and Douglas, 2.

Intern scholars picked

Swanson Russell Associates (SRA), a Nebraska-based marketing communications firm, recently awarded scholarships to three student interns.

Mick Sibel, SRA chief operating officer, said SRA's scholarship program promotes education in the field of marketing communications. Along with the scholarship, each intern will receive on-the-job experience at the firm during the spring semester.

"Our internship program is designed to provide college students with experience they can't receive in the classroom," Sibel said. "The program helps students develop the skills necessary to land their first jobs."

The intern scholarship winners are:

- Lisa Ewing, Wayne, junior business administration major, University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UN-L), interning in the public relations department, $500 scholarship winner.

- Kristi Bornemeier, Elmwood, sophomore business and sociology major, Nebraska Wesleyan University, interning in the account service department, $300 scholarship winner.

- Kerry Stevens, Omaha, a senior advertising major, UN-L, interning in the media department, $500 scholarship winner.

SRA is a full-service marketing communications firm with more than 70 employees. In addition to offices in Lincoln and Omaha, SRA has a subsidiary office for research and strategic planning in Gainesville, Fla.

Another black eye

Getting one black eye after another tends to reduce your confidence factor.

That's what the Juvenile Detention Center in Wayne must be experiencing these days as it tries to overcome the latest confidence shaker, the escape of four detainees, two of which were recaptured after being involved in violent crimes and two of which have yet to be heard from.

As long as laws say children who commit violence like adults must be treated like children we are sitting on a powder keg right here in Wayne America.

When hardened adult criminals were housed in the county jail that now serves as a juvenile detention center there were never any escapes.

Since the facility has been converted to house what many would think are less dangerous juvenile offenders, we have seen one rabbit after another run from justice. If the youngster are going to act like adult criminals we believe they should be treated like adult criminals. They should be locked in cells, not allowed to run loose grabbing chairs, fire extinguishers and overpowering outnumbered staff members at will.

The prime reason for having a justice system is to protect the public by putting offenders away until they have either had time to rehabilitate or learn the consequences of their wrongdoing and perhaps think twice about doing it again.

As it stands now, the Juvenile Detention Center in Wayne is not living up to its prime mission, that of protecting the public from offenders. Part of the reason for the sieve-like appearance of the facility is the building design itself and the other part is the "just kids" approach we take to these offenders.

Steps should not only be taken to correct the building needs of the center but also the rules about handling and treatment of these juvenile offenders, who have proven time again you don't have to be an adult to pull a trigger.

For the facilities

Concern was expressed at the Wayne Community Schools Facility Study Committee meeting Monday night that the Wayne City Sales Tax vote in May might hurt the chances for passage of a school building bond issue this fall.

The school bond issue will be needed to correct a long standing building problem. An 80 year old woefully insufficient building is used to house and educate our most valuable commodity, our young people. The Wayne Middle School building should have been replaced or upgraded long ago.

Now, to correct the problem, the community is going to have to pay a little more. We got by for years paying too little for our educational infrastructure and it simply means we are going to have to pay a little extra for a few years trying to catch up. The same reasoning applies to much needed city capital projects outlined in the sales tax vote.

We don't see the school and city issues as mutually exclusive.

As a community we were prudent during the difficult financial times of the 80s and early 90s, not undertaking any new tax burden projects. Now, as times have improved we must play catch up.

The school we see as the top priority, but it doesn't much outdistance the need for a new senior citizen center and public library as well as refurbishing or replacing the city auditorium.

We think the community can afford these improvements. We know the community can see the need for them and will we vote accordingly both in May and November.

Pitfalls of term limits

Dear Editor:

Thank you to the Wayne community and Wayne State College for hosting the legislative forum last Monday morning. These annual forums are an excellent opportunity for area voters to get to meet their state senators and to become aware of legislation being considered.

I was particularly pleased to see that the Wakefield schools sent some of their students. This was a valuable experience for these young people to discover that our legislators are indeed interested in the views and concerns of their constituents. The design of our unicameral system makes our legislators far more accessible to the voters than is the case in most other states.

I regret that when the issue came before our voters two years ago, that more of our elected officials were not as open and frank about the pitfalls of term limits, as both Senator Schellpeper and Senator Day were at Monday's meeting.

'March Madness' hits Unicameral

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — It's crunch time bayyyyybeeeeee.

Just like in the NCAA college basketball tournament, state legislators are dribbling toward a dramatic finish of a topsy-turvy season.

And just like some NCAA teams (Nebraska for one) our state senators seem to be shooting the ball without thinking first.

Take, for instance, last week's work on the state budget. Some folks might call their work downright "offensive."

First, some background.

1994 was supposed to be a quiet, hold-the-line-on-spending kind of session. After all, a budget shortfall of more than $80 million is expected next year because of rising Medicaid costs. So this year, senators were expected to stand pat and prepare for tax hikes and budget cuts next year.

Wrong-o basketball breath.

Last week, state senators loaded up the mid-year budget bill. First, they tacked on an extra $8 million for long-promised increases in teacher salaries.

Then, the spending train started chugging again. A bill to add two new judges for courts in Lincoln and Omaha grew to a measure adding five new judges and providing two, 3-percent salary increases for all the black robes. It would cost $1.25 million.

Another $8 million in new spending was then tacked on to try to eliminate a waiting list for services provided to handicapped and mentally retarded citizens.

Why does this happen? Don't senators have any restraint? Can't they just pass up the 3-pointer and shoot an easy lay-up instead?

In answer to the first two questions (Danny Nee will have to answer the third): 1. It's an election year; 2. Yes, they have some restraint, but it's hard to turn down the teachers, judges and handicapped in, you guessed it, an election year.

Teachers, after all, spend the most money of any lobbying group on campaigns, which comes in handy if you want to be re-elected. Judges are no wimpy lobby either, and the funds for the handicapped (known as the developmentally disabled on the bill in question) have been delayed for years and years.

By the end of the week, some senators were saying a tax increase might be necessary to afford the new spending. Others said the elimination of the $7 million fertilizer tax might be jeopardized.

Gov. Nelson played his cards close to his vest, though he made it clear if he had to balance the budget, senators might not like his vetoes.

Like a basketball team falling behind, state senators called a timeout, delaying consideration of the budget bill again until this week.

We'll find out then if the game is election-year politics or hold-the-line on spending.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Is there intelligent life anywhere?

Who else, or what else, is out there in the darkness?

Even as children, we feared the dark room, closet or out-of-doors. A clever current TV commercial has a child asking his father, "Would you look under the bed?"

During a sunny day on Earth, the darkness commences several hundred miles up. Outer space is dark except for pinpoints of starlight. What's out there in the dark? Is it alive?

Astronauts have flown in space and walked on the moon. The moon is quite near the Earth, about 250,000 miles, in space terms. What were scientists looking for in retrieving moon rocks? Life! They were looking for evidence of life in outer space in the form of microfossils.

Eighteen years ago Viking I landed on Mars. Why? NASA was looking for signs of life in the form of microorganisms.

And why does NASA have the repaired Hubble Space Telescope (doing a fantastic job) looking, looking, looking? Every earthly day and night Hubble's piercing eye examines space, watching, watching, watching. Astrophysicists theorize that somewhere in the estimated one-thousand-million galaxies there is life.

While you're doing what you do every day, SETI (Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence) is actively searching and listening for outer space signals: signs of life. NASA turned on an improved SETI program October 12, 1992 beginning with dish-shaped antennas in the Mojave Desert. A giant antenna at Arecibo in Puerto Rico and others in Russia and France, also monitor radio frequencies for celestial signs of intelligence out there in the dark.

Since 1960, researchers have conducted more than 50 various searches for alien radio signals. Agreement has already been made that should such a signal be verified and deciphered, NASA will not send a response without international consultation.

The META radio telescope in Harvard, Mass. is 84 feet in diameter. Operators use it daily to listen, listen, listen hoping to hear something coming out of the interstellar darkness.

Meanwhile, Biblical scholars are analyzing Jesus' words in Matthew 24:31: "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Does this indicate some elect live elsewhere other than on Earth?

While moral darkness devours increasing numbers of earthlings, perhaps the immediate question should be whether or not there is intelligent life on Earth?

Proving you can't beat the odds

I read with skepticism the statistic a couple of years ago that claimed within a few years every person in America would personally know someone who died of AIDS.

Not me, I scoffed. I don't travel in those circles. I don't associate with homosexuals or intravenous drug users and I've only known one hemophiliac in my time. It'll never happen to one of my friends, I thought, figuring my chances of defying the statistical odds were pretty good. But, like most people who think they can defy the odds, I have been proved wrong. I have a friend who died of AIDS.

We were never close and we never stayed in touch, but I worked on the student newspaper at the University of Oregon with Randy Shilts. He died last month in San Francisco of AIDS complications. He was 42.

Shilts will be remembered as the best selling author of the book And the Band Played On, which accused government officials and scientists of responding too slowly to the AIDS epidemic. A movie based on the book was televised nationally last night. I missed it.

I also missed reading the book when it was published in 1987. While many will remember Randy as an ardent gay rights crusader I prefer to remember him as an enthusiastic and talented writer with a quick sense of humor who made some mistakes about the way he chose to live.

When we worked together, I was never too comfortable around Randy. There was talk around the newspaper staff that he "wasn't like" the rest of us. At first, I thought that was just cruel and jealous talk about a guy who happened to be a bit more talented but just acted a bit more effeminate than the rest of us. I didn't believe he could really be "one of those" guys which my dad, my older brother, my minister and my friends had described and encouraged avoidance of in the most vile terminology.

I'm convinced we learn bigotry. We aren't born that way. It is something we pick up along the way from parents, siblings, role models and friends. I couldn't help the attitudes I had (and have) about Randy's choice of lifestyle any more than most homosexuals claim they can help their sexual preferences.

Mann Overboard

By Les Mann

I'm also convinced that homosexuals have as much ability to change their lifestyles as I do to change my attitude about them. I'm working to be less homophobic. I know I should hate the act not the actor. But I will never be convinced that homosexuals should be granted any more "rights" than the rest of us enjoy.

They shouldn't have the right to have their deadly lifestyle taught as a viable alternative in our schools. They shouldn't be allowed to coerce young people into accepting their behavior.

I can't share the view of gay rights advocates and I guess I'm supposed to be sorry about that, but I'm not.

I remember when Randy Shilts removed any doubt about his personal choices while he was in college. He became president of the university's Gay People's Alliance and was the first avowed homosexual to run for student government at the school. I was certain in my puritanical mind that he must be doing it as a joke and a ploy for more recognition. He couldn't be serious, could he?

But from that time on, years before the discovery of the AIDS virus, I avoided Randy like the plague. I told myself it was because of philosophical differences on the ethics of journalism. I didn't think so-called objective journalists should be card-carrying vocal advocates of a particular social or political group.

I was going to be a journalist with an open mind, I said, as I con. inued to loath and despise the lifestyle he chose. Maybe today there is less loathing of the individuals involved if not the lifestyle they choose.

I'm working on it. I'm genuinely sorry Randy died. He was talented and had a lot to offer the world as a writer.

But I still believe his death was a consequence of the lifestyle he chose. Maybe he thought, like so many people do on this and other of life's choices, that he could beat the odds.

UNL Extension hosting grant-writing workshop

A satellite workshop entitled "Getting Grants for Children, Youth and Families" is scheduled to be viewed at Northeast Research and Extension Center, according to Lynda Cruickshank, Extension Educator.

The video workshop is geared toward anyone interested in the well-being of children, youth and families, including community coalition members, family preservation teams, Family Community Leadership program participants, community leaders, service club members, youth, school administrators, United Way coalitions, agency representatives and parents.

The two-part videoconference will be broadcast May 4 and 18 from 1 to 5 p.m.

The conference is coordinated by KIDS' TEAM directors Kathleen Lodi, Georgia Stevens and Pat Steffens of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension; and Audrie Berman of Lincoln, grant writer and KIDS' TEAM project coordinator.

KIDS' TEAM is a program to develop broad-based community coalitions which will identify and address the factors which place local youths and families at risk.

The video workshop covers:

- Gaining experience with the grant writing process;
- Learning about funding sources;
- Hearing from successfully funded community coalitions;
- Interaction with state agency representatives; and
- Getting feedback on the grant proposal written during the workshop.

The format includes writing and small group discussion, interacting with other workshop participants, and talking with presenters and grantors. A trained facilitator will host each workshop site, said the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources extension educator.

The no-cost workshop is funded in part by a Youth-At-Risk grant within Cooperative Extension, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Pre-registration is required by April 15 and may be completed by calling the Wayne County Extension office at 375-3310; or Lodi at 472-9012.

Immanuel Ladies have lesson on 'Work - Blessing or Curse'

Ten members of the Immanuel Lutheran Ladies Aid met on March 17 at 2 p.m. Pastor Camer led the Bible study from the Women's Quarterly, entitled "Work — Blessing or Curse."

Mrs. Lloyd Roeber presided over the business meeting. The group is invited to the Grace Evening Circle guest night on April 12 at 7 p.m.

Plans were finalized for the LWML Zone Christian Growth Workshop scheduled for April 19 at Immanuel of Wakefield, with registration beginning at 9 a.m. The theme is "What Are You Reaching For?" and Bible studies will be led by the pastors.

It was voted on to pay for the new storm window on the stained glass window the Ladies Aid purchased many years ago.

Spring church cleaning by the congregation is scheduled for April 12 at 4 p.m.

The birthday of Mrs. Lloyd Roeber and the anniversary of Arnold and Alice Roeber were honored. Hostesses were Mrs. Lloyd Roeber and Neva Echtenkamp.

If anyone is interested, information about a trip to tour Bethesda will be posted on the upstairs bulletin board.

April committees are Nila Schuttler and Nell Nelson, serving; Bonnie Nelson and Bernice Rewinkel, visiting and Wayne Care Centre; and Barbara Holdorf, Ann Ruwe, Karlene Meyer and Alta Meyer, cleaning and communion ware.

The next meeting is scheduled for April 21 at 2 p.m.

Eagles Auxiliary met on March 21

Wayne Eagles Auxiliary 3757 held their meeting on March 21 at 8 p.m. Doris Gilliland, president, opened the meeting with roll call. Fourteen members were present. The secretary read minutes of the previous meeting.

Communications were read by the secretary. An angel was presented to the delinquent chairman, being the lowest in our district. Little angels were given to the proposers of new members. A new member, Heather Berg, was initiated.

A thank you was read from the Senior Center for the daffodils which the Auxiliary purchased for them.

District meeting will be held April 10 in Central City. A pool tournament, lunch and meetings will be held.

Easter fun night will be held April 8, starting at 7 p.m. Everyone is to bring a salad and a boiled egg, plain or decorated.

Serving March 21 was Brenda Test and Vicky Skokan. Serving next time is Frances Bak and Cathy Varley.

Wayne Eagles Auxiliary 3757 is again offering a scholarship to a Wayne High senior girl who plans to attend a college this fall. The applicant should contact guidance counselor Terry Munson or auxiliary president Doris Gilliland. Deadline for application is April 29.

How do we deal with materialism?

QUESTION: My wife and I disagree strongly about the role of materialism in our children's lives. She feels we should give them toys and games that we never had as kids. At Christmastime, we stack gifts knee-deep around the tree. I feel this is a mistake, even if we could afford to do what we are doing. What is your view on materialism in the life of a child?

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

DR. DOBSON: I also have concerns about giving kids too many things, which often reflects our inability to say "no" to them.

The child's lust for toys is carefully generated through millions of dollars spent on TV advertising by toy manufacturers. Their commercials are skillfully made so that the toys look like full-sized copies of their real counterparts. The little buyer sits open-mouthed in utter fascination. Five minutes later, he begins a campaign that will eventually cost his dad $14.95 plus batteries and tax.

Suppose the parents are courageous enough to resist the child's urging. He is not blocked. Grandparents are notoriously easy to "con."

Some would ask, "Why not? Why shouldn't we let our children enjoy the fruits of our good times?" I would not deny a child a reasonable quantity of things he craves. But many American children are inundated with excesses that work toward their detriment.

It has been said that prosperity offers a greater test of character than does adversity, and I'm inclined to agree. There are few conditions that inhibit a sense of appreciation more than for a child to feel he is entitled to whatever he wants, whenever he wants it.

It is enlightening to watch as a child tears open stacks of presents at his birthday party or perhaps at Christmas-time. One after another, the expensive contents are tossed aside with little more than a glance.

The child's mother is made uneasy by this lack of enthusiasm and appreciation, so she says, "Oh, Marvin! Look what it is! A little tape recorder! What do you say to Grandmother? Give Grandmother a big hug. Did you hear me, Marvin? Go give Grams a big hug and kiss."

Although it sounds paradoxical, you actually cheat a child out of pleasure when you give him too much.

Pleasure occurs when an intense need is satisfied. If there is no need, there is no pleasure. A glass of water is worth more than gold to a man dying of thirst. The analogy to children should be obvious. If you never allow a child to want something, he never enjoys the pleasure of receiving it.

If you buy him a tricycle before he can walk, and a bicycle before he can ride it, a car before he can drive and a diamond ring before he knows the value of money, he accepts these gifts with little pleasure and less appreciation.

How unfortunate that such a child never had the chance to long for something, dreaming about it at night and plotting for it by day. He might have gotten desperate enough to work for it. The same possession that brought a yawn could have been a trophy and a treasure.

I suggest that you and your wife allow your child the thrill of temporary deprivation. It's more fun and much less expensive.

QUESTION: What is the source of self-esteem itself?

DR. DOBSON: Feelings of self-worth and acceptance, which provide the cornerstone of a healthy personality, can be obtained from only one source. It cannot be bought or manufactured.

Self-esteem is generated only by what we see reflected about ourselves in the eyes of other people. In other words, evidence of our worthiness must be generated outside of ourselves. It is only when others respect us that we respect ourselves. It is only when others love us that we love ourselves. It is only when others find us pleasant and desirable and worthy that we come to terms with our own egos.

The vast majority of us are dependent on our associates for emotional sustenance each day. What does this say, then, about those who exist in a state of perpetual isolation year after year? Such people are virtually certain to experience feelings of worthlessness, accompanied by deep depression and despair.

State law requires children to be immunized before entering school

Nebraska state law requires that all students have immunizations against the following diseases — diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, polio, measles, mumps and rubella. This law requires that at least three DTP, three oral polio and one MMR immunization are given before entering school.

These are minimum requirements — boosters are recommended, but not required for school attendance at this time. This law also requires that the dates of these immunizations are given to the school. In the past, this law allowed parents to sign a "Refusal to Immunize" form exempting them from these requirements.

Many times parents chose to sign this form even though their child was immunized as a small child, but the dates of these immunizations were not readily available.

A new law to be enacted before next school year eliminates this parental refusal to immunize — every child must be minimally immunized and the school must be provided with the dates of these immunizations.

The only exemptions to providing immunizations for every child will be a written statement from a doctor stating one or more of these immunizations would be injurious to the child's health or a written statement stating objection to immunizations for religious beliefs.

This new law requires that the school have the dates of each child's immunizations on the first day of school next August. All students not in compliance with this law will not be allowed by law to attend school until the minimum requirements are met.

If a child has never received the minimum requirements listed above, parents should use the next few months to complete them before next school year and send the dates of immunizations to the school. If a child has been immunized in the past, obtain the dates and send them to the school.

Parents of children presently enrolled, and not meeting the requirements listed above, must also comply. School health personnel who will monitor compliance to the new law, may be contacted at Wayne High School, 375-3150.

The Golden Years

How motivated are people over age 50 to do what it takes to maintain good health and physical condition? The 3,000 people who responded to questions in a recent survey were divided into four categories according to their attitudes toward health-related subjects. Only 40 percent were ranked in the top group, more likely than the others to seek good-health information and to exercise and eat healthy diets. While they don't differ much in education or income from others in the survey, people in the top group on average were older and worked at or had retired from professional, technical or clerical jobs.

Egon Ottinger started work at 16 as a clerk in a marine insurance company in New York. When he retired as company president, he moved upstate to a stone cottage deep in the woods. He lived frugally and at 93 was still splitting his own firewood. When he died last year, neighbors were surprised to learn he had left $20 million. Ottinger and his wife, who died 10 years earlier, had no children. He left much of his fortune to a library, a hospital, a nature preserve and charities.

Win streak reaches five for Wayne State baseball team

WSC CATCHER Cory Reeder throws a Northern State runner out at first after a sacrifice bunt during action Saturday at Hank Overin Field in Wayne.

WSC COACH John Manganaro gives Wildcat pitcher Brian Stockwell some tips and it worked as Stockwell pitched a four-hit shutout.

By Kevin Peterson

After suffering through their longest losing streak of the season, the Wayne State baseball team has turned things around and are now amidst their longest winning streak of the season.

Last Thursday's double-header sweep of Midland College in Fremont snapped a six-game losing streak for John Manganaro's squad and the 'Cats have followed those two victories up with a double sweep of Northern State on Saturday and Southwest State of Marshall, Minn., Sunday in Wayne at Hank Overin Field.

In game one Saturday the 'Cats had to come from behind to win in extra innings, 8-7. WSC trailed Northern State, 7-3 heading to the bottom of the seventh inning but scored four in the inning to force the issue into eight innings where the host team scored one run to claim the victory.

The seventh inning saw Jon Small and Raul Urias hit back-to-back singles with one out. Chad Cerveny and Jeff Schneider then drew walks which scored Small.

Cory Reeder stepped to the plate and with bases loaded and two out the senior catcher blasted a bases clearing double to tie the game. In the eighth inning Chris Loofoe hit a one-out single and proceeded to steal second. Urias drew a base on balls with two out and Chad Cerveny laced an rbi single to score Loofoe for the win.

WSC finished with eight runs on 11 hits and an error while Northern State had seven runs on 11 hits and one error. Tim Fancher earned the victory from the mound in relief of Brian Bellinghausen who went the first five innings.

Schneider finished with a double and a single while Cerveny, Loofoe and Small each had two singles. Reeder and Urias each doubled and Tim McDermott singled.

In the second game WSC won a pitcher's dual as Brian Stockwell pitched a complete game shutout with the 'Cats winning, 2-0. Stockwell scattered four hits and struck out seven and he didn't walk a batter.

WSC had two runs on three hits and no errors. Both runs came in the bottom of the sixth inning with two outs. Raul Urias singled while Chad Cerveny and Jeff Schneider drew walks to load the bases. Tim McDermott belted the game winning hit with a long double that scored Urias and Cerveny.

ON SUNDAY the 'Cats belted Southwest State, 16-5 as Jon Janssen earned the victory from the mound after pitching the first four innings and striking out six. Andy VonDollen came in to relieve Janssen and earned the save.

WSC finished with 16 runs on 11 hits and one error while Southwest State had five runs on six hits and one error. Jeff Schneider paced the 'Cats offensive attack with a home run, double and single. Schneider set the tone for the blowout with a second inning grand slam homer.

Jon Small doubled and singled while Raul Urias and Tim McDermott laced a pair of singles each. Chris Loofoe and Darin Gregory closed out the hitting with one base hit each.

WSC will host Morningside in double-header action, Tuesday at Hank Overin Field. Game time is slated for 1 p.m.

RAUL URIAS slides safely back to first base during the sixth inning of the 'Cats 2-0 win over Northern State.

Outcomes

relying on what has been presented to students in the classroom as a measurement.

"What outcomes means to me is that every teacher needs to look at the critical knowledge areas and include application or performance components," said Doug Christensen, deputy commissioner of the state Education Department.

Christensen spoke on the subject in Wayne last fall. Tests and assignments remain in outcome-based education plans, but are included with teacher observations, he said. Some learning could be a culmination of work by a student.

For example, a junior high or high school student might be assigned to research a community problem and come up with solutions. The student would make a presentation on the research to a city council or county board.

"In doing a project like that, you get many skills -- writing, speaking, research, many others," Christensen said. But critics say the technique weakens traditional academic learning and tries to measure students' attitudes or values.

Sen. Kate Witek of Omaha has called outcome-based education a "radical, wholesale change that redefines the entire structure of our school system."

Two bills (LB998 and LB999) sponsored by Mrs. Witek would prohibit the state Board of Education from requiring outcome-based education and would dissolve the accountability commission. The bills remain before the Legislature's Education Committee.

The Rev. Lou Sheldon, founder of the Traditional Values Coalition, told an Omaha audience last week that outcome-based education will include information about abortion and homosexual issues and condom distribution.

Not necessarily, Christensen said. Many new education issues that disturb some critics -- multicultural education, health clinics in schools, gay issues in curricula and nonacademic guidance for students -- are mistakenly blamed on outcome-based education, he said. "These things were happening anyway," Christensen said. Christensen said there were a lot of options available.

"Should the panel set up state education standards or outline general areas and let schools come up with their own standards?" he asked. "Or should they set up state guidelines let schools meet them on their own?"

Commission members apparently will be working for some time on a recommended evaluation system. "We've been at it over a year, and we've spent a lot of time getting up to speed on what we're supposed to be doing," McCarthy said.

Patients can often save money on prescription medications by selecting an appropriate quantity. When you are starting a new medication for high blood pressure, diabetes, or other "chronic" health problems, it may be wise to begin with a one week or ten day supply. If you find that the medication is not tolerated well or that the dosage needs to be adjusted, then your money will not be lost on a large bottle of medication that you will not be able to use. Discuss using a starter quantity with your pharmacist or physician.

From the Desk of the Superintendent

It appears that the weather has made a turn for spring — hopefully, we won't have to be listening to the radio at 6:00 a.m. to see if there is school — anymore this year. With the wonderful spring weather, the children wouldn't want to have a day off of school anyway — right? It is nice to have warmer weather, we all certainly needed it.

Every year, the Department of Education in Washington, D.C. sends to all K-12 public schools a report entitled "The Condition of Education." In years past, our district has participated in a battery of testing where the results are used to help compile the comparative statistics in this publication, so our district has somewhat of a vested interest in the report. It is interesting to compare these department of education reports from year to year especially where they attempt to make predictions indicating future trends in education.

Some of the comparative statistics are rather interesting and selected items will be quickly shared with you for your own use.

- In recent years, interest in private schools as an alternative to public schools seemed to increase according to the news media, but according to the U.S. Department of Education, public school enrollment in 1983 was 39,252,000 — in 1993 enrollment increased to 43,454,000, while private school enrollment was 5,715,000 in 1983 and 5,471,000 in 1993.

- It appears that public confidence in K-12 education has increased slightly since 1989, a higher percentage of schools received A or B grades in 1993.

- In 1992, alcohol abuse among high school seniors had decreased from the 1982 levels by 10 percentage points; however, other drugs such as LSD, inhalants and heroin use had increased slightly across the nation.

- Since 1975, the average SAT scores in math proficiency have been steadily increasing with the national average being 471 in 1975 and 478 in 1993. Nebraska's SAT math score average was 546 in 1983 and 544 in 1993. According to Dr. Christiansen, Deputy Commissioner of Education in Nebraska, about 10% of our students state-wide take the SAT.

- Since 1975, the average SAT scores in verbal proficiency have declined with the national average score being 432 in 1975 and 424 in 1993. Nebraska's SAT verbal score average was 494 in 1983 and 479 in 1993. The North Central Region which includes the states of Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri and Kentucky have the highest SAT score averages when compared to the other regions in America.

- Enrollment projections for public schools across America indicate a considerable increase in students K-12 in the next 10 years — grades K-8 should increase approximately 13 percent and grades 9-12 should increase by over 22 percent. This is quite a change in enrollment figures when compared to 1983 to 1993 when student populations in K-12 were down significantly from the previous decade.

Locally, Wayne's school enrollment has been on the increase by gaining 125 students since 1987 and with the building projects going on this summer in the community, the school will eventually again see an increase in student numbers.

Achievement Testing

CTBS tests will be given during the week of April 1-15. It is important for the students to have a good night's sleep and a balanced breakfast to help them do well in the tests. If you know that your child will be gone during that week, please contact the home room teacher.

Kindergarten Round-up

Kindergarten Round-up will be held in Carroll on Wednesday, April 6 from 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Wayne will have Round-up on Friday, April 8. The schedule for Wayne is as follows: students whose last names begin with A-L, register at 9 a.m.; students whose last names begin with M-Z, register at 1 p.m. Parents are asked to attend the Round-up with their child. If these times do not fit your schedule, please call the school office.

Parents are required by law to show proof of birth before their child may attend school. Please bring your child's birth certificate to registration, we will make a copy while you are here. State law also requires a social security number to be on file for each student, please bring this with you too.

Forms will be sent home to parents in advance. An immunization record and physical form must also be completed by state law. The physical can be done by a licensed physician up to six months prior to the start of the school year. The school nurse will be making a presentation during Kindergarten Round-up.

If you have any questions, or have a student of kindergarten age and do not receive a letter, please feel free to call the office, 375-3854.

Grandparent Week

Grandparents are invited to eat with their grandchild during the week of April 25-29. The following schedule will be used: first grade grandparents eat on Monday, second grade grandparents eat on Tuesday, third grade grandparents eat on Thursday, and fourth grade grandparents eat on Friday.

The serving time for each special class will be 11:15 a.m. The price for an adult is $1.90. We ask that you call the school two days prior to the day you will be eating to make your reservation.

Special Education

Recently our staff and parents had an opportunity to hear C. Wilson Anderson present a workshop on "homework and the struggling student." Mr. Anderson received many positive comments from both staff and parents. His presentation was very appropriate as he covered a number of areas that those of us still going to school or have children in school often question ourselves about. I will summarize a number of the key points that Wilson Anderson emphasized in his presentations.

Mr. Anderson believes it is important to clarify the responsibility of parents, teachers and students. Often parents and or the student are confused about who should be doing what, it is important to decide who should be responsible for what tasks. He goes on to clarify the tasks of each individual:

Parents
•Parents should monitor homework, not do it.

•If a child cannot accomplish a homework task, the parent should write a note to that effect, along with a notation of the amount of time spent, and send it along with the unfinished assignment back to the teacher.

•Ask brothers or sisters or other family members to help with homework.

Students
•It is the student's responsibility to write down the assignment in each class and have it approved by the teacher.

•When you don't understand something, you must tell your teacher.

•Use a knapsack packing list each day, and pack things in order.

Establish Structure
Structure is needed so that routines become good habits. Structure is a universal need, and for the struggling student it is critical.

•Purchase a special notebook just for recording daily assignments and progress reports.

•Rewards and penalties for behavior should be predictable and simple.

•Since school can be a very frustrating place for some children, the time immediately after school is usually not best for homework. Each family needs to establish a set time for homework that will not interfere with other family members' activities. Right after supper is a good time for most families.

•Adults, like their children, enjoy time to relax and do other things after a busy or tiring day. Homework time is a good time for adult activity that can be interrupted. Getting homework done needs to be a commitment made by all members of the family.

•A consistent place for study is very important. It should be away from distractions such as the TV. If the student is left to study in isolation, such as in his room, then no monitoring can be done. One good place is the dining room or kitchen table.

•Homework and study materials should be kept in a specific location.

•The amount of time a student spends on homework will vary. A good rule of thumb to follow is: on average a child should spend about 10 minutes on homework assignments for each year they are in school. As an example a sixth grader should spend about 60 minutes per evening doing school work. Example: Sixth grade x 10 minutes = 60 minutes per evening.

C. Wilson Anderson also distributed a packet of information for both parents and teachers that elaborated on many of these ideas. His workshop was designed to foster mutual home-school cooperation and maximize learning for students.

The Importance of Participation in

High School Activities

The American College Testing Service, distributor of the ACT test, completed a study which compared the value of four factors in predicting success in later life: (1) major achievement in extra curricular activities; (2) high grades in school; (3) high grades in college; (4) high scores on the ACT. The only factor to predict success in later life was achievement in "extra-curricular activities."

High school athletes have higher grades and lower dropout rates and attend college more often than non-athletes.

Students who participate in activities average a 3.32 GPA, while non-participants average 2.48. Further, participants miss an average of 4.9 days of school (including .7 for activities) while non-participants miss 10.8 days per year.

95 percent of Fortune 500 executives participated in school athletics (only 47 percent were National Honor Society members).

"High activity" students (those involved in four or more activities) average 3.05 GPA, while "low activity" students average 2.54 GPA.

96 percent of dropouts in 14 school districts in seven regions of the nation were not participating in activities programs.

Middle School

Principal Mr. Metteer

Thanks to the work of the students, parents and Science teachers, we had a very successful Science Fair on March 15. It really is rewarding to see the students do extra work and have such a great response from parents and grandparents to that work. Hopefully, the students are making plans to participate in next year's fair.

The sixth and seventh grade students are beginning to make plans for next year as they are pre-registering for classes. It is a big adjustment for the sixth grade to be involved in selecting classes and preparing for Junior High. Some of them will be accelerating their math program by choosing to take eighth grade or Pre-Algebra classes. Other electives that are available are: Art, Band, Choir, Strings and various sports. Another requirement that is new to them is the physical examination that is needed before they can go out for sports. The best way to take care of the physicals is to come to the physical exam night which is conducted by the local medical personnel at the high school. Watch for the date and time in the paper or on KTCH.

SECTION B

Haven House gives thanks, seeks items

A big thank you needs to be given to the community of Wayne for the tremendous support they have recently given to Haven House, said Vicki Meyer, director.

While staff and volunteers have worked hard to establish a shelter facility which will provide a safe, secure and nurturing environment for survivors of domestic abuse, obstacles were encountered.

It was found that securing household items — such as beds, pillows, mattress pads and food staples — would cost more than expected. Thanks to several area businesses and individuals, some of these obstacles have been overcome.

Pamida and Pac 'N' Save have supplied Haven House with needed food staples such as canned juices and vegetables, soups, flour and sugar.

Restful Knights has generously donated needed pillows and mattress pads. Other individuals have donated beds, bed covers, paper products and toiletries. While other items are still needed for the shelter, the community's generosity has allowed Haven House to open the new facility and provide shelter to several victims fleeing from a dangerous domestic abuse situation.

The shelter is still in need of items such as bed linens (for full and twin size beds, and for cribs), toiletries (toothpaste, deodorant, liquid hand soap and lotion) and kitchen supplies (dish towels and dish soap). If an organization or individual would like to donate any of the above items they can call the Haven House office at 375-4633 to make arrangements.

Once again, Haven House would like the community to know we are very grateful for their support. Without this, it would be difficult to continue to meet the growing needs of the victims (and their children) we serve.

Great Young Authors

First Friday program set

Dr. Robert Zahniser, professor of English and German at Wayne State College, will be the featured speaker at the First Fridays program of area senior citizens on April 1 at the college.

He will present a lecture and video presentation on Nebraska-born comedian Harold Lloyd and his influence on the film industry.

The program, sponsored by Wayne State's Center for Cultural Outreach, will begin at 9 a.m. in the North Dining Room of the college's Student Center. A complimentary continental breakfast will also be served.

A variety of film and musical excerpts will also be shown.

Tours of campus galleries and museums, as well as nature walks may be offered after the program.

First Fridays will be co-hosted by Chris Wilbur, director of alumni affairs at the college. During each of the monthly programs a special senior citizen guest of honor will be recognized.

On country churches

The last Saturday in March has been a bit blustery, but the rain and snow that were forecast didn't materialize. Since Kay is moving from York to Grand Island today, we're grateful for the sunshine.

There have been some definite signs of spring. I spotted the first robins at Ann's on the 5th. There have been several at our house since. In fact, there are reports of albino robins in the area.

There are green shoots through old leaves in flower beds and buds on some trees. Actually, I get nervous when temps hit high 70s in March. It often signals a hot, dry summer.

A Wayne county stock trailer and pickup were spotted in Syracuse last weekend and its occupants were enjoying a meal on the deck.

Manure's being hauled and anhydrous spread. We were behind an anhydrous tank on highway 34 this morning, on our way to Waco for a funeral.

The funeral celebrated the life of Judeen's father, and it was at St. John's, south of Waco. I've written about St. John's before. You can see it from the Interstate. It's approximately 120 years old.

I suppose everyone has a country church somewhere in his or her background. There are still some beautiful ones in Nebraska; a few are brick, many are white frame, like St. John's. Many had schools.

My parents were married in this church; baptized and confirmed there, too. There is a balcony on three sides, an ornate altar and a pulpit that is entered through a door, the way they were in Germany. There's a wonderful pipe organ; I've sung for many weddings here, including my brother's. I can still remember the old organ, requiring a man pumping for sound.

By Pat Meierhenry

Today we sang "For All the Saints" before we crossed the yard to the cemetery. The country churches have their cemeteries right next to them. My grandparents are all buried here, and my Dad and cousin Tim. So we pause to reflect before we adjourn to the school basement for coffee and sandwiches, hugs and fellowship.

Now it's time to observe Palm Sunday and all the traditions of Holy Week. Rituals and tradition, mark life's events for us. They are important antidotes to the stressors that surround us.

As we drove through York County, the Big Farmer asked if I was homesick. "Not anymore," I answered, "but I've been remembering other Easters, filled with new chickens, bunnies, calves and colts." The cycle begins again and I look for baskets for the grandchildren.

As I reflect on the importance of country churches in the development of this country, I'm reminded of a song I've heard several times this past week by Carman. Its title is "America, Again," and it's a moving reminder. We'll be observing Easter in our local country church. May we continue to have the freedom to do so.

On dean's list

Southeast Community College, Milford Campus, is pleased to announce the Dean's List for the winter quarter ending March 17. A grade point average of 3.5 (B+) must be achieved on a 4.0 (A) scale to be so honored.

The students with connections to the Wayne area are Jason Easley, Wakefield, electrical; Aaron Nau, Wayne, automotive; Mark Niemann, Wayne, building construction and Eric Ruhr, Seward, building construction.

A total of 317 students were named to the Dean's List this quarter. The total enrollment for the winter quarter was 941 full-time day students.

Student joins honor society

Phi Kappa Phi honor society chapter at the University of Kansas initiated Chad Frey of Wayne recently as part of 208 new members of the society.

Phi Kappa Phi, an interdisciplinary academic organization established in 1897, is one of the most exclusive national honor societies. Only the top 10 percent of senior classes and graduate students are asked to join.

The KU chapter, established in 1975, includes the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and all the university's schools. The chapter is one of 260 in the United States, Puerto Rico and the Philippines. Frey, a senior, is the son of Carlos and Sherian Frey of Wayne.

Pianists win

Four piano students of Mrs. Sue Powell recently competed in the National Federation of Music Clubs Festival. The festival was held at Briar Cliff College in Sioux City on March 19.

Receiving superiors for their piano solos were Jessica Meyer, Elementary 2, daughter of John and Vicki Meyer; Lisa Mitchell, Primary 3, daughter of Jim and Janice Mitchell; Greg Schardt, Elementary 1 and Tamara Schardt, Primary 1, children of Lowell and Karen Schardt.

In art show

Dialogues is the title of a diverse Masters of Fine Arts Thesis Exhibition that is the culmination of the studies at the University of South Dakota of artist Sheryl Pierce from Macy, formerly from Wayne. She will be showing oil paintings and ceramic sculpture along with works by two other MFA candidates.

The exhibit opened on Sunday, March 27 and runs through April 10 at the main gallery of the Warren M. Lee Center for the Fine Arts, 414 East Clark Street, Vermillion, S.D.

Jean Lutt, Division of Business instructor at Wayne State College, was recently honored by the Nebraska State Business Education Association. The award is presented annually by NSBEA to a college/university business education instructor for his/her "outstanding" achievements and contributions to Business Education in Nebraska.

The award was presented to Lutt at the NSBEA State Convention Awards luncheon held March 19 in Lincoln.

The Wayne Herald/Morning Shopper

114 Main Street • Wayne • 375-2600

The staff and management of the Wayne Herald/Morning Shopper is striving to continue the long-standing tradition of outstanding community service established by the newspaper company over the years.

As one of the leading newspaper companies in the state for its size, the Wayne Herald/Morning Shopper can and should help the community achieve broader recognition and coverage, said Publisher Les Mann.

Fulfilling the role of a socially conscious business was part of the reason the newspaper company switched exclusively to Soy-based inks for printing and began printing on newsprint with recycled fiber-content. Both products are more expensive to use but we believe the benefits outweigh the expense, said Al Pippitt, press foreman.

The newspaper employees, all 22 of them, constantly strive to produce the best newspaper and advertising products and services, which the community has come to expect.

Winning state and national awards for news coverage and community service is satisfying for our staff but no where near as satisfying as a comment from a reader or advertiser that shows they appreciate and are using the newspaper and shopper for what it was intended—to gather information about their community, said Lois Yoakum, advertising manager.

The Wayne Herald has been in continuous service to Northeast Nebraska for over 117 years. Besides the publication of the newspaper and shopper, the staff here also provides printing and publishing services for more than 20 other newspapers and publication companies, reports Bill Richardson, general manager.

The newspaper welcomes submitted news, and encourages the publication of the positive activities in our community, especially those involving our young people. Too many bad things have to be written about our communities to ignore the good things contends Kevin Peterson, sports editor.

The newspaper company also provides quality commercial printing services for business and individual needs. From letterheads and business cards to sales brochures we can help you project the best image, said Linda Granfield, office manager.
