This is country!

Wayne County woman is national magazine editor

By Lois Yoakum
Of the Herald

A Wayne County farm wife has been named as one of the "field editors" for the national magazine, Country, which is published in Greendale, Wis.

Mrs. Janice Morris of rural Carroll is one of only 250 home-based editors for the magazine which has a circulation of over 2 million.

Selected from throughout the United States and Canada, the magazine's unique rural staff of country-oriented people help produce each issue by contributing news, photos and interesting information about their areas, explains the magazine's managing editor Dan Miel.

Mrs. Morris said she is not sure how she was selected as one of the elite country editors but she did say she has submitted several photos and articles over the years to the magazine and because she considers it a "fun thing to do."

"I'm strictly an amateur, not a professional," she said of her photographic efforts, "but I enjoy doing it." One photo she submitted in 1992 was judged as one of the top photos in the magazine's Rural Photography Contest in 1992.

The photo, called Bait-nice team, shows Mrs. Morris' two grandsons Eric and Daniel and the family dog "Pardy" running across a long row of big round hay bales. The photo was selected for publication from more than 6,000 that were submitted to the contest.

"I'm interested in people who live in the country," said Mrs. Morris. She said country people have interesting lives and make enjoyable reading in the magazine which is often a featured item on the coffee and kitchen tables in hundreds of Wayne County rural homes. Copies are also available through local libraries.

Some of its field editors were recommended by County Extension agents while others were selected from among contributors to the magazine and Miel. He said the names of all 250 field editors are listed in the introduction of each issue of the magazine.

Prior to each issue Mrs. Morris and all other field editors receive a "for editors only" newsletter which details the kind of information, photos and "leads" the magazine is seeking to fit the theme and focus of the following edition.

The magazine caters to "those who live in or long for the country," said Miel. Each issue includes numerous large, full color photos and celebrates the beauty of rural America through uplifting features. The magazine is supported entirely by sub-

Sales tax forum touts capital needs in Wayne

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Questions and concerns about a possible limited-term, one-cent sales tax in Wayne to fund a library and senior citizen center complex, renovation to the city auditorium and downtown storm drainage improvements were discussed Tuesday evening during a special forum.

Wayne's mayor, city administrator and library board chairman fielded a variety of questions from a small crowd at the Wayne Auditorium in discussing the issue with those gathered and with a live KTCH radio audience.

The sales tax is the best method to fund the needed improvements said library board chairman Pat Gross because it has fewer problems than what is associated with keno or other gambling fund raiser and it is less irksome than increases in property taxes.

MAYOR BOB Carhart said each of the capital projects listed as part of the sales tax project were strongly needed in the community and a sales tax which would be set to expire in 1999 would be the easiest means for funding the projects.

He said the community needs to keep its investment in facilities like the auditorium and the library and senior center viable by making needed improvements.

City Administrator Joe Salitros told the audience the anticipated sales tax would raise approximately $400,000 per year in Wayne or $2 million over the five year term.

The funds would be used in the priority of $375,000 to $550,000 for storm sewer improvements on Logan Street, up to $800,000 for the library and senior center and the balance for the auditorium.

HE SAID THE sewer work was a first item on the list because it needed to be completed before the widening of Logan Street and Highway 35 through Wayne and because the private fund raising portion of the library senior center project would not be completed until all the pledges were received in 1997.

At that time the sewer project would be complete and the sales tax funds would be directed to the library/senior center building project.

Gross told the audience that the Library Foundation is nearing the $200,000 mark in its campaign to raise $575,000 for the anticipated $1.2 million library/senior center project.

School grant means access to Internet

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

New equipment and communication cabling installed at Wayne Community Schools will mean students and the public will have more access to the Internet information network.

A $5,200 grant from the National Science Foundation passed through the department of technology with the Nebraska Department of Education funded the technology upgrade.

The main goal of the equipment is to let science students here in Wayne tap into classrooms with audio and video throughout the country to share experiments and participate in team teaching activities.

The new wiz-bang equipment means students can see, hear and talk to other students around the country on the Internet system, according to Wayne Superintendent, Dr. Dennis Jensen. He said the first to use the new system will be the students in Dale Hochstein's science labs. They have plans to share live graphic images and science experiments with students at Omaha North High School.

The new cabling and software which allows both graphic and data communications is utilized by the high school's new state of the art computer lab installed this year. The equipment will also mean multiple students can be on the Internet system at the same time, said Jensen. He said in the past the school has been limited as to the number of individual computers and students which could log onto the system at one time.

Jensen told the Wednesday morning meeting of the Wayne Rotary Club that the new equipment at the high school will benefit all the students in the school system as well as making it possible for members of the public to log onto the Internet System through the school with their modem-equipped home computers.

Currently the same service is available to any K-12 school through the Wayne State College computer system free of charge but that may

Sundell spends time with 102nd Infantry

Fifth in a Series

By Clara Osten
For the Herald

By the time Alvin Sundell of rural Wakefield was drafted into the United States Army in August 1944, many of the major battles had already taken place but there was still a need for replacement troops in many parts of Europe.

"I had had a farm deterrent for some time but by August 1944, it was my turn to be drafted. I spent a short time at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. before being sent to Camp Walters, Texas for Infantry Training," said Alvin.

His 17 week training was cut short by the beginning of the Battle of the Bulge in France. "We learned of the battle while we were out on maneuvers. They gave us 10 days to go home, say good-bye and get ready to leave."

"WE GOT ON the Queen Mary, which was a luxury liner. I spent time on deck because I wanted to make sure I saw the Statue of Liberty, because I wasn't sure I would ever get to do that again," said Alvin.

The Queen Mary was much faster than most army ships so the trip to Scotland did not take long. The men landed in late January 1945 and then traveled by train to England. They spent just a short time there, getting equipment and supplies and then moved on.

"We traveled on '40 and 8's' as we called them. These were basically box cars that could carry 40 men or eight horses. They were not comfortable at all. We went from LeHarve, France, through France and into Belgium. As we went, we saw a lot of bomb craters, especially at train depots.

AFTER ARRIVING in the Netherlands, Alvin became part of the 102nd Infantry, Ozark Division. "During this time we had no contact with the civilian people there. We stayed in an abandoned castle

Through the High School Prom, Baccalaureate, Graduation and All Other Activities!

The school year is an exciting time for high school students with activities such as the prom, baccalaureate, and graduation. These occasions, however, are not without worry or anxiety.

The principals of Northeast Nebraska want you to know that we support the strict adherence to the laws on the use of alcohol and the sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages to minors. Our concern is that alcohol is available to minors at many home parties and parties at other facilities. We draw attention to Nebraska Revised Statutes Sections 53-180 et. seq. which state that a parent or other adult who furnishes alcohol to a minor is subject to a fine of up to $1,000.00 or one year in jail, or both.

We do not want these good times marred by unacceptable behavior, accidents or injuries. Please help us in this endeavor.

I'm for the Wayne Public Library/Senior Center Project.

"Our whole family supports the Wayne Public Library/Senior Center project. The $10 fee we pay each year is small in comparison to the many opportunities the library offers throughout the year. The new books off the best seller list, to magazines, to videos, to the friendly library staff, our family appreciates all the Wayne Public Library has to offer. The new facility will offer even more."

Evening with Buffalo Bill

Library to host one-man play

"Cody! An Evening with Buffalo Bill," written and performed by Eric Sorg will be performed at the Wayne Public Library on Monday, May 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Sorg started his professional acting training in 1969 in England with the American Institute for Foreign Study where he studied technical acting. Immediately after that, Sorg started acting professionally in the Washington, D.C. area while still in high school.

Sorg spent the majority of his working life performing and he wrote the script for "Cody!" because Cody's life story is theatrically tragic and highly entertaining. However, in order to give academic validity to the script, Sorg returned to school to write a myth/symbol study on Bill Cody and took a master's degree in American Studies.

Sorg has continued his scholarship on Cody, Cody's era, the American West and during the course of the play Sorg gives Cody's sobriquet "Buffalo Bill" only lip service. When not performing, Sorg works as a consulting historian, and he is currently writing a biography on "Buffalo Bill's" best friend, Dr. "White Beaver" Powell.

Sorg as Buffalo Bill Cody

In addition to humanities tours in Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Wyoming, "Cody!" has been presented at many major venues including the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, The National Cowboy Hall of Fame, the Amon Carter Museum, the Gene Autry Western Heritage Center, the Edmonton Fringe, Yuma Crossing, the Fort Edmonton Storyteller's Festival, the Eiteljorg Museum, Olana, the Museum of Our National Heritage and the Rockwell Museum.

In addition, in 1992 Sorg was one of the on-camera scholars and did the Cody sound track for the award winning segment on Bill Cody for the Arts and Entertainment The Real West series.

Forum Country

He said the library and senior center effort has been in the works in Wayne for many years and explained the chronology of the process used to arrive at the designated location and the request for voters to approve the funding mechanism for the facility.

He said the site selected on the southwest corner of 5th and Pearl was the number one choice of both the library board and the directors at the senior center because of its downtown location.

There was no opposition voiced to the sales tax proposal or the specific projects at the public forum.

Responding to a question about what the plans would be if the sales tax were to fail, Gross said the library board would proceed with the effort to build the new facility anyway.

"We are committed very strongly to building the facility," he said. Failure of the sales tax funding mechanism would not kill the project it would only delay it, he added.

"Failure of the sales tax vote will not change our need," he added, "We will continue until the job is done."

Gross and others said the library and senior citizen center project is needed because of crowded conditions in the existing facilities, limits on the availability of services because of the space problems and limits on the number of users because of accessibility problems.

Plans for library and senior center were presented to the audience.

Following the forum, each of the panelists said they were pleased with the questions raised by the audience and the lack of any outright opposition to the proposals.

The sales tax vote will be on the May 10 ballot in Wayne.

Internet is a world wide information network which can be accessed from computers equipped with modems. It opens up a whole new world of research and learning tools for the Wayne students, said Jensen. Members of the public interested in connecting to the school computer system to access Internet should contact the school after the new system is fully operational later in the spring.

which served as troop headquarters. We joined the company as replacements and saw only limited action," Alvin recalled.

The company then moved toward the Rhine River, spending time at Dusseldorf for several weeks, planning a spearhead maneuver and crossing the river toward Kohn (now known as Cologne). "During this time the sky would be lit up at night with artillery shells, making it look just like day."

"We crossed a pontoon bridge there and from then on, things started moving very fast. We were in and out of numerous conflicts, some very minor and others pretty serious. It is hard to sort out all that happened because a lot of things just seemed to run together and once they were over, they were forgotten," said Alvin.

THINGS STARTED breaking up for the Germans at this time and many of them began surrendering to Allied forces before the Russians could get there. These soldiers became prisoners and within a month were sent back to Russia.

Alvin's company ended up in Stendale in eastern Germany. It was here that the Allied forces decided the lines of occupation. "Our troops packed up and began fleeing as though they were fleeing from the Russians. We moved out and the Russians moved in," said Alvin.

Alvin's assignment during the time of occupation was at Coburg, Germany in the Bavarian Alps. During the move to this area Alvin was transferred to the motor pool and became a jeep driver.

By this time the war in Germany was over but Alvin was not allowed to come home for nearly another year. The job of troops during this time was to guard German prisoners. "We also had jurisdiction over a Displaced Person's Camp which was made up of people who had been captured by the Germans. These people had terrible living conditions. It wasn't a concentration camp, but it was not pleasant at all," said Alvin.

ALVIN WAS given a two week leave during his time here and spent it in Switzerland. "This was like going home. The area was clean, there were no traces of bombing and business was going on normally. I also got to do some deer hunting at a camp resort during my time in Germany."

While Alvin was not involved in any of the major battles during the war, two incidents of narrow escape do come to mind.

On one occasion, while on the Elbe River, the soldiers dug slit trenches for protection. An officer came to inspect them and decided to move the soldiers to a new location. Shortly after that, the Germans began firing mortars. One of those mortars hit within three feet of where they had dug the original trenches.

Another time, Alvin's company was moving through a small town without realizing that German infantry and tanks were still in the area. "We were very lucky not to have gotten killed because we had no idea the Germans were in the area," said Alvin.

Alvin was discharged from the army in June 1946 and returned to the Wakefield area where he was employed by the Wayne County Weed District and Soil Conservation Service before beginning farming full time.

ALVIN'S WIFE, Mary Ellen recalls what it was like for Americans during war time. "We didn't have TVs then so the only way we got war information was during the movies. They had newsreels showing pictures of concentration camps. They were so horrible that I had nightmares for a long time after that."

"I remember rationing. People weren't supposed to drive over 40 miles per hour to conserve gas. We had ration books for all kinds of things. If the stores ever had women's nylon hose or clothes pins, there would be long lines of women waiting to get them. We couldn't get certain kinds of tea and sugar was scarce."

"I remember having three teachers in one year. The first two men were both called to duty in the army and were shipped out," said Mary Ellen.

Alvin is lifetime member of both the Veterans of Foreign War and American Legion Posts in Wakefield, having served several offices in the VFW including Quartermaster and Commander of the post. For his involvement during the activity on the Rhine River, Alvin was awarded the Combat Infantry Badge.

Pets make lifelong friends

A pet shares life's ups and downs, all the while offering unconditional love, according to Dr. David Swerczek with the Wayne Veterinary Clinic.

From your first pet that you persuaded your parents would be an important lesson in responsibility, to the puppy, kitten or bird which grew with you and was your constant companion and confidant, pets are part of our lives. There most certainly were days when your responsibilities weren't met but your pet's companionship was unwavering, he said.

The American Veterinary Medical Association, its Auxiliary, and the American Animal Hospital Association have chosen the first week in May to salute America's pet owner and their pets. May 1-7 is National Pet Week.

This year, skip the card and rather than taking Fido to lunch ... take your pet to see its veterinarian for its annual check up, schedule a session of obedience training and be certain you are aware of all of the environmental hazards threatening your pet.

"As in humans, preventative health care may add years to your pet's life and enjoyment of your time together," said Dr. Swerczek.

Northeast Research Center is site for a new home economics masters program

The first course toward a master's degree in Interdepartmental Home Economics taught entirely by satellite is being offered at Northeast Research and Extension Center in Concord, according to Lynda Cruickshank, Extension Educator.

The program will be offered beginning this fall through the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Human Resources and Family Sciences. It is believed this is the first master's degree program in home economics to be delivered entirely via satellite among the land-grant universities, Cruickshank said.

This program is for students seeking a master's degree in human resources and family sciences, extension educators, middle school and secondary teachers, health service professionals and individuals interested in an overview of nutrition.

Individuals may take one course, a few courses, or the full degree program. To obtain graduate credit, students must first be admitted to graduate college. That registration deadline is Aug. 1, Cruickshank added.

The 12 courses that lead to master's degree will be offered through Neb*Sat at Cooperative Extension and other satellite sites statewide this fall through the summer of 1997. The same courses will be repeated nationally through AG*SAT in 1995-98, so anyone who misses a course the first time can take it the second time around, Cruickshank noted.

The first course to be offered this fall is Nutrition 800: Contemporary Nutrition, taught by Nancy Betts, UNL associate professor of nutritional science dietics. It will be offered from 4 to 6:50 p.m. on Wednesdays beginning Aug. 24.

This course is an overview for dietary recommendations and guidelines, nutrient functions and current issues, Cruickshank said. This isn't a course for students majoring in dietetics or nutritional science, however. Prerequisites for the course are three hours of undergraduate nutrition, six hours of undergraduate natural science or with permission of the instructor.

The other 11 800- and 900-level courses will be offered as follows: 1994-95: Contemporary Nutrition, Family Strengths, The Adolescent in the Family, Research Methods; 1995-96: Consumer and Family Economics, Statistics, Nutrition Throughout the Life Cycle, Advanced Instructional Theory in Home Economics; 1996-97: Textile Economics, The Family in a Cross-Cultural Perspective, Family Financial Management and Recent Developments in Textiles.

A minimum of three students is required at each statewide site for class discussion and interaction in order for students to realize the real benefit of graduate level course work, added the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources educator.

Students will pay graduate level tuition plus a $40 distance learning fee for the satellite courses.

The Interdepartmental Home Economics degree has been offered at UNL for nearly half a century. However, Cruickshank noted that it's now being offered via satellite in response to requests throughout the state and because resources and technology now make it possible.

For example, students at the sites will have electronic access to the UNL library system, Internet, e-mail or FAX in doing library work and in communicating with instructors and other students.

For more information contact the Cooperative Extension office at Wayne, 375-3310 noted the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources educator.

One brother, Rex Hansen, feels he is a US president, while another brother portrayed by Gary Peterson, has just escaped incarceration. Mix in a sidekick straight from plastic surgeon school, Butch Utemark; some confused cops, Lowell Johnson, Fuzz Henderson, Tom Turney and Dan Zulkosky; a minister, Gerald Muller, and his lovely daughter, Alyssa Utecht; a play critic, the sister's nephew, Adam Goos, who isn't what the minister had in mind for a son-in-law; an intended victim, Bob Burt, and a director of a special institution, Pat Lunsz, and you have the ingredients for a wonderfully delightful classic Comedy.

Five performances are scheduled for Thursday, May 26 through Sunday, May 29.

Hybrid Asparagus Crowns

This variety has great flavor and wide adaptability. Because these hybrid crowns have excellent vigor, the spears can be harvested for 3-4 weeks one year after planting, 6-7 weeks two years after planting, and 8-9 weeks thereafter. Mature asparagus should yield 12 pound per crown per season. This yield is considerably more than the yield one can expect from the familiar Washington series asparagus. This variety should have more resistance to fusarium crown rot than the Washington series.

SECTION B

Nancy Lunzer and Brian Nelson are in the process of building their dream home east of Wayne. Log home builder and craftsman Jim Christensen, right, has several projects of this type to his credit. The logs for the home were taken from Nancy's family's farm in Minnesota and were shipped to Wayne county for final assembly.

Dream house construction under way for Lunzer and Nelson couple

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

When Brian Nelson and Nancy Lunzer of rural Wayne began making plans to build their dream home they decided conventional construction was not the way they wanted to go.

They were excited about the idea of a log home, but the manufactured log variety did not thrill them either. They didn't want small logs, they were attracted to the idea of building a home out of massive 24-inch logs from the forest on Nancy's family's farm in Minnesota.

Five years ago when the couple got married they were already making plans for the dream home that is currently under construction east of Wayne.

"WE'LL BE FINISHING a lot of it ourselves," explained Nancy of the project they hope to have completed in time for Christmas.

Their home project began before

Christmas last year when Brian and Nancy went to Minnesota to help cut down the 40 trees that would eventually become their log home. They hired Jim Christensen, a Minnesota log home craftsman who is originally from Osmond, Neb. to shape and assemble the logs before numbering, dismantling and shipping the home for final assembly in Wayne County.

The 30 by 30 structure will have a half loft and a full basement and will feature a large rustic porch which will overlook their farm. The structure will be energy efficient and sturdy with a minimum of 12 inch thick pine logs which have an insulation R-value of 1.21 per inch.

NANCY SAID THEIR home will be less expensive than many other types of construction only because the couple will do a good deal of finishing work themselves. The logs which make up the basic structure were also obtained free from her family's farm which will hold down the finished home cost.

At a total weight of 140,000 pounds on the logs, builder Christensen said the snug house will not be threatened by wind.

The house was re-assembled on the prepared foundation here by Christensen and his crew over the weekend. After assembly a special chainsaw craftsman carefully cuts the openings for the windows and doors.

"A COUPLE OF guys with a chainsaw and a few beers can't do the job," said Christensen of the cutting of the openings. The chainsaw artisan has to prove his ability to cut to within one thirty second of an inch tolerance or he could ruin a lot of hard work in preparing and assembling the logs.

Christensen is a premier log home builder with several huge projects to his credit and at least one of his lodge-type homes featured in a ma-

Nelson and Lunzer plan to heat their log home with a central fireplace using wood they cut from their own lot.

BRIAN IS AN airline pilot flying 727s out of Minneapolis for Sun Country Airlines. Besides working on the couples farm of 140 acres of alfalfa and 100 acres of corn and beans, Nancy spends a good deal of her time as a trainer and volunteer with Rainbow Riders a therapeutic horseback riding program for handicapped youngsters in the Wayne area.

She helps with the care of the Rainbow Rider horses as well as caring for their own four horses, dogs and a pot bellied pig, she said laughing.

After years of listening to the wind whistle around their mobile home, Nancy said she is afraid she will not be able to sleep when they move into the quiet and secure log home.

Farmers have one week left for sign-up

"Farmers have only one more week to sign up and become eligible for program benefits on their 1994 wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice crops," Terri Post, CED of the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said. The sign-up period ends April 29.

She said producers will not have the opportunity to change their mind and sign up after this deadline. Producers who have already enrolled and those who sign up before April 29, have the option of withdrawing and returning any advance payments.

To be eligible for price support loans and target price protection on this year's crops, farmers are required to meet acreage reduction requirements of 11 percent for upland cotton and 15 percent for extra long staple cotton acres. "There are no acreage idling requirements for wheat, corn, grain sorghum, oats, barley and rice," Post said.

Target prices protect farmers' income if market prices fall below the federally-established levels. Through the ASCS price support loan program, farmers can obtain interim financing to operate and have time to wait for a better market.

Additionally, the 1994 farm programs offer advance payments in cash and flexible planting options.

"If producers do not sign up, they should clearly understand that they will not be eligible for benefits offered under the 1994 programs," ASCS official Post said.

Kant reports for air duty

Air Force 2nd Lt. Mace Kant has arrived for duty at Vance Air Force Base in Enid, Okla.

Kant is a 1988 graduate of Winside High School. He earned a bachelor's degree from the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. in 1992.

Journal offers stats

On Monday evening, friend Jo called from Cozad and said, "I'm coming to Lincoln to get out of the blizzard." I was attempting to reorganize my kitchen, had paid no attention to the weather report, and asked, "what blizzard?" Mother Nature just had to have another blow.

Anyway, Jo's husband has a generator, and they ran it all night to keep the stock tank from freezing. But it was a couple of days before everyone had power; the snow was so heavy and wet, it snapped power poles.

April 15 came and went. Both Kay and Ann work for tax preparation firms, so could sigh with relief today (Saturday). I heard on the radio that we all work two hours and 20 minutes per day just to pay taxes. Of course, the sad part is, the tax doesn't begin to pay the bills.

I've also read that if we are concerned about this debt, we can write a check to the U.S. Bureau of Public Debt. About 1,500 kind souls sent checks last year, totalling almost $2 million, which is a small chink in the $4 trillion plus tab.

There are some other statistics from an old Farm Journal I found rather interesting. The first one was the estimated average farm household income in 1992, $40,068. 90 percent of this came from off-farm sources.

Then there is one having to do with CRP. With this program, there has been a 22 percent reduction in cropland erosion; the cost has been $1.8 billion.

The percent of total U.S. labor force over age 65 is 3, while 21 percent of our farmers are past that retirement mark.

19 percent of our rural families live in mobile homes, while only 3 percent of urban families do.

And you can steal 1999 oranges in Florida and only be charged with a misdemeanor. But make it 2,000, and it's a felony.

The Big Farmer says you can make statistics prove whatever you want them to. I find these thought provoking.

Now, I'm going to finish freezing my strawberries from California. Then I'm going to have a piece of fresh strawberry pie. And while I'm doing all that, I'll be grateful for a West Coast strawberry farmer and the folks who picked this luscious fruit.

Remember the Volunteers

It is the time of year once again to remember the Volunteer, say Vicki Meyer and Sara Hutchison with Haven House in Wayne.

April 18-22 is National Volunteer Recognition Week, and Haven House staff recently held a gathering for volunteers that donate their time and hard work to helping end violence in our families.

Haven House is a non-profit crisis agency that serves victims and survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault in the counties of Wayne, Thurston, Cedar, Dixon and Dakota. Volunteers are a critical element in the work that Haven House does, say staff members.

Last year, Haven House volunteers donated over 8,800 hours by providing crisis intervention support, office assistance, emergency transportation, medical and court advocacy, educational presentations and taking crisis line shifts on evenings and weekends.

"Haven House wants every volunteer to know that the work they do is essential and very much appreciated," said Ms. Meyer, the director of Haven House.

"Our volunteers occasionally miss meals with family and friends, a school function or a good night's rest. They rarely have the opportunity to witness the end result of their hard work. Our volunteers are special people who realize the epidemic proportions of domestic violence in our society, and care enough to touch the lives of families who are fleeing dangerous situations," she said.

"Haven House thinks of volunteers as extensions of staff, because they help us provide a higher level of service than we could with staff only," said Ms. Hutchison, who is the volunteer coordinator.

"Due to the nature of our work, Haven House will not publish the names of volunteers. You all know who you are, and remember that your dedication never goes unnoticed. The people who you make contact with will always hold a special place in their heart, because you do make a difference. For this, we are extremely grateful," she said.

Elkhorn NRD encourages observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week

The concept of forming partnerships to better serve the environmental need of our community is being emphasized by the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District, which is encouraging interested organizations and individuals to join the in April 24 to May 1 observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week.

The 1994 observance theme is "Partners in Stewardship." Soil and Water Stewardship Week is celebrated annually to help remind all people of their individual responsibilities to care for our soil and water resources.

"Working together, we can better care for our natural resources as we celebrate Soil and Water Stewardship Week," said Stan Staab, general manager of the Lower Elkhorn NRD.

Staab hopes Stewardship Week will challenge individuals to consider ways they can become meaningfully involved with conservation-oriented groups or agencies in activities that will provide a direct benefit to the quality of our environment.

"While stewardship responsibility starts with you and me, there is always strength in numbers," Staab said. "And, each organization can bring its own unique skills and resources to a partnership effort that will improve the success of the project."

Soil and Water Stewardship Week, now in its 39th year, is celebrated each year between the last Sunday in April and the first Sunday in May.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD, which works throughout the year on soil and water conservation measures, provided literature and educational materials to schools and churches in the 15-county district to encourage the organization of partnerships to benefit the conservation of natural resources.

The Lower Elkhorn, along with the Lewis and Clark NRD, based in Hartington, will co-sponsor the sixth annual Ministers' Tour during Stewardship Week. On Tuesday, April 26 participating northeast Nebraska clergy will tour urban and rural conservation practices in the Norfolk and Stanton areas. The highlight of the tour will be a visit to Maskenthine Recreation Area and Arboretum near Stanton.

The development of the theme and supporting materials for Soil and Water Stewardship Week is guided by the National Association of Conservation District's Soil and Water Stewardship Advisory Committee, which includes representatives from a number of religious denominations. Rev. O.M. Gunderson of Tilden represents the Evangelical Lutheran Church in American, Nebraska on this national advisory committee.

The Lower Elkhorn is one of 23 NRDs in the state of Nebraska and one of nearly 3,000 conservation districts nationwide that works to encourage the wise use of natural resources through this annual week-long observance.

Lincoln chosen to host soybean conference

Lincoln has been selected as the site for the 1995 Husker Feed Grains and Soybean Conference to be held Jan. 11, 12 and 13 at the Cornhusker Hotel and Convention Center. This is the first time the annual conference has been held in Nebraska's capital city.

USDA seeks comments on 1995 ARP for wheat

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking public comment on whether the acreage reduction percentage (ARP) level for the 1995 wheat crop should be 0, 5, 10 or some other level between zero and 15 percent, according to Grant Bunrock, executive vice president of USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation. The ARP decision must be announced by June 1, he said.

CCC has provided an analysis that includes estimated planted acreage, production, domestic and export use, ending stocks, season average producer price, program participation rate and cost to the federal government. Details appeared in the April 6 Federal Register.

Comments should be submitted by May 4. They may be faxed to (202) 690-1346 or mailed to Craig Jagger, Agricultural Economist, Grains Analysis Division, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), P.O. Box 2415, Room 3740-S, Washington, D.C. 20013-2415.

All comments will be available for public inspection in Room 3740-S of USDA's South Building, 14th St. and Independence Avenue, S.W., during regular business hours. A regulatory impact analysis on the 1995 wheat program may be obtained from the same address.

Farmers see value in trashy fields

It was called trash for years, but the crop residue cover most farmers now see has gained respect.

Randal Gunn, SCS district conservationist in Wayne, says properly managing crop residue is now the preferred way to grow corn and soybeans. Gunn says it is a proven method of reducing soil erosion and increasing profits.

"Leaving last year's crop residue on the surface before and during planting operations provides cover for the soil at the most critical time of the year," Gunn says. Residue is left on the surface by reducing tillage operations that turn the soil and bury residue. No-till, mulch till and ridge till are conservation tillage methods that keep pieces of crop residue on the soil surface, where they shield soil particles from rain and wind until plants can produce a protective canopy.

Soil that stays in place in the field reduces water pollution. The residue also improves soil tilth and adds organic matter to the soil as it decomposes.

And, because the farmer makes fewer trips across the field with tillage equipment, there is less soil compaction. The fewer trips also save time, energy and labor.

Gunn says planning for residue cover begins at harvest. It's important that ample residues are spread evenly over the field by the combine.

Tips to maximize residue protection include reducing the number of tillage passes, since every pass buries more crop residue; driving slower during tillage operations; and using straight points and sweeps on chisel plows instead of twisted points. Setting tillage tools to work at shallower levels helps, too.

Gunn says farmers can estimate residue levels by using a line that has 50 or 100 equally divided marks. Stretch the line diagonally across crop rows, and count the number of marks that have residue under the leading edge when looking from directly above the mark.

Then, walk the entire length of the line. On a 100-mark line, the total number of marks with residue under them is the percent residue cover in that field. If the line has only 50 marks, multiply your count by two. Repeat the procedure three to five times in a representative area of the field and average the results to make sure you get an accurate percentage.

If you would like more information on residue management or estimating residue cover, contact your local office of the Soil Conservation Service. A video tape entitled "Conservation On Your Own" also contains more information on residue management. The VHS video can be checked out free of charge from any SCS office.

Corn plant from corn rootworms, is measured by root ratings - a direct indication of insecticide performance. Insecticides with consistently low root ratings are the best performers - year after year.

A root rating of 3.0 is considered the economic threshold for corn rootworm damage. Root ratings of 3.0 or higher often mean yield reductions.

In 11 years of trials conducted at nine major Midwestern universities, COUNTER achieved a 95 percent consistency-of-performance rating. No other insecticide came close.
