

Grads swelter under sun & circumstance

By Les Mann Of the Herald

A sweltering sun beat down on the 75 graduates from Wayne High School Sunday as they gathered for the school's commencement program at the Wayne State College Willow Bowl.

The first outside graduation ceremony in several years for the school was marked by a boisterous crowd and often noisy traffic but graduates and well wishers seemed unaffected by the distractions.

Many of the family members and friends in the crowd estimated at over 2,500 sought shade under nearby trees during the ceremony.

COMMENCEMENT speaker Jan Stoney avoided any political references and never hinted at the mild controversy which surrounded her appearance as Wayne High Commencement speaker. Mrs. Stoney is a retired executive with USWest who worked her way up from the secretarial pool to one of the state's leading corporate executives.

She is also a candidate for the United States Senate as a Republican. A state Democrat official had called the school last week to protest the graduation appearance of Mrs. Stoney but her opponent, Sen. Bob Kerrey came to the school's defense and said she should indeed be the speaker.

"LET ME TELL you that continuing the momentum after high school isn't easy. It takes hard work. It may take additional education. It will take plenty of determination," she said.

"Education is the engine that will keep the momentum going," she told the graduates. "With a mindset of lifelong learning, you can ensure that you don't get pigeonholed in a job or in life."

She also encouraged the teens to give back to society some of what they have been given as students.

"To whom much has been given, much will be required," she told them. "Young men and women, we have been given the greatest country the world has ever known, it is our duty and our obligation to see that it endures."

SHE LEFT THEM with the admonition that in their journey through life they should "take their time, travel deliberately and enjoy the trip. And God speed as you proceed."

Class Salutatorian Angela Hansen and Valedictorian Claire Rasmussen also delivered addresses to their fellow graduates.

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Carter P. "Cap" Peterson, vice-president of the board of education in Wayne. Each graduate also received a personal greeting from Mrs. Stoney and school administrators.

Guidance Counselor Terry Munson heaped praise on the class for its accomplishments while in high school. He said the class included some of the most talented

Wayne is selected for funds

By Les Mann Of the Herald

Wayne has been selected as one of only six communities in the state to benefit from USWest funds to help schools develop better student access to the Internet computer information network.

The funding will give Wayne students "a jump start for access to the information superhighway," said USWest spokesman Roger Stuhmer.

The schools selected for the funding, which could run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars were announced by Sen. Bob Kerrey, (D-Neb.) at the Challenge Nebraska Conference in Lincoln Saturday.

FUNDS FOR the grants to the six schools are monies returned to USWest as part of the property tax dispute settled several years ago. The settlement left the company with a "refund windfall" according to some state senators. Stuhmer said in discussions with the public service commission and department of education officials, USWest executives determined it would be best to use the tax refund funds for investment in the future of education in the state.

"We are excited about bringing this showcase to these schools," said Jim Hawes, Nebraska vice president and chief executive officer for USWest. "Our funding recognizes that the onetime cost of technology and, more importantly, technology training, have been major barriers for these schools. This program lowers those barriers. We are looking forward to the results."

ACTUAL VALUE OF the grants to the schools will be determined by their requests which might include funds for wiring, equipment, software and training.

Wayne School Superintendent Dr. Dennis Jensen said the grant funding notice was welcome news for Wayne Schools because it will greatly increase the access time students will have on the information

Want trees? Just call

If someone wanted trees that badly, they should have contacted us, we would have planted them for them," said Duane Schroeder, who decried the careful, methodical theft of approximately 400 hand planted trees which were part of a Pheasants Forever habitat program.

The trees, which had been planted on land owned by Gary Pick north of Wayne, were stolen May 14 or 15 and members of the Pheasants Forever chapter are offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the theft.

Schroeder said the value of the trees is not the biggest concern and the $1,000 reward far exceeds the cost of the tree seedlings. He said the work the Pheasants Forever volunteers put into the tree planting effort and the principle of the loss was what prompted chapter members to raise the reward privately.

Those with information should contact the county sheriff at 375-1911.

Assessments are out of whack

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) -- About half of the state's 93 counties still haven't met a state requirement that homes be valued for tax purposes at 95 percent of what they would be worth if sold.

The issue is important because school districts and other local taxing districts sometimes cross county lines. If one county sets property tax values for tax purposes closer to market values than another county, homeowners in the county with the valuations closer to the market value shoulder a bigger burden of the school district's taxes.

The state Board of Equalization scheduled a meeting today to remind county assessors that tax values must be kept up to date with the values that property is worth if it is sold.

Counties have until June 15 to certify final values for the state.

Sarpy County Assessor Lowell Iske said he knows property tax valuations in his county are below 95 percent of the market value but he doesn't plan to make changes until neighboring Douglas County does.

Overall, residential property in Sarpy County is valued for tax purposes at about 84 percent of its market value, Iske said. The state estimated Douglas County's residential values are at about 79 percent of market value.

Miracle Network Carnival set

By Lois Yoakum Of the Herald

All Wayne-area youngsters ages pre-school through fourth grade are invited to attend the second annual Children's Miracle Network Carnival on Thursday, May 26, being co-sponsored by Dairy Queen and the Wayne Kiwanis Club.

Jacque Kinnett, manager of the local Dairy Queen, said that while the carnival is to be a fun event for area children, it is also a fund raiser for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon to help fund children's medical services and programs at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Sioux City.

All of the proceeds from the carnival will go to the Children's Miracle Network Telethon to be used at St. Luke's.

The carnival will be from noon until 2 p.m. in the Dairy Queen parking lot and will include games, face painting, and clowns. There will be a police cruiser, fire truck and ambulance for the children to sit in and investigate.

Kinnett said youngsters can purchase a $2 package, with $1 going towards tickets for games and the other $1 going towards the purchase of a Children's Miracle Network Telethon paper balloon which will include the youngster's name and will be displayed inside the Dairy Queen. For $1 more children can get five additional tickets for games.

youngsters in the state in various fields of endeavor.

HE PRESENTED the top ten percent of the class and said those seven students had maintained a collective grade point average of 3.8 on a 4.0 scale. He said this means the seven completed over 400 semester classes without a grade of C, and with very few B's. Their average composite score of 29 on their college entrance tests place them higher than 96 percent of all the college bound seniors in America, he said.

Those in the top ten percent were, in alphabetical order, Robert Bell, Kathryn Guilliam, Angela Hansen, Kerry McCue, Megan McLean, Jennifer Melis, Claire Rasmussen and Terri Test.

Members of the National Honor Society included: Bell, Mark Hammer, Miss Hansen, Miss Melis, Miss Rasmussen, Miss Test and Susan Webber.

Claire Rasmussen, valedictorian of the Wayne High Class of 1994, encouraged her fellow graduates to "be kind."

Valedictorian has fun in front of microphone

By Claire Rasmussen
Valedictorian, Class of 1994

I'd like to thank you all very much for this honor and privilege and I would like to commend your bravery in giving me a microphone and a stage in front of hundreds of people. I have been hoping and waiting for this opportunity for a long time but as I sat up trying to think of things to say I found that even though my mouth has been moving almost constantly for 17 years, I actually have very little to say.

As I was trying to come up with some positive feedback for everyone about the past 12 years we have spent in school the phrase "the best years of our life" kept popping into my head. This notion seems ludicrous to me, after all, if they were what would we have to look forward to in the years to come. And as I thought about this I realized that these years have been a kind of womb where we have been kept fairly warm and pretty much protected from others and the bigger threat, ourselves. In these years it seems we are not quite whole humans. Our lives revolve around school schedules and curfews and the things which seem to define us are a series of embarrassing school pictures and a collection of numbers like our GPAs and ACTs. After all, I'm not standing up here today because of things I have done as a person but because of a group of numbers attached to my name.

But I think this ceremony isn't an end to the best years of our life, they are more a birthing process where we cast off not this womb of protection. This time, however, there will be no mother to remind us how painful the many hours of labor were because this time, the work is all ours to do. Some of us will have to be spanked once or twice, to quit our whining. Most of us will have to move on to incubators where we keep growing because there is so much more for us to learn.

Most of us will have to learn a new language. We'll have to learn to accept words like no and forget words like mine. We'll have to learn to walk without our parents propping us up and we'll have to learn to read NOT because Mrs. Schafer is peering over our shoulder but because knowledge is truly power.

And most importantly, we'll have to learn to become people, not just numbers because some people never do. For some after GPAs or the maximum speed of your car it becomes the number of figures in your salary or the cost of your home. These people are just another set of numbers. And unfortunately, some people are remembered simply as numbers like the 8 million Americans living under the poverty line, the 4 million people who have no place to call home and the 804,000 Americans who live behind bars.

After we are reborn and learn to talk and walk and learn again we can become names instead of numbers as we grow from this womb where we began.

I wish I could tell you how to do this but, like all of us graduating, I am just a name wanna-be but I can give you the advice of a name. Author Kurt Vonnegut has some words for us to remember as we are pushed out into the world today.

"Hello babies. Welcome to Earth. It's hot in the summer and cold in the winter. It's round and wet and crowded. At the outside babies, you've got about a hundred years here. There's only one rule that I know of, babies - you've got to be kind."

Class of '94, be kind and the world just might repay us the favor. Thank you.

Prayer highlights Grant address

By Angela Hansen
Salutatorian, Class of 1994

Would you please join me for a word of prayer:

Dear Father in Heaven, thank you for bringing us together on this day of celebration and for keeping us together in the past four and more years. We have gone through many stages of our lives with these people around us: our friends, family and teachers. They have seen us grow and dream. I offer up a special thank you today especially for those teachers and those parents that have helped us come this far, and for their success in our success today. Please be in each of our hearts today as we receive our key to adventure, to a new beginning, and please be with us in the many tomorrows, as we scatter in the different directions of the future. With complete trust in You, place our feet in the right direction and please help us to remember that nothing, no matter how serious the problem and no matter how desperate the situation, nothing is stronger than Your love. In Jesus' Name we pray. Amen.

Well, here we are. I am sure we all went in different directions on that first day of kindergarten, and yet we all arrived at the same place: graduation. When we were little somebody was always there to take us by the hand and to hold us when we were hurt. Someone was also there watching over us at all times, holding onto our hand, and if we choose to, letting Him lead us through the years. He has been walking us through life and promises that He won't ever let go. Today He will walk across the stage with us to receive our diplomas and will continue to walk or carry us through life. He knows, as well as you and I, that the future offers many different directions. He implores us to stay away from the wide and beaten path for it will only offer a destination of troubles and uncertainties. He wants us to take the narrow path and promises us that He will walk it with us, and help us tackle the obstacles and fears while making us better people. It's said best in the verse written by B.J. Hoff, "Take me as high as You want me to go, Lord Make me whatever You want me to be Lift me above my own narrow horizon that I might fulfill Your true vision for me." Don't ever give up, don't ever look back, only look forward and with Christ in your heart; and God at your side, you can conquer anything.

network. It ties in well with the district investment last year in a new state of the art computer lab and network system.

He said he hopes to see the USWest funds allocated for Wayne go to connecting the elementary and middle schools to the high school network with fiber optic cables and to purchase more networking equipment for those two schools.

HE SAID HE foresees a time when students will be able to routinely access the Internet system from their homes as well as from school, using either home computers or laptop units that they can check out from school.

Besides Wayne, the other five schools in Nebraska selected for the USWest funding were Grand Island, South Sioux City, North Platte, McMillan Junior High in Omaha and Crawford.

Jensen said the Wayne schools are currently limited to only three students on Internet at one time and he would like to see equipment installed that would allow up to 100 students to be on the system at once.

He said he was told the schools who were picked for the USWest program had already made a commitment to technology upgrades and curriculum restructuring.

Employees nominated

Wanda Hofeldt, an employee at Quality Food Center and Kathy Varley, a waitress at The Black Knight Restaurant, both in Wayne, have been nominated for the national Reminiscence Club award for "going the extra mile" in providing outstanding service to senior citizens.

If they are eventually selected as one of the national winners, they will win a free trip to Hawaii. Ten of the week-long trips are awarded each month in the program. The two from Wayne are among the 2,000 outstanding service industry employees who have been nominated by Reminiscence Club members since the program started in February.

The Reminiscence Club is sponsored by Reminiscence Magazine and seeks to promote concern and service for people over 50.

Ms. Hofeldt was nominated by club members Barbara Holdorf of Wayne and Ms. Varley was nominated by Mel Utecht of Wayne.

Fighting the oil fight

Sen. James Exon has blasted the "big oil" interests which he said are attempting to block the expansion of ethanol opportunities as an alternative to fossil fuels.

Exon has said the issue is not over the environmental or practical aspect of ethanol production as a renewable resource, he claims the real fight is over money. The oil companies are trying to protect their market share.

Since the oil embargoes of the early 70s, the country has done very little to wean itself from the high consumption of foreign produced crude. Part of the reason has been the massive dollars invested by American oil companies in foreign oil fields. Those companies obviously don't want to see those investments cut into, even by a small fraction, by development of alternative fuel resources.

When local farmers, as major consumers of oil company products, are making decisions on equipment to purchase and what kind of fuel it should use, they should keep this debate in mind.

When local motorists are filling their tanks they should do so with ethanol blend fuels as a message to the big oil interests who want to ignore the obvious environmental advantages of the locally grown product over the monied interests in foreign oil fields.

"We need to give ethanol a chance to bring us toward a future with renewable energy," said Exon. "We agree."

Our nation has maintained its dangerous dependence on foreign oil for too long.

Keeping to a higher plane

Bob Kerrey's U.S. Senate re-election campaign came down on the right side after a state Democratic Party official picked a fight with Kerrey's Republican opponent, Jan Stoney.

In what might seem like a political paradox, the Kerrey people took Mrs. Stoney's side against Kerrey's fellow Democrat.

The party official, Dave Hunter, had objected to plans for Mrs. Stoney to make a high school commencement speech at Wayne, Neb. Hunter telephoned the school and persuaded the principal to withdraw the invitation.

When Kerrey's people heard what Hunter had done, they informed the principal that Hunter didn't speak for Kerrey. Steve Jarding, a spokesman for the campaign, said Kerrey's people had no objection to letting Mrs. Stoney deliver the commencement speech. He said there are bigger issues in the Senate race. The invitation to Mrs. Stoney was reissued.

The Jarding move may well have been self-serving. Kerrey has often visited schools and spoke to classes and assemblies while campaigning for office. If Mrs. Stoney weren't allowed to speak at Wayne High, one can only imagine what her people would say the next time Kerrey showed up at Omaha Central.

But there is a larger issue than whether Jarding was trying to offset future criticism of his candidate. People in politics sometimes become too obsessed with countering everything the other side has done. They trivialize the campaign and turn off the voters. Real issues become secondary to petty arguments. When that happens, it's appropriate for someone to step in and end it.

Hunter dragged the campaign to a lower plateau by throwing a snit about the Stoney invitation. Jarding, by undoing the damage, raised it up again.

Court to voters: 'Get lost'

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — The leap between the penthouse and the outhouse is sometimes a short one.

Two weeks ago, initiative petition drives on property taxes and government ethics were chugging toward a conclusion.

And Nebraskans who overwhelmingly approved term limits on state and federal officeholders in 1992 were assured of a more regular turnover of politicians.

Then the Nebraska Supreme Court spoke.

In a decision that raised howls of protest across the Plains, the guys in black robes struck down the term limits law.

They said not enough signatures had been gathered to legally place the issue on the ballot.

The ruling raised the bar over which petition drives must leap before winning a vote of the people from just about 58,000 signatures to more than 90,000.

That prompted Gov. Nelson and Secretary of State Allen Beermann, among others, to proclaim that such signature drives were not impossible (such as the ethics and property tax drives now underway).

It also drove Nelson and other term-limit supporters to shout "foul."

The court, they said, had undercut the will of the people. A special session should be called to right this terrible wrong.

In the end, Nelson opted against a special session. Initially, he made it sound like a good idea, then retreated after getting an avalanche of "nos" from state senators, who hate term limits.

Politically, the governor would have taken a beating in a special session about the limits (and for not including crime on the agenda). Not a good formula for re-election.

Personally, I've never been a big fan of term limits.

In the state legislature, turnover is already high enough. After this fall's election, at least one-third of the 49 faces in the Unicameral will be changed from just three years ago.

Sure it's tough to beat an incumbent state senator, but it can be done. The bad incumbents usually get beat; the good ones usually come back.

The story is a little different for federal office, where it seems incumbents can raise so much money it scares away any serious competition.

But overall, apathy among voters seems to be a bigger problem. And a lack of good candidates.

As U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey pointed out last week, politics has such a bad image right now that nobody wants to join "the bum of the month club."

Where does this all leave us? This year's initiative petition drives face an uphill, almost unattainable task of getting on the ballot, thanks to this ruling in the last moments of their efforts.

Don't count on the state legislature to impose any tough term-limit proposals.

That leaves citizens, once again, with the task of gathering signatures and support to pass another term-limits law by a popular vote.

It will be a long, difficult ride back to the penthouse.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

'You died and man are we free'

Monday is Memorial Day. Over on yonder hill are prolific memories of early settlers, fallen militiamen, slain warriors, speaking from the other side of life's veil. If we pull aside time's cloak and chat with one who died fighting for this country, what would we hear? Let's try it.

"Hey Joe!"
"Hi ol' buddy! Thought I'd slip back for Memorial Day! Man! Good to see you!"

"Never thought I'd see your ugly face again! Ha! S'pose you wanta see what's goin' on!"

"You old son-of-a-gun, you're the point man when it comes to ugly! That hug feels good, and yes, I'd like to see what's goin' down in '94!"

"Grab your medals, pal, 'cause things 'ave changed!"

"Let 'er rip!"

"See this TV? Those Japs that shot you down over Midway? Well, their grandchildren make these things. Everybody has one. It's a moral mother to many kids and the only family member home with 'em all day."
"A moral mother?"

Merlin Wright

"An' anything goes on TV! You died so we could be free. And man are we free!

Language that your ol' Sarg wouldn't 'ave used, unless scared halfway to hell, can be heard daily. Kids watch'n TV learn to brutalize, shoot, torture, murder, rape, and act out. Nudity is bait.

Talk shows feature weirdoes while MTV rap music talks of kill'n cops."

"Can't be!"
"It's for real! Killing an' sex monopolize TV. Can you guess where kids get their condoms? At school!"

"But I thought schools taught morals!"

"No more! School teachers can't mention God unless they're swearing. In fact 'O God!' is a favorite. But it hadn't better be a prayer!"

"Why would teachers say 'O God!'?"

"Cause the kids carry guns to school."

"Guns in school?"

"That's right. Big city schools are like a shoot'n range. Fights over drugs an' girls often end in kill'n."

"I thought my death an' thousands of others on the battlefield would have brought peace on earth."

"Peace, Joe? Peace? After a boy

Not a minute incident

Dear Editor:

Ron and I want to thank the many people who have given support through these difficult and trying times. The demonstration of support from the athletes, parents, coaches and boosters at the athletic banquet is something which we found overwhelming and which we will always remember. We are proud of what Ron and his colleagues have accomplished in the years in which he has served as athletic director. This has not been a "minute incident" for our family because Ron's life has been dedicated to serving the student athlete. His only motive has been to do his utmost for the students at Wayne-Carroll schools. Because of this "minute incident" our lives are changed forever.

Gun bans

Attack the fools not the tools

We have more kooks per capita in this country today than we did a couple hundred years ago. And those increased number of kooks have access to more technology that enables them to be millions of times more dangerous than the kooks that were around when the constitution was written.

Its the current kook factor that has caused Congress, with the broad consent of the public to tread heavily on the constitutional guarantee of the right to keep and bear arms. Recent passage of legislation banning assault type weapons must be causing some of the young republic's Minute Men to turn over in their graves.

When written, the Second Amendment to the Constitution (insuring the right to keep and bear arms) was not a right intended to be a guarantee for sportsmen to be allowed to continue to hunt. It was not even intended to be a guarantee of the right to protect person and property. It was written as a guarantee a citizen militia to help insure national security.

If you didn't have to worry about them going off the deep end and shooting each other at the rate of thirty shots in less than a minute, a citizenry well supplied with assault weapons would be a serious deterrent to any prospective invaders.

But the problem is, the assault weapons aren't kept in the closet for the remote possibility of a foreign attack. They are used in dramatically growing numbers to create blood chitng headlines following mass killings and crime sprees.

Congress was right to take action to outlaw the weapons as a frustrated response to the growing crime problem, but the action is in no way going to prevent the use of the soon to be illegal weapons in the commission of horrible crimes. Scofflaws will continue to obtain the readily available weapons that will now be illegal for law abiding citizens to own.

But, I still think Congress was right to do something...even if it is wrong. I'm a gun owner and if I ever thought the Russians were coming (incidentally, I think that is still more of a threat than many of our political leaders what to accept) I'd probably try to go out and buy an illegal assault weapon. The chance of military invasion of the United States is probably greater today than it was 200 years ago when we needed an armed citizen militia for national security.

Of course, we didn't have the military complex for our protection then that we have now and I can accept the argument that we should let the well-trained professionals handle the job of protecting our shores and borders.

The problem as I see it is not the rapid fire assault weapons. The problem is with the kooks who think its okay to use them to spray bullets across a playground or in a crowded restaurant. We haven't solved the problem by removing the weapons, even if we optimistically assume they all will be removed from the scene by the new ban. The twisted minds who used them when they were legal if they can't get them now, will use other means to carry out their sick, deadly acts.

A speeding car, explosives and other means will be used. The problem is not with the weapon, it is with the people who use it and the society that helped create those sick minds. As with the drug use crisis, we need to attack the problem not by trying to halt the flow of illegal materials but rather by working to prevent the demand for the product.

A callous disregard for the rights and property of others, a declining value placed on human life, a populous which has been anesthetized to human pain and suffering by watching countless acts of violence on television and in movies and a general decline in moral and social values—all of these have more to do with the problems we face than all the assault weapons and other weapons of mass violence than we could ever produce.

What do you think about violence?

QUESTION: Would you comment on the violence in our society at large, and the forces which are propelling it? What do you think can and should be done about it?

Dr. Dobson
Answers
Your Questions

I think it's time that millions of decent, law abiding citizens rise up with one voice to oppose the industries that are profiting from violence.

A valiant campaign of this nature was waged in 1977 by the National Parent Teacher Association, directing their efforts at television networks and companies that support the most damaging programs. Of course, this pressure from the PTA brought an anguished cry of "foul play" from the greedy profiteers whose pockets were lined with blood-stained money.

Nevertheless, Sears Roebuck, Union Oil and other large companies pledged to sponsor no more violent programs on television. This form of economic sanction is the most powerful tool available to influence our free enterprise system, and we should use it. We have sat on our hands long enough!

QUESTION: How common is the desire for extramarital sexual encounters in men, even among those who would never be unfaithful to their wives?

DR. DOBSON: Dr. Robert Whitehurst from the Department of Sociology at the University of Windsor, Ontario, was once asked this question: "Do most men at some point have extramarital desires?"

His reply, published in the journal "Sexual Behavior," included these comments: "...All men from the first day of marriage onward think about this possibility, although these tendencies toward extramarital sexual activity diminish in later middle age and beyond, they never entirely vanish or disappear in normal men."

These strong statements leave little room for exceptions, but I'm inclined to agree with their conclusions. The lure of infidelity has incredible power to influence human behavior.

Even men who are involved in a church and are committed to their wives must deal with the same sexual temptation.

These questions and answers are excerpted from the book Dr. Dobson Answers Your Questions. Laurel graduation highlighted by senior addresses from Felber and Stapelman

By Kevin Peterson
Of the Herald

Twenty-four Laurel-Concord seniors walked across the stage of the Laurel High School auditorium for the final time as high schoolers, Sunday as commencement ceremonies took place in front of packed audience.

Graduation exercises were highlighted with the presentation of diplomas by superintendent William Gannon and Board of Education representative Jim Erwin.

Randy Quist gave the welcome address to the audience and following several special scholarship awards, Ben Stapelman gave the salutatorian address for the Class of '94.

Stapelman thanked all of the parents, teachers and his classmates for being a close knit group. He reminisced about the class from Kindergarten through 12th grade with several anecdotes.

Stapelman also talked about the successes of the seniors this year in everything from athletics to music. In closing he said, "I am thankful to have been able to spend all the time with all of you that I have. I'm going to miss you all and I want to wish everyone the best of luck next year as we move on to the next step of our lives."

Samantha Felber, valedictorian of the senior class, talked about changes in the world since her grandmother graduated from high school 60 years ago and she wondered about the changes the next 60 years would bring and how her class might help mold some of those changes.

Jason Stapelman

"I think the successful experiences we have gained at Laurel-Concord high School will carry over into the future," Felber said. "Success is relative, individual and personal. It is our answer to the problem of making our minutes, hours, days, weeks, months and years add up to a great life."

Felber bid farewell to her classmates with a poem, "This is the last time we will walk together before we stand alone, and I would like to share a poem written by Robert E. Farley," she said.

"Think of the hopes that lie before you
Not of the waste that lies behind;

Think of the treasures you have gathered,
Not the ones you failed to find;
Think of the service you may render,
Not of serving self alone;

Think of the happiness of others,
And in this you'll find your own.

The concert choir sang "This is The Moment" and the senior sextet sang "Young Hearts, Young Hands." The Laurel-Concord Concert Band played "Shiloh Canyon Fantasy" before Gannon presented the Class of '94 to receive their diplomas.

Chamber assistant receives scholarship

Peoples Natural Gas presented a scholarship to Nancy Schulz, the administrative assistant of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, to attend "Chamber Institute - Year Two" in Boulder, Colo. beginning on July 17.

The $670 scholarship will give Schulz the opportunity to gain valuable community and economic development training and experience. Peoples provides the scholarship to help outstanding community leaders obtain continuing education and contact with others in their field. The training also helps build a strong community development program.

this training Schulz can bring back new ideas that will benefit the entire community," said Jim Markham, customer service manager for Peoples.

The Golden Years

By: Connie Dishrow

Marketers and advertisers of consumer products and services who used to target young people are paying increasing attention to the growing 50-plus population. By the end of the 1990s, this age group will total 76 million while those 18 to 34 will decrease to 63.5 million. TV commercials now feature more older people, and not just for denture or arthritis-relief products. Also, more small companies are marketing products or services especially for older consumers, such as exercise videos and specially organized tours.

Joe Arditi, a retired car salesman, has turned a backyard hobby in Jeffersonville, Pennsylvania, into a hot enterprise — as in hot peppers. He had been gardening more than 40 years when a friend showed him a single habanero pepper seed and told him it sold for $1. Arditi, 72, was growing that variety for home consumption. Now he and his family grow several varieties, harvesting them for seeds to sell by mail order. Retired? He now gets up at 4:30 a.m. to start answering the mail.

Koenig re-elected

Don Koenig is the newly re-elected president of the Wayne County Division of the American Heart Association.

Other officers elected at the recent annual meeting include Laura Gamble, vice president; Marsha Foote, secretary; Ginny Otte, treasurer; Irene Salfros, development chair; LuAnn Ellingson and Vicki Pick, program co-chairs; and Marion Simpson, communications chair.

According to the president's report, Wayne County is currently up 17 percent in fundraising for the 1993-94 fiscal year. Events have included the Heart and Sole Run/Walk, Jump for Heart, Swim for Heart, HeartRide and the residential drive.

Ron Olsen and Kris Giese were recognized in absentia for their outstanding service during the year. Ron Olsen will also be recognized, as the Outstanding Volunteer for the Northeast Area at the state delegate assembly in June.

The program aspect was also successful this past year. In October during the HeartFest Program held at Pac 'N' Save, over 160 citizens were educated about healthy diets and on reading the new food labels. During Heart Month in February, the Wayne division sponsored a poster contest and participated in the Valentine for your Heart Program.

Speakers presented healthy eating tips to the students during a heart healthy meal in the schools. Also during Heart Month, over 250 participated in cholesterol screenings held at Providence Medical Center. Providence Wellness Center performed blood pressure screenings at several Wayne businesses.

The Wayne County Division will not meet during the summer months. The first meeting of the 1994-95 fiscal year will be on Thursday, Sept. 8 at Providence Medical Center.

Brownie troop recognized

Vicki Meyer, director of Haven House in Wayne, has cited Brownie Troop 304 of Wayne, for special recognition for their recent donations. Troop 304 chose Haven House for the troop service project, and asked staff to make up a list of needed items.

Monday, May 16 was the Brownies Award Night and Bridging Ceremony, and the girls presented the gifts to Outreach/Volunteer Coordinator Sara Hutchison.

Since opening the shelter, Haven

House has discovered a need for everyday items and put these at the top of their needed list.

Many times families come to the shelter with very little, or nothing more than the clothes on their backs. The donations of toothpaste, deodorant, hand soap, sweatshirts and kids' scissors will help Haven House provide a safe, comfortable environment for our shelter residents while they are away from home. "Thank you girls, your donations are very useful and our shelter residents will appreciate them," said Ms. Meyer.

Getaway to B&B's

When you operate a Bed and Breakfast, people frequently comment, "I've always wanted to do that," and/or "what's it like? Aren't you afraid to let perfect strangers in your house? Aren't you afraid they will steal something?"

We aren't exactly veterans yet, but it's something we've wanted to do for a long time.

They don't stay perfect strangers long. People who choose B&Bs like the adventure of meeting new folks and seeing different homes. They like to visit, check out woodwork and eat homemade cinnamon rolls.

They don't mind sharing a bathroom with other strangers; and enjoy sitting in a porch swing, listening to birds and Katydids.

We've had honeymooners and couples observing anniversaries, and couples just needing to get away from the kids. There have been grandparents, sisters checking out the antique shops; families visiting for weddings, baptisms and funerals; and out of town construction guys. And then there have been the unmarried couples, the surprises.

By Pat Meierhenry

Does a one-hundred year old farmhouse sound like a romantic trysting place? Some of our guests have said it reminds them of going to Grandma's. Would you take your current significant other to Grandma's and expect her to put you in the same room?

Everyone who knows me knows I'm pretty old-fashioned. Maybe even strait-laced. Therefore, I'm having trouble realizing that these middle-aged folks who don't even live together want to spend the night together in my home. They don't even pretend by signing the guest book as Mr. and Mrs.

One friend told me we were pious, pompous poops. Another laughed and remarked, "These are the 90s." It makes me sad. And I wish they'd just go to a Holiday Inn. I have no desire to judge the private lives of two consenting adults, but we feel used.

We hope you will come to see us, but bring your spouse when you do. Everyone should experience staying at a B&B sometime in their life.

The rolling stream of life goes on, but still the vacant chair — Recalls the time, the voice, the smile, of those who once sat there — Is just a cluster of beautiful memories; sprayed with a million tears. Assess

State law requires residential and business property to be assessed at its market value and agricultural property to be assessed at 80 percent of its market value. But because it's difficult to make the assessments at 100 percent, the state has accepted lower levels of compliance.

This year, the state Board of Equalization set 95 percent as the target for residential valuations and 76 percent for agricultural valuations.

About half of the counties have reached the 95 percent level, said Dennis Donner, property tax manager for the state Revenue Department. He said he expects many more counties to take steps suggested by the state to adjust values up to the 95 percent level.

But some counties -- including Douglas County which includes Omaha -- already have indicated they won't make the mark.

Douglas County Board Chairman Ray Simon said he doesn't sense any interest on the board in increasing values for 1994. Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis has been working on a plan to raise values to 95 percent over four years.

In Washington County, just north of Douglas County, Assessor Sidney Penke said she may suggest rolling back her county's valuations if Douglas County doesn't raise its valuations. Penke already had boosted Washington County's valuations to the 95 percent level.

"It looks like it's going to be a hot summer," said Sarpy County's Iske. "It will be interesting."

There are several pockets of counties within the state where values in neighboring counties are an issue, said Cathy Lang-Morrissey, chief legal counsel in the Revenue Department.

She also said there could be a showdown between some counties and the state over the State Board of Equalization's edict that residential values of 95 percent of market value be achieved.

It was unclear what the state board will do if Douglas County or other counties miss the 95 percent mark.

SECTION B

Elementary students from Emerson were greeted at Pamida in Wayne by local Shriners Thursday when they began their shopping spree for toys and games to be donated to patients in Shriner's Hospitals for Children. They raised money to purchase the gift items as part of the school's service learning program. The students selected to handle the shopping duties were Alissa Tullberg, Heather Koopman, Renee Albrecht, Jared Olson, Denny Hale and Troy Porter. Their teachers Jane Bonderson and Sheri Eaton. Below, Jan Zeiss assists students Alissa and Heather in selecting items on their prepared lists and keeping track of prices.

Students earn funds for Shrine Hospital patients

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Young patients in Shriners Hospitals for children will be the recipients of a special service learning project conducted by students at Emerson School this year.

The students were in Wayne last week on a mission to spend $275 on toys and games at Pamida. The money for the gift for hospital patients was raised by students in two fund raising projects and the students elected the charity they wanted the funds to go to then made the contacts to find out what the hospitals needed most.

A SHRINE HOSPITAL representative suggested the students might want to purchase toys as gifts for the patients rather than give the funds directly to the hospital foundation.

That suggestion provided a whole new area of learning of the students said Jan Zeiss, elementary guidance counselor at Emerson and coordinator of the service learning project. The students had an opportunity to plan their shopping trip and to learn that private businesses were willing to help with their effort.

When he got wind of the Emerson kids plans to shop for toys for Shriners patients, Pamida manager Dean Carroll gave them a 25 percent discount on everything they selected. When United Parcel Service was informed of the plan they not only offered to ship the goods to the Minneapolis hospital free of charge, but the district supervisor from Norfolk came to Emerson Monday to personally supervise the shipping, said Mrs. Zeiss.

WHEN THE KIDS traveled to Wayne Thursday for the shopping spree, local Shriners met them to thank them for their efforts and offer support.

Emerson fifth and sixth graders annually conduct a service learning project to help others, said Mrs. Zeiss.

"This not only teaches them to care for others but also gives them experience in planning, cooperation and understanding," she said.

This year funds were raised through a Kangaroo Court in which the school's Highway Patrol DARE officer assisted the students by "arresting" Emerson leaders and holding them for "bail". The students also held bake and craft sales and conducted raffles.

CONDUCTED THROUGH the Lions Club Quest Program, the school's service learning projects have been in place for three years. Last year the youngsters designed five quilts and brought the scraps to make them. Assisted by the senior citizen center in Emerson, the students prepared the quilts for donation to a veteran's hospital.

They received a certificate from Nebraska Gov. Ben Nelson for their service efforts last year. The students began their fund raising efforts for this year's project in January.

Their teachers are Jane Bonderson, Cindy Anderson and Sheri Eaton.

Specialist seeking improved pastures

Through fertilization, weed control and rotational grazing, farmers can increase their warm season grass production in pastures and haylands, and at the same time increase livestock production, said Charles Shapiro, NU soils specialist at the Northeast Research and Extension Center.

"Nitrogen is an important yearly fertilizer treatment for haylands and warm season grasses like bluestems and switchgrass," said Shapiro. "It will improve the grass yield, protein content and vigor, which reduces weed invasion."

Shapiro added that nitrogen applications should be applied in mid to late May. Applying the nitrogen at the proper time can help keep cool season grasses under control in a field with a mixture of both warm and cool season grasses.

Since subsoil moisture is adequate this year in northeast Nebraska, Shapiro said that nitrogen application will be effective and can potentially double forage production. On high pH level soils in northeastern Nebraska, it is important to apply a non-urea nitrogen source to calcareous soils when air temperatures are above 85 degrees. Urea based nitrogen sources will be lost to the atmosphere due to ammonia volatilization, which is when the nitrogen passes off in a vapor.

Phosphorus is also needed on many Nebraska pastures. In northeastern Nebraska combining phosphorus with nitrogen often produces higher yields than using either nutrient alone, said Shapiro.

"A soil test will determine how much phosphorus to use," he said. If soil levels are high, leave out the phosphorus.

Shapiro said that another factor to consider is if legumes make up one-fourth or more of the stand. In this case, apply 50 percent more phosphorus than if there was grass alone.

"It is important for farmers to remember that unless they utilize the increased forage on pasture land, fertilizing pastures is not economically justified," Shapiro said.

For further information, farmers may pick up NebGuide G78-406 at any county extension office.

It's hot, no bull!

The prospects for a long hot summer appear to be less than exciting for this steer in the Logan LTD Feedlot near Allen. Recent hot, dry weather has prompted a series of advisories for farmers and livestock handlers.

Some herbicides still needing activation

There may not be enough rainfall to activate herbicides that were applied after the spring snow, said David Holshouser, NU weed specialist at the Northeast Research and Extension Center.

"Unless incorporated, soil-applied herbicides will need rain or irrigation for activation," Holshouser said.

Activation occurs when the herbicide is moved into the soil deep enough to enter the weed germination zone. The problem is many different factors determine whether or not the herbicide will activate.

One is germination zones vary with the different weed sizes.

"The amount of rainfall needed to activate the herbicide may vary with weed species," Holshouser said.

Holshouser added that the solubility of the herbicide and the type of soil it is applied on are two other big factors.

"The more soluble a herbicide, the less rainfall is needed," he said. "Of course soil type is also important. Less rainfall is needed on the sandier soils; more is needed on the heavier clays."

If weeds have already emerged through the herbicide layer, a rainfall may still activate the herbicide, but weed control will depend on several factors. Herbicides like atrazine, Bladex and Sencor are taken up by the roots, so after some rainfall the weed may still die. Control with herbicides like Lasso, Dual, Frontier, Surpass and Harness Plus after weeds have emerged should not be expected, due to their absorption through the unemerged shoots, Holshouser said.

For more information on herbicides farmers can contact their local extension office.

Statistics service seeking info on farms

A nationwide survey to estimate 1994 crop acreages, grain stocks and livestock numbers will include interviews with Wayne county farmers, the Nebraska Agricultural Statistics Service announced.

Virginia Gosch, with the Service's field staff, will contact local producers beginning May 30 for information about crops planted and planting intentions planned for 1994 and number of livestock on hand. Some producers may be telephoned from the Lincoln office. All individual information collected is confidential and used only in developing official national and state estimates.

Ag survey info being requested

The Nebraska Agricultural Statistics Service announced that Nebraska crop and livestock producers will be asked to participate in a nation-wide survey during the May 30 - June 13 period. Information obtained in this annual survey will be used to develop estimates of 1994 crop acreages, grain stocks and mid-year livestock numbers. All individual information is confidential and used only in developing official USDA National and State estimates.

Bill Dobbs, State Statistician, noted that it is important that producers have accurate information on current crop and livestock levels to assess production potential in developing their marketing plans for the future. Producer cooperation on the survey, he adds, is the key to developing accurate estimates and the only way to have an orderly marketing system.

Representatives from the NASS staff will telephone and personally interview a cross section of farmers, and questionnaires will be mailed to others, to gather data for these estimates. National and individual state estimates will be published by USDA's Agricultural Statistics Board. A report on 1994 spring planted crop acreages and grain stocks will be available on June 30, including estimates of wheat yield and production. Hog numbers will also be released on June 30. Cattle survey data will be collected during early July and U.S. cattle inventories published July 22.

Elevators will also be surveyed to obtain supplies of off-farm grain stocks.

Gosch said that farmer cooperation is necessary to provide accurate crop and livestock estimates. The results of this survey will provide farmers, ranchers, merchants, policymakers and other agricultural data users with expected supplies from agriculture this year.

The report on 1994 crop acreages and stocks will be prepared by USDA's Agricultural Statistics Board for release on June 30, including U.S. and Nebraska estimates of spring planted crops, wheat production and grain stock holdings for several major crops. Hog numbers will also be released June 30. Cattle survey data will be collected during early July and U.S. cattle inventories published July 22.
