Local Miss does well at Nebraska pageant

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) — A senior from the University of Nebraska at Kearney was crowned Miss Nebraska.

Jennifer Love, 21, of North Platte was chosen Saturday from a field of 10 finalists. She is expected to compete for the Miss America crown in September in Atlantic City, N.J.

Miss Northeast Nebraska, Amy Adkins of Laurel, won the interview competition of the pageant but did not finish in the final five for the overall title.

Mardelle Wiseman, director of the Miss Northeast Nebraska pageant in Wayne said she was very proud of Amy Adkins performance in the state pageant.

"She represented us very well," said Mrs. Wiseman who added the state pageant provided many insights for the improvement on next year's local pageant in Wayne.

The four other winners are: first runner-up Tracy Distefano, 23, from Columbus; second runner-up Kristin Hanssen, 22, from Elmwood; third runner-up Heidi Henry, 18, of Cozad; fourth runner-up Lindsay Miller, 19, of Omaha.

Eighteen women competed this year in the pageant, which included talent, physical fitness-swimsuit and evening wear events.

In contests that began Thursday and ended Saturday, the women competed for $15,300 in cash and $129,000 in tuition prizes offered by colleges. It was the 10th consecutive year the event was held in North Platte.

Finalists were announced Saturday and they started with a clean slate except for the interview portion.

"She will surely be missed in this year's parade," said Mrs. Hansen.

Family values encouraged in local talks by Senator

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Sen. Bob Kerrey delivered a couple of rousing endorsements for traditional family values during speeches in Northeast Nebraska Saturday.

At a campaign potluck in Concord he reminded 150 supporters that God gave them the natural resources in Nebraska and advantages of life here and we have an obligation to be humble and work hard for our young people to try to improve on what we have been given.

He urged them to pass on the legacy they have been given.

"Part of that legacy to me is making sure we take care of our children, that we build our schools and we support our schools and we, as parents, do what we are supposed to do with our kids," he said.

Earlier in the day, as the keynote speaker at the national conference on the family at Wayne State College, he said single parents shouldn't be ashamed of their lives, but it is better if the nation's children have both a mom and dad at home.

"Growing up in a loving family is the most extraordinary luck imaginable," Kerrey, told about 100 people at the family conference. "Single heads of households need not live in shame, but they must acknowledge it is not the preferred way."

Kerrey, who is divorced, said his children, a 19-year-old son and a 17-year-old daughter, have no doubt that he and his former wife love them. He struck on the family values theme in part while responding to letters while on the plane bound for Nebraska. He finished writing his impassioned speech on the plane said aids.

Parenting today is not easy because children have more idle time and parents have less, he told the family conference audience.

"One problem that torments me most, as an adult, as a senator, is 'What is going on with our kids?' he said. "Increasingly, we are not only afraid for them, increasingly we are afraid of them."

He cited a "Kids Count" report that ranked Nebraska as the 5th safest and fifth healthiest environment for children. However, he said the report also contained startling news about the increase in violent crime perpetrated by children. In five years violent crime by those 10 to 17 had increased 36 percent.

"The number of teenagers that were neither working nor in school went up by the same amount. The number of teenagers that were having children out of wedlock went up about the same amount as well."

He said he was touched by a letter he received from a mother in Central City, who told him her 12-year-old daughter and a friend had been raped on Halloween and the rapist was still terrorizing them with threatening and obscene letters.

"Central City, Nebraska is afraid for her daughter's life," he said.

He said we can't only blame parental neglect for the rising youth crime and other youth problems. He said some of the problem is attributable to the jobs picture in America. That is why he said he spends a lot of time on jobs, technology and health care.

Federal programs such as the Family Leave Bill and national health care reforms are examples of government programs that help families, Kerrey said.

"If we say with our laws that dollars are more important than families, then the children will struggle," he said. "We must value human beings more than we value money."

"We have not been put upon this earth by our maker merely to en-

College board approves 3 percent budget hike

The State College Board of Trustees last week approved a $44.1 million budget which represents a 3 percent increase for the 1994-95 year.

Wayne State's budget will be $17.5 million. Chadron State will spend $17.2 million and Peru State will have $8.9 million. The system office, which includes executive director, budget director, academic official, spokeswoman and other support staff, will have a $453,231 budget.

Wayne State has 282 full time professors and staff members while Chadron has 245 and Peru has 134.

The state college budgets are made up of approximately 60 percent state funds, 30 percent tuition and fees and 10 percent federal money.

The colleges' budget is dwarfed by the University of Nebraska system which announced a preliminary budget last week of over $1 billion.

In other business at the college trustees meeting last week, Kathi Swanson of Alliance was named chairwoman of the board. She will replace Peter Claussen of Omaha. Jerry Conway of Wayne was named vice-chairman of the trustees.

A report was also presented to the board last week calling for the state college campuses to hire more minorities and offer incentives for enrollment of more minority students.

Four percent of the colleges' faculty members are members of minority groups the trustees were told. In addition enrollment of minority freshmen is only 2 percent at Chadron, 4 percent at Wayne and 5 percent at Peru, the report said.

The report, delivered by Suzi Shugart, spokeswoman for the state college system, recommends that better communication be established with high school counselors. It also recommended that more scholarships be created for minority students.

For recruitment of minority professors, the report encourages, among other things, that the colleges participate in a Midwestern Higher Education Commission study of minority faculty development.

WSC president's raise tops all

Wayne State College President Dr. Donald Mash received the largest raise of the three state college presidents and received a pat on the back from the members of the State College Board of Trustees last week.

Citing Mash's effectiveness in Wayne State's current private fund drive which is nearing its $13.5 million goal as the key reason for giving him the largest raise of 4 percent, the board hiked his base pay to $104,138.

Dr. Sam Rankin at Chadron State and Dr. Robert Burns at Peru both received 2 percent raises. For Burns, the raise ended speculation about his future with the system. Last year the board had declined to give him a raise citing needs for him to improve in some areas.

Rankin's pay rose to $102,136 and Burns moves to $94,730. Mash and Rankin also receive a $5,000 per year longevity stipend plus $14,000 per year housing allowance which is up from $13,500 last year.

"I appreciate the recognition -- the recognition of the impact of my work," Mash said.

Most of the faculty and staff members in the state college system will get 2 percent raises.

Busy times bring need to rejuvenate

It's the second Saturday in June, mid-morning. The thermometer says 70°; there is very little wind, the lawn is newly mown and the birds are singing an especially beautiful song. I spent ten hours in bed last night, recuperating, and I'm feeling positive again.

Every once in awhile, my "get up and go" caves in to fatigue and I have to sleep. I knew last night was one of those nights when I fell asleep on the couch while Mike was watching the basketball game. Not even Ewing defending against Olajuwon could keep my eyes open.

I'd had a call from a friend about a nurse retreat here in July, and I did not call back. My tired brain could not function well enough to summon any enthusiasm for it. The Bed and Breakfast business, coupled with Home Health Care and Hospice, had wiped me out.

We knew, going into it, there would be days like that. There are in any business. The month of May years, but I had never met Dick. They were long-time owners of the West Point paper, and I had read columns by him, so felt as if I knew him. He's even nicer in person.

They had never eaten at Anna's in Cedar Creek, so we went there for dinner. This is always an experience. There is a German chef, and the menu is a book, with a table of contents.

The owner's wife is a quilter, and June features an annual quilt show. They are raffling a gorgeous quilt. I'm buying 10 tickets. It's for a good cause, Air Life Flight, and it's a gorgeous quilt.

Dick and Gwen are retired, the lucky people, but are still very busy. And we enjoyed their visit, even when we are too busy. I'll tell you about the Hospice banquet next time.

just happened to be a killer. Our social life got in the way of our business, and my turns at being on call had me "on duty" for 19 days straight.

I'm becoming a whiz at making beds and cleaning bathrooms, but I'll probably need new sheets and towels for Christmas.

Highlights this past week were a visit by Dick and Gwen Lindberg of West Point, and the Nebraska Hospice Associate banquet at Bergan-Mercy Hospital.

dure. We have been put upon this earth to create and to build. I have tried my best, and though sometimes I have not always been at my best, I tried to honor the need for us to stay committed to that motive," he told the Concord audience.

Some of the other issues covered during the family conference at Wayne State included family violence, women and AIDS, the role of the father, care of the elderly, children of divorce and marital communication.

Scholars, researchers and writers from across the country attended the two-day conference, said Deb Whitt, conference director.

Mishap leaves bruises but belts do their job

The Wayne Police Department was called to the scene of a two-vehicle accident around 3 p.m., Monday on Seventh and Windom Street.

A 1990 Cadillac driven by William Lovejoy of Wakefield was driving east bound when it collided with a 1993 Ford Explorer driven by Lori Carollo of Wayne.

Carollo was attempting to make a left turn onto Windom when she was struck by the Lovejoy vehicle. Wayne police officer Alan Hart said damages to the two vehicles was extensive.

"I estimated the Explorer to have about $10,000 of damages and the Cadillac around $7,000," Hart said. "All parties in each vehicle were wearing seatbelts."

Carollo was taken to Providence Medical Center where she was treated for bumps and bruises and released. Her sons Tony and Jason who were in the vehicle were not injured.

Hart said after the Cadillac made contact with the Explorer the front end got wedged underneath the Explorer causing the vehicle to tip over onto its side. No citations were issued in the accident.

Students are interns

Kyle Frederick and Corey Jensen, both from Winside and both building construction students at Northeast Community College, will be working with cooperative education internships during the summer.

Frederick will be working with Lieb Construction in Sutton and Jensen will be with Walters Construction in Norfolk.

Cooperative education internships provide on-the-job training in a position related to each student's major field of study and career goals. Students also receive exposure to practitioners in his/her chosen field, direct contact with potential employers, college credit while working and a salary while learning.

Employers have the opportunity to preview candidates for permanent employment, train potential employees, reduce their cost of recruiting and training and increase their company's visibility in the community. Employers interested in cooperative education, or students wishing to enroll in Northeast programs, should contact Northeast Community College at 1-800-348-9033, or 371-2020.

Northeast Community College offers more than 50 vocational, technical, liberal arts and business degree programs of study, leading to immediate employment opportunities, or transfer to a four-year college.

Sexual assault case is filed in Wayne

In a recent issue of the Wayne Herald, the police report said the Wayne Police Department had responded to a sexual assault at Providence Medical Center on May 20.

The police did respond to a sexual assault call but it did not happen at Providence Medical Center, but that's where the alleged victim was when the police were notified.

The incident had happened earlier and according to Wayne Police Chief Vern Fairchild the matter was turned over to Wayne County Attorney Michael Pieper.

Pieper said as a result of the incident Chris Nuss of Wayne has been charged with 1st Degree Sexual Assault.

tion in another round of competition.

Mary Lynn Schnitzler, 24, ended her reign Saturday as Miss Nebraska. She has received nearly $11,000 in scholarships, enough to pay for her undergraduate degree at Wayne State College and most of her work in nursing school the next two years at Bryan Memorial Hospital in Lincoln.

In the last year, Schnitzler focused on fighting the exploitation of children and on helping youth build self-esteem.

Miss Adkins was selected at the Wayne pageant in March and plans to use the scholarship funds she won there to attend summer school at WSC. She is a UNL graduate. She received $200 for winning the interview competition at North Platte in addition to a cash prize for selling the most advertising in the pageant program.

Mrs. Wiseman said Amy battled a case of pink eye during the competition and had thought she had not done well in the interview judging.

The Golden Years

By: Connie Dishrow

How secure are people in their 50s as they look ahead to retirement? About half feel there is a chance of losing their jobs within a year. This concern was among initial findings of a health and retirement survey of more than 12,000 people age 51 through 61 sponsored by the National Institute of Aging. Median annual income per household was $37,500, with median assets of $80,000. But many fell far short of those levels. One in five had no assets, two in five had no stake in a private pension and one in seven was without health insurance.

For much of his life, Hananiah Harari thrived at painting portraits of the famous. Then he traded that for what he quips is a "life of poverty" — painting in many different styles. His works, exhibited all over the world, are in the collections of leading art museums. He often earns "best-of-show" awards and other honors. And he regularly travels from his Hudson River home to teach art students in New York. "Harari is 81, but no one seems to have told him," a local newspaper said.

'You know,' that's what really bugs me

Jim Dandy sat mentally browsing over his morning coffee. He said "You know, I have an idea for your column."

Great! Let's hear it!
"You know, write about things people would like to say but can't."
You mean folk have thoughts they won't express?

"Yeah, you know, sometimes it ain't appropriate, polite or politically correct."

Give me a 'for instance', Jim.
"Like the other day, you know, I saw a heavy-set woman, fat actually, get out of her car. She parked just as close as she could to a business, you know? In fact, she parked in a handicapped space. I was just dying, you know, to ask her why she didn't park a block away and walk for exercise. But I didn't."

What zipped your lip?
"No need to hurt her feelings. Plus, you know, she probably would have told me where I could go and park!"

No doubt! Do you think most folk wish they could say things but don't?
"You know, I'd guess 100 percent of folk bark and grumble under their breath."

Really! Like what for example?
"Like when a LUP (Liquored Up Person) sits next to you, you know, at a ball game and ruins it for you and everyone! Or you'd like to get your mail, but can't because of folk parked in front of the Post Office reading theirs!"

What else turns your crank, Jim?
"Idiot's who get their driver's license, you know, out of a cereal box. Most of them are not teenagers, although kids do drive too fast. They drive like they're using spaghetti for brains, and, you know, they never quite understand turn signals."

Merlin Wright

Remember Jim, if you don't know where you're going, you can't get lost! What else annoys you?

"So many things! Like you hold a door open for a lady, you know, but instead of saying 'thank you', she lets you know she's a feminist who can do it herself! She doesn't recall the day, you know, when men respected women and were mannerly. Today, with equal rights, that sweet girl of yesterday can color the air blue with a trucker's tongue!"

Do you think television has changed things?

"Talk about TV! I'm a channel surfer, you know? TV language! Outrageous! How about yourself? Do you have a secret pet peeve?"

I do, and I'll tell you! It bugs me to death when you keep saying 'you know!'

Capitol News —

When political lawyers collide

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Nebraska Attorney General Don Stenberg took a tiger by the tail when he decided to file suit against District Judge John Murphy of North Platte.

Stenberg asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to decide whether Murphy, as a member of the judiciary, could serve on the Nebraska Crime Commission without violating the separation of powers doctrine.

Murphy — a leading Democrat in Lincoln County before then-Gov. Bob Kerrey appointed him to the bench in 1983 - has been playing legal hardball with the Republican attorney general ever since.

Stenberg has responded with a few tough pitches of his own. Last week, the Attorney General asked the judge to remove himself from a long-standing lawsuit against the state Department of Roads.

Assistant Attorney General Lynne Fritz — who's defending the Roads Department — argued that the judge might not be impartial, considering the difficulties he's having with the Attorney General's office.

Stenberg likens Murphy's case to that of former State Sen. Jerry Conway of Wayne, who was forced to choose between his job as a Wayne State College professor and his position as a senator after a 1991 Supreme Court ruling.

The Attorney General's Office seems a bit chagrined that the judge isn't being as nice about being sued as Conway was.

Murphy hasn't given an inch.

He refused to respond to the lawsuit — of which he was well aware — until he received official summons from the court. Now he insists that the state hire him a lawyer, because he maintains he's being sued in the course of his duties as a state employee.

Conway voluntarily appeared in court and hired his own attorney. Murphy should do the same, lawyers from the Attorney General's Office say.

Murphy says the Legislature wanted a judge's expertise when it mandated that a district judge be one of the 17 members of the crime commission — which, by the way, includes Stenberg.

Judge Murphy and his supporters suggest that Stenberg has another reason for going after the judge: namely, Murphy has been a burr in his side, raising questions about the cost of and need for Stenberg's get-tough-on-crime proposals.

"He (Stenberg) likes to go around saying that we have a crime problem because soft judges don't send people to prison," Murphy has said. "I would suggest that prisons are not full to overcrowding because people are volunteering to live in them: they're full to overcrowding because judges are sending people to prison."

Stenberg says it's not just a personal dispute — he would have sued any judge appointed to the commission.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Letters

Absolutely sickened

Dear Editor:

My family and I were appalled at the recent letters to the editor in your paper. We were quickly reminded of what a Godless society we live in. To see such disgust about a monument honoring innocent and defenseless little children that have been killed in the name of "choice" is absolutely sickening.

If God says in His Word that if a person would cause even one of these "little ones" to sin that it would be better for a stone to be tied around his neck and thrown into the depths of the sea, then what do you think His judgement will be for those who support this modern-day holocaust? He also says in His Word that if you don't oppose evil (such as abortion, neglect or abuse) then you are as guilty as one promoting it. Our God is a just and righteous God and as the person tried to explain, but got the truth turned completely around about the church, God does judge evil-doers. In some instances He has ordered entire populations to be killed because of their sins.

Let's pray that the people of our country would repent and turn from our sins so that the same judgement would not come to us.

Lastly, I thank Rausch Bros. Monument Co. for such a wonderful monument honoring children that could not defend themselves much less defend their country.

Children treasured

Dear Editor:

Children are the treasure, the future of a nation. America is treating her children badly. These "little people" are defenseless against abortion, abuse and neglect. Increasingly, social scientists and journalists are speaking out about what we are doing to our children. Solutions are beyond the scope of this letter. But a monument in Greenwood Cemetery which causes us to remember these children, and stirs our conscience to better action, should be appreciated.

One Wayne Herald letter to the editor stated that you could not justify a pro-life position, give the history of the Christian Church regarding murder. Cited were God's commands through Moses, the Inquisition and other abuse of power by the Pope.

Anyone who accepts the Bible as truth can understand why God commanded Moses to destroy the inhabitants of the land promised to Israel. The Canaanites, who then occupied the land, worshiped their gods in religious rites by immoral sexual indulgence. As part of this idolatrous worship, first-born children were sacrificed to their gods.

Is it any wonder God commanded the extermination of the Canaanites? God's people, Israel, were to "keep my covenant, then out of all nations you will be for me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation," Exodus 19:5-6. Israel failed to utterly destroy the idolatrous nations in the land. These heathen nations then led many in Israel into the worship of idols and ultimate punishment.

In more modern church-history, unjust and horrible crimes have been inflicted on people in the name of the church. Charles Colson has pointed out that more than 3,000 people were killed over 300 years of the Inquisition. Perhaps one million were killed in the Crusades, certainly too many as professional armies fought over a long period of time. But Colson states "Let's compare that to the twentieth century — the twentieth century which rejected Christianity. Godless regimes like the Nazis and Stalin and Pol Pot and the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia and the killing fields massacred somewhere between 60 to 100 million people.

More civilians have been killed in the twentieth century by people who rejected God than in all the other centuries of human history put together. Now don't tell me there is a 'bloody history to Christianity, that we've massacred people. The people that have been massacred in the greatest numbers were in the twentieth century, the century that rejected God and was enforced by secular ideology."

We should not find fault with a holy God, but with imperfect men and organizations. There are absolute truths, a moral order established by God, including sanctity of life. We can stand on that truth in opposing abortion, abuse and neglect of children.

They deserve love

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to the negative letters published in The Wayne Herald in regards to the memorial from Rausch Monument.

I am a parent who lost a son who was two days old. My husband and I wanted to give our son a proper burial because we love him dearly.

Last week, some friends of ours had a miscarriage. The mother was five months along in her pregnancy. Again, the parents gave their son a proper burial because they love him.

What about all the thousands of babies who die through abortion? Are they not God's children who deserve to be loved? I commend Rausch Monument for recognizing the innocents. Maybe just one child's life can be saved because of this precious monument!

Other reunions

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the article about the 50's class reunion that is to be held June 16-18.

Contrary to the fact that this is the first of its kind ever to be held in Wayne, this is to inform you of one that was held June 15-16, 1985 for all those graduating in the 30s and was called the "Dirty Thirties" reunion. Our class of 1931 had 11 in attendance at the reunion and there were 240 people at the dinner that was held at the Black Night.

Offending whom?

Dear Editor:

We were shocked to see all the negative comments in your paper regarding the monument at the cemetery. A few people stated it was offensive. To whom? God or Satan? That's all that really matters. We should not care what mere earthlings think if it gives honor to God.

Maybe a few people are feeling guilt. If so, the message is — if you are truly sorry for what you have done, God will forgive you, as he forgives all people.

Fifty years from now it won't matter what all this trivia is about — just be sure you are on the right side!

P.S. If the stone has to be rolled away, we would be honored to have it put on our property!

Albert and Janelle Nelson

Lost respect

Dear Editor:

Upon reading the hot-blooded letters of respected citizens concerning the monument erected in memory of abortion victims, I was somewhat curious. In my spare time, I entered the cemetery and quite frankly, I was shocked. I was surprised to find a simple stone engraved with beautiful words. Where was the elaborate and offensive "granite billboard" that will eventually make Wayne a laughingstock? I was expecting neon signs for all the hype. If one is "shocked and somewhat embarrassed" by flowers, a wishing well and, God forbid, a bench, one could choose to look the other way.

I may only be 18, but I think I can distinguish between a memorial and an advertisement. The monument is the first thing I have ever seen to give a simple dignity to the deaths of murdered children. I was touched by the memorial and I commend the Rausch Brothers Monument Company for not turning their backs to needless death. If you find their marker offensive, you should wake up to the real world. If you would turn on the news you would see things more offensive than a memorial to get all hot and bothered about. Things like rape, war, drug use, AIDS, terrorism, gang violence — need I go on?

It disgusts me that people I once respected see the memorial as mere advertisement. It is no different than any other memorial in the cemetery save the fact that while others lie peacefully in the earth under their markers, the unborn are absent. They are lying in dumpsters in alleys.

I can't respect you any longer, but I will respect those who have departed — regardless their age of death.

Symbol of war

Dear Editor:

Recently a monument was erected in our cemetery — a monument dedicated to the young, the helpless children who, by circumstances beyond their own power, are no longer living. Also recently, letters were written signifying that this was grotesque, a repulsive stone put up to offend all who see it.

This monument was put up as a symbol of a war that is fought by those too young to fight — not only for abortions, (as the letters seem to suggest), but also for those who were killed by neglect and abuse. I would like to know why this monument seems so offensive. It is simply a beautiful, loving monument dedicated by those who care — not a gross, tacky use of our First Amendment rights (nor 'advertising' our views on abortion) as many misinformed people seem to believe. The monument is, in fact, quite similar to the MIA, POW and unknown soldier's monuments which are located in many cemeteries worldwide. The difference is that those wars have ended, and this war has not.

The cemetery is a sacred place, and a more appropriate place could not have been found for honoring our children. Is that why some people wish it to be removed?

Pleased in Wayne

Dear Editor:

We are about to leave Wayne after a visit with our children and grandchildren. But before we leave I want to let you know how pleased we were with our accommodations and reception by the staff of the Super 8 motel.

I am hard of hearing and under the federal law, Americans With Disability Act, I am entitled to certain accommodations like a caption decoder for TV, a TDD for the phone (Telephone Communication Device for the Deaf) and other devices. The Super 8 Motel is the only one of your hotels which is in compliance with this law and I am very pleased to praise them and thank them. It makes it possible for me to watch and understand TV programs since with the decoder I can read the words that are being spoken on the bottom of the screen and I am able to make telephone calls on the TDD via the Nebraska Relay System.

We come to visit two to three times a year and we only patronize motels/hotels which accommodate disabled people. It is a pleasure to do business with Super 8 Motel here in Wayne and we thoroughly enjoyed our eight days with them.

Quite natural

Dear Editor:

There is a debate in the letters column relating to a memorial to the Unborn in the local cemetery. There is no need to debate this matter. To place a "marker" in a cemetery to remember a life once lived is quite natural, and has been a way for people to express grief over the loss of a loved one — one held sacred — for many hundreds of years in Western culture.

Why fear a memorial to the Unborn? Just as a "still-born" child deserves to be remembered, so do all the Unborn.

Someone once wrote: "There is a road that leads to God, and the condition of walking that road aright is the supernatural life. Everything that happens to a person on that road has a bearing on the supernatural, and is considered good or bad depending on whether it helps or hinders one's eternal soul as it travels that road toward God."

To memorialize sacred human life is good. That is obvious. It is a way of saying to God: "Thank you for having given us this life; we remember it in Your honor, for You are the Creator of all sacred human life."

The Unborn are sacred and innocent. This is true and we all know it. They ought not be forgotten. For the sake of the soul of this "America" the Unborn must not be allowed to be free from our memory. America, now, not only encourages the taking of innocent life through abortion; America, now, subsidizes the taking of innocent human life — through taxpayer's dollars. You are paying the bill.

Cause of pain

Dear Editor:

Father Kearn's Council #8579 of the Knights of Columbus of Wayne (a Catholic fraternal organization) commends Rausch Brothers Monument Company for the donation to Greenwood Cemetery of a monument to babies who have died as result of abortion, abuse or neglect. We express our gratitude to the Cemetery Board for allowing the monument to be erected. The loss of a child, a precious gift to a family, is cause of great pain. This memorial not only remembers the babies, but also shows a genuine care for those who grieve such loss, especially the mothers. It also reminds us of the violence in our society that creates an environment in which abortion, abuse and neglect can be allowed to happen. They are acts made all the more horrible because the victims are so defenseless.

The Knights, long known for our concern for helping the handicapped through our annual Tootsie Roll drive, are happy to see the same concern shown for babies who have died and their grieving families.

Controlling weight for life easier than dieting

Weight loss is an important topic among many Americans, but it is easier and healthier for people to make life long changes in their eating habits before becoming overweight.

"To eat lean for life, you must adopt a pattern of eating that will permit you to reach this goal every day," said Darlene Martin, NU extension nutrition specialist.

One of the most important patterns many people need to change is the amount of fat in their diets. Since fats has over twice the calories and stores in the body easier than protein and carbohydrates do, it is important to keep fat at 30 percent, or lower of total calories, Martin said. To help cut fat, try not to add it to vegetables, bread, pasta and rice. She added that skim milk has just a little over half the calories of whole milk because the fat is removed. Also cut back on salad dressings and if you eat desserts, make sure they are fat-free. This will help control weight and prevent the increase in heart disease and certain types of cancer that fats may promote.

Another way to control weight is to eat more bulky foods, because they take more time to chew and satisfy the appetite sooner. Eating fruits and vegetables fresh instead of processed into products like juice, will diminish appetite sooner. Starches are also a good source of bulky food.

"Most people can afford the calories in six to 11 servings of starchy foods when fats are not added," said Martin. "People in many parts of the world get most of their calories from grains without having overweight problems."

To help break bad habits and create a lean pattern of eating, only bring healthy foods home from the store, and serve lean foods when entertaining at home. Another important step, Martin said, is to choose lean foods when eating out. Sharing portions and skipping dessert will save both money and calories. When eating at salad bars remember olives, croutons, nuts, bacon bits and cheese are some toppings that increase calories, she added. Asking for dressings on fast food sandwiches is another good way to cut calories.

"Eating leaner is easier when family members try to change their eating habits and exercise regularly together, Martin said.

"If you and your family want to be lean for life, start using the pattern of eating lean and exercising regularly," she said. "To make changes in food habits easier, try to involve all members of your family in the planning and practice of lean food purchasing, cooking and eating."

Explain feelings of self-doubt

QUESTION: Why are feelings of inferiority and inadequacy so prevalent among people of all ages at this time?

DR. DOBSON: The current epidemic of self-doubt has resulted from a totally unjust and unnecessary system of evaluating human worth now prevalent in society.

Not everyone is seen as worthy; not everyone is accepted. Instead, we reserve our praise and admiration for a select few who have been blessed from birth with the characteristics we value most. It is a vicious system, and you and I, as parents, must counterbalance its impact.

It seems that human worth in our society is carefully reserved for those who meet certain rigid specifications. The beautiful people are born with it; those who are highly intelligent are likely to find approval; superstar athletes are usually respected.

But no one is considered valuable just because he is! Social acceptability is awarded rather carefully, making certain to exclude those who are unqualified.

QUESTION: I have a 9-year-old daughter who lacks confidence and self-respect. What can I do to help her?

DR. DOBSON: One of the most productive means of instilling self-confidence is to teach methods by which the child can compensate.

Compensation occurs when the individual counterbalances his weaknesses by capitalizing on his strengths. It is our job as parents to help our children find those strengths and learn to exploit them for all the self-satisfaction they will yield.

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

And this brings us to a very important concept to be grasped: inferiority can either crush and paralyze an individual or it can provide tremendous emotional energy which powers every kind of success and achievement. Remember that the same boiling water that hardens the egg will soften the carrot.

Everything depends on the individual's reaction to stressful circumstances. The question is, will your daughter collapse under the weight of inferiority or will she use her emotional needs to supercharge her initiative and drive?

The answer may depend on the direction you can provide in identifying compensatory skills. Perhaps she can establish her niche in music—many children do. Maybe she can develop her artistic talent, learn to write, cultivate mechanical skills, learn to cook, or learn to raise rabbits for fun and profit.

Regardless of what the choice is, the key is to start her down that road early . . . right now! There is nothing more risky than sending a teenager into the storms of adolescence with no skills, no unique knowledge, no means of compensating.

When this occurs, her ego is stark naked. She cannot say, "I may not be the most popular student in school, but I am the best trumpet player in the band." Her only source of self-esteem comes from the acceptance of other students. . . and their love is notoriously fickle.

These questions and answers are excerpted from the book Dr. Dobson Answers Your Questions. Medications for infants must be selected cautiously and carefully. Until children are two or three years old, their bodies, specifically their livers, are unable to remove medications and chemicals the way that adult bodies can. If medications are used for prolonged periods of time, the amount of medication can build up in a baby's system to potentially dangerous levels. When medications are being used for long periods of time, special care should be taken. If you have questions, contact your pharmacist.

WOMEN OF ELCA

The Women of the ELCA of Salem Lutheran Church met May 26 in the church basement. Mac Greve, president, opened the meeting by reading "Guidelines for Sane Living".

The program began with the hymn "Lord Speak to Us That We May Speak." Gloria Oberg gave devotions. She also sang and African song, "Listen God is Calling", in English.

Esther Oberg told the story of the Zam Zam. In the spring of 1941 the ship named the Zam Zam was transporting 140 missionaries including 19 from the Augustana Synod to South Africa. On April 17 it was shelled by Germans and sank. All passengers were picked up safely by the Germans and taken to France. The video "Saved to Serve" was also shown. It told the story of some of the survivors of this sinking and how they went on to serve. It is a story of God's grace and love.

The hymn "I Love to Tell the Story" was sung. While the offering was received, Gloria Oberg sang "Acres of Diamonds," accompanied by Famy Johnson. The program ended with prayer by Esther Oberg.

A short business meeting followed. Circles were reminded of the need to furnish cookies for Bible School May 31-June 3.

An invitation was read to a guest day at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Wayne on July 13 at 9:15 am.

Announcement was made of the Autumn renewal at Fremont on October 1. Registration should be sent by Sept 12.

Jeff Lutt returns to Wayne after release from pro team

Wayne's Jeff Lutt has returned home after being released by the Augusta Greenjackets of professional baseball's A League. Augusta, a farm team from the Major League's Pittsburgh Pirates made the decision last Thursday.

Lutt was a middle relief pitcher for the Greenjackets and had pitched in 24 of the 60 games played so far with an ERA of 4.02. He had pitched 38 innings of ball and struck out 39 batters and walked 14.

"I had one of the best ERA's on the team," Lutt said. "I was a little shocked after being told I was released but they told me it was because of the recent baseball draft."

Pittsburgh drafted six pitchers in its first 10 selections and they wanted to make room for them which meant Lutt along with three other pitchers became expendable.

"The Pirates wanted to keep their higher draft picks," Lutt said. "They had to put them somewhere."

Greenjackets manager Scott Little told Jeff there was interest in him from other teams immediately, but Lutt said he needed some time to think about things so he packed up and drove back to Wayne.

"When I got back and went and talked to Wayne State football Dennis Wagner because I still have two years of eligibility left in football," the former two-year starter at outside linebacker for the Wildcats said. "I told him I wanted to come back and play again and he said that would be fine."

Lutt is slated to graduate from Wayne State in May of 1995 but as mentioned, still has two years of football eligibility left. The former Wayne high standout in football and baseball said after football season is over, he'll make up his mind about going back to play baseball.

"I do have the opportunity to go play baseball for another team upon the completion of football," Lutt said. "At this point, however, I haven't decided if I want to or not."

Lutt said he really isn't overly disappointed in his early return to Wayne. "I'd have to say at this point, I'm happy," Lutt said. "I do want to play some more football and now I have the chance."

WAYNE STATE head football coach Dennis Wagner gives instruction to one of the campers at the Wayne State Football Camp, Monday. This year's camp drew over 470 campers, the largest in the history of Wayne State and the largest football camp in Nebraska. The camp will continue through Wednesday.

Record number campers attending football camp

Wayne State Athletic Director Pete Chapman is pleased to announce the 1994 Wildcat Football Camps are the most successful ever.

The current camp which is for boys entering grades 9-12 and runs through Wednesday, has achieved a record attendance of 474 campers and approximately 30 high school coaches. With 474 campers, more than any other football camp in Nebraska, the Wildcat coaching staff has surpassed last year's effort of 325.

"I am very pleased with this year's turnout," Chapman said. "This is by far the largest group we have ever put together here in Wayne."

The Wayne State football coaches will complete this year's summer activities with another camp for boys entering grades 9-12—this time in Grand Island, June 24-26 at Northwest High School.

It will be a full-contact camp with the objective of teaching techniques and fundamentals. The cost of the camp is $80 per person, or $60 per person if 11 or more players from the same team attend.

Potpourri of tidbits Lights are turned on

Last Thursday night was a monumental night for softball players in the City of Wayne. Lights were turned on in one field of the City Softball Complex for the first time in history—unfortunately it was extremely long overdue.

After playing slow pitch softball for years, I have seen my share of softball complexes throughout the state of Nebraska and Wayne's I must admit, isn't bad.

The only downfall in the past has been the lack of lights and realistically, there was no excuse for it. In order for a place like Wayne to host district and even state tournament softball events is to have lights and for those very narrow minded people out there who don't believe the world of sports has anything to offer a community like ours, you are flat wrong.

See, it's real simple. A couple dozen softball teams drive to our city to play in a district or state tournament. What they do, is find motel rooms, buy gas, go to grocery stores, buy beverages, hit the sporting goods store for anything they might have forgotten, eat at fast food restaurants, get tired of fast food and go to a sit-down restaurant and much much more.

For Pete's Sake

By Kevin Peterson

Then you add the spouses, girl friends, relatives and kids and you pretty much repeat the above mentioned cycle, plus the addition of shopping, swimming and more.

Now, tell me that the reason the wait on the softball lights was because just a minority of people use them—bull! At any rate, a few people should be singled out for these lights including Mert Ellis and his wife Vonnie and Gary Brummond and his wife Mary George. These folks donated several thousand dollars off pickle cards proceeds from Mr. B's and Mert's Place—the same business, which ended up being used for the lights.

There are several individuals deserving of recognition for their efforts in seeing the lighted field project through its completion and to you the community owes a great big "Thank You."

Steve Jorgensen did an awful lot of leg-work on this project and pretty much started the ball rolling in getting the lights. The Wayne Men's Softball Association and the Girls Softball Association had a lot of volunteers that helped with the installation and Mike Beiermann donated many hours in hooking up the lights and the wiring that had to be done. Approximately $7,000 was saved on the cost of the lights being installed, with all of the volunteer help.

Have you ever played a game for a period of time so as to think you have it figured out—until the next time you play it? Golf has to fit this category better than any game I know.

I promised the five victims that had to suffer through a night of men's league watching me play, recently that I would write and give them credit for staying all nine holes.

Ken Marra, John Anderson, Rick Burleigh, Dean Watson and Les Keenan have my admiration for not taking me to the pond on number 11 and drowning me to put me out of their misery.

There were times, however, that I had trouble figuring out if Anderson was crying or laughing so hard he was crying but all in all, we did finish before dark.

Speaking of league play, a quick note to all you women golfers out there. If I happen to incorrectly spell your name in the paper, please call and tell me. If I don't know it's broken, I can't fix it. On that note, my quick apologies to Tamra Krugman.

Looking at some of her league scores in the early going, it's apparent that I had better get her name spelled correctly because I have a feeling it's going to be in the paper quite often with the quality golf she's been playing—keep up the good work Tamra.

Seriously, if something is incorrect in the paper in men's or women's league just call 1-800-I messed up!

Congratulations to Matt Blomenkamp and Robert Bell, both former standouts on the Wayne High basketball team last season for their play in the annual Swedish Classic in Oakland, Saturday.

Blomenkamp was named most valuable player of the North Squad which lost a 115-107 decision to the South Squad. Blomenkamp poured in a team high 23 points including a pair of 3-pointers and was 9-14 from the field in shooting. He also had nine rebounds and four steals.

Bell notched 14 points in the game and he treated the fans to one of his patented high arcing 3-pointers. Both players are expected to play in the all-star classic in Norfolk at the end of this month.

MERT ELLIS throws out the first pitch under the lights during pre-game ceremonies last Thursday.

GARY BRUMMOND and his wife Mary George along with Mert Ellis officially turned on the lights at the City Softball Complex for the first time last Thursday. Brummonds own Mr. B's, formerly Mert's Place when it was owned by Mert and Vonnie Ellis.

Diabetes May Cause Foot Problems

According to a recent report in the medical journal Australian Family Practice, at least 15 percent of all diabetics eventually develop a significant problem with their feet. Diabetes-related foot problems require more days of hospital care than all of the other complications of diabetes. The most severe problems are ulcers, infections, and loss of blood flow to the feet. Measures which may help prevent diabetes-related foot problems include:

1. Stay off the feet when there is swelling and infection.
2. Wash the feet daily with mild soap and lukewarm water.
3. Do not dry the feet too vigorously with a towel.
4. Apply a moisturizing cream to keep foot skin soft.
5. Soften dry or brittle toenails by soaking in warm water; trim the nails carefully so as to prevent ingrown toenails.
6. Massage the feet and toes gently every day to maintain blood circulation.

Weed tour starts at Concord June 20

The Nebraska Weed Tour sponsored by the University of Nebraska at Lincoln is scheduled for June 20-23.

Although the free tour is geared for herbicide industry insiders, the public is welcome to attend, said John McNamara, UNL agronomy assistant.

"As in years past, we'll be looking at how different herbicides perform in certain cropping situations," he said. "Compatibility, interaction and how well herbicides work on certain weeds also will be discussed."

"Herbicides containing less atrazine, along with some new chemistries that have been developed this year to suit the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's more restrictive regulations, will be shown," McNamara said.

Between 50 and 75 people are expected to attend all or part of the tour that has been an annual event for the past 20 years, McNamara said.

The tour begins in Concord at the NU Northeast Research and Extension Center on June 20, at 1 p.m., led by David Holshouser, NU extension-weeds specialist.

This year's schedule includes: Monday, June 20, 1 p.m., Concord, NU Northeast Research and Extension Center.

Tuesday, June 21, 9 a.m., Lincoln, University Agronomy Farm, 84th and Havelock Streets and 3 p.m., Clay Center, NU South Central Research and Extension Center.

Wednesday, June 22, 8:30 a.m., North Platte, NU West Central Research and Extension Center and 3 p.m. (MDT), Sidney, NU High Plains Agriculture Lab.

Thursday, June 23, 8:30 a.m. (MDT), Scottsbluff, NU Panhandle Research and Extension Center.

Dealership honored

Charles G. Gause, general manager of John Deere company, Kansas City, is showing a plaque to Gary and Vickie Pick, owners of Logan Valley Implement Inc., signifying they are members of The Manager's Club. The honor was bestowed to the top seventeen John Deere agricultural dealers in a six state area.

Wayne implement dealer honored for performance

Gary and Vickie Pick, owners of Logan Valley Implement Inc. of Wayne have been elected to The Manager's Club of the John Deere Company, for the Kansas City Division.

Seventeen dealers were recognized as the top agricultural dealers in the branch territory which encompasses Iowa, Illinois, Colorado, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

Selection to The Manager's Club is based on superior performance in all phases of the dealership's operations. Members such as Pick must be fully committed to quality, service and customer satisfaction to qualify for the award.

The seventeen members of The Manager's Club and their spouses were honored by John Deere Company at the Colorado Springs Broadmoor Hotel. The weekend convention was sponsored by John Deere Company and Charles G. Gause general manager of John Deere Company, Kansas City.

Pests are threat to great looking crop

Corn rootworm larvae were detected on June 7 at the Northeast Research and Extension Center in Concord.

The corn rootworm larvae are white, with a brown head capsule and a dark spot on the rear end, said Keith Jarvi, NU extension IPM assistant. Three pairs of small legs will be found just behind the head.

If there is enough rainfall or irrigation, farmers should have good control of this larvae with a cultivation time application of an insecticide by early next week, Jarvi said.

Farmers chemigating with Lorsban need to apply it when the second instar rootworm larvae is found for control.

"Remember when chemigating that the Lorsban will more down only as far as the water at the time of application," he said. "Once the water stops moving through the soil, the Lorsban will adhere to the ground and not move any further."

"Applying Lorsban with a ground rig and irrigating afterwards will not carry the material down far enough into the soil to control rootworms."

When scouting for the rootworm larvae, the other insects farmers may find are the ground beetle larvae and nematodes. The beetle larvae have large head and jaws that are orange to brown in color. Nematodes, which do not damage the corn plant, are thin, white and hair-like in appearance, often curling in loops.

For help deciding if they need rootworm control, farmers can contact their local extension office.

Wildlife is expensive

Farming and ranching are professions with few tangible fringe benefits: no paid vacation or sick leave, no employer-subsidized health insurance or retirement plan. But farmers and ranchers, when they're feeling optimistic and their cash flow is good, will point to intangible benefits: being one's own boss, making decisions independently, spending more time with growing children than city workers can, enjoying the outdoors with its abundant wildlife.

This last intangible, however, has a very tangible cost, even though it doesn't show up on a farmer's or rancher's financial statements. Research by Michael Conover of Utah State University, funded by the American Farm Bureau Research Foundation, suggests that farmers are spending more than $300 million a year to provide habitat for wildlife.

Conover found that more than half of the farmers and ranchers he surveyed made it a point to provide habitat for wildlife. They leave crop residues in the field and provide cover and water, and some purposefully leave part of their crops unharvested. By applying his study's findings to the nation as a whole, Conover determined U.S. farmers are spending $300 million annually for the benefit of creatures great and small.

However, wildlife species are not always the best of guests. More than 80 percent of the ag producers, Conover surveyed reported some form of wildlife damage on their property, and nearly a third said their losses exceeded $1,000 in 1993. Deer caused most of the problems with crops while coyotes were the worst predators. Blackbirds and migratory waterfowl were also cited frequently as causing problems.

If the losses suffered by the farmers and ranchers in the study are also applied to the rest of the farming and ranching population, then agriculture is losing billions of dollars a year because of wildlife.

If you've ever kept a backyard bird feeder full, you've probably wondered how the expression that someone "eats like a bird" came to mean a light eater. And if you've ever needed to clean your car's windshield after it's sat under a tree, you've experienced a form of wildlife damage. The costs and damage experienced by farmers and ranchers are on a much larger scale, because ag producers own so much of the private land in our country. Clearly, they are carrying the major share of the cost of having abundant wildlife in the United States. Even so, it would be difficult to find a farmer or rancher who would wish away the wildlife that bring pleasure to long days in the field or pasture.

But it should also be clear that as wildlife populations increase and habitat management plans are formulated, the concerns of agriculture need to be considered. Farmers and ranchers need to make a profit if they're going to continue in business and keep on making wildlife welcome.

Since the first week of April, the live fed cattle market has experienced one of the sharpest declines in cattle feeding history, falling from a spring high of $77.50/cwt to the current level of $65.00/cwt. (The lows were posted during the week ended May 27th at $63.00-63.50/cwt). The downfall has resulted in a prolonged period of losses in excess of $100/head for the nation's cattle feeders, and a significant equity drain for the cattle feeding community. That equity drain will likely be compensated for by lower prices paid for feeder cattle in the coming months, since the purchase price of feeder cattle is the one input which has the most effect on the breakeven price of fed cattle.

Feeder cattle prices in the nation's major markets are already showing significant declines from spring highs, and many in the industry expect continued weakness as the number of feeder cattle and calves on the market increases in the late summer and fall, according to Jeff Stolle, Nebraska Cattlemen Market Reporting Service (MRS).

As of the last week of May, average prices for 700-750 pound yearling steers at Oklahoma City, the nation's largest weekly auction, had fallen to about $76.50/cwt, down sharply from the early spring highs of $84.75/cwt for the same weight class. During the same time frame, the average price paid for 500-550 pound steer calves fell from $99.50/cwt to $85.75/cwt. Some MRS feedyard managers have reported that given the current conditions of the industry, they would not be able to offer in excess of $80.00/cwt for fall weaned calves that have commanded in excess of $100/cwt in the past couple of years, Stolle said.
