County Fair features fun, health focus

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

It will be a health oriented Wayne County Fair in 1994 when it opens next week.

Fairgoers will have the opportunity to have a battery of health tests taken during the fair to determine their wellness.

The Nebraska Lions Foundation Mobile Screening Unit will be at the fair Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 3 to 7 p.m. It will offer free screening for glaucoma, visual acuity, hearing, diabetes and hypertension.

The mobile screening unit's appearance in Wayne is being sponsored by the Wayne Lions Club in partnership with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Nebraska. The mobile unit will be located near the 4-H food booth at the Agricultural Park.

"Early detection of the conditions screened for by the Lions unit is important and may help prevent the development of more serious illnesses," said Fred Webber, who is helping coordinate the local project.

Besides the Lion's health screening project, Dr. Susanna Von Essen, from the University of Nebraska Medical Center will be conducting free pulmonary tests at the Farm Bureau Federation Booth in the Commercial Building beginning at 2 p.m. on Friday.

Farm health and safety issues include respiratory concerns and Dr. Von Essen is the director of the W.K. Kellogg grant program for farm health, safety and respiratory hazards. Her lung function testing will be conducted Friday afternoon only.

Also available at the Farm Bureau booth on Saturday afternoon from 2 to 6:30 p.m. will be body composition analysis performed by Debbie Yount, wellness manager for the Iowa Farm Bureau. There is a $2 charge for this test to determine percentage of lean body weight and ideal body weight.

Health issues are a concern to all Northeast Nebraskan's whether involved in farming or not, said Ag Society president Mick Topp. He said he is pleased to see the health screening tests available at this year's fair and he encouraged everyone to take advantage of the tests.

Meanwhile, the Ag Society board has reserved a big tent for the fair next week because the registered animal exhibits may outstrip the available livestock building space, said Topp. He said the board is anticipating record numbers of entries and has decided to be prepared.

Higher attendance at the fair is also anticipated and tractor-drawn shuttle trams will help fairgoers get from the parking areas to various locations throughout the sprawling Agricultural Park.

Topp said there has been a good deal of talk about some of the new, for-fun events added to the fair schedule this year. The buffalo chip throwing contest, ugly pickup contest, rolling pin throwing contest, Sunday afternoon bingo and draft

Subsidies to shrink in 1995 Farm Bill

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) -- U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey says he hopes the 1995 Farm Bill can strike a balance between farmers and consumers by causing government subsidies to fall and crop prices to rise.

"The idea is to use market mechanisms on behalf of both farmers and consumers. We want a win-win situation," said Kerrey, who was accompanied by Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., at a news conference in Omaha on Saturday.

Higher prices for consumers will be more than offset by lower costs of the farm-program subsidies, Kerrey said.

"The American people are no longer in the mood to supply large deficiency payments to farmers," he said. Farmers, too, want "a price, not a subsidy."

As proposed, the five-year farm bill will continue to lower the amount of subsidies, as did farm bills in 1985 and 1990, Kerrey said.

"The '85 bill changed a historical relationship by dropping loan rates below target prices, lowering subsidies," he said.

During a stop in York later in the day, Kerrey said he wants the bill to strike a balance between farmers and consumers.

"Don't run the program just so the consumers can get a good deal. Run it so the producers can get a good deal," Kerrey said.

But Leahy, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said budget battles could affect the farm bill.

"The problem is to do something that continues a decent return for farmers, but stays within budgetary limits," he said. "We're going to try to get a consensus before the bill comes up. Everyone's going to be facing budget problems."

Leahy, in Nebraska to campaign for Kerrey's re-election, said the farm bill would affect $70 billion worth of federal programs ranging from wheat to food stamps.

Bryce Neidig, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau, said from his home Saturday that the 1995 farm bill sounds a lot like its predecessors.

"It's shaping up, as far as I'm concerned, with no surprises," Neidig said from Madison. "I've

Musicians flock to WSC

Hundreds of talented young musicians in the region have gathered in Wayne this week for the annual Wayne State College Music Camp directed by Dr. Jay O'Leary.

The students spend this week in classes, lessons and practice for a series of concerts which are open to the public Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The piano recital and ensembles concert will be held Friday in Ramsey Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

Opening night nears for musical 'Annie'

The Wayne Community Theatre summer musical production "Annie" takes the stage this week after dozens of cast and crew members have spent months in preparation and rehearsal.

Made popular in an original Broadway production, "Annie" features several hit songs. It is based on the cartoon strip "Little Orphan Annie." The production in Wayne is being directed by Todd Welch.

A scheduling conflict with the Wayne State Summer Music Camp which is going on this week means the traditional summer musical moves to the High School Lecture Hall, where technical director Dan Chase has had to design sets to fit into the confined stage area.

Performances will be Thursday through Saturday evenings at 7:30 and on Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at Sav Mor Pharmacy, State National Bank, Farmers and Merchant's State Bank and First National Bank.

Leading cast members include, Heather Steinbach as Annie, Mick Kempas Daddy Warbucks and Kerry McCue as Warbucks' secretary Darcey. Other cast members include Darcey Frahm, Rev. Jeffrey Sievert, Lori Sievert, Rod Godfrey and most of the Dave Headley family.

Music director for the production is Lindy Welch.

Youth voices should be heard, encouraged says young leader

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Members of the Northeast Nebraska Resource Conservation and Development District, meeting in Wayne Monday, heard an eloquent pitch for development of a youth leadership in the region and especially in Wayne.

Michael Flood, a teenager from Norfolk who is director of the Cornhusker Youth Leadership program, told the conservation and development specialists that there isn't an issue in the state that our youth don't have a stake in and they should be encouraged to get involved.

"We can show people my age that their voice is respected in Nebraska," said Flood of the effort to establish youth leadership chapters throughout the state. He said he hopes to see one develop in Wayne.

A sophomore at Notre Dame University, Flood became involved in youth leadership in Norfolk as a high school student, when a group of students was invited to participate in a local government issue.

He said making youth feel a part of the decision process lets them know they can make a difference. Establishing a positive pattern of communication between adults and youth in a community is one of the

Public sees city budget

Taxpayers will have an opportunity to sound off on the Wayne City Budget tonight as the city holds its public hearing on proposed expenditures for next year and on the taxing plan that will cover those expenditures.

Besides the budget hearing, which will be held at 7:35, a hearing also will be held on the city plan to increase its property tax asking amount by 5 percent. State law limits increases to 5 percent unless voters approve of a higher increase. Even then the 5 percent increase must go before the public hearing process.

Wayne City Administrator Joe Salitros said the 5 percent increase will represent $27,000 in additional revenue over last year's budget. He said the bulk of that amount will go to personnel costs especially those associated with police salary comparability requirements.

Other budgeted increased expenditures were for $30,000 as next year's share of the cost for a new tub grinder to convert branches and yard waste to mulch material as a mandated replacement for the city slash burning pile.

Council also approved a slight increase in hours for the city librarian and decreased the budget for recreation department temporary wages.

State aid was cut by $2,400 this year, Salitros said.

On another topic, Kerrey said he expected an attack on the government's plan to expand the use of ethanol in the oxygen-boosting additive in cleaner-burning gasoline beginning next year.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., has said he will offer an amendment to a spending bill on the Senate floor next week to block the Environmental Protection Agency's so-called ethanol mandate. Two petroleum companies have sued the government over the plan.

Kerrey predicted Johnston's amendment will be defeated.

"It's important because the farmer says, 'I can bank it, I can take it to a lender,'" Kerrey said. "The bill provides a catastrophic base. For $50, you've got 50 percent coverage.

"It also provides options and incentives to buy up (to a high percentage coverage). The producer should make the decision to lay off risk, not Washington."

Leahy said the insurance bill had surpassed its most difficult hurdle, the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"It will pass the Senate, with the hope the House will follow through," he said.

LEGION AUXILIARY

Roy Reed Unit 252, American Legion Auxiliary, Winside met on July 11 with two Junior and 13 Senior members in attendance. The members recited the "Pledge of Allegiance" and the Preamble to the Auxiliary constitution as well as singing the first stanza of the "Star-Spangled Banner." Beverly Neel, unit president, presided and Audrey Quinn, unit chaplain, offered the opening prayer as well as the prayer of peace upon adjournment.

The Unit has 10 permanent paid-up for life members, as well as one Charter member, five juniors and an additional 38 senior members. Due for 1994-95 are now being collected. Senior dues are $8 and junior dues are $2.50. Payment may be made to Unit Treasurer ALA 252 and mailed to Gertrude Heins.

Seven unit members attended the July 5 meeting of the Legion. Topic of discussion for which the members attended was the plans underway to research and implement sound proofing of the post home. The unit wished to pledge its support to the research, planning, implementation and funding of such a project. The unit favors a corrective solution with guaranteed outcome. More details will be made available to the Unit by the August meeting. Until then the unit membership will be canvassed to determine the degree of the unit's involvement in the project. Fundraisers are one method by which the unit may pledge its support.

The Unit was successful once again with its entry in the Old Settlers parade. The entry "From Willie and Joe to Beetle Bailey" earned a second place award of $30 with the parade theme, "See You in the Funnies." Members assisting in the making of the float included Arlene Pfeiffer, Mary Weible, Rose Janke, Laura Neel, Beverly Neel and Legionnaires Clarence Pfeiffer and Bud Neel. The float bed was donated by Butch Junck of Carroll and Chester Marotz of Winside donated the use of his pickup.

Installation officer Rose Janke was assisted by chaplain Audrey Quinn and sergeant-at-arms Arlene Pfeiffer in installing the unit officers for the current year. Officers installed included new chaplain Esther Carlson and renewed officers Mary Weible, historian; Arlene Pfeiffer, sergeant-at-arms; Gertrude Heins, treasurer; Doris Marotz, secretary; Evelyn Jaeger, vice president; and Beverly Neel, president.

Hostesses were Janice Mundil, Marilyn and Wendy Morse, Beverly and Laura Neel.

Junior members Katie Barg and Laura Neel retired the colors. The next meeting will be Monday, Aug. 8. Hostesses will be Lynn Olson, Arlene Pfeiffer, Carol Rempfer and Mary Weible.

Tax system review a difficult task

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- A committee saddled with reviewing Nebraska's tax system got a taste last week of just how difficult -- and broad -- their task is.

"We probably have a job in which there's no right answer," said Kelly Hollus, president of the First National Bank of York and a member of the state Economic Forecasting Advisory Board. "Our job is to try to come up with something that is better than what we have, if that's possible."

The Nebraska Property Tax Review Committee was created earlier this month by Gov. Ben Nelson, who wants the panel to come up with options for limiting property taxes collected by local governments and to recommend other possible revenue sources.

But committee members on Friday said their review can't just focus on local government revenue for solutions or reform. Nebraska's school aid formula, how real estate values are figured and state spending also should be looked at, they said.

Reform, if it happens, must be careful not to discourage business, said Sharon Beschoner, a Union Pacific Railroad executive and representative of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

If state sales and income tax rates are too high, economic development can suffer, she said.

"You can't look at taxes in isolation," she said. "It has to be a balancing act."

Ed Jaksha, an anti-tax and government spending activist from Omaha, urged fellow committee members to give first consideration to the taxpayers in deciding what recommendations to make to Nelson.

He also urged the panel to find agreement on what needs to be done.

"I would hope we could avoid reinventing the wheel," Jaksha said. "We've studied the issue until we're blue in the face. We know what the problem is."

Internet training offered

All educators and the general public are invited to a special computer presentation of the Boulder Valley High School (Colorado) District's Internet gopher server from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 2 in the lecture room of Wayne State College's Benthack Hall.

The BVSD is one of the country's leading K-12 Internet resource developers. Boulder Valley Schools have designed numerous K-12 Internet applications and successfully integrated the use of these applications into curriculum and classroom instruction.

There will also be a discussion on how K-12 teachers are using the Internet in well-established networked classrooms.

For more information, contact Maureen Battistella, Conn. Library, Wayne State College, (402) 375-7259.

Police funds boosted

Wayne will be invited to apply for a federal grant to help put additional police officers on the street according to Sen. Bob Kerrey, (D-Neb).

Kerrey said, at his urging, an additional $1.3 billion has been approved by the Senate for the Cops on the Beat program help towns like Wayne who applied for funding under the program but were denied because of a shortage of funds.

The funding approved Friday is designed to help stem the rising tide of crime by putting more police on the streets, said Kerrey.

Earlier this year Wayne applied for a grant from the preliminary Cops on the Beat program but was turned down, said City Administrator Joe Salitros. He said only one in ten applications for municipal grants under the program was approved.

"Communities have creative, innovative ideas for fighting crime, but they need our help in mustering the resources needed to implement them," Kerrey said. "Cops on the beat is an excellent tool the federal government can give the states to effectively fight crime. I look forward to working with Nebraska communities as they compete for grants for more police officers."

Funding for the program now goes to a Senate-house conference committee which must approve the measure. It also needs to be signed by the president before a new round of applications will be accepted.

"Thigh Smoothing Creams" Unproven

One of the latest approaches to weight loss is being promoted as a "thigh smoothing cream." According to a recent issue of the University of California at Berkeley Wellness Letter, a cosmetic cream is being marketed with the claim that it will "spot reduce fat." The cream contains aminophylline, and is sold under such names as Skinny Dip, Smooth Contours, and Thermojetics. According to one researcher involved in licensing the cream, women have high levels of a fat-conserving enzyme in their breasts and thighs. Aminophylline supposedly blocks the production of this enzyme.

However, the application of aminophylline to the skin has not been studied extensively. The Wellness Letter indicates that it is not yet possible to determine whether or not the claims for these products are true. And until such research is completed, reduced caloric intake and exercise seem to be the best approaches to keeping thighs thin.

"My husband and I started coming to Dr. Feidler when he moved to Norfolk about 25 years ago. We've been real satisfied. My cataracts were very slow in coming on. Dr. Feidler didn't encourage me to have them removed until they were ready.

When I began to feel like I had a film on my eye and I wasn't seeing completely clear, I decided to have them removed. I like to read the current news and the senior citizen state news. My poor vision wasn't severe, but it was an aggravation.

After surgery, everything was clear and bright and relaxing is the best way to put it. I still have one surgery to go. I'm planning for that now. Cataract surgery wasn't scary because Dr. Feidler explained everything along the way. We saw our friends and acquaintances pictures and comments in the paper and we knew they were satisfied. I didn't have any doubts that my vision would be better."

A bright future

Several reasons why we think the future of our nation is in good hands are contained in today's issue of the Wayne Herald.

Of course there's the obvious listings of honor roll awards, 4-H and other youth activities, but today there's more.

There's the case of the young baseball team members who are admonishing their elders, yes even their parents, to lighten up and remember that it is just a game. Recent fan disturbances, vulgar heckling and threats to umpires at Wayne Legion games both here and away have given the community a negative image. Team members think it is time to teach their elders a lesson in manners.

We applaud them for it. There is no room for the kind of activity described by opposing coaches and umpires involving so called adult Wayne fans. Unreasonable verbal harassment and vulgarity caused one team to leave Wayne in the middle of a scheduled double header.

In another town a Wayne fan was ejected from the ballpark only to wait and verbally and irrationally accost the umpire afterward.

The example of this boorish adult behavior we are thankful is not rubbing off on the young players who have issued a mild ultimatum to their fans. Cheer positively or stay home.

Another good example of the bright prospects for the future comes in the story about the youth leaders traveling the state trying to form councils of teenagers to take an active participatory role in making their communities better places to live.

Youth leaders have a stake in the future of their towns and many of them are realizing their voices can and do make a difference.

Here's hoping a Youth Leadership Council forms in Wayne. Our nominees for some of the first members would be the levelheaded, common sense members of the Wayne Legion teams...

...Leadership we can rely on.

Information Age

It needs workers who are literate

Mankind is building a future where survival will depend on the individual's ability to gather and interpret information quickly and clearly.

In all likelihood, we have entered that future age already. The information age we call it. Increasing numbers of careers are thought-process based. Gathering, interpreting, disseminating information are the key abilities employers are now, and will be, looking for.

The number of "no-brains" jobs are on a drastic decline.

Even (what used to be) a lowly janitor now has to know the chemical make-up and safety procedures for the cleaning solvents he uses. Among other things, he has to be able to analyze a maintenance manual and keep records on that complex computer-controlled heating system. He has to read and follow the precise operator's guide on that new automated floor cleaning machine. If he can't do these things...he's history.

In three words, readin', writin' and rithmetic.

At the same time we are building a future where economic survival depends on reading abilities we are also raising up a generation that scores poorly on reading. It's a generation that hates to read. It's a generation that thinks reading is unnecessary. "We don't need to wade through the boring owner's manual. We'll wait for the video to come out."

Writing is a thing of the past, replaced by the telephone. And ditto for arithmetic, replaced by calculators and computers.

Language skills test scores are on the decline for students entering college. Educators and other leaders in society are trying to figure out how to reverse the trend.

It would be easy to blame the educational system in America for the decline. That it should share in the blame is obvious; but its share should be ranked somewhere in the small fractions.

The education system has fought an, at times, losing literacy battle against the disintegrating family structure, the two-minute attention spans of children raised on fast acting television fakery and the society which pays more homage to sports and recreation than it does to academics and substance.

Witness the most recent presidential election. Surveys indicated that most voters based their decision on what may have been said by candidates in a 30-second television commercial rather than studying what the candidates stood for and believed in. It takes time to base your decisions on a study of facts and issues. Indeed, it takes time even to vote. You have to read those lengthy ballots you know.

Vast numbers did not even bother to cast a ballot and many of those that did, spent little effort in forming their opinions.

A public with declining literacy levels will have a profound effect on our future politically. But that's not the least of it.

What about the economics? Many corporations depend on a literate public not just to supply an able work force, but to be conscientious consumers as well. Reading and understanding product labels is crucial.

Poor readers make poor consumers, says an official of Proctor and Gamble, Co. "The better educated consumers are the more affluent consumers--and better customers for our products," said Robert Wehling, a Proctor and Gamble vice-president.

There are crucial health issues that declining literacy plays a hand in making worse. Reading and understanding AIDS warnings, becoming informed about the dangers of cigarette smoking, knowing the impact of dietary habits on health are all aspects of literacy.

What we are painting here is a pretty gloomy picture of the future of our nation if we continue to allow the declines we have seen in recent years in literacy levels.

Naturally, you are not part of the problem. Anyone who reads this long, boring diatribe is definitely not contributing to the lower literacy levels.

But, it is a problem even you smart people can do something about. Spend time volunteering to read to young people, preschoolers especially. Show the young people you come in contact with that reading is an important part of your life. Set an example.

Volunteer to work in tutor programs that already exist in our community for youth and adult education. You can get involved through the Youth Center or the Public Library.

There's more you can do. Spend time at your library. Write a letter to your senator, your mother, your friend, your editor. Unplug the television and play board games with your kids one night a week. It's amazing the amount of reading conversation that you are forced to have fun with in the average Monopoly game.

It's not just schools that are responsible for educating kids. It's not just television that is responsible for the decline in literacy. It's not just our young people who are responsible for the future in the information age... We're all responsible.

Raising the bar on petition drives

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Summer has firmly planted itself in the halls of the State Capitol. They're so quiet, you could roll a bowling ball down them and not hit one bureaucrat.

Some parents might have to jump out of the way as they tote kids through the state's most beautiful building, but senators are busy being normal citizens, and staffers, by and large, are still cleaning up from the 1994 session.

One controversy, however, refuses to quiet down.

That's the fuss over term limits and the right to put issues on the ballot through petition drives.

The tidal wave was launched in May when the State Supreme Court threw out Nebraska's 2-year-old petition law.

The court, after looking at state law, said not enough signatures were gathered to put the issue on the ballot in the first place.

That effectively raised the bar for petition drives to leap over, wiping out a handful of initiatives nearing the end of their push to qualify for the ballot this November.

OK, you've heard this all before. Now we've got a couple of new developments.

First, there will be no special session on this issue.

State senators gave Gov. Nelson a resounding "no" on the idea and recently repeated that thunderous thumbs down to State Sen. Cap Dierks of Ewing, who had mounted an effort to poll legislators on their support of a special session.

Special sessions are for emergency situations. Senators, who aren't big fans of term limits anyway, don't see an emergency here.

Number two, a task force looking into signature requirements for such petition drives held its first meeting last week. The issue of paid circulators rose to the top of the agenda.

The court's ruling raised that requirement from about 58,000 registered voters to more than 90,000. Citizen groups howled loudly about that increase, saying it would make it impossible to get any issue on the ballot.

The new standard, however, failed to deter a new petition drive for term limits. That effort turned in about 125,000 signatures, gathered in only six weeks of work. Of course, most of those were gathered by paid circulators who were paid 75 cents to $1 per signature.

Several members of the task force said they think the signature requirement should be higher for drives that use paid circulators and should be lowered for those purely volunteer efforts.

Speaker of the Legislature Ron Wilhem, who's been very active in voter issues, said the right of purely volunteer groups to influence state policy ought to be preserved.

That makes a lot of sense. The well-heeled always have access to government, whether it's through paid lobbyists or paid volunteers who badge people for signatures ("badger" is how I'd describe the approach used by the paid circulators I encountered).

It's another story for a group of regular folks who just don't like what government is doing. These are the kinds of people who have regular jobs, real lives that they have to live when they're trying to do battle with the state government.

The task force, which will recommend law changes to the Legislature, appears ready to give normal folks a break in their effort to put issues on the ballot.

How much of a break remains to be seen. But if it happens, we might all have a quieter summer in Lincoln.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

'A Class Act'

Dear Editor:

I have recently learned that Don Koenig will be inducted into the Nebraska Scholastic Wrestling Coaches Association Hall of Fame on July 31st. This is a fitting tribute to a man who has done it all in wrestling. He has been involved in wrestling in some capacity for over twenty years. Don has served wrestling as a coach, official, high school tournament director, youth wrestling director, Wrestling Club member and a constant supporter of the Wayne Wrestling Program.

I, along with many others, have a great deal of respect for Don Koenig. He is the consummate professional in teaching and coaching. In addition, he is an outstanding family man. Don is without a doubt a "class act". It has been an honor and a privilege being associated with a man of such high integrity. CONGRATULATIONS, DON! YOU DESERVE IT!

Remember 'Mom'

Dear Editor:

My family and I were saddened to hear the news of Roberta Welte's death. I was a student at Wayne State College from 1967 to 1971 and lived in Terrace Hall. "Mom" was my house mother at Terrace hall during my four years in Wayne.

During my freshman year of living in Terrace Hall, I became good friends with Roberta's son, Terry. We did a lot of things together, one of which was watching TV and conversing in his mother's dorm apartment. It was during these activities that I discovered that Roberta Welte was a warm and caring human being. She listened to our problems and really cared about our welfare. Her apartment was grand central station with a steady line of student traffic and we were all treated the same, like family.

It is absolutely amazing how many lives this caring woman touched and what a difference she made with all of us. Whether we wanted to admit it or not, as 18 and 19 year olds, we needed guidance and understanding. I always knew "Mom's" door was open and if I needed some advice or just to see a smiling face, "Mom" was there. Wayne State College was fortunate to have such a valuable person on staff. If this world had more Roberta Weltes, we'd all be better off.

My deepest sympathy goes out to Terry Welte, his family and all who knew her. She definitely made a difference in my life and I will dearly miss her.

Chicken Sequel

Dear Editor:

Chicken Song Contest--Letter Sequel

Thanks to friend "S" in WSC faculty party potluck group for owning up to leaving wooden chicken on my patio, and to Herald reader "Carolyn" for sending a card and thanking me for my "daring dance routine".

Meanwhile, hubby Tom says no one is going to understand my new song "The Birth of Jonathan Livingston Chicken." I do love the fact that his parents are a Wakefield egg-producin' hen and Buffalo Bill Rooster of North Platte.

To the gal that wrote the protest letter about the Chicken Flying contest, I support her ideas and say that my fowl in this song ride in a miniature Piper Cub.

So now I am toying with the idea of combining our cha cha with mambo crossovers disco dance with a "Chicken Show Morning" version of Joni Mitchell's "Chelsea Morning" song from the Woodstock era.

Better yet, I might skip the contest and focus my energy on playing the snare drum or bass drum in a possible First Annual All-Female Chicken Show Parade Band: attire to be navy blue shorts with either '92 or '94 white C.S. T-shirts. Possible sponsor: AAUW.

After all, something has to fill the gap left by the Chickendates' retirement. My friends from Iowa said the biggest void in the parade was its total lack of any bands. We could have two or three rehearsals and play a song or two like "Be Kind To Your Fine-Feathered Friends".

We could play silly things like kazooos and washboards and/or nifty instruments like clarinets and trumpets. Any age "girls". We wouldn't have to march. We could "chicken out" and ride on a float sitting on folding chairs. (Or if there were differing opinions, we could have a marching band and a riding marching band.

'Scare of the week; Are dreams killers?

The killers are loose! Earlier it was hamburgers and theater popcorn. Then Mexican food! Now dreams are the "scare of the week"! That's right!

A study has found that periods of sleep when dreams occur kick the body into high gear. The heart speeds up. Blood pressure climbs. Stress hormones get the body ready to flee or fight. Researchers believe all that internal turmoil may trigger a heart attack.

Doctors have noticed that angina attacks, which occur when the heart fails to get enough oxygen, sometimes happen during sleep. People dream the most just before they wake up. And that might help explain why heart attacks are most common in the morning.

Is your dreaming dangerous? Will a killer dream get you? What is your wildest dream? Were you

Library awarded $1,200

The Wayne Public Library was recently awarded a children's grant of $1,200 from the Nebraska Library Commission. It was one of five Children's Grants for Excellence awarded this year.

The project for which the library received the grant is called "Grandmapa Storytime." Older adult volunteers will be the "grandparents" who will visit the homes of daycare providers to read to the children, lead reading activities and leave library books for the provider to share with the children later.

With the grant money, the library will purchase books to read aloud to the preschoolers. The library will soon be recruiting at least 15 volunteers to be library grandparents and will be sending out information to the daycare providers' homes. The library plans to begin the project in early fall.

Anyone who is interested in participating in the project or who would like more information should contact Jolene Klein at the public library, 375-3135.

Other recipients of the children's grants this year were Auburn Public Library, Norfolk Public Library, Karlen Memorial Library in Beemer and Niobrara Public Library.

Doctor explains sexual differences

QUESTION: Can you be more specific regarding the differences in sexual desire and preferences between males and females? I'm getting married next July. I would like to know how my future husband's sexual needs will differ from my own. Could you summarize the major distinctions that will occur between us?

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

DR. DOBSON: You are wise to ask this question because the failure to understand male and female preferences often produces a continual source of marital frustration and guilt.

First, men are primarily aroused by visual stimulation. They are turned on by feminine nudity or peek-a-boo glimpses of semi-nudity. Women, on the other hand, are much less visually oriented than men. Sure, they are interested in attractive masculine bodies, but the physiological mechanism of sex is not triggered, typically, by what they see. Women are stimulated primarily by the sense of touch.

Thus, we encounter the first source of disagreement in the bedroom; he wants her to appear unclothed in a lighted room, and she wants him to caress her in the dark.

Second, and much more importantly, men are not very discriminating in regard to the person living with an interesting body. A man can walk down the street and be stimulated by a scantily clad female who shimmies past him, even though he knows nothing about her personality, values or mental capabilities. He is attracted by her body itself. Likewise, he can become almost as excited over a photograph of an unknown nude model as he can a face-to-face encounter with someone he loves.

In essence, the sheer biological power of sexual desire in a male is largely focused on the physical body of an attractive female. Hence, there is some validity to the complaint by women that they have been used as "sex objects" by men.

This explains why female prostitutes outnumber males by a wide margin and why few women try to "rape" men. It explains why a roomful of toothless, old men can get a large charge from watching a burlesque dancer "take it all off." It reflects the fact that masculine self-esteem is more motivated by a desire to "conquer" a woman than by becoming the object of her romantic love.

These are not very flattering characteristics of male sexuality, but they are well documented in the professional literature.

Women, on the other hand, are much more discriminating in their sexual interests. They less commonly become excited by observing a good-looking charmer, or by the photograph of a hairy model. Rather, their desire is usually focused on a particular individual whom they respect or admire.

A woman is stimulated by the romantic aura that surrounds her man, and by his character and personality. A woman yields to the man who appeals to her emotionally as well as physically.

Obviously, there are exceptions to these characteristic desires, but the fact remains: sex for men is a more physical phenomenon; sex for a woman is a deeply emotional experience.

The Golden Years

By: Connie Dishrow

More than 52 million Americans are 55 or over and many require care by family or friends. But among them are 15 million men and women who are the caregivers for sick or disabled parents, spouses, other family members, friends or neighbors. A study by the Commonwealth Fund, a private philanthropy, found that 29 percent of women and 28 percent of men 55 and older serve as caregivers. Moreover, 17 million in this age group spend time helping their children, and 14 million help care for grandchildren or great-grandchildren.

How many Americans receive Social Security checks? Out of a total of more than 32 million, about 21 million are older men and women who receive the familiar retirement checks. Another 4.5 million people of various ages receive disability benefits. And 7.2 million more receive survivors' benefits for eligible spouses and children.

Remember When? January 15, 1944 — With 18-year-olds being drafted for World War II combat and 17-year-olds accepted as volunteers, Navy Secretary Frank Knox called for mandatory military training of 17-year-olds. The proposal was not adopted.

Second entrepreneurship course offered in Wayne

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

The second Fast Trac course designed to assist entrepreneurs is being planned for Wayne this fall. Funded in part by a grant from USWest, the training course for 20 or more students will help both existing business owners and those planning to launch a new enterprise.

The 40-hour training course which will meet in the evenings, will provide students with management training, legal backgrounds, marketing ideas, financing plans and preparation of a specific business plan.

Twenty students completed the course last year, the first year it was offered in Wayne. The program has been highly successful in development of new entrepreneurs throughout the state.

Conducted through the Bureau for Community and Economic Development at Wayne State, the program this year will also enlist the aid of Vaughn Benson, head of the business division at the college as a coordinator.

Course participation fees for students are $175 which includes all books and reference materials for future use in the student's business. The first class meeting will be Oct. 12.

Connie Keck, director of the bureau at Wayne State, said she is anxious to recruit the 20 class members it will take to make the program a success.

"I want to see people make their dreams of business success a reality," she said, adding the Fast Trac program will help them do just that.

Those interested in applying or in additional information may call her at 375-7533 or John Allen or Karen Lofus at the University of Nebraska Center for Rural Community Revitalization and Development at 1-800-328-2851.

Area has Alzheimers information center

Up-to-date educational materials on Alzheimer's disease are now available in Norfolk through a new University of Nebraska Medical Center project that will provide information in resource lending libraries in key areas throughout the state.

The program, "Reaching Rural Communities With Alzheimer's Education", provides useful materials suitable for families, social service agencies, health care professionals, students and the general public. In Norfolk, the resource lending library is located at the Northwest Nebraska Area Agency on Aging, P.O. Box 1447, Norfolk, 68702. Laurie Steele is the person to contact at (402) 370-3454. Beatrice, Norfolk, North Platte and Scottsbluff are the sites currently in use, with more being planned.

"Bringing information Alzheimer's disease to all parts of Nebraska is an important task to accomplish," said Betty Foster, Ph.D., project director. "Health professionals and the general public need to have a place to go for the most current data."

Different facets of Alzheimer's disease are covered in the resource materials, including:

*Books on understanding Alzheimer's disease.

*Guidelines to help families care for a loved one with this disease.

*Information on the selection of a special care or dementia unit in a nursing facility.

In addition, slides, videotapes and training manuals for use in presenting educational and training programs are in the libraries. The library program is one part of a total project that includes other educational and training components on Alzheimer's disease for families and professionals. The National Institute on Aging funds the project, which UNMC is implementing in conjunction with the Lincoln/Greater Nebraska Chapter and the Omaha and Eastern Nebraska Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association.

The Norfolk site will serve Antelope, Boone, Boyd, Brown, Burt, Cedar, Cherry, Colfax, Cumming, Dakota, Dixon, Holt, Keya Paha, Knox, Madison, Nance, Pierce, Platte, Rock, Stanton, Thurston and Wayne Counties.

Season of reunions

We're into the season of reunions: high school, family and school of nursing. All of a sudden, our peers are grandparents, with grey hair and bifocals. We gather at a prearranged spot, carrying photos of weddings and babies, share a synopsis of thirty or forty years, laughs and hug and reminisce, and go back home with a warm glow inside.

Several families we know have begun a tradition of a weekend at the state parks nearby. This really gives the cousins an opportunity to get to know each other. Sometimes the group gets rather large.

Last week, there were 68 members of the Muench clan visiting the small church down the road from us. I doubt there are 68 worshippers altogether, on a normal Sunday. They've learned to call ahead and warn the minister because one place ran out of bread and wine for communion.

Lincoln General Hospital has graduated its last nurse long ago. But the alumni association continues to publish a newspaper and sponsor a banquet. Unfortunately, it always coincides with Cornhusker games. I'm sure LGH had that date first. The only problem is that nurses who need motels are usually surrounded by kids from all over the state.

I know: I went to the YMCA soccer park on Friday, looking for a Norfolk team. Hundreds of little munchkins were running up and down in bright-colored T-shirts. It was quite a sight. And, there were lots of moms and dads who had apparently managed to take the day off and were there to support their team.

There is an award to distinguished alumni at the hospital banquet every year. Often, it takes a long time to read of all the degrees and awards the recipient has acquired. This year, it went to a former evening supervisor who had a reputation for getting IVs started when no one else could, and for encouraging new graduates. There were many letters of support, and I really enjoyed that. I'm old-fashioned enough to feel that those kinds of statements reflect what nursing really means.

As we ponder "health care reform," I can't help feeling nostalgic about nursing as we were taught it. An old director of nurses was there with the 50 year class Saturday night. She said she recently told a hospital administrator that she wouldn't like being a DON today. "They don't wear their caps, they don't wear uniforms, they don't give good nursing care, etc." He responded, "They wouldn't like you either!"

goals of his effort he said. He added the youth leadership effort is generally directed at people between 14 and 20.

He showed a letter of endorsement for his efforts from Nebraska Gov. Ben Nelson. Flood said he and others from the Cornhusker Youth Leadership program in Norfolk have made presentations throughout the state this summer encouraging communities to establish youth leadership programs.

He said he would like to see three or four groups like the one established in Norfolk established in other communities in the state this year.

"Giving youth more of a stake in their communities will give them a greater incentive to return (to their hometowns after college)," Flood said.

The RC&D board endorsed the effort to promote youth leadership groups throughout Northeast Nebraska. Development of youth leadership had been established as one of the goals of the organization previously.

Larger Quantities?

If you use a medication daily for a "chronic condition", ask your pharmacist for suggestions to get the best value for your prescription dollars. If you use a prescription all of the time, getting a three month quantity may save you money, but several factors must be addressed in the decision. If your medication is changed, the amount you have already purchased will be wasted. Excess medication of any kind can be a hazard to young children, so show extra care in the storage of these extra supplies. Also, some insurance policies restrict the quantity which you may receive. Discuss your medication use with your pharmacist to determine which quantity is appropriate and cost effective for you.

Second hatching of corn borers has taken flight

The second generation of European corn borer moth flight has begun in northeast Nebraska, said Keith Jarvi, NU extension IPM assistant.

"Weather conditions have been ideal for corn borer development, but it remains to be seen how this second generation will affect the corn crop," Jarvi said. "We anticipate that twenty-five to fifty percent of the eggs being laid in the 16 county, northeast Nebraska area from approximately July 24 to August 5.

The exact dates the borers will start egg laying depends on individual fields. If the field is pollinating during the next week, the borers will find it especially attractive. Also if the weather is warmer than normal in the area, it will speed the process up, while colder weather will slow it down. Egg laying is also generally earlier in the southern counties, and later movers to the northern and western counties.

Scout fields at least once very three to five days, Jarvi recommended. Count the egg masses in at least five different areas of the field, with at least 100 plants.

"Accumulating percentages of plants having egg masses is effective when the scouting information is collected for not more than ten days and when egg laying has started, but hatching has not begun," Jarvi said. "Extending the period beyond ten days will allow early hatching borers to enter the plant, so you must start scouting now for the eggs."

Treatments offer the best control when applied at early egg hatch, and when young larvae are still located in the leaf axils. Unlike first generation larvae, the young second generation larvae feed on pollen in the leaf axils for only a short time before boring into the plant. Control of these first borers is essential because they will be causing the most damage physiologically to the plant.

"Timing of application is critical if reasonable control is to be achieved," Jarvi said. "Research indicates that favorable economic return will usually be achieved when at least fifty percent of the plants are infested with egg masses that are just beginning to hatch, and before the corn has reached the blister stage."

As the plant matures beyond the blister stage, less yield loss is likely to occur from infestation.

"Early control will prevent much of stalk and shank tunneling, where the majority of losses occur," Jarvi said. "Although later hatching borers may enter the ear tip and feed, reducing grain quality, yields are not as seriously reduced."

'Food for Peace' story of success

It's been some 40 years since Congress passed Public Law 480, the Food for Peace program. But today the demand for U.S. food assistance in the world is as great as ever.

We take some credit in Nebraska for passage of "P.L. 480." In cooperation with Nebraska Rep. Robert Harrison, Nebraska Farm Bureau worked for its adoption. The bill itself was drafted in the offices of the American Farm Bureau and was sponsored in Congress by Bob Harrison.

In support of the Food for Peace program, Farm Bureau called for exporting food and skills to starving nations where "the need for food is so urgent that whole nations are yielding to communism." Farm Bureau also argued that this food program would also build markets for U.S. products in the future.

Communism doesn't seem so much of a threat these days, but the American Farm Bureau continually urges Congress to expand the Food for Peace program to meet humanitarian needs around the world. Needy nations benefit in the short-term by receiving food products for their hungry people. In the long-term, they benefit by becoming productive members of global society. And, the U.S. also benefits in the long-term, when the former aid recipients become paying customers.

It's interesting and important to note that, with the exception of Canada, all of the United States' current major trading partners have received shipments of American aid at one time or another. That's a crucial fact to point out to those who argue against our giving food aid, who claim that P.L. 480 is only helping needy nations to develop into competitors for our own farmers. But experience has borne out that, handled properly, the Food for Peace program is mutually beneficial. When they're done right, aid programs encourage spending discipline and help needy nations realign their spending priorities, increase market incentives and strengthen private enterprise.

American Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner points out that it's important to gradually shift recipient nations to commercial markets as they become more affluent. Aid programs should not only provide assistance, he emphasizes, but also encourage economic development and private initiative, which leads to increased incomes, better living standards, and demand for the goods the U.S. has to offer. Thus aid programs must do more than just put grain in a peasant's bowl.

Needy nations need to be helped to develop markets that give their farmers a fair price for their products, and farmers themselves need to be able to create their own enterprises. They should have access to technology, finance and production inputs, and governments should invest in infrastructure, such as transportation, storage and markets. The end result is greater prosperity for nations which formerly received aid, and new customers for American producers of all kinds. The Food for Peace program is an American success story, benefiting the cause of peace and bolstering trade, as well as feeding the hungry.

Leafy Spurge meeting is Aug. 4 in Norfolk

Massimo Cristofaro, entomologist with the National Institute for Energy and Environment from Rome, Italy, will speak at the seventh annual Nebraska Leafy Spurge Conference in Norfolk on Aug. 4. Cristofaro heads the effort in searching for effective leafy spurge biological control agents in Europe and Russia.

These agents are quarantined in the Rome, Italy, lab before they are shipped to the United States where they are again quarantined before distribution. Cristofaro has been working closely with USDA and two University of Nebraska scientists on research to match bio-control agents with leafy spurge infestations based on DNA make-up of the plants.

The Nebraska Leafy Spurge

Working Task Force is co-hosting the seventh annual Nebraska Leafy Spurge Conference and Tour to be held in Norfolk Aug. 3 and 4.

On Wednesday, Aug. 3, a tour and steak fry will be held. The tour will leave from Tahazouka Park at 3 p.m., and will feature chemical and biological control plots. A steak fry will be held after the tour at approximately 6 p.m. at the

Hotline handles hail calls

Since the hail storms that ravaged Northeast Nebraska in June of 1994, the Nebraska Rural Response Hotline has received a total of eighty (80) calls either about the hail storm or similar concerns from Dixon, Thurston, Dakota and Burt counties.

The Hotline was fortunate to be involved with Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska who had committed themselves to use $40,000 that was given for disaster-declared areas in Nebraska by the Presbyterian Church (USA), Synod of Lakes & Prairies.

The grant was called the "Grain of Hope" grant and was to be used to help those farmers and ranchers who were affected by disaster. Sixty families total will be helped by the "Grain of Hope" grant. Of these, forty-three were referrals from calls received by the Nebraska Rural Response Hotline.

Additional funds have just been received for those who were affected by hail, wind and flood damage. Farm families should call the hotline for more information, at 1-800-464-0258.

cent below other disappearance two years ago.

On Thursday, Aug. 4, the conference will be held at the Ramada Inn in Norfolk beginning with registration at 8 a.m. with the main program starting at 9:30 a.m. Along with Massimo Cristofaro's presentation, speakers will address biological control projects initiated across Nebraska, a ranchers perspective on leafy spurge control efforts in Nebraska, revegetation of leafy spurge infested rangeland, use of "Angora" goats for leafy spurge control, determining genetic diversity of leafy spurge in Nebraska, Nebraska Hay Certification Program, along with an update on the task force's weed physiologist assistant and updates on the activities of the Nebraska task force and two area task forces. Cost for the conference is $15, which includes coffee, rolls, lunch and handouts.
