118TH YEAR — NO. 90

Helpful people key to fair success

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

"It's the people. That's the answer," said Leland Herman, long time Wayne County Fair Board member as he analyzed the success of another Wayne County Fair.

More attendance than ever before, more activities than ever before and more fun than ever before were ways fair board members described the 1994 edition of the fair which closed Sunday.

No one got an exact count of the number of meals served at the free barbecue Friday night, but it was clear that the number was well ahead of last year's 3,200 figure, said Delores Felt, recording secretary for the fair board.

FINANCIALLY, THE fair was another good success said Herman who said the fair button sales have helped keep the fair in the black in recent years. Fair Board members are concerned that the buttons are being passed around as a means of circumventing admission prices, but a better alternative has not been settled on.

While other fairs in neighboring counties are facing difficulties with attendance and volunteer participation, Wayne County may be looking to broaden its scope. Several years back it was promoted as the greater Northeast Nebraska County Fair, and coming off this year's popularity, it might not be a bad idea to return to a more regional theme, said Mrs. Felt.

ONLY MINOR changes and problems were discussed at Monday night's Fair Board meeting and post fair clean-up event. The possibility of adding livestock holding facilities to handle the growing numbers of exhibits and the need for more space for the talent show and commercial exhibits was discussed.

"We're not resting on our laurels," said Herman. He said the draft horse show would be a definite repeat next year as would the new tractor-drawn shuttle trams which were well-received in helping people get around the 42 acre agricultural park.

Addition of 10 acres to the park two years ago and a new horse show arena greatly enhanced the ability to handle the larger crowds which have been attracted to the fair in recent years. In the past the county would not have had the space to host a draft horse show while the other fair events were going on.

LARGE CROWDS enjoyed both the tractor pull on Saturday night and the demolition derby on Sun-

Fugitive gives up after 16 years

HARTINGTON, Neb. (AP) — A man who spent 16 years on the lam has one word for others who might be fleeing the law: Surrender.

"It will only cost them until they right it, set themselves straight," said Richard Lunderman on Saturday, one day after turning himself in to Cedar County Sheriff Elliot Arens after a run that took him through California, Arizona and Colorado.

"The fact that I've wasted 16 years like this, I don't know just how I feel. It's a loss," Lunderman said from jail in this northeast Nebraska town.

Running from the law, lying to employers, marrying and having a son under an alias, drinking too much to relieve the tension, it all built up, Lunderman said from jail in this northeast Nebraska town.

"When this is over, I will have opportunities I never had before," said Lunderman, 37.

"I've become very interested in drug and substance abuse counseling. This is a field I would like to pursue," he said.

Lunderman was convicted of burglary but escaped from the county jail in 1978 before serving his sentence of two to five years in prison, Arens said.

He had broken into a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers office near Lewis and Clark Lake along the South

'Be our guest!'

The annual free barbeque at the Wayne County Fair served over 3200 people, Friday night but for Max and Goldie Thomason the line didn't quite seem that long.

That's because they were the Wayne County Fair's Honorary Guests and one of the privileges included a free pass to the front of the line at the barbeque.

In fact, the Thomason's had just pulled into Lions Park out near the airport to park their recreational vehicle where they had planned to stay a couple days to play Wayne's golf course en route to Jackson, Minnesota when another vehicle pulled up and a gentleman approached them about the fair.

"Louis Lutt just came over and started asking us if we'd mind being the honorary guests at your local fair," Max said. "After very little persuasion we decided it would be fun and did so."

The Thomason's are from Alamo, Texas and the retirees left their southern home in early June to travel, playing golf and fishing along the way. "We just had spent two months in Colorado trout fishing and golfing," Max said. "We purchased one of them national gold golfing cards which allows you to play over 2700 golf courses throughout the United States for a certain cover price and Wayne's golf course was on that list."

Thomason said he and Goldie felt the Wayne stop would be right on their way to Jackson, Minnesota—a place they left for on Tuesday morning.

Roger and Sandra Lutt served as hosts to the Thomason's during their stay and escorted them to the barbeque. "On Saturday we ate breakfast with the mayor and then went and played golf," Goldie said. "It was a lot of fun and I'd say it's the most unusual thing, yet excit-

Legislative aides visit area farms

A dozen legislative aides to urban members of Congress will visit Nebraska August 12 to 15 in the seventh year of Nebraska Farm Bureau's Legislative Assistants Visitation Program.

One of the legislative aides will be spending his time in Wayne County on the Roger and Roxanne Meyer farm near Randolph. He is Brooks Anderson, who is a legislative assistant for Rep. Amo Houghton, a Republican representing a district in New York.

Legislative aides chosen for the program were recommended by Nebraska Rep. Doug Bereuter, the program's original cosponsor and Rep. Bill Barrett, R-Neb. whose district includes western Nebraska.

Previously the aides had only visited host farms in eastern Nebraska, but this year three of the aides will be hosted on western Nebraska farms and ranches whose owners are members of the Nebraska Farm Bureau. The change will allow Farm Bureau to showcase more of the diversity of Nebraska agriculture, said Rob Robertson, vice president for government relations for the Farm Bureau.

To Crush Or Not To Crush

Some people have difficulty swallowing tablets or capsules and prefer breaking the medication in half or crushing it before ingesting it. For a few medications, this could be harmful. Some medicines are covered with a protective coating that prevents them from dissolving in the stomach where it could cause an upset stomach or become inactivated. Other tablets or capsules are made to release medicine over a long period of time, and if crushed, the drug is released all at once and may cause an overdose or adverse effects. Certain drugs are coated to mask the taste of the medicine, and crushing will reveal the bitter taste of the medication. If you prefer to crush your medications, be sure to check with your pharmacist first.

All of the aides who will be visiting in Nebraska have responsibility for advising their Member of Congress about agricultural or environmental issues, but few of them have firsthand knowledge of contemporary farming or ranching practices or the risks and finances involved in producing food and fiber, Robertson said.

Farm Bureau's purpose in bringing the aides to Nebraska is education, not lobbying, he emphasized.

Host families will "show and tell" what they do to produce crops and livestock, take the guest to neighboring farms or ranches that have different enterprises and explain how they are affected by state and federal regulations. If they are willing, the visiting aides have an opportunity to do farm chores such as feeding cattle, sorting hogs or moving irrigation pipe.

By learning more about agriculture, the aides can understand the impact proposed legislation would have on the agriculture industry and take this into account when advising their Member of Congress, Robertson said.

"As we try to shape congressional opinion on agricultural policy during the next couple of years on legislation such as the 1995 Farm Bill, Clean Water Act and others, one of our biggest challenges is to educate urban Members of Congress and their staffs about the agriculture industry and the way of life in rural America," he said.

The next closest host farm family to Wayne County will be Paul and Linda Meyer who are members of the Cumming County Farm Bureau. They will host Beau Greenwood, staff assistant for Rep. Charlie Rose (D-N.C.), on their farm near West Point.

day. Herman said the success of the fair is attributable to the community spirit and volunteerism which is rampant in the county.

It all started 33 years ago with the volunteers who originated the free barbecue," said Herman. He explained that the same volunteer spirit lives on today in Wayne County and that is what causes hundreds to donate and work on the free barbecue and still more to donate their time to work on fairgrounds clean-up, superintending exhibits and helping to organize the many fun activities which have been added in recent years.

"But then," he added in the way of a caveat on the success of this year's fair, "You have to thank the good Lord for the near perfect weather that really helped with attendance too."

Professor is honored

Sayre Andersen, associate professor of English at Wayne State College, has received the Outstanding Foreign Expert Award from China's Suzhou University. Andersen and his wife, Bonnie, served as an invited foreign expert and a foreign teacher in Suzhou University's Foreign Languages and Literatures Department for the 1993-94 academic year.

Suzhou University has been inviting teachers from the former Soviet Union, Germany, France, Japan, Australia, England and the United States for many years, but has never issued an Outstanding Foreign Expert Award, according to Shunzu Wang, who recently earned a master's degree from Wayne State and helped to coordinate the Andersen's visit to the People's Republic of China.

"The university was very impressed with Mr. Andersen's outstanding performance and felt it must honor him for his accomplishments," says Wang.

Andersen, who has been a Wayne State faculty member since 1970, earned his bachelor and master of arts degrees from the University of Illinois.

Mark Zach

New Eagle

Mark R. Zach, 18, son of Dave and Diane Zach of Wayne, will receive his Eagle Scout badge in a special Court of Honor ceremony Tuesday, August 16 at Grace Lutheran Church at 7:30 p.m.

A reception will follow the ceremony in the church basement.

Zach joined Boy Scout Troop 174 in Wayne at the age of 11. He held troop offices including patrol leader and crew chief.

For his Eagle Project, he organized and led in the painting of the garage at St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The project included glazing and fixing broken windows in the garage.

Edits journal

Dr. Stephen Glass, assistant professor of human performance and leisure studies at Wayne State College, is serving as editor of the Nebraska Journal for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

The Journal, published twice a year, provides a forum for the publication of original papers and reviews concerning issues and topics related to the goals and mission of NAHPERD (Nebraska Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance).

Glass will also serve on the Executive Board of NAHPERD.

Glass, who has been a Wayne State faculty member since 1993, earned his bachelor's degree from North Dakota State University, his master of arts degree from Ball State University, and his PhD. from Southern Illinois University.

Fugitive

Dakota border, Arens said.

Lunderman lived in Yankton, S.D., at the time of the burglary but he grew up in Rosebud, S.D., on the Rosebud Reservation.

"Since the age of 16 I was an alcoholic," Lunderman said. "The life I came from then was not a good one."

But he came from a good family that supports his decision to serve his time and start over, Lunderman said.

His stepfather, a pastor in the Dakota Presbyterian Church in Fort Thompson, S.D., said Saturday he encouraged Lunderman to turn himself in.

"I said, tell the parole officer, so that he will have a life, so that he won't have to live under another name," said Everett Harrison, 63. "I told him don't be afraid of jail, because St. Paul was there with chains on, Paul and a lot of prophets went to jail talking about Jesus Christ."

After escaping from jail and stealing a car, Lunderman drove to California and worked odd jobs there for about four years. He later moved to Arizona and lived the last few years in Fort Collins, Colo., Arens said.

The sheriff said he believes Lunderman will only have to serve his original sentence. The statute of limitations has run out on the stolen car charge and the escape charge was dismissed in the early 1980s, Arens said.

The first few years after his escape he got in minor scrapes with the law, but that tapered off when he realized he might be able to avoid prison and still work, Lunderman said.

Under aliases, Lunderman worked construction and laid tile among other jobs.

"I met a lot of good people I worked for, a lot of good men. It never felt right, having to look them in the eye and knowing I was lying to them," Lunderman said.

Treatment for alcohol abuse and a recent visit home to South Dakota helped him decide to turn himself in, Lunderman said.

Lunderman returned to Fort Collins to put things in order and called the sheriff's office, wanting to turn himself in.

He got on a bus from Fort Collins and walked up to Arens in Norfolk at about 4 p.m. CDT Friday.

Arens said the odds of Lunderman being arrested without turning himself in were slim. The warrant issued for his arrest expired years ago and the sheriff's office didn't have records of Lunderman ever having been there.

Authorities had to check court records to verify Lunderman's story, Arens said.

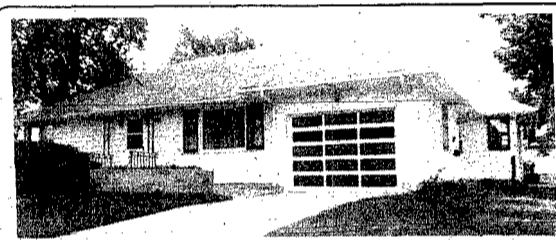

But Lunderman said authorities had come close once or twice. However, he said, that wasn't the point. He is separated from his wife and doesn't keep in touch with her, but he has a 12-year-old son he wants to care for.

"I'm 37, but it's not that old. I've still got a lot of happiness ahead of me, if I work hard for it," Lunderman said.

Keep welcome mat out

Wayne City officials are considering a change in policy established in the seventies which permitted industrial developments constructed on the outskirts of the city to utilize city services such as sewer, water and other utilities without being annexed into the city.

The policy was part of the package of inducements, along with other state and local incentives, which attracted major industries to the community and allowed some homegrown businesses to expand.

Wayne has been cited as an industrial development success story throughout the state of Nebraska.

Now there's a carrot of several thousands of dollars in additional property tax revenues sitting just outside the city boundaries that is causing some to look with regret on the city's earlier largess.

However, we fear a move by the city to annex industrial tracts which were established with the understanding that they would have long-term exemption from municipal taxes would, if not reverse the current trend of economic growth, in the least stifle it.

Industrial entities in Wayne contribute greatly to the local economy, and will contribute more when the current housing shortage in Wayne is corrected. They certainly contribute as much to a well rounded community as the two retirement housing projects being built in the city which have been granted tax increment financing.

All of these projects were attracted to Wayne on the promise of incentives from the community. The term of those incentives should be spelled out in the beginning and the city should live by that agreement.

In today's competitive and highly mobile industrial development market, there will certainly be other communities willing to offer long term tax incentives to industries currently located in Wayne.

We would hate to see the loss of hundreds of jobs and the households that go with them because an industry believed Wayne had turned over its industrial welcome mat.

We still need to maintain a policy of clearly defining what is expected when city services are extended outside the city limits. Those should only be done after annexation agreements have been signed, except in the case of industries.

Where ever there have been extensions in the past, there should be annexation. But we think the exemption should be maintained for industrial tracts.

'Attack fax' common on campaign trail

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Life as a reporter sure has changed, particularly when it comes to covering political campaigns.

The days of chasing after a story, note pad in hand, are disappearing. Even those instances of tracking down a news tip over the telephone are becoming rarer.

More and more often, we get our news in the State Capitol from those obnoxious events called "news conferences" or the even more oppressive "news releases" sent via the mail or the fax machine. This year's election campaign has been especially guilty of news release mania.

The fax machine in my office in Lincoln has hummed so frequently with the electronic mud-slinging of candidates that statehouse reporters have given them a new name: the "Attack Fax."

Such attack faxes come snaking out of the fax machine at all times of the day and night. They slam public officials for this and condemn candidates for that. Some are printed; most are not.

Most attack faxes come from candidates, particularly Gene Spence, Patrick Combs and Jan

Stoney, but many also come from the political parties, providing verbal support for their champions.

The attack faxes have been so common this year that the state's largest newspapers have both commented on the phenomenon.

The editor of The Omaha World-Herald, G. Woodson Howe, recently wrote that political mudslinging — through faxes and other mediums — had become too common.

Howe put a new requirement on stories about personal attacks on candidates: that only the candidate themselves could initiate or respond to a personal attack.

That removed those quotable campaign managers, political consultants and party officials from making political attacks in print in the World-Herald.

It also prompted a few complaints from busy officeholders, including the governor, who say they don't have the time to respond to all political attacks.

Ed Russo, the Lincoln Journal-Star's Sunday television columnist, devoted an entire column to the attack fax issue.

So where does this leave the average voter who's trying to sort out who's the best candidate?

Not very well served or informed.

Newspapers, as a whole, can't cover every political event or proclamation, leaving candidates to leave more heavily on brief "sound bites" in television ads or radio or TV interviews — or such attack faxes. You don't learn much about an issue, or a politician's stance, in such small bites.

Voters, on the other hand, don't seem as interested in long-winded issue stories for the most part. They tend to get more information from the short snippets on TV or from more-informed friends, or they don't vote at all.

What's the solution? I'm not sure, but I think serious candidates, as a prerequisite for running for office, ought to be required to participate in a set number of debates or issue forums.

That would be a good start. Of course, somebody will probably trash the idea in some press release or attack fax.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer.

'Changed his tune'

Dear Editor:

Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey has "changed his tune" on health care this election year. (As you remember he also cast the deciding vote for Bill and Hillary Clinton's tax bill last August.)

Conservative Republican challenger Jan Stoney and the majority of Nebraskans have apparently convinced Kerrey to abandon his earlier more liberal versions of health care reform.

Watch our liberal Democratic Senator continue his amazing transformation in this election year from liberal to conservative. Instead of out jogging with Clinton — watch our Democratic Senator run as fast as he can — away from Bill and Hillary.

It's time for a truly conservative Republican — Jan Stoney — to represent Nebraska.

Wants not needs

Dear Editor:

After reading the editorial "Community Needs It," I realized how many of the facilities in the city of Wayne are shared. When the weather is poor for swimming lessons, children can swim at Wayne State's swimming pool.

The Wayne High football team shares the college football field on game nights. The community theater uses the high school lecture hall and the college theaters. The Wayne Elementary and Middle Schools share the city auditorium for many musical and sporting events. The Wayne High track team now uses the Wayne State College track. And Saint Mary's physical education classes are held at the Armory.

We all would like to have an indoor pool in the new middle school, lights on the high school football field, a new track built at the high school, a gymnasium at Saint Mary's Elementary, or a suitable 700-seat auditorium in the new Middle School.

Wayne is a small community of 5,000 people. What the community needs and what the community wants are two different things.

Slingin' bull

Dear Editor:

I see at your Wayne County Fair you revived the game that the Pioneers used to play — The Buffalo Chip Flip. I'm curious, where did you get the buffalo chips?

On the Fourth of July week of 1992, our town celebrated the centennial year. We put on a lot of events for entertainment and one of them was the Cow Chip Flip. I can remember in the early 20's when we did not have all the entertainment we have today, we created our own fun. I remember my grandfather and my father, who were earlier settlers here, telling me that pioneers often held contests throwing buffalo chips. (The buffalo are long gone, so we substituted cow chips during the centennial.)

Each participant had their own technique, such as putting a finger behind it when they threw it. We would always get a chip that had good "substance" and a good "edge" so it would roll farther without falling over.

Of course, throwing against the wind we soon learned to close our eyes and mouth because they would fall apart and you don't want that stuff coming back in your face. If you were left handed, it was important to pick a left handed chip. They are formed counter clockwise, where the right handed chips are formed clockwise. I think the kid who won the contest threw his cow chip like a discus.

Anyway we slung a lot of bull around here in them thar days.

Industry needed

Dear Editor:

In his recent letter to the editor, Gary Costilow has done a good job of representing the kind of shortsightedness that could cut off the stream of goodwill our industrial employers have for the community of Wayne. His unfounded allegations that those industries are on a "free ride" and "just taking" should not go unanswered. Although I'm not an authority on these matters, I do believe I may be better informed than Mr. Costilow.

Generations of effort have contributed to the success Wayne enjoys with its sound, diversified industrial-employment base that is the envy of other communities. That cumulative wisdom has recognized the advantages of recruiting the right types of industry and then supporting them in their growth without burdening them with annexation.

Those who have worked in the past to bring industry to Wayne and foster homegrown entrepreneurs have recognized the distinction between "industry" and its people. "Industry" does not use our parks, library, senior citizens center, swimming pool, recreation programs, etc. The people who fill the jobs "industry" provides use those services and, as resident homeowners and renters, they pay the taxes that support them.

Yes, industry uses electrical power which, for the most part, is purchased at wholesale from sources such as NPPD and resold at retail through the City. The entire electric operation (plant, distribution and administration) however, is a proprietary fund which is separate from the City General Fund and is supported by electrical consumers, not taxpayers. A case might even be made that, in fact, those electrical consumers provide a subsidy to the taxpayers inasmuch as electrical revenues are used to pay certain ad-

And yes, some industries use municipal water and sewer. Again, however, water operations are funded by users and not taxpayers and, in earlier years, users outside the city limits were charged higher rates. It is to the advantage of the city not to have private wells and septic systems within close proximity.

So, what services constitute the "free ride" that Mr. Costilow alleges? It can't be police protection because the industries rely upon the county sheriff's department and are not served by city police. They are served by the same inter-cooperative fire protection system that all of us in the area enjoy wherein city residents receive benefit of resources provided by taxpayers outside the city and vice versa.

Mr. Costilow seems to believe that Wayne is somehow unique in that we have not annexed our major industrial plants and he questions how we can expect to grow without taking that step. There are countless examples of other communities as near as Norfolk that have assumed a similar strategy of supporting the growth of their major industries without annexation and enjoying the abundant residuals of the resulting jobs.

Of course there are benefits for these industries to be located near our city but they pale in comparison to the benefits we receive as a result of their existence. What is really at issue is not whether the industries should pay a fair share but whether they should pay more of our share. The huge investment made by these companies in plant and equipment is a tantalizing annexation plum that will continue to tempt some. Let's be satisfied with the fruit that falls from the tree. If we begin shaking it we might be terribly disappointed with what falls out.

Living in a new state — confusion

"Bet you can't guess in what state I was born!" challenged the Stranger.

Well, let me think. "Here's a hint. It's a state which has not as yet joined the union" the Stranger explained.

I give up.

"Would you believe I was born in the State of Confusion?"

That's easy to suspect!

"Ha! Well, it's a state where befuddlement, bewilderment and fuzzy perceptions are common."

Same as in the other 50, right?

"Exactly! Everyone feels especially cozy in Confusion."

What is it like living there?

"Sort of like living in California where they claim beer is made out of recycled sewer water!"

Unbelievable! But tell me, what else transpires in the State of Confusion?

"In Confusion we're all actors with the world as our stage. It's a place where, when they're chasing you out of town, you pretend you're leading a parade! Politically that's called an optical delusion. Plus, all of our prices are set at $2.98, $9.99 and $1.19.9." Sellers think not-so-bright buyers are drawn by cents, not sense."

Do pretenders in Confusion consist of spin doctors aiming to deceive the honest?

"Obviously! No one answers a question beyond the shadow of a doubt! All residences are located on Bluff Street, and..."

Wait a minute! Is this the home of Objective Based Education and multiculturalism?

"Right! In Confusion, schools create us all equal, thanks to our lethargy. It's a place made of meticulous illusion."

Merlin Wright

You know how it is when you're obligated to buy a gift for folks not special to you? You shop around trying to find a gift that looks expensive, but really isn't? That's the kind of simulated sincerity we exercise."

You'd love living in Washington D.C. then, because that's where most everything looks cheap, but turns out to be million-dollar boondoggles! It's a scene where Hillary does the work, but lets Bill take the credit! A perfect mirage!

"Things are different in Confusion-land, there being no right or wrong, with the only challenge being how you can outwit the opposition. We like to say we dare throw the unwanted baby out with the bath!"

More truthfully, in Confusion your abortionists throw the baby out with the trash.

"Oh silly! It's legal! Stop thinking! Get a life! Morality here is strictly optional!"

Right, Stranger, so I'm moving on to a better state."

"Which one?"

A kingdom not of this world.

"Far out!"

Yes, it is.

Jones presents paper

Douglas Jones, assistant professor of geography and political science at Wayne State College, recently presented a paper as part of the Department of Geography Colloquium Series at the University of Oklahoma.

His paper was entitled "V.O. Key's Friends and Neighbors Revisited: An Example from Texas." The paper examined the concept of friends and neighbors voting first described by the influential political scientist V.O. Key in 1949.

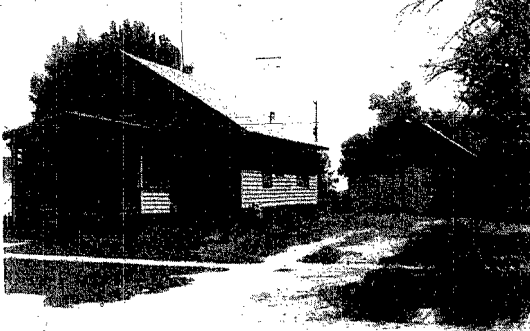

The 1990 Texas Democratic party primary for the office of Agriculture Commissioner provides a contemporary illustration of Key's concept. Beyond providing a contemporary example of the phenomenon, this primary election sheds important light on the eventual general election defeat of the nationally prominent incumbent Democrat Agriculture Commissioner, Jim Hightower.

Jones, who has been a Wayne State faculty member since 1993, earned his bachelor's degree and master of arts degree from Texas A&M University, and is currently working towards a Ph.D. at the University of Iowa.

Facts about dietary fat

Although dietary fat needs to be controlled, many Americans do not realize that certain amounts of fat are essential to a person's diet, said Dr. Darlene Martin, NU Extension nutrition specialist.

"Some dietary fat is necessary for good health," Dr. Martin said. "It helps in the transmission of brain and nerve signals, keeps our skin smooth, cushions internal organs, helps our bodies maintain temperature and provides the energy for the body's work. Fat is also necessary to help the body carry vitamins A, D, E and K."

When problems arise from fat, it is because many adult Americans consume too much. Americans over the age of two should consume a maximum of 30 percent of their calories from fat, but the average American is consuming 37 percent. People who have more fat than they need in a diet are often more obese, and at risk of certain types of cancer and heart disease.

While many Americans need to reduce their amount of dietary fat, they need to make sure infants and young children have enough fat and cholesterol in their diets for brain and nerve development.

"Remember that children's diets low in fat may be too low in calories if that came from fat are not replaced with adequate calories from other foods, such as bread, cereal, vegetables and fruits," Dr. Martin said.

For adults trying to lower their fat intake, looking at the total fat and cholesterol eaten in a day is more important than just looking at foods individually.

"If you choose a food that is high in fat, balance that with an intake of fruits, vegetables and grains," Dr. Martin said. "Even though the symptoms of a high fat diet may not yet be exhibited, studies have found that plaque in the arteries builds up during the teen years."

Are the 'terrible twos' so terrible?

QUESTION: Are the "terrible twos" really so terrible?

DR. DOBSON: It has been said that all human beings can be classified into two broad categories: those who would vote "yes" to the various propositions of life, and those who would be inclined to vote "no."

I can tell you with confidence that each toddler around the world would definitely cast a negative vote! If there is one word that characterizes the period between 15 and 24 months of age, it is "no!"

No, he doesn't want to eat his cereal. No, he doesn't want to play with his dump truck. No, he doesn't want to take his bath. And you can be sure, no, he doesn't want to go to bed anytime at all.

Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of the "terrible twos" is the tendency of kids to spill, destroy, kill and get into things. They also have a knack for doing embarrassing things, like sneezing on a nearby man at a lunch counter.

During these toddler years, any unexplained silence of more than 30 seconds can throw an adult into a sudden state of panic. What mother has not had the thrill of opening the bathroom door only to find Tony Tornado covered with lipstick from the top of his pink head to the carpet on which he stands?

On the wall, is his own artistic creation, with a red handprint in the center, and throughout the room, is the aroma of Chanel No. 5, with which he has anointed his baby brother.

The picture sounds bleak, and, admittedly, there are times when a little toddler can dismantle the peace and tranquility of a home. (My son, Ryan, loved to blow bubbles in the dog's water dish—a game which still horrifies me).

However, with all of its struggles, there is no more thrilling time of life than this period of dynamic blossoming and unfolding. New words are being learned daily, and the cute verbal expressions of that age will be remembered for half a century.

It is a time of excitement over fairy stories and Santa Claus and furry puppy dogs. And most importantly, it is a precious time of loving and warmth that will scurry by all too quickly.

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

QUESTION: Why are men so insensitive to women's needs today? They seem oblivious to the longings of their wives, even when every effort is made to communicate and educate.

DR. DOBSON: I question whether men have really changed all that much over the years. Rather, I doubt if men have ever responded as women preferred.

"Did the farmer of a century ago come in from the fields to say, 'Tell me how it went with the kids today?' No. He was as oblivious to his wife's nature as husbands are today. What has changed is the relationship between women!"

A century ago, women cooked together, canned together, washed clothes at the creek together, prayed together, went through menopause together and grew old together. And when a baby was born, aunts and grandmothers and neighbors were there to show the new mother how to diaper and feed and discipline. Great emotional support was provided in this feminine contact. A woman was never really alone.

Alas, the situation is very different today. The extended family has disappeared, depriving the wife of that source of security and fellowship. Her mother lives in New Jersey and her sister is in Texas. Furthermore, American families move every three or four years, preventing any long-term friendships from developing among neighbors.

And there's another factor that is seldom admitted: American women tend to be economically competitive and suspicious of one another. Many would not even consider inviting a group of friends to the house until it was repainted, refurnished or redecorated. As someone said, "We're working so hard to have beautiful homes and there's nobody in them!"

The result is isolation—or should I say insulation—and its first cousin: loneliness.

"It's Wonderful What They Can Do."

Pearl Moore had Cataracts.

She had No-Stitch Cataract Surgery.

"My vision was blurry to read. I never had any funny light or anything like that, it was just difficult to read fine print. I read a lot.

I had my glasses changed three times and it just didn't do much to help. My optometrist suggested I get checked for cataracts. I came to Feidler Eye Clinic. I wasn't afraid of cataract surgery because I wanted to see. Your eye sight is very special, you want to keep it.

About two days after surgery it starts to feel good. It takes three weeks to heal completely but you start seeing better right away. It is not painful at all.

I came to Dr. Feidler because he had done a good job for my husband. I think he's fine. His methods are good. The staff are all really nice to you. They are very professional. I was very well treated, no complaints.

It is wonderful what they can do nowadays; it really is when you stop to think about it."

The Golden Years

By: Connie Dishrow

The Federal Family and Medical Leave Act went into effect one year ago this month. The act mandates that companies allow an employee to take up to 12 weeks off without losing the job for reasons that include taking care of an older family member. Fears by many employers that large numbers of employees would seize the opportunity to go on leave haven't materialized. This is borne out by a survey of companies subject to a similar California law: Only 1.5 percent of companies reported that more than 3 percent of their employees went on leave. For most, it was less than one percent.

Angela Lansbury made her movie debut at age 18 in 1944 in a supporting role in "Gaslight." At age 68 she returned to the ninth seasons of her top-rated TV show, not only as the star but as executive producer as well. As if that weren't enough, she also took time to star in two made-for-TV movies.

Remember When? July 26, 1971 — Astronauts of Apollo Mission 15 brought the first surface vehicle to the moon. The battery-powered Lunar Rover enabled them to explore the moon beyond walking distance from the landing module.

Wakefield Midgets still alive

WAKEFIELD-Paul Eaton's Wakefield Midgets are one of three teams remaining in the Class C State Baseball Tournament in Mitchell. Wakefield is currently 3-1 and will play Lincoln Christian at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday. A Wakefield victory would advance them to the championship game at 6 p.m. Tuesday against Gordon.

Wakefield defeated Gordon, 13-5 on Monday evening so all three teams remaining have one loss in the double-elimination format. Wakefield began tournament play last Friday with a 5-3 win over Alma. On Saturday they were defeated by Hebron, 13-8.

Monday night the Midgets eliminated North Loup Scotia with a come-from-behind 6-5 victory in eight innings. Wakefield trailed 5-4 heading to the bottom of the eighth inning and the first two guys that came to the plate flew out.

The next two batters drew walks and an error on the third baseman loaded the bases for Wakefield with two out. Justin Mackling then faced a single into left field which scored two runs, thus ending the game.

SWIM FOR HEART

The Wakefield Swimming Pool recently hosted a Swim for Heart event for the Heart Association. Thirteen local swimmers raised $1060.75 for cardiovascular research by participating. This figure was almost double last year's according to event coordinator Carol Clark. The top three swimmers, determined by the amount of money they collected for the association, earned a trip to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Swim Clinic. Qualifying for the trip were Josh Soderberg, Javanah Bebee and Timarie Bebee.

Other participants were Lori Brudigam, Jordan Puls, Zach

Dolen, Titus Nelson, Loretta Nelson, Kayla Erwin, Aaron Lueth, Randi Barge, Joseph Nelson and Linnea Wahlstrom.

Life guards, Kelly Turney, Stacey Preston, Megan Sandahl and Heidi Muller, volunteered their time to help.

Swim for heart is a nationwide endeavor to raise funds for the American Heart Association's research, professional education and community service programs. Swimmers raise money by collecting pledges based on number of laps they swam in one hour or donations. Besides raising money for the Heart Association the event also acquaints swimmers with the cardiovascular benefits of swimming.

The Library Card

This column is written occasionally to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at the Wayne Public Library.

A few days ago a young girl scout came into the library looking for answers to questions for a merit badge she was working on. One question in particular made us realize we need to do a little promotional work! The question she asked was, "What services does the library offer?" It is a good question. We will try to give it some answers in the next several columns.

The most obvious service a library offers in books. Beyond the mere provision of books for the public is another service. If a patron is searching for a book not in the library, we may be able to get it through the Inter-Library Loan system. We are connected through our computer to libraries all over Nebraska. If the book we are searching for is not listed in our Nebraska libraries, we refer the request to the Wayne State College Library, which has the capacity for a wider search. A nominal fee of $1.50 to cover postage is required as well as a library card.

Magazines, newspapers, phone book, books on tape, records, catalogs (Penney's and Spiegels), jigsaw puzzles, art prints, maps, records, paperback books, large print books, books for children and for young adults, picture books and board books for tots, adult fiction and non-fiction, encyclopedias, reference books all have a place in the library.

We are grateful to the Wayne Saddle Club for their generous donation recently of books and videos about the care and training of horses and ponies.

Books include:

1. Simon & Schuster's Guide to Horses and Ponies of the World by Maurizio Bongianini.
2. Basic Training for Horses: English and Western by Eleanor Prince.
3. Understanding Horses by Garda Langley.
4. Ride Western Style: a Guide for Young Riders by Tommie Kirk-smith.
5. A First Guide to Horse and Pony Care.
6. The Illustrated Guide to Horse Tack by Susan McBane.

Videos include:

1. A six volume set on basics of horse care and riding: a. Handling and Moving the Horse, b. Basic Horse Care and Grooming, c. Tack and Equipment Basics, d. Get on, Stay on and Get off, e. Rider Body Language and Safety, f. Basic Riding safety.
2. Starting the Young Horse.

We wish to thank the Wayne Saddle Club for adding a new dimension to our collection.

The summer reading program rush is over and August is almost upon us with long, hot days. What better way can you spend a hot afternoon than with a good book? We have good books on the New Book Shelf, but we also have good books waiting in the stacks ... books you may have missed the first time around. Come in and browse. You may find something unexpected!

Our hours are, noon to 8 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. We are closed Sundays until September. Don't wait until then to come in and see us!

Prozac is Recommended for Eating Disorder

Prozac is a beneficial prescription medicine that is used to treat depression and obsessive-compulsive disorders. Shortly after being approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for depression in 1987, there were reports of suicidal attempts by some persons who took the drug. After an extensive investigation by the FDA, it was determined that there was "no credible evidence of a causal link between the use of antidepressant drugs, including Prozac, and suicidality or violent behavior." In other words, the FDA found that antidepressant medicines did not cause suicide. Now Prozac is in the news once again. In April, a panel of health professionals and scientists that provides information to the FDA recommended that Prozac be approved for use in bulimia. Bulimia is an eating disorder which involves eating binges followed by self-induced vomiting.

Cattle challenges subject of conference

The cattle market is always presenting challenges to producers. A one-day conference in Sioux City, Iowa will address several profit opportunities for stockmen and feeders. The conference is Sept. 12 at the Holiday Inn of Sioux City.

The conference is sponsored by the Extension services of Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa. The conference will feature many well-known ag experts. "The lowest cattle prices put many producers in a serious financial bind," says Iowa

State University Extension feedlot beef specialist Beth Ellen Doran. "This conference is a way to explore ways producers can maximize profits."

John Lawrence, ISU Extension livestock economist will discuss the cattle market situation and buy/sell strategies. Rick Stock, UNL beef feedlot specialist will present feed ration opportunities for ethanol byproducts. Dillon Duez, SDSU Extension economist will discuss retained ownership arrangements.

SDSU Extension beef specialist, John Wagner, will talk about selecting commercial lots in co-own-

Corn borers on increase

European corn borer moth flight began to increase July 30-31 at the Northeast Research and Extension Center in Concord, said Keith Jarvi, NU extension IPM assistant.

"Our three day total of 205, and Monday night's total of 53 is a large increase over the three to six per night we had been catching," Jarvi said. "However, to keep things in perspective, in 1991, one of the worst years for second generation corn borers, we caught 400 to over 1,000 per night during a one week period."

First generation corn borer larvae are still being found ins talk cavities, extending the second generation flight through nearly all of August.

Producers considering treatment should remember it will not cause a very high percentage of second generation corn borer control. Instead, the goal should be to protect the corn plant's yield potential by preventing cavity formation during the critical silk and blister stages of growth. Once corn is in the milk stage, the physiological losses drop significantly.

"When the majority of the infested plants have either blackheaded egg masses, and/or small larvae can be seen in the leaf axils, it is time to treat," Jarvi said. "Resist the temptation to wait a few more days, because it will allow the early hatching borers to enter the plant and do the most damage."

Jarvi added that depending on each field, treatments in Northeast Nebraska could occur as early as Aug. 8-9, and through most of next week, and that the goal of effective treatment is to protect yield potential.

"Remember, treatment is not necessarily going to result in the highest percentage of borers killed," he said.

Producers who need help deciding whether treatment is economical can contact their local extension office.

Fair memories and barn damage seen

The last time the Big Farmer was at the farm, he brought back a load of lumber. When he unloaded it in this barn, he found two boards that had been painted white; and in green lettering, "Spring Branch 4-H Club."

There was a flood of memories: breaking calves to lead, shampooing and clipping them, dusty days in the county fair calf barns and sloppy fairgrounds after a rain; Mexiburgers and watermelon at the 4-H stand, livestock parades in the grandstand (at least one animal always got away), and the free barbecue during which hundreds of folks were fed in very short order.

It's county fair time all over the state. We're enjoying a break in the humidity this weekend. In fact, we've had to loan sweatshirts and windbreakers to our guests from Dallas.

The barn I referred to in the first paragraph is a big old-timer, with limestone foundation and "post and beam" construction. It has fallen on hard times and desperately needs restoration. We plan to do this, but know it will be costly.

All summer, we've been adding to the brush pile south of it; as the wind brought down tree branches. Finally, one still evening about a week ago, Mike burned the pile. I laughingly yelled, "Don't burn the barn down!" as I left for a walk about 8 p.m.

We'd been in bed for just a few minutes when a car drove on the yard, honking. I thought, "There's been an accident," and grabbed my robe. Immediately, someone was ringing the doorbell and yelling, "your barn's on fire!"

Sure enough, some sparks had been carried up to the shingles, and there was an eerie glow on the south end. I went to the phone.

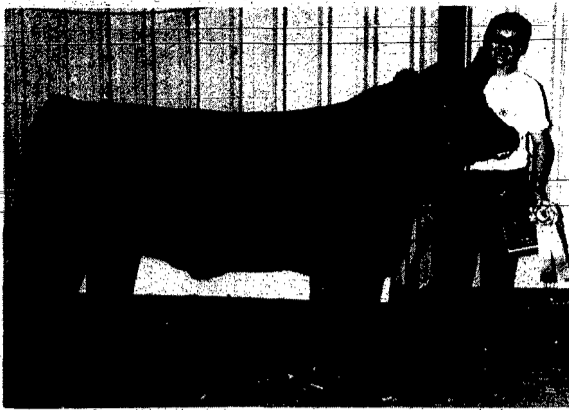

Murdock volunteer firemen had just left the firebarn after a regular meeting. They were all here in a very short time; and the long hoses, with water under pressure, soon had it out. But the fire chief says another ten minutes and it would have been gone. We feel very fortunate. And I'm again grateful for the volunteers who train, and donate their time and respond to pagers at odd hours.
