Jeannie Jones puts finishing touches on newly poured concrete which is part of the plant expansion project at Great Dane Trailer Plant in Wayne. Plant manager Terry Hanson and Leonard Jones are in the background discussing the project which will add 18,000 square feet to the plant. Hundreds of trailers are lined up waiting for finishing touches or for delivery as the plant this week completed construction of its 20,000th trailer.

Dane celebrates milestone, growth

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Great Dane employees will be celebrating a milestone next week during a company sponsored party marking the completion of the 20,000th refrigerated truck trailer built at the plant.

The celebration will also mark a period of unprecedented growth and expansion for Wayne's leading employer which is currently providing 500 jobs and over $8.4 million in annual payroll for the community.

Three years ago the firm was working through a market downturn. Production fell to under 40 units a week and there were minor layoffs among the 250 workers employed at the plant. Payroll then was $4.5 million.

BUT DEMAND for the exclusive Wayne-produced Super Seal trailer took off in 1992. The Wayne plant saw orders increase to more than a 6 month backlog and plans were implemented to dramatically expand production.

"The success of the Wayne plant has been based on quality, price and durability of the units we produce," plant manager Terry Hanson. He added the quality level that makes the Super Seal a trailer in demand by modern truckers, is a direct result of the pride in craftsmanship and the work ethic of the Wayne plant employees.

THAT'S WHY THE plant will be throwing a party for its employees next week to mark the rolling out of the 20,000th trailer. Gifts will be given to mark the occasion and one employee will be chosen to cart away 20,000 pennies (125 pounds worth).

Hanson credited much of the plant growth with the philosophy that both employees and management have adhered to in recent years—"give the customer something more than what they expect."

Currently the plant is working to maintain production at 90 trailers per week. Several million dollars worth of new equipment, including doubling capacity on the foam press which makes the trailer sides have been added. The square footage on the plant was increased by over 10 percent last year and construction is currently underway to add another 18,000 square feet to the west end of the building which will bring the plant size to nearly 200,000 square feet.

Housing starts reflect summer boom

Housing contractors have been busy constructing new homes and other building projects in Wayne this year.

Through the first eight months of the year, a total of 62 building permits have been issued according to Donald Siefken, City Planner/Building Inspector.

"These numbers include 11 single family homes, one duplex (two family home) and a two-building apartment complex which will have 12 apartments. These will create a total of 24 new housing units to the city of Wayne."

"In addition to these permits, work is continuing on the Cityside Addition, just south of Highway 35 on the east edge of Wayne. Currently, there are four permits pending for mobile homes there. Additional homes are planned as models for the mobile home court," said Siefken.

IN ADDITION to the new units being constructed, there have also been several remodeling permits to restore or renovate previously existing apartment units in the business zones in Wayne. "While these don't technically add a dwelling unit to the available housing stock, they do provide improved living areas," said Siefken.

The total valuation of the permits issued so far this year is approximately $7.2 million. In 1993 the total permit value was $6.9 million and in 1992 the value of permits was $2.7 million. "These figures indicate that the future looks good in Wayne. We have nearly tripled the 1992 figures and have several projects in the developmental stages," said Siefken.

County planners send document to village boards

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Designed to protect rural agricultural land from urban sprawl, the planning and zoning process for Wayne County took a major step toward completion Thursday night with the passage by the Joint Planning Commission of the draft of the Comprehensive Plan.

The thick planning document for the county, which must be approved before zoning regulations can be implemented, was approved by the commission after a public hearing attended by 14.

The document must now face public hearings before each of the three village boards and the county board of commissioners before it can be approved by those bodies. The four entities have decided to act in unison to develop a jointly run planning and zoning commission for the county and its villages.

has had land use zoning regulations for over 20 years and has planning authority over land within two miles of the city limits. Other areas of the county have been without zoning protection and regulations need to be implemented before it is too late, said Tim Keelan, consultant with the firm Hanna Keelan Associates, which has been contracted to help the county implement zoning.

"The main goal is to protect the agricultural industry and prevent urban sprawl from moving out into those productive farmland areas," said Jeff Ray, an associate with the consulting firm as he explained the contents of the comprehensive plan.

KEELANTOLD the group which met in the courtroom at the county courthouse, that the land use plan as drafted was a "fairly conservative approach."

"There's has been a lot of good stewardship in the county," he said.

US West to sell local exchanges

Telephone exchanges in Winside and Allen are two that US West Communications has announced are for sale. The company is exploring the possibility of selling up to 28 exchanges serving 32 Nebraska communities. This represents approximately 2 1/2 percent of its access lines in Nebraska, according to Jim Hawes, US West Nebraska vice president.

Hawes noted that the company is exploring these potential sales in an effort to improve the overall efficiency of its operations in the state and ensure that all Nebraska customers continue to have access to quality telecommunications services.

"Buying, selling and trading exchanges is not new in the telephone industry. US West has a long history of trading exchanges and is currently selling exchanges in several other states in its 14-state territory. We believe that because of geographical considerations, there are other companies who can serve these customers at significantly lower cost. They may also further modernize and introduce new services more quickly," said Hawes. "We're looking for buyers with a demonstrated ability to provide telephone service. I know this decision affects customers, community leaders and our employees. The sale would change some long term relationships which would not be easy for any of us. It is in our mutual interest to find buyers who match well with the communities they would serve. It is also important to note that while there may be some relocation, we expect no employee reductions from these sales," said Hawes.

If US West Communications finds suitable buyers for the communities, the sales could be completed before the end of 1995. The US West board of directors, the Nebraska Public Service Commission and the Federal Communications Commission must approve all sales. In February 1993, US West became the first regional Bell company to commit to building an interactive, multimedia network in the 14 Western and Midwestern states it serves. In May 1993, US West became the first large American telecommunications company to form a domestic strategic alliance with a media company, Time Warner Entertainment.

"Property owners have taken good care of the land." He said the new written guide for land use regulations would not represent a lot of changes in the unwritten land use policies that farmers have applied on themselves.

The planners said the main purpose of the zoning would be to try to keep extensive residential, commercial and industrial developments within the corporate limits or areas of zoning influence of the communities in the county. Keelan said this can be accomplished by limiting lot sizes for future subdivisions in the rural areas of the county.

"WE WANT TO stay away from unplanned cluster developments," he said. "You don't have major problems now," he explained but added, there is already a threat of urban sprawl from the Norfolk area in the southern part of the county. "Jeff and I often get called in to do planning after it is too late."

While the county comprehensive plan was approved unanimously by the nine member commission, the audience was not universal in its support of the planning and zoning process.

In the public comment portion of Thursday's meeting, Doug Nelson suggested allowing nature take its course with respect to future developments in the county. "Good old economic forces naturally handle these problems," he said.

KEVIN KAI suggested that industrial developments within the communities do not help farmers a great deal because the employees there tend to cause tax rates to go up for schools and other infrastructures and the emphasis on industrial development reduces the influence of the farmer within the community.

He questioned whether farmers would have much say in the land use planning and zoning process. He was assured by members of the commission that six of the nine planning board members are appointed from rural areas of the county and one member is appointed from each of the villages of Hoskins, Carroll and Winside.

Kai also said he was concerned about what the details of the regulations in the zoning document would be.

"NOT TOO MANY people can disagree with this," he said of the comprehensive plan. "It's the details in the zoning regulations I could have a problem with."

Several more public hearings are planned before the final zoning document can be approved but commission members said their goal is to have the final passage completed before the end of this year.

A tentative date of Sept. 29 has been set for the series of public hearings the individual village boards and the county commissioners must hold before they can vote to approve the comprehensive plan.

part of the area at a later date.

The city of Wayne implemented a comprehensive plan indicating projected needs in the area of housing. The plan, which went into effect in 1992 calls for a total of 263 new housing units needed in the city by the year 2002. With 24 new units being developed so far this year, representing nearly 10 percent of the total need, the project's goals appear to be being met.

"IN ADDITION to the residential building, several other projects indicate growth in Wayne.

Wayne State College is progressing with the addition to the Student Center and the work on the Business Building is nearly completed. Great Dane has initiated a substantial addition to their manufacturing facility, as has D.V. Industries and Providence Medical Center has obtained a permit for the addition of physical therapy, outpatient and clinic facilities at their site," said Siefken.

"I would definitely have to say things are 'on the grow' in Wayne America and the future looks bright," said Siefken.

marketing plan, said Allen, rural sociologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"Running a business is a continual challenge, no matter who you are or how much experience you have," Allen said. "Yet almost everyone you talk to says that one of their dreams is to own their own business. The Fast Trac course offers entrepreneurs a guide to follow in addressing the challenges they face."

Each 11-session course totals 40 hours of training. A variable fee is charged for the course at each location. Both beginning and established business owners may participate.

Coalitions are organizing Fast Trac courses to be held in Broken Bow, Columbus, Norfolk, Omaha, Scottsbluff and Wayne. The other two courses will be rotated between locations in Valley, Greeley, Sherman and Howard counties; and between Clay and Fillmore counties.

The state coalition is offering $5,000 grants for courses to be offered in two additional locations. Communities requesting funds must submit a proposal to the State

Fast Trac Headquarters by Nov. 1.

Trial Fast Trac courses that were offered in six Nebraska communities, including Wayne, last fall and winter met with success. Survey results of graduates from the pilot courses showed the number of jobs created/retained as approximately .8 jobs for each program participant, Allen said.

"That extrapolates into roughly 77 jobs in Nebraska as a result of the first year of training efforts," he explained.

"The strength of the Fast Trac program evolves from local sponsors," Allen said. "To hold a course, a community needs to organize a sponsoring coalition, with members representing business, government and educational interests."

The Fast Trac program is made possible in Nebraska by a grant from the US West Foundation. The statewide program is offered by a coalition of public and private sector business resource providers, organized by the CCRD within the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Those interested in information about the Fast Trac program here should contact the business department at Wayne State College.

Schaefer to teach local dance, exercise classes

Deb Schaefer, a newly certified Jazzercise instructor, has joined Lori Sievert, certified Jazzercise instructor and owner of the Wayne Jazzercise Fitness Center, in teaching Jazzercise dance-exercise classes.

Schaefer earned the right to teach Jazzercise by completing an intense two-day workshop and by performing a letter-perfect audition. She joins the Jazzercise family of over 4,500 instructors offering classes throughout the United States, Canada, Japan, Australia, and in many other countries throughout Europe.

Jazzercise combines simple jazz-dance movements with carefully planned, effective exercise. Each 60-to-65-minute class includes a warm-up, an aerobic segment followed by a cool-down, muscle-toning and flexibility exercise and a final cool-down. New routines and music, which Schaefer introduces every eight weeks, keep the program fresh. Jazzercise is noncompetitive — designed so that people at all fitness levels can participate — and this fosters a sense of camaraderie. Classes are meant to be fun, and the fun is what makes Jazzercise unique.

To qualify as a Jazzercise instructor requires dedication and thorough training. After submitting extensive personal history and putting in long hours of practice, Schaefer participated in a rigorous workshop during which she was required to demonstrate 10 dance-fitness routines, pass a written exam covering basic anatomy, exercise physiology and nutrition, learn Jazzercise policies and procedures and obtain certification to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

Schaefer's Jazzercise classes will be held at the Jazzercise Fitness Center in Wayne at 112 East 2nd Street.

For more information on class times, please call 375-2420.

Wildcats at UNO Tourney this weekend

WSC spikers drop home opener

The Wayne State Wildcats volleyball team opened up season play, Thursday night at home against Chadron State but it wasn't the kind of home opening finish head coach Sharon Vanis was hoping for.

The visiting Cardinals won the opening game, 15-12 but WSC evened the match at a game apiece with a 15-8 win in the second game. Chadron State won a narrow 15-13 decision in game three before WSC blasted the visitors, 15-2 in game four. The Cardinals, however, closed out the match with a 15-8 decision for the victory.

All five games were won by the team playing on the south side of the net. "Obviously, we're disappointed with losing the home opener but I was very pleased with our effort," Vanis said. "I think this group needs to win a match very early in the season to prove to themselves they are a better team than we were a year ago."

Vanis said everyone that played for the 'Cats did a good job. "Volleyball is a momentum game," she said. "When you get the momentum you stay with the six girls that are on the floor."

Jenifer Svitak was the leading server for WSC with five aces while Lora Grant had a pair. The 'Cats committed eight serving errors. Jaime Melton notched 57 set assists with Tammy Gablenz leading the hitters with 23 kill spikes.

Lora Grant had 20 kills and Carol Sigdestad had 16. Svitak was in double figures in ace spikes with a dozen while Laura Pfister had eight. As a team, WSC had a .315 kill percentage in hitting. (kill percentage is similar to a batting average in baseball.)

Defensively, WSC was led by Lora Grant with 22 digs while Melton and Pfister had 11 each. Sigdestad finished with 10 digs and Svitak notched nine.

Pfister led WSC in blocks with 10 including seven aces while Gablenz had seven total blocks. The 'Cats will compete in the UNO Tournament on Friday and Saturday.

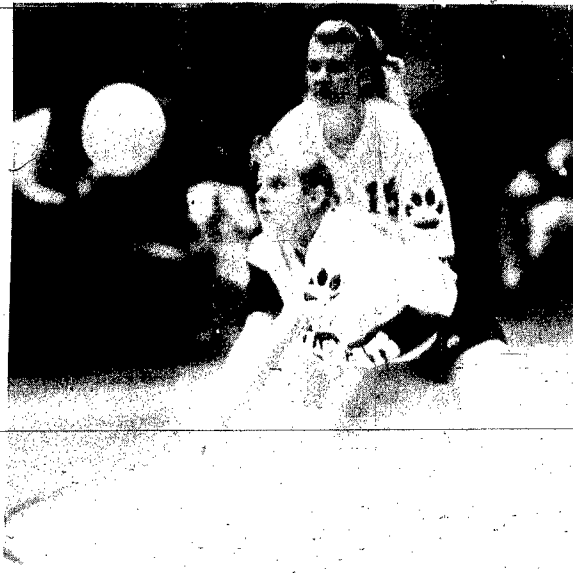

WSC will play two matches on Friday against UNO and South Dakota and Saturday at 11 a.m. they play Mankato State. The final match will be played against South Dakota State at 3 p.m.

Tailgate party set for Saturday

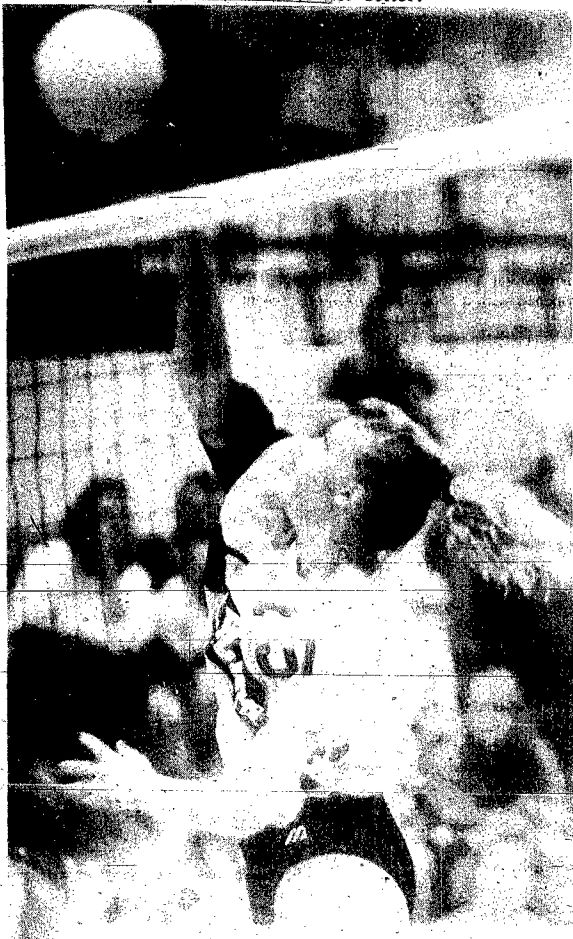

A tailgate party is slated for Wayne State's home opening football game with UNO, Saturday beginning at noon at Memorial Field.

The tailgate is being sponsored by the Milton G. Waldbaum Company and grilled chicken breasts, prepared and delivered by Pac-N-Save will be served.

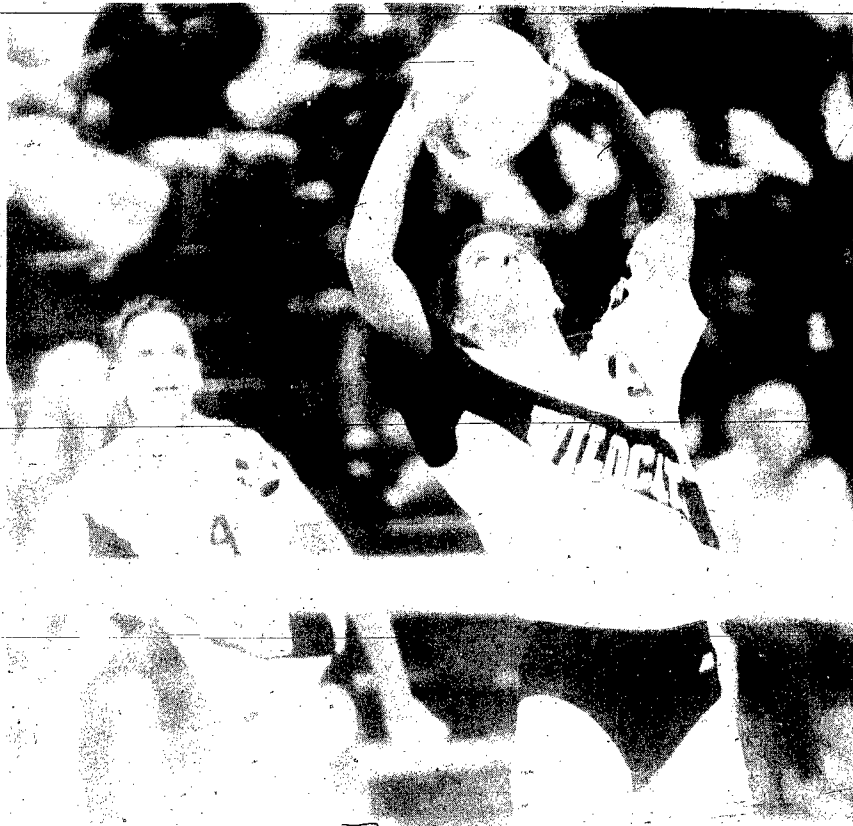

The tailgate meal is free for anyone with a reserve game ticket to the 'Cats vs. Mavericks contest. Without the ticket the meal is $3. For last minute game tickets call 375-7520 or 375-7499.

FORMER WINSIDE volleyball standout Kari Pichler plays for another Wildcats team now—the Wayne State Wildcats. Here she passes the ball to her setter.

LAURA PFISTER spikes the ball for an ace during Wayne State's opening match of the season against Chadron State, Thursday in Rice Auditorium.

WAYNE STATE volleyball play maker Jaime Melton sets the ball to a waiting Tammy Gablenz, a 5-10 right side hitter from Columbus who transferred to WSC this fall. Gablenz led the 'Cats in her first game ever with 23 kill spikes.

Wayne wins season opener in Beemer

The Wayne volleyball team started off the 1994 season with a first round victory in the Beemer Invitational, Thursday over Scribner-Snyder, 15-13, 15-5.

Joyce Hoskins' team suffered from what she called first-game jitters in the first game but played extremely well in the second game. "I think we were a little nervous in that first game," Hoskins said. "We didn't serve that well and looked a little timid at the net. The second game, however, we looked like a totally different team—one with confidence."

Hoskins said her squad played a lot more relaxed in the second game which led to a dominating performance. Amy Post and Jenny Thompson led the Blue Devils in scoring with eight points apiece with Post notching three service aces. Carrie Fink finished with six points.

Fink was 45-52 in setting with 17 assists while Katie Lutt led the hitters with 11 kill spikes on 21-25 attempts. Angie Hudson was 7-8 with four aces and Jenny Thompson was 10-14 with three aces. Lutt had four blocks to lead the winners while Fink had three.

Wayne's victory celebration lasted a very short time, however, as Wisner-Pilger handed the Blue Devils their first loss of the season in the second round, also played on Thursday night, 13-15, 13-15.

"The first game was close all the way," Hoskins said. "There were some long rally's and both teams played very hard. The second game, we got down by a 14-5 margin before Katie Lutt served eight straight points to pull us with in one point before Wisner closed out the match with a point."

Lutt finished as the Blue Devils leading scorer with 14 points and one serve ace. Katy Wilson followed with five points. Carrie Fink was 33-44 in setting with 12 assists and Lutt was the leading hitter with nine kills while Jenny Thompson had seven.

Katy Wilson was 6-6 in hitting with one kill and Amy Post was 6-6 with no kills. Angie Hudson rounded out the hitting with a 9-12 performance. Thompson had three blocks to lead the Blue Devils while Hudson and Lutt had two each.

Wayne will play Beemer at 9 a.m., Saturday followed by a match with North Bend at 10 a.m.

Wakefield notches volleyball win over Winside in opener

Paul Eaton's Wakefield Trojans volleyball team defeated Winside in the season opener, Thursday night in Wakefield, 17-15, 4-15, 15-4. It was the debut for Winside head coach Lisa Schroeder and despite the loss, she felt her team played well for the most part.

"I'm very happy with the way we played the first and second games," Schroeder said. "In the third game we just suffered a let down in communication and it affected the way we performed."

Schroeder said her girls gave 150 percent throughout the match which is all you can ask of a team. For Wakefield, however, the victory was very sweet because the Trojans suffered just three losses as a team a year ago and all three were to the Wildcats.

"We have a lot of things we need to work on," Eaton said. "Of course, we're very pleased to come out on top the first game of the season, especially playing a team like Winside."

The Trojans were led in serving by Erika Rhodes who was 13-14 with four aces. Andrea Lundahl was 13-14 with three aces and Mindy Eaton was 8-8 with two aces.

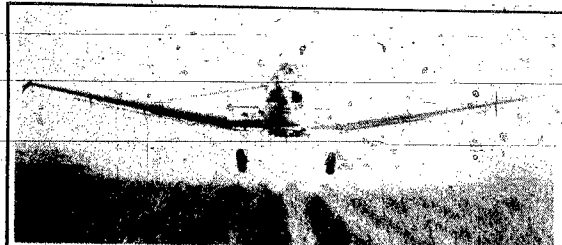

Stacey Preston was 6-6 with one ace and Mary Torczon was 8-8 with no aces.

In setting, Preston was 31-33 with 13 assists and Mindy Eaton was 10-11 with one ace. The hitting department was led by Mary Torczon with 11 kill spikes on 18 of 23 attempts. Amy Hattig was 10-12 with six aces and Alyssa Utecht was 8-9 with three kills. Alison Benson finished four kills on five of seven attempts.

Winside was led in serving by Stacy Bowers and Kristi Oberle but no stats were available. Wendy Miller was the leading scorer with 11 points. Bowers finished with nine set assists and Emily Deck had eight assists.

Wendy Miller led the hitters with 11 kills after a 16-17 performance. Tammy Thies and Sarah Painter each finished with three kills. Thies was also the Wildcats leading blocker with six.

Winside will travel to Battle Creek, Saturday for the Battle Creek Invite. The Wildcats will play Hartington Cedar Catholic in the first round. Wakefield, meanwhile, plays at Lyons on Thursday.

Council haggles over many issues

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Wayne City Council haggled over parking issues, yield signs, establishing a recreation and leisure foundation, and placement of a clock on Main Street during its meeting Monday.

And the city parents never reached total agreement on any of those issues.

Council asked legal representatives to determine the best way to establish a private foundation to accept donations for the Recreation and Leisure department. Council members balked at a request by Jack Williams speaking for the recreation commission, that the city earmark donated private funds to be used in establishing the foundation.

Questions were raised about the propriety of commingling private foundation funds with public revenues. Most council members agreed with the practicality of forming a foundation but disagreed with Williams over how it should be established. Williams said legal counsel for the commission had said the city could hold the funds for the foundation but city manager Joe Salitros and council members disagreed, saying the procedure would be improper and would be red-lined by an auditor.

In other business:

Council tabled a request from Randy Pick for an unlimited loading zone parking privilege in the 100 block of Fairgrounds Ave. Pick said he wanted to establish a feed store there and need the carte blanche parking privilege or the business wouldn't work. Council members said they needed more details about loading and unloading plans and hours before they could approve the request. The vote to table was 7 to 1, with Jane O'Leary opposed. She said she wanted to reject the request outright.

Heard a report on the sludge management plan for the city in its efforts to comply with new EPA regulations. "Your sludge is clean, there's no metals in it," said Jim Condon a consultant with Olsson Associates a Lincoln engineering firm hired to prepare the EPA plan. In a bit of additional good news, Condon said his firm's findings showed the city was in the wrong classification as far as amount of discharge produced. A change to lesser class would require less EPA reporting and thereby save the city thousands of dollars each year in government testing costs. Applications are already in the works to reduce the city classification to a lower rate discharger.

Approved the request of Gary VanMeter to erect a clockworks pole in front of his jewelry store on Main Street. Citing notoriety the city has received from the extensive remodeling of the jewelry store in an antique motif, Council member O'Leary asked her fellow members to approve the request, which they did on a 7-1 vote. Darrell Heier voted against the move citing the potential sidewalk obstruction as a negative precedent. He said other business requests had been turned down in similar cases.

Approved a lease arrangement to allow St. Paul's and Redeemer Lutheran Churches to hold Sunday School classes in the basement of the public library. Council haggled about how much the churches should pay for the space, if anything, and finally compromised on $25 per month.

Agreed in a split vote to place yield signs on the intersections along East 14th Street. Concerns over heavier traffic due to development in the area and speeders caused council to consider the traffic control signs. Council member Darrell Fuelberth and Jane O'Leary voted against the yield signs because they favored stop signs.

Ban on sending yard waste to dump went into effect Thursday

Communities deal with waste issue

—OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Thursday's implementation date for the ban on sending yard waste to landfills won't affect many Nebraska communities because they have had their bans in place for some time.

The ban also prohibits sending used oil and lead-acid batteries to the landfill.

A survey of communities by the Omaha World-Herald on Wednesday found many have banned burial of those materials for weeks, months or years. Kearney and Beatrice started the ban more than two years ago and have gone beyond state requirements.

Steve Hart, Kearney waste management coordinator, said the city began its waste-management program in May 1992. He said residents can have yard waste picked up at the curb once a week at a cost of $3 a week, or they can haul grass and leaves for free disposal at the landfill.

Yard waste in Kearney is composted and given away to residents, lawn companies, contractors and others.

Lead-acid batteries and used oil are accepted at Kearney's recycling center, while curbside collection of recyclable materials is being phased in.

Beatrice is in its third year of keeping grass clippings and leaves out of the waste stream, said Mark Hyberger, city public properties director.

Residents may haul yard waste to a free drop-off site or may pay $3 a week for curbside pickup, he said.

The city recycling center and some service stations accept waste oil, he said. There is a market for used vehicle batteries so disposal is not a problem, he said.

Brian McManus, spokesman for the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality, said the ban is going "extremely smoothly."

"There have been very few calls from people and communities about what to do to comply with the ban," McManus told the World-Herald from Lincoln.

"All in all, I think people recognize it is just a good idea to do this," he said. "Basically, when you send yard waste into landfills in large volume, that shortens the life of the landfill. Instead, through composting, you can find a beneficial alternative."

In Omaha, the new yard-waste program is running smoothly, said Norm Jackman, city environmental services engineer.

He said some people continue to place grass clippings in black plastic bags or clear plastic bags, and drivers for the city's new yard-waste collection service have been instructed not to pick them up.

Lou Tomsu, city of Omaha recycling supervisor, said the city has six drop-off sites for recyclables and is looking for more locations.

Several other cities have placed trash containers for grass clippings in alleys or on open lots. People carry their own clippings to the containers.

McCook has asked residents to voluntarily comply with the yard-waste ban, opening three dropoff sites.

Lincoln's yard-waste program, in place since October 1992, accepts used oil and batteries at a transfer station.

Holdrege has private haulers carry yard-waste to a compost site for a fee, or residents may do so themselves.

Sidney is using its old landfill site for composting yard wastes. Residents haul yard waste to the site, while used oil and batteries are picked up a curbside with other recyclables.

Valentine's yard-waste goes to a compost site, while a recycling center accepts waste oil, batteries and appliances for recycling.

Five more waste-management deadlines face Nebraskans:

—Sept. 1, 1995 — Waste tires and household appliances are banned from landfills.

—July 1, 1996 — Communities are to have reduced the volume of waste buried at landfills by 25 percent from 1992.

—Sept. 1, 1996 — Unregulated hazardous wastes are banned from landfills.

—July 1, 1999 — Waste is to have been reduced by 40 percent from 1992.

—July 1, 2002 — Waste is to have been cut 50 percent from 1992.

will provide more space for finishing some of the 300 or so trailers which are currently stored on the plant's back lot awaiting detail work.

Hanson said the firm has been very fortunate in attracting good employees during a tight labor market. Increasing pay scales, adding benefits and providing a safe work environment have helped attract the needed workers, he said.

A weekend shift is being added soon. Expected to employ about 35 workers mainly in the finishing area, the shift will work three 12 hour days on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and employees who opt for that shift will be paid 40 hours for 36 worked, he said. About 30 existing employees have indicated an interest in that shift, Hanson said.

The market share of the Super Seal has continually increased since 1989 when one in ten refrigerated trailers manufactured in the United States were built in Wayne. Today the average is one in six.

Student aid effort seen for Wayne

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

In a graphic display of their welcoming and caring nature, many Wayne families will be opening their homes to incoming freshmen students through the Wayne State College "Adopt-a-Student" program.

The community is entering the second year of the program which seeks to make incoming freshmen, who may be far from home, feel more like Wayne is their home away from home.

Implemented through the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce last fall, the program matched more than 30 new students who offered to allow themselves to be "adopted" with volunteer families in Wayne.

Many of last year's participants say they have developed such close bonds between the students and their Wayne families that they plan to maintain the friendships throughout their college years and beyond.

Though praised by the college administration and staff members, the "adopt-a-student" program is not sponsored by Wayne State. It is a function of the Wayne community organizers and the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce.

"The adopt-a-student program truly demonstrates the community's sincere and serious intentions of becoming in FACT the Friendliest of All College Towns," said Bob Zetocha, Wayne State director of admissions.

Curt Wilwerding, one of the organizers of the program in Wayne, called it an effort to help students make the often difficult transition into college and independent living.

"The program recognizes the fact that first year college students are faced with many challenges, decisions and responsibilities. This community effort serves as a support system to college students wishing to take advantage of the friendliness and knowledge that Wayne citizens possess," he added.

Typically, Wayne families who volunteered for the program would invite students over for dinner or to attend family outings as a break from dorm life. Cookies at midterm and finals time, assistance with transportation difficulties, or just being an adult friend the students could confide in, were some of the positives cited by last year's participating students in discussing the program.

Host families also say they are more inclined to participate in college functions—to attend programs with their adopted students—than they were before they had a close connection to the campus.

Those real parents, often nervous about sending their young freshmen off to a distant and unfamiliar community, have said they appreciate knowing there are "adoptive parents" in Wayne who take an interest in the progress and well-being of their student.

One student said she missed her younger brothers and sisters who were more than 300 miles away, and enjoyed visits with her host Wayne family which had young children.

Wilwerding, who participated in a similar program while a student at Peru State College, said he still maintains friendship with his former host family. He recalls one semester when he was very sick and host family helped him recover.

After a sign-up period during the first few days of the new semester, students who want to participate are asked to fill out a questionnaire outlining their background and interests.

A community recruitment effort of host families is underway with volunteers being asked to contact the Wayne Chamber of Commerce at 375-2240.

The committee of chamber members who are organizing the effort will meet to try to match the student interests and backgrounds, as near as possible with those of the host family.

A kickoff party is planned for early to mid-September when students and families will be introduced.

"The program is a unique opportunity to make your years at Wayne State College more meaningful and enjoyable," said Wilwerding.

Those freshman students interested in participating in the program, are also encouraged to contact the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce.

Farm numbers shrink by 7000

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska lost more than 7,000 farms in 1987-92 — the highest rate of decline recorded since at least 1950, according to a new federal report.

The decline in the number of farms meant the size of the average farm grew by 90 acres during the same five-year period.

"Production agriculture is moving toward fewer and larger farms, and there are those who would suggest that that's a problem," said Bruce Johnson, an agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The findings were made public this week by the U.S. Census Bureau in its 1992 Census of Agriculture. The census is conducted every five years.

The survey indicated the state lost 7,579 farms, or a drop of 12.5 percent.

"The rate of attrition of farms is accelerating despite increases in sales and in the market value of products sold," said Marty Strange, director of the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill. "The basic story is the same: The more farmers do, the worse things get."

Johnson said that as the farm population falls, it could become more difficult to sustain rural communities.

"On the other hand, farms to some extent — become more viable and sustainable as they get larger," he said.

The 12.5 percent decline in Nebraska compares with a less than 1 percent increase from 1982 to 1987. The number of farms declined 5.6 percent during the two previous periods, 1974-78 and 1978-82. The previous biggest decline was 11.3 percent in 1959-64.

The size of the average farm in 1992 was 839 acres, up from 749 acres in 1987.

Nebraska had 107,200 farms in 1990, when the average size was 443 acres.

Other 1992 findings:

—Nebraska had 44.3 million acres of farmland, compared with 45.3 million acres in 1987.

—The average farm had $429,188 invested in land and buildings. That average farm produced $28,301 profit on sales of $155,125. The profit figure does not include government payments.

—The value of land and buildings on an average farm climbed to $514 per acre from $457 in 1987, an increase of 12.4 percent in actual dollars.

—The average age of a farm or ranch operator was 51.

—Cattle and calves were the leading agricultural products of the state, with sales of $4.57 billion compared with $3.56 billion in 1987.

Attorney fights to withhold five proposals

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A Grand Island attorney vowed Tuesday to continue his legal challenge to keep five proposals off the November ballot.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said the attorney general's office has given the OK to put five measures on topics ranging from arbitration to victim's rights on the ballot. The Legislature passed the measures this year.

Beermann also certified a citizen petition measure to put term limits on the ballot for the second time in as many years.

Attorney Denny Busick contends that the five measures, which will appear on the ballot as proposals one through five, should be kept off the ballot because they were submitted to Beermann after the deadline.

Assistant Attorney General Dale Comer wrote an opinion signed by Attorney General Don Stenberg that said submitting the proposals two days late is substantial compliance with the law.

He cited a 1968 case on the same issue that also said such a filing constituted substantial compliance with the law and that there was no justification for removing the proposals from the ballot.

On Aug. 11, Busick wrote a letter to Beermann asking him to keep the measures off the ballot. The letter was written on behalf of his client, Lincoln attorney Bill Wieland, who is president of the Nebraska Association of Trial Attorneys.

Wieland's organization opposes one of the amendments, which would allow the use of voluntary binding arbitration in the state.

Busick said Tuesday he likely will ask the Nebraska Supreme Court to look at the matter first. If the high court refuses to hear the case without it going through lower courts, Busick said he will ask the Lancaster County District Court to stop the placement of the issues before voters. "Our concern is that if we're this serious about amending the constitution, it ought to be done the right way. The Legislature ought to be held more accountable in terms of compliance," Busick said Tuesday.

The five ballot measures would: allow the increased use of dispute resolution through mediation and arbitration instead of lawsuits; authorize off-track betting on horse racing; create a state commission to handle tax disputes; provide certain rights for victims of crime; and eliminate the requirement that bills must be read in their entirety in the Legislature before they pass.

Nebraskans for Term Limits had enough valid signatures to get their proposal before voters for the second time in two years, Beermann said. He said he certified 104,124 valid signatures from the 131,964 turned in by the group.

On May 13, the state Supreme Court said that signatures equalling 10 percent of the number of registered voters on July 8 would be needed. Beermann computed that number at 91,849.

In May, the state Supreme Court threw out the term limits law saying that not enough valid signatures had been gathered to place it on the 1992 ballot.
