

It's dry; time to take care

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

The recent sunny dry weather has allowed farmers to move into the fields, many for the first time this spring and farmers and motorists are urged to use caution during this busy time.

Farmers need to use caution when moving large pieces of equipment down the road. Traffic laws prohibit the transport of oversized pieces of equipment before dawn or after dusk.

"Reflectors should be placed at the widest point on a piece of equipment and tractor warning and headlights should be on and working when driving on public roads. It would be a wise investment for farmers to purchase marker lights for pieces of equipment that are wider than normal," said Dave Morgan, Extension Safety Engineer at the University of Nebraska.

"It is also a good idea for farmers to be good neighbors and leave their mud in the fields. They should use driveways to knock off the biggest chunks of mud rather than spreading them on the highway," he said.

"Another safety precaution, especially because farmers are pushing to get crops in, is to be sure to get some rest. Driving down the road when you are tired is not a good time to fall asleep," Morgan said.

Motorists too, need to use caution during this time. "People in vehicles should be aware that farm equipment is moving at less than half the speed of most traffic and adjust their driving accordingly," he said.

Farm equipment is often wider

Board blasts news coverage

Members of the Wayne School Board have publicly criticized what they said was inaccurate reporting of school board discussions by the Wayne Herald.

The board members complained in their special meeting Monday night about being misquoted, about improper analysis in news stories and about lack of care in reporting on the most recent board meeting.

The newspaper was not informed of any concerns about news coverage prior to the Monday special meeting, was not asked to correct any errors prior to the meeting and its representative was not invited to respond to the board's complaints during the meeting Monday.

Part of Monday's criticism about editor Les Mann's performance included discussion about whether to send a letter to the editor to try to correct perceived errors.

Board members decided not to send the letter or to make it public, in part because they "don't want to fight someone who buys ink by the barrel," in the words of board member Will Davis.

The Herald subsequently requested, under state open records laws, a copy of the letter the board considered sending and a copy of the tape recordings of the board meetings made by school personnel in preparing minutes.

Parts of the tapes which would resolve disputes between the reporter's notes and the board member recollections of what was said at the meeting have been recorded over as part of the routine process of preparing minutes for subsequent board meetings. There remain minor discrepancies between the reporters notes and what board members recall saying, but the Wayne

Herald readily admits a couple of fact errors in the story.

First, the news report erroneously said the board had ordered administrators to prepare budgets reflecting 30 percent reductions in spending. It would have been more accurate to report that School Superintendent Dennis Jensen issued the order to make the cuts. When he informed the board of his budget cutting order at two different meetings the board did not vote to either endorse or reject the plan. The newspaper story should not have said the budget cut was a board order, however.

The newspaper account clearly stated that the board is only in preliminary budget discussions and is still months away from enacting a final budget and that there was sentiment on the board for not making

Industry Week touted

This week has been designated business and industry week in Nebraska. "Many people fail to realize or take for granted the impact business and industry has upon their community," said John Farnan, executive vice president of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce and Wayne Industries. In Wayne we are blessed to have a large number, 15, and variety of manufacturers. Our operations range from trailers to trusses and art work to pole vault pits.

Wayne manufacturers employ over 1,700 citizens of Wayne and the surrounding communities. On top of the job opportunities presented by their presence they have a combined payroll in excess of $22 million, said Farnan.

He said those payroll dollars purchase homes, insurance, gasoline, automobiles, groceries, medicine and every other necessity of life. Communities just like Wayne go begging for the chance to have clean manufacturers with good jobs like those in our community, said Farnan.

"We are fortunate indeed to have companies of this caliber located in Wayne America," he said.

He encouraged everyone sometime this week to take the chance to thank someone involved in the business or manufacturing community.

"They have worked hard and invested a great deal to insure a prosperous way of life for Wayne," he said.

Road work to begin

Work is scheduled to begin May 30 on Highway 15, beginning south of Wayne and running south for about six miles, according to the Nebraska Department of Roads. Brower Construction Company of Sioux City, Iowa has the $1,055,907 contract for grading, culvert work, seeding, asphalt patching and resurfacing of the shoulders.

Traffic will be maintained. Work is anticipated to be completed in August.

Ray Starman of Norfolk is the project manager.

Chair lift plan is no cheap solution

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

A new chair lift for the stairs at the Wayne County Courthouse might allow the county to avoid the cost of installing a $400,000 elevator to meet Americans with Disabilities Act regulations but the chair lift will not meet fire codes.

Terry Zwiebel, a state fire marshal, told the commissioners Tuesday that the chair lift they plan to install will not meet codes because when it is operating it will block more than 50 percent of the stairway used as a fire exit.

The commissioners have several alternatives to consider when they try to address building safety codes and ADA requirements which are forcing them to replace the existing chair lift in the building. But all the alternatives cost money.

The new $25,000 chair lift would be acceptable to the fire marshal if the county installed an additional outside fire escape from each floor of the courthouse. When an outside fire escape was installed to address a safety code violation for the courthouse, the cost was over $12,000 and that was ten years ago. Two more of the escapes would be needed if the new chair lift were installed the commissioners were told. Another alternative would be to appeal the fire marshal's rule to try to win an exemption for the courthouse.

A third alternative would be to install an elevator. County Commissioner Merlin Beiermann said a previous estimate the county received for installing a proper elevator was over $400,000. A final, un-stated alternative would be to do nothing, but the commissioners learned the power of the fire marshal's office previously when it ordered closure of the basement of the Juvenile Detention Center until a suitable fire escape route was added to the structure.

"We're trying to comply with the rules, but the cost is prohibitive," said Beiermann.

"We don't make the laws, we just try to enforce them," said Larry Pochop, also with the state fire marshal's office. Fire officials met with the commissioners and an elevator and chair lift manufacturing company during Tuesday's commission meeting.

"We wish there was an easy answer, but there isn't."

"Down the line they're going to have to slack off on some of these rules and regulations," said Beiermann.

In other business, at the commissioner's meeting, votes were taken to ask the Nebraska Department of Roads to change the classification of two minimum maintenance roads to local. The classification change was required because homes are being built on the roads and rules do not permit dwellings to have minimum maintenance roads as their only access.

County Highway Superintendent Sid Saunders pointing out the cost to the county of upgrading and maintaining the new local roads being reclassified said there were three such instances facing the county this year.

"It is good to have the addition to the tax base, (brought on by the new home developments)," said Saunders, "but I would prefer they be built on existing roads," he added.

Secondly, Board member Dr. Sid Hillier said he was misquoted by the paper in a reference to the granting of teacher salary increases while the schools are under spending lids. He said he did not refer to 6 to 8 percent salary increases for teachers as the newspaper quoted him saying. The tape recordings having him saying the teacher raises are 5 to 6 percent while the new spending limit proposal is only one percent increase. Though the reporters notes indicate there was an earlier reference from Hillier about the salary increases for teachers on a segment of the tape that has been recorded over, the direct quote in the story should have reflected the 5 to 6 percent reference and not 6 to 8 percent. We apologize for these errors.

The public discussion about Wayne Herald's coverage of the board was added to the special meeting agenda after it had been announced the meeting would be held only to discuss an opinion survey of district voters to determine why they voted against the failed bond issue in December, and to discuss a survey of families who use the school busing system.

Board President Phyllis Spethman complained about what she called editorialization in the newspaper account of the last meeting and said board members did not deserve to be misquoted. Board members objected to other parts of the article in question. In addition, during the discussion, several board members expressed appreciation to the newspaper for past support.

Forced to be a part of the news story he was covering, Publisher Les Mann said other than the two clarifications above, the newspaper stands by the content of everything else in the story.

"We want to remind everyone that we are anxious to maintain the newspaper's and its individual reporters' credibility and we are therefore eager to correct errors of fact or content when they are brought to our attention," he said.

In other business at Monday's school board meeting, the board announced its intention to get survey forms out to the parents of students who use buses before the end of the school year. The survey will ask opinions about the current bus system but will not include questions about whether to move to a self-transportation system.

The board also went through the survey questions that will be asked of a scientific sample of the district's registered voters to determine why they rejected the December bond issue.

The telephone survey being conducted by Research and Associates, a Lincoln firm will ask questions of 380 randomly selected registered voters in the district.

The board hired the firm for $6,000 to conduct the survey. It will reportedly have an error rate of plus or minus 5.7 percent.

than the road and motorists should be aware that farmers may be turning into a field along the road and need a wider turning area.

All self-propelled pieces of farm equipment are considered motor vehicles and as such are subject to all traffic laws. It is unlawful to pass farm equipment in no passing zones, up hills or at intersections.

Trustees grant raises to college personnel

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - The State College Board of Trustees last Thursday approved 4 percent raises for professors and other employees at the three state colleges.

The raise applies to professors, professional staff and support staff, said Suzi Shugert, spokeswoman for the Nebraska state college system.

Trustees also discussed whether raising entrance standards to match those for the University of Nebraska could help the state college system save money.

It might be wise to spend money on fewer students who are more likely to succeed, trustee Rick Kolkman of North Platte said.

Other trustees and college presidents disagreed.

A study of 1994 Chadron State freshmen indicates that only eight of them would not have qualified for admission under NU standards, Chadron State President Sam Rankin said.

"That says we're not admitting an awful lot of students who aren't going to make it, so we probably don't need a major change in admission standards" at Peru, Wayne and Chadron state colleges, said Carroll Krause, the board's executive director.

Peru State President Robert Burns said saving money and improving efficiency are better ways to conserve tight budget dollars.

Burns and Krause said most state college students would qualify for admission to NU anyway.

"I doubt that any of our students would be turned away from any of the university campuses," Burns said.

"Any Nebraskan ought to have the right of access to a four-year institution," trustee Jerry Conway of Wayne said. "We ought to let them in, and let them prove themselves."

Burns noted that NU has exceptions to its new admissions policy to allow promising students in although they may not meet other criteria.

Rankin suggested that the board consider improving transfer agreements with community colleges as a way to encourage students to start at that level and then move onto a state college.

'College by Satellite' seen

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - The head of the state college system sees a day when students in Wayne and Peru can earn a degree in Japanese leaving their own campus.

Carroll Krause, executive director of the State College Board of Trustees, plans to appoint a team to look at the possibility of using video conferencing to offer systemwide degrees.

Under the program, a faculty member would teach a course at one campus and students on the other two state college campuses would be able to participate via video conference technology, or "distance learning."

Krause said at the board's meeting Thursday that he hopes a plan

New units planned

Plans have been announced for the building of 30 assisted living units and 15 independent living apartments in the Morningview Estates addition in Wayne.

The Boyle Company, Inc. hopes to break ground late this summer or early this fall on what will be the second phase of a building project that included the construction of the Wayne Care Centre and will also include the construction of cottages sometime in the future.

"The goal of this project is to provide options for retirement and alternative living accommodations for those people in this age group," said Connie Disbrow, administrator at the Wayne Care Centre.

The 2.7 million dollar building will be constructed on approximately five acres of land located just south of the Wayne Care Centre.

The estimated completion date for this phase is the spring of 1996.

Benefit

Ralph Etter, who is spearheading the benefit, has set a goal of raising $25,000 at the event.

"Industries, businesses and some individuals will hopefully commit to a certain percent of the total ticket sales as a matching fund. If $12,500 can be generated in ticket sales and an equal amount accumulated by several matching funds, we will reach our goal easily," he said. "Many people have been looking for a way to help out our less fortunate friends and this is a fun and easy way to do so," said Etter.

There will be a container at the omelet site on June 2 for donations in addition to ticket price.

Any questions concerning the event may be directed to Ralph Etter, 375-1641 or Beverly Etter, 375-1130.

Final legislative days are approaching

By Stan Schellpeper
District 18 Senator

As we get to the final days of the 1995 Legislative Session, there are a number of priority bills that still have not been debated by the full Legislature even at the first stage of debate. There is a great deal of controversy involving LB 392, the mainline budget bill, and some of its major increases. Overall, LB 392 proposes increases in state spending of approximately 5.5 percent per year during the period of 1995-1997. I am one of a group of senators who are not supportive of some of these major increases.

My discomfort grows when I consider the spending increase limits the governor and his legislative supporters have proposed for local political subdivisions. Under LB 613, the Legislature would limit the allowable spending growth for political subdivisions to 4 percent per year and for schools to 3 percent to 5.5 percent per year. I believe we must apply the same limits to our own state spending that we impose on local political subdivisions. I am not supportive of budget lids unless it limits spending increases to 0%. Under a 0% lid, local governing bodies should only be allowed to exceed this limitation with approval from their constituencies. Unfortunately, if the law allows a 4 percent lid each year, almost every entity will increase each year's budget by that allowable limit. I feel any lid other than 0 percent encourages local governing bodies to spend as much as they are allowed. They continue this practice to prepare for potential spending increases in future years due to special needs and emergencies. I think that until we move away from local property taxes as the main source of funding for education, we are going to continue to see the large property tax increases many people experienced this year. Nebraska currently had the highest property taxes of any of the surrounding states. This is mainly due to our over reliance on property taxes to fund education costs. Taxpayers need to become more involved in guiding the Legislature toward relieving property owners and the burden they face with property taxes.

In a related matter before the Legislature last week, an attempt was made to fund the placement of a dean on the University of Nebraska-Omaha campus. A group of 100 Omaha business leaders is trying to force the Board of Regents to create a second college of engineering in Omaha by threatening to withhold support for the university. This is entirely the wrong approach in trying to enhance engineering education. The decisions on what is needed and affordable must be left to the regents.

I appreciate all of the phone calls and letters I have received on the many issues facing the Legislature. I also look forward to hearing more from my constituents as the session comes to a close. As always, I encourage anyone who may have questions or concerns or would like to comment on these or any other issues to write me at the state capitol or call me or my staff at 402-471-2801.

New spending lid measure advances

By Pat Engel
District 17 Senator

LB 613, which limits the spending authority of school districts, counties, cities and other local subdivisions of government was advanced. The current lids generally limit annual school budget increases to between 4 percent and 6.5 percent. The proposal contained in LB 613 would reduce those allowances to between 3 percent and 5.5 percent. The Department of Education assigns allowable budget growth rates to school districts based on their tax levies and their spending levels due to the passage of LB 1059, the 1990 school finance law. Exceptions to the school lids are in place for special education, capital construction, court and Commission of Industrial Relations settlements, student growth, handicapped access and disasters. Under the bill, local governments could annually increase their budgets by no more than 4 percent without going to the voters for special approval. The current lid, which is scheduled to expire June 30, 1995, allows for 5 percent growth before requiring a special election. The adoption of an amendment provided local governing bodies some leeway in their budgets by allowing them to reserve the "unused budget authority" for use in future years. However, most counties have not had the ability to reserve unused budgets. Opponents of the bill feel that the Legislature should not impose a lid on local government if it won't place the same limit on state agencies. Supporters of the bill feel that the bill is an essential component in reducing property taxes in Nebraska. I am sure additional amendments will be added to the bill at the next stage of debate.

LB 609, which allows the Department of Aeronautics to provide engineering and technical services to five privately owned Nebraska public airports and would allow these airports to be eligible to receive state and federal aid for airport development and maintenance was brought back to the floor of the Legislature for reconsideration on Wednesday, and was advanced. The Aeronautics Commission, a five member board appointed by the Governor, will review the applications and determine allocation of state funds and approval of federal funds to be spent for construction and maintenance of these airports.

LB 371, the crime bill, has been advanced from the Judiciary Committee. With only 15 days left in this legislative session, it will be difficult for the Speaker of the Legislature to place this bill on the agenda in time for the bill to have debate at each of the three stages required. Some senators have indicated they will attempt to try to delay the bill from passing. If indeed, senators attempt to filibuster, supporters of the bill will need to invoke cloture after eight hours of debate and will need at least 33 of the 49 senators support to do so.

But as the anniversary of my subscription drew near, I became more and more disillusioned, ignoring their requests that I renew my membership.

And finally, last month, I quietly joined the ranks of former NRA members.

Last week, former President Bush dropped his membership with a letter written to NRA President Tom Washington.

The letter wasn't mailed to Washington's office, it was released to the press, carried across the AP wires and printed in most of the big city dailies. In his letter Bush said he dropped his membership because he was offended by the NRA's references to "Federal Agents as 'jack-booted government thugs.'"

On Monday Tom Washington wrote George Bush a reply.

But he didn't mail it to any of Bush's homes. He placed it in the form of a full-page advertisement in the New York Times, The Washington Post, The Houston Chronicle, and just about everywhere else except the Kennebunkport Star.

In his letter, Washington urges the President to reconsider, while standing by the NRA's earlier analysis of Federal Agents.

Just yesterday, I received another letter from the NRA. It made no mention of Bush, but they would like me to renew my membership.

But I'm saving my $35 for a pair of jack boots.

Crisis team ready

The Principal's Office
By Donald V. Zeiss

The Wayne Public Schools Crisis Response Team is a supportive group consisting of teachers, counselors, administrators and health personnel. Their task is to assess, plan and intervene in crises affecting staff and students. A pre-planned, organized approach has been shown to be effective in reducing the emotional and social impact of a crisis. The Wayne Public Schools Crisis Response Team has had specialized training in directing crisis resolution activities.

In the event of a crisis, the Team is immediately activated, promptly evaluates the situation, and plans intervention strategies for students and staff the objectives of which are:

- to maintain a safe environment for students and staff.
- to meet the special needs of individual students by working with parents, school staff and/or specialists.
- to communicate with staff, students, parents and the general public through the most effective and practical methods.
- to continue effective instruction and carry out established routines, rules and regulations.
- to provide support for the student(s) at school.

• to act as a resource for other staff members and parents.

• to provide follow-up services as needed.

The general action plan followed by the Wayne Public Schools Crisis Response Team is to:

- verify facts of what has occurred.
  - develop a plan to meet objectives unique to the situation.
  - maintain support for staff and students.
  - provide appropriate follow-up.
- Members of the Wayne Public Schools Crisis Response Team were chosen for their professionalism, emotional stability and caring attitude. They have spent many hours in specialized training to develop skills in responding to crisis situations. A noted expert, who trains crisis response teams nationwide, conducted the training. The training emphasized the importance of a consistent response, avoiding permanent memorials, and encouraging scholarship memorials to benefit others.

We are confident that our team can bring students, staff and community through crises, emergencies or problem situations by using our resources and a prescribed crisis intervention plan.

To contact the Crisis Response Team, call Wayne High School at 378-3150.

Scout training planned

Personnel from the University of Nebraska will be conducting a scout training session at Wunderlich's Restaurant, 304 23rd Street and East Highway 30 in Columbus on Monday, May 22.

This session is specifically geared to train field personnel and farmers in recognizing the various problems that may be found in crops during the growing season. Crop development, identification of insect and weed pest species, recognition of fertilizer deficiencies and irrigation scheduling techniques will be stressed. A team of specialists from agronomy, biosystems engineering, entomology, soil science and weed science will conduct the training. CCA credits are being applied for.

Offering systemwide degrees also would allow students who were interested in majors that were eliminated on one campus to pursue their studies long-distance, Krause said.

The technology needed for the program is in place at Chadron State. Peru State soon will have it and Krause said he expects the Legislature to approve funds to establish the system at Wayne State.

A team set up by Krause and college presidents will study the issue and develop potential systemwide majors during the coming year.

Achievement banquet honors best and brightest

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

The brightest and the best young people in the Wayne community were challenged to continue to be leaders in their community and the world and to "guide the rest of us."

Tom Manahan, director of the Creighton University Center for Service and Justice issued the challenge to the top ten academic students in each class of seventh through twelfth grades during the annual Kiwanis Club Scholastic Achievement Banquet May 7 at Wayne State College.

Becoming a true leader in society is not simply recognizing your gifts and talents, Manahan told the students.

"You've got to develop those gifts and talents. You've got to make tough decisions," he added. "Leaders cannot be lukewarm. They have to take the responsibility of making commitments and living them out."

Manahan, who will be ordained as a Catholic priest later this year, made a dramatic career path change when he left a successful career as a top level business marketing executive to begin training for the priesthood.

He currently teaches at Creighton.

"True leaders offer themselves and their talents in the service of others," he told the audience of over 50 young honor students and their parents.

"God has given us many gifts, what we do with these gifts is our gift to God," he added. "Leaders leave their fingerprints on the lives they touch and they leave their footprints on the roads they travel," he said.

In presenting the individual students and their parents for recognition at the banquet, school officials related the collective achievements of the students honored. For instance, the eleven seniors honored had been awarded more than $200,000 worth of scholarships, according to Terry Munson, guidance counselor.

Multiple sunny days worth writing about

Finally, two days in a row of sunshine; and a third in the forecast. I could hardly decide what to do first today.

In '72 and '73, we did the Orange Bowl-Disneyworld bit, with Sue and Jon along, and Kay and Ann staying behind at Grandma's. We meant to repeat with the two younger ones, but never seemed to have the money or the time.

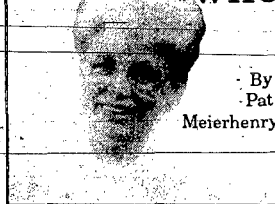

Lately, the friend in Orlando had been saying we could stay at her house and borrow her car. Plus, an airline called Air Tran was advertising a non-stop flight for $99 each way.

It was too tempting. My two youngest and I left the cold rain for sunny skies on Saturday morning and were walking the beach that afternoon.

On Sunday, we checked out Sea World. I'd never been there, and it was a pleasant surprise. The dolphins and shamù were great shows, complete with splashes into the audience. There were a couple poignant moments when some Make a Wish kids were introduced and spotlighted.

We challenged Epcot on Monday, after a stop at The Tin Angel, a craft store. We actually visited every country, with dinner at a French restaurant, and stayed for the Illuminations laser and fireworks show, after a ride in space ship Earth.

On Tuesday, it was time for the Magic Kingdom, and the jungle river trip, pirates of the Caribbean, the haunted mansion and small world.

Bill Clinton has joined the hall of presidents, and A. Lincoln brought tears to my eyes again. We saw Mickey and Minnie, Goofy and Pluto, Beauty and the Beast and Cruella de Ville.

The new show, legend of the Lion King, had such long lines we gave up. We chuckled as folks grabbed stuffed animals by the dozen. As usual, I was amazed by the cleanliness, the attention to detail and the good nature of the folks who run the features.

Orlando was riding high with the Magic's win over the Bulls. There are huge basketballs on top of the Orena. (It is the Orena.)

We finished up with lunch at the Hard Rock Cafe, which was astonishing. Waiters in black jeans and chains, gold records on the walls and loud music.

We arrived back in Omaha on Wednesday evening, tired and poor, disappointed that the rain hadn't stopped. We had food and beverages, served by pleasant attendants, and were very impressed by this economy airlines. And we were equally grateful to Marlyce for hosting us. Fun but wearing.

The Library Card

This column is written occasionally to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at the Wayne Public Library.

If this is May, it must be time for the annual library tour by first graders. Indeed, this is so. Each year Wayne's first graders descend on the library for the grand tour and story, and then a short briefing about library procedures. Most of these children are already experienced library users, but this tour is different. This will be one of the first times they will check out books on their own cards. To many that ranks right up there with their first visit to Santa! Would that the enthusiasm they bring to that day could last a lifetime.

The library is the recipient of two books given as memorials. "Making the Most of Your Money" by Jane Bryant Quinn was given in memory of Gerald S. Schafer. "Sing to the Stars" by Mary Brigid Barrett was given as a memorial to Christa Jeffries. Our thanks to the donors for their thoughtfulness. We are always happy to assist in choosing a book as an enduring memorial.

The library, as everyone else, is the victim of rising costs. In this case, we must raise the fee for Interlibrary Loan transactions to $2 per item, effective immediately. Postal rates increased 67 percent for the library book rate when the Post Office increases went into effect. The search charges, though, in the Interlibrary Loan process, are not entirely passed on to the patron.

May, with the end of the school year fast approaching, also means registration for Summer Reading Program! This year's theme is "Adventures Begin at Camp Read-A-Lot." Children may register during the week of May 30 to June 5 and may start reading as soon as they sign up. The Summer Reading Program kick-off day is June 6. Expect lots of fun — activities — good books — (a few bears) — awards to be presented at the close party on July 12. Sarah Moje is the coordinator for this year's program, which is open to ages 4 through sixth grade. For more information, please call the Wayne Public Library at 375-3135.

Just a reminder. Videos are being moved from the display stand in the reading room to the back room. If you cannot find the video you want, don't forget to look in the old record stand at our "browsers." When you find your video, pull the yellow card and bring it to the desk. The librarian will get the tape for you. Mystery books continue to disappear from the mystery section and reappear in regular fiction. Don't forget to browse there for your favorite author. Books whose authors' names begin with A, B or C are moved into fiction. Also books are still on sale for adults and children.

New books just in, "Always a Reckoning and Other Poems" by Jimmy Carter; "Gardening Weekends: Strategies for the Busy Gardener" by Better Homes and Gardens; "Designing Rooms for Children" by Mary Gilliat; "Ladder of Years" by Anne Tyler; "The Carousel" by Belva Plain; "The Rainmaker" by John Grisham; "Romance" by Ed McBain; "Dairy-free Cookbook" by Jane Zukin. (Grisham fans will want to get their names on the reserve list early!)

New videos for children: "Totally Tropical Rain Forest" by National Geographic Society; "The Case of the Burgled Baseball Cards" (an Encyclopedia Brown story); "The Creation" told by Amy Grant; "The Day Jimmy's Boa Ate the Wash"; "The Lion King" by Walt Disney; and "Swinging Safari" by National Geographic Society.

Library hours: Monday through Friday, 12:30 to 8:30 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

The library will be closed Sunday, May 28 and Monday, May 29 (Memorial Day). Summer hours begin Tuesday, May 20, Monday through Friday, noon to 8 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. We will be closed Sundays through Labor Day.

The Board of Trustees has been discussing the possibility of a building program for the library. If any of you out there would be interested in being a part of a Library Foundation Group to help us explore the possibilities, let the librarian know. We need you! We are also seeking some input concerning library open hours. If you have any suggestions for changes that would make us more accessible to you, please let us know. We are here to serve you.

I would also like to remind you that we have videos available for loan at the library — childrens, adults, educational. There is no charge for their use. We also have puzzles for pre-school through adult patrons for check-out.

We will be changing to our summer hours effective May 1. They are Mondays from 1 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m., Wednesdays from 1 to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Please stop in and let us know how we can serve you better.

Wayne State's chorale director finishes career at 'The Hall'

By Stacey Schaller
For the Herald

The angelic sound carries throughout the hall. A Gregorian chant fills the room with ethereal music from the other world. Bells begin to ring sweetly. All is finished, and silence. Suddenly applause erupts as crowds rise to their feet.

Dr. Cornell Runestad has just completed a marvelous concert, and an equally marvelous career as the choir conductor at Wayne State College.

He and the renowned concert choir have just returned from the crowning concert of a storied career, their performance last week at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Dr. Runestad's concert choirs have been a Hallmark greeting from the United States to refined tastes world wide, and his international tours have taken WSC students to some of the finest concert halls and churches in the Western world.

AS THE semester closes, however, Dr. Runestad will be retiring from WSC and entering a new era of his life.

Dr. Runestad's father was a Lutheran pastor, and his mother the church organist. Having such a musical background, Dr. Runestad found it natural to enter the world of music professionally. Though he never sang in a high school choir, he majored in music at Concordia College in Seward, taking voice and piano.

Following his graduation, he became an assistant to Dr. Paul Christiansen, the conductor of Concordia's prestigious touring choir. Following two years at Concordia, he spent 10 years as a high school choir director in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

DR. RUNESTAD received his Doctorate from the University of Illinois in 1970, and then came to WSC. He didn't expect to stay for 25 years, relating the following story about moving to Wayne:

"I remember very clearly, trying to rent rather than buy. My wife was pregnant at the time. There simply wasn't any thing to rent, so... we were a bit chagrined at the fact that we found it necessary to buy a house. But one does not know how life turns out."

Now that Dr. Runestad is retiring, he expects to travel, planning a trip to Israel this summer. He also anticipates the possibility of guest conducting, hosting clinics and judging music competitions.

THOUGH DR. Runestad is well known for his musical genius, he would like to be remembered on a more personal level, for being a good example to his two sons following their mother's death in 1984.

WSC hosted a farewell concert Tuesday, May 9, and Riley's will host a farewell dinner for Dr. Runestad on Saturday, May 20.

including sales, inventory control, in-stock condition, record keeping, Human Resource programs, Safety programs, District Manager ratings and customer service.

Wayne will receive a Store of the Month plaque which will remain on display in the store. The store will also receive a Store of the Month banner which will be on display inside the front of the store for a period of one month.

Wayne's performance is a direct result of the dedication and commitment of its employees and its management team, under the supervision of Dean Carroll, store manager, according to a report from the Omaha-based discount store chain.

Wayne Middle Schoolers cited in talent search

Three Wayne Middle School students have been invited to attend state recognition ceremonies in Lincoln May 31 to honor them for their high scores on the ACT test. Recognized from Wayne will be Caitlin Blaser, Jon Gathje and Amy Magnuson.

TIP, the Duke University Talent Identification Program, is sponsoring the recognition ceremonies to honor some of most talented seventh-graders in the United States. Nearly 14,000 students are invited.

Students invited to the TIP ceremonies earned ACT scores that would be the envy of many graduating seniors and while only in the seventh grade.

"TIP's most important function is the identification of talented students," said TIP's executive director Dr. David Goldstein. "Over the years, we have seen many instances of young people whose abilities were underestimated or overlooked by their teachers or their peers, sometimes even by their parents, and those talents then go to waste. By identifying bright youngsters at an early age and recognizing their abilities, we begin the process of nurturing their talents."

Students attending the state ceremonies scored as well or better than the average college-bound high school senior on either the SAT or the ACT. Nearly 14,000 1994-95 Talent Search participants qualified for state recognition. TIP's recognition ceremonies are the largest of their kind in the nation with more than 32,000 parents, students and teachers attending in 1994.

TIP's Talent Search identifies seventy-graders in 16 states in the Southeast, Midwest and Southwest who have scored in the top three percent on a national achievement test. Students participate by taking either the SAT or the ACT. Talent Search participants receive a variety of educational materials and publications. A results summary and counseling guide help students interpret their scores and provide suggestions for using their ability more effectively. TIP's publications help students find out more about academic opportunities and about the needs and interests of people like themselves. These publications include a guide to educational opportunities, a newsletter and a magazine on college choices mailed to TIP students in the 10th grade.

TIP is a nonprofit, educational organization designed to identify and develop academic talent. Over the past decade, TIP has established itself as the largest program of its kind in the nation. Since 1980, over 800,000 students from all parts of the world have taken part in a TIP program. The program receives support from student fees and donations from individuals, corporations and foundations.

Parents and students interested in TIP's Talent Search should contact the Duke University TIP office for more information, phone 919-684-3847.

Termites might munch wood chip mulches

Do you let the chips fall where they may? Well, if you're dealing with wood chips you might want to be more careful.

The city of Wayne is offering a low-cost source of wood chips for use in garden or tree mulches. Wood chips are a popular way to recycle, but they also can become attractive to termites.

Termites don't feed on live trees. However, termites do feed on wood and wood products containing cellulose, which includes wood chips and wood used in building foundations — a good reason to avoid using wood chips around homes or buildings.

Two species of subterranean termites are found in Nebraska and both species have similar habitats. Subterranean termites are ground-inhabiting, social insects that live in colonies. A colony or nest of subterranean termites may be up to 18-20 feet below the soil surface to protect it from extreme weather conditions. These termites travel through mud tubes to reach food sources above the soil surface.

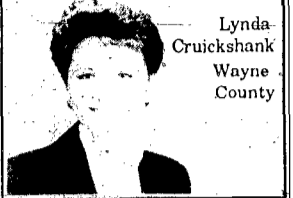

Termites normally prefer spring softwood over hardwood or bark. They also may infest lumber, wood panels, flooring, sheetrock, wallpaper, plastics, paper products and fabric made of plant fibers.

If termites infest wood materials placed next to a building, they may move through tiny cracks in the foundation. Wooden homes aren't the only buildings subject to infestation; all buildings have small cracks that can allow termite penetration.

Help avoid termites by substituting lava rock, brick chips, pebbles or marble chips for wood chips and wood products in mulches around the house or other buildings.

Firewood and scrap wood also can be a food source for termites. To prevent infestations, create a barrier between wood materials and the soil. Store wood away from building walls. For example, stack firewood on a stand supported by concrete blocks and place it at least a few feet from buildings.

Cooperative Extension

Lynda Cruickshank
Wayne County

Check piles of firewood and scrap wood occasionally for signs of termite infestation. Worker termites, which cause the most damage live in nests under the ground and travel from the nest through mud tubes about the size of a lead pencil to the wood pile or wood structure of a building. Wood damaged by termites has mud-tube remains. If the mud tubes extend from the ground to woodwork or a foundation, the building may have an infestation.

Difference Between Termites and Ants

Flying ants are often mistaken for termites because flying ants and swarming termites are difficult to tell apart. Termites have relatively straight, beadlike antennae while ants have elbowed antennae. Termites have two pair of wings (front and back) that are of almost equal length. Ants also have two pair of wings but the fore wings are much larger than the hind wings. The abdomen of the termite is broadly joined to the thorax while the abdomen and thorax of the ant are joined by a narrow waist called a petiole.

If a building appears infested, it's best to get help from a professional pest control operator or an experienced entomologist.

For more information contact the nearest County Extension office and ask for NebGuide G91-1062-A "Termites."

Ask Karen...

Q. My suit is ruined! I picked it up at the cleaners and it's as stiff as a board. What should I do?

A. Your better dry cleaners use sizing to maintain the body of your garment. Certain fabrics retain more sizing than the customer desires. This can easily be rinsed out with no damage to the clothes. Simply return the garment to your dry cleaner and explain the problem.

Sprains are painful injuries that involve ligaments which connect bones. Most commonly the knees, ankles or wrists are involved. Strains are injuries that involve tearing of muscle tissue. In both cases initial treatment is the same. First, the injured area should be immobilized with a splint, sling, or bandage. Ice should be applied to the area involved for the first 24-48 hours. After that initial period, warm, moist heat should be utilized. Keep the injured area elevated above the heart as much as possible for the first 48-72 hours to help reduce swelling. If bandages are used to immobilize the area, be sure they are not too tight and are removed 4-5 times a day for about 20 minutes. Aspirin or Tylenol may help with the pain. Ask your pharmacist which pain reliever would be most appropriate. If the condition is extreme or does not improve, be sure to contact your physician.

Full season corn planting window is about to close

By Troy Thompson
IANR News Assistant

Rain, rain, go away, come again some other day — preferably after crops are planted.

Even if producers repeat this mantra over and over, they aren't likely to get a respite from the soggy conditions in fields and paddocks any time soon.

The news is not all bad, however. If producers can get their corn planted this week, they may suffer only minimal yield loss, according to University of Nebraska crop experts across the state.

Soils in many areas are still saturated from recent rains, making it much too wet to plant, and a chance of precipitation is still in the forecast for this week, said state climatologist Al Dutcher.

The recommended planting date of May 10 passed with only about 5 percent of Nebraska's corn in the ground, compared to the 5-year average of 48 percent, Dutcher said. In normal years, some yield loss usually is experienced for every day planting goes past the deadline.

However, studies have shown that corn can compensate as much as five heat units (growing degree days) per day past the optimal planting time, said Roger Elmore, a crops specialist at NU's South Central Research and Extension Center in Clay Center, Neb.

For example, in eastern or central Nebraska, a full-season 2800 heat unit crop planted around May 15 can compensate and develop faster, more like a 2700 heat unit crop. This would reduce yield loss and the chances of frost damage in the fall, Elmore pointed out.

"If farmers can be in the field this week, they should go as planned," he said. "After this you have to assess the risk of planting full-season hybrids."

Bob Klein, a cropping system specialist at NU's West Central Research and Extension Center in North Platte, Neb., agreed.

"The May 10 deadline is set up for normal weather," Klein said. "With the wet weather and low soil temperatures, that drop-off won't be as true this year. Another week, though, and they've got to start considering planting shorter season hybrids for their area."

If farmers still haven't completed planting by this week, they need to weigh their options carefully. The decision on whether to switch to a shorter season hybrid hinges on several factors, said Todd Peterson, a cropping system specialist with NU's Southeast Research and Extension Center in Lincoln.

If farmers have their own drying and storage facilities and plan on feeding most of their grain to livestock, they may want to stick with a full-season hybrid, at least until May 25 or so, Peterson said. Even if the crop is damaged by an early frost, it still can be put to good use.

On the other hand, if farmers don't have drying and storage facilities and they plan on taking most of their grain to the elevator, they should consider switching away from full-season hybrids after May 20, Peterson said. Otherwise, they could face serious dockage from the elevator if the crop is damaged by an early frost or isn't fully mature at harvest.

Farmers who can use high moisture corn are probably safe in waiting until May 25 before switching to a shorter season variety, Klein said.

In any case, farmers should be very wary of entering fields until they're certain conditions are dry enough to plant. Rushing into fields in an attempt to avoid minor yield loss from late planting can backfire. If the soil is compacted, yields may be reduced for years, Peterson warned.

Farmers who have already planted corn are not much better off than those who haven't, Klein said. The cool, wet conditions have delayed corn germination and plant development anyway, he pointed out.

Forestry conference Saturday

Mark Saturday, May 20 on your calendar to attend the free satellite videoconference entitled "Management of Forest Ecosystems: Assessing New Opportunities." The videoconference is scheduled from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at Northeast Community College, Room 120 of the Maclay Building, 801 E. Benjamin Avenue, Norfolk.

Ecosystem management is at the forefront of today's natural resources management philosophy. The goal of this videoconference is to bring landowners, natural resource professionals, environmental organizations, forest industry and others who have an interest in the stewardship of our forest resources together to explore and understand ecosystem-based management.

Nebraska State and Extension foresters will serve as hosts. Contact Steve Rasmussen at 402-584-2851 or John DuPlissis at 402-371-7313 for more details.

This diagram shows the configuration of the traditional six-horse hitch which will be featured at this Summer's Greater Northeast Nebraska Fair in Wayne.

World-class draft team is scheduled for fair

It is official, the hitch is coming.

The world-class Reminiscé six horse hitch, which according to team owner Donald Liedman, has won more awards at major shows than any other hitch in the nation, will be at The Greater Northeast Nebraska Fair in Wayne the first weekend in August.

Liedman stated that his team is ranked over any other six horse hitch of Belgian, Clydesdale, Shire, or Percheron teams.

"Draft horse shows are run a lot like the Indy 500 race car circuit."

Benefits in jeopardy if forms are not filed

Farmers are reminded that their crop insurance and certain U.S. Department of Agriculture benefits are in jeopardy, if they fail to report their planted acreage reports on time.

The reminder, from Terri Post, CED of the Wayne County Consolidated Farm Service Agency (CFSA), said that crop insurance acreage reports must be signed by the insured or a designated agent by the required deadline, which differs by crop and locality. In Wayne County, wheat and rye needed to be reported by April 28. A late-filed certification may be applied for. All other crops and CRP must be certified by June 30.

"Acreage reports for farm program purposes must still be filed at the CFSA office; however, crop insurance acreage reports must also be filed with the insurance provider. If insured through a private crop insurance agent, the crop insurance acreage report must be submitted to that agent. If farmers purchased the basic, catastrophic insurance coverage (CAT) through the CFSA of-file, they can sign their crop insurance acreage reports at the same time they report acreage for farm program purposes," Post said.

The other major risk management program, termed the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP), applies only to those crops for which insurance is not available. NAP provides a comparable level of benefits as that offered under CAT, but no premiums are charged. Planted acreage of NAP-covered crops must be reported on time to the CFSA office, or no NAP benefits will be paid, if a crop loss occurs.

The CAT and NAP coverages replace the ad hoc crop disaster programs of past years. Timely reports of planted acreages are required to receive benefits.

For further information, or to make an appointment to report your planted acres, call the Wayne County CFSA at 375-2453.

Early release from CRP is offered

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has announced that producers with acreage under contract in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) may sign up at their local Consolidated Farm Service Agency (CFSA) office from May 15 through June 2 to request early release from the terms and conditions of the CRP contract.

During the same period, CRP participants with contracts expiring Sept. 30, 1995, may submit requests to the CFSA office to modify their contracts by extending the expiration date to Sept. 30, 1996.

Grazing okay on CRP acres

The Conservation Reserve Act have been released for emergency use grazing for cow-calf herds. Producers must obtain prior approval from the CFSA office before releasing the cows onto the acres. The cattle have to be off of the acres by June 10.

There will not be a payment reduction assessed. However, if the livestock is not removed by June 10, the CRP participants will be subject to unauthorized grazing provisions. Contact the CFSA office for further details.

Top eight reasons why farmers hate property tax

Nebraska farmers and Nebraska Farm Bureau have been grappling with the property tax issue just about forever. It's a pretty safe bet that people outside of agriculture are tired of hearing that farmers believe they're carrying an unfair share of the state's tax burden. But farmers have good reason to be concerned — eight good reasons actually. Herewith the Top 8 reasons farmers are fed up with property taxes.

1. Taxes on agricultural property have increased more than on any other sector of the economy since 1988. They've gone up 44 percent.

2. Farmers and ranchers make up only 3.4 percent of Nebraska's population, but they pay more than 34 percent of the property taxes.

3. Agriculture contributes more than 60 percent of the total property taxes levied in 52 of Nebraska's 93 counties. In 25 of the counties, agriculture's share is 70 percent or more.

4. Farmers and ranchers need a high percentage of fixed assets to produce enough product to generate an income. Property taxes are levied on these tools of production — tractors, combines, manure spreaders, etc. This is in addition to the property taxes farmers and ranchers pay on their homes, vehicles and other property that is typically taxed in urban areas.

5. Property taxes on agricultural land per $100 of assessed value are higher in Nebraska than any of our surrounding states. And in fact, they are the fourth-highest of all the states.

6. Nebraska farmers spend as much on property taxes as they

Midland View

By Cheryl Stubbendieck
Nebraska Farm Bureau

spend on seed, fuel or pesticides.

7. In most cases, farmers and ranchers are out-voted in local government units and can't garner enough votes to force structural changes in local government — changes that could result in a lower property tax burden.

8. Taxes on agricultural property have very little, if any, relationship to the profitability of the farming operation or the farmer's ability to pay the taxes. It is entirely possible to make too little income from farming, and have a huge tax bill that consumes what might have been profit.

The property tax situation would be more bearable for farmers if they could offset higher costs such as taxes by pricing their products higher. When an urban landlord's property taxes increase, she has the option of increasing her tenants' rent. But because farmers and ranchers don't set the prices for their products, they don't have this choice.

There are no easy answers to Nebraska's property tax problem. All of us — farmers, ranchers and urban people alike — confront a certain irony when we consider how to pay the costs of our life together. What we like about Nebraska — its wide-open spaces, its lower population — are exactly the things that cause us revenue problems: we've got only a small number of people and businesses and vehicles and purchases to tax. We do have a lot of land, and right now it's carrying too much of the tax burden.

It costs "us" a certain amount to run the Nebraska we love. It takes a certain amount of money to provide the quality of life we have here. What we need is a way to share fairly the costs that provide Nebraska to all of us.

SCHOOL BOARD

The Wakefield School Board of Education met May 8. Principal Jeanne Surface reported on elementary-student population concerns for the 1995-96 school year and how it might be addressed. She also reported on grants, senior sneak day, curriculum changes being considered for the 1995-96 school year, the internet teacher workshop that was held recently and the transportation policy for students attending away events.

Supt. Derwin Hartman shared some information with board members on the lease-purchase of new buses. He also discussed the Challenge Program and shared parent input on a recent meeting that was held.

Hartman told the board that the Lewis and Clark Conference executive committee recently voted not to increase admission prices for the school year and that the executive committee voted to hold a conference golf tournament next year. Total junior-senior prom costs for 1995 were $2,890.77, which is slightly under past average costs, according to Hartman.

The board set student drivers education fees at $100 for resident students and $125 for non-resident students. They also set Mr. Wilbur's pay at $80 for each student who completes the course.

The 1995-96 school calendar was adopted and the board chose to waive the three school days that were lost due to inclement weather. The board approved conducting a summer weight program which details will be worked out by the administration. Approval was also given to the ESU I contract for special education services, nursing and for gifted consultant services.

The school board accepted the labor relations committee's recommendation to ratify a negotiation agreement with the Wakefield Education Association.

SCHOLARSHIP IS ESTABLISHED

The Wakefield Community Foundation has announced the establishment of a scholarship fund to provide an annual scholarship to a graduating senior. The first award will be made at graduation exercises on May 21.

According to Marcia Kratke, foundation director and chairperson for the scholarship committee, the scholarship will be based on merit with consideration for a student's involvement in community and school activities.

The student must have maintained at least a C average and have been named to the honor roll for at least two semesters. Each applicant will be asked to write a one-page essay on the strengths and weaknesses of the Wakefield community.

This year's scholarship, $400, may be used for tuition and/or books at the school of the student's enrollment.

Anyone wishing to make a gift or memorial contribution to the scholarship fund may do so by mail to the Wakefield Community Foundation, Box 330, Wakefield, or leaving it with Lori Utemark, foundation treasurer, at the Wakefield National Bank.

Contributions should be designated for the scholarship fund and all gifts are tax deductible.
