

Wayne America sends aid to Oklahoma

Judy and Gale Nemec serve omelets during Friday's omelet benefit for Oklahoma City bombing victims. Their effort was successful in attracting 600 people and raising $2100.

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Nearly 600 people were served omelets during Friday evening's fund raiser for the victims of the Oklahoma City bombing.

Ralph Etter, organizer of the event, said he was pleased with the turnout. "We had approximately $2,100 in ticket sales and money in the fish bowl at the event. We started with a dream and a prayer three weeks ago and everything just fell into place. All the food and manpower for the omelet feed were donated," Etter said.

"I have been collecting money from seven towns and have been contacting businesses, industries and professionals by phone asking for donations.

"WE HAVE been very successful and invite anyone who has not been contacted who wishes to contribute to send their donation to Bill Dickey at First National Bank. Because of the positive response we have had, we are going to keep the benefit open for one more week," Etter said.

Any amount will be appreciated. However, anyone who donates $25 or more will have their name printed in the local papers.

Tentative plans call for a dedication ceremony to be held June 23. Prayer time will be held and Bill Dickey, who has been in charge of the donations, will announce the total amount collected and where the money will be sent.

IN ADDITION to the money collected at the omelet feed and through donations, several organizations have promised matching funds. Etter estimates between $1,800 and $2,000 will be added to the total through matching funds.

The idea for the benefit came to Etter after he saw a report on T.V. of a community benefit for the Oklahoma City victims. "The idea of the Wayne community doing something like that kept coming back. I felt this was something we could do as a community," he said.

"The response of the community has been great. We had several prayer meetings before the event and the fellowship and support shown by the community has been great," said Etter.

TOM COOK, criminal justice professor at Wayne State College, said the bombing incident has caused people in Nebraska to overcome the rivalry between the two states that occurs on the football field. "This incident could have happened in Omaha and should make us all aware that no one is immune from domestic terrorism."

"Here in Wayne, we have direct dealings with many of the offices in the Federal Building. In fact, one of the district probation officers in Omaha is a Wayne State graduate."

"We have never had terrorism at this level before. It is sad that we automatically assumed that it had to have been the work of a foreign group. There have been numerous attempted acts of terrorism in the past. Nearly every president in recent history has been the target of an attempted assassination," Cook said.

"BECAUSE OF its location close to Omaha and Strategic Air Command, Wayne has lived with the threat of nuclear bombing for many years. This is a much greater risk than posed by the bombing of the Federal Building. People have learned to live with that threat."

Cook said the bombing brings to the foreground the issue of the Second Amendment right to have a well-regulated militia. "People have rights which need to be regulated to create a balance between regulation and freedom. While the incident in Oklahoma City will gradually fade from the news, it may give others ideas," he said.

"I feel that we, in the United States, are still safer in our Federal Buildings than most places in the world. I think that the bombing is a lesson for people in Wayne and in the Midwest that we are not immune from acts of violence."

"On the other hand, this incident shouldn't make us paranoid. I don't think that this should become a political football and hope that legislators will be careful in putting together legislation regarding acts of terrorism," Cook said.

Victims of the Oklahoma City bombing gather near the explosion site following the April 19 blast. More than 150 people were killed when the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building was bombed. Since that time, more than 30 funds have been set up to assist the victims and their families.

Federal mandate for county

A new Federal mandate will require the county to set up a system of records, County Commissioners learned at their Tuesday meeting.

Highway Superintendent Sidney Saunders reported on a recent meeting he had attended concerning the new federal requirements for a pavement management system.

By October 1996, the county will be required to set up a record system for approximately eighty miles of Wayne County roads. Saunders also gave several reports including a review of the most recent traffic accidents spot map of the county which showed a cluster of accidents around Wayne and around Winside.

"These statistics are from 1992. They show no particular road problems," said Saunders.

The commissioners opened three bids for gravel for Wayne County. Backus Sand and Gravel, Nebraska Sand and Gravel and Pilger Sand and Gravel submitted bids which ranged from $3.10 to $3.30 a ton. The commissions voted to accept all three bids and get gravel from whichever of the locations is geographically closest to where the gravel is needed.

The commissioners gave approval to the Wayne County Agricultural Society's request for a liquor license for the Professional Bull Riding Contest to be held June 14 and 15.

Bull riding hits fairgrounds

2 Wild Events, a company out of Columbus, will be riding into Wayne this week to perform its show of bullriding and bullfighting. The event will be held June 14th and 15th from 8-10 p.m. at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

2 Wild Events was started in Wahoo by current owner J.J. Walden. Walden is a former National Finalist in bullfighting.

The performance in Wayne will be the group's first stop in its summer Coors Light Pro Tour. 2 Wild Events plans to make thirty-four more stops this year to complete its circuit. Their tour will include the states of Minnesota, Virginia, Colorado and North and South Dakota.

The group, which has never performed in Wayne before, said they chose to come here two weeks ago when driving through town on their way to another stop. They liked the town and went to the Chamber of Commerce to set up a show. The Chamber referred them to Mick Topp, the President of the area Agriculture Society. Topp and the group set up the event.

The company name 2 Wild Events is derived from the two sections of their program, bullriding and bullfighting. In the bullriding section of the event, approximately thirty-five bullriders, including several area people, will display their skill riding bulls.

In the bullfighting section, three clowns, Al Sandvold, a bullfighter from Zuhl, N.D., Chris Ahman from Aberdeen, S.D., and Gary Singer of Baker, Mont. will play "tag" with a bull. According to a promoter for the show, the clowns must stay in the ring with the bull for seventy seconds. If the clowns are untouched by the end of the time period, they are declared "winners."

As a third section of the program, the company is sponsoring game of "Mexican Stand-Off Poker." During the event, to be held both nights, four different local dignitaries will be given a deck of cards and sent to a table in the center of the bullfighting ring. 2 Wild Events will then turn a bull loose. The last person seated at the table is the winner.

Following both performances, the company will gather at Riley's to allow the public to meet the cowboys and the clowns.

2 Wild Events says the purpose of their program is to provide two hours of family oriented fun.

Tickets for the event may be obtained at Riley's, Logan Valley Implement, Diers Supply and Pac N' Save. The cost is $7.50 per person and $5.00 for children ten and under.

Record year forecast for Chicken Show

In preparation for the July 8th Chicken Show, the Chicken Show committee has been scratching out some ideas for this year's event.

One new idea for the show, Cement Chickens, is on display in the window of Committee member Jane O'Leary's store Word Works. The idea of cement poultry was hatched when the owners of Ben Franklin saw similar items in another town. O'Leary said, "We thought some stores might buy them to display in their windows during the Chicken Show--or people could use them as lawn ornaments. I think it would be a riot to have them all over town."

The chickens, made from a cement mold, may be purchased at Word Works for $10.

T-Shirts depicting this year's theme, "Chickens on the March," will go on sale this weekend. The shirts, designed by Marla McCue, depict partially hatched eggs in a marching band marching around the shirt. O'Leary said the theme was chosen for flexibility since chickens could be marching in an assortment of situations: marching bands, armies and picket lines. The shirts may be purchased at Word Works for $10 until July 4th when the price will go up to $12.50. The shirts may also be purchased by mail for $15.

O'Leary said the Committee expects this year's Chicken Show to have a high turnout because several reunions are being held in the area at the same time. In addition, she said that this year's Second Annual Chicken Calling Contest should attract more visitors. Last year's turnout was around 9,000.

Among the regular events at this year's Chicken Show, the committee has tentatively planned a Chickens Unlimited Banquet to be held the evening of July 8th.

Letters

Defends the accused

Dear Editor:

The Wayne Herald has always been in my home, as a child growing up, my parents were subscribers and it has been in my own home for over 48 years. It is a most welcome visitor, and this is the first time I have written and I do believe it is time.

In regards, to a letter that was written by a Greenwood Cemetery board member in the May 25 issue. I firmly believe that the complainers do need to read the rules and by-laws of the cemetery, first, and then take a minute to personally thank the board members for a job well-done, and would they do it, volunteer, of course.

For someone to accuse (perhaps accuse is too harsh a word; but it's the only word that crosses by mind, now) Mrs. Sievers, a board member of stealing flowers, how rude and cruel.

Ever since 1958, I have been putting flowers on my parents graves, with the help of the Wayne Greenhouse, as I live too far away and am unable to come back every year to do it. I am grateful that my plants or flowers are put to other great uses, as well. Perhaps the accuser or accusers don't know that you can put instructions on your arrangements and express your wishes to the cemetery board how to use or dispose of them; also the Wayne Greenhouse the past few years will also put a note in them if you want them moved or planted elsewhere in the cemetery and why all the fuss over silk flowers, what a better place for them to go to a nursing home or to shut-ins.

Perhaps, the accuser or accusers weren't aware of this and need to publicly apologize to the board members and especially to Mrs. Sievers.

A special thank you to all the cemetery board members; it's a great feeling to me to know that my parents' graves are well taken care of by people who care.

Detasseling Nelson's vetos

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — Years ago, your faithful Lincoln reporter used to detassel corn in the summer for extra cash during high school.

It was hard, hot work that didn't pay very well.

But boy, were you glad when you were done and could go home.

For some reason, those sweaty summer days came to mind as I watched the Nebraska Legislature wrapping up its business for the 1995 session.

With debated up frequently by arguments over minute details and by senators stalling for time, it became a tedious, plodding session.

Eight times, lawmakers were forced to invoke a once-rarely used cloture motion to shut off debate and advance bills. That was more times than cloture was used in the previous four years it has existed.

Senators tried to overcome the slow pace of progress by meeting earlier each day, and holding debates at night, but it had little effect.

For an embarrassing $12,000-a-year in salary, some lawmakers had to question if it was worth it.

Still — with one more meeting day, June 8, to go — it looks like the old Gang of 49 may deliver some important changes in state law.

I say "may" because there's a chance some of those changes — including the governor's crime bill and measures to cap spending by local governments — could still get held up on the last day of the session.

Moving the last day of the session to this Thursday was one of the more interesting moves of the year (which says something about what was accomplished in '95).

It was a pure power grab.

Traditionally, a pile of bills and spending decisions sit on the governor's desk when senators adjourn for the year. That gives the governor a chance to veto those last-minute items without worrying about legislators overriding those decisions.

Not this year. Senators went home for a week and will return Thursday, presumably fresh and organized to override some of the $44 million in spending vetoes already delivered by Gov. Nelson. The week break also forces the governor to announce his vetoes on other bills before senators return.

Thus, senators will get the last say on how much money the state spends and what exactly becomes law this year.

Well, not exactly. Nelson has said if senators go on a spending spree, he'll call them back into special session this summer. And the governor has been vigorously lobbying lawmakers, telling them if they decide to restore some of that $44 million in spending, he might be forced to cut funds for a pet project of theirs.

There's been plenty of grumbling this year from legislators about their relationship with Gov. Nelson.

Increasingly, the governor is playing a bigger role in getting bills introduced and passed, rather than legislators. And Nelson's threats and criticism of senators for considering any budget overrides reminds too many lawmakers of the old days, when Jim Exon made a sport of bashing the Legislature — and climbed in the popularity polls because of it.

Many say Nelson is playing the same game in his maybe-maybe-not candidacy for the U.S. Senate: stare senators, win votes.

But then, making laws is sort of like detasseling corn.

It's hot, sweaty work that doesn't get a lot of recognition or pay. You're just glad when the work is over.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Kudos to Greenwood

Dear Editor:

I am writing in support of the letter written by Aileen Sievers, Greenwood Cemetery Board member. I have sold and serviced monuments in the Wayne area since 1989 representing Rausch Bros. Monuments of Ortonville, Minn. I found Greenwood Cemetery to be very receptive of quality work and soon found in addition to selling monuments, I was repairing and replacing foundations on work done there in past years.

In the spring of 1994, I brought photos and description of a monument memorializing victims of abuse, neglect and abortion to the Cemetery Board asking if they would like one to be placed in the cemetery at no cost to them. My company was helping me to give back to the Wayne community in one small way, to show my personal gratitude for the support I'd received in recovering from a very abusive and destructive marriage. Withoutearing people like Aileen Sievers, Haven House and Father Cleary, rebuilding my life would have been very difficult. The cemetery board voted to receive the monument and showed my crew where to install it in the cemetery. Shortly after the stone was set, it was vandalized and eventually removed by two on the cemetery board and taken some 12 miles into the country to await my crew picking it up. The controversy over this stone within the community was unexpected and truly saddened the meaning of this unconditional gift of love. All lot owners of Greenwood Cemetery supporting this "Baby" stone must be sure to attend the annual lot owners meeting on Aug. 12. It is sad and unfortunate that this memorial was so mistreated, yet it meant to many others a wonderful tribute.

Some members of the cemetery board have made my monument sales and installation very difficult by stalking me and my customers; by attempting to remove the small stainless steel name tags on the back of the customers monuments; and most recently by suggesting that monument trucks be banned from driving on cemetery roads. My quarry has existed since 1838 and guarantees all of its quality work. I would not have the long list of customers in this area if I did poor work. Up until the recent troubles amongst the cemetery, I'd been donating part of my commission from sales back to the cemetery — approximately $500 in 1994. I donated all the new window shades in the chapel. I donated countless hours helping Alfred and Aileen Sievers seed graves, water seed, clean driveways, sweep all the stones before Memorial Day, plant flowers and repair broken stones vandalized. Now, my heart aches to see, how Aileen Sievers is being accused and treated as she is one of the most caring and giving people that I've ever had the opportunity to know. Her nearly 13 years on the cemetery board has only helped the cemetery — never hurting it! She goes out of her way to accommodate families and staff at the time of a death. She marks the locations for all monuments to be set. We, in turn, give a $20 permit fee to the cemetery for every stone set there. Aileen has given of her time and means only to appear now to be mistrusted and unwanted. I do hope that the caring people in and around Wayne will stand up on her behalf and help her to stand up for lot owners at the annual meeting.

I appreciate being able to set monuments and work with the fine caretakers of all the area cemeteries. I only wish that all of the people having loved ones buried in Greenwood Cemetery knew the love and dedication Aileen Sievers has for that cemetery. You are lucky to have a person like her and I hope that you stand up on her behalf to anyone mistrusting or accusing her.

Democracy in action

Dear Editor:

Democracy is not a spectator sport — for it to survive and flourish, we all must become involved. This is the message I heard from 947 high school students representing 84 Nebraska high schools who recently participated in the Close Up Foundation government studies program in Washington, D.C.

For a full week the students had the opportunity to develop a better understanding of our democratic process. By observing Congressional proceedings, questioning government experts, the abstracts of history and the process of governing were transformed into concrete experiences. In addition, students were able to share their views with their peers from other areas of the country.

Participants returned home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enthusiasm for involvement in the democratic process is to be admired.

The Close Up experience was made possible through the strong support of parents, teachers and schools. Also, various companies and organizations helped make Close Up fellowships available to students in financial need. These sponsors include Union Pacific Foundation.

On behalf of all of us at Close Up, I would like to thank all who made the experience possible.

Merlin asks some eternal questions

Join me in musing.

When weather casters predict "There is a 50 percent chance of rain today," does that mean their forecast is also about 50 percent right?

Why do opticians discuss one's "muscae volitantes" when they could more easily explain those specks floating in your eye?

Can you get elected to political office by telling "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?" And why wasn't that truth phrase ever placed in wedding vows?

TV talk shows, covering plights such as "Why does my girlfriend still hate my mother-in-law?", might want to discuss "Why should a person always walk around feeling good?" Urge yourself to feel terrible! It's a right!

And why waste a perfectly beautiful day by staying awake?

To a large degree, because we are made in God's image, we also have the power to speak our world into being. So if your wordy speech is any indication of the world you're living in, well, as Steve Martin might say, "Exc-u-s-s-e-e me-e-e!"

Merlin

Did you know Orion is a constellation of about 100 stars, all visible to the naked eye? Three of the stars, all in a line, are called "Orion's Belt."

Suppose Orion ever has to let it out a notch or two?

There are always those who try to pry into your personal affairs. The next time that person asks "How much did you get for your house?" or "What did it cost you?" or any other foolish inquiry, just reply: "Why would you ask?" However, don't try that with the IRS!

Depending upon your location, you can go "down" to Wayne, "over" to Wayne, or "up" to Wayne. Those are geographical ups and downs, but maturity comes when you never get mixed up in directions while you're experiencing a nervous break "down", or executing a break "up". If stress doesn't get you "down", a foul "up", may!

Ever notice how a politician ducks a question? You can do it too! Declare that someone else is more knowledgeable to answer. Say the question is irrelevant. Suggest several answers without expressing your preference. Say "That's a good question", then change the subject!

From the Internet: "If you continue to think what you've always thought, you will continue to get what you've always got."

Why is our cash often kept in a government bureau? Because Uncle Sam takes almost everything including our drawers.

The art of Wayne native J. Marlene Mueller is currently on exhibit in Lincoln. The artist's series, "Life Cycles" is based on the cyclical aspect of nature.

Wayne artist has art show

"Life Cycles," a series of acrylic paintings by J. Marlene Mueller, will be exhibited at the Haydon Gallery from June 9 through July 8. The opening reception will be Friday, June 9 from 7 to 9 p.m. Mueller's intensely colorful images are enigmatic. They brim with forms that suggest metaphor and symbol. Each work is dominated by an arc, representing the cyclical aspects of nature. A guiding force in the artist's work has been Einstein's statement, "The most beautiful thing we can experience is the mysterious... the source of all true art and science."

In addition to extensive regional invitationals and competitions, Mueller's paintings have been selected for national competitions sponsored by the Schenharie County Arts Council Gallery in Cobleskill, N.Y.; Memphis State University; the University of North Dakota; Fort Hays State University; the Octagon Center for the Arts in Ames, Iowa; Chattahoochee Valley Art Association in LaGrange, Ga.; Rutgers University, Camden, N.J.; Woodstock School of Art in Woodstock, N.Y.; Terrace Art Gallery, Palenville, N.Y.; and the William Whipple Art Gallery in Marshall, Minn. Mueller is an assistant professor of art at Wayne State College.

The Haydon Gallery is located at 335 North 8th Street in Lincoln's Historic Haymarket District. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The Haydon Gallery is a project of the Nebraska Art Association in support of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery and Sculpture Garden, UNL.

Each winner will receive a $1,500 scholarship to assist in defraying expenses at an institution of higher education. Depending on future Congressional appropriations, this scholarship can be renewed three times.

Winners were selected using criteria established by a panel of educators from high schools and colleges within Nebraska. ## Art Center to feature sculptor

In June the Norfolk Arts Center will host three different Nebraska artists, painter John Berry, sculptor Mike Fluent and artist Patsy Smith.

On June 11 there will be a reception from 2-4 p.m. featuring the work of Mike Fluent and Patsy Smith.

Michael E. Fluent of Wayne began sculpting after returning from Vietnam. As an emotional outlet, his work focused primarily on wood carving. According to an Art Center newsletter, "Michael has worked for Norfolk Iron and Metal for 20 years, so his exposure to metal work influenced his later art work. He still finds it exciting and new each time he does a sculpture."

"The sculpture in this show varies from realistic to contemporary and abstract. Mike enjoys exploring the diversity his medium allows, as illustrated in a range of work from a life-size wren to a 20 foot totem pole," the newsletter states.

For the show, Fluent is trying some new ideas, with pieces exploring positive and negative shapes, as well as three-dimensional ribbon sculptures. His pieces range from an eight inch bronze eagle head to a sculpture of dancers that is over six feet tall. He works in clay, metal, brick, stone and wood.

Patsy Smith has exhibited and won awards in several juried shows across the country since 1984. Her work has been seen in galleries in Illinois, Nebraska, Maryland, Minnesota and Washington, D.C.

Smith resides and creates in her studio home in North Platte. She is involved in civic activities and is a conference speaker, art workshop instructor and jurist for state and national art competitions.

The work of both Fluent and Smith will be on display at the Arts Center until mid-July.

How to use TV wisely in your home

Q. Since there are so many problems about the use of television in our home, wouldn't it be better to just get rid of TV until our children are grown-up?

A. Some families have done just that, and I admire their courage in doing so. But I think it is possible to keep our television sets without being dominated by them. I would suggest that the entire family get together to talk specifically about television—what's wrong with it, how it can be managed, and how children can learn to be discerning and selective in their use of the TV set.

Furthermore, it is important for parents to watch television with their children, not only helping them understand what they are experiencing, but as a pleasant family activity. Watching TV together can be a wonderful springboard into various kinds of teaching and discussion if it is approached properly.

Q. I have a defiant 5-year-old son, and I'm doing my best to cope with the assignment of shaping his will. Lately, I've had feelings of guilt and self-doubt over the constant tug-of-war I'm in. Do other parents of strong-willed children feel the same?

A. Yes, many do. One of the problems is that parents have been told by the "experts" that managing children is duck soup for those who do it right. That leaves them with intense self-condemnation when things don't work that smoothly in their homes.

No one told them that parenthood would be this difficult, and they blame themselves for the tension that arises. They had planned to be such loving and effective parents, reading fairy tales to their pajama-clad angels by the fireplace. The difference between life as it is and life as it ought to be is a frightening bit of reality.

I'm glad you were able to verbalize your feelings of guilt and depression. That is important. In response, let me give you three assurances that will help you:

1. It isn't all your fault.
2. It won't always be so difficult.

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

3. You're probably doing a much better job than you think.

Hang in there. Your strong-willed child will someday be a stalwart, respectable, hard-working citizen whose only source of depression will emanate from conflict with his own strong-willed child.

Q. The children in our neighborhood are bratty, another and disrespectful with adults. This upsets me, but I don't know what to do about it. I don't feel I have a right to discipline the children of my neighbors. How can I deal with this?

A. Parents in a neighborhood must learn to talk to each other about their kids, but that takes some doing! There is no quicker way to anger a mother than for another woman to criticize her precious cub. It is a delicate subject, indeed. That's why the typical neighborhood is like yours, providing little "feedback" to parents in regard to the behavior of their children. The kids know there are no lines of communication between adults, and they take advantage of the barrier.

What each block needs is a mother who has the courage to say, "I want to be told what my child does when he is beyond his own yard. If he is a brat with other children, I would like to know it. If he is disrespectful with adults, please mention it to me. I will not consider it tattling, and I won't resent your coming to me. I hope I can share my insights regarding your children, too. None of our sons and daughters is perfect, and we'll know better how to teach them if we can talk openly to each other as adults."

Parents who take this important first step—and it won't be an easy subject to broach—improve the chances of raising well-behaved children.

TAKE UNTIL GONE

Many medications are dispensed with the directions "take until gone." It is very important to follow these instructions to get full value of the medicine. The most common group of medications that carry these instructions are antibiotics. Antibiotics are generally used to treat infections caused by excess bacteria. The medicine works to kill the bacteria to the point at which your body's own immune system can take control again. Most antibiotics will cause a person to feel well after only a few days of treatment. This, however, should not cause a person to stop taking the medication. While the person may feel back to normal, the antibiotic hasn't killed enough bacteria to prevent it from growing again and causing another infection. To get adequate treatment with all your medications, be sure to follow the directions exactly as given to you by your pharmacist.

Entrepreneur program helps Nebraskans start food businesses

Excellent food and water resources make Nebraska a great place for entrepreneurs to start businesses in the value-added food processing industry. Nebraska has a program dedicated to helping people learn the diverse aspects of owning a food business, which can save headache and heartache and avoid costly mistakes.

The "From Product to Profit" seminar conducted by the Entrepreneur Program at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is the first step for many entrepreneurs in the food processing industry. Seminars are being held this year on July 20, Sept. 21 and Nov. 16 on the UNL East Campus.

The program helps approximately 100 entrepreneurs a year. Of those, about 20 go on to start their own businesses. People in virtually every county of the state have started viable businesses with the program's help.

Most of the businesses helped by the program are small, family-based operations. One of the first issues they face is the decision of where to manufacture the product. The trend toward starting a home-based business is increasing nationwide. However, many people think of producing a food product from their home for resale to the public, unaware that both federal and state regulations prohibit this. The seminar covers alternative options that start-up businesses have when choosing or building a production facility.

Lynda Cruickshank
Wayne County

Product ideas most often fit into the gourmet food industry. Products usually aren't high volume, but fit into a specific market niche. For example, Nebraska markets support a variety of beef jerky and buffalo jerky products. Sauces, condiments, ethnic and snack foods also are currently popular market items.

Several marketing possibilities exist, but the program encourages young businesses to focus on one market. Gourmet is only one division of the many food markets. Food service, direct marketing and sales in convenience stores also are viable markets. The seminar covers these markets in addition to the more traditional grocery and mass merchandise markets.

Anyone interested in starting a business is encouraged to discuss ideas with a local Cooperative Extension educator. Educators can network with Entrepreneur Program staff and get involved in one of the upcoming seminars.

The Entrepreneur Program, which has been a part of the UNL's Food Processing Center for 11 years, sponsors six seminars each year for anyone interested in exploring a food processing plan in Nebraska.

Each seminar covers several topics including marketing options, cost determination, pricing strategies, assessment of competition, promotional materials and sales generation and management. Seminar participants also receive private consultations, workbooks and a tour of the $11.5 million Food Industry Complex.

For more information call the UNL Food Processing Center at 402-472-7833, or a local Cooperative Extension office.

Sunscreens Prevent Skin Damage

Sunscreen products are designed to keep the full intensity of the sun's rays from reaching the skin, thereby preventing damage. There is no question that sunscreens prevent sunburn. And there is increasing evidence that regular use of sunscreen products can reduce the risk of developing skin cancer.

A frequently encountered long-term effect of sun exposure is skin spots called solar keratoses. Skin experts believe that these spots signal the beginning of skin cancer, therefore, solar keratoses may be referred to as precancerous lesions.

Half of a group of 400 white adults in Australia applied a sunscreen cream that had a sun protection factor (SPF) of 17 at least once every morning. The other half did not use a sunscreen. After seven months, the group that used the sunscreen developed significantly fewer new spots; also, one-fourth of their existing spots actually disappeared.

Butter makes a come-back

Butter and I have gotten reacquainted lately.

Ours had been a very distant friendship for many years. Mostly we would meet at banquet tables, where two pats or rosettes would smile at me from a bread-and-butter plate. Occasionally we'd meet at a catered picnic, with the butter peeking out between two squares of waxed paper. But you would never find us together where it counts, at the grocery store. I'd pass butter by, and buy margarine instead.

It wasn't always so. When I was growing up in the '50s and '60s, margarine had reached the point where it started tasting more like the real thing. Its full name was oleomargarine, but then it was more often just called "oleo," as in this phrase from my butter-loving father: "That da**ed oleo!" It wasn't allowed in our house.

So I grew up with a butter bias. But somewhere along the way, somewhere in the '70s, I switched to margarine. It cost less, had no cholesterol and was advertised as a healthier nutritional choice. When soft, whipped forms of margarine were developed, they were marketed in cute, reusable decorator tubs. I bought the soft margarine mostly for the plastic containers, but also because it was spreadable right out of the refrigerator. This was before microwave ovens, remember.

I didn't think much about butter for 20 years. My children learned to say, "Pass the margarine, please," because that's what went on their sandwiches and peas. Then about a year ago, a new co-worker shared the world's best chocolate chip cookie recipe — much better than the one on the chocolate chip bag. "It's better with butter," she said, and I believed her. The next week, I searched and found butter in the dairy department of the grocery store. It had only a little shelf space, and I could choose from only two brands.

I made the cookies to rave reviews and kept making them, and Vicki and Gary Pick, and Dave and Sue Olson recently accepted the John Deere Signature Dealer Award on behalf of the employees of Logan Valley Implement. The Picks recently celebrated their 25th year as John Deere dealers. The plaque was awarded for general excellence.

Dealer wins excellence award

Logan Valley Implement has been honored with the John Deere Signature Dealer Award for outstanding achievement in its sales, parts and service departments for 1994.

Logan Valley had to meet select, stringent criteria in the areas of sales performance, customer satisfaction, and image in all three departments. This award is not achieved without the effort of the entire organization. Logan Valley is one of a very limited number of John Deere dealerships being recognized for this award.

Youth safety camp offered at Wayne

A Safety Day Camp will be held June 21 at the Wayne Fairgrounds for youth ages 6-16 and their parents to learn about safety.

"This camp is designed for all youth. Many topics will be presented including First Aid and First Response, safety with electricity, chemical use, lawn mowers and weed eaters, being around large and small animals, reaction time testing, working with grain augers, wagons and bins, and tractor and PTO safety," said Rod Patent, Extension Educator.

Registrations should be made through the Wayne County Extension office by June 16. The $7.50 registration fee will include a t-shirt, lunch and a family membership to Farm Safety 4 Just Kids. The program is sponsored by the Northeast Chapter of Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, the Wayne/Dixon County 4-H Program, Cargill Cares Corporation, several Wayne businesses, the Nebraska Department of Health and Progressive Farmer magazine.

For more information contact the Wayne County Extension office at 402-375-3310.

Bill Kranz

Kranz named top student

Bill Kranz, University of Nebraska Extension Irrigation Specialist at the Northeast Nebraska Research and Extension Center at Concord, has been named the Mid Central Conference American Society of Agricultural Engineers Student of the Year for 1995.

Kranz received this award for showing ingenuity in his doctorate work and for supporting the teaching program at Iowa State University by developing new teaching and lab materials. The materials began as devices for his dissertation work before being adopted by ISU staff. "Most of the equipment was developed for my research project, but I tried to do a better job developing the equipment, knowing that others would use it," Kranz said.

Kranz said he felt incredibly honored for receiving this award and commended the society for their efforts as well. "It's one of the few groups of American agricultural engineers that's been active. They have a long history of supporting students," said Kranz.

Last year Kranz was recognized by Iowa State University as the Reverend P.T. Taiganides Student of the Year.

Corn growers should be on look-out

This season's above average rainfall, below normal temperatures and delayed corn planting make field scouting for insect infestations such as European corn borer extremely important, says Jim Graeber, Northrup King Co. agronomist for Illinois.

Graeber advises growers to begin scouting for first-generation corn borers during June. He says early-planted corn is most susceptible to attack because moths lay eggs on the tallest corn. After the eggs hatch, the tiny larvae feed on the leaf surfaces, then move into the whorl, where their feeding causes "shot holes" in the leaves. When scouting for borers, growers should unroll the whorls of several plants, looking for these distinctive signs of damage and the presence of larvae.

Industry experts estimate that first-generation corn borer infestations can cause yield reductions of three- to 15-percent. According to Graeber, a single borer can cause a five-percent yield reduction. In fields with infestations of just three borers per stalk, that can translate into a $50-per-acre loss.

Growers should base treatment decisions on infestation levels, expected yields, anticipated grain value and pesticide cost. If treatment is warranted, Graeber advises growers to apply the insecticide soon after eggs hatch to kill young larvae before they bore into the plant.

The Northrup King agronomist adds that most of today's hybrids are susceptible to corn borer, although some have higher tolerances to first-generation injury. Northrup King will soon offer growers Bt corn hybrids that boast built-in resistance to both first- and second-generation corn borer attacks.

For additional advice on European corn borer control, growers can contact a local Northrup King agronomist by calling 1-800-AGVISOR.

AID McDONALD HOUSE

For three months during the school year, the Wakefield students collected aluminum can tabs and Scott product UPC symbols for the benefit of the Ronald-McDonald House in Sioux City. The project was organized by the 4-H Junior Leaders and Sara Mattes. The Wakefield students, kindergarten through sixth grade, collected 110,373 tabs.

The fourth graders received the award for the most, collecting 33,361. Members of the class are Matt Haglund, Shannon Anderson, Nicole Peters, Jenna Paulson, Jessica Schroeder, Brindi Utemark, Daniel Boeckenhauer, Toan Nguyen, Katie Surface, Adam Thies, Andrea Salmon, Victor Tello, Aaron Lueth, Diana Potter, Randi Barge, Loreta Nelson, Travis Conner, Allyson Schultz, Jose Bega, Rodney Cole, Drew Sherer, Brian Ruden, Jennifer Haglund, Katie Davis, Josh Soderberg, Brian Schwarten, Nick Miller, Erin Bartels, J.J. Olsufka, Jeremy Fahrholz, Donald Odens, Zach Dolen, Kellie Larson and Holly Beacom.

Second place honors went to the first grade class with 24,198 tabs while the second graders collected 21,591. The total equaled approx-mately 221 pounds and is worth about $88. All together, with the UPC symbols, Sara Mattes figured their contribution would amount to $108.

Mattes encouraged residents to continue to save the product symbols and tabs. They may be taken directly to the McDonald restaurants or left at the house, located at 2500 Nebraska Street in Sioux City. She also indicated if people are interested another campaign could be organized.

The Ronald McDonald House provides a home style atmosphere where people may stay when they have a seriously ill child hospitalized.

WOMEN OF THE ELCA

The Women of the ELCA of Salem Lutheran Church met on May 25 in the church basement. Mae Greve, president, welcomed visitors and members.

The program, given by Circle 2, began with the hymn "Oh Master Let Me Walk With You." Mary Ellen Sundell gave devotions. The message was that we should glorify God with our wonderfully made bodies. A special treat was a flute solo by Jessica Sharpnack. Lynda Cruickshank gave a talk entitled "Wellness and Your Funny Bone." She also told of the importance of being good stewards of our body and using laughter for physical and mental health. Vi Ring and Famy Johnson performed a piano duet. The program ended with the hymn "For The Beauty of the Earth," the offering and prayer.

A short business meeting followed. Reports and correspondence was read. It was voted to send Mae Greve as a delegate to the Women of the ELCA Convention in Lincoln Oct. 6-8 at the Cornhusker Hotel.

Because of the basement remodeling at Salem, the June meeting will be a tour of the Goodwill facilities at South Sioux City. Details will be in the Spire.

An invitation was received from

Our Savior Lutheran Church in Wayne for a Women of the ELCA meeting at 9 a.m. on July 12.

The meeting closed with the benediction and table prayer, followed by lunch.
