

Retail sales figures down for Wayne

By Claire Rasmussen
Of the Herald

Since October, retail sales in the city of Wayne and throughout Wayne county have been considerably lower than last year's levels.

According to figures from the Nebraska Department of Revenue, net taxable sales in October 1994 Wayne County were down 17.1 percent from the previous October. In the city of Wayne, taxable sales dropped 17.6 percent.

The trend of decreasing sales continued through March 1995, the last figures available. In November 1994, sales were down 19 percent. In December, sales were down 4.5 percent. In January, February and March, sales dropped in the city of Wayne 7.3 percent, 19 percent and 17.3 percent respectively.

IN TERMS OF dollars, Wayne county businesses have made $2,834,220 fewer sales in a the period between Oct. 1994 and March 1995 than they did in the same period in 1993-94. The figure amounts to $13,000 of lost sales per Wayne county business each month.

The figures are determined by comparing the overall taxable sales in a month to the taxable sales of the same month in the previous year.

Several of the declines in sales were distorted by abnormally high increases in the same month of the previous year. For example, while March of 1995 saw a drop of 19% in retail sales, the figure it was compared with, March of 1994, had an increase of 13.7 percent over the previous March.

IN SPITE OF the timing of the drop, City Administrator Joe Salitros said he could not predict whether or not the decrease was related to the one-cent sales tax in Wayne which went into effect Oct. 1.

Said Salitros, "I have no real explanation for it since Wayne has never had a sales tax before. I understand, though, that in the first month of a tax, receipts generally go down as people adjust. But, with construction continuing strong in the area, we expect sales to rise again."

Exit to the rear

Making a fifty, but unplanned, rear dismount, bull rider Ty Murray found himself in a precarious position and finished out of the money in the Wednesday night's opening round of the 2 Wild Events bull riding competition at the Wayne County Fairgrounds. The competition continues tonight at 8 p.m. at the fairgrounds. A large crowd viewed the action and clown antics Wednesday. Results of the first go-around are in a story on Page 8A.

Playing catchup in weather games

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Warm, dry weather has enabled area farmers to make progress this week in getting crops in the ground. However, because of the wet spring, officials with the U.S. Department of Agriculture have extended deadlines for farmers to certify crop acreage.

"Due to the extremely wet weather of this year the certification deadline has been extended from June 30 to July 17 for Wayne county producers. This extension is for 1995 only. Wheat and rye were to be reported by April 28; however, a late-filed certification may be applied for. All other crops and CRP must be certified by July 17," said Teresa Post, County Executive Director of the Wayne County Consolidated Farm Service Agency (CFSA).

POST REPORTS that for the most part, the corn that will be planted this year has been planted. Approximately 70 percent of the soybeans are in and farmers on working on putting up first cutting alfalfa.

"I would say that we are at least three weeks behind schedule this year. The hot weather we have had the last couple of days is what we need to catch up. There is a saying that corn should be knee high by the Fourth of July and I don't know if it will make it this year," Post said.

"Approximately one to two percent of the corn in Wayne county had to be replanted due to heavy rains washing it out. Because of the rain, the ground has gotten very hard. What effect this will have on the crops remains to be seen and will depend on future rains and

Bus users satisfied with service

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Results of a survey of school district busing patrons showed that a large majority of the families who use the school bus system in Wayne are pleased with the way the service is provided said members of the school board Tuesday night.

Of the 59 survey forms returned, more than 90 percent expressed satisfaction with the system.

The school board signed a contract two years ago with the Nebraska Bus Co. to provide private bus service for rural students in the district. At times since that decision, there have been complaints from parents about the new system and the fact that some students ride the buses longer because they are first on and last off each day.

Of those families responding to the survey, 23 said they preferred a change to first on and first off schedule, 18 said they preferred last on and first off and 13 said they had no clear preference.

Members of the school board said they appreciated the families who took the time to return the surveys and that the responses and comments received would be used in formulating new policy for the bus system.

Trustees mull tuition hike, college raises

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The State College Board of Trustees will consider a 5 percent tuition rate hike during its meeting today for students enrolling next fall at Peru, Wayne and Chadron state colleges.

Contract extensions and pay raises for the three college presidents and Carrol Krause, college system executive director, also are on the agenda for the board's meeting in North Platte.

The tuition hike would take the undergraduate resident rate from $50 per credit hour to $52.50. The graduate student resident rate would rise from $62.75 to $66 per credit hour. Nonresident undergraduates would see a $10 increase, to $100 per credit hour. The nonresident graduate fees would rise from $112.50 to $125 per credit hour.

The three schools' tuition and fees charge of about $2,000 a year for most resident undergraduates remains below the average of similar colleges, according to a report prepared for the board.

The total annual cost of attending the schools for resident undergraduate students, including room and board charges approved earlier plus the proposed tuition increases, would be $4,627 at Peru, $4,565 at Wayne and $4,671.50 at Chadron State for the 1995-96 academic year.

Krause, who makes $97,284, is expected to be given a raise of at least $10,000 as part of an agreement two years ago to increase his pay to a level the college board said is more comparable with that of similar administrators.

Wayne State President Donald Mash makes $104,138, Peru's Robert Burns $94,730 and Chadron's Sam Rankin $102,136. All three also get housing allowances. Mash and Rankin each get an additional $5,000 longevity stipend.

The board proposes to extend the contracts of the presidents and Krause to June 30, 1997.

Six college board staff members are scheduled to get 4 percent salary increases, the same level of raise given faculty members earlier.

Doo-doo bandits sought by committee

What's the poop on the missing chicken droppings?

Members of the Wayne Chicken Show committee are wondering who made off with hundreds of hand-crafted chicken chips that were tiny sculptures created in silicone by artist Marla McCue.

The stuff is used in the annual chicken chip tossing contest held during Wayne's zany Chicken Show.

The chicken chips, which look remarkably like real chicken droppings but are made of a brown and white silicone, grass and pebbles may have to be recreated for this year's show committee members fear.

In past years many of the hundreds of fake chips have been pocketed by chip chucking participants who might want to use them in gags committee members fear. Each one of the decidedly different kind of silicone chips is a miniature work of art, said Mrs. McCue, who added she was not anxious to go to the time and expense of recreating hundreds of them for the Chicken Show to be held July 7 and 8 in Wayne.

"If anyone has any of the chips, please return them," said Chicken Show Chairhen Jane O'Leary. "The chicken show committee needs to get its poop in a group again," she added with tongue squarely in cheek. She said she did not want to have to ask police investigators to get the scoop on the missing poop.

Meanwhile, the 1995 version of the Official Chicken Show commemorative t-shirts are on sale. The royal blue shirts depict the 1995 theme, "Chickens on the March."

Being good neighbors

The recent sales tax figures show, what at first glance appears to be an alarming drop in retail sales for our community.

Talk on the street puts much of the blame on the shoulders of regional malls and super stores in neighboring markets.

Such stores are large and easy targets. Many of us enjoy getting away to an afternoon of shopping, and after all, competition is healthy. It promotes fairness and keeps all of the merchants on their toes. But there is much at stake here.

Early this year, when a longtime haberdasher announced his pending retirement, Wayne did not lose a men's clothing store. Wayne lost its only men's clothing store. Thankfully someone stepped in, and once again we may purchase fine clothes without traveling to the big cities.

We thrive on an agricultural economy and the farm breeds independent people, but like it or not, our community will live because of our dependence upon each other.

And doesn't it make sense to shop where the merchants are our friends and our neighbors?

A better excuse

There's even more reason for encouraging Gov. Ben Nelson to run for the U.S. Senate than we argued in editorial space here last month.

Our editorial writer must have taken a long snooze last fall through the election when our Lt. Gov. campaigned and handily won election to the post. In the editorial which argued that Nelson would be the best successor currently available to Sen. James Exon we said that Lt. Gov. Kim Robak would be an able replacement for Nelson should he decide to seek the post.

And she would. But, we mistakenly said she could do the job even though she was only an appointee to the Lt. Governor's post.

Wrong, bucko. In a gracious letter to us last week the Lt. Governor said she appreciated the compliment but reminded us of her election results in November.

Merlin warns Washington

By Merlin Wright

Wait just a minute, Washington! Name one important political development that originated there in the Capitol? Suffrage? Abolition? Independence? Sorry! They all started out here in the country where people didn't like the way things were! And freely said so!

"Government" of the people, by the people, and for the people" must constantly re-energize itself through self-analysis and change. Free speech is a vital element in that serious mission.

Politicians often insist on spinning their views as a lens through which constituents, upon hearing their posture, are supposed to comprehend. Savy Americans, far from being unintelligent, as some would have you believe, are well aware of the cultural war initiating such tactics.

Astute Americans understand all too well that great social changes are conceived and born in the hearts of common people.

Imagine what Susan B. Anthony might have done with talk radio!

Environmentalism? Rachel Carson started it with "Silent Spring". The movement certainly didn't commence on the House floor.

Consumerism? Ralph Nader launched it writing "Unsafe at Any Speed". He was teaching history in Connecticut at the time. No one can suggest this started in the Senate.

Wouldn't it have been something if television could have gotten the two Kings together: Larry King, talk show host, and Dr. Martin Luther King, activist! Can't you just hear Larry King saying something like "With us tonight in our studio is a minister from Atlanta, Georgia, who says his people's rights are being violated. Our lines are open." Dr. King headed up another grass roots movement that caught fire in the hearts of people. It's birthing was not in the environment of congressional halls.

Talk radio is currently spotlighted and falsely condemned. Truth has a way of exposing all too many politicians, at least according to the perception held by many, and so to get even, politicians want to defame the messenger. Americans will have none of that, having been guaranteed the right of free speech.

Americans must remain vigilant and work at abolishing the idea that Washington is our nursemaid providing all things and solutions to all people. Since we govern ourselves, Washington is but a work center populated by those we elected to represent us. When they fail to promote the desires of the electorate, they're replaced via the ballot box.

Washington is a "servant", not "master"!

We hope no one forgets!

Capitol News

Senators conclude their work

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN — State senators wrapped up their business for 1995 last Thursday. For the first time in several years, lawmakers one-upped the governor in deciding how much the state would spend.

They scheduled a special day to override Gov. Nelson's $41.8 million in spending vetoes. And they were successful, overturning about $11 million in funds for services for the mentally retarded, salaries for University of Nebraska teachers, and new probation officers.

They did that while retaining a balanced budget for the state and avoiding any increases in state income or sales taxes.

It was the latest in a season of clashes between the legislative branch of government and the occupant of the governor's mansion.

Gov. Nelson, fresh off an overwhelming victory for re-election, brought his most ambitious package of bills ever for consideration by lawmakers.

Nelson not only wanted to reform the welfare system, fight crime and bring a super-big employer to the state, he wanted to revamp the structure of state government, provide an income-tax cut with hidden federal funds found by a professional fund-finder, and grab more control over the University of Nebraska.

Whew. This all-prompted more than a little bit of jealousy from state senators.

It wasn't too long ago that senators generated all the big ideas and governors sat back to pontificate and either sign or reject such bills when they reached their desks.

That's changed, though, through the years. The Nelson Administration in particular has been known for its task-force approach to government: appoint a committee, study a problem, pass a bill.

That's how the welfare-reform measure was passed this year, among others.

Of course, that approach leaves state senators out, for the most part, until the bills hit a committee hearing or the floor of the Legislature.

The result is, Nelson, er, the Governor, gets all the headlines.

Things get even worse for senators when the budget comes up. A governor can introduce a bare-boned budget knowing full well that the Legislature will get lobbied to bits by special interests and restore funds for them.

This gives a governor a public podium to wait about legislative "spending speers" while puffing his/her chest about how they are trying to hold down spending.

It's part of the wonderful game we call politics.

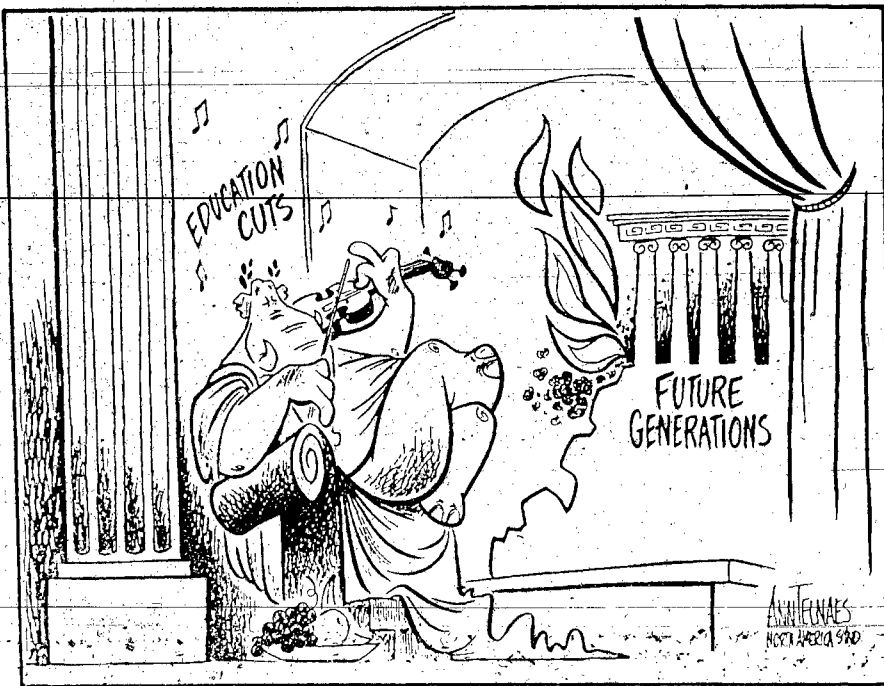

But this year, legislators got back. After Nelson bashed senators for thinking about overriding some of his vetoes, Speaker of the Legislature Ron Withem scheduled Nelson's bills at the tail end of the last day's agenda.

That way, if senators did override some spending vetoes, the only bills left to retrieve some savings would be the Governor's own.

Legislators got a little tired of hearing that there wasn't any money in the budget for their spending priorities and not hearing about a lack of funds for Nelson's.

And for once, they fired back.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Letters

Stop perpetuating the conflict

Dear Editor:

As there has been some discussion in The Wayne Herald letters to the editor concerning Greenwood Cemetery, perhaps it is time to set the record straight. The Greenwood Cemetery Association is grateful to anyone and everyone who donates time and materials to the cemetery that are within the acceptable limitations of the by-laws. There have been countless people who have helped in keeping the grounds neat and decorated for Memorial Day, just as there are individuals who have donated trees and plants, as well as other materials. Ms. Hartman and Mrs. Sievers are two of many who have contributed time and materials that have been appreciated. Wayne's local monument company and other individual board members have also contributed time, work or materials in behalf of the cemetery or of lot owners.

It should also be noted that the Greenwood Cemetery Association does not endorse or recommend any specific monument company. All companies are welcome to install identifying them.

The source of Ms. Hartman's information is unknown. Many of her statements are based on inaccurate information. (1) She has not been present at any meetings, nor has she talked to any members of the Board of Directors that have been attending meetings. When anyone has concerns, they should first find out the correct information from a cemetery association board member who attended the most recent meetings. (2) The cemetery has not banned any company from being on the driveways, but they are in the process of notifying all monument companies that trucks weighing over 10,000 lbs. can be held liable for damage to the cemetery. Because of the continued wet weather, anyone visiting the cemetery now can see many large deep tracks in the grass along driveways caused by very heavy trucks not being careful to stay on the driveway whenever possible. (3) No board member has attempted to remove tags, but the board is in the process of notifying all monument companies to suspend "tagging" stones with their company's name, and to remove all tags they have placed on previously set monuments. Advertising is contrary to the Greenwood Cemetery By-Laws. (4) If there are charges to be made, such as "stalking" a monument company representative, or a board member's taking flowers inappropriately, it would be appreciated if specific circumstances of these issues were presented to the Board of Directors so that they would be aware of concerns before reading them in a letter to the editor. We find these charges difficult to believe, particularly when there are no facts given to us concerning them.

The monument donated to the Greenwood Cemetery was treated with care, and with complete notification to the monument company. After the cemetery association annual meeting last year, when the membership voted that the stone be removed, letters were sent to the company asking that they remove the monument. Finally, notification was sent that if the monument company did not remove it by a given date, the cemetery board would take responsibility for its removal. In the meantime, the upright portion of the stone fell, luckily not injuring anyone, when an individual looking at the stone leaned against it without thinking. The individuals reported the accident immediately. It was not vandalized, but perhaps was not secured correctly. The majority of the Greenwood Cemetery Board of Directors, not just two of them, were present when it was removed. It was taken to the country in order that it be kept safe until the monument company was finally willing to pick it up.

Greenwood Cemetery is intended to be a place of reflection, of repose and of tranquility. It is a shame when any individual, business or organization feels the need to stir up controversy and conflict. No one should suffer ill feelings merely for the perpetuation of a conflict. We hope that the majority of people who have an interest in Greenwood Cemetery feel the same way. It would be unfortunate to have hard feelings and misunderstandings continue.

Road-kill is anything but romantic

Road-kill is anything but romantic.

Having just returned from a cross-country trek I can attest to wide variety of vile scenes created on our nation's roadways when fauna "meats" fast-moving traffic.

There's more dead stuff out there than you can shake a stick at.

By the look of the roadside carnage this spring I wonder if there is anything left alive in the woods and fields.

We saw foxes, antelope, deer, possum, porcupine, raccoons, birds, domestic pets, skunks, turtles, toads, bunnies, squirrels, farm animals and more ad nauseum.

I pondered the problem of road-kill while watching a lively little bird picking dead insects off the grill of cars on an interstate rest stop parking lot. The little bird had obviously learned to benefit from the misfortune of others. I never saw a dead crow along the road but plenty of them were seen feeding on the carrion as the traffic approached and they seemed to time their departure for the last second which would allow them to flee without themselves becoming a meal for their cousins.

Road-kill is not romantic, but at least a few species have profited from it.

When I visited my hometown in Oregon on our "killer" drive (yes, we frumped a foolish pheasant in central South Dakota), I discovered an old High School English teacher of mine trying to profit from road-kill too. He published a book of poetry on road-kill. Dick Kaiser is not your typical English teacher. He has a twisted and lively sense of humor and answers to the beep of a different pager. I recall him trying harder to get his students to look at life (and now death) a little differently, more than he tried to get us to properly diagram a sentence.

If there was anybody who could find fun and poetry in road-kill, it would be Dick Kaiser. I bought one of his self-published books, "Road-kill Romance."

The book was named for a poem about two skunks who met their maker while mating along the white line in the center of a highway.

One of my favorite poems in the book is "Possums."

Possums are such funny guys
With rat-like tails and shining eyes.
They roam about at night they say
And sometimes cross the broad highway.

They never look from left or right
For cars or trucks or motor bikes,
And 'cause they never think of that,
They end up getting squashed real flat.

But if you think possum and deer deaths are a hazard on our roads, imagine the plight of airline passengers in the Philippines who were in a plane Wednesday that ran into two water buffaloes that strayed onto the runway of a southern Philippine airport.

None of the passengers were reported hurt. But one of the buffaloes became instant runway-kill.

The airplane was apparently able to taxi to the terminal after the collision. A second water buffalo, involved in the collision had to be shot by airport security people later.

Modern transportation and wildlife just don't mix well.
Not even in poetry if you ask me.

Sales

to experience a significant reduction in retail sales during the month of October, though. After a 21.5 percent increase in taxable sales in 1993, Dixon county's retail sales went down 21.8 percent in 1994. In March, Dixon county retail sales were still 19.7 percent below last year's levels.

OVERALL IN Nebraska, compared with last year, sales have been up an average of 5.5 percent since October.

Salitros said the trend of county-wide, as well as city-wide sales dropping indicates that something other than the tax may be responsible for the drop. Sales in the city of Wayne account for approximately 95 percent of all sales made in the county.

For example, Salitros said, "County sales have dropped as Norfolk is generating more retail space. Usually, as the retail center of the region grows, the sales of nearby areas tends to decrease. Norfolk serves as the retail center of this region."

Salitros's speculation is supported by figures showing Norfolk's growth in retail sales. In March alone, Norfolk's retail sales grew 10.5 percent over the figures from last year. Norfolk has seen 21 consecutive months of increase in taxable sales compared with the previous year.

JOHN FARNAN, Executive Vice President of the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce made a similar point.

"Since the opening of Highway 35 we've lost a lot of business to Sioux City. I also think figures were somewhat affected by the two new big stores opening in Norfolk. We haven't had a brand new big store around here, and that hurts sales."

Farnan had additional explanations for the drop. "My office looks at the figures and the drop off looks like part of a trend. 1992-93 were big years because the interest rates fell through the floor so people were willing to go out and spend money. But in the past six, eight, nine months, as interests rates climbed and hog and cattle prices rose, sales have been hurt."

"Whether we realize it or not, Wayne is heavily dependent on agriculture and farmers just haven't been buying as much."

"It's also just a part of our normal cycle, a bump in March, then a descent starting in the summer that lasts through November. We're riding the same rollercoaster we always do."

Wayne appears to be following national trends as well. Retail sales across the United States have been down this year.

THOUGH SALITROS said he could make no long term predictions from only six or seven months worth of figures, he did not believe that the decrease in retail sales would hinder the city's building goals for the new Library and Senior Center, the beneficiaries of the new sales tax. Salitros said the city should have no problem reaching its goal of raising $340,000 per year.

At the May 30 city council meeting, the council unanimously voted to commit an increased amount of sales tax revenue to the other weather conditions," Post said.

Library/Senior Citizen Center building project due to an increase in projected building costs and a decrease in tax revenue.

ACREAGE REPORTS for farm program purposes must be filed at the CFSA office; however, crop insurance acreage reports must also be filed with the insurance provider. "If the crops are insured through a private crop insurance agent, the crop insurance acreage report must be submitted to that agent. If farmers purchased the basic catastrophic insurance coverage (CAT) through the CFSA office, they can sign their crop insurance acreage reports at the same time they report acreage for farm program purposes," said Post.

"We haven't had a lot of producers in to certify yet. When we do, we will be very busy. I encourage everyone to make an appoint to come in to certify to avoid waiting a long time," Post said.

The other major risk management program, termed the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP), applies only to those crops for which insurance is not available. NAP provides a comparable level of benefits as that offered under CAT, but no premiums are charged.

The CAT and NAP coverages replace the ad hoc crop disaster programs of past years. Timely reports of planted acreages are required to receive benefits.

The Golden Years

Many people put more time into planning vacations than future retirement, and many think only about how much money they will need for retirement. So says a retirement consultant who has found that people tend to ignore the significant changes that lie ahead. A common difficulty is what to do about all the free time. He cites examples of people who had planned certain trips and projects, but when these were done in relatively short time they faced 20 or 30 more years of retirement without any plans. Another subject needing attention and adjustment: living with a spouse 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

James Rouse was a developer on a grand scale: The planned town of Columbia, Maryland, was one of his triumphs. Guests at his 80th birthday party in New York learned of his current interest: promoting a foundation for developing affordable housing in low-income areas. "When you get to be 80 you become useful as a hook," Rouse told a reporter. "The party is really not to celebrate my birthday but to raise money for the poor."

Midgets win streak stretches to five with 19-8 win over Wakefield

Wayne Juniors win streak is snapped at six

ADAM ENDICOTT rips an rbi single during Wayne's Midget thumping of Wakefield, Monday at home.

The Wayne Midgets and Junior Legion baseball teams played a pair of games during the week with the Midgets winning both by convincing margins with a 14-1 victory over Pierce and a 19-8 win over Wakefield to improve to 5-2 on the season.

At Pierce the Wayne team pounded out 14 hits and Justin Thede earned the pitching win while Brad Maryott notched the save. Thede allowed just two hits.

Kurtis Keller was the leader on offense for the winners with a 4-4 outing that included two doubles and two singles. Brian Fernau and Brad Maryott each had two singles while Tyler Endicott, Jeremy Lutt, Nick Hagmann, Justin Thede, Rob Sturm and Jeremy Nelson each singled once.

Wayne hosted Wakefield on Monday and Tyler Endicott struck out eight as Wayne won its fifth straight game. The host team pounded out a dozen hits while Wakefield notched six.

Jeremy Lutt was the big gun at the plate for Wayne with a double and three singles while Adam Endicott and Brad Maryott each singled twice. Brian Fernau ripped a bases loaded triple and Tyler Endicott doubled while Kurtis Keller and Josh Starzl each singled once.

The Midgets will play at Wisner on Friday, at Hartington on Saturday and at West Point, Sunday before hosting Emerson on Monday.

THE WAYNE Juniors defeated Pierce, 7-3 as Cody Stracke earned the win with eight strikeouts in relief of Nick Vanhorn. Wayne recorded nine hits while holding Pierce to three.

Stracke and Adam Bebec each singled twice to pace the winners offense while Nick Vanhorn, B.J. Woehler, Dasy Jensen, Jeremy Sturm and Jaimey Holdorf each singled once.

The Juniors 6-game win streak, however, was snapped on Monday at home as Wakefield handed them a 7-3 setback. Jeremy Sturm was tagged with the loss while Travis Birkley notched the win for Wakefield.

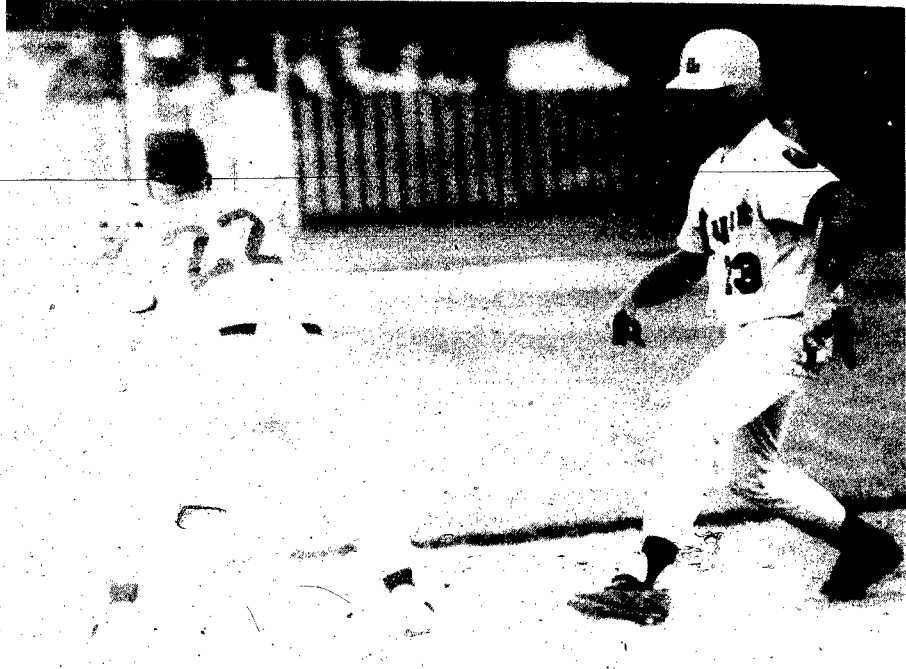

Cody Stracke relieved Sturm for the final four innings and struck out six in his stint from the mound while Birkley went the distance for Paul Eaton's squad and fanned nine Wayne batters.

Wakefield had seven hits in the game while Wayne finished with four—one single each from Jaimey Holdorf, Joe Lutt, Adam Bebec and Josh Starzl. Wakefield was led by Justin Dutcher with two singles while Mike McQuistan and Shane Schuster each doubled. Michael Blohm, Justin Mackling and Mike Rischmueller each singled once. Wakefield scored five of its seven runs in the fourth inning.

The Juniors will play at Wisner on Friday and at Hartington on Saturday before playing in West Point, Sunday.

WAYNE JUNIOR player Cody Stracke gets back safely to first base after Wakefield attempted to pick him off. Wakefield's first baseman is Shane Schuster.

Wayne 18-under softball team earns revenge on West Point

The Wayne 18-under softball team earned revenge on the team that gave them their lone loss of the season, Tuesday with a 2-1 victory over West Point.

The winners had won their first six games of the season before falling to West Point a week ago by a 5-4 margin. Wendy Beiermann struck out eight and scattered five hits while walking one to lead Wayne while the host team tallied six hits.

Molly Melena doubled and singled while Katie Lutt, Shona Stracke, Jenny Thompson and Heather Nichols each had one base hit. West Point took a 1-0 lead after three innings but Wayne scored two in the bottom of the fourth to take the lead.

Katie Lutt led the inning off with a single and Jenny Thompson followed with a base hit before Jenni Beiermann drew a base on balls to load the bases with no outs.

Shona Stracke hit a sacrifice fly to score Lutt to tie the game and Wendy Beiermann aided her pitching cause by hitting a sacrifice which scored Thompson for the eventual game winner.

Coach Bob O'borny said the Wayne defense took over after they grabbed the lead. "Wendy struck out five of the next eight batters and West Point's rally in the seventh ended when Carrie Fink threw the runner out trying to steal second base," O'borny said. "Then Wendy struck out the next two batters to end the game."

Wayne improved to 7-1 overall and 4-1 in league play. Next action for the 18-under fast pitch team will be Thursday night when they host Wisner. They also play at Uehling on Monday.

THE 16-UNDER fast pitch team lost a 12-4 decision to West Point with Stacey Langemeier taking the loss from the mound. West Point out-hit the host team, 4-2 and Wayne was hurt with nine errors. Brooke Parker and Alycia Jorgensen each hit a single to account for the offense.

The 14-under team won a 14-2 decision from West Point with Beth Sperry notching the pitching victory. Sperry's no-hit bid was thwarted in the final inning as West Point managed a couple base hits.

Wayne had three hits in the game as Jessica Raveling, Carol Longe and Tina Ruwe each hit singles.

Both teams will host Wisner on Thursday before the 16-under team plays in the annual league tournament in Beemer over the weekend.

The Pony League Blue team played three games, winning one before suffering their first losses of the season, dropping a twinbill to Pierce on Tuesday in Wayne.

The Blue's defeated Pender's Red team, 4-0 with Robbie Sturm notching the pitching victory with seven strikeouts while limiting the visitors to, two hits. Wayne also had just two hits—a double by Dustin Schmeits and a single by Sturm.

WAYNE'S DUSTIN SCHMEITS turns to bunt the ball during the Pony League Blue's first game with Pierce, Tuesday. Schmeits was attempting to score teammate Ryan Stoltenberg from third base who's receiving instruction from coach Mike Stauffer.

Third annual shooting sports invitational held 4-H shooting winners honored

Twenty-five 4-Hers from six counties competed for top honors at the third annual Wayne County 4-H Shooting Sports Invitational, held last Sunday at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

Shooters from Antelope, Davidson, Knox, Pierce, Stanton, and Wayne counties competed in BB gun and air rifle categories. Champions crowned included Heidi Willschleger from Stanton County in Jr. BB gun, Becky Kudara from Stanton County in Sr. BB gun, and David Thomsen from Pierce County in air rifle.

The competition format called for all shooters to shoot from the prone, standing, kneeling and sitting positions. Each position called for 10 shots for a possible score of 400 points.

Medals were awarded to the top three places in each category and the top shooter in each position in each category. Fourth through 10th places received ribbons. Medals for the event were donated by Doescher's Appliance, Lutt Taxidermy and Northeast Nebraska Insurance Agency. Door prizes were donated by Pamida.

Second and third place winners were as follows: Jr. BB gun—Brian Kudara and Kari Willschleger; Sr. BB gun—Shannon Schumacker and David Hans; Air rifle—Shannon Schumacker and Heidi Willschleger.

Top position medal winners include Becky Kudara, Heidi Willschleger, David Thomsen, Shannon Schumacker, Brian Kudara and Grant Godek.

Safety is always stressed in the 4-H Shooting Sports Program according to Darin Greunke, leader of the Sharp Shooters 4-H Club in Wayne County. "Nobody shoots anything until they know all safety rules," he said. "Leaders must be state certified through a 4-H training course before they are allowed to lead a project group but we also make a lot of new friends along the way."

Youth interested in joining the Sharp Shooters 4-H club, or adults interested in helping with the program are asked to contact Darin Greunke at 286-4895 or the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Office at 375-3310.

OVERALL WINNERS of the annual 4-H Shooting Sports Invitational in Wayne included David Thomsen, Becky Kudara and Heidi Willschleger.

Wayne's Jeremy Beckenhauer ranks among top athletes Athletes compete in program

The Sports Medicine Center, sponsored by Methodist Hospital, has recently completed its Spring session of the National Athletic Testing Program (NATP) at 100 high schools throughout Nebraska.

Lutheran Community Hospital and Norfolk Physical Therapy sponsored the same tests at five Norfolk area high schools. Together, a total of 5,378 athletes were evaluated.

"We are extremely excited with this Spring's test results," Outreach Coordinator for The Sports Medicine Center, Tim Ellis said. "We had several athletes who scored exceptionally well and deserve to be recognized for their accomplishments. We are very proud of the quality of athletes from this area."

The top college and professional programs have been testing their athletes for years to identify individual strengths and weaknesses. Athletic performance testing assists in predicting an individual's athleticism and provides a baseline for future progress. Athletes are tested for upper body power, lower body power, agility and acceleration.

Athletes receive a personal profile with percentile rankings comparing them to athletes nationwide who have also participated in the NATP. Each athlete receives a NATP Index Score which is calculated by combining each of the four testing component scores and factoring in the size of the athlete. The Index Score allows athletes of unequal size to be compared equally.

The NATP is conducted twice a year (Fall and Spring) at high schools for all athletes in grades 9 through 12. Nearly 130 high schools are tested statewide in Nebraska with over 9,000 individual athletes participating. The NATP also conducts tests nationwide to over 100,000 athletes.

The Sports Medicine Center is one of the region's largest provider of athletic health care. Their Athletic Training Services Network offers licensed athletic injury screening, event coverage and athletic health care advice to over 100 high schools throughout Nebraska and Iowa.

Among the Wayne Herald coverage schools, Wayne's Jeremy Beckenhauer ranked fifth overall with a composite score of 1540. Matthew Kern of North Loup-Scottia was the top male with a 1581 composite score. Jason Carr ranked 21st overall with a 1428.

The top female athletes tested in the area include Alison Benson of Wakefield, ninth overall with a 781, Bree Oswald of Wakefield with a 19th place score of 740 and Amy Hattig of Wakefield with a test score of 725.

Laurel's top testers were Todd Arens and Megan Adkins while Wakefield's were Cory Brown and Alison Benson. Winside's top scorers were Jeff Bruggeman and Wendy Miller and Wayne's were Jeremy Beckenhauer and Katie Lutt.

Council approves Works Building

By Tom Mullen
Of The Herald

City Council approved the final plans for what will be a nearly $700,000 new Public Works Building.

The new facility will be located on the south side of Fairgrounds Avenue, between Logan and Nebraska streets, and will house all of Public Works' seasonal machinery.

Public Works currently houses that machinery in several different locations, and the cost of providing an additional 4,000 square feet of space in the new facility became an issue of contention for some of the council members.

"WHAT IS THE REASON for adding that addition? Is it for need, or is it for convenience," inquired Councilperson Doug Sturm.

City Administrator Joe Salitros defended his recommendation.

"There are two or three places where equipment is stored. The original idea was to put everything under one roof, so we're consolidating."

"The original budget for the scaled-down project was $650,000, and the feeling of the council at that time was that if the bids were such that we could come within reach, that we should stretch to do the entire job," said Salitros.

MEDALLION Construction of Norfolk won the bidding process with a base bid of $607,000. Lynn Hoover of Medallion, rose to defend the addition.

"The 4,268 extra square feet will cost approximately $20 per square foot. It will cost a lot more than that if you wait to build it some other time."

New digs

Public Works Director Vern Schulz displays the elevation drawings for his new building. The site, which is located behind, and across the intersection from Riley's Convention Center, was recently cleared of quonset type buildings to make way for the 14,980 square foot building.

Councilperson Verdell Lutt was concerned that there would be other costs.

"OKAY, WE TALKED about graveling the parking spaces and then parking those in the spring, so there are dollars added on to this building next spring."

"I think that people are going to look at this when we say, 'this is what it will cost us,' but there are still more costs."

"I can see (Public Works Director) Vern's view. Everybody likes to have everything together, but I still object to adding this south end of the building for things which can, and are, stored in another building a couple of blocks away," said Lutt.

The council voted to build the new facility with the additional storage space, at a cost of $695,329. Lutt and Sturm cast the only dissenting votes.

VERN SCHULZ HAS mixed feelings about relocating.

"Its fine that we're getting it," said Schulz.

"Yes, we are maximized-out-in-size, but this is not something we asked for, we are being relocated," explained Schulz, referring to the addition of two new generators at the Wayne Power Plant.

Engineers for that project have called for the demolition of the current public works building to make way for the $4.5 million addition to the power plant.

"Dec. 31 is the intended time to move into the new building," said Schulz.

"Let it be a mild winter. If its mild, then that's the ideal time to move, but if its a harsh winter, we won't have the time to move."

Youth wins at state

Todd Koeber of Wayne was named the state winner in his age group in the Lions Club Talent Contest held Friday in Fremont. Koeber, playing a piano solo, had qualified for the state contest by placing first in both the local and district competitions held in Wayne earlier.

Koeber competed in the 15-18 age group.

Four of the six winners at the state contest were also winners at the Wayne District contest which is an indication of the quality of the competition here, said local event chairperson Pat Cook.

Anne Ahrens of Norfolk, who won the district contest here for her piano solo in the 12-14 age group, also was a winner at the state level.

Amanda Ebel, sponsored by the Columbus Lions club was also a winner here and at state. She was in the youngest age bracket.

In the young group competition, the state winner was the tap dancing team from Columbus who also won in Wayne for their performance of "Boys from New York City." Members of the winning team were Sara Bugnolo, Amber Thomas, Ryan Jablonski and Seth Zastera.

development in the survey comments which she called "especially thoughtful."

Will Davis said the patrons of the district should be assured that the board would act on the information received and not just place the survey results on the shelf.

The survey forms went to all families living on a bus route, whether their children actually used the buses or not. Only three survey responses listed generally unsatisfactory rating of the privatized bus service, which has saved the school district over $100,000 over the cost of buying and maintaining its own buses according to Superintendent Dr. Dennis Jensen.

Board member encouraged members of the public to review detailed copies of the survey results at the school office if they are interested.

In other business at the Tuesday board meeting the school officials:

Expressed disappointment that the results of the survey of district patrons on the school building and bond issue questions were not available for discussion at Tuesday's meeting. The survey company, Research Associates of Lincoln discovered that it took longer to conduct the phone interviews than they had planned, according to Jensen because "a lot of people wanted to talk a lot. He said the company had said the results would not be available until after June 19. The board is paying the firm $6,000 to conduct the survey. Results will be used in formulation decisions about building plans and a potential new bond issue request this fall. The firm randomly selected 380 registered voters to interview. Board members also said they had heard complaints from some of those interviewed about the way the survey was conducted.

Approved the hiring of a new third grade teacher to replace Troy Harder who resigned. The new teacher, Jeff Sutter of Crete, is a recent graduate of Doane College. The Colorado native also has a special education endorsement and will be assigned to coach freshman girls' volleyball and basketball.

Adopted a new schedule of Monday night meetings beginning with the next school year. The move from the traditional Tuesday night meetings was made to avoid conflicts with other school activities and city council meetings which are also on Tuesdays.

Set a public hearing on July 25 at 7:30 p.m., to discuss a proposal to access the 3 to 5 percent spending lid for the 1995-96 budget year. No hearing would be required if the schools would not anticipate an increase in spending next year. However, the preliminary budget being prepared by the administrators for presentation to the board calls for a 3 percent spending increase. The tentative figures still represent a tax levy increase because of anticipated increases in district valuation, said Jensen. Anticipated increases in costs include teachers salaries, paper costs, a new van purchase, extracurricular equipment and building upkeep.

Adopt a student this fall

In an effort to continue to promote better relations between students at Wayne State College and the community, the chamber will again sponsor the adopt a student program. The program seeks to develop closer ties between incoming freshmen students at Wayne State and families in the Wayne area in order to ease their adjustment to college life.

Chamber representative of the program, John Farnan described the program by saying, "Individuals in

Quilters honored

Members of the Wayne Senior Center Quilting Club recently received the 1995 Outstanding Community Service Award from Nebraska's First Lady, Diane Nelson. The award is in recognition of the volunteer contributions made to the community. The group has quilted 93 quilts since it began in 1990. Members pictured working on a quilt for the hospital auxiliary are, clockwise from left, Leona Hagemann, Rose Rieken (holding plaque), Leona Magnuson, Meta Westerman and Elsie Hailev.

Bull riders put on a show

The rodeo company 2 Wild Events put on a bullriding/bullfighting show for an almost full crowd Wednesday night at the Wayne County Fairgrounds for Wayne's first ever bullriding event.

The action started with a series of over twenty bullriders. The riders were required to ride for eight seconds. Those who made the eight second limit were then scored on their form and on the intensity of the ride. Bob Smith of Porcupine, N.D. came away the winner for the first night with a score of 75. Smith is a former North Pro Rodeo Association Finalist.

Tying for second place were Ervin Williams of Tulsa, Okla. and Mark Studley of Phillips, Kan., both scoring 74 points.

Other scorers were: Kelvin Wells of Porcupine, N.D., 71 points; Clint Hiltbridle of Central City, Neb., 69 points and Kenis Byam of Bartlett, Neb. with 68 points.

Bob Christensen of Wayne rode twice but did not score.

Riders must pay a $45 entry fee which is then thrown into a pool to which one thousand dollars is added. Smith, the Thursday night winner and the rider with the highest total score from both night's rides will split the final purse three ways.

The bullfighting competition, in which the fighters "play tag" with a bull, followed the rides. Bullfighters are required to stay in the ring with the bull for at least forty seconds after which they may choose to stay in the ring with the bull or end the performance. The fighters are given points according to how close the bull comes to them.

Al Sandvold of Zahl, N.D., a former runner-up bullfighter in the Coors Lite Pro Tour, was the winner with 78 points. Gary Singer of Baker, Mont. came in second with 72 points. Singer won points with the crowd for jumping the bull.

The "Mexican Poker Stand-off" competition held before the bullfighting was a crown pleaser. Rick Lutt, Gary Donner, Mick Topp, Scott Deck and Scott Thompson, all of Wayne, were all seated around a table in the bullfighting ring. A hornless bull was then let loose. Donner and Topp made early exits but Lutt, Deck and Thompson all remained seated at the table until the bull was returned to its pen.

The Library Card

This column is written occasionally to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at the Wayne Public Library.

Helpful hints and polite requests from your Library staff...

When you bring books back to the library, please drop them in the book drop in the circulation desk or leave them on the counter above the book drop. If you bring them around to the check-out counter, the books can easily become mixed with books just checked in! We'd hate to have called you for overdue books not properly checked in.

When you return a book you know is over-due, please bring it to the check-out counter and tell the librarian the book is late. The computer will register the amount of the fine. Books left in the outdoor book drop are just brought in once a day as we open. You may be happy to know all books have a 1 day's grace past the due date, because of this. Also remember that the heat is hard on our videotapes and audiotapes, when left in the book drop.

It is very helpful if you have your card ready when you check out your books. We can still check out to you if you've forgotten yours, but bringing a card along just saves time! If you think you've lost yours, a card is $1 to replace.

During our Summer Reading Program, the library will be jumpy between 1 and 2 p.m. (and perhaps a little later) on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. So, if exuberant children and chatting mothers distract you, plan to come to the library later on those days. We do open at noon, Monday through Friday, for your convenience.

We are happy to renew books over the phone. We will ask you for your name (the card that the books are on), the title and/or bar code number of the books you want renewed. It would be a time saver if you have a list ready with the information. We thank you for your help!

We would like to remind you that the pictures you see placed on top of the shelves in the reading room can be checked out for a two month period. It's a great idea for a new look in your home or office.

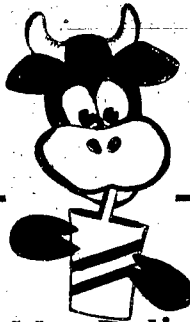

There are books on tape for adults near the magazine rack. Many of our patrons enjoy these while traveling! Books on tape for children can be found downstairs in the back room. There are jigsaw puzzles back there also, for both adults and children.

Do you wish to know which new books are in the library? A list of best sellers is marked and posted at the circulation desk or a similar list is on the new book shelf. Please ask for your name to be put on the reserve list for the "hot" summer titles.

Our paperback book racks have some new titles. Older titles have been weeded to make room! Look them over.

Summer hours prevail. Monday through Fridays, noon to 8 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. We are closed on Sunday during the summer.

A good book can be your best friend on a warm summer day! And to all our summer reading program campers of Camp Read-A-Lot — keep reading, reading, reading — there's lots of fun prizes to be won!

The ability to restore eyesight to cataract patients. Today, more than one million cataract surgeries are performed each year in the U.S. to correct the common eye disorder which affects 4 out of 5 people over age 60. Reassuring still is the fact that 98% of patients experience significant improvement in vision, without major complications.

A brief outpatient surgical procedure is sometimes necessary to clear vision after cataract surgery. With the passage of time, however, the eye's posterior capsule — which supports the intraocular lens implanted at the time of cataract surgery — may itself become cloudy or wrinkled, much like a piece of cellophane. Referred to as "secondary cataracts," this clouding is part of the body's healing process and affects many patients after surgery.

Offering our patients state-of-the-art laser cataract surgery technology. Today's laser technology offers the safest and most accurate method of treating secondary cataracts. The YAG Laser procedure restores vision painlessly. Often, vision is instantly improved.

Complete eye care close to home means more convenience and peace-of-mind. With Dr. Sprick, Dr. Willcockson, Dr. Koeber, Dr. Magnuson, and Providence Medical Center offering comprehensive diagnostic and surgical services, you have some of the most advanced eye care available. So, if you're experiencing any of the symptoms of a cataract or clouding of vision, please call one of our vision care professionals today.

Long-time teaching career started as surprise

Claire Rasmussen
of the Herald

Though he did not intend to pursue a career in teaching and he never expected to be hired by Wayne State, Jewell Schock, professor of Biology at Wayne State is retiring from his teaching position after thirty-one years.

Schock, originally from Iowa, went into the military immediately after high school. He then went on to receive a bachelor's degree from Luther College in Decorah, Iowa before doing graduate work at the University of Iowa, Kansas State Teacher's College (now Kansas State University at Emporia), the University of Texas and Oklahoma State.

In order to earn enough money to go on to medical school, Schock took a year off from his studies to teach. He said he practice taught summer school in a Cedar Rapids, Iowa high school. He said, "They were students who had flunked out of their biology classes during the regular year. The students and I got along fine and I really enjoyed the experience." Schock then went on to teach at Omaha Technical High School for a year.

Jewell Schock, who recently retired as a professor of biology at Wayne State College, plans to spend his retirement in Wayne doing things such as feeding birds and other nature activities.

AFTER RETURNING TO Kansas State, Schock said he was not considering teaching at the college level but many of his classmates were applying at the college level so he decided to fill out some applications in order to gain some experience.

An opening was available at Wayne State College and Schock said, "While I was at Omaha, I knew several teachers who had attended Wayne State and I knew and respected them so I figured it would be a good place to apply."

Schock said he actually had his eye on an opening at a high school in Northeastern Iowa and never expected anything to come from his application at Wayne State. Much to his surprise, Schock was called for an interview which he attended, he said, "to avoid commencement ceremonies." Schock was offered the job and, because he was not hired for the high school position in Iowa, he became an instructor of biology at Wayne State.

SCHOCK ENJOYED the community, co-workers and students so, in spite of his earlier reservations about teaching and about higher education, he never looked for another job.

"A lot of things appealed to me about Wayne State, in particular the freedom of higher education. I could develop courses, do field work and trips and go to and from campus after hours. While at Omaha, teachers were not allowed in the building after hours without security personnel to let them in. My job here has been as much a hobby as it has been a job. I did things I would have done anyway and I get paid for them."

When asked about the changes he's seen in his thirty-one years here, Schock mentioned the level of preparation of students: "I see a lot more students who are unprepared for being competitive on a college campus. They aren't prepared in academic learning skills and problem solving. It is not that the students are incompetent, they simply haven't developed those skills."

PART OF THE problem, Schock believes, is a growing reliance on machines, such as calculators and computers. "I see a lot of elementary school children who are adept at using computers

National honor for German teacher

The American Association of Teachers of German (AATG) announced it will present its annual Certificate of Merit Award to Edith E. Zahniser, a teacher of German at Wayne High School and an adjunct faculty member in the Department of Modern Languages at Wayne State College.

The award, established in 1978, recognizes outstanding achievement and dedication to the profession of teaching German. The awards ceremony will take place during the AATG's 1995 Annual meeting at Stanford University. This year eight individuals nationwide will receive the award.

Edith Zahniser

Individuals are nominated for the award by their local chapters. Zahniser was nominated by the Nebraska Chapter. Her nomination was supported by letters from colleagues, administrators, students and parents.

Besides teaching German at Wayne High School and Wayne State, Zahniser has also taught Adult Education classes at Northeast Community College and has taught in an enrichment program at St. Mary's Elementary. In 1984, Zahniser was named the Nebraska Outstanding German

Today, Sunday, June 11, is probably the only day of spring we will have. There were a few in February and March, none in April or May. And it was around 40° last night. But the sky is blue today, and the clouds are thin, and fields are finally drying.

The Big Farmer normally only worries about one thing in June: thistles. And, of course, with all the moisture, they are thriving.

Since Hondo and Spanda were getting married at Altona on Saturday, he figured he could coerce someone into helping. But practically everyone had to be at church by 3 p.m., with showers and hairdos before that, so I ended up in the old pickup with him, rocking over pocket-gopher mounds and slipping on tall brome. My ears got cold, and the rain drizzled over everything, but we covered quite a few acres before we had to quit.

The church at Altona is old, and has an 80 year old pipe organ that has a beautiful sound. It really made a lovely setting, and they were married with all the traditional bridesmaids, and candles, and songs, and tears. Even Uncle Jim and Aunt Linda came, from Houston and South Carolina. They really are still married, but he has a long commute! (And I thought Hoskins to Lincoln was bad.)

Today, we recruited Kay and David and Max, and spent some more time in the CRP fields. We never really get done with the darned things; but, at least, they aren't headed out yet.

The Magic at Orlando seems to have run out; College World Series is on, and little leagues are praying for some dry weather.

Corn is up, so are the weeds; most of the new calves are here, I saw some windrowed alfalfa; dams and rivers are full, and we are washing our cars again. By the time you read this, it promises to be hot. We ran the air one day last week, and the furnace the next.

It's time to head back to Murdock. I still get homesick for Wayne County, and it's always good to get her for a weekend, even a working one.

Okubanjo family gives $5,000 to WSC Heritage Plaza Project

The Okubanjo family from Lagos, Nigeria has donated $5,000 toward the construction of the Lyle Seymour Heritage Plaza at Wayne State College.

"We are very pleased to join with others in recognizing and honoring our friend, Dr. Seymour, in this very special way during his lifetime," said Chief Dotun Okubanjo, as he and his wife, Edith, presented their check to Wayne State College President Donald Mash.

Three members of the Okubanjo family are graduates of Wayne State College. Edith Okubanjo graduated with the class of 1983, and first enrolled in 1981, while Dr. Seymour was president of the college.

Two of the couple's daughter, Yomi and Enitan, graduated, respectively, in 1987 and 1988. Jimi Okubanjo graduated from Wayne High School last month, and will be a freshman this fall. The couple's son, Segun, will be a senior at Wayne State College this fall. The couple has two other children at home in Lagos who plan to attend Wayne State College in the next few years.

Chief Dotun Okubanjo is the Chairman of the Gulf Bank of Nigeria, and a former president of the Nigerian/American Chamber of Commerce in Lagos, Edith, who holds a business degree from Wayne State College, manages several gift shops in Lagos.

The Heritage Plaza will be an outdoor courtyard area which will be east of the Conn Library located at the center of the college's campus. Plans for the plaza were unveiled on Oct. 6, at which time it was announced that the Plaza would be named for President Emeritus, Lyle Seymour. The plaza will provide a place for students and faculty to interact outside the classroom and provide a setting for many campus events. The project is scheduled for dedication during the homecoming celebration on Friday, Sept. 29. Also being unveiled at the dedication is a sculpture by famed local artist and Wayne State College alumnus, Herb Mignery.

The $95,000 cost of the plaza is being funded by private contributions.

Attend meeting

More than one hundred individuals attended the Nebraska Statewide Critical Incident Stress Debriefing (CISD) seventh annual conference June 2-4 in Grand Island.

The event was sponsored by the Nebraska Department of Health, Central Community College-Grand Island Campus, Nebraska State Patrol, Nebraska Fire Marshal Office and the Department of Public Institutions. Participants attended sessions on post-traumatic stress disorder, post-shooting stress and the law enforcement officer, dealing with multiple casualties and humor in the workplace.

On Deans' List Top coach

The University of Nebraska at Kearney announced the names of students who have earned a place on the Deans' List for the spring semester.

To earn a place on the Deans' List, university students must complete 12 or more hours (for which quality points are awarded) with a grade point average of 3.5 or better on a 4.0 scale. Students earn 4.0 for an "A," a 3.0 for a "B" and a 2.0 for a "C." Courses taken on a credit/no credit basis cannot be included among the necessary 12 credit hours, because quality points — A,B,C — are not awarded.

Those students who earned a 4.0 (straight A's) average are noted by an asterisk before their names. In recognition of their academic achievement, students will receive a Deans' List certificate from their respective deans.

Area students listed include: Pender: Jennifer Krusemark, elementary education K-6 and *Sherry Zvaack, travel/tourism comprehensive.

Pierce: Kellie Honstein, social work and Kurt Polt, physical education 7-12.

The "Word" for the Week Garden variety anxiety

We are all anxious to use our gifts and talents, to grow in our relationships and work. That's positive; but there is a problem. We put so much energy into the necessities of food, clothing, housing and transportation, we lose the big picture. This is particularly true when anxiety rules the roost. We worry and fret. We are sucked into a downward spiral like so much dirty wash water.

The Bible warns us about this. "And the one on whom seed was sown among the thorns, this is the man who hears the word, and the worry of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and it becomes unfruitful" (Matthew 13:22). Worry and anxiety are weeds growing in our gardens. They choke the words of life. We fail to bear real fruit in our relationships and in our work.

The words of life come from God. They are words concerning God's kingdom, the Good News of God's ultimate control over all of life. When we understand these wonderful words, we rest secure. We grasp the significance of the gospel song, "He's got the whole world in His hands; He's got you and me brother in his hands." We "seek first His [God's] kingdom and His righteousness" knowing God's promise, "All these things [you worry about] shall be added to you" (Matthew 6:33).

Performance is planned

The Puppet Crew and Kids Choir of the Children's Ministry Department of Mount Olivet Assembly of God, Apple Valley, Minn. will be giving a performance. The performance will be held at Praise Assembly of God on June 22. The performance time will be at 7 p.m. Praise Assembly of God is located at 901 Circle Street in Wayne.

The performance includes singing and a variety of puppetry. The team's theme is "Serving The Savior." The ministry team involves young people, fourth through eighth grades. The performance is meant for every age level.

For more information on the performance, please call Praise Assembly of God at 402-375-3430.

New Way Singers to perform in Wayne

Nebraska Christian College is sponsoring and presenting the 24th annual tour of the New Way Singers. The southwest tour of the New Way Singers will perform in concert at the First Church of Christ, 1110 East Seventh (Hwy.

35) in Wayne. It will be held Saturday, June 24 at 7:30 p.m. Margaret Schultz, director of church music at Nebraska Christian College, is the director of the southwest tour. Bill Miller, professor of Biblical studies and languages at NCC, is piano accompanist for the group. Director of admissions, Jerry Hopkins and his wife Melody will also be present at the concert to answer any questions prospective students or their parents may have about the college.

The New Way Singers program was initiated in 1972 by bringing in high school students who had completed their sophomore, junior and senior year. They rehearsed for four and a half days and then went on a 10 day, 12 concert tour. The program quickly grew to three touring groups involving over 100 students.

This year, there are 120 participants in three groups, which tour simultaneously. The New Way Singers have toured extensively throughout Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, Wyoming, North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and in 24 years have performed over 500 concerts.

This year, the New Way Singers present "We Need Jesus."

LaLecheLeague to hold meeting

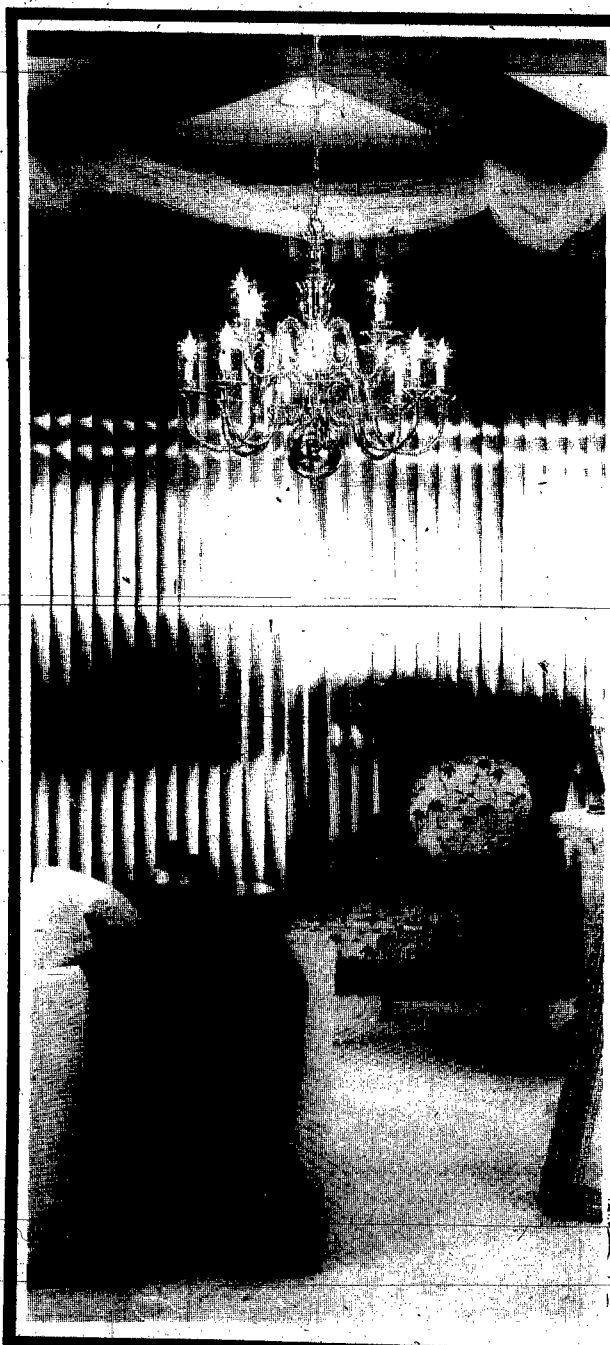

Breastfeeding can help protect against allergies. Cow's milk allergy is the most common food allergy found in human babies. An early diet of breast milk reduces the risk of developing this sensitivity, especially when there is a family history of it.

La Leche League International is a volunteer organization which provides breastfeeding information and support to any interested woman. Monthly meetings provide an opportunity for sharing experiences and suggestions with other breastfeeding mothers. Pregnant women find the meetings especially informative.

The next area meeting is planned for Wednesday, June 21 at 10:30 a.m. at the Yankton Public Library in Yankton, S.D. Babies and small children are welcome.

How to deal with child's misbehavior

Q. I want to control and lead my strong-willed child properly, but I'm afraid I'll break his spirit and damage his emotions in some way. How can I deal with his misbehavior without hurting his self-concept?

A. Breaking the spirit of a child is different from shaping his will. The human spirit relates to the self-esteem or the personal worth that a child feels. As such, it is exceedingly fragile at all ages and must be handled with care. You as a parent correctly assume that you can damage your child's spirit quite easily . . . by ridicule, disrespect, threats to withdraw love and by verbal rejection. Anything that depreciates his self-esteem can be costly to his spirit.

However, while the spirit is brittle and must be treated gently, the will is made of steel. It is one of the few intellectual components that arrives full strength at the moment of birth. In an issue of Psychology Today, this heading described the research findings from a study of infancy: "A baby knows who he is before he has the language to tell us so. He reaches deliberately for control of his environment, especially his parents."

This scientific disclosure would bring no new revelation to the parents of a strong-willed infant. They have walked the floor with him in the wee small hours, listening to this tiny dictator as he made his wants and wishes abundantly clear.

Later, a defiant toddler can become so angry that he is capable of holding his breath until he loses consciousness. Anyone who has ever witnessed this full measure of willful defiance has been shocked by its power. One headstrong 3-year-old recently refused to obey a direct command from her mother, saying, "You're just my mommy, you know!" Another "mere" mommy wrote me that she found herself in a similar confrontation with her 3-year-old son over something she wanted him to eat. He was so enraged by her insistence that he refused to eat or drink anything for two full days. He became weak and lethargic, but steadfastly held his ground. The mother was worried and guilt-ridden, as might be expected.

Finally, in desperation, the father looked the child in the eyes and convinced him that he was going to receive a well-deserved punishment if he didn't eat his dinner. With that maneuver, the contest was over. The toddler surrendered. He began to consume everything he could get his hands on, and virtually emptied the refrigerator.

Now tell me, please, why have so few child development authorities recognized this willful defiance? Why have they written so little about it? My guess is that the acknowledgement of childish imperfection would not fit neatly with the notion that little people are infused with sunshine and goodness, and merely "learn" the meaning of evil. To those who hold that rosy view I can only say, "Take another look!"

Q. Do you believe that parents should eliminate all aspects of individuality within family life? And what about healthy competition? Should it be discouraged in order to minimize jealousy between children?

A. Definitely not. I am saying that in matters relative to beauty, brains and athletic ability, each child should know that in his parents' eyes, he is respected and has equal worth with his siblings.

Praise and criticism at home should be distributed as evenly as possible, although some children will inevitably be more successful in the outside world. And finally, we should remember that children do not build fortresses around strengths—they construct them to protect weaknesses.

Thus, when a child begins to brag and boast and attack his siblings, he is revealing the threats he feels at that point. Our sensitivity to those signals will help minimize the potential for jealousy within our children.

and I think this is good except many of them are learning to use computers rather than their own minds. Instruments should not substitute for thought, they should assist."

As well as being a teacher, Schock is responsible for the establishment of the Taxidermy museum on the second floor of the Carhart Science Building. The display, which houses more than 5,000 specimens, was begun after Schock's arrival in 1964.

Schock said he developed an interest for taxidermy after taking a course in it after completing his Master's Degree at Kansas State. When he came to Wayne, he found only a few, poorly preserved specimens. He began requiring his Vertebrate Zoology students to prepare specimens for display and since then, he said, the collection has grown to become the best collection of Natural History at a college the size of Wayne State.

Also of note, Schock said, is the availability of the display. Unlike large universities, the specimens are open to classes and individuals, groups and individuals may take tours of the display and many of the displays have been loaned out to public schools, county fairs, workshops and political conferences.

IN ADDITION TO his accomplishments, Schock said the fruits of teaching have been his greatest reward. Schock said he enjoys meeting with former students after graduation and finding out about their successes. "Teachers don't get to see results at the end of the day or at the end of a semester. You may get through a textbook but what does that mean? I enjoy seeing former students to see what they have accomplished and how, or the college, may have contributed."

Schock says that now he is retired he hopes to stay in touch with the college community. He and his wife, Evelyn, have no plans yet for retirement, but for now they are staying in Wayne to be, as Schock put it, "Free of schedules, work and responsibility."

In spite of his new found freedom, Schock says he hopes to find a second career, though, he has no ideas yet what his second career might be.

THE SCHOCKS also plan to visit family, including their two sons, David who is employed by the Kraft corporation in Oakland, Calif., and their youngest son who is pursuing a master's degree in architecture in Denver, Colo.

After thirty-one years in a career he never intended to go into, Schock said he has been satisfied with his decision to come to Wayne. "I feel comfortable here, my friends are here, the college is here. It's home."

Research Center hosts swine team from Far East

The Northeast Research and Extension Center played host to a 12-member swine industry team from mainland China on June 6. Mike Brumm, NU swine specialist, presented information on modern swine facilities, genetics, manure management, nutrition and record keeping. Bill Kranz, NU irrigation specialist, discussed the use of swine effluent on alfalfa as a way of manure disposal on limited land area. The group tour was sponsored by the U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGC) and the Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board (NCB).

Until recently, China was a player in the world market for corn exports, but because of their fast growing swine industry, it may become one of the largest importers of high quality corn. "China can import high quality corn cheaper than growing it at home," says Randy Klein, Director of Market Development for the Nebraska Corn Board, "and that's good news for American corn producers." According to Klein, it costs $200 per metric ton for China to produce its own corn, which is of lower quality, compared to $160 per metric ton on the world market.

With more than six billion mouths to feed and pork the meat of choice in China, American grain and swine producers may have something to smile about in the near future. "The swine production in the southern provinces of China is growing at an astronomical rate," notes Klein. "High quality corn for proper swine nutrition and modern technology for swine genetics are in high demand." Klein added that 80 percent of all hog farms are small family acreages, commercial swine production has increased almost 17 percent over last year.

The delegates targeted northeastern Nebraska as the state's swine industry and corn producers are concentrated in this part of the state. Tour stops previous to the Northeast Center included two farms near Coleridge. The Papenhausen farm and Brodersen's Northstar Farms both produce Landrace and York breeding stock. The Papenhausen's sold seven boars to China last summer.

"Right now, Chinese producers are using everything they can get their hands on for feed," said Todd Meyer, Country Director for USFGC in Beijing, China. "They want a leaner meat. High quality corn and grain products are the best way to achieve that goal." The differences between U.S. and China corn is that China's tends to be harder, inconsistent in quality, and contains high moisture. When high moisture corn is shipped to highly humid areas, spoilage can occur quite quickly, Meyer pointed out.

Meyer also mentioned that quality genetics is setting the trend in commercial swine production in China. "We have to look at all aspects of the industry and how each step affects the other," said Meyer. "It does little good to invest in genetics if low-quality nutrition programs are practiced."

The most important factor in the Chinese swine industry is the health of the pig. "China has very strict health protocol guidelines for swine imports," said Dick Arends, ag promotion specialist for the Nebraska Corn Board. "So far, Nebraska has had no problems meeting those guidelines." China has the largest domestic market for pork in the world and they just recently opened their trade borders, added Arends. "As China and other countries like Japan and Korea open their borders for trade, only good things can happen for U.S. producers."

Other stops for the delegates included the University of Nebraska where they met with Dr. Duane Rees, NU Swine Nutritionist, Jane Kreutz-Reason, Director of Consumer Product Marketing for the Nebraska Pork Producers Association and Angela Baysinger, Swine Veterinarian at Clay Center. They also attended a tour of the Continental Grain Company and Lincoln Inspection Service in Lincoln. The final stop for the delegates was the World Pork Expo in Des Moines over the weekend.

Carroll Play Day

An unidentified horseman participates in the Hat Race as part of the 33rd Annual Carroll Play Day/Horse Show. The event consisted of numerous activities from running events to pleasure events. A total of 362 entries were received in the event which has been rained out each of the last two years.

Weather slows rootworms

"The cool month of May has slowed down rootworm development in 1995," said Keith Jarvi, NU Extension IPM Assistant. Because of the cool weather and above normal moisture, there are several factors to consider when planning treatment of the pests.

Jarvi suggests that those who have waited to apply postemergence products such as Furadan 4F (either aerial or ground) or Lorsban through the center pivot may have to wait a little longer than usual to get best performance. "We normally expect rootworms to begin hatching sometime during the first full week of June in Northeast Nebraska," Jarvi said. Jarvi estimates the hatch will begin one to possibly two weeks later this year because of cool conditions. It's likely to be extended because of the very cool soil temperatures at lower depths.

Because FMC prefers that Furadan 4F be applied just prior to rootworm hatch, Jarvi suggests that the optimum time for application will likely be sometime within the next two weeks. "Dow prefers that Lorsban 4E be applied at first sighting of second instar, or stage of growth, which will probably be two to three weeks from now," Jarvi added. Moisture conditions should be favorable for Furadan and Lorsban performance, but potential runoff could be a problem if Lorsban is applied through a pivot.

"Remember that each individual field should be scouted for best results and the advice of a consultant is a plus," Jarvi added.

Soil insecticides are likely to have been affected by the wet weather as well, but what the extra moisture means for corn rootworm control remains rather unpredictable. Because most granular soil insecticides have low leaching potential, Jarvi suggests that there should not be much leaching beneath the root zone. "Some chemical breakdown of most insecticides occurs through hydrolysis, a chemical transformation in which the pesticide reacts with water, resulting in the splitting of the water molecule. Most soil insecticides degrade at a higher rate in alkaline soil pH," Jarvi said. Excess mois-

Shade trees suffer from leaf fungus

Steve Rasmussen, a District/Extension Forester with the Northeast Nebraska Research Extension Center reports that the frequent and excessive moisture eastern Nebraska received this spring has resulted in an unusually high incidence of leaf diseases on shade trees. The trees experiencing the highest incidents of leaf diseases are crabapples, green ash, maples and sycamores.

Leaf diseases are caused by a fungus that disperses spores during cool, rainy weather. When the spore lands on a wet leaf, it germinates and infection begins. Leaves towards the bottom half of the tree will be most heavily infected because they stay damp the longest.

Leaf diseases will cause early wilting and browning of leaves followed by leaf drops off the trees.

No control is available once the leaf is infected. Though fungicides are recommended from early to mid-April until the middle of June, during periods of persistent rain control is limited. Since June is already here, Rasmussen's recommendation was to let nature run its course. Damaged trees may send out some new leaves later this spring if soil moisture stays good. Otherwise, the trees will look bare for the rest of the year but should leaf out next spring if the root system is healthy.

Rasmussen said he has already received several phone calls this year about fungus disease damage.

Wetlands Reserve sign-up is now

The 1995 Wetlands Reserve Program sign-up is being held now through June 30, according to USDA Secretary Dan Glickman recently.

"Landowners will have a chance to receive a payment and enroll land that may not always be suitable for farming because they are occasionally wet. These lands may be eligible for enrollment in the WRP to be restored to a wetland," Ron Moreland, Natural Resources Conservation Service state conservationist in Nebraska said.

The Wetland Reserve Program, funded nationally at $93 million to enroll up to 100,000 acres during 1995, protects and restores habitat for migratory birds and other wildlife, helps purify water supplies and helps absorb flood waters.

Landowners in Nebraska and 19 other states sought to enroll 590,000 acres from 5,775 farms in the 1994 sign-up. Acreage enrollment was limited by federal funds available, however, and 75,000 acres were tentatively accepted by USDA at a cost of $39 million.

"This is the third year of the program but the first time it has been offered nationwide. Nebraska was eligible for the program last year and had 148 landowners apply to enter into the program," said Moreland.

As part of the USDA reorganization, the sign-up and program management will now be handled by the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Moreland said interested landowners do not bid land into the program during the sign-up but rather apply for the program. After the land is evaluated and appraised the landowner will have the option whether or not to participate.

Lands in the Wetlands Reserve Program are still owned by the landowner but there is an easement for the land to remain either permanently or for 30 years as a wetland.

USDA will pay 100 percent of the wetland restoration costs for permanent easements. For 30-year easements, USDA will pay 50 percent of the restoration costs.

In the program, conservation easements are purchased from landowners for wetland areas that have been intensively used for cropping and forage production. Adjacent land deemed necessary to protect the restored wetland also will be included.

Farm programs provide food security, not welfare

Congress is expected to accomplish at least two things this year: pass a federal budget and the last farm bill of this century. The budget and the farm bill only coincide once every five years. It used to pass a farm bill every four years, until Congress figured out that it could save itself and others a bunch of work and a lot of pain by making each farm bill last an extra year. So now, every 20 years, we get four farm bills for the price of five, and it's a good deal all around. Except that now persons inside and outside of Congress are saying that the 1995 could be the last one, so that 20-year thing may not work out.

It's not hard to figure out why commentators say the '95 farm bill could be the last. There's a definite line trending downward, when you look at farm program spending over the past several years. Farm program payments have been one of the few bright spots in a federal budget that each year has added to the federal deficit. The deficit's trend line just keeps going up.

Discussions of the '95 farm bill have brought farmers into the public eye much more frequently than usually happens. Quite often, and quite unfortunately, there have been many, many references to farm program payments as "welfare for farmers." Some farm bill proposals even advocate that farmers who earn a certain amount of income from their off-farm jobs and other income sources shouldn't receive farm program payments.

Everybody's looking for a way to cut the cost of government, and farmers are all for that. But to characterize farm program payments as welfare is to misunderstand them.

Yes, farm program payments do provide some income guarantees for farmers. They do make up some of the difference if market prices are low -- say, for example, less than the cost of production, as does happen. But, they do not come without a price to farmers: they must limit the number of acres they plant or take certain conserving measures, which have their own cost, in order to be eligible for the payments. And there is a passel of paperwork involved.

As farm program spending has declined, the programs themselves have become less attractive: the payments are less and it begins to appear not to be cost-effective or worth the hassle to meet the eligibility requirements.

Many farmers, maybe most, would tell you they'd prefer to earn a decent income from the marketplace and be done with government programs. But, there is an enduring fact in the agricultural marketplace: farmers and ranchers do not set the prices for their products, the market does. They are price-takers, not price-makers. They can't just raise their prices when their costs of production increase, as say, a manufacturer can. They deal with market risks and weather factors that are unique -- and which can destroy their business operation in a single year or season.

The U.S. has long recognized the importance of food security and that's the other side of farm programs: they help to keep America secure as a nation by ensuring that its citizens will always have food. And food that is well-priced and affordable for most Americans. The University of Missouri's Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute figures the average U.S. consumer will spend $1,729 for food this year. The U.S. Department of Agriculture figures that families spend somewhere around 9.3 percent of their income on food, compared with 19 percent in Japan, 30 percent in the former Soviet Union countries and more than 53 percent in India.

Put another way, we have a cheap food policy in the United States: food that is affordable at the grocery store for nearly everyone, because some of the cost of providing it is borne by the government in the form of farm program payments.

Farm program payments help keep farmers in business by providing some continuity of income. Farming -- food production -- has so many risks and uncertainties, such as this spring's delayed planting which means lower crop yields and lower incomes. With a few years of weather disasters and without some income protection, it would be very tempting for large numbers of farmers to change occupations. With a smaller food supply, consumer prices would increase. And perhaps the U.S. would need to import large amounts of food. If that happened, the U.S. no longer would have food security and would compromise its strength as a nation.

It's no exaggeration to say that the U.S. farm program helps farmers, helps consumers and keeps our country strong.

ture has contributed to the process this year.

Since rootworms require some air spaces in the soil to survive, the rain does offer some benefit. "Saturated soils usually cause high mortality of hatching rootworms," Jarvi said. In any case, analyzing each individual field for its own conditions is the best way to combat a potential rootworm problem.

Producers may have come across some leaf feeding damage which could have been mistaken for cutworm feeding. On closer examination, the insects were found to be striped-green caterpillars, less than half an inch in length. Jarvi noted that the insects often times wrap the corn leaves around themselves with webbing to provide a temporary shelter between feeding periods. "The corn should not be harmed by this temporary leaf feeding. Continue to monitor the cutworm feeding until the corn has five to six leaves visible," advised Jarvi.

Watershed project grant received

Representatives from the Environmental Trust Fund have awarded the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District a grant of $490,000 for their Watershed Improvement Project at Willow Creek near Pierce.

Executive Director of the Environmental Trust Fund, Mary Harding, and Environmental Trust Fund Board member, Vince Krampfer, met LENRD staff at Lou's Thriftyway in Norfolk for the check presentation. The Environmental Trust Fund is funded through the State Lottery. Therefore, the check was presented at a POWERBALL outlet.

On hand to receive the check for the Lower Elkhorn NRD were chairman of the Board, Garry Anderson, General Manager Stan Staab, Assistant Manager of Programs Ken Berney, Water Resources Manager Rick Wozniak, and Information and Education Coordinator Julie Schmit.

Assistant Manager Berney says the money will be used for the Watershed Improvement Project in an effort to improve water quality in the Willow Creek lake and stream. Berney stated, "The LENRD will cooperate with landowners on Establishing habitat along the stream and reducing the amount of agri-chemicals and animal waste in the stream." Berney says, "The main problem in the lake is a high level of nutrients which lead to algae blooms and green water, making the lake undesirable to be in. By reducing the nutrients which get into the stream we hope to improve the situation and provide a cleaner recreation area."

Forty-nine grants, totaling more than $3.8 million, have been approved by the Nebraska Environmental Trust Fund board. Projects range from tree maintenance to Freon recovery, and from habitat preservation to recycling promotion.

Education faculty hold retreat

The faculty from the Division of Education at Wayne State College ended the 1994-95 academic year with a two-day retreat near Yankton, S.D. All returning faculty met to evaluate the past year and to plan for the 1995-96 academic year.

Faculty members reviewed the division's greatest accomplishments and disappointments of the past year, discussed the division's three-year plan of development and established priorities for next year. The revision of the undergraduate and graduate elementary programs was given a high priority rating. The program revision, in response to requests of several community groups, will connect with efforts toward establishing certificate endorsements in both early childhood education and middle school education. Other topics included in the three-year plan were college/school relationships, the integration of technology and the design and delivery of graduate programs.

The division's five standing committees proposed the language of policies from their work during the last year. Identifying and tracking students in teacher education and in graduate programs were major concerns. Concepts related to the policies and procedures for all field experiences including student teaching were accepted. A draft of these policies will be written by Drs. Diane Alexander and Carolyn Linster for faculty adoption in September.

Further topics of consideration included the delivery of the new curriculum and instructor major, advisement of students, identifying and tracking graduate students and preparations for a national accrediting team due in 1977.

Social activities included a cruise on the Missouri river, compliments of Jim and Barb Black.
