City seeks 4% hike in property tax

By Eric McCarty Of the Herald

The Wayne City Council will be requesting four percent more in property taxes this year. The new city budget will be put before a public hearing Tuesday at 7:35 p.m. in City Hall.

Council met this morning for a final review of the budget before the hearing. Any changes made this morning have not been considered.

The state legislature lowered the percent increase cap on property taxes the city can ask for from five to four percent this year. The increase means an actual dollar growth of $31,000.

The proposed total revenue budgeted increases from $1,893,991 of last year to $2,265,751. The total expenditure budgeted increases from $2,241,258 to $2,765,777.

These increases include an approximated $650,000 for the Library/ Senior Center, over $20,000 for a patrolman to be appointed this fall, and $5,000 for outdoor warning sirens under the title of civil defense.

A NEW 14-MONTH fiscal year goes into effect August 1 in accordance with state ordinance.

suggested to the City Council that the normal twelve month be considered before adding the two extra months into the equation.

The board looked at the revised 14-month budget for the first time this morning. The total budget numbers mentioned earlier do not reflect these two months.

"We are not asking for more property tax," said Salitros, stressing that the city will work with 12 months of property taxes

Other areas of the budget will reflect an extended period such as services and fees, which will bring in the normal dollar amount for the two months.

THE CIVIL SERVICE commission is interviewing applicants now for the police chief position and will advance three names to Salitros soon.

We're looking for a chief to be on board some time after labor Salitros said. Salitros will day," Salitros said. Salitros windecide who will fill the chief's position temporarily after Vern Fairchild leaves.

Good Luck 'chairhen'

.We were disheartened to hear of Jane O'Leary's plans to step asside as "chairhen" of the Wayne Chicken Show. She has been a major reason for the success and the world-wide noteriety the event has captured

Her leadership will be missed. She has dedicated thousands of purely volunteer hours of time to building the show up over the years. Her sense of humor has captivated thousands of people she has talked to in radio interviews over the years.

The summer event literally has brought millions of tourism dollars to the community over the years. Each year is seems the crowds that come to Wayne for the parade and zany events associated with the show get larger.

The Chicken Show is a crucial part of the local economy, thanks in large measure to the volunteer work by people like

She is right, however, when she admonishes us that the Chicken Show is bigger than any one individual. It will continue to grow and prosper.

It is heartening to see new leadership emerging and new ideas discussed for future Chicken Show celebrations

It will continue to require participation from hundreds of volunteers who should be appreciative of the groundwork laid by the first generation of Chicken Show leaders

Mandates create more red tape

By Melvin Paul Statchouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association

LINCOLN - While Gov. Nelson was telling Congress last week that a federal mandate to test drinking water in Nebraska for pineapple pesticides was stupid, he was discovering that he had his own man-date problem at home.

For the past two years, the state Department of Health has been telling owners of underground lawn sprinkler systems that they must have a safety valve tested once a

The $50 test, they said, was needed to respond to an even more costly federal mandate.

But upon further inspection, te officials found that the federal mandate, proposed in 1987, has not been adopted and is not expected to go into effect now until 2001.

unfunded federal mandates, it was a bit embarrassing to learn that one of his state departments was enforcing its own expensive mandate on some homeowners.

The Governor has now ordered a public hearing to determine if the annual inspections are needed for a valid health reason - like protecting drinking water - absent the

It's stories like these, where mandates slip through the maze of state regulations and rules routinely signed into law by governors, that makes you wonder how government became so complicated

Things like this sprinkler in

It also makes you shake your head on how slowly such suppos-edly essential government require-ments go into effect.

If these yearly inspections were such a great idea (in order to prevent the back flow of yard chemicals into the water system), why did it take from the late 1980s, when it was first suggested by a State Health Department advisory committee, to 1995 to really go into

First, the Health Department had to draw up the rules and regs and get them reviewed. Then the attorney general reviews them and forwards them to the governor for his signature.

Nelson signed them into law in 1992. Many Nebraska cities embraced the requirement, writing up their individual city plans to com-

But it wasn't until 1993 that homeowners were finally hearing that they had to have their sprinkler system back flow devices inspected. It wasn't until this spring that the Omaha-area water agency began warning sprinkler owners to get the inspections or risk having their

Some of my Lincoln neighbors told me the inspections weren' supposed to start in the Capita City until next year.

Doesn't sound like a health

mergency to me.

But untangling the red tape o government apparently takes time, just like the creation of it.

We'll have a public hearing and see what happens.

400 feet below the Atlantic ocean: The U.S. Military could become a revenue producing arm of the federal government rather than a deficit drain on the budget if it would sell tours for fun in addition to tours of duty.

I think people would pay big money for the experience of riding a $2 billon nuclear powered ballistic missile submarine into the ocean depths or watching a midair refueling of a jet fighter from the tail of an Air Force tanker.

The experience is worth big money. I'd pay it to go again if the tours were available, even if they were pricey. It's worth it.

But, you can't buy these tours And I suppose having civilians in the way all the time would hamper some military missions. My "paying-toursfund-raiser" idea is probably not practical, but it is a shame really that more people can't see the high tech personnel, equipment and practices of our modern military in action. We would all probably have better understanding and appreciation for the role and importance of the military in protecting our freedoms.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago, a group of Nebraska newspaper publishers were asked to send biographical information and social security numbers to military security personnel who would check our backgrounds to see if we were safe to take on a trip aboard the super classified Trident ballistic missile submarine USS Nebraska.

Former Nebraska Secretary of State Allen Beermann served on the com-missioning and launch committees for the huge sub bearing Nebraska's name a couple years ago and was in line to lead a group of VIP's of his choosing on a day cruise aboard the

Now the executive vice president of the Nebraska Press Association, on whose board I serve, Beermann invited me, as one of the lucky "non-VIP's", to go along: Tremember how envious I was when Ralph Barclay of Wayne, in his VIP position as a member of the Employers Committee for the Guard and Reserve, was invited to attend the launching and commissioning ceremonies of the sub in 1992 and 1993.

I was gleeful to say the least when the official invitation for the trip came from Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral. J.M. Boorda: A "friend" of mine wondered just how extensive the security check was into the backgrounds of those invited to join the "Big Red Sub Club" and suggested (in jest I hope) that the authorities needed to take another look

AS IT WAS, we were not told the specific time and location for the departure of the sub. "That's classified," we were told. We were asked to keep quiet about the details of the trip until it was confirmed by the Navy The secrecy made the whole experience more dramatic.

The tour group of about 30 would be ferried to the submarine, "somewhere in Florida" on a Nebraska Air National Guard tanker flight from Lincoln. The air crew was scheduled to perform a refueling mission for Air Force fighters over Arkansas. It was one of those many missions pilots and crew members make to keep their experience levels up. Nebraska Air Guard Crews flying K 135 R tankers are routinely deployed all over the world conducting missions for the Air Force. Military personnel and retired military personnel often tag along on these scheduled missions. The tankers have plenty of room for personnel and cargo. While the interior and seats might not be as comfortable, the cabin temperature not as well controlled and the noise levels much higher than commercial airliners, there's plenty of leg room, passengers are welcome to move about and the entertainment value is much better on the military flight.

All in all, I would rather take an austere military flight than a comfortable commercial one, I think.

BEING ALONG for the flight to Florida was a thrilling experience in and of itself. We saw a pair of F-16 fighters belly up to the bar at 29,000 feet, refuel and then speed off to continue their mission.

We landed at Patrick Air Force Base in Florida, which is near Cape Canaveral and Port Canaveral from where we would depart. This was last Wednesday and we were to depart for the submarine day cruise on Thursday morning. The whole area was abuzz about the Thursday scheduled launch of the Discovery space

The Nebraska-based air crew that flew the tanker jet to Florida had a choice of remaining at the base to watch the shuttle launch or riding the submarine with us. They chose the submarine experience. We were under water when the shuttle launch occurred but the officer manning the periscope said it was "an awesome

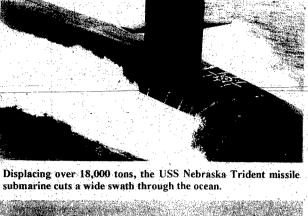

We boarded the submarine before breakfast which was served in the surprisingly roomy "Cornhusker Cafe". We ate with the crew and learned that submarine service, is considered a plum job in the Navy because you get better pay and better THERE'IS A down side. Being away from home and having no communications for six weeks at a time and not being able to see the sun for months would count on my list of reasons not to be a submariner. The crew members only receive one way communications from home while they are on patrol. These "family grams" are limited to 40 words and Rear Admiral David Goebel said the sailors wives get very creative in packing the most information into those 40 words.

Submarine crews are strictly screened for psychological compatibility with the type of service they are required to perform. These guys truly have to be able to live and work. together under confined conditions and often stressful situations for weeks on end:

Their job is to literally go out to sea

The ship's executive officer David Kern said the ship and crew is very good at its job and they don't believe while on patrol they have ever been detected by other military forces, even by our own submarines.

Nebraska officials witnessed a midair refueling of F-16 fighter jets by the Lincoln -based Air National Guard tanker during the flight to Florida to catch the boat.

The technology that allows the huge boat to sneak around in the depths undetected is highly secret. right down to the shape of the single propeller which pushes the boat through the water at better than 20 knots, without creating a loud rushing water sound that can be heard by enemy sonar listeners.

INCIDENTALLY, WE learned that the Walker Spy case touches close to houge othe USS Nebraska crew. Some of the secrets sold to the Soviets by the convicted spy allows our enemies to develop quieter submarinks including super high-tech propellers similar to ours. The biggest advantage a submarine has over its enemy is the ability to hear them on sonar detectors before they hear you.

"If you both hear each other at the same time, you're both at risk," said an officer. "But if I hear you thousands of yards before you hear me, I have a real advantage, "he added. We still have an edge in this technology it was reported, but because of the highly publicized spy case, our technology lead is shrinking.

There are no windows in the ship and the ride underwater is remarkably smooth and quiet. For all we knew after dropping into the hatch at dockside, the crew could have left us tied at the dock and simulated the whole trip with numbers on the speed and depth indicators.

I know they didn't since I got to make the tight climb up to the bridge when the boat surfaced after the dive. ripped my pants in the process I think, or maybe it was reaching for another cookie in the Cornhusker Cafe.

While on the very small bridge I couldn't-see a dock or land in any direction. The view of the huge boat, which outweighs some of the biggest World War II ships, is awesome when it is underway. A huge four-foot wave of water sweeps continuously over the bow and roars down the sides to create a huge wake that stretches

THE OUTSIDE AIR smells dramatically different too after hours of super clean manufactured air in the submarine. The ship and crew, with its nuclear power plant that won't have to be refueled until the year 2013, can remain submerged indefinitely. It manufactures and recirculates pure air, purifies sea water for drinking and other uses and maintains precise temperature and com-

The only limit on the amount of time the crew can remain submerged is the food supply--besides going stir crazy suppose. When fully loaded, the food supply is planned to last four months.

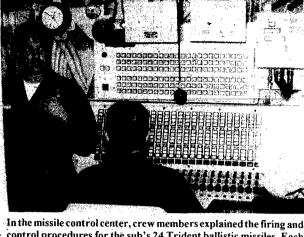

There are two full crews for the USS Nebraska. We met the Gold Crew which began its six week patrol of secrecy the day after we departed from the boat. When they return to port, the Gold Crew will turn the craft over to the Blue Crew and after resupply and maintenance the alternate crew will take the ship out for another patrol

The idea is to keep the expensive craft on the job as many hours as possible.

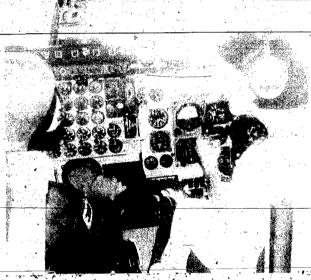

I can report that the USS Nebraska ship and crew certainly seemable and professional and I know they are highly respected for their performance. Adml. Goebel, a Stratcom command officer based in Omaha who made the trip with the "Big Red Sub Club" and admittedly did a little "impromptu inspection" openly commended the crew for its record of excellence and performance.

THE SHIP'S NICKNAME in the Florida port is "National Champions" It is clear they get that honorary title from more than the autographed footballs and Cornhusker posters which adorn the "Cornhusker Cafe."

Several members of the crew are from Nebraska and many others who aren't, have enjoyed visits to the state. hosted by Beermann, to attend football games, the College World Series and see other sites. They really seem to like the identity with the Cornhusker State. Many crew members even wear Herby Husker patches control procedures for the sub's 24 Trident ballistic missiles. Each of the missiles carry multiple warheads and can travel over 4,000 miles and land within a 100 yards of its target.

Nebraska Lt. Gov. Kim Robak took the controls of the Air National Guard tanker for a time during the flight.

on their uniform jumpers.

The crew members seemed excited to show off their ship to the Nebraska visitors, Some of the people on the trip truly were VIP's with Nebraska connections. Jim Fowler of "Wild Kingdom" fame was in the group and never seemed to tire of signing autographs for crew members and having his picture taken with any and all,

Adolpho Bicardi also impressed the crew. The rum manufacturing executive was a popular guy even on the boat on which alcohol is probib-

Lt. Gov. Kim Robak was out rankling leader on the cruise. Dr. Lee Simmons, director of the Omaha Zoo was there. Don Bryant of the UNI Athletic Program was a hit when he passed the National Football Championship ring around the crew for everyone to see. Other area newspaper executives who were on the trip last week included Ted Hentiman. publisher of the Wisner News Chronicle and immediate past president of the Nebraska Press Association. Emil Reutzel of Norfolk was nry gracious roommate. He never complained about my snoring. Henry Trysla of South Sioux City and Dewaine Gahan of Oakland, who is the immediate past president of the Nebraska Press Advertising Service were also in the group from this area Ponca attorney John Kingsbury was an enthusiastic participant as well

I CAN'T COMPLAIN too much anymore about the costs associated with our military program. One of these expensive new Trident missile submarines (there will be 18 total when the construction program is complete) with 24 multiple warhead missiles and a high tech crew of 165 whiz kids can do the work of thousands of previous crew members on scores of older submarnies

We truly are doing more with less I'm not obligated to say that because the military showed the "Big Red Sub Club" a good time. For the record, those on the trip paid for their own food and accommodations: And technically, since we were tagging along on training missions. I was bleased to hear there were no additional taxpaver burdens as a result of our little sojourn

People in the military -- like the rest of us--are trying to do the best job that they can with what they are given They are sensitive about costs and taxes and criticism from civilians about military spending. Sure there are cases of overspending and areas that could stand more fiscal scrutiny. But for the most part. I think we get a pretty good bang for our buck

Our Air National Guard Pilot Capt Keith Schell of Lincoln told about the taxpayer that owed the government $500. He sent in a Craftsman hammer and told the IRS to "keep the change"

He related that he knows some procurement procedures get out of hand and that scrutiny is needed, but he added $500 hammers are isolated cases and not the norm. Schell also provided a great endorsement for the practicality of the reserve armed forces. Both in cost savings and benefits for personnel involved, he said the situation is a perfect fit

The pilot said he would rather be flying the F-4s that used to be sta tioned at the Lincoln base but that the tanker service was enjoyable nonthe-less. He said the National Guard and Reserves provide a great opportunity for young people to finance their college education, gain experience in a career field and build funds toward retirement if they stay in:

All in all it was a fantastic trip and an experience of a lifetime.

Keeping a 560 foot submarine on course isn't easy a flatland newspaper publisher learned when he took the helm. "It's okay, it's only a $2 billion boat," was the crew's words of encouragement when the nervous flatlander drifted off course.

Winside 18-under fast pitch softball team wins districts

The Winside girls 18-under fast pitch softball team went a perfect 5-0 in the Class C-District 6 Softball Tournament in Osmond over the weekend to claim their first ever district championship.

Todd LaVelle's crew began their championship quest with a 15-10 win over Emerson with Stacy Bowers earning the win. Winside betted 17 hits while limiting Emerson to nine.

Monica Sievers paced the winners with a triple and two singles while Jodi Miller and Jenny Wade had three singles each and Bowers and Wendy Miller each doubled and singled. Sarah Painter blasted a homerun while Sara Marotz doubled. Mindy Marotz and Mindy Janke each/had a single.

Winside downed Ponca in the second round, 16-11 with Mindy Janke earning the pitching victory: Winside again pounded out 17 hits led by Sara Marotz with a homerun and two doubles while Mindy Marotz and Monica Sievers each hit a triple, double and single. Stack Bowers also netted three hits-all singles and Mindy Janke laced a pair of base hits. Jodi Miller, Sarah Painter and Jenny Wade each had one single.

WINNENG THE championship was the highlight of the tournament for Winside but coming close second was the semifinal victory over Osmond-a team that had beaten Winside four times earlier in the season and all by one

This time it was. Winside that would escape with a one-run victory, 14-13. Stacy Bowers carned the pitching victory despite the host team out-hitting Winside by a 16-10 margin. Monica Sievers continued her red-hot hitting streak with three singles and she completed the first day of the tournament with a .900 batting average with nine hits in 10 at-bats.

Sarah Painter doubled and singled while Mindy Janke and Bowers each had two base hits. Jodi Miller rounded out the attack

Fair plans taking shape with new, fun events

By Claire Rasmussen Of the Herald

Though the fair is still two weeks away, 4-H students and fair volunteers have begun the hard task of preparing the fairgrounds, and themselves, for the Greater Northeast Nebraska Fair, August 3-

Last weekend, 4-H students were busy with livestock tours, preparing projects and reserving space for stalls. According to 4-H Assistant Mindy Lutt, approximately 260 children plus school enrichment programs have pre-registered to participate in the fair.

Lutt said this year's fair will have approximately as many displays as last year.

This year in livestock displays, number of entries in most categories, except beef which looks like it may be up a little. It also is encouraging to see the enrollment in the Bucket Calf area, for younger children, rise. We look to have up to 20 Pec Wee entries.

Lutt said the number of livestock displays may depend on how much the recent hot weather affected

Said Lutt, "A lot of animals last week, especially sheep and hogs, stressed by the weather. When that happens, they don't gain real well so that might affect the turnout but we aren't anticipating much change.'

Change will be occurring among the events offered at the fair. In addition to the usual events such as the free barbeque, the Kilroy award, the chip chucking contest, the pickup pull, carnival rides and the volleyball tournament, several new events will be offered.

Dolores Felt, the Secretary of the Wayne County Fair Board, reported that the committee has bee busy developing new events to involve more people in the fair.

"Leland Herman, the assistant fair manager, is really our idea man and he's come up with some good ones for this year.

Among Hermans idea of this year its a stock it is some him was designed to involve children that are too young to be involved in 4-H.

"In order to participate in 4-H, you have to be 8 or over. We see a lot of younger kids at the fair and we'd like to give them some thing to do and give them a chance to walk away with something.

"We also have a division for Grandma and Grandpa, so they can get in on the fun, too.

The competition will involve dressing as a cowboy. The best out-fit will win a prize. All participants will receive a free ride ticket and a ribbon

Another new event for children is the Pee Wee Bucket Calf Contest, which has been featured at the Pierce County Fair. The event allows children under 4-H age to bring a bucket calf and show it. The children will parade their calves in the ring, then be asked several questions by the judge. All children will receive a participation ribbon.

Lutt said the goal was to stir up enthusiasm for the 4-H.

We think this contest is an excellent starting place for children. They get excited about 4-H and learn-the responsibility involved in caring for a calf.

Another addition to the fair activities will be the Bull Throwers contest--a competition of story and joke telling.

Said Felt, "People have all been people. Well, now's a chance to see the people throw some bull. The goal is to spread it on as thick as possible. We're going to let anyone who wants to get up and tell stories, like the type they might tell in the coffee shop, as long as they're humorous.

One of the most anticipated new events will be the livestock herding demonstration by the Austrailian Shepard dogs owned by "Doc" and Marg Weich of Hoskins. Felt re-ported that at a livestock herding workshop put on by the Weichs earlier this spring, individuals came from as far away as Montana.

The herding demonstration is scheduled for Saturday at noon.

Said Felt, "I think we've got something for everybody. We have done a lot of planning and hope to see a good crowd out here.

The widening and improvement of Highway 35 through Wayne will not be a part of Nebraska's largest highway construction program scheduled to occur in the fiscal year

The Highway 35 project will be occuring in the next five years and is projected to begin in 1997.

According to the Nebraska Department of Roads Director-State Engineer Allan Abbott, the Nebraska's Highway Construction and Transportation Improvement Program for the fiscal year 1996 totals $320.9 million. $279,315,000 will be spent on the state transportation and highway construction program. The local systems will be receiving a total of $41,561,000.

According to Abbott, "This is the largest highway construction and improvement program, ever published in the Department's his-

Last year's program cost was $279.3 million.

The state highway system construction and transportation im-provements represent $279.2 mil-lion of the funds, $41.6 million are forecast for improvements on the local system of city streets and county roads, bridges and other inter-related transportation activities.

Included in the cost will be $929,000 for Hazard Elimination-Safety projects.

The program's enlargement will be funded with an average state variable motor fuel tax increase of one cent per gallon during the fiscal year of 1996

Concerns have been raised in the Department of Roads regarding the level of federal funding for the fiscal year of 1996. Funding is expected to be decreased due to plans to balance the federal budget.

On the date of the publication of the FY-96 Highway Construction and Transportation Program, Congress had not passed legislation appropriating federal-aid highway funds for FY-96.

Abbott said he was concerned about the cost of the program but stated that the plan would go forward.

'We do remain optimistic that a state transportation system program size of $279.3 million can be acand complished in FY-96 Nebraska's long-range 20-Year Highway Transportation Plan will continue to remain on schedule."

The plan released by the Department of Roads included both the plans for the fiscal year 1996 as well as the six-year plan of projects which will be completed over the next six years.

Among the projects which will be completed in the fiscal year 1996 will be the resurfacing of Highway 9 north and south of Allen and the repair of Yankton Bridge in Cedar

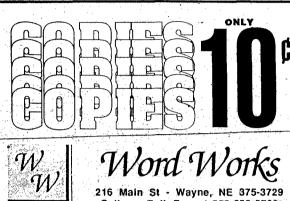

Not included among the projects for 1996 was the proposed plan to widen Highway 35. The project's cost is estimated at almost 14 million dollars. Officials from the Nebraska Department of Roads said they could not give an exact date when the project would be started.

Though the project is slated to begin in 1997, officials said, dependng on the urgency of other projects and funding levels, it could be de-layed. The program will be considered a priority for 1997. The improvement of Highway 5 from Wakefield to Hoskins is on the Department's 5 year plan for 1997-2001.

The programs in the five year plan may be selected for inclusion in the fiscal plan for any year between 1997 and 2001.

Wayne Detention Center is first to finish training

Wayne Juvenile Detention Center employees have become the first JDC in the state of Nebraska to complete the required instruction.

In an attempt to comply with standards developed in 1992 by Mark Martin, employees at JDCs across Nebraska are to complete a training program, Dennis Banks, the assistant director of the Attention Center for Youth and a certified training instructor, visited the Wayne facility to train its employees.

The employees were instructed in report writing, the juvenile judicial system, stress management, pressure point control tactics, juvenile rights and responsibilities, juvenile rules and regulations, security and safety issues, suicide signs and prevention, cultural diversity and Therapeutic Aggression Control Techniques (TACT)

The training also included a study of interpersonal skills because of the types of youths handled in personal relations, work ethic and attitude, understanding the labor market and organizational structure and making sound career decisions explained Jensen.

He said he is excited about the potential of the program to help reduce dropout risks in the school and work to improve the transition for students from school to the world of work

The program is open not only to students who are currently enrolled in school but also to hose who have previously dropped out and have not completed their GED said Jensen. The grant will be administered through the Nebraska Job Service.

Businesses interested in participating in the program may contact the school at 375-3450. Jensen said students with excellent computer skills will be available through the program and each student placed in a work setting will have a school to work liaison officer and school counselor to offer guidance and oversee their performance He said the school would implement a specific training program to address the skills needed by businesses who agree to participate in the program.

We can send a business a student who is trained on the precise equipment and job performance skills requested by the business," said Jensen. He said the program could save businesses hundreds of dollars in training costs for new employees.

Students in the program will earn credits toward graduation in addition to carning money for their job site work performed, said Jensen. Students who have not completed their high school requirements for a diplonia are also encouraged to contact the school to learn more about the new program, said Jensen.

"THE FIRST YEAR I might have sold 60 plants," reminisced Korn of her humble beginnings.

But the sun shone and the clouds rained on her enterprise.

When we potted our 7,500th this year, I stopped keeping track, and that doesn't count the day lilies.

And it is for good reason that she doesn't count the day lilies.

-The "Word" for the Week

Running from God...

The story of Jonah is a familiar one. God told Jonah to go to the city of Nineveh and to preach to the people there. Jonah considered these people heathen. They were not Jewish people. They should not have the privilege of hearing God's Word. "After all," thought Jonah, "if I preach to these people, God will turn them around so they will follow Him." Jonah did not want God to bless people outside his own race. As a result, "Jonah rose up to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the Lord" (Jonah 1:3).

No one can run from God. Psalm 139:7 asks, "Where can I go from They Spirit? Or where can I flee from Thy presence?" The answer is simple. You cannot escape from God. To show this, "The Lord hurled a great wind on the sea and there was a great storm on the sea (Jonah 1:4). God controlled the weather. He chased after Jonah. He threw Jonah into the raging seas. "And the Lord appointed a great fish to swallow Jonah" (Jonah 1:17). Now Jonah had to face God and he

God has a way of putting us in a corner when we run from Him. How about you? Are you running from God? Do you want God to teaching you the lesson He taught Jonah?

'King of the Jungle' is theme for Kid's Crusade

"King of the Jungle" is the theme of his year's Kid's Crusade, sponsored by Praise Assembly of God in Wayne. For three years Praise Assembly of God has been sponsoring a summer 'children's event which is full of exciting clowns, puppets, crazy games, lots of prizes, singing, a simple mes-sage of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and more!

Every child ages 4 and older is welcome to attend the "King of the Jungle Kid's Crusade." There is no charge for the event, but offerings are received nightly.

"This year's Crusade is going to be great," reports Pastor Mark Steinback. "We will be doing a lot with black lighting effects, and the clown routines will be excellent. I love working with children, and as a church we are committed to making these events as exciting as possible. God is not a boring God. He loves children and we want them to know it!'

The "King of the Jungle Kid's Crusade" will be held Sunday through Wednesday, July 23-26, 7 p.m. nightly at the Wayne city auditorium. Every community in the area is welcome to attend. Registration will begin at 6:30 p.m. each night.

Youth violence reflects culture

The recent dramatic increase in violence among youth reflects major changes in the American way of

The rate of interpersonal violence is higher in the United States than in any other industrialized country., Almost half of American households have guns, and students carry an estimated 270,000 of them to school each day.

A report from the American Psychological Association's Commission on Violence and Youth suggests ways to reverse this alarming trend.

The commission sought to discover what factors contribute to violent behavior. They found that extreme anger or impulsiveness prompts a violent response in young people who have learned from past experience that violence is an acceptable response to problems. Other strong influences identified by the commission were socioeconomic inequality, easy access to guns and alcohol, and gang membership.

Contrary to noisy denials from the media, the commission cited convincing evidence from several studies that viewing violence on television promotes an acceptance of violent acts and an increase in aggressive behavior. On the average, child and adolescents watch television more than 20 hours per week. The most violent programs are the Saturday morning children's shows, with 20 to 25 violent acts per hour. The commission came to one conclusion: TV violence promotes an acceptance of violent acts and increased aggression.

Paradoxically, the victims of teenage violence are likely to be wither teenagers. Homicide is now the most-common cause of death? for African-American youths. Teenagers are more than twice as likely as persons over age 20 to be are interested in attending.

assaulted, and most violence occurs close to schools.

Except for rape, violence is more likely to be directed toward boys than girls. The attacker also is more likely to be an acquaintance from within the victim's own ethnic group. Overall, the risk tends to be greater for those who are young, for those who haven't completed high school, and for unmarried youth with low incomes.

To be most effective, interventions must begin early. In addition to various authority figures (e.g. parents, teachers), a child's peer group can be included in programs to improve social behavior and discourage aggressive responses. Highrisk children can benefit from a modified Jearning process to teach them how to change their patterns of interaction in the home. The commission encourages community members to help design preventive programs, and to call on the public to advocate that guns, alcohol and drugs be inaccessible to young

Cape Cod wedding unites Peterson-Holden

The historic First Congregational Church of Harwich, Mass was the setting for the June 3 wedding of Amanda Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Peterson of Wayne and Scott Holden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holden of Darien, Conn.

Decorations for the 3 p.m. ceremony included two large vases of lilacs, white lisianthus and caspia on the altar and pew bows of white satin and white and organdy ribbon. Window boxes filled with lilacs, pink rhododendron and ivy decorated the sills of the cathedral windows on either side of the sanctuary.

The Rev. Dr. Charles T. New berry officiated at the double ring ceremony. Wedding quisic included "Wedding Hymn" and "Bist du bei mir" sung by Kathryn Ley of

On her wedding day the bride was given in marriage by her father and appeared in a gown of her own design which featured a bodice of natural white Venetian lace handsewn to silk chiffon over a strapless undergown of silk charmuse. Her gown had a soft v-neckline and fitted long sleeves with bridal points at the wrists. The princess waist fell over a softly flared tea length skirt of natural white silk chiffon.

She wore a portrait hat covered with silk chiffon and embellished with two silk chiffon roses. She carried a bouquet of white lilacs, caspia, violet edged white lisianthus hand tied with white organdy and white satin ribbons. She wore an heirloom pearl locket tied with a white satin ribbon.

Matron of honor was Sarah Liska of Lincoln, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Lindsay Holden of Charlestown, Mass., sister of the groom, Amy Powers of Marrison, Col., cousin of the bride, Teresa Boudewyns of Newton, Mass. and Kristin Wilkowske of Jacksonville, Fla.

The matron of honor and bridesmaids wore tea length, empire waist periwinkle blue chiffon dresses with a back tie sash, short cap sleeves and self-covered back button closures. Each carried a bouquet of French lilacs, caspia and miniature eucalyptus tied with periwinkle satin ribbons.

Kadie Greenfield of Dover, Mass was flower girl. She wore a white satin, tea length dress with short puffed sleeves. She carried a basket covered with fresh lavender asters and filled with lilac petals.

Mrs. Scott Holden

Matthew Holden of Stranford, Conn. served his brother as best man. Ushers were Matthew Peterson of Wayne, brother of the bride, Robert Dillon, Chatham, Mass. Robert Price of Andover, Mass. and Michael Koenig of Holliston,

The bridegroom and his ushers were attired in white linen trousers, light blue dress shirts and navy blue en blazers. They wore matching navy check neckties.

Scan Peterson of Wayne, brother of the bride was ring bearer. He wore navy trousers, a light blue shirt and a white blazer.

The bride's mother wore a sandwashed silk crepe suit in navy with a fitted bodice and double pleats around the waistline. The suit had a jewel neckline with loop button closures and a straight skirt.

The bridegroom's mother chose a rose silk suit which featured a square neckline, goldtone button closure with a straight skirt. Both mother wore corsages of gardenias

A reception followed at Eastward Ho Country Club in Chatham,

The newlyweds traveled to Greece for their hongymoon following which they returned to Wayne for a reception in the home of the bride's parents.

They are now at home at 108 Main St., Charlestown, Mass,

O. We have several teenag-Dr. Dobson ers in our home, and it seems Answers Your like it is getting more and more difficult to make them mind us. What can we do to maintain discipline with our teens?

A. Your only tool of discipline is to manipulate your teenager's environmental circumstances in moments of confrontation. You have the keys to the family automobile and can allow your son or daughter to use it (or be chauffeured in it).

You may grant or withhold privileges, including permission to go to a party. You control the family purse and can choose to share it or loan it or dole it or close it. And you can "ground" your adolescent or deny him the use of the telephone or television for a while

Questions

Now obviously, these are not very influential "motivators," and are at times totally inadequate for the situation at hand. After we have appealed to reason and cooperation and family loyalty, all that remains are relatively weak methods of "punishment." We can only link behavior of our kids with desirable and undesirable consequences and hope the connection will be of sufficient influence to elicit their cooperation.

If that sounds pretty wobbly-legged, let me explain what I am implying: A willful, angry 16-year-old boy or girl can win a confrontation with his own parents today, if worse comes to worst. The law leans ever more in the direction of emancipation of the teenager. He can leave home in many areas and avoid being returned. He can drink and smoke pot and break many other civil laws before he is punished by society. His girlfriend can obtain birth control pills in many states without her parents' knowledge or permission. And if that fails, she can slip into a clinic for an unannounced abortion. Very few "adult" privileges and vices can be denied a teenager who has the passion for independence and a will to fight.

How different was the situation when Billy Joe was raised on the farmin days of old, living perhaps eight or 10 miles by horseback from the home of his nearest contemporary. His dad, Farmer Brown, impressed by his own authority, could "talk sense" to his rebellious boy without the interference of outside pressure. There is no doubt that it was much easier for father and son to come to terms while sitting on a plow at the far end of Forgotten Field.

But today, every spark of adolescent discontent is fanned into a smoldering flame. The grab for the teen dollar has become big business, with enticing magazines, record companies; radio, television and concert entreto cater to each youthful whim. And, of course, masses of high school students congregate idly in the city and patronize those obliging companies. They have become a force to be considered.

Unless teenagers have an inner tug toward cooperation and responsibility, the situation can get nasty very quickly. But where does that voice of restraint originate? It has been my contention that the early years of childhood are vital to the establishment of respect between generations. Without that kind of foundation--without a touch of awe in the child's perception of his parent--then the balance of power and control is definitely shifted toward the younger combatant. I would be doing a disservice to you if I implied otherwise.

Q. My husband and I are divorced. Should this change the way I discipline my children?

A. The principles of good discipline remain the same, regardless of the family setting. The procedures do become somewhat harder for one parent, like yourself, to implement, since you have no one to support you when the children become defiant. You have to play the role of the father and mother, which is not easily done. Nevertheless, children do not make allowances for your handicap. You must demand their respect, or you

The Trinity Lutheran Ladies Aid-LWMS met at the fellowship hall July 6 with 11 members present. The meeting opened with a hymn and all members took part in presenting the topic, "My Grace is Enough for You," taken from "Moments with Our Missionaries" and written by Pastor Dan Reich of Pierre, S.D.

Jeanie Marotz, president, called the business meeting to order and read an article, entitled "Light" taken from "Gifts of the Season." Members responded to roll call with a Bible verse taken from the Book of Job. Secretary and treasurer reports were read and approved. Correspondence was read and committee reports were given. Elsie Hinzman and Irene Mangels will be the visiting committee for July. Jeanie Marotz will send visitor's notes.

The birthday song was sung for Lucille Marten and Karen Tietke. Birthday cards were sent to honorary members Margaret Krause and Meta Kochler, who have birthdays in July.

The meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer and table prayer. Jeanie Marotz was hostess.

Following the meeting, the ladies cleaned the kitchen in the fellowship hall.

Lower Elkhorn NRD offers abandoned well sealing program

68790:

With increasing concern for the quality of our groundwater supply, now is the time to seal abandoned wells.

Groundwater is normally protected by a natural filter of soil, sand and gravel. However, abandoned wells are holes in that filter which can allow contaminants such as sediment, bacteria and chemicals to flow directly into our groundwater supply "Abandoned wells provide a direct conduit for runoff that might contain pesticides, fertilizers, livestock waste and other contaminants to reach our groundwater," said Ken Berney, Lower Elkhorn NRD assistant manager. These contaminants can then move with the natural groundwater flow and may show up in public or private wells used to provide drinking water.

The proper plugging of abandoned wells takes time and money. Therefore, the Lower Elkhorn NRD is once again offering financial assistance through a cost-share program to properly seal abandoned

The NRD board voted in June to continue the Well Sealing Program for Flacal Year 1996, using the same procedure as 1995. The procedures are as follows: 1) Landowners should apply for the program by submitting the NRD-100A form with a completed well sealer's price quote form; 2) The work may not be done until after the NRD has approved the application; 3) After the well is sealed, the landowner will submit the contractors bill to the local NRCS office to be certified to the NRD; 4) Upon receiving certification from NRCS, the Lower Elkhorn NRD will reimburse the well owner 75% of the cost of sealing — up to a limit of $300 for drilled wells or $700 for

The Well Abandonment Reporting form and well drillers notarized affidavit are no longer necessary for the cost share program. However, owners are still required to report the abandonment of a registered well to the Nebraska Department of Water Resources.

This district-wide program was established in February 1992 to assist landowners in properly sealing abandoned wells. Since that time, approximately 536 abandoned wells have been properly sealed through this program, according to Berney.

Landowners within the Lower Elkhorn district with abandoned wells are urged to sign up for this program. Contact your local Natural Resources Conservation Service field office to apply.

Eligible family farmers in Dixon, Thurston and Wayne Counties, who suffered physical losses because of natural disasters, may now apply for Rural Economic and Community Development (RECD) emergency loans, RECD County Supervisor, Mark Moser, said.

Thurston County also became eligible under existing legislation which provides that family farmers in counties bordering on those which have been designated for disaster assistance, may also qualify for such assistance. Applications for assistance will be accepted by RECD until Feb. 20, 1996.

Emergency loan applications will be received through the local RECD County Offices from any applicant who qualifies for a physical loss in the counties named. To qualify for an EM loan, an applicant must be an established family farm operator; provide evidence of cal loss; be unable to obtain suitable credit from a source other than

The damaged or destroyed physical property must be essential to the successful operation of the farm to qualify for a physical loss loan. RECD loans covering actual physical losses may be used to repair or replace equipment, livestock or buildings (including homes), lost through this disaster. Currently the interest rate for these loans is 3.75 percent.

Moser asked that those family farmers needing farm credit as a result of flooding, flash flooding, hail, high winds, excessive rains and tornadoes, and who think they are eligible for FmHA assistance, make application at the RECD County Office, P.O. Box 200. Wayne, between 7 a.m. and 4:45 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Financing aid available for beginning farmers

On July 1, the Rural Economic and Community Development transferred 28 million dollars from Guaranteed Operating funds to the Beginning Farmer Direct Farm Ownership Down Payment Program. Stanley E. Foster, the RECD Acting Director for the state of Nebraska, advises that these funds are available to Nebraska beginning farmers only until September 30, 1995.

According to Foster, "We know this time of year is not the normal time to buy or sell a farm, but this is still a real opportunity for the beginning farmer since funds will be short next fiscal year starting October 1, 1995.

The loan program is designed to help beginning farmers purchase a farm or ranch. In order to receive a loan, the farm purchase price or appraised value cannot be more than

An RECD direct loan will furnish 30 percent of the purchase price or the appraised value of the farm at a 4 percent interest rate.

A commercial loan, RECD guaranteed loan, NIFA loan, or a land contract with the seller of the farm will finance 60 percent. The applicant must make a minimum down payment of ten percent of the purchase price or appraised value of the Nebraska families that are interested in the new Beginning Farmer/Rancher Programs should contact their local RECD office. There are 32 RECD county offices across Nebraska.

"The goal of soil insecticides is to protect the root mass from extensive damage, and some larvae will survive." Extreme environmental conditions may cause insecticides to perform poorly so all continuous corn fields should be scouted for rootworm larvae. "If three or more larvae are found on average per plant, a rescue treatment may be necessary," Jarvi

Any of the insecticides registered for cultivation application can be applied to soil at the base of the plant and cultivated in, said Jarvi. If plants are too large for cultivation, apply by air and water if possible. "Rescue treatments will not guarantee total root protection but should provide a barrier between rootworms and the root mass, allowing developing roots to establish and injured roots to recover,

Sustainable Ag tour set Aug. 17

The 1995 Sustainable Agricul sale, and evaluates the biological, ture Tour on Aug. 17 will focus on happenings at the University of Nebraska Agricultural Research and Development Center (ARDC) headquarters near Ithaca, Neb., and surrounding farms.

The annual tour is sponsored by the NU Center for Sustainable Agricultural Systems (CSAS) and the Nebraska Sustainable Agriculture Society.

The day will begin with an 8 a.m. tour of the new energy-efficient ARDC headquarters building, followed by visits to several sites involved in the Integrated Farm Project at ARDC.

Chuck Francis, CSAS director, noted that tour participants will see the new educational microfarm project for undergraduate interns. Each intern manages a small farm for a season, from planting to product economic and energy efficiency of diverse cropping and crop/animal

Other integrated farm projects to be demonstrated include impacts of grazing crop residues on subsequent crop production, and effects of conventional and ridge tillage on animal gains during winter stalk grazing; effects of different planting dates and hybrid maturities on productivity, economic return and risk of com, soybean and grain sorghum production in the region; windbreak impacts on vegetable production and composting animal wastes.

Local farm visits include a former grain and cattle producer who raises and markets fresh vegetables and fruit, and an on-farm comparison study on raising dryland corn vs. dryland grain sorghum.

Producers, consumers, those in volved in the agricultural industry or government, and anyone interested in the impact of raising food on the environment will want to accompany this year's tour, noted the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist.

To register, send $7 (includes lunch) by Aug. 14 to the CSAS, Room 225 Keim Hall, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, NE 68583 0949, or call 402-472-2056.

Participants are responsible for their own transportation and are encouraged to car pool. Non-registrants may join any or all of the tour, but will be on their own for

Sioux City Doctor Offers Headache Relief

Cervicogenic Headaches, those originating from the cervical spine, and other related abnormalities which can also be responsible for the neckshoulder-arm pain, have been the focus of Sioux City neurosurgeon Dr. Horst G. Blume, M.D.P.C., for many years.

Dr. Blume has developed diagnostic procedures to pinpoint the origin of these headaches. After the diagnostic procedures are done, decisions are made as to what type of non-surgical or surgical procedure would be beneficial for relief.

Thousands of patients have chosen to undergo injections of a long-lasting local anesthetic mixed with Cortisone. The medication is injected into the muscles and the occipital and autonomic nerve structures in the back of the skull.

The majority of these patients get relief for many weeks, months or years, and this type of nerve block can be repeated.

If temporary relief for one or two weeks has been obtained and the socalled one-sided cervicogenic headaches return, Dr. Blume recommends a procedure where a thermoelectrode needle is placed to the nerve structures in the back of the skull.

The tip of this needle generates microwaves, which in turn, are converted to controlled thermal energy through molecular friction. The result — the destruction of tiny nerve structures and their surrounding tissue.

Dr. Blume's own invention has been used on 700 patients with an 80 to 90 percent success rate over 20 years. A similar procedure can be done to the nerve structures of the joints of the neck.

Dr. Blume has taught this procedure all over the world, in Europe, Asia, North and South America and in Canada.

Dr. Blume studied neurology and neurosurgery at the Free University in Berlin, Germany, as well as at the New England Medical Center at Tufts University and the Labey Clinic in Boston. He is a Clinical Associate Professor with the University of South Dakota and is in private practice in Sioux City.

Dr. Horst G. Blume, M.D.

A Chip Is Just A Chip — Not!

Banana chips sound like a healthy alternative to potato chips. However, one ounce of dried banana chips has about 150 calories, nearly 10 grams of fat and usually plenty of sugar.

The fat is usually highly saturated, coming from the coconut oil or other oil in which the chips were deep-fried. Banana chips contain a small amount of potassium and other minerals. This should not discourage you

This should not discourage you from eating dried fruit. The Nebraska Medical Association encourages you to consume dried fruits which have not been deep fried, such as dried apricots, apples or prunes. These are low-fat, nutritious foods.

Dakota County Health Department Services

The Dakota County Health Dept. is located in the West Annex of the Courthouse in Dakota City. It is staffed by two R.N.'s, one L.P.N., and one Clerical. Office hours are Monday thru Friday 8 to 4:30. Phone 402-987-2164. It was established in 1975, is governed by a nine member Health Board that meets quarterly, and is a branch office of the NE Dept. of Health for some activities. The Dept. is a NE licensed Home Health Agency. Jan Brown, R.N. is the Nurse Director.

Statistics for the past fiscal year are recently compiled. There were 882 skilled nurse visits made for Medicare/Medicaid payment; 554 skilled nurse visits on sliding scale payment; 682 aide visits for personal care. 1,761 children—were given immunizations at the three times monthly clinics. 122 children were seen at the monthly Well Child Clinic. 1414 persons were seen in the office for various health care concerns. Referrals for services are taken from any source.

Choose Your Pharmacy Carefully

Contributed by Redler's Pharmacy South Sioux City

There are 125,000 deaths each year in the U.S. caused by people taking their medicine incorrectly taking their medicine incorrectly.

This is the cause of 10% percent of ALL hospital admissions and 25 percent of ALL hospital admissions among the elderly.

The problem adds an estimated $8.5 billion to the nation's annual health bill.

A.D.D. — A Metaphor For The '90s

By William G Munro Clinical Social Worker Associates For Mental Health

So much is being written, discussed, and even diagnosed of this process we call Attention Deficit Disorder. There is considerable disagreement amongst well meaning health care professionals as to whether it even exists.

as to whether it even exists.

We will leave that discussion for another time. What I do wish to ponder is why we are seeing so many children who are being treated and medicated for this disorder.

Is it a metaphor for the 90's? Is it a reflection and maybe even a result of a culture that is so MTV affected that our attention spans have diminished to the point our children are unable to focus on anything for more than a 10 second sound bite?

The images in a three minute music video are so fast and furious that nothing appears on the screen for more than a few moments, at best. There is even a very successful cable program actually called, "Short Attention Span Theater."

Even Sesame Street is a fast paced, well choreographed composite of moments so brief as not to risk boring, even to the youngest child. What ever happened to Mr. Rogers?

The remote control we all depend on so much has become our own means of control over the boredom in our lives. Constantly changing images that leave us numb to our most basic senses.

Can a culture become so programmed to instant gratification that it produces a whole generation of people who cannot tolerate for more than a few moments anything that does not produce a good feeling?

If so, does that set up that generation to the instant gratifications of alcohol, street drugs, Prozac, credit cards, gambling, and Ritalin?

Instant success, instant gratification. No pain, no long term real solutions to complex problems or needs.

I don't claim to know. I only know as a psychotherapist for the past 25 years that I am increasingly uncomfortable with the trends in front of me.

The trend of basing our economics on the credit cards and gambling industries, and the trend of placing more and more of our citizens under the control of more and more drugs, seems so very apparent.

I don't argue with the need. I have seen how effective Ritalin can be. I only am questioning what is behind the need, and where is it taking us?

Stomach Stress Annoying But Not Unusually Serious

Stress or anxiety can cause tension in your stomach just as they can cause a tension headache. Smooth muscles in the lining of your stomach and intestine may suddenly contract, giving you the feeling of a "knot" the same as when a muscle cramp develops in your leg.

The discomfort isn't generally serious. The Nebraska Medical Association encourages you to see your doctor if nausea, vomiting, diarrhea or difficulty swallowing accompany the "knot" in your stomach.

These symptoms could indicate a more serious problem such as an ulcer,

Intestinal Health

Scientists Note Link To Seemingly Unrelated Problems

By Dr. James D. Smith TriState Chiropractic

Few people realize the enormous impact of parasites and diarrheal diseases on human well being. Worldwide, diarrheal diseases (bacterial as well as parasitic) constitute the greatest single cause of morbidity and mortality. Numerous studies have shown parasitic infection incidences ranging up to 99% in undeveloped countries.

In the United States, diarrheal diseases caused by intestinal infections are the third leading cause of morbidity and mortality. The present generation of Americans has grown up with many modern sanitary conveniences and with the assumption that parasitic infections are encountered only in distant parts of the world or by people in impoverished rural areas or from Americans that travel to those places.

Few people who suffer from seemingly unrelated diseases such as food allergies, chronic fatigue, low back pain, joint pain, arthritis or headaches consider the fact that their problem may be related to a parasitic digestive discorder.

Yet, according to Neva, "The United States citizen can acquire ameliasis, giardiasis, pinworms and strongyloides, for example, without so much as a passport application."

The ease and increased frequency of worldwide travel, coupled with the increasing immigration of persons into the United States, is resulting in the significant spread an incidence of parasitic infections. In a study of outpatients at Gastroenterology Clinic in Elmhurst, NY, a 74 percent incidence of parasites was found. A total of 20 percent of this population harbored pathogens.

One survey of public health laboratories has reported that 15.6 percent, of specimens examined contained a parasite.

At Great Smokies Diagnostic Laboratory, almost 20 percent of specimens examined are positive for a parasite. Thus, it seems clear that parasites are prevalent in developed countries as well as in underdeveloped nations in larger numbers that previously suspected.

previously suspected.

The reader can develop a picture of his/her intestinal health by answering the following questions.

HOW IS YOUR INTESTINAL HEALTH:

- 1. Are you 50 years old or older?
- 2. Do you often have a bloated or full feeling in your stomach, especially after eating?
- 3. Do you often have intestinal gas?
- 4. Do you have a "spastic" colon, irritable bowel syndrome, nervous stomach, loose stools or constipation?

- 5. Do you avoid eating certain foods because they make you feel uncomfortable?
  - 6. Are you "allergic" to ary foods?
- 7. Have you had any of the following: asthma, allergies, high thood pressure, heart disease, history of strokes, arthritis, pernicious anemia, any autoimmune disease or yeast infections?
- 8. Have you ever taken an antibiotic for more than a month at a time or have you taken antibiotics more than 4 times in your life?
- 9. Have you ever noticed any dark, tarlike stools, bloodstained stools, bright red rectal bleeding or any signs of intestinal bleeding?
- 10. Have you ever taken oral contraceptives or steroids (cortisone, prednisone, etc.) for extended periods?
- 4.6 "yes" answers suggests significant abnormalities and six or more indicates a likely problem.

Heliotherapy

Studies Show Positive Effects Of The Sun

By Cheryl Stone, California Tan-

Although you have head much about the negative effects of UV, the evidence continues to mount on the health benefits of sunlight and full-spectrum light (including UV).

The California Tan Scientific Research Center and its esteemed medical advisory board have reviewed numerous studies on the positive effects of the sun. Some of these are outlined below.

Skin Cancer Update
Like most cancers, the more we know about skin cancer, the more we see that its causes are varied and complex.

Skin caricer has now been linked to non-UV causes, including diet, alcohol and perhaps most importantly for predicting and preventing the disease genetics.

One of the most surprising findings is that high fat diets play a role. A study by Baylor College of Medicine and the Veterans Medical Center found that lowfat diets protected patients with a history of pre cancerous skin patches from developing new ones.

Also, scientists are coming close to identifying a skin cancer gene as reported by Dr. Ponciano Cruz of the University of Texas at the California Tan Heliotherapy Symposium, a medical conference for the media held in New York City recently.

Vitamin D/Healthy Bones

Sunlight is your most reliable natural source of vitamin D, which plays a crucial role in calcium absorption and prevention of osteoporosis.

Up to fifteen minutes of summer sun on the face, arm and hands three times a week is needed to create the vitamin D necessary for sufficient calcium absorption. A little more sun exposure may be required in the fall, winter and

And, the body can't make vitamin D with natural sunshine in some latitudes above 35-40 degrees North. There are other variables, too.

The darker your skin, the more time you need to spend in the sun to make the me amount of vitamin D as a skinned person. The level of an individual's sun sensitivity and time of day also play a role.

You may not want to wear sunscreen when you are outside for these short periods. A sunscreen of a level SPF 8 or higher has been shown to shut down the skin's ability to make vitamin D.

Exposure to sunlight may have similar effects as exercise, including a 39 nercent increase in the output of blood from the heart, according to a study by Dr. A Falkenbach

And a study performed by Dr. H. Meffert at Humbolt University in Berlin found a 25 percent increase in blood oxygen utilization with exposure to UV

Also, team doctors for the Canadian National Power Lifting Champions, as well as Surf and Ski Teams, report to the California Tan Scientific Research Center that their athletes' ability to strength train is improved following sun lamp sessions.

Psoriasis

Most tanning centers have a number of clients who have been sent by their dermatologists for UV treatments to combat psoriasis, dermatitis and other uncomfortable skin disorders. Many dermatologists have similar UV-light boxes in their offices for this purpose

Even with the many advances in drug therapy for skin disorders, UV light is therapy for skin disorders, UV light is still a highly successful treatment for psoriasis. UV light helps to slow the abnormal skin cell growth that characterizes psoriasis lesions.

Mood/Well-Being

We know that sunlight exposure helps combat full-blown Seasonal Affective Disorder (S.A.D.) as well as ordinary "winter blues." What you may not know, however, is that the good overall feeling you get from the sun isn't just "in your head."

According to a study at Harvard
Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital, endorphins, your own natural "happy factor," are released in your brain in response to UV light.

Manipulation Can Relieve Acute Back

By Dr. Pat Luse TriState Chiropractic

A nasty attack of back pain can scare the strongest individual into thoughts of extensive medical treatment or even back surgery.

Spine specialists, however, know most back pain goes away on its own or with exercise and simple treatments—a fact federal health officials recognized earlier this month.

In its new widely publicized guidelines, the U.S. government's Agency for Health Care Policy and Research recommends low-stress exercise, over-the-counter medication and spinal manipulation for simple back pain over traditional treatment like extended bed rest, prescription painkillers and surgery.

The new guidelines address acute pain or that which has lasted less than three months. The guidelines specifically find that spinal manipulation, the mainstay of chiropractic medicine, is effective in treating acute back pain.

The above is the observation of the Texas Back Institute, largest spine clinic, which added a doctor of chiropractic to its multi-disciplinary team in 1993.

The guidelines reinforced earlier research indicating that chiropractic can be effective in relieving musculoskeletal problems like back pain and can be less costly than other forms of treatment.

One in 20 Americans visits a chiropractor during the course of a year seeking help for back or neck pain and research shows that, in general, patients who were treated for back or neck pain with chiropractic manipulation are more satisfied than those patients using more traditional methods.

Spinal manipulation is a manual treatment applied to the spine that relieves stress in joints and promotes healthy movement, allowing pain and irritation to subside.

Those most likely to benefit from chiropractic care are people with acute back or neck pain. Those with pain extending into an arm or leg...may benefit, but generally take longer to recover. Even patients with chronic spine problems or previous surgery may be helped through appropriate chiropractic management.

In addition, the 1992 Journal of Family Practic recommends finding a chiropractor who graduated from a college accredited by the Council on Chiropractic Education, who uses...the minimum treatment necessary to accomplish your recovery goals.

Your Immune System At Work

Preventing the entry and destroying any infectious microorganisms which enter your body is the mission of your immune system. The immune system is made up of organs, cells and molecules all over the body.

Each part of the system contributes to the growth, development or activation of special white blood cells that play a major role in your bodies' ability to fight infection.

Babies have relatively weak immune systems. As they grow, the immune system matures and becomes more effective at fighting off infections.

Lifestyles can affect the, strength of your immune system.

The Nebraska Medical Association suggests that regular exercise, a healthy diet, avoiding tobacco use and avoiding excessive stress can contribute to your physical and psychological well-being.

Stretch Out For Flexibility

The ability to move your joints through their full range of motion is called flexibility. It varies from person to person and is one of the key elements of fitness, along with endurance and strength.

The way to maintain your flexibility is to stretch. When done the right way and regularly, it feels good. Improper or excessive stretching however, may actually increase the likelihood of an injury. Learn how to stretch correctly.

Slow and gentle stretching is recommended after a light 5 to 10 minute warm-up. For a great routine, the Nebraska Medical Association recommends that you stretch at least three times a week to maintain flexibility.

Stretching should last 10 to 20 minutes with each stretch held at least 10 seconds working up to 30 seconds to maintain flexibility.

To increase flexibility significantly, stretches should be held for one or two minutes

Hearing Loss Victims Require Understanding

"Persons with unalleviated hearing losses frequently suffer adverse psychological side effects and need special understanding from relatives, friends and business associates," according to Jack Jennings of Name of Belltone Hearing Aid Center, 1321 Nebraska Street in Sioux City, the local authorized dealer for Beltone Electronics Corporation. Chicago-based Beltone is world leader in hearing aids and electronic hearing test instruments.

Jennings said people who do not have normal hearing ability often are thought of as irritable, crotchety and difficult individuals. "This is because communicating with a hard-of-hearing person can put both parties under a strain."

"It is hard for people with normal hearing to understand the frightening experience of not being able to hear clearly. We depend upon our ears for practically everything good in life-friendships, recognition and recreation comes to us through the voices of people we know. Deafness cuts a person off from his family, friends and business associates," Jennings said.

To better understand the problems faced by people who have hearing losses the Beltone dealer suggested watching a television program with the sound turned too low to be heard. "You will see people laughing, talking, singing and dancing, and you feel completely left out of things. At first it is an irritating experience, but then it becomes frightening as you realize you have lost contact with the people you arewatching."

Jennings said that while a severe hearing loss is readily apparent to associates of the victim, most hearing losses appear gradually, apparent to associates of the victim, most hearing losses appear gradually, and the victims frequently are not aware that their hearing ability is not normal. There are, however, certain warning signals that can alert a person to the fact he is becoming hard of hearing. These include a feeling that no one speaks loud enough, or that other people play their radios or television sets at volumes too low to be easily heard."

He stressed that while a hearing loss often does provide danger signals, a person can only know what he hears—there is no way of knowing for certain what is not heard. "For that reason," Jennings added, "I urge everyone to have a scientific, electronic hearing test each year. This is the only way of being certain that your ability to hear is not deteriorating."

Mouth Protectors Beneficial To Many

By Douglas Barr, DDS/PC South Sioux City

You've probably seen mouth protectors used in contact sports such as football, hockey and boxing. Coaches and players know that mouth protectors cushion blows that would otherwise cause broken teeth injuries to the lips and face and sometimes even jaw fractures.

You don't have to be a football player however to benefit from wearing a mouth protector. Any adult or child playing recreational sports that poses a risk of injury to the mouth can obtain smile protection from a mouth protector.

A custom-made mouth protector is individually designed and constructed by your dentist. It has an exceptionally good fit, comfort, and usually has less effect on breathing and speech when compared to your over the counter stock mouth protector. That's why the custom made mouth protection is preferred.

The key word is "protection," either the custom made mouth protector or your generic type will offer the extra protection you need.

or your generic type will offer the extra protection you need.

So, give your smile a sporting chance, ask your dentist about mouth guards.

Feeling 'Lousy' Is No Laughing Matter

Feeling "lousy" is no laughing matter. "Lousy" actually means being infested with lice. There are three types of lice that attack humans. The head louse - a grayish insect, is mainly found on the scalp hair of grade school children. It is this pest that causes itchy scalps when school starts.

Treatment for lice is simple. The Nebraska Medical Association

Treatment for lice is simple. The Nebraska Medical Association recommends the use of lindane or other non-prescription shampoos. Apply the shampoo and leave in hair for five minutes. Wash the shampoo completely out and repeat again one week later to make sure all the eggs have been killed.

To eliminate body lice and crab lice use an entire body shampoo with lindane. Clothing must be destroyed or washed in very hot water, since the body lice tolerate heat. This will relieve the problem.

Muscle Therapy Focuses On Soft Tissue

By Lynda Maggart, Lmt Cnmt, and Terri Bradley, RN Lmt Nmt

MUSCLE THERAPY CLINIC is a Health Maintenance Center specializing in soft tissue problems, with the use of Neuromuscular Therapy. Experience the innovative approach to health and well being through soft tissue pain management, diet and developmental exercise. Our philosophy encourages taking personal responsibility for your own health and well being through an enhanced lifestyle.

FACTS ABOUT PAIN: Pain is the principal reason that people visit doctors. Chronic pain disables more people than cancer or heart disease. Pain is what prompts most of us to take with changing frequency. Sometimes when it comes it is overpowering and affects our ability to get on with life. The clinical results of many trained Neuromuscular Therapists suggests that much of this pain can be reduced or eliminated by well trained therapists who are skilled in the treatment of the Soft tissues of the body, muscles, tendons, ligaments and connective tissue.

What is Neuromuscular Therapy? Neuromuscular Therapy is the treatment of soft tissue dysfunction. Neuromuscular Therapy examines the four physiological principles of: ischemia (lack of blood in the muscles), Trigger Points Nerve Entrapment, and or Compression, and Postural Distortion. Neuromuscular Therapy interrupts the stress - tension pain cycle and brings about homeostasis (balance) between the nervous system and the musculoskeletal

NEUROMUSCULAR THERAPISTS are persons highly trained in specialized techniques for the relief of pain and dysfunction of the soft tissues of the

WHO CAN BENEFIT: Everyone from those who have specific problems, i.e. whiplash, carpal tunnel syndrome, migraines, back pain and stress to those with generalized pain and fatigue

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS: general benefits are: warmth. Increased circulation in the areas of pain. Relaxation of the connective tissue. Softening of the nodular mass at the trigger point site. Greater freedom of movement and flexibility. Improved postural patterns. --Improved energy and vitality. Increases sense of well being.

HOW LONG DOES A COMPLETE PROGRAM OF THERAPY TAKE?

The initial evaluation and therapy ession lasts one hour. Each succeeding therapy session lasts approximately 60 min. As a rule, neuromuscular therapy clears the way for rapid results. However, healing is a biological process which takes time. The duration of total therapeutic program depends on: how much damage has been done - how rapidly your body heals - the state of your general health - those stress your general health - those stress factors influencing your life - the length of time the condition has existed - diet attitude and other lifestyle factors.

Heat-Related Illnesses: How To Prevent Them

When the summer temperature increases, your body puts its own temperature regulation system into operation.

Usually your body's cooling system uses the evaporation of sweat, but when it doesn't work, you may have a heatrelated illness, such as heatstroke or

On particularly hot, humid days, you feel uncomfortable because the evaporation of sweat is slowed by the increased moisture in the air. When sweating isn't enough to cool your body, your temperature rises and you may become ill. Common symptoms of heat illness are headache, dizziness, muscle weakness or muscle cramps, nausea and Heat-related illnesses are particularly common on days when the heat index is 90° or higher.

To prevent heat illness, follow these suggestions:

- Stay indoors in air-conditioned areas whenever possible Drink plenty of water before water all day. Drink less tea, coffee and alcoholic beverage

Wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothes

Protect yourself from the sun by wearing a hat or using an umbrella.

Mental Health-Substance Abuse Counseling For All In Need

By Dr. Stanley Reiss

Heartland Counseling Services, Inc., formerly known as Tri-County Guidance Center, is a non-profit community mental health center located at 917 W 21st Street, South Sioux City. It was established in 1977 and serves the residents of Dakota, Dixon, Thurston, Burt and Wayne counties. A satellite office is located at 421 Pearl Street Wayne, Nebraska.

The mission of the outpatient program of Heartland is to make accessible mental health/substance abuse services of the highest quality to any Nebraska citizen who needs them

Services available include psychological evaluation and consultation; psychiatric evaluation and consultation; substance abuse evaluation; individual, couple/marriage, parental, group counseling in both mental health and substance abuse consultation with schools, courts, and social service agencies; and referrals to other agencies. Various group therapies have recently been added to the services available. These include groups for adolescent girls who are at risk, teens who are pregnant, a men's support group, a group for those who have been victims of sexual abuse, as well as play therapy groups for children. There are also education programs for parenting, autobiography writing groups, alcohol education classes for adults and minors in possession. The most recent addition to the programming in the substance abuse area is a partial care program which will run from eight to twelve consecutive weeks for individuals needing intensive treatment.

It is a fundamental belief of Heartland that most people suffering from mental, emotional, and behavioral disorders can most effectively be treated as outpatients. The earlier one begins treatment, the more successful it is likely to be with less disruption in the patient's life and family. We believe that all citizens should have access to those services which are necessary to restore and maintain normal functioning. We believe that no person should be denied services because of their financial situation, but that all persons should be allowed the dignity of paying for their services to the extent they are able.

We believe that mental, emotional and behavioral disorders occur in people of all ages, both sexes, all races and ethnic groups, all religious and non-religious groups, in people who are married and who are single, in people in school and out, people who are employed and unemployed-in short, we believe that mental, emotional and behavioral disorders can occur in any individual given necessary and sufficient circumstances. We further believe that because individuals are infinitely varied, the disorders which they suffer will be infinitely varied and that they thus require professional personnel with a variety of background and training experiences. We believe that, particularly th rural areas where other professional support is likely to be less readily available, professional staff should be the most highly trained and the most experienced obtainable.

Services are provided by a highly trained staff consisting of a consulting psychiatrist clinical psychologist associate psychologist, menta health/substance abuse counselors, a psychiatric nurse, and support staff.

The Heartland Board of Directors is a group of concerned citizens who support the efforts of the Heartland staff to help education the community through education activities, provide endorsement for the center's services. and plan activities that promote positive mental health in the service area.

Male Menopause

It's No Longer Necessary To 'Grin And Bear It'

By Richard L. Vaught, M.D.

For many years it has been a common procedure to place women on supplemental hormones after they go through their menopause or "change of

They feel better, and they function

There are some contra indications to its use, so it does not work for all patients. But certainly it is very helpful for most women when the level of circulating hormones in the blood stream drops below the normal range. The patients become tired and irritable. often have "hot flashes" or and they just do not feel well.

Men also experience a decrease in their hormone level as they get older. It does not affect all men, and not all to the same degree. Many continue to function quite well, as do many women

Some men may have "hot flashes" or "sweats", but usually in such a minor degree that many of the men do not even recognize that they are having them unless they are specifically questioned about them. As treatment for certain diseases, some men undergo complete hormone suppression, either medically or surgically

In these cases, the incidence of hot flashes is quite high, but this is a very small number of patients.

This age-related decrease in male hormones was occasionally referred to as the "Male Menopause" in the 1940's & 50's khis was-the-era of Kreudian and Jungian psychiatry. Male menopause was defined as, "a malaise that allegedly affects men in middle age, and is said to be responsible for periods of emotional upset and uncharactéfistic behavior di was not a very good term since menopause refers to the complete cessation of the menstrual flow, which men never had in the first place

So, for many years we have rather, routinely treated menopausal females with supplemental temale hormones (estrogens), but we have ignored male patients with a drop in their hormone levels. This was basically because not have anything to offer them in the way of effective treatment.

Chemically, hormones are complex organic molecules. When they are ingested as medication; many are simply broken down by the intestine and digested. This makes for very expensive relatively low energy food, but very ineffective medicine

The forms of the testosterone molecule that can be given orally and still be absorbed from the intestine as an active medicine are not really very effective hormones.

. We have had an injectable hormone for a long time. It is in the form of a "depot" injection. That is, it is in an oil base that is injected into the muscles of the buttocks on a once a month schedule, and is slowly absorbed over the next few weeks. Actually, what happened was that right after the injection, the patient would have a very high level of male hormone, but it deteriorated too At the end of the month the patient would hit a very profound "low". This "low" was worse than usual because the injected hormone would suppress the normal production of testosterone and accentuated the fact that the patient was dropping rapidly from a "high"

We actually had patients coming into the office for their "monthly shots" every three weeks because the "low" was so unpleasant that they did not want to go through it,

We now have something to offer men with age-related decrease of the testosterone level, something that works very well.

The interesting thing is that many of the patients do not want it now that it is available. This is related to the fact that for years we have told men that hormone replacement is something that is used for women, but real MEN did not need these things. They should just grit their teeth, or "grin and bear it"

This new form of treatment is a skin patch which is used on a daily basis, and so keeps the hormones at a normal level all the time. In fact, it even reproduces the normal diurnal (day-night) variations of the testosterone level.

The patch is applied to the scrotal skin (the bag that holds the testes) because the skin of the scrotum is much thinner than that of the arm or back Because of the thinness of this skin layer, a very effective molecular form of testosterone can be absorbed in adequate amounts to keep the amount of hormone in the circulating blood stream at an effective level.

- 1. An improvement in mood. The patient is not so grumpy or so difficult to live with (is that something your wife has mentioned to you?), and;
- 2. A definite increase in the energy level. In other words, they just feel

We are approaching the Twenty-First century, and it is time to reevaluate our Nineteenth century ideas and values.

Men do not have to "grin and bear it" as their hormone levels decrease! have a very simple blood test to check on the testosterone level, and a very effective way to treat the problem.

Today we even have effective ways to treat the problems of impotence that

Hospice Care; Is It For You?

Modem hospice care began more than 25 years ago and is an alternative to the clinical environment of the hospital. Many people mistakenly believe that hospice is a place you go to die. It is a system of care.

Hospice is designed for people suffering from diseases which have progressed to the point that there is no hope of recovery and no desire for life prolonging treatment. physician must certify that the person has less than six months to live in order for the person to be qualified to participate in hospice care.

The key people on the hospice team are the physician, registered nurses and home health aids - who provide hands-on care, social workers who offer counseling and support the patient and family and clergy if desired.

If you or a friend or relative have concerns about nearing the end of life and would like to explore hospiee care, the Nebraska Medical Association recommends you speak with the physician about your idea and call the local hospice to get a feel for the system.

Heart Disease — The Number One Killer

Today cardiovascular diseases account for more than two of every five deaths in the United States. This amounts to approximately 930,000 deaths a year. That's why it's important that you and your doctor know as much about the condition of your heart as possible. One of the most important things to remember about heart problems is that the sooner you detect and diagnose them, the easier they are to manage and treat. There are several non-invasive tests that the doctors at Chandra Cardiovascular Consultants, P.C. use to determine the condition of your heart.

RESTING ELECTROCARDIOGRAM

During this procedure, electrodes are attached to the arms, legs and chest. These electrodes detect the electrical impulses as they move through the heart. The electrodes are connected to a machine that converts the electrical impulses into sharp, zig-zag lines on a strip of paper. Because the electrical activity of all human hearts follows certain predictable normal patterns it can show rhythm disturbances, old damage to the heart, and also whether the person is having a heart attack at that moment. It does not, however, provide much information about how the heart behaves with stress or exertion.

STRESS ELECTROCARDIOGRAM OR STRESS TEST (TREADMILL)

This test records the heart's electrical activity while physical stress is placed on it. Stress tests are recommended if there is a history of premature coronary heart. disease in your family, if you have one or more additional risk factors for coronary artery_disease (which are smoking, diabetes mellitus, high blood pressure, or high cholesteroil), or if other diagnostic tests or symptoms indicate that one is needed.

The cardiologists at Chandra Cardiovascular Consultants have you step on to a treadmill and begin to walk while electrodes are hooked up to your arms, legs, and chest, and a blood pressure cuff is placed on one arm. As you walk, the speed increases and the incline becomes more steep, so that the heart must work harder and harder. The electrical activity of your heart is observed on a screen, and recorded, along with the blood pressure, every three minutes. This test can oftentimes tell the doctors whether the patient has blockages in their coronary arteries. It can also be used to advise a patient with heart disease how much physical activity can be tolerated with safety. This test can be valuable tool when used in conjunction with the patient's symptoms, physical examination and other laboratory tests.

ECHOCARDIOGRAM (heart ultrasound)

The echocardiogram gives information about the physical structure and condition of the heart by using sound waves to create a black and white, moving picture of the heart. For this procedure which can take place at Chandra Cardiovascular, the patient lies on their back while a microphone-shaped instrument called a transducer is placed on the chest. This transducer sends sound waves into the chest, where they bounce off the different parts of the heart muscle. The resulting sound wave echoes are then transmitted into an ultrasound machine and converted into a moving image that you see on a screen.

Echocardiograms allow the cardiologists to determine the size of the heart chambers, the thickness and strength of the heart muscle, the quantity of blood pumped, whether fluid is present in the sac surrounding the heart and whether the heart valves are abnormal or leaking.

Another test, utilizing both stress and echocardiogram, is called a stress echo, when this test is performed the transducer is moved across the patient's chest and records the images of the heart. The patient is then put on a treadmill and exercised, a second recording is then taken of the heart. This procedure is currently being performed at St. Lukes Medical Center and is-proving to be a valuable non-invasive tool in diagnosing Abnormalities in the motion of the heart.

The three procedures described above are all completely painless and can yield an enormous amount of information about the heart. If you have symptoms such as shortness of breath of occasional chest pain or pressure, ask your family doctor whether these tests might be useful to you.

Dr. Chandra examines a computer printout while technician Ralph Mertz works with a patient on the treadmill.

Most women experience some changes in their menstrual cycle from time to time. If you experience unusually heavy, long-lasting or irregular bleeding, it is important to consult your doctor.

Ovulation, the release of an egg from one of the ovaries, normally occurs midway through the menstrual cycle (approximately 14 days from the start of the last period). If no fertilization occurs, menstruation begins two weeks later. If there is a disruption to this normal pattern by heavy bleeding or long-lasting or irregular bleeding, the Nebraska - Medical Association recommends you contact your doctor.

Don't Mix Contact Lens Cleaning Solutions

Contact lens cleaning solutions have positive or negative charges. Mixing solutions with different charges can create spots on lenses or cause eye irritations.

The Nebraska Medical Association suggests that if you change one solution in your system, the entire system should be re-evaluated.

Employee Drug Testing: Understanding The Basics

Drug testing in business is on an increase. A survey of Fortune 500 companies shows that over half are doing drug tests. Employee drug testing comes in response to the sharp increase in drug abuse on the job. Drugs are eating away at company profits and causing an erosion of the consumer's confidence in the quality of many Drug abuse is a well-kept secret in the workplace as well as in the home. Estimates are that one in ten employees, from blue collar to company presidents,

Deb Gengler, director of Marian Health Center's Share Occupational Health Program, says it's important ro understand what drug abuse means for the employees as well as the company.

"Drug abusers cause two major problems," says Gengler. "First, they put everyone in danger. Their poor coordination and thinking makes them careless and accident-prone. They have more than three times as many accidents as other employees. Second, they cost everyone money. They cause insurance costs to go up because of accidents and claims. And, these employees are absent and, late more often than others employees, adds *Gengler, "Their slipping productivity means that others may try to do the work that they used to

Anyone can become a drug abuser

cautions Gengler. "Drug abusers often deny having a problem. They may be defensive, moody, or spacey." They may use drugs on or off the job, every day or just on weekends. Drug abusers may ask others to cover up for them. Many drug users also sell drugs, often to other employees, to pay for their habits. You may notice increased absences, excuses and poor performance among other workers. Gengler says people can misuse all kinds of drugs, not just illegal drugs. Over-the counter and prescription drugs can also be abused. Drug abuse causing difficulty at work often involves cocaine, "crack" (smokeable cocaine), marijuana, heroin, Gengler says employers and co workers should recognize the clues that an employee may be abusing drugs or experiencing personal problems that interfere with his or her job. She says you should be concerned if you notice some or all of these traits in an

- violence, extreme anger
- extreme alertness or sleepiness speaking very quickly or slowly
- runny nose, sniffing
- frequent trips to the bathroom frequent colds or bouts with flu distorted sense of abilities
  - carelessness, foolish risk taking mental confusion, memory loss · diarrhea, nausea, vomiting

- · increased accident rate
- frequent absences or lateness false sounding excuses

Types of Tests

Four different testing methods are used today and all of them involve a urine sample. These tests detect the use marijuana, amphetamines, benzodiazepines, barbiturate methadone, propoxyphene, opiate, PCP and cocaine

Tests are commercially produced reasonably priced and their data is easy to preserve. Drug tests have an accuracy rate of 97 to 98 percent.

Test results can be used as evidence in court cases. The results need to be handled carefully. Data regarding the sample needs to be preserved. Employers should check that they are dealing with a lab that is licensed, reputable and maintains appropriate records. The courts recognize the increase in drug abuse and said it will accept company measures that deal with the problem as long as the measures are carried out in a reasonable manner. empanies that have documented why they are testing and what they do when an employee tests positive should be able to use testing legally and effectively. Consistent and nondiscriminatory screening of potential new employees

Gengler says employers should make their company's policy on drugs and alcohol available to all their employees. Productivity and job safety should be of concern to all employees. "You don't "help" a drug abuser by looking the other way," says Gengler. "Accidents related to drug abuse can and do kill.

Gengler says that starting a company drug testing program is not difficult. "It's best to find a company or agency that has experience in drug testing procedures."

Drug screening for companies in-Siouxland is a service provided by the Occupational Health Network of Marian Health Center. Companies like Marian's Occupational Health Network can help companies not only set up their entire drug testing procedures, they will collect the urine samples and send them to an authorized lab for testing. At Marian, employers are given a choice of what company to perform the tests.

"All of this can be performed for a reasonable fee," adds Gengler.
