

County Fair termed 'excellent'

By Eric McCarty
Of the Herald

Wayne County Fair officials estimate that fair attendance averaged 3,000 people per day last week, in the longest fair extravaganza the county has ever witnessed.

This was the first year activities had been scheduled for Wednesday night and the turnout was good according to Mick Topp, fair board president. "We had an excellent crowd here Wednesday for Strawboss and the Ag Appreciation Night," he said.

Fair officials estimate that total attendance was about 2,000 more individuals last week than the 1994 fair thanks to good weather and big acts such as the Reminiscence Horse Hitch Team and the Fox Brothers.

"The Reminiscence Hitch brought in so many senior citizens from other communities," said Louis Lutt, 2-year vice president for the fair board.

Topp praised many community members who helped with the cost of the horse team. "The team was paid for by gifts from The Liedmans, TWJ Feeds and TWJ

City asked to enact new curfew

Al and Norma Ehlers have had enough.

Mr. Ehlers rose at the Wayne City Council Tuesday night and gave testimony to increased vandalism at his private property over the past two months.

Two wagon wheels were taken, one was returned with broken spokes, a cement man was crushed in the front yard, and lighting on the stair steps leading to the residence was shattered to name a few.

The suggested solution—a city-wide midnight curfew for everyone 18 and under.

New voice of Volkswagen from Wayne

Millions of Americans now know Amanda Peterson's voice.

The Wayne native is the new "voice of Volkswagen."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cap Peterson of Wayne, Amanda was selected to provide the voice for a $40 million advertising campaign "on a fluke."

As a production manager for a firm called Soundtrack in Boston, Amanda was asked to read a line for a demo tape the car maker's advertising agency was making.

Recording commercial voiceovers was not necessarily in her career agenda, she said. But, she was happy to help out for the demo tape.

Later her part of the demo tape was selected to be a part of the final presentation and ultimately the commercials that are currently appearing on national television.

She said she didn't even know she had been chosen as the new "voice of Volkswagen" until she returned from her honeymoon this summer.

"It is her voice in each commercial that delivers the final line: 'On the road of life, there are drivers and passengers.'"

The commercials and the fees she will receive from performing in them make a nice wedding present, said the Wayne High graduate.

The Fox Brothers also drew a large crowd as a feature event, Friday evening. "We've been wanting to get the Fox Brothers for a long time," said Dick Sorensen, past president of the fair board. "We were finally able to book them this year."

Sorensen said the board saw the Fox Brothers at the State Fair Convention several years ago. Over 1,200 people represent more than 90 counties at the annual event in which performances are given.

School budget approved; 'tax payers getting bargain'

By Claire Rasmussen
Of the Herald

In his State of the District report at the school board meeting August 8, Dr. Dennis Jensen, Superintendent of the Wayne Schools, stated that Wayne taxpayers are getting a real bargain.

Chief search continues

Sergeant Bob McLean of the Wayne Police Department will assume the temporary post of Police Chief Monday, until a new chief is approved by the City Council.

Mayor Sheryl Lindau is expected to make a recommendation at or before the next council meeting scheduled for August 29.

City Administrator Joe Salitros said finalists from the Wayne area, Cozad and Schuyler, Nebr. are still being considered.

City officials have declined to name the three finalists for the post when requested to do so by the Wayne Herald. Nebraska Attorney General Don Stenberg recently ruled that public bodies should release the names of officials being considered for key posts.

A new Police Chief should be installed sometime in September, according to Salitros.

Retirees bouying economy

By Claire Rasmussen
Of the Herald

Wayne's economic growth may be rooted in an unlikely demographic—senior citizens. As the American population grows older, they are bringing with them billions of dollars in savings, pensions and Social Security. Wayne has been a beneficiary of this national trend.

Though Wayne County's median age of 28.6 is below the statewide average, the 14% of the population under the age of 65 is having a large impact on the area's economy.

ACCORDING TO figures from the Nebraska Department of

"We've really done a lot on a fairly conservative budget," commented Dr. Jensen before reporting on the district's goals.

According to Jensen, the district has always had a good record among the college bound students—last year's seniors ranked in the 87th percentile in the nation.

However, a review by the Department of education in 1990 reported that the non-core students, those not enrolled in the college preparatory classes, had lower than average test scores and had been consistently slipping.

Over the past three years, the district has implemented several programs designed to raise the test scores of non-core students.

Dr. Jensen stated that the non-core student's test scores have been rising over the past three years, as have those of the college prep program.

Dr. Jensen also informed the board about the products of two grants received by the school. The first grant, a High Expectations grant of $5,000 will help the district implement what is known as an A+ model for improving the district.

In addition, the school district received a $91,000 grant from U.S. West communications last year. The grant was used to purchase a central file server connecting all three schools, to install a UNIX server for Internet access to connect all three schools with fiber optic cable, to automate the middle and elementary school libraries and to implement the Industrial Technology program as a replacement for Industrial Arts as well as to implement several other projects.

Dr. Jensen also gave the board an overview of a budget analysis for the school system. According to two year old figures from the Bureau of Education Resources, the Wayne school district ranks 218 out of 271 Nebraska school district in taxes per resident. The district ranks 101 out of 271 in state aid per student and 244 out of 271 in adjusted expenditure per student.

After reviewing the district's progress, the board discussed the

Arson suspected in fire

The investigation of the fire at the El Toro restaurant and lounge on the early morning of July 4 is continuing. The Fire Marshal's office said it is investigating the early morning blaze as an arson.

No arrests have been made at this time and no charges have been filed at this time, according to LaVerle "Curly" McDonald, deputy state fire marshal investigator.

Analysis reported that total transfer payments for the state of Nebraska in 1991 were more than $4.2 billion and accounted for more than 15 percent of the state's total personal income. Social security and medical payments accounted for the majority of the transfer payments.

WAYNE'S AVERAGE per capita transfer payments of $2,079 was slightly below the state average of approximately $2,500. The majority of the recipients are over the age of 65.

Contrary to stereotypes about the senior citizen community, most individuals over the age of 65 are was a major success, said Topp, "thanks to the hard work of Dr. Anne June Rademacher, Dick and Suzie Schmidt, Evan and Fauncil Bennett, Harlin and Carol Brugger, and The Hansens."

The final day of events, Sunday, capped off the attendance with the daily high of about 3,700 people.

Topp, Lutt, Sorensen, and Gate Director John Williams agreed that the success of the fair hinged on volunteer support. Williams was especially thankful to the more than 100 volunteers who took tickets at the busy entrance booth.

Topp expects that the Fair Board will start planning for next year's fair "in about a week. I've gotta get some rest," he said.

Revisionists told 'get a life'

Merlin Wright

To the children of the 90's:
You do not remember World War II when America's cities had "blackouts", or the scrap iron drives when Americans gathered their scrap from woodsheds, barns, and farm yards, contributing to the war effort.

Factories converted the scrap into weapons. I remember.

You do not remember when Uncle Sam drafted men because he needed them to fight the Nazi's and the Japs. Americans died by the thousand at Pearl Harbor. I remember.

You do not remember the posters with Uncle Sam pointing his finger saying, "I WANT YOU!". Young men left their schools, jobs, homes, families and sweethearts to retaliate against German and Jap aggression. I remember.

You do not remember the many Gold Star Mothers...with a gold star in her window...showing her son died in combat. The star was all she had left. I remember.

You do not remember how parents cried upon receipt of a government telegram.... "We regret to inform you that your son....was killed in action.. Or maybe it was a husband, father, brother or sweetheart who would never again sit at the family table. Dead....his flesh, blood and life gone. His Christmas gifts remained unopened. When a soldier died...townspeople wept. It was war. It was hell. It was terrible. But I remember!

You do not remember rationing. Ration stamps were distributed for essentials such as sugar, flour and meat. Troops needed them more. Gas was rationed....teens didn't "cruise" Main, because Uncle Sam needed the fuel.

You do not remember the sobbing widow meeting the train carrying her husband's body, so she could accompany him to the mortuary. I remember.

Don't tell me America was wrong using atomic bombs to end that horrible war.

Some folk are trying to rewrite history. They likely never experienced war, but yet shame Americans for bombing Hiroshima and Nagasaki. As a self-appointed spokesman for every American veteran, I'm telling you revisionists "get a life!"

Go to a cemetery. Offer thanks for Americans who died so you can enjoy the 90's and complain. Consume all the gas and groceries you want....made possible by youths preceding you who had the guts to protect your future.

If you think America was evil for dropping the A-bombs: get a psychiatrist and adjust your miserable life.

Get your hands off the real men....heroic souls never to be forgotten!

I remember!

Sweeping up the fair

Two of the nearly 100 people who attended the clean up of the Wayne County Fair grounds on Monday night are shown sweeping the grandstand area. Volunteers helped clean out livestock barns, pick up trash, put away equipment and various other jobs to get the fairground area back to where it was before the fair. After the clean up, those volunteers were treated to left overs from Friday night's barbecue.

upcoming budget for the 1995-96 school year.

The board had voted to raise the state's budget increase lid by 3.62 percent. According to Dr. Jensen, the lid increase will be a 1.62 percent increase in the overall budget of the school.

As a result of the increase, $35,000 more in property tax dollars will be needed.

As a result of the increase in the budget, Dr. Jensen said, $5,500 in computer supplies were added and faculty salaries were increased by a greater amount.

Among the reasons for the $76,000 increase in this year's budget over last year are the addition of keyboarding and a study skills class in the middle school, a Video Production II class and the changing of the K-8 Literature curriculum.

Dr. Jensen also said he would like to continue to offer Spanish in the elementary school and provide E-mail for all students.

The board voted unanimously to approve the amended $4,804,431 budget. Dr. Sid Hiller was not present for the vote.

Board member Jean Blumenkamp commented, "We're becoming very limited in our ability to move the lid. We need to take a proactive look at some things which might be limiting us. I would hate to have a budget surprise next August."

In other business, Dan Rose of the Rotary Club requested that the school board approve a third foreign exchange student. Although the district traditionally only accepts two students, Rose stated that because Wayne has an outgoing exchange student to Belgium, Andy Witkowski, a Rotary Club in the area must take a student from Belgium.

The board approved the exchange. The third foreign exchange student will be an 18 year old senior boy from Brussels, Belgium.

The facility committee had nothing to report. Its next meeting will be August 17th at 7:30.

Board President Phyllis Spethman reported that the Policy Committee will have a first draft of a new policy handbook by the board's next meeting.

The Board also accepted the resignation of Special Education teacher Rosemary Manges. The board approved the hiring of Lori Hanna as a replacement.

Also approved by the board was a five cent increase in the cost of school lunches. The increase will pay for the replacement of equipment which has been used since 1959 in the elementary school kitchen.

The next meeting of the board will be September 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the high school.

Polts move

As of Aug. 1, Roger Polt of Wayne has assumed new duties at the home office of Arbie Feeds Inc., Marshalltown, Iowa. Polt, who had served as district manager, state supervisor as independent contractor for Arbie Feeds since 1982, has accepted the promotion to transportation/communications specialist.

Roger and Lois and four of their five children, Christopher, Tony, Amanda and Addie will move to 509 Newcastle Road, Marshalltown, on Aug. 15. Their son Jason lives in Minneapolis, Minn.

The Golden Years

By: Connie Dishrow

A French woman's 120th birthday this year drew much attention by news media for two reasons: Jeanne Calment was the oldest living person whose age has been documented, and she had some comments about it. "I see badly, I hear badly...but everything's fine." Also, now that she is famous, "I intend to enjoy it as long as possible." A French researcher who is studying 756 centenarians said: "In general centenarians are people who haven't overdone alcohol or tobacco and who temperamentally don't get too excited about unpleasant experiences." Mild. Calment's father lived to 93, her mother to 86.

In 1907 when Joseph Fuchs was seven, he began violin lessons at New York's Juilliard School. Turning 95 this year, he was still at the school—teaching and performing. At a birthday concert he played a Bach concerto for two violins with Glenn Dicterow, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic. "He still sounds terrific," Dicterow reported. "Both the left hand and the right hand are still working," Fuchs said. "So is the equipment in my head."

Remember When? December 31, 1961 — The Marshall Plan ended after providing $12 billion in aid to European countries to help them rebuild from the devastation of World War II.

Sports programs gear up for busy fall season

By Les Mann
Of the Herald

Sports activities get underway in earnest next week at Wayne High School with the beginning of two-a-day football practices on Monday in preparation for what Coach Lonnie Ehrhardt predicts will be another successful season for the Blue Devils.

Ehrhardt has called a team meeting for Sunday, Aug. 13 at 7 p.m. in the High School Lecture Hall. All boys in grades 9 through 12 who are interested in playing football this fall should attend the meeting whether they have been associated with the team in the past or not, said the coach.

Ehrhardt said he is excited about the returning players and the talented newcomers. The football season opens with the first game at home against Schulyer on Sept. 1.

The football team will be practicing from 7 to 9 a.m. and 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday next week before shifting to one a day practices Aug. 21 to 24. Those will be from 4 to 6 p.m. Ehrhardt will take his team into a pop scrimmage on the Aug. 25.

Other sports programs at the high school have also announced late summer start-up. The Girl's Golf Team will begin practicing Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. The team will meet at the Country Club.

The Cross Country teams will start workouts Monday as well. Those sessions will go from 8 to 10 a.m. Team members will meet in the high school parking lot southwest of the school. Those who wish to be on the cross country team must have their physical reports and medical consent forms turned in to Marlene Uhing, athletic director before they may practice. Those with questions may contact Coach Rocky Ruhl at 375-1565.

Wayne Middle School cross country coach Terry Meyer has also announced the start-up of practice for 7th and 8th Grade boys and girls. Those interested in participating should report to the field west to the high school at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 14 and be ready to run, he said. The tentative meet schedule calls for competition for the middle school runners in Norfolk, Omaha, Yankton and Wayne. Those wishing further information may contact Meyer at 375-4779 (days) or 375-1668 (evenings).

The Wayne High School Volleyball team kicks off its season by participating in the Beemer Invitational tournament, Aug. 31 through Sept. 2 in Beemer.

Justin Dutcher singles in the winning run in last night's game against Dannebrog-Cairo-Bolis. Wakefield won the game 3-2.

Wakefield wins; heads to region

By Eric McCarty
Of the Herald

Shortstop Justin Dutcher knocked the Wakefield Juniors into a state title and a chance to travel to the region tournament in Louisiana with his game winning single last night.

With two outs and runners on second and third in the bottom of the eighth, Dutcher lined a shot down the third base line to propel the team past Dannebrog-Cairo-Bolis, 3-2.

Justin Mackling, third baseman, trotted home the winning run after reaching third on a single, balk, and fielder's choice.

Dutcher was one for three on the day, while Mackling went one for two, was hit by two pitches, and scored two runs.

Pitcher Wes Blecke recorded nine strikeouts and only suffered two hits in the ballgame.

THE TEAM WILL travel to Columbus this weekend to face the winner of a Papillion vs. Elkhorn matchup. The Wakefield game is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday night.

Meet the Wildcats

The 1995 Wayne State College football team will be introduced on Saturday, Aug. 12 at 4:30 p.m. in Memorial Stadium. The public is invited to "Meet the Wildcats" where they will have the opportunity to get autographs and take pictures with the Wayne State players and coaches. The Wildcats will begin two weeks of three-a-day practices on Aug. 14. The season opener is scheduled for Sept. 2 at Nebraska-Omaha.

"We're naturally the underdogs," Head Coach Paul Eaton said. "But if we happen to play well, we think we can surprise them."

The winner of Saturday's matchup will travel to Gonzales, Louisiana for the region tournament.

"I'm very proud of our team," said Eaton. "They've been exemplary on and off the field."

Wakefield has a record of 38-6 on the year. Eaton wishes to thank assistant coaches Doug Beacom and Mike Mogus for their hard work during the year.

Indian missionary enjoys Wayne visit

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

For most people, seeing a tiger, elephant or panther would mean a trip to the zoo. But for Father Albano d' Mello these and other wild animals can be seen on a regular basis from his home.

Home for Fr. Albano is in the diocese of Diphu in northeastern India where he has served as a Salesian missionary for 21 years.

Fr. Albano, who has been a priest since 1967 is from Goa, India, in the southwest part of country. However, he has spent a great deal of his priesthood in Assam, a state in the northeastern part of India.

"ORIGINALLY, THE whole area was one state, Assam. Now it has been broken into seven states and the Catholic church has nine dioceses there," said Fr. Albano.

The government does not officially support any religion. However, 85 percent of the people in the government are Hindus.

"In recent years the country has been opened to tourists as groups. For the most part, missionaries are welcome and the people in the tribal villages are very open to Christianity," said Fr. Albano.

MOST OF the area Fr. Albano works in consists of small farming villages. There is a great deal of jungle area and the farmers practice jum cultivation, which consists of cultivating the slopes by cutting down the vegetation, allowing it to dry, burning it off and then cultivating the ground.

"The soil in this area is very good but jum cultivation wears it out quickly. People move about looking for more land after the land is no longer suitable for farming. The government is working with the people to put in terraces to help prevent the soil from washing away," said Fr. Albano.

Farming in this part of India is done on a very small scale compared to American standards. Farmers raise rice, tapioca, maize, sweet potatoes, hogs, poultry and cattle.

"IT TAKES a lot of work to raise crops in India. Most of the farming is done by hand on small farms. Because the soil is rich, lots of weeding is necessary to raise a crop. Farmers must also guard their crops, especially rice, from elephants and monkeys who come in and destroy crops," said Fr. Albano.

When Fr. Albano came to this region 21 years ago, there were no roads. It took him up to 11 hours of walking to reach villages in his area. Since that time the government has worked to build roads and make travel easier. "The trip that took 11 hours when I first got here now takes approximately five hours by jeep. The roads take time to settle and it is very difficult to maintain vehicles in this area. Jeeps are the only vehicles capable of going on the roads," he said.

The work of the missionaries consists mainly of providing medical care and education to the tribal people. Missionaries carry first aid supplies to the villages as well as providing a dispensary run by Catholic sisters as part of the parish complex in the larger villages.

DISEASES SUCH as malaria, dysentery, cholera and typhoid are common. "The government it trying to help by providing primary health care centers but it is difficult to reach the people of the jungle who are moving about looking for land," said Fr. Albano.

The missionaries also provide schools for children from kindergarten through high school. They bring children from the villages to the school and care for them in hostels, one for the boys and one for the girls.

"Because we are taking workers away from the farms when we bring the children to the school, we try to provide as much as we can for the children so we don't put a burden on the families. In addition to their schooling, the children are also responsible for raising some of the food needed to feed them," he said.

"AS MORE children are being educated, the villages are turning away from a barter economy and beginning to use money. There is a weekly market place where people come to buy and sell goods. Many of the young people have taken jobs with the government to do such things as build roads. Now these people have money and are able to buy things," said Fr. Albano.

"Because the area is so far away from modern communities, the people here depend on each other and help each other," said Fr. Albano.

Fr. Albano is spending two months in the United States on this, his first trip here. He has spent the time on missionary appeals in the Omaha archdiocese, speaking in several churches in Omaha, Snyder, Heun and Wayne. From here he will go to Emerson and Pender and then back to New Rochelle, N. Y. before returning to India Aug. 31.

Father Albano d' Mello, a Salesian missionary from northern India, attended the Wayne County Fair with Allen O'Donnell. Fr. Albano is in the United States for two months, making appeals for donations to his missionary work in India.

For Wayne Police Chief Family time is anticipated retirement benefit

By Eric McCarty
Of the Herald

The 30-year career of Wayne Police Chief Vern Fairchild will terminate at midnight Sunday.

He hopes to be sleeping at that time.

The 60-year-old has no set plans for early retirement other than fishing, travel and quality time with his family. The latter is one change Fairchild looks forward to.

One of the worst parts of police business, Fairchild explains is "working weekends and the long hours. It really hurts family time."

His family includes a wife and two sons in their 30's. "Unfortunately, they are both with law enforcement," Fairchild says, laughing.

WHEN ASKED if there is anything he knows now, that he wishes he had known when he began the job, Fairchild replied, "Everything. Quite honestly, I didn't know a darn thing about being a chief when I started."

Fairchild took the position on August 1, 1965, after only six months as police chief at Louisville. He served six years as a state trooper before that.

Louisville was a town of about 1,500 at that time, and population was one of the factors in Fairchild's decision to come to Wayne. "It sounded like a nice size community to come to," he said. "I wanted something a little bigger."

WHEN FAIRCHILD CAME to Wayne as Police Chief, the population was nearly the same as it is today. Crime, however, has been on the rise.

The police force has doubled from four to eight full-time officers in the 30 years, but Fairchild says the growth in offenses is not a large one comparatively.

"With the increase in violence and crime through the nation, I think we've been able to keep a good lid on things over the years," he said.

Fairchild has not seen a change in the types of criminal activity. "We still have thefts, vandalism, drinking, and fighting, but we probably experience more than we did then."

LAW ENFORCEMENT has slowly become modernized with computer technology over the years, but the results of modernization are not all good, Fairchild explains.

"The downside is that the public themselves don't want to be as involved as they did 30 years ago," he said. "If they report stuff, they want to be anonymous."

The police, as a result, have been asked to take an increasingly involved role in civil disputes since 1965. "If [citizens] have a problem with their neighbor, they call the police instead of talking to the neighbor themselves. That's not police business," Fairchild comments.

THE GOOD AND THE BAD of being a police chief go hand in hand, according to Vern Fairchild will retire Sunday after 30 years on the Wayne Police force. He plans to travel, fish and spend time with his family. Fairchild says law enforcement has become modernized over the years but the public still needs to be involved in keeping the community safe.

Fairchild.

"The best part is the diversity. People are really fun. And we get to see both sides of them."

"The worst part is in relation to the best," he explains. "It's the routine. You're doing the same thing day in and day out."

Fairchild says that a steady turnover in staff is a constant obstacle a chief must overcome.

"The toughest problem I've had to contend with is keeping enough manpower. Training people is a never-ending problem."

Fairchild has but one bit of advice for the new police chief to be hired soon.

"Have faith in the people you work for. There is a great staff here."

It's now reunion time

It's family reunion time, and I am about "reunited" out! For one thing, I can hardly talk; that's a sure clue.

Growing up, I knew my maternal grandmother had been a Tiekens, and that made us related to the Tiekens who lived south of Waco. That was Uncle Herman's family; and Uncle Henry and his children lived in San Dimas, Calif. We visited there once when I was a kid.

There is one of that generation left, great-aunt Susie, born on the Fourth of July in 1900. Her name is Matilda, but she has always been Susie. I knew, too, that her aunt and uncle had raised her. Either I had never heard why, or I had forgotten.

Anyway, a shirt-tail cousin named Jody, who lives in Seattle, decided last year at her grandmother's funeral that there should be a Tiekens reunion. Since she's the special events coordinator for the Seattle Zoo, she's used to planning special events. And since she's young and energetic, with an outgoing personality, she pulled it off, too.

Impacted Cerumen and Hearing Loss

Accumulated cerumen - ear wax - is a common cause of hearing loss. Cerumen forms a plug that partially or completely blocks the ear canal. Sound waves do not readily reach the ear drum. Water from swimming or bathing can seep behind the plug and add to the problem.

According to the experts, removal of impacted cerumen should be attempted only by a trained and experienced health professional.

However, preventing cerumen impact often can be accomplished at home. Cerumen-softening agents can be dropped into the ear. These include glycerin, olive oil, mineral oil, propylene glycol, diluted hydrogen peroxide, and carbamide peroxide. The ear canal may be irrigated for a few days with warm water, salt water, or a commercial preparation. However, if pain is present, a physician first should be contacted. Never use a cotton-tipped swab to "clean" the ear canal.

Teen volunteers impact on society

Every year as we prepare for 4-H contests, camps and county fair, I am impressed by the parents and youth who volunteer their time to make valuable programs possible. Some people wonder "out loud" about how do we get so many good volunteers even the teens. Well, I found a bit of national research information that might explain what is going on here in Northeast-Nbraska with our youth.

The report on teen volunteering indicates about three-fifths of all teenagers ages 12-17 help others through volunteerism. The average teen spent three hours a week in formal and informal volunteering. These findings are part of a national survey conducted by the Independent Sector, a nonprofit coalition of more than 800 corporations, foundations and voluntary organizations.

The study also examined characteristics of active teen volunteers in an effort to find out how teens become motivated to volunteer and why they continue to do so.

Fort-four percent of teen volunteers started before the age of 11; nearly a third before age 10. Youth groups such as 4-H and student government provided their volunteer opportunities. Teens also saw their parents as volunteer role models.

Teens involved in church or synagogue also were more likely to volunteer, as much teen volunteering took place within the scope of organized religious activities. The study also found that youth volunteers in religious groups most often volunteer for other causes and organizations. Sixty-seven percent of teen volunteers were members of a religious institution, compared with

Cooperative Extension
Lynda Cruickshank
Wayne County

42 percent who weren't church or synagogue members.

Teen volunteers rated as "most important" the need to help others, feeling compassion toward people in need, and a desire to do something for a personally important cause. They rated material values or personal gains derived from volunteering as "less important." The study also found that these values were reflected in career interests. Many were interested in working with the elderly or handicapped and in doing religious work, social work or nursing. Among careers less frequently mentioned were computing, media, business and law.

Typically, teen volunteers had a high level of personal activity. Evidence suggests that this "activity syndrome" characterizes volunteers throughout their life spans, from childhood to age 60 and beyond. So, as you head out to the fairgrounds this month, let your "activity syndrome" shine. You never know when you're going to be a positive role model for someone young and impressionable.

SWIMMER'S EAR

Swimmer's ear, or external otitis, is a common ear problem associated with prolonged exposure of the ear canal to moisture. Water makes the ear more susceptible to infection because the warm, moist area is a good environment for microbial growth. Attempts to clear the ear of water with foreign objects may cause tiny cuts in the skin making the chance of infection more likely. Symptoms of itching appear first followed by a feeling of wetness and discomfort in the ear canal within 2-24 hours. A cream or yellow colored discharge may appear and hearing loss may occur temporarily if the ear canal is blocked by swelling. Inflammation causes a sharp pain which may increase in intensity during chewing or when external pressure is applied. The infection could spread to the middle ear and eventually lead to permanent hearing loss, so prompt treatment is advised. With occurrence of mild symptoms, a solution of 2% acetic acid should be applied after contact with moisture during bathing or swimming. Products are also available over-the-counter for the treatment of swimmer's ear. Ask your pharmacist for assistance.

How to discipline adopted children

Q. We have an adopted child who came to us when he was 2 years old. He was so abused during those first couple of years that my husband and I cannot let ourselves punish him, even when he deserves it. We also feel we don't have the right to discipline him, since we are not his real parents. Are we doing right?

A. I'm afraid you are making a mistake commonly committed by the parents of adopted children. They pity their youngsters too much to control them. They feel that life has already been too harsh with the little ones, and they must not make things worse by disciplining them.

These guilt-laden attitudes can lead to unfortunate consequences. Transplanted children have the same needs for guidance and discipline as those remaining with their biological parents. One of the surest ways to make a child feel insecure is to treat him as though he is different—unusual—brittle. If the parents view him as an unfortunate waif to be shielded, he will see himself that way, too.

Parents of sick and deformed children are also likely to find discipline harder to implement. A child with a withered arm or some non-fatal illness can become a little terror, simply because the usual behavioral boundaries are not established by his parents. It must be remembered that the need to be controlled and governed is almost universal in childhood; this need is not eliminated by other problems and difficulties in life. In some cases, the desire for boundaries is maximized by other troubles, for it is through loving control that parents express personal worth to a child.

Q. What about good-natured teasing and joking within the family? Is it harmful to laugh and kid each other?

A. The most healthy families are those that can laugh together, and I certainly don't think our egos should be so fragile that we all have to walk on cracked eggs around each other.

However, even innocent humor can be painful when one child is always the object of jokes. When one of your children has an embarrassing feature, such as bed-wetting or thumb-sucking or stuttering or a striking physical flaw, the other members of the family should be encouraged to tread softly on the exposed nerves of that child.

Also, one should not ridicule a child for his size, whether he is a small boy or a large girl. There is nothing funny about that subject. It is a guiding principle that should help: It is wise not to tease a child about the features he is also defending outside the home. And when he asks for any joke to end, his wishes should be honored.

Q. Should parents ever force a child to eat?

A. No. I am no expert on nutrition, but I believe a normal child's appetite is governed by the amount of food he needs. He will get hungry when he needs nourishment.

However, I do believe the parent should carefully guard that appetite, making sure he satisfies it with the foods his body requires. A bit of sugar in the afternoon can make him disinterested in his dinner. Or he may sit down at the table and fill his stomach with juice or one item on his plate.

Thus, it may be necessary to give him one kind of food at a time, beginning with iron-rich meat and other proteins, followed by less important items.

Once he is satisfied, I can see no value in forcing him to continue eating. Incidentally, the parent should know that a child's appetite often drops off rapidly between 2 and 3 years of age. This occurs because his time of maximum growth rate has subsided, and his need for food is reduced.

Political pushing is 'fluid' for '95 Farm Bill effort

By Roy Frederick
IANR Public Policy Specialist

Fluid. That word may describe as well as any the political posturing on the 1995 farm bill as Congress begins its traditional summer recess. It will not be just a matter of coming back in September to put the finishing touches on the bill. Some really big decisions lie ahead.

The Freedom to Farm Act, is a proposal that would systematically reduce commodity supports over the next seven years. Payments each year from 1996 through 2002 would be based on a farm's production history, not on current production or prices. Traditional crop bases, acreage reductions, target prices and nonrecourse loans would be abandoned.

Although not indicated at the time, I expected that Freedom to Farm would be buried politically in no time at all. Changes proposed from the current program were too large, moreover, words like "decoupling" and "welfare" could be hung on the proposal. But early indications are that I may have been wrong. It looks like the proposal will receive a good airing during the recess and, indeed, may be a viable option in September.

The major congressional attraction of Freedom to Farm is that it clearly caps expenditures on commodity programs. As it turns out, this could be the middle ground in Congress. Some will argue that spending should be cut more rapidly, while others make the case for keeping much of the current program.

Somewhat surprisingly, agricultural groups have not uniformly condemned the proposal, perhaps because some payments under Freedom to Farm might be higher than with traditional deficiency payments during the next year or two. Low stocks and relatively high prices for wheat and feed grains seem to assure this.

In fairness, cotton and rice interests—for different reasons—have objected to the proposal. Cotton producers are worried that many more acres of cotton might be planted, thereby sabotaging recent high prices. The rice industry bluntly says that its survival will be at stake if payments are phased out.

The reaction from producers of crops grown in the South perhaps is a factor in Sen. Thad Cochran's, R-Miss., expected introduction of a bill that apparently would keep the current program structure. Cochran is a key player because he chairs the subcommittee that originates commodity program proposals in the Senate's Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee. However, it's an open question of whether or not Cochran's proposal would survive if opposed by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chair of the full committee. Moreover, there's no assurance that a proposal similar to Cochran's will be introduced and move on a parallel path in the House.

At some point during the next few weeks, the Clinton administration's views will become increasingly important. After all, without a presidential signature, there'll be no new law. (This assumes that a veto override attempt would not be successful.) It's fair to say that even the premise on which the farm bill is being debated—a mandatory 17 percent cut in commodity program spending over the next seven years—would be altered if the president vetoes the giant budget reconciliation bill later this year. All indications at present are that such a veto is not only possible, but probable.

Interrupted momentarily by an all-too-brief rainstorm, the draft horse show at the Wayne County Fair on Saturday was termed a success nonetheless. Taking top honors in both Best Wagon and Best Decorated Team was the entry presented by Al Preston of Rosalie. Shown presenting the Prestons with their hardware are Howard McLain of Old Homestead Realty, a trophy sponsor, and Gordon Davis, superintendent of the show. Other trophy sponsors were Ed Leicy Harness Shop in Carroll and Jim and Sandra Atkins of Carroll.

Fun at the Fair

AUGUST 10, 1995

WAYNE, NE 68787

Round the clock patrol keeps grounds secure

By Claire Rasmussen
Of the Herald

While most people were having fun at the fair, 21 young people were in charge of making sure the fun was safe.

For the past three years, members of the Junior Civil Air Patrol in Norfolk have been hired by the fair board to provide security at the Wayne County Fair. The Cadets, ranging in age from 13 to college age, stay on duty 24 hours a day to keep the fairgrounds patrolled.

The patrol is charged with checking on the livestock at night, stopping fence jumpers and breaking up fights.

"The biggest thing we do is keep the kids off of the machinery," said Michael Jorgensen of Norfolk.

"We have caught three or four fence jumpers," commented Paula Hekrdle of Madison.

If a serious situation arises, however, the Junior Cadets are instructed to radio police to handle the situation.

"We can't stop, restrain or touch anyone. Primarily we're there to watch and keep kids in line. If something happens, we call for back-up and let the police handle it. We operate on the buddy system, we work together and with the local law enforcement," said Sharon Sanford, commander of the unit.

"We really enjoy working at this fair," commented Sanford, "the people here are great."

Although the Wayne fair is the only fair the patrol handles, they also are active in area parades, crowd control, emergency services and disaster relief. Recently, the patrol helped with flood control in Osmond.

"We regularly work with the State patrol, the Norfolk Police Department, we do lots of things, there's always someone needing help," said Sanford.

The group meets every Thursday night at the Air Force Auxiliary in Norfolk. The purpose of the group is to learn self-discipline, respect and to make themselves into better people.

If Cadets advance through the program far enough they are offered a position in the International Air Cadet Exchange. In the program, the youths may fly with the Air Force to another country and stay there for several weeks.

The Civil Air Patrol unit in Norfolk, called the Northeast Nebraska Composite Squadron, has been in existence since December of 1941.

Sharon Sanford, at left, heads up the Junior Civil Air Patrol Cadets who were responsible for patrolling the Wayne County Fairgrounds during this year's fair. The group is responsible for stopping fence jumpers, keeping people off machinery and monitoring the grounds.
