120TH YEAR — NO. 7

City tries to define a family

By Tom Mullen
Of The Herald

The City of Wayne Planning Commission will conduct a public hearing next month, seeking public input on their proposed new definition of "family."

The change is precipitated by the debacle earlier this Spring, when the City Council upheld a Commission decision which, in effect, evicted a group of coeds from a Wayne residence.

Duane Schroeder, attorney for the landlord, argued at that time, that the women occupying the house were, "family," and therefore not in violation of city zoning ordinance.

Neighbors of the women had pursued the action, charging the coeds with late night parties.

The current wording of the city code defines family as, "One or more persons, related or unrelated, living together as a single housekeeping unit with or without domestic servants, caregivers, foster children and supervisory personnel in a group living arrangement. The term 'family' shall not include occupancy of a residence by persons living in fraternities, sororities, clubs or transient or permanent commercial residential facilities, catering to the general public. Also excluded are nursing and convalescent homes."

The proposed new wording includes, "It shall be presumptive evidence that four (4) or more persons living in a single dwelling unit who are not related by blood, marriage or legal adoption do not constitute the functional equivalent of a traditional family."

The proposal includes a list of criteria to be used to determine what the functional equivalent of a traditional family is.

"Occupants must share the entire dwelling unit and live and cook together as a single housekeeping unit."

The proposal indicates such groups must be permanent and stable, and lists criteria, excerpted here.

"The presence of minor dependent children regularly residing in the household who are enrolled in local school."

"The household has been living together as a unit for a year or more whether in the current dwelling unit or other dwelling units."

The hearing will be in the Council Chambers at 306 Pearl Street on Dec. 4 at 7:45 p.m.

Speedier process predicted in narrowing school options

By Eric McCarty
Of The Herald

District 17 Board of Education Member and Facilities Committee Chair Marion Arneson told the board Monday night that he expects the committee to have a recommendation on a Middle School proposal before the calendar year's end.

Arneson said that since the committee narrowed their considerations at the last meeting on Oct. 26, the process should speed up.

At that meeting the committee voted to eliminate the renovation of the current middle school from the considerations.

"That vote needed to take place. I'm glad it did," said Arneson.

Arneson said that the next committee meeting, scheduled for Nov. 21, will be more structured. "It will last no more than two hours. We will have an agenda, and we will be focused," Arneson told the board.

The committee chair said that though audience participation was needed, it would have to be more limited for the committee to do its job.

The facilities committee will review three options at the Nov. 21 meeting, which Arneson called "Options A, B and a derivative of A."

Those include Option A, a new middle school to be constructed on the high school's property; Option B, constructing a new high school and renovating the current high school to be the middle school; and a derivative of A, constructing a minimum requirement, minimum cost middle school facility.

In other business, the board decided to hold the final reading of a firearm policy until their December meeting.

More time was needed to clarify whether a clause stating a specified punishment was to be included in the policy, or whether that would be an administrative regulation.

The next regularly scheduled School Board meeting will be Monday, Dec. 11.

Police arrest marijuana advocate on drug charge

Chris Parachini, a Wayne State student was arrested Wednesday evening as a result of a search warrant executed by the Nebraska State Patrol, the Wayne County Sheriff's Department and the Wayne Police Department.

Parachini is currently being held on charges of Possession with Intent to Deliver Marijuana and Possession with Intent to Deliver LSD. Formal charges are pending review of reports according to Wayne County Attorney Mike Pieper.

Both marijuana and LSD were seized as a result of warrant said Pieper. Also confiscated were two shotguns, a rifle, a .22 caliber handgun and a 9mm handgun.

Parachini is the president of the Wayne State National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) and has been a vocal advocate in the community for the legalization of marijuana use.

The investigation in the case is continuing said Pieper.

Bond issue defeated

The Wakefield school bond issue was defeated Tuesday night with 56 percent of the registered voters at the polls.

Only 37 percent of the poll-goers cast ballots for the $3.4 million construction project. Four hundred and forty six voters defeated the bond.

The construction project would have added administrative room, a weight room, girl's locker room, an additional gymnasium and secondary and elementary classrooms.

Fiscally, the bond would have added 19 cents per $100 of assessed property valuation to the present tax rate.

That translates into $3.3 million for the entire project.

School officials say further attempts at school improvements may be made in the future.

Federal workers still on the job in Wayne area

By Clara Osten
Of The Herald

As the president and Congress debate the federal budget, employees of certain governmental agencies have been put on furlough.

In Wayne, employees with the Department of Agriculture have not been affected at the present time.

"The Agricultural Appropriations Bill was passed before the current budget impasse began," said Randy Gunn of the USDA Natural Resources and Conservation Service.

"However, if the federal debt ceiling is not raised, our agencies may be affected and if this issue is not resolved in the near future, things may be different for our offices," Gunn said.

DR. BRUCE Neubauer, Associate Professor of Political Science and Public Administration at Wayne State College does not feel the issue will be resolved quickly.

"This situation involves the Republicans who want to temporarily increase the debt limit to refinance some of the nation's debt. However, they (Republicans) have attacked riders to the bill which the President finds politically offensive," Neubauer said.

"While this is not the first time something like this has happened, it is the first time there has been the question of default on some of the nation's debt. The question is whether we are going to able refinance securities that are coming due," he said.

AT THE present time, employees with the Social Security Administration, Internal Revenue Service, Core of Engineers and those employed with the national parks system have been put on furlough.

"It is not just these employees who are being affected by the impasse. The citizens who need services provided by these agencies are being told no one is available to help them at the present time. People will begin asking 'are we getting the services we have paid for,'" Neubauer said.

"The furlough isn't helping anything. Generally, it is not the employees who are at fault. Usually, the problem is that we have denied

Eggs aren't evil after all

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Medical opinion on eggs is starting to turn sunny side up.

The latest evidence is a study showing that even people with moderately high cholesterol may be able to eat two a day without harm — as long as they lay off the bacon.

Cholesterol in the bloodstream is bad for the heart. And since eggs have lots of cholesterol, experts have long assumed they must be bad, too. However, the reality is turning out to be more complicated.

It now appears that the cholesterol that people eat has little impact on the cholesterol in their bloodstreams. Eating an egg raises cholesterol only slightly, if at all, for most people.

Not all agree, but many experts are coming to believe that

Council nixes idea of teen curfew

By Eric McCarty
Of The Herald

The Wayne City Council scratched the idea of a teenage curfew after a short discussion Tuesday night.

With three members absent from the meeting, Member Doug Sturm was the only representative who stood in favor of the midnight to five a.m. prospective curfew. Members Verdell Lutt, Jane O'Leary and Mel Utecht were not present.

Police Chief Lance Webster testified in favor of the possible legislation, though his words were on behalf of his staff.

"My staff says it would be a very proactive approach, and since I am a new member to the community I would have to go with that," said Webster.

He later testified that he has not seen anything in his five weeks in Wayne that suggests a curfew would be needed. "I can't identify a specific problem that would necessitate a curfew," Webster told the

Webster said he would recommend the curfew only if it were enforced "fairly, judiciously and with a hell of a lot of common sense."

Members Patty Wieland and Ralph Barclay were the most adamant among those in opposition to the curfew. Barclay expressed that instituting a curfew would create what he called a "police state".

Sturm reasoned that the system would be beneficial to parents. "There's all sorts of times when people need help parenting," He said that the curfew would be one more of several institutions which aid in parenting. "There's the schools, there's the church, and here's the city."

Barclay moved that the Council cease to pursue the curfew. The vote was four to one.

In other business, the Council acted to provide the Boyle Company with $510,000 in financial bonds labeled tax increment financing.

Just balance it

Who should we believe in the current federal budget impasse between the legislative and executive branches of our government? On one hand we have a Republican Congressional leadership claiming their plan will put the nation on the road to fiscal solvency within seven years.

On the other hand we have the President telling us the GOP budget plan will ruin the country and millions of Social Security and Medicare recipients in the process.

We tend to be a little skeptical of both sides in this debate.

Congressional leaders of both parties have been trying to convince us for fifty years that they are working hard to balance the federal budget yet they keep approving pet projects and expenditures that mortgage the future for our children's children's children.

The president, when he was known to us as "Slick Willy" campaigned on a promise of bringing us a balanced budget in five years. Now, three years into his presidency, he's saying he still wants a balanced budget, but he can't accept the GOP seven year plan. He thinks it should be nine, or ten or twelve. And to win his argument with Congress he has used the despicable tactic of trying to scare the elderly by telling them their Medicare program will be ruined—a blatant falsehood.

The furlough of nonessential government workers has served to focus national attention on the debate, which is good. It should cause us all to demand an end to the political gamesmanship.

We hope the focus will cause the American public to stand, borrow a phrase from the Clinton campaign and shout with one voice:

"Balance the budget, stupid."

A solution to Nebraska's property tax dilemma

Urban and rural Nebraskans have been complaining for years that they need property tax relief. People who move to our state are always surprised — perhaps "shocked" is a better word — to learn how high our property taxes are, compared to where they came from. If you owe a mortgage on your home, chances are good that part of your monthly payment goes into escrow for your lender to pay your property taxes when they're due. You might not think much about how much you pay in property taxes until it's time to file your federal income tax return.

If you pay your property taxes yourself, then you know what the figure is for your property. Many older Nebraskans, for example, no longer owe a mortgage on their homes and personally write a check for property taxes once or twice during the year, depending on how they choose to pay them. Most of these individuals would tell you their taxes are too high, and it's difficult to pay them on a limited or fixed income.

Farmers and ranchers would agree. They would tell you that owning land isn't a good indicator of the owner's ability to pay taxes. As food producers, farmers and ranchers need to own and use large amounts of land. But because the market, rather than they themselves, sets the prices at which they can sell their products, they can have one year of good income and another of poor income — even though they produced about the same amount of crops or livestock in both years. Unfortunately, the property tax bill continues to increase regardless of income.

What newcomers to Nebraska learn — and what we old-timers need to remember — is that we're very limited in this state in our sources of revenue. It's a great irony that what we like about Nebraska — its wide-open spaces, its lack of population pressure — is exactly what causes us fits when it comes to generating revenue to fund essential government services. We don't have enough sales, incomes, corporate profits or vehicles to carry the lion's share of our tax burden. So we have turned to what we do have in abundance — land — and placed the lion's share of taxes on it.

My organization, Nebraska Farm Bureau, is working with other agricultural groups and the Nebraska State Education Association to reduce the tax pressure on property, in a coalition called Citizens for Responsible Tax Policy. We're collecting signatures to place the Citizens' Amendment To Reduce Property Taxes on the November 1996 ballot for Nebraska voters to consider. Critics say that when we talk about reducing property taxes, we're really talking about a tax shift. Let me give you my thoughts on this:

Unlike other property tax petitions currently underway, the Citizens' Amendment addresses the issue of spending cuts, by calling for the legislature to establish standards of efficiency for delivery of local government services. If we can reduce the cost of providing the services funded by property taxes, we automatically reduce the overall

Constitutional changes cause concerns

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

LINCOLN — It's funny what a couple of words can do, especially if they're added to the state constitution.

But several state officials aren't laughing about what might happen if the words "quality education" were added as a right guaranteed in the Nebraska Constitution.

That's one of the aims of a petition drive launched recently by a coalition led by the Nebraska State Education Association and the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation.

The main goal of the drive is to gain voter approval for a scheme to reduce property taxes. But one of the provisions would also add the requirement of "quality education" to the state constitution.

That way, NSEA officials say, it is guaranteed that efforts to reduce property taxes — the primary source of funding for local education — won't bankrupt local schools and harm education.

As one statehouse lobbyist put it: you didn't expect teachers to support a tax-reducing effort that attacks their gravy train without there being some sort of life raft, did you?

The exact language reads like this:

"Quality education is essential to the survival of a free society and is a fundamental right of each individual. It is the paramount duty of the State to provide for the thorough and efficient education for all individuals between the ages of five and 21 years who are enrolled in the common schools of the state."

Right now, the constitution only requires that the state provide "free" education.

Several senators, including the Speaker of the Legislature and chairwoman of the Education Committee, are more than a bit worried that the difference between "free" and "quality" could be huge.

They say that such language could spawn schools of lawsuits. Parents could claim that their kids aren't receiving a "quality education." So could kids.

That could force the state to pump more money into local education. Other state programs could suffer.

A state home-school organization suggests that the language could force some home schooled and private schooled children to switch to public schools. They claim that it could also prompt lawsuits by children over the quality of education provided by their non-public schools.

Organizers of the petition drive dismiss such talk as fear mongering. They say that the petition has been carefully reviewed by their attorneys to avoid such problems.

But when Speaker of the Legislature Ron Withem of Papillion, and Sen. Ardyce Bohlke of Hastings, the chairwoman of the Education Committee, both agree, you've got to wonder about this clause. Both are staunch defenders of education. Withem is a former teacher.

And, when they agree with their conservative colleague, Sen. Kate Witte of Omaha, that these words are a bad idea, you've really got to wonder.

It really makes you admit that a couple of words can do strange things.

Religion often etched in federal concrete

Much is said regarding separation of church and state, and the debate will certainly continue as long as both entities exist.

Those reared after the turn of the century entered schools which were guided by God-fearing board members and teachers. Christmas programs, for instance, did not exclude symbols of the true Christmas story.

Many of the federal buildings located in Washington D.C. reveal the faith of our forefathers as they used their best judgment in guiding the nation. Established in 1947, the Central Intelligence Agency Headquarters carries the imprint of those having faith in God.

The original CIA building features 1,400,000 square feet while the new building encloses 1,100,000 square feet. These buildings and grounds comprise 258 acres. Perhaps you have visited the complex.

nerstone, the structure features a life-size statue of Major General William J. Donovan, and a representation of Allen Dulles. Dulles was CIA director for nine years.

Though extremists would likely protest if the complex were erected today, etched into the wall of the original building's central lobby is, of all things, a verse from the Bible which also characterizes the intelligence mission in a free society.

The verse is John 8:32 as found in the King James Version which

Sock it to bad hunters

Dear Editor:

I would like to direct this letter to a hunter in hopes he may read it.

Early this morning you stopped near our farm to hunt. About the only thing I could tell you did legal like was wear an orange vest.

Our windbreak is in a field near the road. This field and windbreak are posted. You completely ignored the signs and did not ask permission either. You shot from the road, walked right by a No Trespassing sign to retrieve a bird. I picked up the empty shell case, it was a 12-gauge, by the way.

This time of year many farmers have cattle in stalk fields, you hunters certainly don't consider our property do you?

I can only hope the Game Wardens sock it to some like you. Maybe you will break a tooth on a piece of buckshot.

And hunters wonder why farmers and ranchers are down on people like you.

Number stamping recalls Duck days

Rubber Ducks...

Hundreds of little yellow rubber ducks with numbers on them bobbing in the muck of Logan Creek...

That's what I was thinking about this week during the tedious process of hand numbering 200,000 tickets for the big cash giveaway drawings that will be held by the Wayne Merchants during the Christmas Season.

The chamber volunteers have been busy numbering the tickets for the drawings. The giveaways will doubtless be a big draw for shoppers in Wayne on Saturdays during the holiday shopping season. Over $6,000 will be given away in the promotion. You get a chance at winning every time a participating merchant gives you a ticket.

Winners must be present in one of the participating stores at the time of the drawings each Saturday morning and afternoon. The drawing numbers will be announced on KTCH radio.

When I was taking my turn with the mind-numbing number stamper this week I thought back to previous Chamber promotion efforts. The great duck race down the Logan Creek was memorable.

Three years ago last spring wasn't it. There was barely enough water in the creek to keep the ducks afloat except for one deep hole I remember falling into.

I think I'll volunteer for a couple more hours on the number stamping station rather than suggest a repeat of the Logan Creek Duck Race.

Journalism, what a profession.

I was sorely disappointed to see the hatchet job CBS News did on the Cornhusker Football program and Coach Tom Osborne. There were a bunch of half-truths and editorializing bull in the piece. It was uncalled for.

It just goes to show you that everyone tries to shoot at you when you are on top.

Mann Overboard

By Les Mann

The politically correct thing for Osborne to have done would have been for him to kick Lawrence Phillips off the team permanently. He would have been the media darling. (Standing on principle even at the risk of losing a national championship kind of like going for the win instead of a tie.)

The feminists would have loved him. The die hard Nebraska fans — even those most thirsty for another National title — would have accepted the decision and told tales about other Osborne decisions that were based on principle and not on the win-loss ratio. It would have added to the Osborne lore. And besides, who needs Phillips. We've got better running backs in the wings.

He knew he was going to be criticized for appearing to take a win at all costs approach to the decision. But he made the decision anyway because he thought it was the right thing to do. I think I would have preferred to see Phillips kept off the team but I'm not privy to all the information the coach had and I think we have to trust his judgement.

If there was a point I could dispute with the coach it would have been in his reaction to the tasteless question asked by the CBS reporter at the press conference. When asked if he would have let Phillips back on the team if one of his own family members had been assaulted, the coach bristled and ended the press conference. The coach should have stood his ground and answered the question forthrightly and continued the press conference matter-of-factly.

Never let them see you angry. Later in talking about the CBS report at a subsequent press conference Osborne wrote it off as the opinions of outsiders that did not really matter. He added it is the criticism from local media people that angers him most because those are people who are supposed to know what he is trying to do with his football program.

Wait a minute coach. You're right, the outsiders are going to try to tear you down, but local comment and opinions should not be written off as wrong-headed just because you don't happen to agree with them.

Even ignorant people (like me) are entitled to an opinion. Osborne should also remember that the people who love us tend to be the most critical. They are also the ones we should listen to the most and heed their suggestions when we know they are right.

...and tell them to get hosed when we know they are wrong.

Speakers from Japan

The City Slickers and Country Mixers 4-H Club met recently at the First United Methodist Church for a special program presented by guest speakers from Japan. Takashi Hiroshige, his wife Miwa and three year-old daughter Aiko talked about life in Japan and cultural differences. The members tasted Japanese candy and sampled Japanese snack food which included dried fish. The Hiroshiges demonstrated how to do origami (the Japanese art of paper folding). Mr. Hiroshige is a native Japanese instructor at Wayne State College, teaching Japanese language and culture classes. The Hiroshiges are pictured above with the members of the 4-H club.

St. Mary's School celebrates readers

St. Mary's Elementary School celebrated National Young Reader Day on Wednesday with sports related reading activities. Wayne High School Coach John Murlaugh started off the morning with a reading marathon pep rally. He told students that reading is fun and they should develop a love of reading. Classrooms and teachers then participated in reading cheers to encourage participation in the reading marathon. The marathon consisted of 10 reading teams with five participants on each team. Students were then given books to read together for 10 minute time periods with cheers between each session. Athletes from Wayne State College visited the classrooms to speak the students about how reading has influenced their lives through participation in sports. Those participating included Jared Hendershot and Jeff Lutt, WSC football athletes, Betsy Wagner, a softball athlete, Kathy Dalton, a track athlete and John Small, a baseball player. The Young Reader activities ended with students exchanging used books they had with class members to receive a "new" book.

State college chiefs to meet state exec.

CHADRON, Neb. (AP) — The College Board of Trustees has approved a policy change to create better coordination between state college presidents and expand authority of the board's executive director. Presidents of Chadron State, Wayne State and Peru State colleges will report to system Executive Director Carroll Krause and the board rather than only to the board. "This is not an attempt to diminish the presidents' role, but rather to strengthen the coordination of the system," Krause said after the board meeting Saturday. Some issues the presidents will bring to the executive director include recommendations for hiring of personnel, development of new courses, effectiveness of instructional program and reporting finances. Krause said changes in duties of the presidents also reflect a move toward giving them more control over their individual campuses. In other action by the board Saturday: Approved a Peru State College proposal to buy the former Elks Club-Conrads Building in Nebraska City for classrooms and a technology center. Peru State will use $161,000 from cash carryover funds. "We have been looking for space to rent in Nebraska City to offer our extension work when this came up,"

But the architects of freedom in yesteryear had no such barrier. Art works purchased from and loaned by the late Vincent Melzac from his private collection are displayed on the first floor of the original CIA building. ## AZ of PEO to raise funds

Members of Chapter AZ of PEO met at the home of Bonnie Lund on Nov. 7 with Marian Simpson, Pauline Nuernberger and Joan Carhart serving as co-hostesses. The program was presented by Jean Hamilton Black and her daughter Allison from London, England, friends of Marjorie Armstrong. The next meeting will be a fundraising silent auction to be held Nov. 21 at the home of Evelyn McDermott.

This work — like much current research on the health effect of eggs — was financed by the Egg Nutrition Board. The researchers said it was designed and conducted independently of the industry group. The researchers recruited 141 volunteers. They were assigned to eat two eggs a day. Half got regular eggs. The rest got ones with the cholesterol removed. All the eggs were put through blenders so that the volunteers wouldn't know the difference.

After three months, the people were sick of eggs, but their total cholesterol had only edged up only modestly, to 233. Half the increase was in good cholesterol, the HDL, or high-density lipoprotein cholesterol, which protects people from heart disease.

Dr. Robert Knopp, another of the researchers, said this suggests that the body produces more HDL to compensate for rising cholesterol levels in the diet.

Retzlaff said the volunteers "were really paranoid about eating eggs" at the study's start. When it was over, "the effect was hardly perceptible. You could barely see a change. If we had been feeding them saturated fat, you would have seen a very remarkable change."

The most notable effect of eggs was found in people with high cholesterol who also had high levels of fat particles called triglycerides: Their total cholesterol levels rose from 238 to 250. One-quarter of this increase was in HDL.

This suggests that people with high triglycerides may need to watch their cholesterol intake more than those with normal levels.

The body can make all the cholesterol it needs in the liver. Only about 25 percent of the cholesterol in the bloodstream comes directly from food. When cholesterol consumption goes up, the liver makes less, and the body takes in less of it through the digestive tract, as well.

Turn

burden for taxpayers. Our amendment would implement levy caps of $1.80 per $100 of assessed value for property located in incorporated cities or villages and $1.30 per $100 of assessed value for property located elsewhere. The different levy caps reflect what is typically assessed and taxed in towns to provide for additional services such as sewer, water, lights and so forth. This amendment would also place language in our state constitution that residential and commercial property can't be assessed at more than 100 percent of market value and agricultural land can't be assessed at more than 80 percent of market value. The levy caps and valuation limits work together to place a ceiling on property taxes. We estimate that this will result in a reduction of $400 million in property taxes, or an average property tax reduction of about 30 percent.

Because of the efficiency provisions described earlier, it will not be necessary to "make up" all of the $400 million reduction in property taxes. However, a significant portion of the savings will probably have to be made up from other revenue sources, for example, sales and income taxes. This change is what some are calling a "tax shift."

However, that line of thinking presumes that our current system, with its heavy emphasis on property taxes, represents the ideal. I disagree, and given the great interest across Nebraska in property tax relief, I venture to say a majority of Nebraskans would not agree that our current system is ideal.

Right now, agricultural property owners are paying 27 percent of the total property taxes collected in Nebraska, although they represent less than 4 percent of our state's population. Rather than being a tax shift, the Citizens' Amendment To Reduce Property Taxes is a move toward tax equity. Many people, for example, are more willing to pay income taxes — if you make money, then you're in a better position to pay taxes. Likewise with sales tax: if you are able to afford taxable purchases, you're probably able to pay a few additional cents' sales tax on the dollar.

There are no easy solutions to Nebraska's property tax problems, and no perfect ones. But I believe the Citizens' Amendment To Reduce Property Taxes does the most to bring balance and fairness to funding the cost of government.

Bryce P. Neidig, President Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation Co-Chairman, Citizens for Responsible Tax Policy

Peru State President Robert Burns said: "It was a sudden opportunity we were in a position to take advantage of."

Approved a policy addressing employee use of campus computers. The policy outlines improper use of equipment with an understanding that the policy likely will be revised as issues evolve. The policy states that campus computers should be used for campus or educational business.

Approved a revision of Chadron State's campus housing proposal. Chadron State President Sam Rankin said campus enrollment has grown in the last decade and if the growth continues as predicted, campus housing will be in short supply.

Approved a letter to the State Coordinating Commission for Post-Secondary Education, suggesting a meeting to settle jurisdictional disputes. Trustee Chairman Gerry Conway of Wayne said many of the questions related to which board has control over what have been cleared up by the state Legislature. However, a few questions remain, he said.

Enlarged Prostate Treatment Options

An enlargement of the prostate (called BHP or benign prostatic hyperplasia) is one of the most common health problems affecting men as they age. The enlarged prostate gland can cause blood in the urine. Infections are common. In a few men, complete obstruction of urine flow can occur without warning. Symptoms of BHP include frequency of urination — especially at night, a sensation that the bladder has not emptied completely, a weak urine stream, and the need to strain in order to urinate. Two types of medicines are available for BHP. One is a group called alpha blockers (e.g., tetracosin, doxazosin, and prazosin). These drugs relax the muscles of the prostate gland. The other medicine is finasteride which causes moderate shrinkage of the enlarged prostate.

Wildcats roll up 733 yards in 68-0 rout

By Korey Berg
Of the Herald

Wayne State College rolled up a school-record 733 yards and ended their season with a 6-4 record on Saturday in a 68-0 domination of Iowa Wesleyan. Marcus Bishop had three touchdown runs and Jarrod DeGeorgia threw two touchdown passes to lead the 'Cats to a 48-0 halftime lead. DeGeorgia threw a pair of touchdowns to Lamart Cooper in the second half before the Wildcat backups were brought in.

The Wildcat defense also played an outstanding game, holding the Tigers to 189 yards of total offense, picking off three passes and recording 10 tackles for lost yardage.

"We played another complete game," said Head Coach Dennis Wagner. "Our last two opponents have not been great football teams, but we didn't play down to their level. We finished on a positive note. To finish the way we did certainly gives us a better taste going into the off season."

After forcing the Tigers to punt, Wayne State drove 85 yards in 10 plays on their opening possession to take a 7-0 lead. Bishop's one yard touchdown would be all the points the Wildcats would need. After Iowa Wesleyan fumbled on their next possession, WSC scored again on a one yard run by DeGeorgia which was set up by a 44-yard pass to Cooper.

The Tigers went three-and-out on their next possession. Wayne State took advantage again with a 10-yard run by Bishop to give the 'Cats a 21-0 first quarter lead. Iowa Wesleyan had the ball for nine plays and took 4:46 off the clock on their next drive, but gained a net of only nine yards and were forced to punt. On Wayne State's first play Cooper took a reverse and bolted 46 yards for a Wildcat touchdown. On the ensuing kickoff, no one fielded the ball for the Tigers, so Troy Evans pounced on the live ball to give it right back to the 'Cats. Bishop took over on this drive, running 21 and 22 yards on consecutive plays to make the Wildcat lead 35-0.

After forcing the Tigers to punt, WSC finally made a mistake, fumbling the punt return back to Iowa Wesleyan. The Tigers could not take advantage however, as they turned the ball over on downs. Wayne State picked up where they left off as DeGeorgia found Dan Aguayo for a 61-yard bomb to make the score 42-0. WSC scored again three and a half minutes later when DeGeorgia found Kevin Swayne for a 23-yard touchdown. Wayne State was finally stopped on their final possession of the half, but not by the Tigers. With a 48-0 lead the Wildcats let time run out in the first half. Wayne State had 473 yards of offense and had the ball eight times in the first half, scoring touchdowns on their first seven possessions.

Wayne State wanted for their second possession to score in the second half as DeGeorgia found Cooper from 45 yards out. DeGeorgia found Cooper on their next possession, this time on a 32-yard strike to make the score 61-0. Ray Taylor scored the 'Cats final touchdown of the day on a 45-yard run with 3:13 left in the third quarter. Wayne State scored touchdowns on 10 of their first 12 possessions before giving the backups some playing time.

"There wasn't anyone that dressed the last two weeks that didn't play at least a quarter of football," said Wagner. "That's going to give us some valuable experience for next season."

With the season complete, here are the leaders for the 1995 Wildcats. Bishop led the team in rushing with 1,031 yards and 14 touchdowns. Jason DeMartile finished second with 504 yards on the ground. DeGeorgia started six games at quarterback, completing 63 percent of his passes for 1,773 yards. He threw 12 touchdowns and six interceptions. Jared Hendershot threw for an additional 998 yards, six touchdowns and seven interceptions. Swayne led the team with 65 receptions for 818 yards and four touchdowns. Cooper was second with 54 catches, 766 yards and eight touchdowns. He also averaged 142.5 all-purpose yards per game.

On the defensive side of the ball, Jon Adkisson led the squad with 134 total tackles, followed by Robert McConico and Jeff Lutt with 64 total stops a piece. Lutt also led the team with nine quarterback sacks and 12 tackles for lost yardage. Marcus Rankin led the defense with three interceptions on the year.

Lady Bears claim 2nd at state

By Korey Berg
Of the Herald

The Laurel-Concord Lady Bears claimed second place at the C2 State volleyball tournament last weekend in Lincoln, their highest finish ever.

The Lady Bears opened the tournament with a first-round match against Yutan. The two teams were tied at eight in the first game, but Laurel took over and scored the last seven points to win 15-8. In the second game, the Lady Bears trailed 7-0 and 13-9, but managed to pull out the game and the match with a 15-13 win.

Tracy Ankeny led the team with 16 kills on 22-27 hitting, while Becky Schroeder had five total blocks and was 14-16 hitting with seven kills. Megan Adkins was 17-21 hitting with six kills and 14-14 serving with one ace. Heather Cunningham had one ace block and was 9-9 serving with one ace. Gina Monson was 11-11 serving and 71-73 setting with 28 assists, while Sarah Ehlers was 8-9 hitting with four kills.

Laurel-Concord faced Wisner-Pilger in the semifinals and jumped out to a 4-0 lead in game one. Wisner would go on an 8-0 run to take the lead 8-4, but the Lady Bears came back to tie the game at 10. The teams battled back and forth until Laurel reached game point at 14-12. Wisner wouldn't buckle however, and took the lead 16-15. Cunningham served the final three points for Laurel to steal game one, 18-16. After giving up the first two points in game two, Laurel scored 10 of the next 12 points to take a 10-4 lead. Wisner fought back to pull within two points at 11-9, but Laurel scored the final four points to take the match 15-9.

Ankeny was 32-37 hitting with 16 kills and Adkins had seven kills on 19-22 hitting. Schroeder had three ace blocks and was 14-15 hitting with five kills, while Ehlers was 12-12 serving and 8-10 hitting with two kills. Cunningham recorded three kills on 15-17 hitting and was 18-20 serving. Monson was 82-82 setting with 29 assists and Brandi Urwiler was 9-10 serving with two aces.

The Lady Bears took on undefeated Howells in the championship match on Saturday. After falling behind 3-0 in the first game Laurel roared back, scoring 11 unanswered points. Howells scored three more to make the score 11-6, but Heather Cunningham served the final four points, including two aces, to give Laurel the win 15-6. In the second game, the Lady Bears took an early 2-1 lead, but Howells came back to gain a 6-3 advantage. Laurel cut the lead to 8-7, but Howells scored seven straight points to take the game 15-7 and even the match at one game a piece. In the final game, Howells built a 10-3 advantage and held off the Lady Bears to take the State title with a 15-8 win. Laurel had eight hitting errors in the final game and missed some crucial serves.

"Saturday's match was disappointing to lose," said Coach Patti Cunningham. "We'd like to have that match back."

Ankeny again led the squad with 16 kills on 34-41 hitting and had one ace on 13-14 serving. Schroeder tallied three ace blocks and was 16-21 hitting with seven kills. Adkins was 21-24 hitting with six kills and Ehlers was 12-12 serving with one ace. Cunningham was 10-10 serving with two aces and Monson had 32 assists on 92-92 setting.

Despite losing the championship match, Cunningham thought the Lady Bears had an exceptional year.

"It was great," said Cunningham. "The kids had to play really great to advance to the finals. We had the toughest bracket to get through."

Ankeny, who had 48 kills for the tournament, and Schroeder, who recorded 19 kills and eight ace blocks, were both selected to the All-Tournament team.

Senior Lamart Cooper scored three touchdowns and had 186 all-purpose yards in Wayne State's 68-0 win over Iowa Wesleyan, last Saturday.

Freshman Chad Nelson, was seven from nine from three-point range and scored a team-high 26 points.

"I played a pretty good game," said Nelson. "I think my teammates helped me out a lot because they knew I had the hot hand and they set me up with a lot of picks and got me open for good shots."

"I knew Chad was going to be a great player," said McDermott. "I didn't know it was going to happen this quick. He's playing with a lot of confidence and shooting the ball with a lot of confidence. He's been very coachable, he's worked very hard and he hates to lose. I think if he continues to work hard, he's just going to get better and better."

Junior Allen Cheek poured in 18 points and led the team with nine rebounds and two blocked shots, while junior Mike Fitzner hit four of nine three-pointers and had 14 points, six assists and four steals. Junior Curt Woodin scored 11 points and dished out six assists.

"Allen Cheek was very active on the boards and Curt Woodin and Mike Fitzner continue to be steady," said McDermott. "They're hitting the open shots and not making mistakes. We need them to continue to do that if we're going to be successful."

Wayne State opens the regular season with a home game against Nebraska-Omaha on Friday. The Mavericks finished 11-16 last year and beat the Wildcats 86-79. They return all five starters, including senior John Skokan (8.3 ppg, 10.8 rpg), junior Pete Ledford (13.9 ppg, 3.6 rpg) and junior Richard Jones (5.1 ppg).

"They have some guys that have played a lot of college basketball," said McDermott. "They have good size and athletic ability. It's going to be a challenge for us from a rebounding standpoint to get them off the backboards and make sure we get some offensive second chances."

UPCOMING GAMES

Friday, November 17
Rice Auditorium
WAYNE STATE WOMEN vs. CONCORDIA — 5:30 p.m.
WAYNE STATE MEN vs. NEB.-OMAHA — 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, November 21
Rice Auditorium
WAYNE STATE WOMEN vs. AUSTRALIAN SELECT TEAM — 5:30 p.m.
WAYNE STATE MEN vs. MORNINGSIDES — 7:30 p.m.

UNO Head Coach Kevin Lehman, in his first year with the Mavs, was an assistant coach at the University of Northern Iowa when McDermott played there.

"Kevin and I go way back," said McDermott, "so it will be an interesting game for me."

On Tuesday, the Cats host North Central Conference power Morningside. The Chiefs advanced to the NCAA Division II tournament last year and finished the season at 24-8. Seniors Brad Barron (16.4 ppg, 7.7 rpg) and Jason Kleis (10.3 ppg, 4.3 rpg) lead the squad. Morningside defeated the Cats by a score of 81-47 last season.

"Morningside is coming off one of their best seasons ever," said McDermott. "They're a very good basketball team. It's going to be a challenge for us. We're going to have to play very well in order to compete with them. They have the confidence of a successful season behind them and that's certainly going to play to their advantage early this season."

In women's action, the Wildcats tip-off their season against Concordia on Friday. The Tigers come into the game with a 2-0 record after defeating Baker University and Park College. They were 17-13 last season and lost to WSC 89-64.

"They're a team that lost only one player from last year," said women's Head Coach Mike Barry, "so they return a lot of experience."

Key players for Concordia are senior center Dena Poppe and junior guard Allison Nyland.

On Tuesday, the Cats host an Australian Select Team. The Australian's have eight 16-year olds, one 17-year old and two 18-year olds on the squad, but Barry said that just because they're young doesn't mean they're not good. The Australian's played Morningside Wednesday night and beat the Chiefs 78-72.

Junior Allen Cheek slams down a dunk during Wayne State's 86-78 win over Lithuania on Saturday.

Wayne State signs Emerson-Hubbard prep

Wayne State College head women's basketball coach, Mike Barry, has announced that Tonya Porter (Emerson, Neb.) has signed a national letter of intent to attend WSC and play basketball for the Wildcats next season.

Tonya Porter

Porter, a 5-7 guard, is in her senior year playing for Coach Cliff Wiseman at Emerson-Hubbard High School. She averaged 21.6 points per game last season and has already scored 1,114 career points. During the last two years, Emerson-Hubbard has posted a 43-6 record while advancing to the semifinal round of the Class C-2 State tournament.

"Porter has earned three letters in basketball and track and two in volleyball. In basketball last season, she was named third-team All-Nebraska and first-team C-2 All-State. She also has been named All-Conference the last three seasons."

"Tonya is not only a great player who can run and score, but she is also a very good student," said Barry. "Tonya comes from one of the best programs in northeast Nebraska, if not the state. I expect her to help us immediately."

Porter is the daughter of Al and Carol Porter of Emerson, Nebraska. Both parents attended Wayne State.

WSC was 17-10 last season, which marked its fourth straight winning season.

Senior Greg Ryan (#45) and freshman Jason Diaz (#22) fight through a sea of hands for a rebound during last Saturday's exhibition action.

Laurel falls to Oakland-Craig in C2 semifinal rematch

By Korey Berg
Of the Herald

Laurel-Concord fell short of returning to the C2 state championship game Monday night as Oakland-Craig shut down the Bears offense and handed them a 38-7 defeat. Laurel managed only seven yards rushing and 72 total yards, while the Knights piled up 331 yards of total offense.

"They had a good football team," said Head Coach Tom Luxford. "They had a better team on Monday night."

Oakland-Craig scored early in the first quarter after a Laurel punt gave them field position at the Bears' 44-yard line. Chad Baker rumbled 43 yards to set up a one yard run by quarterback Andy Rennerfeldt. The Bears fumbled on their very next play, but the Knights could not convert as they turned it over on downs. Two plays later, Tyler Erwin was intercepted by Rennerfeldt, who returned the pick 31 yards down to the Laurel 17. Baker scored on a two yard run to give the Knights a 14-0 lead.

"It was pretty disappointing to give up 14 points in about four minutes," said Luxford. "Turnovers really hurt in a game of this magnitude."

The Bear defense responded early in the second quarter by sacking Rennerfeldt on consecutive plays and holding the Knights on a fake punt attempt. Five plays later, Vince Ward crossed the goal line from four yards out to cut the lead to 14-7 with 7:41 left in the half. Oakland matched Laurel's score when Baker ran 23 yards to give the Knights a 21-7 halftime lead.

The Knights began to move the ball late in the third quarter after both teams failed to score on their initial second half possessions. Rennerfeldt engineered a 17-play, 75-yard drive that took 7:41 off the clock to extend Oakland's lead to 30-7. The Knights scored their final touchdown following a blocked punt that gave them the ball at the Bears' eight yard line.

The loss was disappointing for the Bears, but they still had an outstanding season, finishing with a record of 11-1.

"There aren't many teams that have won 23 out of their last 25 games," said Luxford. "It's disappointing that we lost, but you have to look at what we've accomplished."

Wayne State theatre presenting director's showcase Nov. 18 to 20

Four Wayne State College theatre students will showcase their directorial talents in one-act plays during the theatre department's Director's Showcase running Saturday through Monday, Nov. 18-20. Admission is $3 per person.

Performance times are 8 p.m. on Saturday, 2 p.m. on Sunday and 8 p.m. on Monday. All performances will be in Ramsey Theatre, located in the Val Peterson Fine Arts Building. The plays contain adult language and adult situations.

The student-directors and their plays are Beth Herrick, Cherokee, Iowa, "Aryan Birth"; Tiffany Lichty, Plainview, "The Valentine Fairy"; Amber Livingston, Plattsmouth, "Feeding the Moonfish"; and Andy Niess, Fremont, "The Author's Voice."

"The Director's Showcase allows our students to take a step back from performing in the production," said Dr. Andre Sedriks, director of Wayne State's theatre department. "It serves as a learning tool and enables them to highlight and showcase their directorial talents."

Beth Herrick is a 1991 graduate of Washington High School in Cherokee, Iowa and is majoring in theatre at Wayne State with a minor in art. She is the daughter of Sandra C. Johnson.

Herrick's prior theatrical experience includes performances in Wayne State theatre productions such as "Robin Hood," "Treasure Island," "West Side Story," "The Heidi Chronicles," "Dracula" and "Wild Oats." She has also served as stage manager for "Romeo and Juliet," and in other capacities such as costume design, make-up design and sound operator. She also served as director for "84 Charing Cross Road" and some one-act plays in 1993-94.

"I chose this script for the challenge," says Herrick. "I wanted to see if I could successfully direct a one-man show. When I read the script, I fell in love with it, but I hesitated because I was afraid I might not be able to cast it since I would be competing with three other directors for actors. I am very pleased with my selection, Pat Jerichan. I now feel I could not have chosen any other show. Pat shares the same enthusiasm and vision for the script that I do, and it shows in his performance."

"This play is about a Jewish man, by birth but not by faith," continued Herrick. "He shares with his audience his feelings about his Jewish lover whose parents are Nazis. In doing so, he brings up many questions about life, faith and beliefs that we all have to deal with at some point in our lives. It's a great show and I hope the audience gets as much out of it as we have."

Tiffany Lichty is a 1992 graduate of Plainview High School, and is majoring in theatre / mass communication at Wayne State with a concentration in broadcasting communication. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Lichty.

At Wayne State, Lichty is also active in the Drama Club.

Lichty's prior theatrical experience includes performances in Wayne State theatre productions such as "Robin Hood," "Romeo and Juliet," "Treasure Island" and "Charlotte's Web." She also served as stage manager for "Wild Oats" which was presented last month.

"This play is a comedy about a woman who ended up with men and love in general," says Lichty. "Rudyard (the Valentine Fairy) takes this woman through her past relationships and shows her not to give up on love."

Amber Livingston is a 1993 graduate of Plattsmouth High School, and is majoring in theatre at Wayne State with a minor in English. She is the daughter of James and Donna Livingston.

At Wayne State, Livingston is also active in the Mass Communications Club, and she served as president of the Drama Club.

Livingston's prior theatrical experience includes performances in Wayne State theatre productions such as "Treasure Island," "Charlotte's Web," "Dracula," "Simlar Fate," "84 Charing Cross Road," "Baby With the Bathwater" and "Love Suicide at Schofield Barracks." She has also served in other capacities such as make-up, costuming and as a member of the technical staff.

"This piece centers around a young lonely man who spends his nights at a lonely rundown pier caring for the moonfish whose numbers are diminishing," says Livingston. "Eden, a teenage girl, interrupts his daily routine by stowing away in his car. The two find they are as different as they are the same. They spend the evening trying to understand and defend each other's lives and their actions."

"I chose this script because of its poignancy and for the artistic visual picture," continued Livingston. "I love the differences between the characters and the unusual layout of the story. I chose to place the moonfish on stage rather than off stage to give the audience the chance to see the beauty of the moonfish the man sees."

Andy Niess is a 1992 graduate of Fremont Senior High School, and is majoring in theatre / broadcasting at Wayne State. He is the son of Nelle Niess.

At Wayne State, Niess is also active in the Broadcasting Club, and is a former president of the Film Club and the Drama Club. He is also an on-air personality on KWSC-FM, Wayne State's campus radio station.

Niess' prior-theatrical experience includes performances in Wayne State theatre productions such as "Lone Star," "Learned Ladies," "Baby With the Bathwater," "Love Suicide at Schofield Barracks," "First of May" and "Romeo and Juliet."

"This play appealed to me because of its characters," says Niess. "Todd, Gene and Portia are well-rounded characters who deal with their problems in a sometimes unpleasant, but totally believable manner, creative a bizarre, dysfunctional love triangle."

"Its message satirizes the quest for celebrity, while dealing with the monster with the heart of gold stereotypes found in 'Beauty and the Beast' and 'The Handback of No-tie Dame.' The play's language is naturalistic, often caustic and very funny. There are moments of incredible beauty and some surprises as well."

Wayne State concert to honor composer Still

On Friday, Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. in Ramsey Theatre, the Wayne State College music department and the Center for Cultural Outreach will join together to present a concert honoring the birth of American composer William Grant Still.

Still (born May 11, 1895; died Dec. 3, 1978) was the first African-American to have a symphony performed by a white orchestra, the first to conduct a major symphony orchestra and the first to have a full-length opera performed by a major American company. With renewed interest in Still's work has come a realization that this composer achieved remarkable things and produced works which should not pass into obscurity.

The WSC Symphonic Band and Percussion will open the program with a Fanfare for the 99th Fighter Squadron. Next will be a group of artsongs sung by voice faculty members Kathryn Ley, Connie Webber and Ann Dorr, accompanied by pianist Beverly Soll. WSC student singers and members of the WSC Scenes Group will present short scenes from two of Still's operas, Minnette Fontaine and A Bayou Legend. The WSC Women's Chorus and the WSC Concert, accompanied by the Northeast Nebraska Sinfonia, will perform choruses from the operas Minnette Fontaine and Troubled Island. The concert will conclude with Three Dances from the ballet La Guaiab-lesse, played by the Northeast Nebraska Sinfonia conducted by Fredrick Hanna.

The composer's daughter, Judith Anne Still, will be at WSC for this weekend of commemorative activities. Ms. Still received her Master's degree in literature from California State University, Fullerton in 1968. She is the founder of the William Grant Still Publishing Company, whose catalog includes not only the works of her celebrated father, but also works of minority composers and writers. During the William Grant Still Centennial year, she has presented lectures at universities and performing arts centers throughout the U.S., including Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, Oberlin College and the University of Arkansas.

On Sunday, Dec. 3 at 1:30 p.m. in Ley Theatre, Ms. Still will present a Sunday Series lecture/slide show presentation entitled, "A Centennial Tribute to William Grant Still." On this day recognizing both the centennial of his birth and the anniversary of his death Dec. 3, 1978, she will show slides and talk about his life.

German student liking the Winside way

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Anne Kleiner has experienced a great deal of life in the United States since she arrived here from Germany in August.

Miss Kleiner came to Nebraska as part of the Exchange Foundation from Newsdadt, Germany. Newsdadt is a town of approximately 12,000 and is approximately 30 minutes from Dresden.

She had originally been placed with a family in Aurora but came to live with the Reverend Pat Riley family in Winside Oct. 14.

"She HAS been overwhelmed by having one of our five children around her all the time," said Sandy Riley.

"In Germany, most families have two or three children. Five is a lot and most people in Germany do not have that many," said Miss Kleiner.

Her family in Germany consists of her father, mother and two younger sisters, ages 11 and 14. "My father is a smith, he works with metal and can repair anything.

My mother is an art and German teacher," she said.

Ben who is in fourth grade and four year old Kerry.

The Rileys would like to travel with Anne and show her some of the scenery western Nebraska and Wyoming have to offer.

Mrs. Riley said having an extra daughter has not been a huge adjustment, "Mornings are hectic around here and there is a lot of giggling, but other than that, there have been no major adjustments."

ANNE SAID one of her favorite things about being here is the fact that she is a senior. "In Germany, I would be in the eleventh grade. Here I am a senior and will graduate just before I turn 17."

Being a senior is considerably different in Nebraska. "We don't have senior pictures or any kind of graduation parties. We just find out if we have passed our examination and that's it," she said.

This is the first time the Riley family has had an exchange student. "We had been talking to the Decks who have an exchange student and said we would like to do it sometime. Shortly after that, Teri Post (International Exchange Coordinator) called us and said there was a student who needed a home," said Mrs. Riley.

THE RILEY family consists of Pat and Sandy and their five children, Rachel, a junior at Winside High School, Amy, a freshman, Beth, an eighth grader, ANNE HAS tried to do as many things as possible while here in the United States. She recently accompanied a group of exchange students to Mount Rushmore and the Black Hills and really enjoyed the trip.

She likes being able to shop at a number of stores in malls here in the United States. "In Germany, you have to walk from store to store, down the streets. Here you can shop for everything in one place. Also, the grocery stores have a lot more variety than we have in Germany," she said.

Anne says her classes at Winside are much easier than those she had in Germany. She does enjoy having

N.E.braska's International Connection
Foreign Exchange Students
Fifth in a series

access to the computer here.

"I WANT to try as many things as possible because I won't have the chance to do these things again," she said.

An experience that Anne does not want to have again is the situation the Rileys found themselves in Nov. 4. During the night their furnace malfunctioned, causing carbon monoxide to fill the house.

"Everyone was overcome by carbon monoxide. It was a little difficult trying to explain to Anne why we had to get out of the house

College president visits

New Northeast Community College President, Dr. Jim Underwood, right, was in Wayne last week to speak at the Rotary Club. He is shown with Rotary President Ric Wilson. Underwood told Rotarians about the new transfer agreement signed by colleges in Nebraska. The agreement makes it easier for students to transfer from community to four-year institutions. The vast majority of Norfolk's Northeast students who transfer to a four-year school chose Wayne State College, he said.

Fat grams needed for winter work

I've just shoveled "3-4 inches of snow accumulation" and there is ice under it in several places. Our guests are from Denver, and they are anxious to start back.

It started Friday morning, while I was in the dentist's chair. Of course, the wind came up, and we had a blizzard by the time people needed to drive home. There was a big pile-up on 180, and hundreds of fender benders in Omaha and Lincoln.

I was lucky. I cancelled one visit, and had plenty of paper work to do. After 5:00, I baked cookies. The cookie jar has been empty for a month, and October was such a hectic month, I didn't have time to fill it.

I still think I have to have homemade cookies in the cookie jar. And I've found you can't bake cookies with low-fat margarine. It just doesn't produce the same results.

I also have not cared for the results with low-fat cheeses in my breakfast casseroles. Although the low-fat mayonnaise, sour cream and cream cheese seem to be fine.

I never use extra salt, and I've tamed my sweet tooth, except for an occasional candy bar at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. But I'm finding it difficult to cut down on fat. Peanut butter, for instance, my favorite between-meals snack, is loaded with fat grams.

Museum series

As the next in its Sunday Afternoon at the Museum series, the Neihardt Center will host Dale Clark, presenting a living history portrayal of "A Young Man's Journey on the Oregon Trail."

In 1843, an emigrant group of about 1,000 left Independence, Mo. and traveled to Oregon guided by Marcus Whitman. This group included more than 100 women and 600 children. Over the next 25 years 350,000 emigrants (perhaps as many as one in five were children) made the 2,000-mile journey in this huge voluntary migration. This program tells the story of this great and difficult migration through the eyes and ears of a 12-year-old boy who made the trip in 1857 and tells his story years later as an adult reading from his diary and showing artifacts from the journey.

Dale Clark is director of education at Stuhr Museum of the Prairie Pioneer in Grand Island, Neb., where his Heritage Activities for Today's Students program attracts more than 18,500 students each year. In 1995 the national Oregon-California Trails Association presented Clark with their Outstanding Educator Award for his overland Trails class as the best middle school program in the nation.

This program, developed especially for young audiences, is sponsored by the Nebraska Humanities Council. It will take place Sunday, Nov. 19 at 2 p.m. at the Neihardt Center in Bancroft.

Youth Institute

Wakefield students Wes Blecke, Andrea Lundahl, Nick Wolff, Angie Anderson, Justin Dutcher and Lynn Kratke, along with sponsor/teacher Gregg Cruickshank, joined more than 350 First Congressional District high school students and teachers on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus in Lincoln on Nov. 6 for the 15th Youth Institute on Governmental Affairs. The event is sponsored by Rep. Doug Bereuter.

Juniors and seniors from over 60 high schools attended the one-day seminar where they discussed a variety of current national issues. Each high school was invited to send outstanding junior and senior students. They attended three sessions on topics taken from today's headlines. Expert panelists led the sessions and provided the students with alternate viewpoints on each topic.

The day began with an opening from Congressman Doug Bereuter. During the day guest speakers and students participated in discussions.

The Hatchery, small business incubator project, received special mention under the economic development section of innovative eco-

Circle K spreading cheer

The Wayne State College Circle K is helping spread the Christmas cheer this year while raising money for Habitat for Humanity. They hope to build more than stables.

For a cost of ten dollars, downtown business owners can have a holiday scene painted on their front windows by Circle K. The painting will be done on the afternoon of December 9.

A chapter of Habitat for Humanity is currently forming in the Wayne Area; therefore, any contribution will stay in the area. Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization run by volunteers dedicated to making it possible for low income families to have quality housing. This program gives some struggling families a chance to improve their lives by getting a helping hand from people who care.

Anyone interested in the fundraiser should contact one of the following people by Nov. 21: Gerald Brand, 375-6946; Gina Arterburn, 375-6664; Donald Hand, 375-6069.

There is room at the inn

The Super 8 motel in Wayne will be participating in the sixth annual "Rooms at the Inn" holiday program which offers free accommodations throughout the holiday season to out-of-town friends or relatives of patients in nearby nursing homes, veteran's homes, hospitals or treatment centers.

"Super 8's 'Rooms at the Inn' program is designed to bring families and friends together during the holiday," Super 8 President Robert N. Weller said. "By removing the cost of a hotel room, Super 8's across the country will hopefully make holiday gatherings a little bit easier for those in need."

Rooms at the Inn was inspired by a similar program started in 1987 by Super 8 franchisees Linda Arnold Tharaldson and Gary Tharaldson of Fargo, N.D. Ms. Aamold Tharaldson said because they experienced several family tragedies around the holidays, "Christmas and Thanksgiving were associated with a lot of bad memories for us. We decided a program like this would help us change that, and would turn a negative into a positive."

Last year approximately 650 Super 8's throughout the United States and Canada donated 1,503 rooms.

Advanced registration is not required but recommended since the number of available rooms may be limited. Reservations can be made by contacting the Wayne Super 8 Motel at 402-375-4898 or through Superline, Super 8's toll-free reservation center at 1-800-800-8000.

Marksman award given

Wayne's Company A, 1-134th Infantry, Nebraska Army National Guard, was recently recognized as one of the elite units in the 21st state, Fifth Army Region.

According to Capt. Martin Apprich, personnel officer for the 1-134th Infantry, which is headquartered in Omaha, Wayne's unit was recently awarded the National Guard Association of the United States' General John J. Pershing Trophy for excellence in unit marksmanship for the 1994 training year.

"The John J. Pershing Trophy is awarded annually to the National Guard unit that demonstrates excellence in marksmanship training in the Fifth Army area," Apprich said. "The trophy is awarded based upon a merit ranking from all units in the Fifth Army area obtained by evaluating the unit's annual individual weapons qualification."

"Company A was ranked highest in the Fifth Army area," he said.

The Fifth Army area consists of the states of Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, South Dakota, North Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Nebraska.

In order to qualify for the award, Apprich said, units must first have at least 90 percent of their assigned soldiers qualify as marksmen or better.

The award was originally presented to Maj. Gen. Stanley M. Heng, adjutant general for Nebraska, on behalf of Co. A at the Association's annual convention in Cleveland, Ohio, on Sept. 8. The trophy was formally presented to Capt. Ronald Convey, Co. A commander, by Brig. Gen. Fancis Laden, deputy adjutant general-Army on Oct. 14 at the 1-134th Infantry change of command ceremony in Hastings.

According to Apprich, the trophy will remain in permanent possession of the unit.

Carbon monoxide detectors can be added protection

By Karen Wermers
Dixon County Extension Educator

Karen Wermers
Dixon County

Carbon monoxide (CO) is an odorless and colorless gas. It is quickly absorbed by the body and can cause symptoms such as headache, dizziness, irritability and nausea. When the air contains high concentrations of CO, the symptoms rapidly grow more serious and lethal blood levels of the gas can be reached quickly. More than 200 deaths a year result from carbon monoxide poisoning due to inefficient or malfunctioning furnace, space heater or other fuel-burning appliance. Regularly maintaining your home's heating system is the best way to reduce the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning.

An additional precaution is to install a detector that continuously monitors the air for high levels of CO.

A CO detector is most important in homes that have fuel-fired furnaces or space heaters, wood stoves or fireplaces. If a home is tightly weather-sealed, there is a greater likelihood that furnaces and other fuel-fired appliances may have insufficient combustion air. Incomplete combustion air increases CO. Backdrafts can send CO back down the furnace or flue and into the home.

Both 110-volt and battery-powered CO detectors are available. CO detectors look and sound much like smoke detectors. The AC-powered detectors heat a metal-oxide sensor that reacts with CO. The battery-powered models have a chemically treated disk that darkens when exposed to CO. The change is then detected by an infrared sensor within the unit and sounds the alarm.

The CO detector standard set by UL requires a detector to sound the alarm before a person would experience a blood concentration of 100 carboxyhemoglobin. If a CO detector sounds an alarm, evacuate the home and call the fire department and gas utility.

CO detectors should be installed near the sleeping area such as in a hallway between bedrooms and the rest of the home. Additional detectors may be placed in living areas or near, but not in, furnace rooms, kitchens or garages. Follow directions provided by the manufacturer for locations and installation.

Features to look for include an alarm that sounds in response to a hazardous exposure to CO, a sound that reaches at least 85 decibels, a test button to verify that the detector is functioning, an indicator that the batteries are functioning on battery-powered models, a UL seal or other certification indicator that the unit has been tested and complies with UL standards.

CO detectors generally are available for less than $75 and prices are moving downward. Although CO detection cards are available as an alternative and at lower costs, some cards that have been tested have not responded to the CO tests. The cards provide a visual cue (a spot that changes color) and have no audio cue providing little protection when people are sleeping. Unless monitored carefully, the color change indicating CO presence may go unnoticed.

Cook safely no matter how you may buy it

Cooking whole turkeys usually comes around only a couple of times a year. That's why people may need reminders of how to handle and cook a large quantity of meat, said a University of Nebraska-Lincoln food safety specialist.

Julie Albrecht said safe handling goes for however you buy your turkey — fresh, cooked, frozen, frozen stuffed, smoked or in pieces. The poultry industry has ensured that its product is safe when delivered to the store, but consumers also need to do their part for safe handling, from purchase to leftovers.

Albrecht and the U.S. Department of Agriculture offer these suggestions:

—Anything that comes in contact with the turkey — hands, utensils, sink — should be washed in hot, soapy water to keep bacteria from spreading.

—Fresh turkeys should be purchased before the "use by" date, one to two days before cooking. Look for a firm skin with no discoloration or odor. Keep refrigerated at 40 F. Plan for one pound per person.

—Buying fresh stuffed turkeys isn't recommended, but frozen stuffed turkeys are safe. Keep frozen until time to cook (do not thaw ahead of time).

—Dressing cooked inside a bird is done at 165 F after it has been out of the oven for 10-20 minutes.

—Frozen unstuffed turkeys should be thawed either in the refrigerator at 40 F or in cold water — not on a countertop. Allow 24 hours of refrigerated thawing time per five pounds of turkey — two or three days for a 16-pound bird. The same size thawed in cold water takes up to eight hours. Change water often so water temperature remains cold. Wash bird inside and outside and remove packaged giblets from both neck and rear cavities.

—Raw turkeys should be cooked at 325 F. Any meat or giblets used in the stuffing should first be cooked. A 16-pound turkey cooks in about four hours. Turkey is done when a meat thermometer registers 180 F in the thickest part of the meat. Today that's usually in the breast, while in years past it was the thigh. Let cooked turkey stand 20 minutes before removing any stuffing and before carving, as the carcass continues to cook and will be easier to carve then. Meat juices should run clear.

—Use a meat thermometer to test for doneness, even if the turkey has one built in. It's added safety. Pop-up thermometers are, however, more reliable now than they used to be, especially in birds under 15 pounds.

—Foods should sit out no longer than two hours, even if kept hot. Harmful bacteria multiply between 40 and 140 F. If eating later, remove stuffing from turkey, place in shallow containers, and refrigerate immediately. Also, cut turkey off the bone and refrigerate. Don't refrigerate a whole cooked turkey because it takes too long to cool.

—Cooked and smoked turkeys should be heated according to package directions.

—Leftovers stored at 40 F should be eaten within three to four days (one to two days for stuffing and gravy). Leftover turkey can be kept frozen for four to six months; stuffing and gravy, one month. Leftovers should be reheated to 165 F, or eaten cold.

Pieces of turkey, such as breasts or roasts, should be cooked to 170 F, concluded the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist.

The USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline is open to answer consumer questions at phone 800-535-4555.

Comparing disciplinary practices

Q. My mother and father were harsh disciplinarians when I was a child, and I was afraid of them both. My cousin, on the other hand, was raised in a home with very few rules. She was a spoiled brat and is still selfish today. Would you compare these two approaches to child rearing—the authoritarian and the permissive homes—and describe their effects on children?

Dr. Dobson

Answers Your Questions

A. They are equally harmful to children, in my view. On the side of harshness, children suffer the humiliation of total domination. The atmosphere at home is icy and rigid, and they live in constant fear of punishment. They are unable to make their own decisions, and their personalities are squelched beneath the hob-nailed boot of parental power. Lasting characteristics of dependency, hostility and even psychosis can emerge from this overbearing oppression.

The opposite approach—ultimate permissiveness—is equally tragic. In this setting, the children are their own masters from their earliest babyhood. They think the world revolves around their heady empire, and they often have utter contempt and disrespect for those closest to them. Anarchy and chaos reign in their homes, and their mothers are often the most nervous, frustrated women on the block. When the children are young, their mothers are stranded at home because they are too embarrassed to take their little devils anywhere. These children later find it difficult to yield to outside symbols of authority, such as teachers, police, ministers, or even God.

To repeat, both extremes of authority are disastrous for the well-being of children. There is safety only in the middle ground, which is sometimes difficult for parents to locate.

Q. What goes through the minds of children when they are openly defying the wishes of their parents?

A. Children are usually aware of the contest of wills between generations, and that is precisely why the parental response is so important. When a child behaves in ways that are disrespectful or harmful to himself or others, his hidden purpose is often to verify the stability of the boundaries.

This testing has much the same function as a policeman who turns doorknobs at places of business after dark. Though he tries to open doors, he hopes they are locked and secure. Likewise, a child who assaults the loving authority of his parents is greatly reassured when their leadership holds firm and confident. He finds his greatest security in a structured environment where the rights of other people (and himself) are protected by definite boundaries.

Q. Regarding relationships between the sexes, do you favor a 50-50 arrangement in the husband-wife interaction?

A. Yes, but let me offer two opinions about the ideal relationship between husbands and wives that may clarify my viewpoint. First, because of the fragile nature of the male ego and a man's enormous need to be respected, combined with female vulnerability and a woman's need to be loved, I feel it is a mistake to tamper with the time-honored relationship of husband-as-loving-protector and wife-as-recipient of that protection.

Second, because two captains sink the ship and two cooks spoil the broth, I feel that a family must have a leader whose decisions prevail in times of differing opinions. If I understand Judeo-Christian traditions correctly, that role has been assigned to the man of the house.

However, he must not incite his crew to mutiny by heavy-handed disregard for his wife's and children's feelings and needs. He should, in fact, put the best interests of his family above his own, even to the point of death, if necessary.

Other combinations of husband-wife teamwork have been successful in individual families, but I've seen many complications occurring in marriages where the man was passive, weak and lacking in qualities of leadership. None of the modern alternatives has improved on the traditional masculine role.

Now that they are labeling everything, I find myself checking the calories, fat and nutritional content. There really is a lot of fat in a lot of items. And the Snackwell line is getting larger and larger. Of course, it's more expensive, too.

Oh, well, I probably need the fat for energy to shovel snow! Now it's time to pack the car and head to Winside for baptism. You folks in N.E.braska don't even have any of the white stuff.

How about if we invite Dan. Rather for the NU-OU game? I see tickets, a pair, are bringing anywhere from $95 to over $200. Think I'll babysit Myles and watch it on television. Grandmothers have built-in excuses for staying where it's warm.

Helping control limits for children

By Sally Ebmeier
Coop Extension Agent

Parents and teachers sometimes complain that children won't do the things they are supposed to do. Perhaps part of the reason is the way rules and limits are enforced. Parents may enforce the limits one day, but not the next. Children learn to test their limits constantly because they are never sure how far they can go with their behavior before being stopped.

Adults may think of limits as constraining and undesirable. They can, however, be desirable to children because of the security they provide.

Limits that are consistently enforced make people feel secure because they know what is expected and that someone will be there if they go too far from the approved behavior. People who grow up in an environment where they have no limits usually become very conservative adults, afraid to try new things and meet new challenges.

Adults must maintain a trust relationship in order to insure the children's cooperation in establishing rules and limits. They must be firm, consistent and follow through. Firmness helps the children realize that they cannot push past the limits, and thereby gives the children the security of knowing exactly what is expected.

Consistency helps the children realize that the adult is dependable and can be relied upon to give the children the security of a well-ordered environment.

Follow through means that if there is a rule, it will be enforced. If someone breaks the rules, there will be a consequence or a punishment every time it is broken. If the rules and limits are established and enforced, the children will remind each other. If a child contributes positively to the group, he or she will be shown approval and be accepted into the group.

Explain the reason for certain limits, behaviors or situations to the children. The "why" gives meaning and order to their world. This will help them accept more readily the behaviors, limits or situations.

Too many rules and limits will discourage exploration and experimentation and become too complex to monitor. It is better to have a few rules that the adult feels are really important and that can be consistently enforced than to have many rules and no follow-through to stop behavior that is not in agreement with those rules.

Limits provide security if parents make rules that are realistic for the age of the child, that can be enforced, that are consistent and that provide enough discussion so that the child understands what is expected.

at 6:30 in the morning. After she was taken to the hospital and Sister Gertrud was able to explain it to her, she understood what "had happened," said Rev. Riley.

Anne feels comfortable here in N.E.braska and said she realized last week that she had had a dream in English, the first she can remember.

She has found herself using American slang also. "When I learned English in Germany, I said 'yes'. Now I say 'yeah', just like everybody else."

First Baptist dedicates sign

First Baptist Church of Wayne recently dedicated their new Main Street sign provided for by Memorial Funds. The new sign displays quotes from the Bible and lists upcoming events. First Baptist was established on Dec. 17, 1881 by Rev. J.F. Heilner, and his wife. At that time the church was located on 3rd and Logan Streets. In 1891 the land was purchased on 4th and Main where it is currently located. Under the guidance of 35 different pastors, the church has served God on Main Street for over 100 years. Current Pastor Doug Shelton established the newest of many programs conducted there—a college ministry. Each week a Sunday night service is lead by Wayne State students. On Wednesday nights pizza is provided at one of the dormitories, and then a college Bible study is held at a student's home. A Sunday night dinner is also served to College students and church members at the church each week.

Wayne Church Women United met Nov. 3 for World Community Day at the United Methodist Church at 1:30 p.m. Fifty-eight were present for the program and installation of 1996-1997 officers from Wayne area churches.

The program's theme "Preserving the Fruits of God's Labor" was presented by officers and Madge Bruffat and son, Ben, Lisa Nelson and son Jeffrey, Pastor Gary Main and the Treble Clef Choir. The message, the scriptures and the songs portrayed the theme that children are the ultimate fruits of God's labor, and the roles that women, mothers and parents must take in nurturing our beloved children.

Officers for the next two years were installed. They are Fern Kelley, United Methodist Church, president; Bette Ream, First Baptist, vice president; Dorothy Grone, Our Savior Lutheran, secretary; Zita Jenkins, United Presbyterian Church, treasurer; and Helen Goblirsch, representing St. Mary's Catholic Church. Dorothy Aurich from Our Savior Lutheran installed the officers.

Waynian receives merit award at UNL

John Witkowski of Wayne is one of five University of Nebraska-Lincoln faculty members who received excellence or merit awards at a Lincoln ceremony Sunday night. The awards were presented by the Nebraska Chapter of Gamma Sigma Delta, honor society of agriculture. Witkowski, professor of entomology and associate director of NU's Northeast Research and Extension Center at Concord, received a merit award. He has played a leadership role in developing the first integrated pest management program for N.E. braska.

Surveys conducted in N.E. braska since 1983 have documented positive returns to farmers in excess of $1.5 million from the integrated pest management program. He is considered one of the top authorities on controlling the European corn borer. He joined the university in 1975.

Fred Baxendale, Dennis Conley, Glenn Helmers and Jim Kinder, all of Lincoln, were the other award recipients; according to Richard Waldren, president of the Nebraska Chapter of Gamma Sigma Delta and professor of agronomy. The recipients are members of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UNL.

Helmers, award of merit recipient, joined the UNL Department of Agricultural Economics in 1965 and was promoted to professor in 1975. He teaches undergraduate and graduate classes while carrying out a wide variety of research projects. His professional interests include risk management, sustainable agriculture, structure of agriculture and financial analysis among others. He is the author of more than 190 articles, book chapters, and other research publications and presentations.

Baxendale, entomologist and associate professor of entomology at UNL, received the excellence in extension award. He was credited with providing strong leadership for educational programs, including the Crop Pest Management Update, the Backyard Farmer television program, the Urban Pest Management Team and the Turfgrass Science Team among others. He was cited for being able to communicate various entomological concepts in ways that would be understood by the novice and yet not found boring by more experienced individuals.

Conley, associate professor of agricultural economics at UNL, received the excellence in teaching award. Conley redesigned an undergraduate course in agribusiness management to combine lecture materials with a computerized agribusiness management simulation. He also redesigned a graduate course on demand and price analysis in agriculture to include experiential learning. He has sought to improve the infrastructure of courses and classroom teaching. Conley has worked to analyze student advising effectiveness and to revitalize the curriculum.

The excellence in research award went to James Kinder, professor of animal science and associate director of the Center for Biotechnology. Kinder has studied reproductive physiology and reproductive endocrinology of domestic animals, particularly beef cattle. His research on beef cattle has become of vital importance for all beef cattle producing nations. Kinder's dedication to research is matched by continuous effort as an educator at the undergraduate and graduate levels. The animal scientist regards research he has accomplished as part of the integral process of education of his graduate students.

Doug Korth, who operates a feedlot near Randolph, Neb., spreads manure during a Cedar County field day on manure-spreader calibration. Small, portable scales are used to calibrate equipment and samples of manure are analyzed to determine nutrient content, according to Charles Shapiro, soils specialist at the University of Nebraska Northeast Research and Extension Center near Concord. Initial results showed that most producers did not know how much manure they were applying, and if asked to guess, they tended to underestimate the amount applied. Shapiro hopes that the project, financed by a grant from the NU Water Center/Environmental Programs unit, can be expanded to other parts of Nebraska.

Measuring manure with calibrators

CONCORD, Neb. — Producers typically do not know how much manure they are applying to a field, and when they guess, they tend to underestimate the amount of manure applied.

These are the findings of a University of Nebraska project that not only surveys producers but also gives them the tools to fine-tune their manure application, said Charles Shapiro, soils specialist at the NU Northeast Research and Extension Center here.

Shapiro and several colleagues recognized the need for quick and easy calibration methods and found small portable scales. The team received a grant from the NU Water Center/Environmental Programs unit to purchase a set of scales and conduct 15 calibrations. Extension educators in northeast Nebraska inquired among area producers to find participants. So far, the equipment of 10 area producers has been calibrated.

One manure calibration activity this fall was a field day sponsored by the Cedar County Livestock Feeders and Cedar County Cooperative Extension. More than 60 producers attended the event at Doug Korth's custom feedlot near Randolph, Neb. Korth said he has not had a problem with manure disposal in the past because he has been able to give it away to neighbors.

"But I've had some neighbors that I thought didn't realize what I was giving them," he said. "Manure is a byproduct, but it still has an awful lot of value to it, if you do it right. This gives you a chance to get some numbers."

Mike Lechner, Cedar County extension educator at Hartington, Neb., said an essential part of the project is the free nutrient analysis. Researchers had the manure samples analyzed for nitrogen and phosphorus content.

Nitrogen availability in the samples ranged from 120 pounds per acre to 470 pounds per acre, indicating that additional nitrogen applications would be excessive.

"Normal dryland corn should have 125 pounds to 150-pound of nitrogen per acre," Shapiro said.

Phosphorus content ranged from 178 pounds to 499 pounds per acre. Recommended rates for dryland corn are up to 80 pounds of phosphorus per acre. Producers need to realize that the nutrients available in the manure are just as good as the commercially bought nutrients, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said.

"If producers know what they're putting out, they can decide to change the rate or the location where applied. We're just helping start the planning process for them," Shapiro said.

Team members also surveyed the producers. "The survey was designed to help us understand what producers are doing. We wanted to find out where educational programming needs to go," said Raymond Massey, former NU farm management specialist who has joined the University of Missouri faculty.

Initial results indicate that educational projects such as this one are needed, he said. "Most producers did not know how much manure they were putting on per acre, and if we asked them to guess, they guessed less than they were actually putting on," Massey said.

One producer, for example, estimated he applied 25 tons of manure per acre, but the calibration showed he was applying 40 tons.

The manure application rate among the spreaders calibrated ranged from 16 tons of dry manure per acre to 46 tons per acre. At the sites where the manure spreader was calibrated several times, the variation between runs was only 7 percent. However, within a spreader pass, the variation can be up to 400 percent.

Researchers also asked the producers about the main factors that help them decide where to put the manure. The land's need of nutrients was the main factor helping producers decide where to apply manure, according to the survey.

The second factor, however, was land availability. When producers need to dispose of manure, they often choose the nearest available land to apply the manure.

"At certain times of the year, it's waste disposal, at others, it's nutrient management," Massey said. These practices show that manure is not an easy product to handle, he said.

"There is lots of opportunity for education. These producers were positive about learning, but they were frustrated with the mechanics of manure management," Massey said.

Rick Koelsch, biological systems engineer at UNL, said the design of contemporary manure spreaders is partially to blame.

"We want the producers to treat the manure spreader as a fertilizer applicator, but the question is whether they can do that with the current equipment," Koelsch said.

Manure spreaders do not provide a uniform application and spread pattern, Koelsch said. "The current equipment is disposal equipment," Koelsch said.

These criticisms of manure spreaders reflect a change in perspective. Typically, producers have looked at manure as a waste, not a resource, Lechner said. "The calibration project allows them to rethink what they're doing."

The team has funds to calibrate five additional manure spreaders, but Shapiro said he hopes to obtain funds to do more. "I hope individual extension educators across the state can start using the scales. It makes a lot more sense to use local data when we try to inform producers on manure management," he said. "We want to show that we can use the nutrients in manure more effectively."

Two alternative methods offer producers ways of determining their manure application rate without the help of scales. These methods will be explained in NebGuide G95-1267 which is expected to be available at extension offices across Nebraska early in 1996, Koelsch said.

Subsidy payments to cut profits from producers

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — High grain prices could mean Nebraska farmers will have to repay about $166.1 million in federal subsidy payments.

That could hurt earnings for farmers hit by bad weather this year. But state Agriculture Department officials said Tuesday that subsidy repayments in general should allow farmers to break even on the market.

The subsidy payments are issued to make up the difference between target prices and actual grain prices. They are designed to help farmers when prices are low and to be paid back when prices are high.

"When farmers sign up for the program, this is part of the contract," said Pat Ptacek, assistant director of the Agriculture Department.

Prices for corn, grain sorghum and wheat have been high this year. Payments are made to farmers in the spring and again after harvest to protect them from low grain prices. The early payments are used to help pay planting expenses.

The federally set target price this year for corn was $2.75 per bushel. If the average market price remains above that rate, farmers have to repay the difference between the target price and the amount of deficiency payment they received.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture projected a deficiency payment of 40 cents per bushel on corn. Half that amount has been paid to farmers. Dan Steinkruger of the Consolidated Farm Service Agency said it appears that full refunds may be necessary.

The president of the Nebraska Corn Growers Association, Richard Plock, said the high price for corn probably will not offset the reduced yields expected because of prolonged spring rains and an early freeze.

"If you're looking at 25 to 30 percent less yield, you need higher prices to break even," he said. "My net income will be down because my gross income is down and my expenses are up."

Randy Klein of the Nebraska Corn Board said refunding the advance deficiency payments is a concern for farmers who have had a bad production year. But, he said, on average getting a good market price is better than relying on the advance deficiency payments.

Farmers will be notified in March what the refund probably will be for corn.
