Rainbow Rider helpers take care of the horses

By Clara Osten

Many children dream of having a horse to ride whenever they want. For several area young people, that dream became reality through the Rainbow Riders program.

Horses used for therapeutic horseback riding in the Rainbow Riders program were kept with some of the junior volunteers since last September when classes ended.

Rainbow Rider junior volunteers Jennifer and Kathryn Taber and Rebecca Brumm each cared for horses at their homes during the winter months. Also, the ponies used to pull the carts were cared for by Gert Vahlkamp.

ble for three horses-General, April and Rusty-from Labor Day through the winter-months.

Rainbow Riders has nine horses and ponies that need to be cared for during the off-season.

"It is important that the horses be handled and ridden on a daily basis," said Nancy Lunzer, an instructor for the group. "That is not possible if all the horses are at my house. Letting the junior volunteers keep some of the horses is good for the horses and good for the volunteers who learn responsibility associated with having an animal to

Third in a series —

Plan designed for efficiency

This is the third in a series of articles concerning the proposed bond issue that Wayne area voters will be voting on on May 14. This week's article deals with the first floor--the fifth and sixth grade

In addition to reducing costs through the use of shared space, the proposed middle school project would have the benefit of not displacing students during constructions

"Our Middle School_students will continue to attend classes at the existing facility without interruption, until the addition is complete," said Eddie Elfers, media relations chairman for the Building Better Schools Committee,

That has been one concern of parents," Elfers said. "Another is separation of the younger students from the high school students. But the floorplan of the addition, and careful scheduling, will prevent any are on the first floor of the addition,

"There will definitely not be a mixing of the elementary students with the high school students," Elfers said. "The fifth- and sixthgrade curriculum is still mainly dependent on a home-room structure -- the students spend most of their day in the one room.

The hallways between the fifthand sixth-grade rooms would be extended to allow for sufficient locker storage and easy access.

The addition would also allow middle school students to have access to technology that has been. unavailable in the current facility. For example, it would contain a library/media center that would have current research technologies and an adjoining computer lab forindependent study needs. The library/media center would contain more appropriate space for inventory and delivery needs than the existing building offers.

"The present middle school structure does not have a working The fifth-and sixth-grade rooms science lab," Elfers said. "The new middle school would offer a science separated from the seventh-and tab with the latest available eighth-graders by a floor and equipment and research separated from the 9-12 grades by possibilities."

The project, held in conjunction with Earth Day, provides an oppor tunity for Wayne residents to clean up their yards and neighborhoods. Yard waste such as leaves the new middle school addition would accommodate seating for 600 and a performing area for band and vocal performances, string concerts, middle school assemblies, one act plays, middle school physical education classes, middle school extracurricular activities in sports or other performing arts, or some high school activities when the middle school schedule permits.

Seventh-and eighth-grade students would have safe and quick access to advanced coursework in the high school -- there would be no

with students and teachers walking back and forth every day

Art, industrial technology, computer technology, band, chorus and other courses offered to the seventh- and eighth-graders would be readily accessible and shared with the high school students there would be no unnecessary duplication of space.

The middle school would be only 75 feet from the entrance of the West Elementary building,

Will the 'sky killers' come?

Due to the volatile nature of summer storms, "sky killers", our name for tornadoes, may develop and threaten everything in their paths. Humans are destined to be mere observers of this ferocity as such tornado activity is beyond control.

Once a threatening storm develops, scanned by sophisticated electronic gear, our local police department notifies surrounding communities of the potential threat, and local firemen take their positions as storm spotters.

When a storm "watch" is upgraded to a "warning", then policesound the sirens expecting the public to take shelter

Numerous southern states have been battered by the sky killers this spring. Unless one has either experienced a tomado's wrath, or viewed the incredible damage, it is difficult to imagine the fury unleashed by Dame Nature.

Are we ready to confront the devastation such sky killers might bring? Are you and your family members personally prepared and schooled in taking appropriate shelter? If your children are home alone, do they know where to go for maximum safety?

Do you have on hand such items as a battery radio, candles, flashlights with new batteries, a first aid kit, and other emergency gear? Last week those people in Tennessee didn't think it would ever happen to their homes and community either, but it did.

Our local police and firemen are ready to deal with such a potential reatastrophe. Are you?

Death tolls always mount when storms strike in areas where people are unprepared. And sky killers are no respecters of people, rich or

When things disturb us, many Americans run to the government, either for handouts or asking for more rules and regulations. After taking a turn running the remote, and deciding which TV shows are appropriate for the family to view, many are ready to request that gov emment start labeling everything.

Even the American Psychological Association has a study revealing commercial telly doesn't provide a realistic portrayal of children, the elderly, minorities stamfly, the police, or much of anything. As often said, TV is a fantasyland. That also describes political commercials.

Unfortunately, these kids are not aware of the high risks that come along with this behavior. The fact is that each year hundreds of children die from inhalant abuse-some times on their first try--yet many parents and educators remain ignorant of this "silent epidemic."

Inhalants are the third most abused substances among 12 to 14year-olds in the United States, coming in right behind alcohol and tobacco. And as many as one in five students in the U.S. has sniffed or "huffed" (inhaled through the mouth) such products as magic markers, gasoline and air freshners by the time they reach seventh grade. Yet while many kids admit to

These products are easily available, free or inexpensive, legal and may give a pleasurable affect by depressing the central nervous system. Day of Prayer

Dear Editor:

Thursday, May 2, will be the 4th consecutive observance of National Day of Prayer. Our themesfor this year is "Honor God," taken from I Samuel 2:30 which says, Those who honor me. I will Our forefathers dedicated this land to God. They knew the necessity of having God involved in their public lives. From its bold beginning, this nation was founded on the timeless principle of freedom. It's something our country has fought and died for. And, it's precious privilege that sets us apart from any other nation on the face of the earth. Those founding fathers gift from God, and they made it a regular practice to "Honor God" in their thoughts, word and deeds. More than two centuries later, we still recognize that this must be an important part of our lives.

Yet, in recent years, we have neglected to stand for those Christian principles that were the foundation of our nation. We have been silent when we needed to speak out against the wrongs that pervaded our land. It is time we refuse to give up the moral values that this land was founded upon. It is time we weep and grieve over our land. It is time we, "honor Ged."

Down through the years, our nation has always prayed during a time of crisis, whether it was seeking our independence or asking for divine help during Desert Storm We are desperately in need of God's blessing and direction in our lives and country today. That is why we are being urged to pray as a people

Our Pledge of Allegiance speaks "one nation under God." This should indicate our lives, as a people, are under God, yet there are those who do everything possible to keep God out of our lives. In 1984, President Reagan said, Without God, there is no virtue, because there is no prompting of our conscience. Without God, there is a coarsening of society. Without God, democracy will not and cannot long endure. If we ever forget that we are one nation under God, then we will be a nation gone under.

What an opportunity we have on May 2 to join together as a nation to pray for God's blessing to rest upon our land. Will you intercede for our land? Unless we do, America can not long survive. - «

Has concerns

I have some concerns about the middle school building issue. I think there are a lot of questions that still need to be answered before an informed vote can be made.

I was recently informed that the architect, Mr. James Dyck, was hired at a rate of 15-20% - 14% for new construction and 20% for renovation. I would like to know how many architects were interviewed and who and how many people were involved in this hiring process? As a member of Our Savior Lutheran's building committee, I can say we interviewed four architectural firms from a group of 12 with fees ranging from 8.5 to 15 percent. All firms were very reputable and allifees were negotiable. I do not doubt Mr. Dyck's credentials or ability. However, at 15% of $8.1 million his fees alone come to $1,215,000. An architect secured as 8.5 percent would only cost $688,500. A savings of $526,500. I understand that a contract has already been signed with Mr. Dyck. Would a "no" vote terminate this contract and allow the school board

Legislature wraps up

By Pat Engel

The Nebraska Legislature has wrapped up the 1996 session of slow and often long drawn out debate, which at times appeared to be leading nowhere. The legislative action leaves th e$3.7 billion, twoyear budget with and ending balance of $ 12.5 million above the required reserve. Final budget adjustments added $2.9 million to the state budget that was adopted last year. The budget period runs from July, 1995 to June 30, 1997. Although the budget is $12.5 million above the minimum reserve, the surplus may be needed to help offset a $12.8 million deficit in receipts. A successful motion made on behalf of the Appropriations Committee, on which I serve, will restore $ 1 million vetoed from the state's mental health funds. The override does not affect the state's budget control.

Three motions were offered by various senators to override Gover-nor Nelson's vetoes, but failed when members of the Legislature held fast to their convictions that we must hold the line on spending and ensure government efficiency by upholding the $15.4 million in budget vetoes. Included in the override motions were requests to restore $638,000 for juvenile offenders and a motion to restore $3.2 million for pay equity for workers with developmental disabled. Senator Hudkins' motion to override the Governor's veto on LB 256, which would have required the state to pay for half of the cost of caring for people judged mentally incompetent to stand trial, also failed.

Voting on various issues which are all very deserving of our attention and funding, has at times been difficult and I hope that you perceive my attempts to be fair and honorable. I will be home on Monday. As always, I encourage all of you to voice your opinion and participate in the legislative process by contacting me or my office in Lincoln if you have any issues or concerns that need to be addressed in

Tips are given for teen parties

Set your ground rules with your teen before the party

Stress shared responsibility for hosting the party and jointly plan the party activities. Plan on being home during the entire party. Carefully select the location for the party to allow for comfort and adequate supervision. Replenish food travs and the drinks. Your presence will help keep the party running smoothly and give you a chance to meet your teen's friends- but do not hang around! Remember it is illegal to offer alcohol to guests who are under 21 or to allow guests to use other drugs in your home. Let your teen know the law and the consequences. Alert your self to the signs of alcohol or other drug use by teens.

Guests who try substances shoul Be willing to call the police if unwanted guests refuse to leave the party. Notify the parents of teens who arrive at the party drunk or under the influence of any other drug to ensure the teen's safe transportation home. Do not let anyone drive under the influence of alcohol or other drugs.

Notify police when planning a Jarge party. This will help the po-lice protect you, your guests and your neighbors. Discuss with the police an agreeable plan for guest parking.

Note: the police's ability to assist you will, of course, depend on the size of your community and its po-the party. Limit Party attendance and set start and ending times. Make a guest list, issue invitations and restrict party crashing. Guests should not be allowed to come and go. This will discourage teens from leaving the party to drink or use other drugs elsewhere and return.

For parents of teens attending-a party

Be sure you know where your teenagers will be: Obtain the address and phone number of the party host or hostess. Let your teen know that you expect a phone call if the location is changed.

Contact the parents of the partygiver to: Verify the occasion. Offer assistance. Make sure that a parent will be present.

Know how your teen will get to and from the party and if needed you will be able to provide transportion. Urge your teen never to n home with a driver who has been drinking.

Set the time teens are expected to return home. Be awake, or be sure to have them awaken you when they arrive home

If your teenager stays overnight with a friend after the party, check with the parents of the friend to verify that they want your teen to stay over and will be home, you both agree on the length of stay and other basic rules.

Avoid spontaneous sleep-overs when possible, you and your teen may want to phone the party host or hostess the next day to express appreciation for the hospitality.

Some persons who take antihistamine containing products experience drowsiness - a beneficial effect if cold symptoms cause sleeping difficulty. Diphenhydramine is prone to cause drow siness and is a popular cold preparation ingredient.

Drowsiness is undesirable during the day for persons who must remain alert. An antihistamine that is less prone to cause drowsiness is warranted here. The antihistamines brompheniramine, chlorpheniramine, and tri-prolidine tend to cause less sedation than diphenhydra-mine. Why would a child isolate himself?

Q. My teenage son rarely mixes with his peers. He just wants to stay in his room most of the time. What do you think causes him to isolate himself in this way?

A. He may have developed one of the most common ways of dealing with deep feelings of inadequacy and inferiority, which is to surrender and withdraw. The individual who chooses this approach has concluded in his own mind that he is inferior. He measures his worth by the reaction of his peers, which can be devastating during the competitive adolescent years. Thus, he concludes, Yes, it's true! I am a failure, just as I feared. Even now people are laughing at me. Where can I hide?" a

Having accepted his own unworthiness, which was his first mistake, he is forced to guard his wounded ego from further damage. "Caution" becomes his watchword. He withdraws into a shell of silence and loneliness, choosing to take no chances nor assume any unnecessary emotional Especially during the elementary school years, I believe we have much greater reason to be concerned about the emotional health of the withdrawing child than we do the more aggressive troublemaker. Children at both extremes often need adult intervention, but the child who surrenders all the time is much less likely to get it. He doesn't bug anybody, and he cooperates with his teacher and tries to avoid conflict with his peers.

But his quiet manner is dangerously misleading. The adults in his life may fail to notice that his destructive self-image is rapidly solidifying and will never be pliable again. Considering the alternative ways to cope with inferiority, withdrawal is probably the least effective and most painful

Knowing what your son is feeling, you should have a greater understanding of what he needs from you in the way of love and support. Q. What role does nutrition play in hyperactivity?

A. The role of nutrition in hyperactivity is a controversial issue, which I am not qualified to resolve; I can only offer my opinion on the subject. American people have been told that hyperactivity is a product of red food coloring, too much sugar intake, inadequate vitamins and other related nutritional causes. I don't doubt for a moment that improper eating habits, which have the capacity to destroy us physically, could easily be related to the phenomenon of hyperactivity.

However, I am of the opinion that the writers of many faddish books on this subject are trying to make their guesses sound like proven facts. Many of the answers are not yet available, which explains why so many "authorities" disagree violently among themselves.

The nutritionists whom I respect most highly are those who take a cautious, scientific approach to these complex questions. I am suspicious of the self-appointed experts who bypass their own professional publications and come directly to the lay public with unsupported conclusions that even their colleagues reject.

The above paragraph may irritate some parents who are following the advice of a lone-wolf nutritional writer. To those readers I can only say, "Do what succeeds." If your child is more calm and sedate when avoiding certain foods, then use your judgment as you continue the successful dietary regimen. Your opinion is probably as valid as mine

Q. Do you think better education is the answer to the drug abuse problem among teenagers?

A. Unfortunately, narcotics usage among teenagers will not be conquered by instructional programs. The kids already know the consequences of drug use probably better than their parents do. They are not deaf, and their abuse of substances is usually done in spite of the obvious price tag. Though we have to support our educational efforts with the young (it is our only hope for change), the drug problem will continue until it is no longer fashionable to "get high." When it becomes disgraceful to use drugs, the epidemic will be over--but not a minute sooner

Ask Karen... Q. I only wore my gown

one time. Does it need to be cleaned before I put it away?

A. Only time will tell if the garment is stained, and then it's often too late. We often get prom dresses, bridesmaid's gowns and other formal wear several months after they've been worn. Stains, especially perspiration, can be harder to find and remove from delicate clothing, no matter how minor, you need to tell your drycleaner before the article is cleaned.

Time to teach bike safety

It is the time of year when children love to ride their bicycles Following the laws and taking precautions can help reduce accidents.

The American Academy of Pedi-

- atrics offers these suggestions:
 Parents should set limits on where children may ride, depending on their age and maturity. Most serious injuries occur when the bicyclist is hit by a motor vehicle
- Under age seven, children should ride only with adult supervision and off the street.
- The decision to allow older children to ride in the street should depend on traffic patterns, individual maturity and an adequate knowledge and ability to follow the rules of the road.
- Children must be fitted with approved helmets and taught to wear them on every ride. If you begin this practice early when your child gets her first two-wheeler, it will
- The most important rules of the road for children to learn are; ride with the traffic; Stop and look both in LB 1039, the Legislature extended the filing deadline to May "Nebraskans who will benefit from these changes need only complete the Schedule II and return it to the county assessor's office as soon forms will be forwarded to the Department of Revenue and we will see to it that the form is matched to applications and income statements already filed and received."

Applicators are certified

About 200 Nebraskans earned certification as custom applicators at an intensive, statewide training seminar Feb. 28-29 at Central Community College-Hastings Campus.

The event was sponsored by the Nebraska Fertilizer and Ag-Chemical Institute and CCC and was designed for fertilizer and agricultural chemical applicators. Participants learned about liquid and dry fertilizer calibration, markers and computerized monitors, tank cleaning, compatibility and mixing order, and technological advances. Attending the semmar were Fred Barge, Wesley Greve and Shawn Isom of Wakefield and Edward Fletcher of Wayne.

BALLOT TITLES AND OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

PROPOSED BY THE NINETY FOURTH LEGISLATURE FIRST SESSION 1995

Also included are Statements of Explanation in Italics Prepared by the Executive Board of the Legislative Council

PROPOSED BY THE 1995 LEGISLATURE PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 1

A vote FOR this proposal would add a provision authorizing the Legislature to provide for the enforcement of mediation, binding arbitration agreements, and other forms of dispute agreements, and other forms of adoptive resolution voluntarily entered into, and which are not revocable other than upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract. This amendment would allow parties to voluntarily agree to waive a jury trial, narrow the scope of appeals and limit the use of formal rules of evidence and civil procedure.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would not add the new language referred to above authorizing the Legislature to enforce other forms of dispute resolution, including binding arbitration, agreements voluntarily entered into
