College employees vote to join union

The clerical and maintenance support staff of the Nebraska State College System from Chadron, Peru and Wayne State Colleges have voted overwhelmingly for Union representation by NAPE/AFSCME Local 61.

The vote count in the election was 165 in favor, 44 opposed and nine voided or challenged ballots.

Approximately 250 employees were eligible to vote.

According to Bill Arfmann, the Executive Director of ANPE/AFSCME, "The turnout of over 80 percent and the strong vote for NAPE/AFSCME representation show that these employees intend to participate."

"The support staff care about the students and the colleges, and they want to be treated fairly and with dignity. The turnout was higher than the votes several years ago by teachers and professionals in the system, and almost three times higher than that of Nebraskans in primary voting," Arfmann added.

Charlie Roland, a painter at Wayne State, said, "Fair procedures for determining promotion, improved health and safety practices and an equitable grievance procedure are high priorities for all of us."

NAPE/AFSCME is the largest state employees' union in Nebraska. The organization has been in existence since 1972 and affiliated with AFSCME in 1987, after the legislature passed the State Employees Collective Bargaining Act.

Spring planting nearly finished

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Nearly all the corn has been planted in N.E. braska and most farmers are finishing soybean planting, according to crop specialists at the N.E. braska Research and Extension Center in Concord.

"We seem to be in better shape this year, but it is a long time until October," said Charles Shapiro, Soil Scientist-Crop Nutrition Specialist.

Shapiro said the cool soil temperatures have caused the corn seeds to grow slower.

"There haven't been many days when the soil temperatures have been above 60 degrees. Corn needs soil temperatures over 50 degrees and soybeans need at least 60 degree temperatures to grow," Shapiro said.

BECAUSE OF the cool, wet spring, some of the corn that has emerged is yellow.

"The optimum temperature for corn growing is 86 degrees. With the predicted temperatures near 90 degrees for next week, there should be a lot of corn growth," Shapiro said.

Shapiro added that this part of Nebraska has been fortunate to have escape the heavy rains some areas of the state received.

"We missed the heavy rains and erosion that hit some parts of the state. The moisture levels are in pretty good shape at this point in time."

Corn needs approximately 24 inches to produce a crop. "Assuming we are at 12 inches now, we need another 12 inches before the crop is finished," Shapiro.

THE COOL temperatures may have resulted in some herbicide injury because the corn wasn't able to grow out of it.

Shapiro said some farmers may need to make changes in their herbicide plans and predicts there will be re-evaluation of plans.

"Farmers will need to take a 'wait and see' attitude before making any changes in their crop plans," he said.

The spring weather has not had a lot of effect on insects and other

Logan Street work to begin on Monday

Crews will begin work Monday on the Logan Street widening project.

Scott Milliken, project manager with the Nebraska Department of Roads, said baracades will be put up prohibiting traffic from traveling on Logan Street from Second Street to Seventh Street.

A temporary crossing will be available at Fifth Street.

The first phase of the project involves removing the concrete and bricks presently on the street. This is expected to take seven to 10 days.

Motorists will need to use Fairgrounds Avenue or Seventh Street for east and west travel.

Milliken urges people not to damage or move markers that have been placed along the site.

He also reminds parents to keep children away from the construction site and construction equipment that may be located in the area.

First National's voluntary participation in the IOLTA Program is seen as a commitment to its community.

Foundation President John R. In this climate the Foundation Board is particularly grateful to the First National Bank for participating in the IOLTA Program. Cataracts affect over 80% of our senior citizens. In fact over one million cataract surgeries are performed annually in the U.S. alone

New technological developments in implants, ultrasonic equipment, lasers, diagnostic testing, and surgical techniques have made cataract surgery one of the most effective procedures today. Currently, over 98% of cataract patients experience significant improvements in vision, without major complications

Until now, the high cost of this new technology for cataract surgery was only available in the larger surgical facilities. This meant that you would have to travel for a complete eye examination and surgery. Not any longer.

Complete eye care and cataract surgery is now available at Providence Medical Center in Wayne. You don't have to travel outside of your community to have your vision tested for cataracts. With Dr. Wilcockson, Dr. Koerber and Dr. Magnuson offering comprehensive diagnostic and surgical services, you now have the most advanced eye care available right here in town.

Call Dr. Koerber or Dr. Magnuson for a complete eye examination and cataract vision screening today. If you would like more information on cataracts for yourself or someone you know who may be experiencing loss of vision, call today for a free informational brochure.

Wesley Blecke, son of William and Rhonda Blecke of Wakefield, has won a $1,000 All-College Scholarship from Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL).

Blecke is one of 1,000 graduating high school seniors to be honored as a recipient of this scholarship.

The 1996 recipients were chosen from more than 6,200 applicants by an independent committee of admissions directors of higher education. Selection was based on academic record, leadership qualities, church and community involvement, extracurricular activities and the student's own statements.

pests, according to Keith Jarvi, IPM Extension Assistant at Concord.

"WE HAVE had a few cut worms in corn that was planted in alfalfa ground but other than that, we haven't seen many problems," Jarvi said.

Jarvi added that the severe winter and the temperature fluctuations hurt the insect population.

"We are starting to see some bean-leaf beetle feeding damage, but nothing out of the ordinary," Jarvi said.

Jarvi added that while the number of insects detected this spring is not unusually high, the cool, wet weather has left the corn more vulnerable to these insects.

tween $1 and $3 million, stating that taxes in Wayne are already too high.

The five ballots that favored spending between $3 and $6 were split on whether a new building should be built or the present building renovated.

Several of those that did not favor the May 14 bond vote said they felt the issue of the Carroll school "needed to be addressed in addition to the Middle School and high school.

A number of those responding suggested renovating the Middle School over a period of two-to-three years.

Several of those responding also questioned the need for more space for fewer students than were in the system 50 years ago.

Finally, three of the respondents suggested following the example of the Omaha school system which is remodeling 100 year-old buildings.

Jolene Jager

leadership, obstacles overcome, unique endeavors, special talents and community service.

Winners may use their scholarship money for any type of continuing education or training beyond high school, not just a four year college or university program.

OSHA provides consultation

Employers concerned about providing safe and healthful workplaces for their employees can request an on-site visit by one of the Nebraska Department of Labor/Safety Division's OSHA Consultation Program's consultants to determine if safety and health hazards exist. Since 1975, the Safety and Labor Standards Division has worked to assure that all employees covered under the Federal Williams-Steiger Occupational Health and Safety Act of 1970 are assured of a safe place to work. At the same time, the program can help employers avoid the monetary penalties that result from work related injuries.

At an employers request, trained consultants inspect employee work locations in Nebraska to identify safety and health hazards. Confidential reports are provided to the employer. Such reports are not forwarded to any federal agency. No citations or penalties are issued. Employee training on health and safety subjects is also available to supplement the inspections if requested by the employer.

The program's staff also performs a variety of other tasks to assist in the implementation of and continued compliance with new federal standards. These include on-site job safety, consultation and training. The program seeks to assist Nebraska employers in promoting safety in the workplace and in avoiding the violations that lead to federal penalties.

This is a popular program among Nebraska employers because the service is at no cost to them and gives them a chance to correct deficiencies discovered during the consultant's visit without penalties or citations. During the average year, more than 5,000 workplace hazards are identified and corrected through the on-site consultation program.

For additional information about this program or to request a free consultation, call the office at 402-471-4717.

How to teach responsibility to children

Q: My two adopted daughters are sisters. They were 6 and 8 years old when we adopted them last month. They have many sloppy habits, such as not using a fork to eat, leaving the water running, and not brushing their teeth unless I stand over them. How can I teach them to take responsibility for themselves?

A: One of the most effective tools available for teaching responsibility to children involves the use of specific rewards for proper behavior, a system first expressed in the Law of Reinforcement by educational psychologist E.L. Thorndike. The system states, "Behavior which achieves desirable consequences will recur."

In other words, if an individual likes what happens as a result of his behavior, he will be inclined to repeat that act. If Sally receives favorable attention when she wears a new dress, she will want to wear the dress again and again. If Pete wins with one tennis racket but loses with another, he will prefer the racket he wins with. This principle is disarmingly simple, but it has profound implications for human learning.

My point is that a correct use of rewards (reinforcements) can make your children want to brush their teeth and eat with a fork and hang up wet towels. Unfortunately, it is not sufficient to dole out gifts and prizes in an unplanned manner. There are specific principles that must be followed if the Law of Reinforcement is to achieve its full potential.

Among the most important of those particulars is the need for immediate reinforcement. Parents often make the mistake of offering long-range rewards to children. It is usually unfruitful to offer 9-year-old Joey a car when he is 16 if he'll work in school during the next seven years. Second- and third-grade elementary school children are often promised a summer trip to Grandma's house in exchange for good behavior throughout the year. Their obedience is typically unaffected by this lure.

Most children have neither the mental capacity nor the maturity to hold a long-range goal in mind day after day. Time moves slowly for them; consequently, the reinforcement seems impossible to reach and uninteresting to contemplate.

For animals, a reward should be offered approximately two seconds after the behavior has occurred. A mouse will learn the turns in a maze much faster if the cheese is waiting at the end than if a five-second delay is imposed. Although children can tolerate longer delays than animals, the power of a reward is weakened with time.

Returning to the question, it is important for you to understand that the irresponsible behavior of your adopted girls has been learned. Children learn to laugh, play, run and jump; they also learn to whine, bully, pout, fight, throw temper tantrums or be tomboys. The universal teacher is reinforcement. The child repeats a behavior which he considers to be successful. A youngster may be cooperative and helpful because he enjoys the effect that behavior has on his parents; another will sulk and pout for the same reason. When parents recognize characteristics which they dislike in their children, they should set about teaching more admirable traits by allowing good behavior to succeed and bad behavior to fail.

Q: Don't companies use extinction to help people conquer a smoking habit?

A: That's right. The objective is to eliminate the pleasantness (reinforcement) usually produced by inhaling cigarette smoke. A tube is aimed at the face of the smoker from which will come very stark, concentrated tobacco smoke. Whenever the individual takes a puff from his own cigarette, he is shot in the face with the putrid smoke from the tube. The smoker begins to associate cigarettes with the stinking, foul blast in the face, and a high percentage of cases have reported to develop a strong dislike for smoking.

Tips for storing winter woollens for summer

Wool sweaters, skirts, pants and shirts must be clean before being stored. Dirt and food stains are an insect's invitation to dinner. Sweaters may be hand washed. Other items may need dry cleaning, but not pressed.

The place where woolen clothes are stored also must be cleaned.

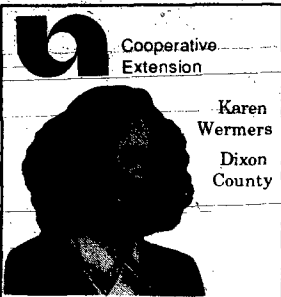

mothball odor concentration is high. In an open area, the odor generally repels insects. Cedar has a strong scent that also repels insects, but keeping the chest tightly closed is really what prevents their infestation.

Be leery of cedar chips, sprays and oils applied to cardboard or wood. They lack sufficient concentration of the volatile oil and lose what they do have through evaporation. To be effective against moth larvae, a good cedar chest or closet must have at least three-fourths of an inch of thickness of heartwood and must close tightly to keep oil from evaporating. It is the cedar's volatile oil that kills; the smell does not repel moth larvae.

Storing garments in plastic bags is not a good choice because clothes can't breathe in plastic and bags eventually get sticky and brown.

A cotton bag is better for garment storage. Store garments in a cool, dry, well-ventilated area to help prevent any mildew growth. Consider a dehumidifier if storing clothes in the basement.

Check stored clothing periodically. An ounce of prevention will pay off in terms of maintaining the condition of clothing between seasons. Proper storage also will help to extend clothing life.

Cooperative Extension

Karen Wermers
Dixon County

Vacuum the floor, wipe down walls, dust shelves, wipe out drawers. Sanitation is very key to keeping insect populations down.

Despite the smell, protect woolen garments by using paradichlorobenzene crystals in the area where the garment will be stored. Use one pound of crystals or balls for each 100 cubic feet of space. Mothballs will kill larvae and insects in a closed area where Pharmacy & Your Health. WILL DAVIS. SAV-MOR PHARMACY. How Will You Care for Sunburn? The best approach to caring for sunburn is preventing it in the first place. Using effective sunscreen and sunblock products enables most persons to wear little clothing and stay in the sun as long as they desire. However, many of us will get sunburned this summer season. When this occurs, it is too late to apply products that keep the sun from burning the skin. Most people will reach for sprays and lotions that contain local anesthetics to "numb" the skin. Several products are available from which to choose. Some are more effective than others. Ask us for a product recommendation. Also, don't forget three other ways to control mild sunburn pain. First, use cold water compresses or take a cool or cold bath. Second, take one of the nonprescription pain relievers: aspirin, acetaminophen, ibuprofen, naproxen, or ketoprofen. And third, drink plenty of fluids to replace body water loss.

Farm safety day camp is being planned

Each year, many children are killed or injured on America's farms. In fact, children ages 5 to 14 have the highest rate of injury among all farm workers.

Through the cooperation of St. Luke's Children's Miracle Network and the Dakota-Thurston County 4-H Clubs, a farm safety day camp for children ages 6 to 12 is being planned for Saturday, July 13 at the Homer Community School from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Children often see farm and livestock operations as an exciting playground — providing endless hours of fun and adventure. But these facilities and the livestock and equipment on them also can set the stage for tragedy.

The Farm Safety Day Camp will teach children how to prevent injuries or reduce the risk of farm accidents. During the camp, children participate in activities that reinforce the importance of taking responsibility for their own safety, respecting parents' safety rules and sharing safety tips with their family and friends.

Children can be registered for the Farm Safety Day Camp by calling The Professionals at St. Luke's at 800-252-8652 or 279-3333. Registrations must be received by July 1. A $15 registration fee for the event covers lunch, snacks, a Farm Safety Day Camp T-shirt and safety information packet.

Medium quality fresh and springing heifers were $600 to $800. Common heifers and older cows were $350 to $600. 300 to 500 lb. heifers were $250 to $400. 500 to 700 lb. heifers were $375 to $500. Good baby calves — crossbred calves, $50 to $90 and holstein calves, $35 to $50.

Corn Board approves budget

The nine farmer-directors of the Nebraska Corn Board recently approved a fiscal year 1996-97 budget of $2.6 million.

"The money will be used to increase demand for corn through a variety of domestic and international corn marketing efforts and new uses research," according to Board Chairman Bob Dickey of Laurel.

"In developing this budget, we tried to take a balanced, consistent, long-term approach to investing corn checkoff revenues," Dickey said. "The Board was especially cognizant of the fact that there will be more corn planted this year and that corn prices can change quickly in this volatile market."

Major allocations include $882,000 for international market development projects carried out

'Seven days without meat makes one weak'

We are almost delirious with sunshine. We knew it would come, but when? I'm still wearing a jacket or a sweatshirt.

It was an interesting weekend. Kay has taken a job with First Data Corp and was in Atlanta for training last week.

Incidentally, there was a fellow from their England office there who couldn't get enough beef. It had been ages since he'd had any. As my local Beef Board member says in her bumper sticker, "Seven days without meat makes one weak." Anyway, she breezed by Friday evening, ate a bowl of soup with us, and went on to G.I. She had spent the week before packing; and she's done it enough that she's an expert at it.

By Pat Meierhenry

Sue and Monte went there on Saturday to help. We couldn't, because I had committed to "stuff" here. I went to the grocery store at 8 a.m., got back at 9:00. A friend from Milford was buying buffalo grass seed from Stock Seed Farm, so she stopped for coffee.

She also brought a late birthday gift. She's my liberal friend, and I've given her a stuffed elephant. Now, she's presented me with a donkey.

I've named him Willy, for obvious reasons. He's on the bookcase, below a bunch of angels.

After she left, I finished putting up clean curtains and fed the Big Farmer. Then, I made punch; and we had a baby shower here from 1:00 to 3:00. The last guest was leaving when cousin Paul and his wife stopped, en route back to Topeka, for a quick visit.

I cooked a pot of chili because, by this time, the U-Haul was on the yard. Apartments in Omaha are rather expensive, so we've invited Kay to stay with us for the summer. Her furniture is stored in Louisville.

But her car, and Sue's van, were full of things that stayed here. How did one gal accumulate so much in 10 years? My upstairs has been taken over by plants, bedding, washing that cannot go into the dryer, books, pictures, etc. etc.

I'm sure it will motivate me to get up to the attic and make room. We did have paying guests also Saturday night, and had time to feed and entertain them. This is a big house, but it has no storage. One hundred years ago, folks had far fewer clothes and belongings. We should probably take a lesson.
