120TH YEAR — NO. 40

'Much Ado About Nothing'

Wayne State College Theatre department is currently presenting the Shakespearian play "Much Ado About Nothing." The play was originally a comedy set in Elizabethan times. However, the WSC version has been adapted to be set in 1945 and involves soldiers coming home from World War II and the girls who are waiting at home for them. Beatrice (Kerry McCue) is one of the girls and she is welcoming home Benedick (Jason Ehlers).

Storm damage discussion topic

County commissioners discussed what needs to be done to the portion of the courthouse that was damaged in a May 23 storm during their regular meeting Tuesday.

The board discussed the option of a building annex but Commissioner Robert Nissen said he felt any type of construction project needed to be put before the voters.

Discussion of both the work on the third floor and the possibility of building a new building are the result of the need to improve the accessibility of the courthouse.

Wayne Denklaue, Veterans Service Officer, told the board that something needs to be done with the smell on the third floor before anything else.

He also questioned whether or not the fact that the courthouse is on the Historical Register would have any affect on the decision to close off the third floor should an annex be built.

Commissioner Merlin Beiermann said he felt the board should make a decision and "get moving quickly."

He recommended contacting the county's insurance adjuster and work with the insulation and ceiling tile to get the odor out of the third floor.

In other action, the board discussed the possibility of involving the city of Wayne in establishing terrace parking on the south side of the courthouse.

The board also heard from the insurance company in response to a claim by Cory Brader.

Brader was involved in an auto accident earlier this year. He was seeking medical and general damages but the insurance company refused his claim.

Talent sought

As the dates of the Wayne County Fair approach, thoughts turn toward activities scheduled during the five-day event.

The sixth annual Talent Contest is again scheduled as part of Thursday evening's entertainment.

The contest was moved to a new day and time last year.

"In the previous four years the Talent Contest had always been in the Little Theatre, off Hogs Alley. Being in front of the Grandstand last year allowed for a bigger stage and seating for the large crowds," said Carol Brugger, a member of the talent show committee.

"Also, by moving the Talent Contest, the Fair Board thought to provide an evening of local entertainment for the fair-goers," Mrs. Brugger added.

The contest committee would like to encourage more local talent entries for the contest with a change of format planned for this year.

The contest will be divided into two age groups: 13 and under and 14 and over. There will be four areas of talent—vocal, instrumental, dance and miscellaneous.

"The past shows have always

Wayne Senior Center celebrates its 27th anniversary with a party

The Wayne Senior Center celebrated its 27th anniversary on June 27 with a banquet and entertainment.

Sixty persons were in attendance for the evening banquet. The meal was catered by the Providence Medical Center dietary staff.

Georgia Janssen, Coordinator of the Senior Center, gave the welcome. A skit titled "Build Yourself a Box", created by Neva Lorenzen, was presented.

The City Slickers & Country Mixers 4-H Club, served the dinner.

Helping in the kitchen were Sue Topp, Joyce Trevitt, Val Palu and Eliene Jager. The group sang 4-H camp songs for those attending.

The history of the Senior Center was read, noting the highlights of the past 27 years.

The officers were given special "survival" bags. Officers include, Meta Westerman, president; Barbara Sievers, vice-president; Rose Rieken, secretary; and Elda Jones, treasurer.

A total of 1,900 hours of volunteer time was logged this year at the Senior Center. The volunteer of the year was Elsie Hailey. In appreciation for her efforts, she was given an angel sun catcher.

The quilting ladies were also recognized with a candy kiss and a lunch.

The evening was closed with a poem entitled "Welcome to My House."

Next year's celebration will be held in the new facility currently under construction.

New game in Wayne

If someone were to ask Wayne residents what their favorite board games are, the answers would probably include such national favorites as Monopoly, Scrabble, Risk and Clue.

These answers may soon become passe as a newcomer makes inroads in the town's recreation market.

A newcomer replacing the old favorites as the town's most-played game?

The game may have a hometown advantage because the name of the game is "Game of Wayne America," and the message is civic pride with some local advertising thrown in.

The Wayne Rotary Club is selling the board games, where players can "wheel and deal around town," buying, trading, renting or selling familiar local businesses.

Properties on the perimeter of the board, as well as inside spaces, represent businesses and individuals who bought advertising to help pay for the project.

An initial order of 400 games has arrived and sales will begin this week. Games will be sold by the local Rotary members and will also be available at Legends, Mines Jewelers, Nebraska Floral and Gifts, Stadium Sports, Grandma Butch's Bed & Breakfast, Pac-a-Save and Edward Jones & Co.

Game orders can also be made by calling Wilma Moore at 375-4172 or 375-3098 or Kelly Baack at 375-1202 or 375-4929.

Cost of the game is $15.95 with all proceeds going toward the Wayne Rotary Club's community service projects, particularly youth, senior citizens and the Scholarship Fund.

Rotarians hold banquet

Dan Rose was named Rotarian of the Year, Morris Anderson was enshrined as a new Rotary Paul Harris Fellow and new officers of the Wayne Rotary Club were inducted during the club's annual banquet.

The banquet, held at Riley's Convention Center, marks the end of the Rotary year in Wayne and served as an opportunity to "roast" outgoing President Ric Wilson.

The newly inducted president is Rick Burleigh.

Gil Haase, past district governor for Rotary International, and the founding member of the Wayne Rotary Club when he was a resident here, returned to conduct the installation ceremony for the new officers.

In addition to Burleigh and Wilson, who fulfills the role as past-president, the new officers include Julie Murphy, president-elect; Faunceil Bennett, international service committee chairman; Ann Nolte and Darrell Miller, club service co-chairs; Rod Langbehn, vocational service chairman; Marion Arneson, sergeant-at-arms; Morris Anderson, secretary; Kelly Baack and Les Mann, community service co-chairs and Dennis Lipp, treasurer.

Dan Rose was named Rotarian of the Year.

Gone: one traffic control light

Kudos to the city council for deciding not to replace the overhead traffic light at the intersection of Third and Pearl Streets.

The aging light malfunctioned and will not be replaced as the Council has decided to discard the control device and install stop signs for the east/west traffic on Third, simultaneously permitting north/south traffic to proceed without stopping.

Times and traffic patterns change. Older residents recall when numerous athletic events were held at the city auditorium which contributed to increased traffic at the corner.

Also a grocery store existed on the southeast corner of the intersection drawing considerable auto movement. A traffic light at the corner became necessary and has, until recently, served well.

But needs change, and Council, in recognizing such changes, has made a decision to improve the corner's traffic flow. As a result the light is gone and stop signs are in.

We think the Council's action is timely, and will maximize the efficiency of vehicular movement without sacrificing safety.

Importantly, the change will eliminate a motorist having to sit through a light change in the absence of other traffic.

A word of caution to those tempted to speed through the intersection. Council has not changed the 25 mph speed limit.

Caution at any intersection is necessary. Council, nice move!

Circulators paid for signatures

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Just imagine the uproar that would have occurred if the framers of the U.S. Constitution were told that the document's articles would be based on level of their financial support.

That's just the sort of puzzlement confronting many Nebraskans these days when we see paid petition circulators collecting signatures for proposed constitutional amendments for a $1 or $2 per signature wage.

Maybe you haven't been approached by a signature seeker, but in Lincoln, they're as thick as flies at a church picnic, at the local courthouse and shopping centers.

And they're aggressive. I guess I'd be, too, if my paycheck hinged on whether I could talk a passerby into putting his or her signature on a handful of petitions on a tablet.

The problem, as some people see it, is that changes in Nebraska law have pushed the signature requirement so high that it is impossible to get something on the election ballot unless paid collectors are used. In other words, only those interest groups with big bankrolls will get things on the ballot.

Gone, they say, are the days when an inspired, grass-roots organization with a good idea can push that concept into law by passing petitions and getting it approved by the public.

Gee, that sort of sounds like the writing of the U.S. Constitution.

Personally, I'm not quite as alarmed as some folks.

Money already helps elect politicians, money helps court favor with those now — elected representatives, and money — in terms of payroll and impact on the economy — helps business swing some pretty sweet deals in the halls of the State Legislature and U.S. Congress.

That money has now become the main difference between getting ideas before the voters or not, however, is troubling.

The initiative petition process has always been viewed as the purest form of democracy, where the people can have a voice, where issues that bogged down in the legislative process can move forward.

Now, it seems to be a profit center for temporary workers.

The Lincoln Journal Star recently told of a paid petition circulator who was flown into town; put up in a hotel and was earning $300 a day. (Do they hire underpaid journalists, I wondered, when I read that.)

Another circulator noted that without paid signature collectors; a lot of things wouldn't get on the ballot.

That would appear to be the case this summer, with several groups racing to meet a Friday deadline to turn in about 98,000 signatures.

One group, the Nebraska Keno Operators Association, expects to spend $325,000 to $375,000 on paid circulators in its drive to put the issue of expanding legalized gambling before the voters.

You remember that group; it was one of several pro-gambling outfits that spent thousands of dollars in an unsuccessful attempt to convince state senators to put the same question on the November ballot.

Now they've taken their pocketbook to the streets and are writing checks for signatures.

The founding fathers should be fidgeting in their graves.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

KC checks

The Wayne Council of the Knights of Columbus presented two checks this week that represent proceeds from the annual Tootsie Roll Drive. Above, a check for $238.09 was presented to R-Way which will allow several of the clients the chance the attend Rainbow Riders. Left to right are, Dan Sukup, Tootsie Roll co-chair, Duane Dolph, Sean Davis, Jeff D'Ercole, Fred Kirschner, Jerry Sperry, Toostie Roll co-chair and Michelle Carlson, administrative assistant at R-Way. At right, Sperry presents a check for $500 to Carol Shelton, occupational therapist with ESU. The money will be used to purchase a walker to be used with children at the ESU's Tower School. One-half of the money collected during the drive stays in the community.

Land of the free, home of the crave!

Dictionaries define "crave" as desire, yearn or covet. Celebrating Independence Day, we reflect on the craving that "all men are created equal". Note that "all men" includes all genders.

In the midst of Whitewater, Fillegate, Travelgate, and the "gates" to follow, we midwesterners pause, questioning the myriad "cravings" of government.

There is renewed emphasis on two remarkably important phrases of the Declaration; that which states men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, and that when a government abridges those rights it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to provide new guards "for their future security."

Is this why we're seeing militias? These and other groups are asserting that government has no power over the basic rights which God has endowed upon the people. For how can government be so arrogant as to attempt to regulate these endowments?

In this, our time, if a citizen questions government about its lying, cover-ups, deceptions, contradictions and the seemingly perpetual greed for increased taxes, that person may be considered a reprobate.

Lest we forget, government is composed of ordinary people with all their idiosyncrasies, strengths, weaknesses and petty desires, looking deep into the well of wanting to be great.

If a public servant's base elements should dominate, will that person always act in the best interests of the constituency? Will they not resent having that pointed out? Perhaps to a point of justifying their own actions and their suppression of descent, actually violating the principles they were charged to defend?

When government exceeds its bounds, what protects the people if it isn't the Constitution and Declaration of Independence? Have not the courts become a tool for enforcing government power, and less a tool of preserving the rights of the people? Is it not common to see courts at various levels re-inventing law rather than applying the law?

Let all who hold office in any form as part of the government "of, by, and for the people" be reminded it is the governed who hold the power, and without the people, public servants have no authority at all. For government exercises its just powers only with the consent of the governed.

As we celebrate another Fourth of July let us take the Declaration more seriously, and insist government servants do the same.

Our freedom is guaranteed. Thus we "crave" it, and shall have it!

Hog producers being warned to watch association

Dear Editor,

Hog producers be aware the Nebraska Pork Producers Council wants you to consider giving up more of your profit in the form of 25 cents per hog. This comes on top of the recent 10 cent increase in your checkoff dollars.

The idea was introduced by your new NPPC President, Bob Ruggles, at the July meeting of the Nebraska Pork Producers Association directors. He wonders how best to entice the producers to voluntarily give this 25 cents per hog to the NPPC to spend.

Keep in mind the recent increase of 10 in your checkoff dollars brought in three million more revenue than expected, and the NPPC quickly figured out how to spend it.

Do you realize that with the increase of 10 cents in checkoff dollars on 100 hogs at 230 pounds at 50 cents per pound your checkoff jumped from $40 to $51 and would increase to $74 with the extra 25 cents per hog?

Furthermore, previous experience has demonstrated that a voluntary agreement on the producers part eventually gets manipulated into a mandatory edict by the NPPC. If you look at what may happen down the road and do not want the possibility of more of your profit being taken from you, protest now while this idea is still in the discussion stage. "Cut things off at the pass," so to speak. Write to NPPC President, Bob Ruggles at McCook and protest this further intrusion into your profit.

'Extinction' useful in overcoming fears

Q: My child is afraid of the dark. Can the principle of "extinction" be helpful in overcoming this fear?

A: Extinction is one of the most effective tools in helping children overcome irrational fears. I once consulted with a mother who was also worried about her 3-year-old daughter's fear of the dark. Despite the use of a night light and leaving the bedroom door open, Marla was afraid to stay in her room alone. She insisted that her mother sit with her until she went to sleep each evening, which became very time-consuming and inconvenient.

If Marla happened to awaken in the night, she would call for help. It was apparent that the child was not bluffing; she was genuinely frightened. Fears such as this are not innate characteristics in the child; they have been learned. Parents must be very careful in expressing their fears, because their youngsters are amazingly perceptive in adopting those same concerns.

In Marla's case, it is unclear where she learned to fear the dark, but I believe her mother inadvertently magnified the problem. In her concern for Marla, she conveyed her anxiety; and Marla began to think that her fears must be justified. Even Mom is worried about it, she thought. The fright became so great that Marla could not walk through a dimly lit room without an escort. It was at this point that the child was referred to me.

I suggested that her mother tell Marla she was going to help her see that there was nothing to be afraid of. (It is usually unfruitful to try to talk a child out of his fears, but it helps to show him you are confident and unthreatened.) She bought a package of stars and created a chart that showed how a new Disney video could be "earned." Then she placed her chair just outside Marla's bedroom door. Marla was offered a star if she could spend a short time (10 seconds) in her bedroom with the light on and the door open.

This first step was not very threatening, and Marla enjoyed the game. It was repeated several times; then she was asked to walk a few feet into the darkened room with the door still open while Mother (clearly visible in the hall) counted to 10. Marla accomplished this task several times and was given the stars on each occasion.

On subsequent trips, the door was half shut and finally closed except for the narrowest opening. Eventually, Marla had the courage to enter the dark room, shut the door and sit on the bed while her mother counted to 10. She knew she could come out immediately if she wished.

Mother talked confidently and quietly. The length of time in the dark was gradually lengthened, and instead of producing fear, it produced stars and eventually a video, a good source of pleasure for a small child. Courage was being reinforced; fear was being extinguished. The cycle of fright was thereby broken, being replaced by a more healthy attitude.

The uses of extinction are limited only by the imagination and creativity of the parent or teacher. The best method of changing a behavior is to withhold its reinforcement while rewarding its replacement.

Q: How common is hyperactivity?

A: Authorities disagree on the incidence of hyperactivity, but this disorder apparently afflicts between 6 and 10 percent of all children under 10 years of age. Males outnumber females four to one.

Q: What does the future hold for hyperactive kids?

A: Help is on the way. The maturation and glandular changes associated with puberty often calm the hyperactive youngster between 12 and 18 years of age. This explains why we seldom see adults jumping from the backs of chairs and rolling on the floor.

But for harassed parents who spend their days chasing a nonstop toddler around the house, there may be little consolation in knowing that the crisis will only last nine more years.

Kids ages 12-13 still need after-school supervision

Not surprisingly, being alone after school for many hours is seldom a good situation for most 12- to 13-year-old kids.

An extensive survey of eighth graders, conducted across ethnic and socioeconomic lines by researchers from the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Illinois, revealed that 12- and 13-year-olds who were home alone after school for more than 11 hours a week were more likely to use alcohol, smoke cigarettes or try marijuana. The findings indicated that 23 percent of kids who were unsupervised had used alcohol compared to 11 percent of children who were supervised. Additionally, 24 percent of home-alone adolescents had tried marijuana compared to 14 percent of children the same age under supervision.

Of course, each home situation is unique and other factors — such as the quality of parent/child interaction — also have an influence. However, during the early teen years, when adolescents are likely to assert their independence, having too much time alone gives them more opportunities to engage in risk-taking behavior.

Apparently the question of exactly how much time kids spend alone makes a big difference. Researchers have found that children on their own for one to four hours a week were only at a slightly greater risk than kids who were never left alone. The risk factor increased according to the number of hours children were unsupervised.

This poses a challenge for working parents. After-school activities, for older children are needed, but there is a shortage of these programs in communities throughout the country. And though 12- and 13-year-olds may resist organized activities, this research demonstrates the importance of making a special effort to find programs for preteens that support development of skills in the arts and sports; enrich academic studies; and provide opportunities for involvement in community service.

'Chicken Soup for the Soul' is becoming very popular

Have you notice the revival of chicken soup? You know, it was the Jewish mother's cure for everything. Recently, doctors discovered it really did have some medicinal value.

Now, there is chicken soup for the soul. Originally, a volume of 101 stories to "open the heart and rekindle the spirit." Two-fellows who have been motivational speakers, Jack Canfield and Mark Hansen, collected their favorite short stories and poems that they had been using or that they had appreciated and looked around for a publisher. It was published in 1993, by Health Communications in Deerfield Beach, Florida; and receive very little publicity. In fact, the large book stores ignored it.

But people who read it gave it as gifts, and word about it spread. My pastor's wife got it from her sister in California; after she read it, she gave me a copy. I admit it laid around most of the summer. But once I started it, I read a few pages every day. I laughed, I cried, my heart was touched. I gave a few as gifts.

Last year, a friend of Sue's presented me with the second "serving," 101 more stories, submitted by folks all over the country, and just as touching as the first. It got so when I asked if someone had read them, they had.

Of course, some folks bought them thinking they were cookbooks. So, last year, out came the Chicken Soup for the Soul cookbook. Sue gave it to me for Christmas. It's a collection of unusual recipes and the memories associated with them for the contributors. I'm not even finished reading it.

Now, comes the third helping! Plus, one called Chicken Soup for the Surviving Soul; every story about a cancer survivor. As one doctor writes about it, this book "shows us what all the blood tests, x-rays and MRI's cannot possibly reveal — the true nature of the surviving soul."

I love the preface, which says, "There is no path so dark, nor road so steep, nor hill so slippery that other people have not been there before me and survived. May my dark times teach me to help the people I love on similar journeys."

They are now planning Chicken Soup for the Laughing Soul, which I will have to have; and special collections for teachers, parents, Christians, Jews, teenagers, athletes, etc. It's an amazing project.

I'm a little envious. Such a simple concept, a project that would be fun to do, and one that helps so many people.

I'm going to submit a few of my own. You can, too. They come from Guideposts, Reader's Digest, refrigerators, church bulletins, newspapers. The address is: Chicken Soup for the Soul, P.O. Box 30880, Santa Barbara, CA 93130, fax: 805-563-2945, E-mail: soup4soul@aol.com#

In the third edition, concentration camp survivor Elie Wiesel says, "God created man because He loves stories." I think there's more to it than that, but these are great stories. If you haven't read them yet, you need to.

Melinda McVey McCluskey discusses extension research projects in progress on Charles Paulsen's CRP land.

Northeast Center hosts CRP tour

Two tour wagons headed out of the Northeast Research and Extension Center (NEREC) near Concord, and made their way toward Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) land, owned by Charles Paulsen, on June 18. The wagons brought approximately 60 people to several CRP plots where they saw CRP land returning to crop production firsthand.

"Demonstration sites give people concerned about CRP a chance to view different management techniques," said Melinda McVey McCluskey, CRP Research Coordinator. She explained that the purpose of the tour was to allow people to see the transformation of CRP into crop production. People learn more by visually seeing this change than through discussion only, said McVey McCluskey.

This is the second year the Northeast Center has given tours of their CRP project, and this tour included plots that have been released from CRP in the fall of 1995. The tour began at the Haskell Building at 2:30 p.m., and lasted about two hours, with the opportunity for participants to ask specialists questions throughout the tour.

The tours included presentations from various UNL Extension personnel, including John Witkowski, Entomologist; Melinda McVey McCluskey, CRP Research Coordinator; Dave Holshouser, Weed Specialist; Bill Kranz, Irrigation Specialist; Dave Shelton, Agricultural Engineer; Scott Hygnstrom, Wildlife Damage Specialist; Terry Gompert, Educator in Knox County; Charles Shapiro, Soils Specialist; Keith Jarvi, Integrated Pest Management Assistant; and Victoria Mundy, On-Farm Research Coordinator for the IMPACT project. Presenters focused on his/her area of expertise and how it related to CRP returning to crop production. Topics included: vegetation control, crop growth factors — such as soil temperature and seed emergence, tillage considerations, rodent and insect damage and fertility needs.

Another CRP tour is tentatively being scheduled for September. Registration is not required, and there is no charge to attend. For more information, contact McVey McCluskey at 402-584-2810.

Concord is fourth stop for group

The University of Nebraska Research and Extension Center at Concord was the fourth stop in the 1996 Weed Tour on June 24. Approximately 30 people visited this site. The tour began at 1 p.m. and lasted about 2 1/2 hours.

Dave Holshouser, UNL Extension Weed Scientist, led tour participants through various plots, explaining the treatments applied at each site. Highlights included several herbicide-tolerant crops, no-till and conventionally tilled plots containing labeled and experimental herbicides, and corn grown at 20 versus 30 inch rows. "Typically," Holshouser explained, "the Northeast Center site focuses on experimental treatments and new herbicide products on the market." Because of this, industry representatives are targeted in this area — so they can see their product's influence firsthand. The tour is open, free of charge, to the general public as well.

The tour also highlighted eastern black night shade and common waterhemp, two particular problem weeds this year. Most of the tour, however, focused on treatments. The cool, wet weather in May delayed the planting of half of the corn crop and all of the soybean crop about two weeks so postemergence treatments had not been applied to all crops by the tour date. "All plots will be signed for later viewing however," said Holshouser.

The Concord site was among six of the state tour stops. The tour began on June 19 with stops in North Platte and Sidney. From there it continued to Scottsbluff. Concord was the fourth site before the tour concluded with stops at Lincoln and Clay Center.

Center program director resigns his 23-year post

Marty Strange has resigned as program director of the Center for Rural Affairs, a post he has held for 23 years. He will remain associated with the Center as a consultant concentrating on special challenges and advising on organizational development. The change will become effective later this year when a new program director has been selected.

As program director, Strange has responsibility for developing and implementing the Center's program, which spans such fields as sustainable agriculture, farm policy, rural development and small business formation. A search for his replacement will begin immediately.

Strange and Don Ralston founded the Center in 1973 and have jointly served as staff directors since its inception. They were co-directors with joint responsibility for all aspects of the organization until 1989, when their duties were more clearly divided, with Strange managing the program and Ralston taking charge of administration. Ralston will continue as administrative director with responsibility for the Center's business and financial management.

In resigning, Strange told the Center board of directors that "directing a program as dynamic and provocative as the Center's is a delight. I will certainly miss the day-to-day excitement. But I'm also eager to move on to other challenges. It's someone else's time to lead the Center."

This change is part of a long term development process the Center launched in 1988. One of our top objectives is to assure the Center's permanence by reducing dependence on its founders. Marty has championed this cause and has pushed us harder on it than we sometimes wanted to go. We regret to accept his resignation but appreciate his leadership. He and Don are a wonderful team. Thanks to them, the Center is ready to make this transition.

Strange will consult with the Center on a program to finance beginning farmers who use excellent environmental practices and advise on establishing an endowment.

The Center for Rural Affairs is a private, non-profit organization whose mission is to improve the social, economic and environmental well-being of rural communities. Based in Walthill, it has a staff of 24 and a budget of approximately $1.4 million.

The American Angus Association is the largest beef registry association in the world, with over 29,000 active adult and junior members.

Pesticide container recycling is available in 31 counties

Producers in 31 Nebraska counties may take their pesticide containers to a recycling site this year, according to a University of Nebraska-Lincoln official.

Now in its fifth year, the program has been steadily increasing. Last year, more than 100,000 containers were recycled, according to Larry Schulze, UNL pesticide coordinator. The recycling program accepts clean 1- and 2.5-gallon plastic pesticide containers.

"The growth and success of this program have been incredible," Schulze said. The project is self-sustained.

Of the 50 sites, eight are available year-long, 11 will be available season-long and 31 will be available only at specific dates and times. Local NU Cooperative Extension personnel can provide exact dates and locations, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources faculty member pointed out.

The containers are inspected and recycled into new ones or pesticide shipping pallets. Before they can be accepted for recycling, containers must be inspected to determine if they have been properly rinsed.

They may be either triple-rinsed or pressure-rinsed to remove any pesticide residues. Lids and plastic wrap labels must be removed. Guidelines are available from extension offices, Schulze said.

The Agricultural Container Research Council, a national coalition of agri-chemical manufacturers, inspects containers a second time and supports the cost of grinding and transporting the containers and reusing the plastic.

The area site for year-long inspection and collection is the West Point Transfer Station in West Point.

The area 1996 sites that collect containers on specific dates are the Farmers Cooperative Association in Emerson on Wednesdays in July from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. and Hesse Produce in Pender on Wednesdays in July from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

PRESENTS BOOK

The Wakefield Community Foundation presented its Book of Memory and unveiled its stand at a Community Club ribbon cutting ceremony.

Bob Leonard of Bob's Slack Time Shop, designed and built the stand, donating much of the time and materials. Anderson Lumber donated the glass for the cover.

The Book of Memory is a permanent and public record of gifts given to the Foundation in memory of another individual. The stand is designed to allow interested individuals to open the top and leaf through the pages.

Nebraska State Bank will house the stand in the lobby, on a temporary basis.

The Foundation has given scholarships to a graduating senior from Wakefield that past two years. Grant applications for other community projects are being sought. However, since the Foundation gives grants only out of the interest from the funds, the amount available is limited.

Additional information about the Wakefield Community Foundation can be obtained from Laura Knox, foundation president, or Merlin Olson, treasurer.

Events to crow about

A number of the Chick Show activities have been part of the day's festivities since 1981 and new events are added to provide 'egg-citement' to the weekend.

Events like the National Cluck-Off, the Chicken Show Parade and the Egg Drop/Catch have always been favorites of the egg-stravaganza. Some events, such as the Great Chicken Chucking Contest and the Chicken Flying Meet and the Olymp-pecks give participants something to crow about.

Following is a synopsis of some of the events hatching during Poli-Chicks in '96.

National Cluck-Off

The National Cluck-Off pits human cluckers against human cluckers in both rooster and hen categories (although gender isn't important). Each contestant must register for either the hen or rooster category before the start of the event.

There is a hen and rooster competition in both the 12 and under and 13 and over age group. Contestants are allowed to enter either as a hen or as a rooster.

The contestants will be judge on his/her ability to imitate their favorite chicken. The judging scores will be on a 0 to 10 scale with a 0 being a rotten egg which should be thrown out of the coop-ition and a 10 being egg-sra special, grade AA.

Contestants are judged on four criteria: Authentic--do you really sound like a chicken; Vocal projection--can you be heard across the barnyard; Ammunition--do you act like a chicken; and Duration--can you do this for at least 15 seconds and can you stop before 60 seconds.

Show. Who will cluck off with this year's cash prize?

Chicken Show Parade

Nearly 10,000 people (and maybe a chicken or two) lined the streets to watch the Chicken Show Parade in 1995.

Beginning at 11 a.m. at First and Main Streets, moving north up Main and finishing at Bressler Park, the parade is always something to crow about.

Entries will be judge on the chickeness with this year's theme "Poli-chicks in '96."

The parade is sponsored by the Wayne Eagles Club who aren't chicken to get involved and have fun.

Egg Drop/Catch

One of the day's final events is the Egg Drop/Catch contest. During this contest, eggsperts vie for the top honor and risk egg on the face (literally) by attempting to catch a raw egg barehanded. The eggs are dropped from the City of Wayne's cherry picker.

The apparent record drop is 52 feet, four inches, is something participants have only been able to peck at in recent years.

For those unfortunate many who have to drop out because they dropped their egg or got scrambled by one, a bucket of water and paper towels are available for cleanup.

Bob Porter, one of those instrumental in bringing kiteflying to the Chicken Show, demonstrates the art of getting a kite in the air.

Kiteflyers

A new addition to the Chicken Show this year is the Midwest Winds Kiteflyers from LaVista.

The group, co-sponsored by the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce and the Chicken Show committee, will be at the Wayne High School practice field on Saturday.

There will also be a kite display from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., kite history and safety program from 10-10:45 a.m. and kite construction, decorating and flying in the auto shop from noon to 5 p.m.

Kite information will be available on Internet in the Tech Lab next to the auto shop from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The kite flying demonstration will be done weather permitting.

Chicken Flying Meet planned

The Chicken Flying Meet, sanctioned by the International Chicken Flying Association of Ohio, requires that all entrants must be the genu and species of the Gallus Domestica. Only entrants in the beak of health will be accepted foul fowl will e accepted.

In this event, the chicken is placed inside a mailbox roost prior to taking flight. If the chicken does not take flight of its own volition after 30 seconds, it will be declared a chicken chicken and given encouragement to fly the coop.

The chicken that flies the longest distance (several of last year's chickens ended up roosting in trees in the park for days) is declared the winner.

If you are not fortunate enough to own your own chicken, one can be rented the day of the show.

The Chicken Show Parade draws thousands to Wayne. Prizes are given in a number of categories related to each year's theme.

About the Ch

The Wayne Chicken show is an event that provides a relaxed atmosphere and friendliness to all who attend. The Chicken Show is under the auspices of the Wayne Regional Arts Council, a non-profit corporation of the State of Nebraska.

In the spring of 1981 the Arts Council was planning an art show with the intention of involving many of the craftsmen and artists in the region. It was decided that the show should have a common theme to demonstrate that art can be appreciated by everyone.

When the suggestion of Chickens as a theme was made, the planning dissolved into a series of puns and funny ideas. It was decided to also have a parade and some creative games based on the Chicken theme.

When one of the members told a spouse about the possibility of a contest imitating chicken sounds, the response was "Oh... a Cluck Off" and the National Cluck-Off was created.

Because the Arts Council had budgeted only $50 for the first Chicken Show, t-shirts were ordered and sold for supplementary funds. Since then, each year's Chicken Shirt has been of a different design.

With the exception of donations provided by generous corporations, the Chicken Show is supported primarily by the sale of the Chicken Shirts and souvenirs. Expenses include many of the cash prizes, the vegetables and ham for the omelet feed, advertising and supplies.

The Chicken Show has been focused in nearly all of the larger Nebraska and Iowa newspapers; on radio interviews heard in every state of the U.S., all provinces of Canada and from the B.B.C originating from Dublin, Ireland; in television news segments each year on Lincoln, Omaha and Sioux City, Iowa stations and the major national networks.

Those involved with the Chicken Show have made appearances on the Tonight Show, Good Morning America, the Mickey Mouse Club, Best of the Worst, and a syndicated quiz show; articles in Home and Away, USA Today, Wall Street Journal, Stars and Stripes, regional magazines, and national newspaper syndications. In addition, English, Japanese and Saudi Arabian newspaper clippings have been sent to Wayne by friends in those countries.

The Chicken Show Committee consists of about one dozen "good eggs" who hatch ideas each year and try not to "lay an egg." Plans for each year's event begin one week after each Chicken Show, with meetings held once a month for about nine months, and then with meetings every week or two. As the date of the show nears, more and more Wayne residents begin to commit their time.

The Chicken Show is manned by individuals and other volunteers from service organizations and businesses throughout the community. It is estimated that about 500 people volunteer their time in one way or another to the event.

Each year the Wayne Kiwanis have provided egg cookers and servers for up to 2,000 hungry omelet-eaters. TWJ Farms oversees the set-up and the M.G. Waldbaum Company provides the egg mixture. The Chamber of Commerce members warm-up the barbecuing of half chickens on custom-designed grills.

Last year as estimated 80 chickens and 10,000 people attended.

Henaween is cluck full of eggs-citing activities

New activities are scheduled for Henaween 1996.

Henaween, now in its fifth year, is a activity that adds "egg-citement" to the weekend's festivities.

An antique show and sale begins at 9 a.m. on Friday.

Local merchants will be participating in a balloon drop.

There will be an ice cream social and ice carving demonstration.

Live entertainment will be on stage and a street dance will feature Rick Uhl and Riata.

All these activities will be held at Riley's Parking Lot and Convention Center on South Main Street, beginning at 6 p.m.

During the evening, visitors will have the opportunity to stroll through the downtown area to survey the store windows decorated in the Chicken Show theme "Poli-Chicks in '96."
