

Chicken apprehended, only to escape

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

The Chicken is gone, the chicken is gone!

A six-foot "Chicken terrorist" is on the loose in Wayne.

The feathered fowl, who appears to have put on some weight during the past year, has been spotted in several local businesses stealing bird seed and candy corn.

On Wednesday afternoon the bird was in Pac 'n Save and apparently tried to leave without paying for his merchandise.

Prior to that, he was reportedly seen removing eggs from a shopper's carts crying "my babies, my babies."

Activities begin with Henaween on Friday.

With the exception of a quilt show which will be held in the basement of the Masonic Lodge across the street from Bressler Park, all other Henaween activities are scheduled to take place in the parking lot at Riley's on South Main Street.

An antique show and sale begin at 9 a.m. All other activities begin at 6 p.m. and include a balloon drop by local merchants, an ice cream social, and ice carving demonstration and live entertainment on the stage.

Henaween will conclude with a street dance featuring Rick Uhl and Riata.

THE CHICKEN Show begins on Saturday with the Chicken Run which starts at the M.G. Waldbaum parking lot in Wakefield and ending at Bressler Park.

The Tour de Chicken Bike-Tour will also be held early Saturday morning.

From 8-10 a.m. Kiwanis members will be making omelets at Bressler Park. Cost for the omelets is one dollar.

Beginning at 9 a.m. will be the rooster crowing contest and the chicken flying meet.

New to the Chicken Show this year will be the Midwest Kite Flyers. They will be demonstrating how to make kites and, weather permitting, will be flying kites in the field just southwest of Wayne High School.

ONE OF THE highlights of the Chicken Show, the parade, begins at 11 a.m. at the corner of First and Main Streets. The parade then moves up Main Street to 10th Street and goes from 10th Street to Bressler Park.

Cathy Varley, parade chair-person said that nearly 80 entries have already registered for this year's parade and she expects the parade to be larger than ever.

Varley also expects a large crowd to watch the parade because of the predicted cool weather. Last year an estimated 10,000 people lined the parade route.

Former Herald employee dies

Raymond Murray, 72 died Sunday at Providence Medical Center.

Murray was a printer at the Wayne Herald from 1948 until his retirement in March of 1988.

Murray lived his entire life in Wayne, graduating from Wayne High School in 1943. He served in the United States Navy from March 1943 to March 1946.

Ray was a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Wayne, American Legion Post #5291 and the Wayne Country Club.

Survivors include his wife Marilyn of Wayne, one son Rex of Charleston, W.V., one sister and brother-in-law Leola and Maurice Campbell of Omaha and nieces and nephews.

A complete obituary can be found in today's Herald.

THE CHICKEN was apprehended and taken into custody at the Wayne Juvenile Detention Center, only to escape once again.

He has been spotted driving around town in a yellow Chicken Coupe Deville. New yellow chicken tracks on the sidewalks indicate he has been roaming the streets in an effort to terrorize anyone eating chicken.

According to Marla McCue, one of the organizers of this year's Chicken Show, "he is a Rhode Island Red chicken who is so ugly, he's beautiful. He will definitely attract your attention."

Mrs. McCue urges anyone who spots the Chicken not to try to apprehend him, but instead to call the local Chicken Show authorities.

THE CHICKEN is in town, playing practical jokes and "being a real pain," to celebrate the 16th annual Chicken Show and Henaween this weekend.

Board listens to air quality study

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

The quality of the air at the Middle School and what should be done were the main items discussed at Monday's Board of Education meeting.

Ellen Indicke, representing the committee studying the Middle School situation, told the board that the group had held two meetings and arrived at four areas that needed to be dealt with. These included the mold/bacteria in the walls, the bats and bat droppings, the ventilation system and the heating/boiling system at the school.

Beckenbauer Construction took samples from the walls in three rooms. The results showed that the plaster in Room 208 (the Special Education Room on the third floor) contained 7,300 colony-forming units per gram (cfu/g). The bricks in that room contained 80 cfu/g.

Samples from the band room indicated 3,400 cfu/g in the plaster and 60 cfu/g in the brick. A sample from the office had 3,600 cfu/g.

Dr. Dennis Jensen, Superintendent of Wayne Public Schools, said that there was no standard indicating a safe level of units but that acceptable guidelines are less than 250 cfu/g.

On Tuesday, Johnny Smallwood with the Division of Labor for Labor Concerns visited the school and urged the district to wait to do anything until they know the results of tests he performed on the building.

Honeywell, Inc. did a walk-through of the building and recommended installing individual room ventilators at a cost of approximately $200,000.

Terminix will clean out the bats at the Middle School for $5,600 and the Carroll Elementary building for $1,630. The cost would include the removal of the bats and sealing the building so they would not return.

The cost would not include the removal of bat dropping but the company said that a local person could clean out the dropping which are not toxic.

Jeff Morlock, representing Otte Construction, told the board his company did not have enough information yet on the mold/bacteria situation but would recommend the Volkman Plumbing and Heating of Norfolk to install heating/air conditioning units on the outside of the building.

The system would be a temporary solution but Morlock said if the Middle School building were closed the units could be sold.

The system would be installed to dry out the walls before they could be treated to get rid of the mold/bacteria.

Cost for this system would be approximately $230,240,000.

The board will hold a special meeting Friday at noon to discuss what the next step should be.

The board and administrators also briefly discussed what could be done if the Middle School building is not ready to be occupied when school starts this fall but nothing was decided.

In other business, the board heard from representatives of Rambo Associates, Inc. in Omaha regarding construction comparison costs for the recently defeated bond issue.

The firm arrives at cost figures based on curriculum-based planning, project cost management and tax management planning.

Based on the preliminary figures, the firm feels a building project could be done for an estimated $6.5 million instead of the $8.2 million of the May bond issue.

The firm said renovation of the Middle School is possible, but would require some changes and additions to the present structure.

The board accepted a negotiated settlement with the Wayne Education Association which results in a $400 increase in the base salary to $20,950. Benefits remain the same as last year.

Board member Jean Blomenkamp said she is willing to work on re-activating the Wayne Foundation. Mrs. Blomenkamp will ask for donations as "seed money" to cover expenses and would like to get a committee of people from the community and a list of graduates and addresses in an attempt to solicit funds.

"With all the legislative and budget cuts, we will have to look to private money if we want to operate a quality system," she said.

The board voted to hire James Gagner as first grade teacher and set July 23 as the date for a budget hearing for next year's budget. The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Luhr began his fingerprint career with the FBI in 1971 as a fingerprint technician. He left that job in Washington, D.C., to return to the small town atmosphere of Nebraska. The Nebraska State Patrol hired him in July, 1984, as a fingerprint-examiner. In January, 1995, he was promoted to Latent Fingerprint Examiner where he worked until his recent promotion. Luhr says one of the highlights of his career came when he identified a fingerprint from an exploded mail bomb.

"As AFIS administrator I enjoy the state wide contacts. It is really exciting to have a person put his fingerprint in the system in North Platt and in a matter of minutes we can search that print against 1.5 million fingers," said Luhr.

Barry steps down as WSC basketball coach

Pete Chapman, director of athletics at Wayne State College, has announced several personnel changes within the athletic department. Mike Barry, the Wildcats' head women's basketball coach the last seven seasons, has stepped down from his position to become WSC's director of sports and recreational facilities. Taking over as head women's basketball coach on a one-year interim basis will be Jeff Goldstein, who has been on Barry's staff for six seasons, four as an assistant coach and two as a graduate assistant. Both position changes take effect immediately.

"We believe the changes which have taken place will benefit the entire College," Chapman said. "Although Mike is ending a very successful coaching career, we are excited about everything he has to offer to his new position. He built a very competitive and respectable women's basketball program at Wayne State and his efforts were greatly appreciated."

"Coach Goldstein has been a big asset to our women's basketball program for the last six years. His commitment and loyalty to the program made his promotion to head coach an easy decision for me. I am sure the success of the program will continue to grow under Coach Goldstein's leadership."

Barry finishes his WSC coaching career with an overall record of 95-92. He led the Wildcats to a winning record in four of the last five seasons and ranks second all-time in coaching wins at the school. His 1993-94 squad finished with a record of 21-6, with the 21 wins ranking second-most for a single season. As director of sports and recreational facilities, Barry will be responsible for managing WSC's Recreation Center and all other sports and recreational facilities. His duties will include facility scheduling, supervision and administration of home athletic events, and day-to-day management of facilities and personnel. Barry earned both his bachelor's (1983) and master's (1988) degrees from Chadron State.

Barry, a native of Grant, fills the opening created when Eldon Hutchison accepted a position in Fairbury. Hutchison also served as WSC head men's golf coach and Chapman plans on announcing a replacement as soon as possible.

"This was a difficult decision for me but these type of opportunities do not come along very often," Barry said. "Coaching has been a big part of my life for many years but I believe this is best for my family. One of the hardest parts of coaching is being away from home so much. This new position gives me the opportunity to remain in athletics and move into an administrative role. I am going to miss coaching and the special working relationships which were developed with the student-athletes, administrators and community members. I would like to thank them for all their support over the years."

"With Coach Goldstein taking over as head coach, it should be a smooth transition for everyone. He has a great understanding of where the program is and I am sure he will bring in his own successful approach to the position."

Goldstein assumes all responsibilities related to running the women's basketball program. During his six years on Barry's staff, he assisted with all phases of the program with emphasis on recruiting, scouting, on-court coaching and summer camp management. Goldstein, a native of Buffalo Grove, Illinois, came to WSC from Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View, Illinois, where he served as the assistant girls' basketball coach. A 1989 graduate from the University of Iowa, Goldstein spent four years as a basketball student manager, serving one year for George Raveling and three years with Dr. Tom Davis. He also helped to coordinate the University of Iowa basketball camps. Goldstein earned his master's degree in athletic administration from WSC in 1992.

"I am very excited about the opportunity Mr. Chapman has given me," Goldstein said. "I have learned a lot under Coach Barry as we built a successful program and I plan on continuing what's already been established. Following conversations with the players, I am excited about the future of the program and the changes that will be taking place."

Winside wrestling coach Paul Sok will be inducted into the Nebraska Scholastic Wrestling Coaches Association (NSWCA) Hall of Fame on Saturday, July 20 in Columbus.

Sok was a high school All American and a two-time State Champion. He was the NSWCA Coach of the Year in 1991 and has been District Coach of the Year three times. He has coached 14 State Champs, has had 15 Top Ten Chicken busted - flies the coop!

The Chicken was spotted Wednesday afternoon at Pac 'n' Save wandering up and down the aisles looking for people who were purchasing chicken or chicken-related products. He removed eggs from shoppers' carts and then attempted to leave the store without paying for his birdseed and Doritos. He was allowed to leave the store after being given a stern warning not to do it again. Mr. Chicken was spotted downtown giving a hug to a chick-en-loving citizen. He did not heed his warning to stay out of trouble and was captured by the local deputy and after a struggle was put into the Juvenile Detention Center on charges of terrorizing the community. Mr. Chicken did manage to escape and is currently wandering around Wayne, leaving fresh chicken tracks wherever he goes. He will be in town throughout the Chicken Show.

Hyperactivity causes problems

Q: What problems does the hyperactive child face?

A: The child with exaggerated activity usually experiences three specific difficulties in addition to his frantic motion. First, he is likely to develop psychological problems resulting from rejection by his peers. His nervous energy is not only irritating to adults, but he also tends to drive away friends as well. He may be branded as a troublemaker and goof-off in the classroom.

Furthermore, his emotional response is often unstable, swinging unpredictably from laughter to tears in a matter of moments and causing his peers to think he is strange. In short, the hyperactive child can easily fall victim to feelings of inferiority.

Second, the active child frequently experiences severe learning problems during the school years. He finds it difficult, if not impossible, to remain in his seat and concentrate on his lesson. His attention span is minuscule throughout elementary school, which leads to mischief and distractibility while his teachers are speaking.

But there is another academic difficulty that is also extremely common among hyperactive children; visual perceptual problems. A child may have perfectly normal vision, yet not "perceive" symbols and printed material accurately. In other words, his eyes may be perfect but his brain does not process the signal properly. Such a child may "see" letters and numbers reversed or distorted. It is particularly difficult for him to learn to read or write.

Reading is a highly complex neurological skill. It requires the recognition of symbols and their transmittal to the brain, where they must be interpreted, remembered and (perhaps) spoken as a language. Any break in this functional chain will inhibit the final product.

Furthermore, this process must occur rapidly enough to permit a steady flow of ideas from the written materials. Many hyperactive children simply do not have the neurological apparatus to develop these skills and are destined to experience failure during the primary grades in school.

Q: I am 13-and-a-half, and I haven't started to change yet. I'm shorter and not as strong as most of my friends. It's really embarrassing for me! Is there anything wrong with me?

A: No, there is nothing wrong with you. You are just progressing on your own timetable. It's just as healthy to grow up later as earlier, and there's no reason to fear the you will never mature. Just hold steady for a year or two, and then the fireworks will all begin to pop, just as for everybody else. I can promise you that this is going to happen.

If you don't believe me, take a look at all the adults around you. Do you see any of them that look like children? Of course not. Everyone grows up sooner or later.

Certainly, it's never much fun to be laughed at by your friends, but if you know you'll be different for only a short time, maybe you can stand it. Most importantly, don't you be guilty of making another person feel bad about himself if you happen to grow up before he does!

Q: You have said that the sexual revolution has the power to destroy us as a people. On what evidence do you base that supposition?

A: Mankind has known intuitively for at least 50 centuries that indiscriminate sexual activity represents both an individual and a corporate threat to survival. The wisdom of those years has now been documented.

Anthropologist J.D. Unwin conducted an exhaustive study of the 88 civilizations that have existed in the history of the world. Each culture has reflected a similar life cycle, beginning with a strict code of sexual conduct and ending with the demand for complete "freedom" to express individual passion. Unwin reports that every society that extended sexual permissiveness to its people soon perished in a matter of short time. There have been no exceptions.

Students are selected by high school principals and guidance counselors, national youth groups, churches or by the publishing company based on students' performance in scholarship award contests or extra-curricular activities.

Professors assist with tests

Drs. Edwin Battistella and Alan Bruflatt, humanities professors at Wayne State College, have been selected to read and score Advance Placement tests given to high school students by the national College Board organization.

Battistella will score exams in English Language and Bruflatt will score Spanish exams.

Each year the Advanced Placement Program gives hundreds of thousands of high school students an opportunity to take rigorous college-level courses and examinations and, bases on their exam performance, to receive credit and/or advanced placement when they enter college.

The Wayne State professors are among nearly 3,700 faculty consultants from across North America who evaluate more than 840,000 exams in 16 disciplines.

"We are very grateful for the contributions of talented educators like Professors Battistella and Bruflatt," said Dr. Wade Curry, AP Program Director at the College Board.

AMTA program deadline is nearing

The deadline to enroll in the seven-year Agricultural Market Transition Program (AMTA) is July 12. This is a one-time opportunity. Once the deadline has passed and a farm is not enrolled, it will not be possible to enroll it at a later date with the exception of expiring CRP acreages.

Eligible acres for enrollment are equal to the calculated 1996 CAB's for the farm not to exceed the effective cropland. No prior year participation requirements for the farm or producer are applicable to the 7-year AMTA program. If the CAB's are not enrolled, they will be dropped and no longer maintained.

A 50 percent advance payment will be made this year no later than 30 days after your contract is approved. In 1997 through 2002, a producer has the option of requesting the advance on Dec. 15 or Jan. 15 of the fiscal year. Final payments will be made each fiscal year no later than Sept. 30. A $40,000 per "person" per fiscal year payment limitation applies to AMTA payments.

Contact the Wayne County office immediately for an appointment if you wish to enroll your farm in the 7-year AMTA program.

Business booming

It's Monday after what's basically been a four-day weekend, beginning the week before, and I'm glad to be getting back to the routine of Hospice! Reminds me of the old days, when I went to work at the hospital to escape kids, cows and cooking.

June in the B&B business started out slow, but I need not have worried. It's picking up speed now, in its usual summer fashion. It's the "drop ins" that keep me on my toes.

A couple of weeks ago, a family from Illinois saw our brochure at the local antique mall, and decided to test our statement that said "kids welcome." So they knocked on our door at 8 p.m. Since it was a week night, I could accommodate.

The tough part was the breakfast menu. The kids did not like French toast, pancakes or waffles. Dad did not like quiche. We finally settled on strawberry shortcakes, and it was a hit.

The Big Farmer's sister and her husband have been here, on their way to Texas, necessitating trips to the airport, which is an hour from us.

We've had a colonel from Offutt and his wife, a nurse. Another couple was from Lincoln: the wife came here from the Philippines just one year ago. And, on the Fourth, a couple from Omaha, the wife from Japan.

By Pat Meierhenry

To add to our multicultural experience, the Farm House was the scene of a wedding on the fifth; and the groom was Hispanic.

In between, Murdock celebrated an "old-fashioned Fourth," and I participated in the variety show, we attended a huge Independence Day party at Roca, we took two dear Winside friends to see "Hello, Dolly," at the Loft theater, and we watched the video, Babe, which The Big Farmer received for Father's Day. How did they get those animals to act like they did?

I was pleased to see how many folks with WSC connections are going to be at the Olympics. I'll be going, for one week. More on that later. Now it's time to get to my "other job," the one that provides insurance and paid vacation and all that good stuff.

Weather via the Web

Movies, such as the recent block-buster Twister, remind us that the weather is one of nature's phenomena we cannot control. Because of increased technology, however, accessing specific weather information is only a few keystrokes away — within the vicinity of producers who need this data to keep tabs on their crops.

It used to be that farmers with a computer and modem could access weather information through an 800-number or bulletin boards. Now, with the development of the World Wide Web, more specific information can be obtained. The "old" internet system of getting weather data allowed producers to receive information about the weather conditions, such as growing degree days, and crop water use, over the computer. Today access to the Web version of this system allows farmers to enter information about their own crops, such as planting and emergence dates, and the system will tabulate the weather information accordingly for up to 10 fields of each crop.

The Web site includes weather stations both in and out of state, but producers in this area will undoubtedly be most interested in information from Concord, Elgin, O'Neill, Tarnov and West Point.

Producers interested in access to this Web-weather station should contact Bill Sorensen of the High Plains Climate Center in Lincoln. Sorensen can be reached by telephone, 402-472-6706; fax, 402-472-6614; or e-mail, bsorensen@hpccsun.unl.edu. Producers can also write for more information and access to this program: High Plains Climate Center IANR-UNL, P.O. Box 830728, Lincoln, NE 68583-0758.

For those who do not have the World Wide Web at their disposal, an 800-number is still available. By calling 1-800-336-2081, producers will have access to a tape-recorded weather bulletin which is updated a few times each week.

During the growing season especially, reliable weather information is necessary. Keeping an eye on Mother Nature's meteorological mishaps allows producers to adjust their crops' needs accordingly.

how to make 'Dirt Dessert' and Christopher Sebade demonstrated how to make an egg sandwich.

The next meeting will be July 8 at Barb Junck's home.

Soy ink is practical and renewable

More than 3,000 daily U.S. newspapers, 25 percent of the nation's commercial printers and the federal government are using soy-based ink for their printing needs. Current soy ink use consumes approximately four million bushels of soybeans per year, with potential usage estimated at more than 40 million bushels annually.

"Soy ink has numerous practical and economical advantages," said Jo Patterson of the National Soy Ink Information Center. "Businesses are looking for ways to become 'green' and soy ink is one product they can use to accomplish that."

Soy-based inks are more environmentally friendly than petroleum-based ink because they release no significant amount of volatile organic compounds (VOCs), which when released into the atmosphere by petroleum-based inks, contribute to the smog and pollutant content in the air.

In October 1994 President Clinton signed into law a requirement for all federal government agencies to use soy-based ink whenever technologically feasible and cost effective.

Consumers also like soy ink for its lower ruboff quality. "The number one complaint of newspaper readers is ink rubbing off onto their hands," Patterson said. "Soy ink stays on the paper and not on the readers' hands."

Although black soy news ink costs slightly more to produce than black petroleum news ink, all other soy inks are comparably priced. Commercial printers have discovered that soy ink will print 30 to 40 percent more than petroleum ink.

Another advantage for soy ink is that it is made from a homegrown, renewable resource.

For more information on soy ink, call the National Soy Ink Information Center at 1-800-383-1423.
