Council listens to new proposal for former Care Centre building

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Gary Donner, whose earlier request for rezoning of the former Wayne Care Centre building was rejected, presented the Wayne City Council with an alternative plan.

Under Donner's new plan, the facility would be converted into 16 separate apartment units, none of which would be two bedroom, six of which would be three bedrooms and one of which would be a one-bedroom.

Each of the apartments would have its own kitchen and bath facilities. Donner would also live on the premises.

The council voted 8-0 to set a formal public hearing for discussion on the issue at its May 27 meeting. The hearing is scheduled to begin at approximately 7:45 p.m.

The council voted 8-0 for approving an amendment to the zoning map during the third reading of an ordinance to rezone an area in the northwest section of the city.

The Wayne Housing Development Corporation has been unsuccessful in obtaining an extension on a purchase agreement for the piece of property in question and has therefore withdrawn its request to have the area rezoned.

Vern Hallstrom, who lives in the affected area did present to the council a petition signed by property owners opposed to the rezoning and asked the council to consider condemning of the property.

In other action, the council listened to the annual review from Jones Interstate.

Bruce Gilford told the council that the firm has seen a growth in subscribers and explained a number of changes that have and will take place to improve services to the community. He also listed a number of improvements his firm was responsible for during the move into the modules by the Middle School.

The council also voted 8-0 in favor of a request by Karen Shattuck to close off Third Street between Main and Pearl Streets for a Teen Dance in conjunction with Homecoming on July 11.

Shattuck has worked with Chesterman Bottling to sponsor the dance which will be held from 7-11 p.m.

A bid from Hopkins Cable Co. of Sioux, Iowa was accepted for underground electrical work in conjunction with the Highway 15 widening project.

Gary Postre, Electrical Distribution Superintendent, had sought bids from four companies and the Hopkins bid was lowest at $16,133. The state will reimburse the city for the costs incurred.

The council authorized the mayor to apply for a grant from Nebraska GreenSpace Stewardship Initiative related to the Library/Senior Center facility.

The grant would be valued at $9,324 and would be used to provide educational opportunities for those using the facility. The intended use of the grant would be to provide for low maintenance trees and shrubs on the grounds.

The council also authorized the water division to hire toward R Green Company to study a leak on the city's water tower to determine if it is a concern. The firm will look at the foundation of the tower and determine what action, if any, needs to be taken.

Plan brought before Council

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

A proposal to annex a portion of land on the east edge of Wayne was presented to the Wayne City Council during Tuesday's meeting.

Heidi and Kathy Allens, owners of Wayne West in Wayne, have asked to have a drawing shaped piece of land located between Highway 15 and Centennial Road annexed by the city.

The Allens plan to develop the property and construct a combination store/truck stop, similar to the one in Wyo. The area is presently zoned I-1, light industry and non-change.

Currently the property is outside city limits but does have access to water, sewer and electricity. According to City Administrator Jim Sallotz, the only additional requirement for the city should the area be annexed would be police protection. At the present time law enforcement is the area is provided by the Wayne County Sheriff's office.

Sallotz said that a facility of the type the Allens propose to build would benefit the industrial section of the city by providing services such as a scale, diesel fuel and shower for trucks and truck drivers who sometimes have difficulty with parking and other needs when travelling through Wayne.

The annexation would allow the Allens to seek tax development assistance from the city in the form of tax increment financing for the project which is estimated to add approximately $1 million to the city's valuation. The property must be within city limits before the end of possible.

State law requires a public hearing be held before annexation can take place.

On an 8-0 vote the council agreed to set a public hearing for discussion on the issue for May 27 at approximately 7:30 p.m.

The Nebraska Civil Air Patrol will hold a search and rescue exercise in Wayne on Saturday, May 3 at the Wayne Municipal Airport.

Activities are scheduled to be from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

During the exercise, air search teams will be paired with ground search teams. The ground teams are made up mostly of high school aged youth. Together they will proceed to search and locate a simulated downed aircraft somewhere in northeast Nebraska.

They will utilize radio, as well as hand signals to communicate with the searching aircraft.

Civil Air Patrol (CAP) is the volunteer auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force. It is made up of adults and teens from around the state.

The training exercises are designed to sharpen search and rescue skills in preparation for the actual event.

Last year CAP conducted 2,400 real missions across the nation, logging more than 20,000 flying hours. The Patrol saved 94 lives and saved taxpayers $60 million by having volunteers do the work rather than the paid members of the military.

Jaycee's clean up a success

The Wayne County Jaycees eighth annual clean up has been termed a "huge success" by those involved.

This year was the first time that all the curbside pickup could not be completed in one evening.

The Jaycees, with the help of the women of Lambda Phi Omega, filled pickups and trailers on Friday night until dark and worked again Saturday morning to pick up tons of branches, yard debris and garbage that had been set out by residents.

"The nice weather leading up to the clean up gave residents a lot of opportunity to get out and spruce things up which is exactly why the Jaycees see this project as a community service that Wayne residents have come to look forward to," said Gary Pouget, one of the Jaycees involved in the clean up.

"The Jaycees would like to thank Lambda Phi Omega for their assistance with the clean up and we would also like to thank Goldathers, Pizza Hut, Ampride and Gary's General Store for providing pizza for the many hungry volunteers that participated," Pouget added.

Volunteer work

A volunteer summit? Sounds like the new kid on the block. Some folk in hapless Washington leaders may not have a lot to do. Others suspicion the President's volunteer scheme will simply lead to more government spending.

Both major parties are convinced Americans will not support any more massive assistance programs, but maybe volunteers will pave the way toward more requests for government funding!

Think it through. Thousands volunteer to help those with mental health problems, hospitals, senior citizen, AIDS, learning difficulties and environmental projects. It's reasonable to conclude they will, one by one, start clamoring for Washington funding since the public has been brainwashed into looking to Uncle Daddy for solutions and funding.

Volunteerism out of Washington appears to be much ado about little, at a cost of millions of tax dollars.

But the volunteer summit did do one thing. It kept news media busy and away from nosing any further into all the goings on in the Capitol that aren't quite what they should be. More power to them.

No one has talked about the legal ramifications should a volunteer driving little leaguers to a game have an accident with resultant injuries. Then what?

Washington is evidently blinded to the millions of volunteers already at work. But, of course, that's without wasting taxpayer's money, so perhaps it doesn't count.

Where will Washington stick its nose next?

Legislature has lost rudder

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

With the recent death of State Sen. Jerome Warner, the Nebraska Legislature lost its rudder on property tax issues.

Jerry Warner wasn't one to talk much or to posture for TV cameras. He tended to mumble and to fumble for those scratchpad notes upon which he jotted significant facts and figures that he used in decision making. Yet his presence in the body was constantly felt, a silent, steady and firm guide to the ship of state.

Only 48 hours after Warner, 69, succumbed in his two year battle against career state lawmakers, embattled Senator, a debate that could be the most significant in this legislative session, legislative Bill 606, a school finance and restructuring bill, takes the state upon a journey toward an unknown destination, a new world of property tax reductions and restructured schools.

There may now be another lawmaker as suitable and as able as Warner to take over the helm. Tom Lundstrom alone would possess today's politicians from acceding the years of experience Warner had under his belt.

There are provide successors to Warner. State Sen. Adeyse Boldt of Hastings, for example, is ably guiding the Legislature on the LB 606 debate. State Sen. Doug Kristensen of Minden has deftly handled difficult and gnarly breaking technological issues at the head of the Transportation Committee. State Sen. David MacLeod of Beatrice, respiratory weight in with thoughtful analysis of different budget and political issues, no one can dispute the political savvy and legal expertise of State Sen. Kent Brashier of Omaha.

But no one has Warner's unique blend of intellect, objectivity, historical perspective and personality. He was a good person without being inoffensive. He was serious without being stuffy. He was witty without being caustic.

So many leaders today seem to view issues through the prism of their own background, biases and political leanings.

Warren was willing to evaluate a problem on its own terms and craft a solution that would serve the overall good of Nebraska. He was a leader from a small town on the edge of the state's second largest city. Other leaders, in contrast, seem too urban, too vocal, too Republican or too Democratic.

Much has been written in recent days about Warner's legacy. Nebraska's road system is better off by Warner's contemplation of the property tax rate cap contained in LB 1114, passed in 1996. The cap took effect in 1998 and will eliminate more than $200 million in revenue for Nebraska schools annually.

Warren always had indicated that he would support increased state money to schools, but a law would have to be passed to do that. The money went to the schools that need it most. Simple, uncomplicated, whole under the old school finance formula, greatly in economy price tag more than $1 billion in the increase of local options from capped state aid levels.

So something had to be figured out, and what resulted is a plan that local leaders' priorities will change, and districts will schools as leaders.

It's fitting that the plan proposed by LB 606 will last. It's a compromise between the old and new ways of doing things. While the old way was simple, the new way is slightly more complex. But it's a pocket full of coins for the old way.

One does expect a compromise. After all, those of the older and wiser generation, those of the Nebraska Press Association, know that the fault lies with both sides, and that the best way to fix it is to compromise.

The new way is a good way to handle road construction. The old way was a good way to handle highway maintenance.

It's fitting that the new way is a good way to handle education.

The new way is a good way to handle the White-water. The old way is a good way to handle the bridge.

But the new way is a good way to handle the bridge.

It's fitting that the new way is a good way to handle the bridge.

It's fitting that the new way is a good way to handle the bridge.

Beware of phone advice

FINANCIAL FRENZY

Beware of the Friendly Voice.

Article 2

It's time for another episode of "The Savings Account." It's the true life drama that illustrates the truth of that adage, "If it sounds too good, to be true, it probably is."

The story begins with the Victim, an ordinary guy who, like many other people, has been keeping an eye on the stock market, wondering if he should get into the action.

One night, the "phone king" during dinner, it's a friendly voice on the line full of information about investing in the market. The timing is fortuitous, but since Joe has been considering just the type of investing he's listening attentively.

The friendly voice phones regularly. During each call, he shares information about several stocks that are "booming" dramatically. Joe is impressed with the knowledge displayed from the friendly voice and Joe is on a first name basis.

One day, the friendly voice offers a bundle name stock with a "turkey" story. Now the Victim is naturally friendly, but persistent. Joe will buy 100 shares. The modest purchase helps pull Joe's boasting Joe's confidence in investing and in his "great" phone advisor.

Next, the friendly voice offers a bundle name stock with a "turkey" story. Now the Victim is naturally friendly, but persistent. Joe will buy 100 shares. The modest purchase helps pull Joe's boasting Joe's confidence in investing and in his "great" phone advisor.

When the "hot" stock suddenly drops $10,000, Joe is concerned, but the friendly voice talks with big stories about the company and urges Joe to buy more.

A graduate of the Lincoln School of Bookkeeping, he is a member of the Lincoln Bookkeepers Association. He is a member of the Lincoln Club and a member of the Lincoln Lions Club.

more, now. This opportunity can't wait. Joe agrees, after all, the friendly voice is a pro and knows what to do right?

The ending to this tale is as predictable as the plot of last week's made-for-TV movie. Everybody goes belly up, and the Victim, who is now several thousand dollars lighter, finds himself reasuring his experience for a recurring admiration hearing.

The most bothersome aspect of Joe's story is that it didn't have to happen.

Industry, government and media watchdogs continually warn people against giving money to someone they don't know working for them so they've never heard of especially over the telephone.

Athletic Banquet was a hit

Last Friday Wayne State College hosted its first athletic banquet which honored the Players of the Year in both female and male sports as well as having a main speaker and program.

The banquet was absolutely right on the money for many reasons. First, WSC should have an athletic banquet each year because the athletes deserve the special recognition for the time and effort they put in to their respective sport.

Second, the speaker that was brought in, Bradley Reed's former National Football League standout for the New York Giants and Tampa Bay Buccaneers was simply outstanding and if WSC continues to bring in quality speakers like Reed, then this athletic banquet will be a success on that merit alone for many years to come.

Third, and hopefully this wasn't just a lot of banquet organizers but this banquet was just perfect in the amount of time it lasted...not long.

Following a mingling period for a half-hour those attending were escorted to a dining room where a buffet style dinner was served.

Immediately after the program began, the entire banquet was completed in less than two hours.

Congratulations to the Wayne State Athletic Office and organizers of the annual banquet because it was a hit.

Mike Fitzner and Kathy Dalton were named the male and female athletes of the year at Wayne State for their accomplishments.

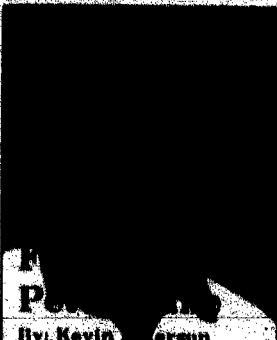

Fitzner, of course was a standout basketball player for Greg McDermott's basketball team and Dalton has rewritten the entire track and cross country record book for her outstanding achievement in the sport of running.

Runner up honors went to Darin Gregory from the baseball team and Amy Brodersen from the women's basketball team.

These athletes all did a magnificant job of representing Wayne State on the athletic fields.

There were, however, many athletes that deserve some kind of mention for their accomplishments for having a great year and this writer wants to name a few of the ones he's seen that deserve a spot on the list.

The men's basketball team is still recovering from being kept out of

Players of the Year

By Kevin Green

Jared DeSmedt had an outstanding year for the Wildcats football team and the offensive has now taken his golden arm to the Arena Football League to play with the Iowa Barnburners along with former teammate and WSC standout LaMart Cooper.

Kevin Swanson, who was incorrectly identified by the Herald last week as being drafted into the NFL, was actually signed to a free agent contract with the Chicago Bears and not drafted.

My apologies to Mr. Swanson but after a season like he experienced at wide receiver for the Cats last year, I just figured he deserved to be drafted. I believe he will make it on the Bears team because of the work ethic he's shown while at WSC.

Gabe Loft had a solid year on the Cats defense and deserves some special mention as does Kevin Swanson.

Damion Porter and Andy Tollett had magnificent years for the Cats football team as well.

Sharon Vanity volleyball team did not put up the impressive numbers as some other former team but she had some quality athletes, nevertheless.

Brenna Luhn, Jessie Pontow, Jennifer Roewe, and Tracy Weasel had solid seasons.

The cross country teams deserved recognition from what they accomplished in the classroom as well as the running course with Kathy Dalton leading the way.

Marta Kralik and Stefanie Seman also had solid track and cross country seasons as did Mark Baran from the tennis team.

The men's basketball team is still recovering from being kept out of the NCAA-II playoffs but that should not take away from the solid performances put forth by the likes of Mike Fitzner, Tyler Johnson and perhaps one of the most dominating players I've seen at WSC in some time, Craig Philipp.

The women's team didn't enjoy the same success as the men on the hardwood but Amy Brodersen's senior campaign didn't go unnoticed.

I was also impressed with the play of Carla Schultz and Megan Murphy.

Jeff Goldstein just completed his first year at the helm of the Wildcat women's hoop team and despite the fact he didn't enjoy an ample amount of success, he worked hard every game and from the looks of some of the players he's got from recruiting and those coming back, Goldstein is undoubtedly working just as hard off the court as he is on the court.

TURNING FROM the college campus to the bowling spotlight, a special congratulations goes out to Steve McLagan who was honored this week by the Sioux City Bowling Association by being inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Now those of you that don't necessarily believe this is any big deal, take heed. Getting inducted into the Sioux City Iowa-Bowling Hall of Fame is very impressive and it doesn't happen over night.

McLagan has poured his life blood into the sport of bowling whether it be promoting it, participating in it or just being a spokesman for it.

Wayne is very lucky to have the caliber of bowler that McLagan represents in our town. So what's next about the sport of bowling?

SPEAKING OF BOWLING. A good friend of mine happened to be bowling Tuesday night which was the final night of the season for the City League.

He entered the bowling alley carrying a couple of sacks of food and drink from a local establishment and proceeded to eat his supper before he bowed.

Of course by attracting attention from some of the bowlers because he happened to have food and they did not.

John Japoddy accepted.

Things have a funny way of evening out, however, because as Kelly Hansen stepped up to the approach for his first ball of the night, he took his normal steps before releasing the ball and the ball slipped off his hand and went backwards, towards the scorekeeper who was also on our team, Les Keenan.

After a short chuckle, he picked up the ball and rolled it out of strike. However, Keenan said that since the ball left his hand twice in the same frame, it should have been a spare.

ONE MORE QUICK note. This time it's about golf. I would like to take this time to point out that golf etiquette does exist and right here in Wayne, America.

Last weekend my buddy Doug Rose and I were playing a round of golf at the local country club.

It was a weekend and sometimes it can get slow on weekends but we came to expect that, not playing in a tournament.

We were on the ninth hole and were awaiting our turn to hit our approach shots to the green because there were still people putting.

All of a sudden a ball lands with in ear shot of us and that of course, started us right away because what in the world (we were thinking) is this person doing hitting his approach before we have even hit our second shot.

We went ahead and finished the hole and went to the seventh tee box, the young person that had hit the ball came up to us after he finished playing the sixth hole and apologized several times.

I was impressed. Doug was impressed. This young golfer displayed class and genuine sorrow for making a decision to hit the ball when maybe he shouldn't have.

So who gets the credit for this display of etiquette? Jerry Mungen, head girls' golf coach and Jeff and Debbie Jones for teaching their children how to be all the right things when it comes to playing golf.

John Japoddy accepted.

Hedges enters his fourth year as a starter on the defense where he started by recording 19 tackles. Wavinek, who played much of last season at safety, tallied 11 tackles including six for losses. ## WSC students addressed

The brain trust of the world's largest irrigation manufacturing firm encouraged Wayne State College students to think globally when they prepare for their careers.

Morgan Bay, the chairman and chief executive officer of Valmont Industries headquartered in Valley, Neb., and Terry McClain, the vice-president and chief-financial officer for the firm, talked to Wayne State business students Wednesday.

Both men encouraged the college students to prepare themselves for international competition by focusing on language skills and cultural understanding.

Bay also encouraged students not to look too far down the road when they are planning their careers.

"Always give what you are doing now, 100 percent of your effort and the next move will take care of itself," said Bay. A native of Denmark, he has been an executive with Valmont since 1979, when he became the company's global vice-president of Southeast Asian operations. In 1991 he was named president and CEO and earlier this year he was appointed chairman and CEO.

McClain, who is an employee of WSC and was honored last December with the College's Alumni Achievement Award, told the students that the education they are getting at Wayne State will allow them to compete very well in the business world with graduate-level knowledge and other large schools.

He explained the smaller campus and more one-to-one teaching opportunities available to students here would prepare them well for future careers.

However, he admonished students to be brave in trying "underachievers" which he characterized as a disadvantage of a small school environment.

"Most of you are not thinking big enough," McClain told the students. "You are putting your sights lower than what you are capable of achieving." He encouraged students to be confident in their educational preparation and knowledge they gain at WSC.

McClain is a native of Chicago and graduated from WSC in 1979. He earned a master's degree from University of South Dakota in 1977 and other taught students.

and joined the faculty at Wayne State that same year. He joined Valmont in 1973 as an industrial engineer.

The two international business executives were called as part of the College's effort to welcome leading professionals to campus. More than 200 students listened to their address and participated in a lengthy question-and-answer session.

"Our students are extremely fortunate to have the opportunity to associate with and learn from leaders in the international business community," said Dr. Donald Mads, president of Wayne State College. He praised the current business leaders for taking the time to share their insights with some of the world's future business leaders.

Dr. Vaughn-Benson, head of the business department at Wayne State College, left, introduces Morgan Bay and Terry McClain during a presentation at the college on Wednesday.

Attitudes toward sex differ

Q: Why are some men and women less sexual than others?

A: Adult attitudes toward sexual relations are largely conditioned during childhood and adolescence. It is surprising to observe how many otherwise well-adjusted people still think of married sex as dirty, animalistic or gross.

"Such a person who has been taught a one-sided, negative approach to sex during the formative years may find it impossible to release these carefully constructed inhibitions on the wedding night. The marriage ceremony is simply insufficient to reverse one's attitude from " thou shall not" to " thou shall regularly and with great passion."

That mental transformation is not easily achieved.

But I should emphasize another factor: just as differences of ethnicity or sex drive can be traced to roots in childhood instruction, human beings differ in practically every characteristic. Our teeth come in different sizes, our teeth are shaped differently, some folks eat more than others and some are taller than their peers.

We are unique creatures. Accordingly, we differ in sexual appetites. Our intellectual "computers" are clearly programmed differently through the process of specific inheritance. Some of us "hunger and thirst" after our sexuality while others take it much more casually. Given this variability, we should learn to accept ourselves sexually as well as physically and emotionally.

This does not mean that we should try to improve the quality of our sex lives, but it does mean that we should stop struggling to achieve the impossible, trying to get off an atomic bomb with a match stick!

As long as the husband and wife are satisfied with each other, it doesn't matter what "cosmopolitan" magazine says, their masterpieces happen to be.

Sex has become a statistic of moderation. "The average couple has intercourse three times a week. Oh no! What's wrong with us? Are we uninterested?" A husband, who if his genitalia are of "average size," while his wife contemplates her insufficient bust line. We are inundated by the great new "sexual freedom."

Q: Describe in greater detail the mood fluctuations that are associated with the menstrual cycle each month. Is it true that this chemical influence is evident not only during or before a period, but at other times also?

A: It has been said, quite accurately, that the four weeks of the menstrual cycle can be characterized by the four seasons of the year. The first week after a period can be termed the springtime of the physiological calendar. New estrogen (female hormones) are released each day and a woman's body begins to rebound from the recent winter.

The second week represents the summertime of the cycle, when the living is easy. A woman during this phase has more self-confidence than during any other phase of the month. It is a time of maximum energy, enthusiasm, amiability and self-esteem. Estrogen levels account for much of this optimism, reaching a peak during mid-cycle when ovulation occurs. The relationship between husband and wife is typically at its best during these days of summer, when sexual drive (and the potential for pregnancy) are paramount.

But alas, fall must surely follow summer. Estrogen levels steadily dwindle as the woman's body prepares for another period of menstruation. A second hormone called progesterone is released, which reduces the effect of estrogen and initiates the symptoms of premenstrual tension.

Self-esteem deteriorates day by day, bringing depression and pessimism with it. A bloated and sluggish feeling often produces not only discomfort but also the belief that "I am ugly," hostility and aggression become increasingly evident as this week progresses, reaching a climax immediately prior to menstruation. Then comes the winter period of the menstrual cycle.

Women differ remarkably in intensity of these symptoms, but most experience some discomfort. Those most vulnerable even find it necessary to spend a day or two in bed during the "winter" season, suffering from cramping and generalized misery. Gradually, the spring passes and the refreshing novelty of springtime returns.

Volunteer appreciation

Volunteer Appreciation was held April 18 at the Wayne Care Center. Supper was served to 20 volunteers and guests. Awards and gifts were handed out to each one. ### Officers are elected at the Minerva Club

The Minerva Club met at the home of Minnie Rice with 12 members present. President Bette Beans opened the meeting with readings from "Apple of Gold."

Election of officers was held with Bette Beans as president, Mary Johnson as secretary and Ruth Morris as treasurer.

Mary Beans continued "the study of Nebraska by presenting "Nebraska Rivers." She told that Nebraska has more miles of rivers than any other state in the union (nearly 24,000 miles). They range from meandering streams to broad flowing rivers.

The Missouri and Platte Rivers played an important role in the development of our state and others to the west. The Missouri brought commerce and trade and the Platte helped guide explorers, trappers and pioneers to the west.

The next meeting will be May 13 with Bertha Alegre as hostess. Holly Fugle will have the program "History of Nebraska."

Money management

Activities give teens practice

Today, teen money management is more important than ever.

Today's teens have more money at their disposal than previous generations. Advertisers, retailers, and banks are aware of this fact and direct a large portion of their marketing toward adolescents.

The money concept begins very early. As young as ages two to three, children collect pennies, and later become aware of the value represented in different coins and bills. By age 7, kids are capable of occasionally shopping alone.

The easiest and most effective method parents can use to teach their children money management is through example. Parents need to communicate openly about how financial decisions are made, the family's budget and where it comes from, and any financial problems.

When children see the big picture, they will have a better understanding of how their needs and wants fit into the family financial plan. They also will learn from participating in decisions such as how to spend less, save and what money will be spent.

Following are suggestions for activities parents can use to teach their children money management.

Prechool

* Create shopping games. Kids can play at home. Give children coins and let them shop for small items like a box of raisins, a ball, toy car etc.

* This is a good time to begin giving a regular allowance. Make sure that the child is receiving enough to cover needs such as lunch money or school supplies, and has enough left for spending or saving. Children learn from making decisions how their money will be distributed.

Allowances shouldn't be a compensation for completing household chores. Children need to be aware that there are responsibilities that they take care of as members of a family unit.

Ages 4 to 11

* Children this age should be capable of helping with some aspects of the family finances. Let them address envelopes for mailing bills, write out checks (without signing them, of course) and assist with family shopping.

* When children can count, show them how pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters work in grouping to make different totals.

Ages 6 to 9

* When children can count, show them how pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters work in grouping to make different totals.

* When children can count,

Mormon Trail reenactment is viewed as quite a sight

There were two topics of conversation in our office on Friday. The first was the Mormon trail re-enactment, which passed through Cass County this week.

There is a sign on Highway 1 into Murdock that proclaims that the Os-Bow trail came through there. I didn't even know what the Os-Bow trail was, and I am a history buff. It seems there was a southern route for the Mormon trail that matched up with the northern at Ft. Kearney. This southern route followed the Missouri River at Plattsmouth and came south through Weeping Water and Murdock on this trail.

This is the year for the 150th anniversary celebration of the Mormon trail. It was received in Iowa last year, as it is known they started in Illinois, the north corner of Indiana. However, from the thousand-mile trek, no state looks years ago, when he got in on the Oregon Trail otherwise. He has an application since he became a Mormon historian, trail rider and pilot to go all the way. It will take 92 days. When asked what the best part of the trip was, he responded, "Meeting all.

There are about 10 wagons, a couple of hand carts, lots of horses and some mighty hardy folks out this leg of the trip. They camped in Murdock Thursday after dark, eating a grave site of a child who died there. There's another child's grave at Ashland where they are today.

I spent half an hour there Thursday afternoon, taking pictures and talking with the owners of the horses. They say there are more non-Mormon than Mormons on the ride.

The wagon master had never even rode a horse until three years ago, when he got in on the Oregon Trail otherwise. He has an application since he became a Mormon historian, trail rider and pilot to go all the way. It will take 92 days. When asked what the best part of the trip was, he responded, "Meeting all.

After comparing notes and observations on this undertaking like, "What kind of people can take 100 days off to do this?" we went immediately to what kind of 63-year-old woman could want a baby?

One nurse said the woman plans to have a final and will never have to send the child to day care. We all agreed it might be nice to have a child when we didn't have to worry about paying to work for a living or any of the typical concerns you had when our children were small.

But the three of us who are closest to that age all agree that it still isn't such a terrible way to spend our retirement years. The thought of getting up at night, duty chores and going to packed teacher conferences made us shiver and remember orthodontics, coffee, tall grass and the like. I wouldn't trade the experience, but they require experience!

So far that neither dog riding in a wagon train seems bad.
