rule which has schools the size of Wayne at $344 per student even though Wayne spends just $4000.

"The K-12 schools are getting very little state aid as to what they were receiving under LB 1030," Jensen said. "The bulk of the funds gained from taking from them is going to the larger schools and we are a Class 1 school."

The same time the Wayne School District sees a big increase in state aid is the exact same time they see a big decrease in property tax monies. "At this point we don't know if this will be a wash or not," Jensen added.

Jensen said one piece of legislation that was brought forward by Senator Stan Schellpaper was put on hold in the final round which has him deeply concerned.

"We need Schellpaper's LB 306 to be brought back to the active status so it can be debated and hopefully passed," Jensen said. "It was save our sinking fund levy because currently, if it isn't brought back to discuss and voted on, we could lose our sinking fund which could have some drastic effects on our schools."

Sinking funds are used for building improvements, paying for the mortgages on Wayne's (two) track improvements and general grounds repair. If the sinking fund should be depleted as with the passage of LB 1114 (already passed), Wayne would lose its ability to improve facilities.

What this could do to a lot of schools in the future is for a bond issue. If no one can improve or maintain the current buildings, Jensen said, "We need people to talk with the state senators about the passage of LB 306." If we lose our sinking fund then we won't be able to follow through on our five-year strategic plan which is currently in year three. We have one more year of the sinking fund under LB 299."

THE BOARD also discussed the Highway 35 project which could begin as soon as August 11. "One big concern is the traffic congestion on one side and there are three residences to the west that won't be able to exit to the north," Jensen said. "After talking with the Highway department about the solutions to this possible safety hazard, they suggested paying for a guard during school hours while the project is being completed."

Jensen also said school districts of different interests also an option to help relieve traffic congestion.

Leaders representing many high schools throughout Nebraska from May 29 through June 1. For the past 19 years, HOBY leadership seminars have brought together select groups of high school sophomores who have demonstrated leadership abilities in their high schools and communities as they interact with groups of distinguished leaders in business, government, education, and the professions to discuss present and future issues. The goal is to provide the students with a stimulating forum for learning about the American incentive system and democratic process and for broadening their understanding of leadership potential and quest for self development.

Further information about HOBY activities and sponsorship opportunities is available by calling the Hugh O'Brien Youth Foundation at 1-800-929-HOBY (4629).

Scholarship has been received

Mrs. Edie Dahl, daughter of Meena Dahl of Wayne, has been awarded the prestigious Morton Kafee President's Outstanding Minority Scholarship at the University of Minnesota-Twin Cities for the fall 1997.

President's Outstanding Minority Scholars are selected on the basis of high academic potential, high school rank and demonstrated community involvement. Once at the university, President's Outstanding Minority Scholars are invited to participate in the President's Distinguished Faculty Mentor Program. This program pairs students with professors who have similar academic interests.

Hobie, a 1997 graduate of Wayne High School, will be a freshman at the University of Minnesota-Twin Cities this fall.

The Board set forth two resolutions to put before the delegates assembly at the Nebraska Association of Mental Health. The first is LB 306, or the sinking fund bill. The idea is to bring it back to the table and get it passed.

The second has to do with the retirement rule, making it a true rule of 65. If an instructor's age added to his years of teaching add up to 65 he can currently retire but he does not receive any benefits until 65 years of age.

Under a true rule of 65, an instructor with 65 years of age and teaching years combined can be 65 to get retirement benefits right away.

Future agenda items include busing analysis, community committee report, distance learning, negotiations and a foundation report. The next regularly scheduled school board meeting is Monday, July 11.

sold on the property.

The Planning Commission had earlier held a public hearing and recommended approval of the request with three stipulations.

These included that a visibility reducing fence be placed on the property line, that the owner of the property, Randy's wife Diane, sign the permit and that all vehicles be retained on private property.

A resolution was passed determining an area near Highway 35 and Centennial Road, to be blighted and substandard.

The city recently annexed the land, owned by Herb and Kathy Albers, into the city. The Albers are using assistance in bringing in a truck stop to Wayne. The assistance would be in the form of tax increment financing.

In other action, the council approved a request from the Wayne Middle School for a donation of 1,700 street paving blocks to be used to fill in areas around the ramps at the mobile units.

Ordinance 92-9 was given first round approval. The ordinance would amend the zoning map for the former Care Centre facility. A motion to suspend the second and third readings failed and the item will be on the council's next agenda for further consideration.

The council passed on first reading and waived the three readings of an ordinance which will amend the city code and establish a $15 fee for non-resident vendors, peddlers and hawkers. The fee does not apply to various non-profit organizations within the city who do fund raising activities.

The firm of Countryman Associates, together with Max Kathol and Associates was appointed as the auditing firm for the city at a cost of $11,700 for this year.

approval to the proposed plan in April of this year.

The Lincoln based Bruce Corporation's bid of $2.3 million for general contractor services was accepted in June of this year. City Commissioners of Wayne will serve as the corporation's representative, assisting in oversight of the construction project.

Construction of the 15,800 square foot Center is scheduled for completion in June of 1998.

The Center will have an initial capacity of 14 beds with capacity cited to accommodate for future expansion. The Center will include 18 beds in the juvenile detention portion of the facility with an additional 16 beds in the staff training section accommodating a more diverse range of juveniles.

Program areas for educational, vocational and support services are shared by both populations through three phases.

While staff receive programs are recognized as a safe and effective alternative for housing many juveniles, the more serious and violent offenders will continue to be housed in the traditional, locked detention portion of the new facility.

The Center will be the first of its kind in Nebraska providing secure detention as well as staff in care housing within a single facility.

The facility will be staffed around the clock with staffing projected at 17 full time and 20 part time employees.

All staff are required to complete a variety of mandatory training, including 40 hours of orientation, 80 hours of initial training and 20-40 hours of annual in-service training.

Specialized training in Therapeutic Aggression Control Techniques (TACT) with instruction on how to diffuse and control angry or aggressive residents as well as First Aid and CPR is also provided to all staff.

EditorialsLess painful?

Before going home, state legislators passed LB70 which allows subdivisions and cities to accept payments by credit card, providing those subdivisions choose to accept such.

The bill also allows state agencies to accept credit card payments for taxes, licenses and other fees if they choose to do so.

This has to be a dream deal for credit-card companies who are always looking for customers who do not pay off each month, but only make a payment. That interest does add up.

Paying taxes and fees with borrowed money, well, that puts a new edge on things, but it's less painful, or simply more convenient.

Local government officials now have another decision to make: shall we or shall we not shuffle credit-card payments?

Citizens worry, pay now, or pay later?

Only millions..

The legislature has passed a bill that eliminates a $1 court automation fee. LB216 repeals a fee created in 1993 designed to help finance the ongoing computerization of the court system. The fee was assessed to each case and appeal filed in the county courts, separate juvenile courts, district courts, Court of Appeals and Supreme Court.

Omaha Sen. Eric Chambers noted that essential government operations such as the court system should be funded by all taxpayers and not by user fees. We agree.

Now that the fee expired, $1.1 million in general fund money was added to the state's budget, bringing the general fund amount proposed for court automation to about $2.16 million.

Millions were spent about five years ago on a county court computer system which never functioned and remains useless for all practical purposes. One of the now outdated machines sits in the Wayne County court. State planners should be embarrassed.

We hope this time around government knows what it's doing and a workable system is installed.

It's only money of course.

Capitol NewsWhere is the old 'governor'?

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Where's our good Governor Ben? We miss him.

The recent press conference when Nelson announced he would sign the state school aid bill was notable for the governor's often-only true attitude.

With school officials who supported the measure in the audience, Nelson spoke optimistically and positively about the benefits LB 806 will bring to the majority of school districts in the state. He said the bill would promote efficient school spending without diminishing Nebraska's top-quality education system.

But he stopped at a reporter who asked about the districts that would see significant reductions under the combined impact of the $1.10 property tax levy cap and the changes in state aid distribution. It was the sort of softball question that those of us here in a better mood could have put out of the ballpark with ease and grace.

Meanwhile, Sen. Jim McKeon of Howard and Sen. Ardyce Badde of Hastings stood at Nelson's side as he made his announcement. They were considerably optimistic for two lawmakers who'd successfully steered landmark legislation through the unicameral. The statewide union ratified a three-year deal in May, and the two senators meeting with Nelson the day before their conference.

Nelson had done his best to pitch about his concern for property tax levy caps, and he received the dutiful nodding of the school assembly, school board and other blame-crazed supporters of property taxes for his role in the most Hinkel-like year of his political career.

Some legislators here were less than enthusiastic over the school aid bill. At one point, Speaker of the Legislature Ron Witham said Nelson didn't understand the financials and didn't want to talk about the income-tax cut.

While the majority of the state's schools and students are better off under LB 806, there are a number of school districts who are hurt badly and are complaining bitterly. Although Nelson says he did as much as he could to soften the bill's impact on those schools, it's clear that he's not entirely comfortable with the end result.

Finally, Nelson has to be chafing at the fact the legislature put him in a bind when he signed off-white, blue-tinted legislation that became the cut remained at the bottom of the legislative agenda. The message was pretty clear: Touch LB 806 at the peril of the income-tax cut.

Politics have changed. Ben Nelson. In the early days, the well-dressed lawyer seemed like a regular guy from McCook. A guy who was attentive to his mother. A guy to enjoy a beer with an occasion. He was convincing when he described his governor's term as a legacy of public service, to pay back the good life Nebraska has given him.

After the landslide election in 1994, the political bag for Nelson had. He played the public angles as well as any lifetime politician I think he made up for mind to do it, he threw himself into the Senate race. He still is struggling to come to terms with the defeat.

Nelson said some, knowing that the legislature would vote to override a veto, had urged him to veto LB 806 and let the legislature take the political heat for it. He said he wouldn't play politics with it, instead doing what he judged best for as many as possible. That sounded much like the old Ben.

Hill views expressed in 2 opinion pieces are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

Spec buildings can be a community drain

One of the biggest mistakes made by speculators in spec buildings is the never-ending desire to earn money. It's a common misconception that due to a relatively tight building labor market buildings throughout most of the Midwest now sell more than ever. This is far from the truth. In fact, it's been a long time since the 1970s for a community to develop a spec building program.

The idea for spec buildings is quite strong. There are many companies, such as CB&I, that 90 percent of their keeps by keeping low cost buildings available for lease. These companies demonstrate the capability of a company to do what it they say they will do.

Unfortunately, many of these companies are not concerned with the welfare of the community. They are only concerned with the welfare of their shareholders.

It's important to realize that a company's success is based on the welfare of the community. If a company is successful, it's because the community is successful.

opportunity and a willing to invest in its future. Even when the spec building industry has faced challenges, the prospect of unique, distinctive projects that gets the community interested in the community, that's a good idea.

The downside of a spec building program is the potential for a drain on the community. The problem is that the spec building industry is not concerned with the welfare of the community. It's only concerned with the welfare of the company. This is a bad idea.

Adolescence often difficult time

Q: My son Brian is now 14 years old and he has suddenly entered a period of rebellion like nothing I've ever seen. He is breaking the rules right and left, and he seems to hate the entire family. He becomes angry when his mother and I try to discipline him, of course, but even during more tranquil times, he seems to do almost the merely being there.

Last Friday night he arrived home an hour beyond his deadline, but refused to explain why he was late or make apologetic noises. We are in the midst of a nightmare I never anticipated when he was younger.

My question: I would like to tell me exactly how to approach the situation, even role playing my task of confronting him. I need to know what to say when that moment arrives.

A: I would recommend that you make Brian eat breakfast on a Saturday morning, leaving the rest of the family at home. It would be best if this event could occur during a relatively tranquil time, certainly not in the midst of a battle or intergenerational battle. Acknowledge that you have some important matters to discuss with him which can't be communicated adequately at home but don't tip your hand before Saturday morning. Then at the appropriate moment during breakfast, convey the following messages (or an adaptation thereof):

• Brian, I want to talk to you this morning because of the changes that are taking place in you and in me home. We both know that the past few weeks have been very tough. You have been angry most of the time and have become disinterested and rude.

And your mother and I have done as well, either. We've become irritable and we've said things that we've regretted later. There has to be a more creative way of solving our problems. That's why we're all here.

• At a place to begin Brian, I want you to understand what is happening. You have gone into a new period of life known as adolescence. This is the final phase of childhood, and it is often a very stormy and difficult few years. Nearly everyone goes through these tough years during their early teens, and you are right on schedule at this moment.

Many of the problems you face today were predictable from the day you were born simply because growing up has never been an easy thing to do.

There are greater pressures on kids today than when you were young. I've had that to tell you this...you understand you and love us as directly as we ever did, even though the past few months have been difficult in our home.

• I What is actually taking place, you see, is that you have had a taste of freedom. You are tired of being a little boy who was told what to wear and where to go in bed and when to eat. That's a healthy attitude which will help you grow.

However, now you want to be your own boss and want to make your own decisions without interference, right anyone?

• Brian, you will get what you want in a very short time. You are 14 now and you'll soon be 15 and 16 and 17. You will be quite a bit of trouble in a twinkling of an eye, and we all no longer have any responsibility for you.

On the day incoming when you will go to whatever school you choose, affect the selection or job that with you and many who know you both. Your mother and I will not be able to make those decisions for you. We will respect your adulthood.

Furthermore, from the day you get to those days, the more freedom we plan to give you...you have more privileges now than you had last year, and that trend will continue. We will earn them.

• But Brian, you must understand this message...you are not grown yet. During the past few weeks, you have spurned your mother and me to have you alone stay out half the night if you choose, to fail in school and to stay at home.

And you took advantage of whatever we have denied even your most extreme demands.

The truth of the matter is, you have wanted to be your own 20-year-old freedom at age 14, although you will expect to be a 14-year-old boy until you're and your bills paid. You have wanted the best of both worlds with none of the responsibilities. So what are we to do?

The easiest thing would be to let you have your way. There would be no battles and no conflict and no more frustration. Many parents of 14-year-old sons and daughters have done just that, but we must not yield to this. You are not ready for the complete independence, and we would be showing hatred for you (instead of love) if we surrendered at the time. We would regret our mistake for the rest of our lives, and you would soon blame us, too.

And as you know, your father and younger sisters who are watching you very closely, and must be protected from the things you are teaching them.

We have responsibility as parents to do what is right. Mothers and fathers are expected to train their children and discipline them when required.

• That brings us to the question of where do we go from here. I want to make a pledge to you...your mother and I intend to be more sensitive to your needs and feelings than we have been in the past. We're not perfect, and it is possible that you will feel we have been unfair at one time or another. If that occurs, you can express your views and we will listen to you.

We want to keep the door of communication wide open between us. When you seek a few privileges, I am going to ask myself this question: "Is there any way I can grant the request without harming Brian or other people?" If I can satisfy what you want in good conscience, I will do so. I will communicate and work as far as my own judgment will let me.

• And here this, Brian, there will be a few matters that will not be compromised. There will be no tolerance when I will have to say "no." And when these come, you can expect me to stand like the Rock of Gibraltar. No amount of physical or temper tantrums and door slamming will change a thing.

In fact, if you choose to fight me on those remaining rules, I promise that you will lose dramatically. It can make your life uncomfortable, and that will be my goal. Believe me, Brian, I'll awake nights fighting on how to make this program, if necessary.

So it's up to you. We can have a peaceful time of cooperation at home, or we can spend the last part of your childhood in misunderstandings and struggle. Either way, you will arrive home when you are old, and you will carry your share of responsibility in the family and you will continue to respect your mother and me.

• Finally Brian, let me emphasize the message I gave you in the beginning. We love you more than you can imagine, and we're going to remain friends during this difficult time. There is so much pain in the world today. You haven't felt much discontent yet, but you will soon enough. As with all that humans can experience, let's not let it bring down any of us ourselves. We must each other. We need you and, believe it or not, you will need us once again.

• If you still have things that need to be said to us? The content of this message should be modified to fit individual circumstances and the needs of particular adolescents. Furthermore, the response of children will vary greatly from person to person. An "oppositional" boy or girl may reveal his deepest feelings at such a moment of communication, permitting a private time of sharing and ventilation.

On the other hand, a withdrawn silent, proud adolescent may be unwilling with great discomfort. But even if your teenage summary does not fit him, at least the early have been laid on the table and parental intentions explained.

Good sportsmanship important

At summer baseball and the fair season get into full swing, players such as "It's not fair" and "They're the home and we're the visiting" are heard regularly.

The development of good sportsmanship principle is an important piece of youth development. It is important for people to be fair, competitive, good losers and good winners to become contributing, caring adults.

Good sportsmanship combines many components. First is demonstrating and maintaining high standards of conduct. Next is learning and following the rules. Good sportsmen don't cheat and have a sense of fairness.

Good sportsmen are honest, straightforward, show integrity and do their own work. Good sportsmen don't undermine or overstate their own abilities, accomplishments or skills.

Good sportsmen accept the nature of competition as seeking to get what others are asking to get.

Competition does involve a certain amount of rivalry between individuals or teams. Whether deserved or undeserved, they can grow as a result of a competitive event by learning to compete and improve their own shortcomings.

Finally, a good sportsman, regardless of the results, thanks those involved. They look at competition as a way to make the best even better.

Former attendees and pastor friends and family have been invited to a Saturday banquet at Wayne State College and Sunday's observance at 9:30 a.m. and 11 p.m.

Pastor Bob Bremer and the congregation invite the community to celebrate with them on Sunday. The morning worship will include a message by Pastor Bremer and worship leaders will be the women's pastor, Barb Dahlquist; Diane Blom, and Clayton Hartman of Laurel and Jon Dahlquist of Berlin. Old records show that the congregation began during 1884-1885, community services, meetings, Scandinavian festival and Rev. Fred Hedges and Rev. John W. Jensen were early leaders.

Meetings were held in school houses until 1894 when a small church was built, two miles east west of Concord.

The church had no pastor so it missionaries were given through the Chicago Budget and at one meeting as many as 11 missionaries came.

The church was incorporated in 1902 as the Swedish Free Mission Church where services were held until 1918.

In 1919 the congregation built a church and parsonage in Concord on two acres of land donated by Rev. N. P. Holm. Rev. Glenn Nelson was called to be the first pastor. The services were conducted in both Swedish and English.

In 1947 the congregation was translated into English and the church was named the Evangelical Free Methodist Church.

During the next 10 years the buildings were modernized and enlarged. Central heat and Burgess, a bathtub copper heating water in the kitchen and bath rooms were installed.

Several classrooms, a pastor's study and new entrance were completed in 1967.

In 1976 the church was renamed the Evangelical Free Church.

A round was broken in 1987 to reshape the cemetery and front entrance. The kitchen was remodeled after being damaged in a lightning strike in the early 1980s. A classroom and bathroom with bathroom fixtures were completed.

An education wing was added northeast of the church in 1993 to allow space needed for the weekly AWANA program which currently hosts 140 preschoolers through eighth graders.

Children's crusade will be held June 15-19 in Wakefield

Wednesday, June 18: The Senior All-Chairmen meet

Speaking engagement brings back memories brewed a big pot of egg coffee. Then she strained it into another big pot to get rid of the ground shells. Something floated to the top; in and behind a piece of meat underneath. The little lady serving that day sang, "Who threw the overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder?" and pretended to boil more water.

There were also numerous descriptions of desserts made with real cream, that whipped. One creative gal tried a new date cake that flopped. It did not raise and was hard. They rounded it, mixed it with whipped cream, served it in theater dishes, and sold it when asked for the original.

There were at least 100 folks of all ages present, and they seemed to be enjoying the visiting and reminiscing.

When I got home, my copy of "All I Need to Know, I Learned Growing Up on a Farm" was in the mail box. This is a delightful little book published by Progressive Farmer and contains such gems as: "An old cottager told me every one should try broke once. It makes him a better person. But he added he had gone broke three times and he didn't need all the knowledge he got from going broke twice more."

A guy from Minnesota claims his family because he likes the Martha cash he gets from paying accident insurance rates just ahead of skydivers and soldiers of fortune. Another gets a kick out of the ritual of cutting hay to make the old shaft.

And a third has his explanation for why he burns down pat because he's been married to the same woman for 10 years and has had lots of practice, explaining. And a 4th states that a farmer knows his wife looks bad and not fat money. And I agree with them all.

On Thursday of this past week I fulfilled a commitment made several months ago by speaking at the 110th anniversary of the Ladies Aid at St. Paul's Church to West Point. As I told them when I got up to speak, "Some people will do anything for a free lunch." And it was a great lunch, all kinds of salads.

Part of the program featured memories of those past years. Some were written by a 98-year-old lady in attendance, a lady with the sweetest smile you've ever seen.

I think every church has a ladies aid. Many times, they were quilters. I think our aid had a quilt in a frame in the basement of our church at all times when I was growing up. They simply learned it against a wall when they needed the space for other activities.

All church suppers and missions festival featured egg coffee. There's a down-to-the-bone Judy Johnson involved in the technique where we work on the committee together.

The lady at West Point told me on Thursday that the first time she had to serve for ladies aid, she

CRP tour is scheduled at Northeast Center

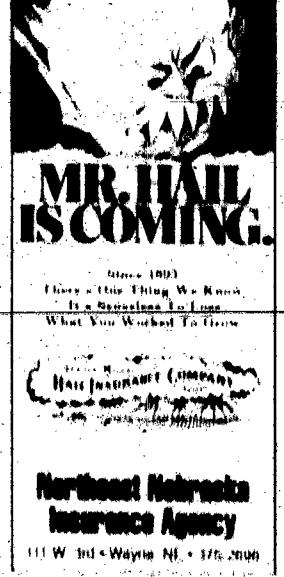

The Northeast Research and Extension Center at Concord will be hosting a CRP tour on Wednesday June 16. The bus tour wagon will leave from the Platte building at 7:30 a.m. with return after hours at 2:30 and 3:10. Each tour wagon will be limited to 10 persons.

CRP to citizen research has invited all to visit at the center. The project has been around and third year jointed, with a quarter section of land owned by Charles Paulson of Concord.

Melinda McVey McMurtry, CRP project coordinator, said that yields from the first two cropping years will be discussed. She added that data collected thus far suggest no ill symbiosis at the best choice for the first year and that CRP Weather conditions in 1985 and 1986 has a major impact on crop yields. The effect of rainfall, growing degree days, and soil temperatures and soil moisture on crop growth and yields will be discussed.

Several other areas of research will also be discussed including special problems associated with crop rotation because of the large quantity of residue compared between no-till plow and disk tillage, no-till crop planted using no-till residue, managing root insects such as wireworms and root crop maggots through integrated pest management, possibly establishing various tree products such as field wood, shelterbelts, living snow-drift, erosion, bullfrogs, spruced waterways and spray control strips and eligibility of these practices under the continuous CRP sign-up and control of cool season and warm season grasses and other word species as an essential part for successful crop production.
