Nuisance laws to be enforced

Wayne Police Chief Lance Webster has announced that beginning this month the police department is going to take a more proactive stance on enforcement of the city of Wayne's nuisance ordinance.

Chief Webster said his department has been receiving complaints about the conditions of several properties in the city. Those complaints range from vehicles or boats left parked on private property or properties that have an accumulation of what could be defined as "pink."

The police department has been assigning one officer to monitor the accumulation of unregistered or junk vehicles. Enforcement action has already been taken financially but will now be done on an ongoing basis.

"The department has generally handled the nuisance properties on a complaint driven basis. Beginning this June, all officers will be directed to identify any property that fits the city ordinance definition of a nuisance violation or if they find any automobile that fall within the guidelines of the unregistered/unusable vehicle ordinance," Chief Webster said.

He added that his officers will not wait to receive a complaint but will initiate action to abate the nuisance in a timely manner.

Chief Webster said that as a part of the policy change he and his staff will be closely reviewing the current City Ordinance and they may be making recommendations to the City Council to include some new language that will make enforcement of these ordinances easier.

In an effort to quickly locate a nuisance, Chief Webster said after his officers identify a nuisance property the area will be photographed. A written notice of the illegal nuisance will be sent to the property owner as well as a copy of the applicable city ordinance.

"Generally, each property owner will be given 30 days to abate the nuisance. Failure to do this will result in the necessary legal action to evict the abuser."

of the nuisance," Chief Webster said.

"Requests for an extension will be handled on a case by case basis," he added.

When the police department has identified an unlicensed or unregistered vehicle on someone's property, they will consider the situation for 30 days. If at the end of the 30 days, the vehicle is still in violation of the ordinance, a written notice will be sent to the property owner to have the vehicle removed or brought into compliance within 30 days.

Failure to do so may result in a fine of up to $100 per day of continued violation.

"The practice of a vehicle owner putting a tarp or cover on the vehicle will no longer be allowed. The city ordinance clearly requires that such a vehicle be placed in an enclosed building or removed from the property," Chief Webster said.

Chief Webster said he has been looking at what other cities do to handle their nuisance property complaints.

"The first so far is the city of Lincoln's Problem Resolution Team (PRT). This is a community based policing concept that involves people from different departments and agencies all working together to help resolve such complaints for a community perspective, not just on the law enforcement level," Webster said.

The city of Lincoln's PRT involves well-established partners, but the concept can be downsized to fit a community the size of Wayne.

Chief Webster will be presenting this concept to all City Department heads on Tuesday June 26.

"Wayne has a reputation of being a 'clean' well maintained city. It would be a shame to let a few nuisance properties spot that opinion," Webster said.

"The overall appearance of a city park is important in our economy and I think Wayne's Police Department wants to identify parks to make sure that residents and visitors alike have a positive impression of our city," he added.

EditorialsJust a few billion

State senators have never seen money they didn't like.
Even Gov. Nelson said Monday the senators like to spend, spend.

Before receiving, the Legislature adopted the biggest budget busting budget ever, totaling $4 billion, representing a 3 percent spending increase in 1997-98 and a 9.6 percent increase in 1998-99. The biennial budget includes $22 million to begin construction of a new prison, $21 million for a UNL tech campus in Omaha, nearly $1 billion in employee salary increases and millions more for schools.

Salaries for Supreme Court judges got another boost increasing from $94,757 to $97,797.22 on July 1. Then on July 1, 1998 the salaries get another boost to $101,649.00. All other Nebraska judges get increases as their salaries ride the coattails of the Supreme Court. Such gains look rather healthy to working Nebraskans averaging $10,000 a year or less.

(N)GND mandates an increase in the minimum wage from the current $4.75 to $5.15 on September 1, 1997 making it the same as the federal minimum. This is fine for the employed, but that can well be passed on to consumers as prices will increase. (N)GND desired Nebraska to be a new 99-bed prison costing $14.9 million. Legislators also passed a bill to shorten sentences for certain nonviolent offenders and authorized a 100-bed incarceration work camp for bad time offenders who will be on probation, thereby increasing the duties of an already overburdened probation system.

Taxpayers are perceived as having bottomless pockets while actually are discovering that money pays very well, more comfortable quarters and shorter sentences.

Last year taxpayers were asked for a surplus in the state's coffers. Perhaps the senators, rather than returning the surplus, figured it would be even more where that came from.

At what point do taxpayers say "Stop it?"

The how-wow code

Architecture means open windows through which one can look often hear a chorus of barking dogs.

Wayne Police Department recently shows 318 dogs are licensed within city limits. Others may not be licensed and consequently in violation of the law.

Dogs should be licensed (1) if over age of six months (2), within 30 days of acquiring the dog (3) within 10 days of digging within the city limits (4) owners are to be leashed or fenced in at all times and must wear tags at all times.

The Wayne City Code, Section 4-143 reads, "The person shall have, keep, harbored, by day or by night, continued, or frequent barking, baying, or yelping shall annoy or distract any inhabitant or passers-by so as to habitually bark at or harass spectators or any vehicle whatever near to the annoyance of such people, among children, drivers, or vehicles while on any public streets, alleys, or places, or highways, as the city council or police officer, however, the provisions of this section shall not apply to the normal dog."

Violation of this ordinance from their previous during working hours past 10 p.m. and the noise after the noise caused by their pets barking.

There are neighborhood regulations they may not know the laws of our community.

Wayne State baseball team lands five letters of intent

Five selected players have signed letters of intent to attend Wayne State College and play baseball. WSU head coach John Manganaro said recently.

The signings include four high school players: Michael Bluhm of Alton; Adam Welkenhuis of Madison; Kyle Yost of Hastings and Brian Zimmerman of Omaha and one junior college pitcher, Kyle Brown of Pueblo, Colorado.

Bluhm, an Alton High School graduate, played outfield on the Wakefield Legion team which won three state championships. Because of his age, he can only play Legion baseball this summer.

"Mike has a great arm, tremendous speed and can hit with power," Manganaro said. "He will add speed and power to our lineup."

Welkenhuis, a pitcher from Madison High School, pitched a 10-1 record with four saves last season. He also had a .400 earned run average and 138 strikeouts in 103 innings pitched. Earlier this year, Welkenhuis attended the Nebraska Professional Tryout Camp and earned the Outstanding Pitcher Award.

"Adam has excellent velocity with a good breaking pitch and a lot of pitching savvy," Manganaro said. "We anticipate Adam being in the starting rotation next season. Adam possesses the ability to have a great pitching career, not only at WSU but at the next level of competition."

Yost, a Hastings High School graduate, is also expected to crack the starting rotation immediately. At 6-5, Yost's fastball has been clocked at 87 miles per hour.

Zimmerman, a sophomore, said, "I'll play in the outfield or left field and will give depth to our pitching staff. Brian will definitely make significant contributions to the team in 1998."

Brown, an infielder, had a .372 batting average this year at Cheyenne. An all-region selection, she had seven home runs, 11 doubles and 48 runs batted in.

"Clyde is a key player who will shore up the left side of the diamond for us in 1998," Manganaro said. "Clyde can hit for power and average and definitely will make a better team next season."

I am extremely excited about signing five players who possess tremendous baseball skills," Manganaro said of his recruits. "I expect this group to make significant contributions to the success of our 1998 squad."

Flaws lead to embarrassment

Q: My 12-year-old is embarrassed about the size of her nose.

But what I can't understand is that she keeps talking about it to her friends. Should I tell her to pay attention and advise her not to mention this problem?

A: One of the most obvious characteristics of a person who feels inferior is that he talks about his deficiencies to anyone who will listen.

An overweight person feels compelled to apologize to his companion for ordering a hot-fudge sundae. He claims what he imagines they're thinking: "I'm already fat enough without eating this," he says, scooping up the cherry and syrup with his spoon. Likewise, a woman who thinks she's unintelligent will admit freely, "I am really bad at math. I eat hardly any rice and two or three kinds of self-deprecating" out of uncertainty as one might think.

While there is no virtue in bragging or boasting (conceit, phony, trying to do something we're not), I believe it is a mistake to go to the other extreme. While the person is bragging about all of his ridiculous traits (except, of course, the fatness), the listener is formulating a lasting impression of him.

As I do in general, that you teach a "no bragg" policy to your daughter. She should learn that constant bragging can be become a bad habit, and it accomplishes nothing.

There is a big difference between accepting blame when it is valid and in simply chattering about one's inadequacy. Your daughter should know that her friends are probably thinking more about their own flaws anyway.

Q: I tend to feel depressed after every holiday, but I don't know why. These special days are very happy ones for my family. Why do I feel myself "blue" after such enjoyable occasions?

A: It will be helpful to understand the nature of emotional rhythm in human beings. Anything that produces an extreme "high" will set the stage for a later "low," and vice versa.

A few years ago, for example, my wife and I bought a newer home. We had waited several years to find the right house, and we became very excited when escrow closed the property and it was finally ours.

This elation lasted for several days, during which time I discussed the experience with Shirley. I mentioned that we had been very high and that our excitement could not continue indefinitely. Emotions don't operate at maximum velocity for very long.

More important, it was likely that our mental set would drop below base level within a short period of time. As expected, we both experienced a vague letdown into mild depression about three days later. The house didn't seem so wonderful, and there wasn't anything worth much enthusiasm. However, having anticipated the "downer," we recognized and accepted its temporary fluctuation when it came.

Depression, therefore, should be understood as a relatively predictable occurrence. It is likely to appear, as in your case, following a busy holiday or after the birth of a baby, a job promotion, or even after a restful vacation.

The cause for this phenomenon is partly physical in nature. Human beings greater quantities of body energy, since all systems are operating at an accelerated rate. The necessary consequence of this pace is fatigue and exhaustion, bringing with it a more depressed state. That high must be followed by low...the system is governed by a physiological law. You can depend on it. But in the healthy individual, fatigue eventually gives way to high, too.

Teens and freedom survey: teens want limits

Some adult-imposed restrictions in teen lives are necessary, according to a survey of teenagers by USA Weekend magazine.

The unscientific national-wide survey of 718,150 students in grades 6-12 is the 10th annual USA Weekend special teen report.

While teens surveyed claim they don't have enough freedom, a significant number were willing to accept certain parameters. 71 percent of teenagers favor laws on smoking with gang symbols at 60; about 69 percent said students should stand for the national anthem. 56 percent said school officials should have the right to search student lockers for drugs or weapons without permission; half said teens deserve to reduce criminal night by law. 15 percent stated that parents have a right to install a television chip to block obscenity for violent shows, and 39 percent support instant restrictions.

Students' safety was approached with mixed faith. About two-thirds support mandatory seat belt laws, while 40 percent believe executive editor of USA Weekend.

Most teens excepted self-imposed trying to restrict their own choices, and 60 percent surveyed agreed that the choices made that have to do with teens' life decisions should be their own.

Other findings: 50 percent agree that school officials can set strict rules regarding curfew requirements; 46 percent say it's OK to carry what students carry on the school newspaper; 41 percent favor bans on books, newspapers, and magazines deemed offensive.

The teen respondents also were asked to place the appropriateness of the following: a higher drink alcohol, age 19; a single cigarette; 10; big jeans; getting a tattoo.

Teens who reported they drink the following freedom: 87 percent can listen to whatever music they want; 92 percent can pack their own lunches; and 83 percent can decide what to wear.

Interestingly, 52 percent can choose all aspects of the same type of transportation used by their parents.

The "Teen & Freedom" survey is intended for the class of 1987 and 1988. USA Weekend, Inc., the 10th USA Weekend magazine, will be distributed throughout schools by Carroll Publishers and magazines.

Salute to the Dairy Farmer

Large dairy operates west of Wayne

By Clark Oates

For the Herald

Since May 8, 1986, a dairy operation known as MPM Farms has been operation four miles west of Wayne.

The operation, which is a partnership between "Bob" Minow, his wife Diane and Dr. Kurt Puffer, is currently milking just over 1,400 cows each day.

The Minows also have another dairy in California which was one of Dr. Puffer's clients prior to his move to Wayne.

"Bob" Minow is originally from north-west Iowa and Puffer grew up in eastern Iowa so the pair were familiar with the Midwest before choosing to locate the dairy here.

"We based our decision to locate in Wayne County on several factors including the availability of land, feed supply prices and milk prices," Dr. Puffer said. "There is a declining milk supply in this area due to a number of older milk producers letting and going out of business."

The operation is currently milking at 80 percent of the capacity they plan to attain.

"Our facility looks as capable of handling 1,600-1,700 cows and we plan to reach that level later this year," Dr. Puffer said.

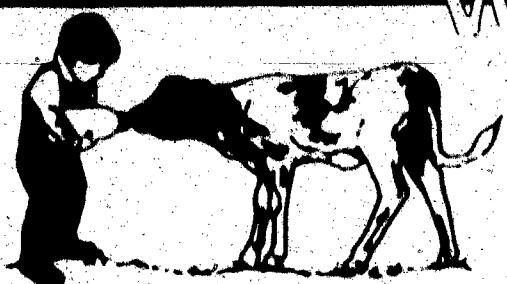

Approximately 9,700 gallons of milk are produced by the 1,400 cows that are Milking time at MPM Farms involves bringing in the cows in sets of 50 and continues until all have been milked. The process is completed each morning and evening. More than 1,400 cows are milked each day at the dairy.

currently being milked twice each day.

"The milk is purchased by Wells Blue Bunny and is shipped to either their ice cream plant in Ames, Iowa or the milk processing plant in Omaha. We generally have three trucks of milk leave here every two days," Piller said.

Usually, dairy cows have calves a year apart. They are generally milked for 105 days and allowed a "dry" period of 60 days before calving again.

The average cow is culled for health reasons or because of low production after having three calves. Records are kept on each of the cows which are tested once a month to check the amount of milk being produced.

The operation has its own breeding bulls and calves are born every day. They are then picked up and sold locally.

Replacement cows are purchased from a number of locations, including Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Wisconsin.

The facility consists of two free stall barns that house 410 cows each. The cows are fed and housed in these barns and are moved to the milking parlor at milking time.

The milking parlor is equipped to milk 50 cows at a time. The actual milking process takes only five to 60 minutes. The cows are then returned to barns and another set is brought in.

Two shifts of employees work at caring and feeding for the cattle. There are a total of 12 employees who work 1500 shifts of nine hours each.

Dairy cattle are fed a controlled ration of feed consisting of hay, grain and other nutrients to increase milk production. Nearly all of the hay and grain used at MPM Farms is purchased locally, but some supplies, such as cotton seed are shipped in from other locations.

Also at the facility is a "dry cow" barn where the cows are kept prior to calving.

The milk is transported from the milking parlor in stainless steel pipes and goes through a cooling process before it is stored in one of two bulk tanks before being shipped out.

The cows are fed a blend of hay, silage and grain, most of which are purchased locally.

Piller is assisted by day-to-day supervisor Brian Erickson who serves as foreman. The two men live on the property which allows for someone to be on call 24 hours a day.

Piller's wife, Judi, who is a small animal veterinarian, is responsible for the herd's health.

The couple has two sons, ages two and four, and the children were one of the reasons the couple chose to relocate to the Midwest.

Piller said that starting a new operation is quite time consuming and other than being with his family, he has time for few hobbies for now.

The contest, sponsored by the Henry Doorly Zoo and Dairy Council of Central States, allows students to create their own videos about animal care or the benefits of dairy products.

David Lindner, James Hartung, Brandon Gamm, Robbie Sturm and Jonathan Wahl won $200 in prize money, donated by the American Dairy Association of Nebraska, for their video "Why Drink Milk?"

The Grand Prize Winning videos from Lincoln Middle School, Lincoln; Lewis Central High School in Council Bluffs, Iowa; and Fairbury High School in Fairbury will be shown at the Dairy World Theater at the Henry Doorly Zoo. They will debut during the seventh annual Ice Cream Safari on June 28.

Interesting facts about June Dairy Month

For nearly fifty years, June has been designated as the time to celebrate America's great bounty of dairy products and to pay tribute to America's dairy farmers. Officially designated June Dairy Month in 1939, the annual tribute has blossomed into a national affair. Just take a look at some interesting and somewhat historic dairy trivia.

MILK: AMERICA'S GOT IT!

In 1884, the milk bottle was invented. Forty-eight years later, in 1932, plastic-coated paper milk cartons began appearing in the dairy case. Today, consumers can choose from a wide variety of milk containers: even six-packs for people on the go.

- We're a milk-producing nation. Every state from Alaska to Hawaii, from Maine to Florida, produces milk.
- Who's really "got milk?" Des Moines, Iowa, ranks the highest among 30 metropolitan areas in per capita supermarket milk sales.
- Every day the nation's 9.1 million dairy cows produce the equivalent of nearly 50 million gallons of milk.
- Think that milk and cookies before bed time is just for kids? Not true! Milk is a natural sleeping aid for all ages. It contains an amino acid protein that signals the brain to relax.

ICE CREAM: THE LATEST TRENDS

• Who ate it? Controversy surrounds the "discovery" of the ice cream cone. Some believe the first ice cream cone was produced in New York in 1886 by Italio Marchiony, an Italian immigrant. Others give credit to a waffle vendor at the 1904 St. Louis Fair.

- Ice cream: a presidential favorite? Of course in fact, George Washington farmed a $200 bill eating ice cream in a New York City ice cream store. And, Dolly Madison, wife of U.S. President James Madison, served ice cream at her husband's inaugural ball in 1813. Ronald Reagan declared July National Ice Cream Month, and the second Sunday, Ice Cream Day.

• More ice cream is produced and eaten in the U.S. than any other country. Ice cream consumption is still highest in June and July. Vanilla is America's favorite flavor, followed by chocolate.

- The big dipper. According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the largest ice cream sundae weighed just over 54,914 pounds.

CHEESE: TO THE REACTOR

- Today almost one-third of all milk produced each year in the U.S. is used to manufacture cheese.

• More than 200 U.S.-produced cheeses are available in your grocer's dairy section. From mild Baby Swiss to tangy Cheddar, there's a cheesy flavor for everyone.

• The United States is the world's largest producer of cheese.

• Cheddar is the number one selling cheese. Supermarkets alone sold more than 330 million pounds of cheddar last year.

- What's the cheesiest? Wisconsin produces 30% of America's cheese.

• Americans love cheese. Per capita, they eat more than 26 pounds of cheese a year.

DAIRY: FOR REAL

• The first commercial yogurt dairy in the U.S. was the Columbia Dairy in Methuen, Massachusetts in 1929. It produced a product called Medizoom, the American name for yogurt.

• The "REAL" seal means you're buying a real dairy product and not an imitation.

• Dairy products are essential to a healthy diet AND 3% MILK, cream, yogurt and sour cream are all high in protein, calcium, and vitamins, which are natural skin toners. Dairy products also contain alpha hydroxy acids that are being used to treat wrinkles and leave skin soft and smooth.

- Looking for a home remedy? For a dry cough, a mixture of warm milk and butter can relax and soothe throat muscles bringing relief.

Milk is 'in' ingredient

Jamie on "Mad About You" is drinking it. So are Jerry on "Seinfeld" and Lucy Cruise in "Jerry Maguire." It's not a new idea or metaphor. It's the biggest, all natural beverage to find its way on the big and little screens and in advertising this year. It's milk, of course.

Advertisers worry about wholesomeness in entertainment and the possible risk of turning off consumers with non-maternal plots, predators and writers are turning to milk in programming. In fact, they are even weaving in recent milk advertisement concepts for humor. Here are some examples:

- In a recent "Mad About You," Paul walks into the room to find pregnant Jamie sleeping on the couch as she is supposed to be getting ready to go to work. Paul goes straight to the kitchen to pour her a glass of milk to help jumpstart her day, although all she wants is a cup of coffee. Paul reminds Jamie that milk does a pregnant body good and, as she sits across from him at the table, waits for her to say the magic words: "got milk?" before giving her the glass.

In another episode of "Seinfeld," a little boy was eating a peanut butter sandwich and the little boy couldn't speak because he had a mouthful of peanut butter. Bill Cosby's wife jokingly asked the child: "got milk?"

- The main character in the hit television series, "The Single Guy," took a new job with an advertising agency. He's shown at home with his friends discussing new advertising concepts. During the conversation, one of his friends is drinking milk and gets a milk mustache and he makes fun of him to wipe it off, as they continue their conversation on new advertising concepts.

Other shows or films that have included milk are, "Third Rock from the Sun," "America's Funniest Home Videos," "The Pretender" and "Friends." Ruth In-everyone wants a part of the milk action. The "milk mustache" commercial has enlisted celebrities that typically don't step behind the camera. Anna新的, Tony Bennett and Brett Favre are just a few of the high-profile names to jump on the milk wagon. Here are some others:

Milk may prevent disease

Milk and milk products offer more than great taste. Besides being one of the richest sources of absorbable calcium, one serving provides a mouthful of other key nutrients including calcium, magnesium, potassium, protein, riboflavin, and vitamins A, D and K2—all essential to optimal health. And as recent research indicates, consuming this dairy package is a powerful tool for potentially reducing the risk of chronic disease.

There's a lot of exciting research confirming the role of milk and milk products in reducing the risk of chronic disease. There's growing consensus among researchers that the health benefits of foods from the Milk Group extend beyond calcium.

For example, a new study funded by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI), found that a balanced diet rich in low-fat milk products, fruits and vegetables, helped lower blood pressure in patients with mild hypertension. Researchers compared the effects of three different diets and found that those people whose diets included the calcium equivalent of three to five servings from the Milk Group each day had the biggest decrease in blood pressure.

In another exciting area of research, a study published in Cancer Research adds to growing evidence that sphingolipids, a type of fat naturally found in milk, may help prevent colon cancer—the second leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States. When given to mice predisposed to colon cancer, researchers found that sphingolipids from milk suppressed the development of malignant tumors.

Achieving a healthy lifestyle is easier than most people think, particularly when adopting the simple three-day strategy. Three servings of milk and milk products is a good rule of thumb for getting at least 200 milligrams of calcium daily—the minimum amount required for adults. Yet, 77 percent of adult women and 56 percent of adult men in America do not get the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) for calcium intake. Americans can easily reach this by enjoying a cup of yogurt for breakfast, an ounce and a half of cheese on a sandwich and a glass of milk with dinner.

Three-a-day may keep the doctor away

As school lets out for the summer, many kids and teens say goodbye to their daily routines. But one routine kids should step up is enjoying at least three-a-day from the Milk Group (four to five a day for teens) since a diet low in calcium can lead to weak bones and a higher risk of bone fractures. After all, it's such a big part of summer activities due to broken bones. There's no doubt about it—milk is good; but with our strong bones, kids and teens may want our side lined during summer activities waiting for their broken bones to heal.

Dairy foods have the calcium needed for strong bones and teeth and provide other essential nutrients including vitamins A, B12 and D; riboflavin; phosphorus; potassium; and magnesium needed for an active lifestyle. It's even more important for kids to drink milk now to avoid diseases like osteoporosis, the bone thinning disease, later in life.

However, according to the just-released USDA Continuing Survey of Food Intakes by Individuals (CSFI), 87 percent of teenage girls and 64 percent of teenage boys are not consuming the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) for calcium (1,000 mg/day), equivalent to four servings from the Milk Group.

Bone formation is at its peak during adolescence. During this window of opportunity, up to 40 percent of adult bone mass is formed. Calcium is so critical during the teenage years, health experts believe four servings may short change teens of this key nutrient. In fact, the American Academy of Pediatrics has issued a modified food Guide Pyramid that recommends five servings from the Milk Group. The modified pyramid ensures teens are consuming at least 1,100 mg of calcium a day, as recommended by the National Health Consensus Conference.

EASING FEARS ABOUT FAT

Especially with the onset of puberty, weight gain can become a common concern for teenagers, and milk and milk products may be dropped from their diets as a result. Teens then sabotage their body's formation of strong, healthy bones by skipping out-on-calcium-rich dairy foods. In addition to the possibilities of weak bones and stress fractures now, teens also risk a hunched back and broken bones later in life. The truth is, research has shown that teens can consume milk products, meet their calcium needs, and not gain weight.

Here are some healthy tips for getting kids on the right track:

- Add a spoonful of chocolate syrup or vanilla extract to milk.
- Use milk when making soups and top with a slice of cheese.
- Down a glass of milk with lunch.
- Stack a slice of cheese on a ham sandwich.
- Toss up a cup of low-fat yogurt into a smoothie.

LEADING BY EXAMPLE

Many of our food habits and preferences are established in childhood. The habit of drinking milk is no exception. When it comes to drinking milk, many children and teens copy the choices of older adults. Ensuring adequate calcium nutrition early in life may be responsible for a 5 to 10 percent difference in peak adult bone mass and a 50 percent difference in the incidence of hip fractures in later years.

The earlier kids are exposed to good eating habits, the greater the chance those habits will stay with them later in life. Parents can encourage their kids to eat well by preparing fun, nutrient-packed calcium-rich meals. Chill out on a hot summer day with a fruit-flavored smoothie or power-up with a slice of veggie pizza. In addition to calcium, cheese contributes magnesium and vitamins B6 and B12.

A mom or dad can set a good example for his/her children by:

- Making sure that milk and milk products are always available in the home.
- Drinking milk and milk products themselves at home, when eating out with the family, at family gatherings, on family vacations, on airplane and at mall food courts.
- Helping children plan special events or parties that include milk and milk products—pizza parties, ice cream社会.
- Volunteering to bring a snack from the Milk Group to children's sports events.
- Whipping up after school dairy snacks for kids using tasty cheeses, yogurt & milk

Dairy products innovative uses

Since the earliest days of civilization, milk has been attributed with properties beyond its primary function of nutrition. Milk has been reported as a rejuvenator and a moisturizer of human skin. Legend has it that Cleopatra bathed in milk to augment her physical beauty and to help rejuvenate and enhance longevity. Today's consumers are putting the legend to the test as they turn to milk-based personal care solutions to help maintain and enhance their physical appearance.

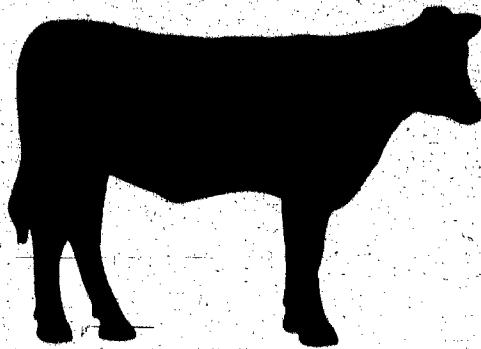

* Milk, cream, yogurt and sour cream are all high in protein, calcium and vitamins to make soothing cleaners. They also contain lactic acid, an alpha hydroxy acid that gently removes dead cells, leaving skin soft and smooth.

* Whey, a by product of cheese making, has long been a Scandinavian beauty secret. It is rich in protein and can be used as an excellent in beauty product recipe.

* As consumers turn to products with natural ingredients, they are buying milk-based products such as Estee Lauder's Nutritious and The Body Shop's Milk Bath in hopes of naturally enhancing their beauty. They are also using homemade milk based solutions to solve their beauty dilemmas.

* A yogurt mask is perfect for removing surface impurities and restoring the skin. Simply spread plain yogurt over skin and let sit for 15-20 minutes. Rinse off and pat dry.

* Sunburns are always a summer bummer. Apply plain yogurt or buttermilk to sun damaged spots to take some of the stinging away from mild sunburns.

Summertime sandwiches

The new wrap

Wraps. High rollers. Gourmet, but better.

Whatever you call them, their tasty contributions are rolling full force onto menus at America's favorite deli and restaurant. New York City's famed Tavern on the Green restaurant recently added a sliced turkey and potato wrap to its menu, and fast food establishments, such as Taco Bell and Long John Silver's, just unveiled their newest wraps to capitalize on this stirring food trend. Americans will continue to embrace these delicious and easy-to-prepare wrap sandwiches as they move from front and center on kitchen tables and picnic tables this summer.

Closely defined, a wrap is any combination of your favorite foods including cheese, meat and vegetables tucked into a tortilla, pita or any flat bread and then rolled up. Best of all, they take little time to prepare and their design makes them virtually spill-proof. Sandwich lovers will no longer groan for that slice of tomato that fell out the other side!

The recipes for wraps are endless and easy enough for even the biggest culinary novice to construct. One of the most versatile wrap ingredients is cheese because it is conveniently available in a variety of great-tasting "cheese" all the better for speedy preparation. Whether you shred or slice it, cheese is the perfect wrap companion because it enhances and brings out the flavor of other foods.

The wrap-and-roll revolution began in California about two years ago. After vacationing in Cozumel, Mexico, four friends decided they could modify the role of the tortilla. With hundreds of tortillas in hand, they opened a "wrap-style" sandwich shop in San Francisco, naming pita and pita predictably chips, young crowd. The concept quickly spread across the nation.

So why are wraps not on a roll?

"Wraps are convenient for customers," stated Jack Robertiello, associate editor, Supermarket News. "Hand-held meals is the way people like to eat. And, hot or cold, the range of combinations is seemingly endless."

Take, for example, the Turkey, Veggie & Cheese Wrap—a simple recipe that requires minimal ingredients and effort. Start with a tortilla and cover it with juicy turkey, tomato wedges, green pepper strips and shredded lettuce tossed in ranch dressing. Add sliced turkey and, in a burst of flavor, sprinkle a handful of shredded Cheddar cheese over the top. Wrap it up, and an effortless, sali-ting sandwich is born.
