Summer's over

Students from kindergarten through college went back to classes this week. However, due to extreme heat and humidity classes were shortened each day at area schools. Above, second grade students in Mrs. Nadine Fredrickson's class begin to adapt to a new routine. No break in the heat or the humidity is in the forecast through the Labor Day Weekend.

Doug Leibekamp spent May 22 his 10th birthday, in the hospital with pancreatitis. Since that time he has spent more than seven weeks in several different hospitals.

Following the first attack Leibekamp was advised to have his gall bladder removed to help prevent further attacks from occurring.

Following the June 3 surgery which removed the gall bladder Leibekamp was well enough to return to work for the City of Wayne where he has been employed in the Electrical Production area for approximately 14 years.

On July 11 he had to settle Cindy (Bledsoe), left on a vacation to watch their daughter Heidi play in a softball tournament in North Platte.

"Doug had been feeling pretty good after his gall bladder was removed and we thought everything was fine," Cindy said.

Following the treatment, the family traveled to Foster, SD where Doug experienced another pancreatic attack.

"At 7 a.m. on July 14 I took him to the hospital in Foster. They transferred him to Rapid City Regional Hospital and he spent 18 days in the acute care unit there. Most of the time he was in a vegetative state with a lot of medication," Cindy said.

During Doug's stay in Rapid City a number of tests were run, including CT scans, blood tests and x-rays. A cyst was found on his pancreas. His blood pressure and heart rate were also very high during this period.

When nothing more could be done in Rapid City, Cindy brought her husband home to wait for the cyst to rupture. On the 18th Doug became paralyzed due to the cyst pushing on his liver.

On Aug. 1 Doug had a check up with Dr. Ben Martin in Wayne who sent him on to Marion Health Center in Sioux City. He has been at Marion since Aug. 6.

On Aug. 13 surgery was performed to drain the cyst and install a drain which would allow for the fluid inside to drain off. A drain was placed to his liver to allow it to function.

"The recent tests have indicated that the pancreas will not function again properly and he will be diabetic," Cindy said.

Following the surgery Doug was doing well and discharge was held as to when he might return home.

However, on Aug. 22 he began bleeding badly again following the removal of the drain in his liver. A CT scan showed that the hole created by the drain had not closed up as it should have. Another drain was inserted under the skin to help drain off fluid.

On Aug. 24, emergency surgery was performed to reopen the cyst to keep it draining.

Several other procedures have kept Leibekamp in the hospital

Wayne to dedicate building

The city of Wayne will formally dedicate the community's new library and senior center building on Sunday, Sept. 6.

The building, located at 410 North Road, has 13,000 square feet of space, which is equally divided between the library and senior center. In addition, there is also a community room and a community meeting room in the structure. A paved lighted parking lot is adjacent to the building.

"We believe this facility will help our community in many ways," said Patrick Cooley, chairman of the Library Foundation. Cooley noted that many community events will be facilitated due to the youth and senior rooms in the same building.

Construction on the project which cost $1.6 million began in April of 1996. Funds were raised from a local lumber mill, the site of the former library building, and from additional private donors.

At the reception, Wayne's Mayor Sheryl Lindau, will address the audience. City Administrator Joe Satriano, Mark Intermitt, administrator of the Nebraska Division on Aging, Brad Wagner, director of the Nebraska Library Council, and Patrick Cooley will also have remarks at the ceremony.

"This is a facility the people in Wayne can be proud of," said Satriano. "A lot of people have worked very hard behind the scenes to make this project happen. This truly is a community building," he added.

In the state of the college education, faculty and the support staff at WSC encouraged continued effort from everyone associated with the college to focus on enhancing educational services to students and to the region.

Nearly 4,000 students arrived for the start of classes Tuesday and all in readiness said Madsen.

While it is too early to tell how this year's enrollment numbers will shake out, we are optimistic that the final head count will be above last year, said Dennis Krueger, assistant vice president for enrollment management. Final student numbers will be available after late registration and evening class enrollment periods this week.

Registrations this summer and fall, director Larry Finsman is preparing to prepare all available resources on campus. As of today, enrollment and the dorms were nearly at capacity without having students turn trips or capacity exceed-

"It has been a hectic summer of activity getting ready for one of the largest groups of incoming students we have ever seen," said Finsman.

Madsen and Finsman both attributed the continued growth and interest in Wayne State enrollment and on-campus living to the price and value of service provided to students at Wayne State.

"We continue to compete very favorably with our peer institutions in cost and educational quality," Madsen said in his annual pep talk to

Inspecting the crop

Despite the heat and humidity, area corn producers were on hand Monday night to inspect more than 40 varieties of corn planted in a test plot north of Wayne. The Field Day, which also included chemical representatives and displays of farm equipment, was sponsored by the Northeast Nebraska Corn Growers.

would add an additional $150,000 to the project.

"No local funds would be used for the construction of these apartments and they would provide for a taxpaying piece of property," Ms. Anderson told the Gary Danner, who was a co-applicant on the request for rezoning.

Tony Rose, a member of the Housing Development Corporation, said that there is a need for housing in the city of Wayne and that at least nine houses have been lost in the city in building the Library/Senior Center, the proposed truck stop on East Highway 33 and through construction at the Taylor Lutheran Church.

The plan would allow for the construction of two eight-unit apartment complexes, each with its own outside entrance. Funding for the $1.2 million project would come from three sources:

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development would provide 70 percent or $750,000 and would ensure that occupants spend no more than 30 percent of their income on housing costs, including rent and utilities.

A low-income housing tax credit through the Federal Reserve Bank would provide an additional $100,000 for the project.

Zoning

being discussed if this type of housing were brought into the neighborhood.

"I also feel overturning the Planning Commission's recommendation would be a mistake," he said.

Joe Dorsey said he felt the city was rushing into something because of the possibility of losing grant money.

"I think we need to take our time and do this right," he said.

Willis Wiseman said that with the development 150 children could be brought into the neighborhood and that trespassing would be an issue. He also asked whether subsidized housing is the answer to Wayne's housing shortage.

He said he felt the council should support the Planning Committee's recommendation.

After debate by the council, the ordinance to amend the zoning map with an amendment to include only that portion of land owned by Gary Donner passed on a 6-0 vote. Councilmen McLean and Dayton Wiser were absent from Tuesday's meeting.

Other items on the council's agenda were handled rather quickly and included the passage of resolutions to annex property adjacent to and including Centennial Road, approving the plan, specifications and cost estimates for the construction of improvements in Storm Sewer District No. 97-01, directing the publication of the proposed ordinance for the storm sewer district and approving plans, specifications, cost estimate and re-affirming the special engineer for the project.

The council also approved the naming of the library/senior center facility. The building will be named the Robert B. and Mary E. Bentz-Library/Senior Center.

The council also authorized the application to the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality for a Solid Reduction and Recycling Grant. The money would be used for a recycling bales and a skip loader.

The council rejected a bid of $341,000 from Christiansen Construction for the transfer station expansion project.

Lance Webster, Chief of Parks, reported on three properties that have received nuisance letters. He told the the council that two of the owners have made progress in cleaning up their lots and that he will personally contact another of the owners to see what arrangements can be made.

City Administrator Joe Salteros presented a copy of the proposed 1997-98 budget for the city to the council.

The budget stands at $16,458,000 which is $30,000 less than a year ago. The levy would be at 47.8 cents and would include the Airport Authority in the city's budget.

Several council work sessions are planned to finalize the budget and two public hearings will be held at the Council's Sept. 8 meeting for public input into the budget. They will begin at approximately 7:15 p.m.

Benefit

for more than three weeks.

"We are hoping we have everything under control now. However, it will be at least another 10 days before the run game home," Cindy said.

Doug has not been to work since July 10 and Cindy who works for Heart of America taking dairy samples, has been to work only several days in the last seven weeks.

To help with medical and other expenses of the Echtenkamp family, the City of Wayne employees and local Lutheran Churches are sponsoring a Benefit Spaghetti Dinner on Sept. 14.

The event will be held at the new Senior Center from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Donations are being accepted for the dinner and for a silent auction that will take place at the same time.

Anyone wishing to donate to the benefit may contact GENE HANSEN, Superintendent of Electrical Production at 375-2806.

In addition to his daughter Heidi, Echtenkamp also has two stepchildren, Carrie and Steve, who is currently stationed in the Navy. He also has a granddaughter, Shelby.

the more than 400 employees of the college.

One area of particular pride Mathes cited and attributed to the excellent collaborative effort of the entire faculty, staff and administration was the degree of efficiency attained by the invitation.

While the college has nearly doubled its enrollment since 1987, and has made dramatic improvements in campus facilities, those changes have not resulted in comparable increases in expenses.

He also pointed out that along with the enrollment growth, average class sizes are smaller today than in prior years because of the addition of new faculty positions.

One focus is still on providing a small college environment where faculty have the time and resources to provide individualized attention to students, he said.

These goals have been accomplished through the efficient use of the resources available to the college and the addition of private donations through a very active Wayne State Foundation.

More than 300 students will be "benefiting" from $165,000 in foundation scholarships when classes start next week. That is over and above the nearly $12 million in other scholarships and financial aid administered by the college's finance and office each year he said.

He encouraged the college employees to keep their focus on the services they provide to the students.

"The work we do every day will keep the momentum going," he said. He added the efforts of Wayne State employees are appreciated and understood as they continue to make WSC a great place for students to receive their education."

Yearbook rates high

The 1997 edition of the Wayne High School yearbook, Devil Daze has been inducted into the Walworth Publishing Company's Gallery of Excellence.

More than eight percent of the yearbooks Walworth publishes each year are selected to be part of this gallery of excellence. After a book has been inducted into the gallery, it is sold nationwide by our sales force as an example of outstanding yearbook production.

"By selecting your yearbook for the '97 Gallery of Excellence, we are recognizing it as an example of the best Walworth has to offer. This honor is indicative not only of the strength of your yearbook program, but also of the dedication and commitment to quality that are characteristic of your staff," said David M. Murphy, Industrial Products Manager for Walworth Publishing Company.

Laurel Woltjer, adviser for the yearbook said that because of the selection as a Gallery of Excellence Award, the company will use copies of the book in its catalogues and web site, as well as placing it in its showcase of award-winning yearbooks in the foyer of its headquarters.

The book features 317 pages of original layout design, a full index, original advertising designs, a 14-page full-color year-in-review supplement, an expanded yearbook directory, expanded photography coverage, developing yearbook stamping and printing, four full color senior pages and full color stamping on the cover.

Staff activities and agencies included Jolene Jager, Shari Chapman, the all-clubs, a yearbook theme development and various places on Class B competitive photographic design.

Tara Hart, April Lape and Carol Gottschall were state competitors.

EditorialsCapitol News*'Welcome Wayne-Staters!'

A hearty 'Welcome' to each of you arriving on the Wayne State College campus for another term. Whether you're a freshman or returning student, the community is again pleased that you are here pursuing your educational career.

Wayne is not great in geographical size, but great in hometown atmosphere. Sky scrapers? None! But our best wishes are "stories" high.

The good news is that returning Staters will notice all the new construction projects completed during the summer. Newcomers are here just in time to help dedicate a new library/senior citizen center September 2. Did you notice the new 4,200 foot airport runway east of town is now operational?

You've also likely noticed Wayne does not offer certain activities, such as car highjackings, night shootouts and gunfire in the streets. noisy jet aircraft will not awaken you!

Due to increased traffic, Seventh Street is undergoing a major renovation. We didn't get the "Don't mind me mess" sign up, but do use caution for everyone's safety. Also keep in mind that trees are double in the construction zone.

Bad news? Oh yes, no subways, passenger rail service, or ships in our harbor! Sorry! But you will discover courteous store clerks, professional law enforcement, receptive churches, and loads of friendly folk.

Here's hoping all 4,000 of you will soon feel right at home. Enjoy!

Tribute to labor

America will pause Monday to extol the fruits of labor.

Millions of hard working citizens will have the day off to celebrate in a myriad of ways the right, and the honor, to work.

Traditionally considered as the closing of summer activities, Labor Day is observed the first Monday in September in all states.

Unemployment is down this year and the economy appears to be thriving. Anyone truly wanting work is likely to find a job.

Jobs are not only necessary for earning the bucks to pay the bills, but they also give us socialization and status. We may even let our work serve in identifying ourselves to strangers. Uniforms are a job requirement for many, while others select appropriate apparel topped off with a smile. Having a job also has to do with how we feel about ourselves.

Working at a job one enjoys reaps even more benefits. And although some will soon retire, they will continue to be rewarded for having worked diligently.

Work is profitable and honorable, so we Americans plan to celebrate on Monday because we enjoy our freedom, liberty and choice of career.

Have a good one. Make it a safe one. After all, there are a few things waiting for you to do when you return Tuesday!

Enjoy!

Bacteria questioned

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

When I was a kid, and we needed meat, we'd round a crew or a pig down to the locker plant to be butchered. In a few days, we'd have loads of meat, steaks, stew meat and hamburger wrapped in white butcher paper and stamped with my Dad's name for the outside.

A freezer full to overflowing with today, my meat comes from the counter in the back of the supermarket. It's thermometrically tested, inspected by the USDA and usually has a hand-ripened label.

The recent recall of several contaminated meat products by Hudson Foods Inc. has caused me to think again of how times have changed since we began to enjoy meat as a regular food product.

The resulting ban after a number of people became ill after eating hamburger patties produced at the Hudson plant is only the latest in a series of recalls that have plagued the food industry over the last decade. The incidence of disease associated with the consumption of meat products has been increasing steadily over the past 20 years.

Such recalls are the result of a lack of knowledge about the proper handling of meat products. Consumers of meat products are often the most difficult group to reach with information about food safety. They are not interested in reading labels, they are not interested in reading nutrition facts, they are not interested in reading cooking instructions, they are not interested in reading expiration dates.

And they are not interested in reading labels, they are not interested in reading nutrition facts, they are not interested in reading cooking instructions, they are not interested in reading expiration dates.

But why the high traffic?

Because we are the lead sheep in getting the word out.

Just like the other study groups.

It's quite normal for us to go through a bunch of nights, you want to go through another.

What are you talking about?

Well, you know how throughout the years, poor folks split open meat checks for not knowing what to do?

So what about it?

Instead of just telling them to take a look at the label, we need to tell them to pay more attention to the label.

It's quite normal for us to go through a bunch of nights, you want to go through another.

suppliers on the other days where the contaminated meat was believed to have been processed.

Other sources of contamination also are possible. Could there have been a sick Hudson worker? Could it have been a food handler?

You've got to remember that the bacteria in question, E. coli, is as the enemy of both humans and animals. A rogue strain traced back to 1975 is the one that causes the health problems ranging from diarrhea and cramps up to kidney failure and blood clots in the brain.

The bacteria can live in the intestines of cattle without harming them. Unsurprisingly, other meat might become contaminated with material from those cattle if the packing house doesn't follow the proper sanitary techniques. Faulty inspection procedures and sloppy cooking techniques could allow the bacteria to live on undetected, until it makes an unwary eater sick.

Our state's largest daily newspaper has been enthusiastic about this story. The paper is proud that Nebraska reporters won the national media's top award for the recall of 1.7 million pounds of beef produced at the Hudson plant. The big significance of the story still seems murky to me, though.

This could be nothing more than a fluke, caused either by Hudson's bad luck or by a failure, somewhere, to follow accepted sanitary procedures. It also might be a growing health hazard that calls for a revamping of modern meat processing techniques.

One thing is certain: I'm never going to look at a fast hamburger in quite the same way.

The views expressed in Capitol News are those of the writer and not necessarily those of the Nebraska Press Association.

It's part of a package deal.

During the glut of physicians.

A glut of doctors? If there's a glut of docs, then why do I have to wait so long to see one?

Well, they want fewer doctors, so fewer docs mean more money. A glut of doctors could end some on welfare.

A number of scouts from Wayne Boy Scout Troop #174 recently returned from a scouting trip to New Mexico.

Troop spends 10 days hiking in New Mexico

After arriving Aug. 6 in northeast New Mexico, Boy Scout Troop #174, sponsored by Our Savior Lutheran Church, representing Wayne, began a 10-day trek on the trails of Philmont Scout Ranch, the world's largest camping facility.

Hiking in the crew were Nick Saltz, Tim Zach, Andy Wright, Eric Helti, Jason Mader, Eric Fletcher, Sam Schmitz and Craig

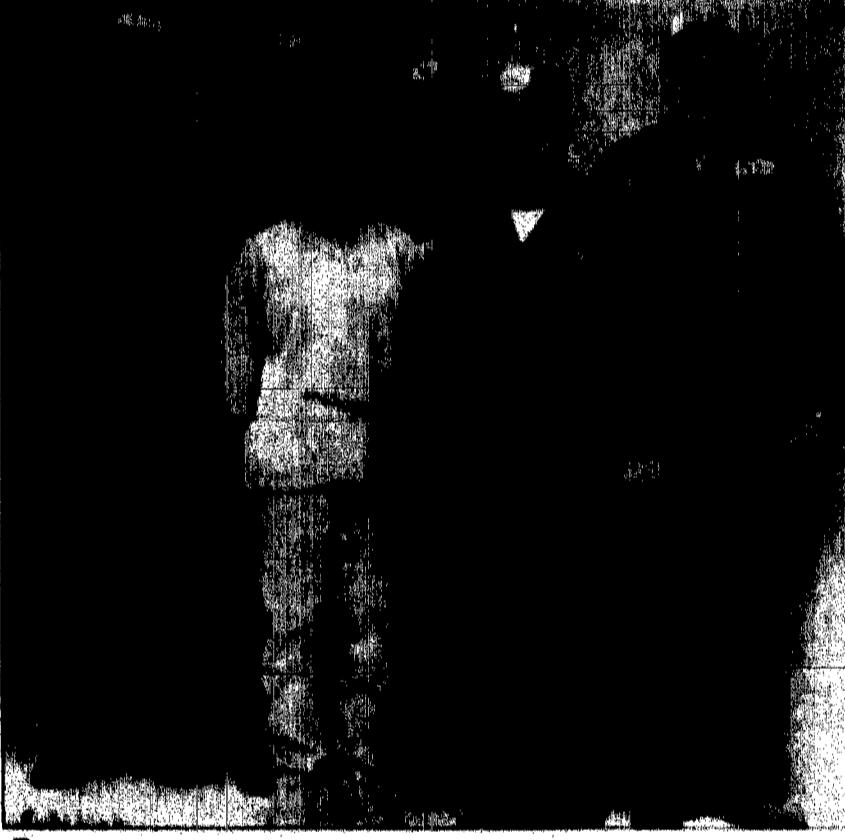

Helti. Their advisors were Gary Wright, Terry Mader and Kurt Schmitz.

The group backpacked between 50 and 120 miles and visited several of the ranch's 12 back country camps, participated in such activities as rock climbing, mountain biking, fly fishing and gold prospecting. They also studied conservation and ecology.

Philmont, which covers 214 square miles, is operated by the Boy Scouts of America. Since the ranch's donation in 1958 by Tulsa philanthropist Walter Phillips, over 600,000 scouts and their adult leaders from around the world have participated in scouting skills, citizenship, personal growth and character building.

Wayne Scouts continue to collect paper for recycling

In today's recycling market changes occur rapidly.

However, Wayne Boy Scout Troop #174 has been collecting newspapers and other paper for recycling for more than 25 years.

Currently the scouts have a paper drive on the third Saturday of each month. They will accept newspapers, small phone books, office paper and junk mail.

"I have contacted our buyer, Greenstone Industries, and they indicated that the loads of paper we have taken in are acceptable. They allow us to have 10-15 percent of a load be material other than newspaper," said Chuck Rutenbeck, Committee Chairman of the Troop.

"There has been some confusion in the past about what we can and cannot accept. We will accept these types of paper and we do not accept computer paper. However, the computer paper is stored in a different location than the rest of the paper," Rutenbeck said.

Those wishing to drop off computer paper may do so by delivering it to the Presbyterian Church garage, located behind City Hall.

The scouts cannot accept shredded paper.

The scouts act independently of the Wayne Recycling Center and collect approximately 20 tons of paper each month. The current price for a ton of paper is $15.

Funds generated through the paper drive are used to fund such projects as summer camps and associated expenses, awards, general troop operation, weekend camping excursions and leaders' expenses for such trips.

In addition, some of the money collected is being set aside for the purchase of a new trailer. The scouts are also seeking grant money to assist with this purchase.

"All the time and transportation to pick up the papers is donated by the scouts and their parents," Rutenbeck said.

The paper is collected in two semi-trailers located on Windom Street near the trash compactor. They are open for drop off if the Saturday pick up time is not convenient. The paper buyers prefer that the paper be put in paper bags or tied into bundles rather than placed in plastic bags.

Cardboard is not accepted by the scouts and should be left with the Wayne Recycling Center. Also, the scouts do not accept household garbage.

The scouts also collect aluminum cans which are sold to Region IV for added revenue.

The Troop really appreciates the support of the entire community in this project. Not only do we raise funds to support our activities, but we hope to provide a service to the community by removing paper from the landfills," said Randy Gunn, Scoutmaster for the troop.

BACK TO SCHOOL SAFETY

In an effort to maintain a safe environment for your children during the upcoming school year, here are a few safety tips to consider:

SAFETY TO AND FROM SCHOOL

■ Know the routes your children take and have them travel with other children. Be aware of how much time it takes to go to and from school. Do not allow them to take shortcuts that may be dangerous.

■ Tell your children to stay away from strangers, and strange vehicles.

■ Always walk on sidewalks. If there are no sidewalks, walk in single file on the side of the road. Cross streets at intersections only.

■ Never accept rides from anyone other than persons you have designated beforehand.

■ Inform school officials and day care providers who is authorized to pick up your children. Try to have the same person each day.

■ Advise your children's principal to notify you immediately if one of your children is absent.

■ At the earliest age possible, have your children memorize their full name, phone number and address. Teach them how to use the phone to call home, call 911, and how to make a collect call home.

■ Take a good look at your children daily and know the clothes they are wearing.

REPORT SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY

Instinct your children to immediately inform school authorities of any criminal or suspicious activity they may witness. Informing your local police department or school about suspicious incidents may prove helpful in dealing with these situations, and may help resolve a potential problem. If you or your children see any suspicious activity, DIAL 911 immediately.

KNOW YOUR CHILDREN'S FRIENDS

Know the names of your children's friends, where they live and how to reach them. Remember, your children make new friends each school year. Being familiar with your children's friends will help you know where to look for them in the event they fail to come home from school on time. Children should also be taught to keep parents informed about their whereabouts.

SAFETY AT HOME

It is important to have a plan in place for your children to follow if they get home from school and no adult is there. You should have a well-defined list of what your children can and cannot do if they are home alone.

For more information on school safety contact school administrators, your local law enforcement official or the Office of Attorney General, Don Stenberg, 2115 State Capitol Building, Lincoln, NE, 68509, (402) 471-2682, or toll free in Nebraska 1-800-727-6432.

First annual Old-Timers Classic successful as nearly 200 attend

The first ever Old-Timers Baseball Classic was a success.

The annual event was designed to help raise money for park improvements at Hank Overlin Field and in its inaugural year, more than $700 was raised with help from the matching funds by AAI Branch 1470.

The Wayne Baseball Association came up with the idea of a heavy batters/old-timers baseball event in hopes to bring back some of the faces over the years that represented Wayne's long history of quality baseball.

Association secretary Jeannie Hurn said there were nearly 200 people that attended the outing. Hot dogs and hamburgers were served during the day as more than 20 players from the past returned to compete.

The Blue Devils volleyball team and head coach Joyce Haskins will play Beemer in the first round of pool play in the Bobcat/Catfish Invitational in Beemer on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The Blue Devil girls will play five matches during the first week end of action.

The cross country team will be competing in the Cedar Invitational on Thursday at 6 p.m. at the Beemer Golf Course under Becky Rude's direction and the Wayne football team under second year head coach John McLaughlin will have their first season action on Friday, Sept. 5, at home against Schuyler in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Wheekfield's volleyball team will play in the Beemer Invitational on Thursday under the command of head coach Marty Slaughter and the football team opens on Friday against Wheekfield in Wheekfield at 7:30 p.m. with first year head coach Ted Park.

Former athletes compete on winning team

WAYNE—Former Wayne athletes Rudy Hamer and Travis Stracke competed on the winning fast pitch softball team which qualified for the National tournament this weekend in Minot, N.D.

Playing for Bigby's, the champs had to defeat Big Red Keno twice to earn the crown and they did so by scores of 11-10 and 8-5. Big Red Keno was previously ranked as Omaha's top fast pitch team.

In the final contest, Hamer and Stracke helped the winners by launching first inning home runs. Hamer was named the tournament's most valuable player after hitting .350 on an 11-20 performance which included 12 runs batted in. The team's manager Rich Marpanelli, also has Wayne ties after playing football for the Wildcats in the mid 70's.

Mr. & Mrs. Arens

Brassett, trumpeter Dan Hansen, both of Carroll, and Terresa Gaudinski of Norfolk.

• Musical selections included "God, A Woman and a Man," "Parent Prayer," "The Way Chooses You For Me," "Friends," and "Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white satin gown trimmed with lace. The lace featured a long off-the-shoulder neckline and long slender sleeves. The bodice was highlighted with hand-beaded lace. A full skirt flared from the bustier waistline.

Many Rutherford lace motifs dotted the skirt and train. Scalloped lace edged the horizon and cathedral train. A beaded lace finished the back waistline.

The headpiece was a crown of lace heavily beaded with pearls and sequins. A pink and double layer of floral illusion dotted with pearls flared to waist length.

She carried a bouquet of grace roses, stephanotis, lilies, Alstroemeria, wisteria, bridal beauty and satin ribbon.

Learning doesn't occur in vacuum

Or I assume that you favor a highly structured curriculum that emphasizes the memorization of specific facts, which I consider to be a very low level of learning.

We need to teach concepts to our kids and help them learn how to think, not just fill their heads with a bunch of details.

Or I agree that we want to teach concepts to students, but that does not occur in a vacuum. For example, we would like them to understand the concept of the solar system and how the planets are positioned in rotation around the sun. How is that done? One way is for them to learn the distances between the heavenly bodies, i.e., the sun is 93 million miles from earth, but the moon is only 240,000. The concept of relative positions is then understood from the factual information. What I'm saying is that an understanding of the right factual information can and should lead to conceptual learning.

Q Our children are all on their own now and my husband and I are free to do some of the traveling we have always planned to do when we got them through college. But lately I feel too tired even to keep the house clean, and too depressed to care about planning or doing anything extra. I'm only 46 yet some days I can hardly get out of bed in the morning. I just want to put my head under the pillow and cry for no reason at all. So why do I feel so terrible? My husband is trying to be patient, but this morning he growled, "You have everything a woman could want—what do you have to be blue about?" Do you think I could be losing my mind?

A I doubt there is anything wrong with your mind. The symptoms you describe sound as if you may be entering menopause and if so, your discomfort may be caused by the hormonal imbalance that accompanies glandular upheaval. I suggest that you make an appointment to see a gynecologist or other physician in the next few days. He or she can help you.

Tips given for parents

With the new school year, many working parents are tempted to leave their children home alone a few hours each day. How can parents be sure their kids have the emotional maturity to take this step?

As a rule, children under the age of 12 lack decision-making skills to function alone on a daily basis for an extended period of time. However, age is only one factor; some 12-year-olds are more self-sufficient and self-reliant than some 14-year-olds.

Parents also need to consider a child's emotional maturity and common sense. They need to ask if their child "feels ready" and wants to be alone.

When parents decide their children are ready to stay home alone and are comfortable with surrounding neighborhood, they may consider these tips:

Start slowly. Leave the child alone for short periods of time at first. Gradually increase the length of time and add new responsibilities. Determine the child's reaction at each point.

*Stay in touch by phone. Children feel much better about being home alone when a call a parent. Post all important phone numbers.

*Handle the fear factor. Kids will feel afraid of unexpected noises or a stranger coming to the door. Ask kids about specific situations and teach them proper responses. Handle the process as a game: "What would you do if you were hungry?" "If you lost your key?" "You wanted to visit a friend?" Go over these and add new scenarios from time to time. Kids need to be careful and alert but not too frightened to enjoy themselves.

*Use the neighborhood as a resource. Establish a support network among neighbors. Children are less likely to feel lonely when they have friends to visit and play with. Have at least two neighborhood kids call if they need help.

*Make a house safer. Teach kids that doors and windows must always be locked. Make sure a child can view an outside without opening the door. If children think their keys may have been stolen, they shouldn't return until a security check has been made. Leave a radio on to sound like a television. Consider investing a call-a-answering device for the telephone.

*Survey the outside of the home. Make changes to increase child safety. Keep garage doors locked, for example, and cut back shrubbery. Don't leave notes on doors or windows or lights on inside during the day.

Make helping someone else your labor of love this week.

And then cap your week by going to church.
