Jaycees plan fireworks display

The Wayne County Jaycees biannual Independence Day fireworks display will be held this year on Friday night, July 3 at Hank Overin Field on Windom Street.

The display is scheduled to begin after the Wayne vs. Wakefield Legion baseball games. The half-hour fireworks show is free and open to the public.

This display is being made possible through donations from the area business community and from funds collected from donation canisters located at various businesses in Wayne.

According to Ron Gentrup, publicity spokesperson for the event, "The Jaycees encourage everyone to thank the local businesses and the city for their support of this event."

"Come out on the Third and support the Legion baseball teams and help the Jaycees celebrate Independence Day at Hank Overin Field."

Council listens to debate

A resolution which would have approved the expansion of a blight and substandard area evaluation in the Western Wayne Planning Study was tabled during the Wayne City Council's Tuesday meeting.

Earlier this year, the city had proposed to study an area in Western Wayne for purpose of determining possible future use of the area.

City Administrator Joe Salitros told those present that the city was considering a recommendation to expand the Blight and Substandard Area Evaluation to the south to Grainland Road and to the east to Douglas Street, which would include the former Middle School.

He explained the definition blight and substandard and the benefits of the designation, including increased possible financial assistance in the future.

A number of people spoke against the proposal during a public hearing at the meeting.

Dr. Willis Wiseman stressed four reasons he was opposed to the study.

"Before we have always had a plan before we did anything. Now, we have no plan. Also, why, when we have a planning and zoning committee, are they not involved in what is going on?" Wiseman said.

He added that the majority of the community "has no idea what is going on" and would like to see a plan of what is proposed.

Wiseman also questioned whether or not the landowner of the farm ground involved in the proposed study had been consulted.

Dale Miller, representing Kirkham:Michael, the firm doing the planning study told those present that state law requires a study be conducted before a plan can be implemented.

John Vakoc spoke to the council and said there is a large negative perception with the words "blighted and substandard." He also was in favor of more involvement from the zoning commission.

Carl Johnson, who owns land north of the proposed study area told the council that "not much information has been given out to the public." He also expressed concerns about drainage in the area.

Councilman Doug Sturm told those present that "no one is taking land away from anyone."

Council person Jane O'Leary said "the study is not going to hurt anyone."

She added that information is a two-way process and those desiring more information should see council members to ask questions.

After discussion, the council voted to table the resolution to the July 14 meeting.

In other action, the council approved an application for a Class B Liquor License for Kum & Go and approved an application from Douglas Dennison of Omaha for Corporate Manager for Kum & Go.

A Special Designated Liquor Permit was granted to the Knights of Columbus to sell alcohol July 10-11 during the Chicken Show.

The council waived the three readings and passed two ordinances in the city code, both involving changes in wording. The first pertained to contracts and

Capitol News

Informing public is main objective

By Leslie Boellstorff Reed
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association
Gov. Nelson gave me a call last week.

He didn't much like the column I wrote earlier this month on the prison site selection process.

Upon reflection, I didn't much like that column, either. Though for different reasons than the governor gave!

I'm going to seize the opportunity to tell you a bit about my premise for these columns and what, exactly, it is I try to accomplish with them.

In keeping with the tradition of Melvin Paul - the nom de plume used by previous reporters who wrote this column - I strive to give you a press insider's view of recent news items.

As a working reporter, I have no business giving you my opinions on various issues and topics. I don't want you reading my stuff in the Omaha World-Herald and saying I'm biased because I've taken a public position on one issue or another.

Nor do I want to make news or stir controversy. My job is to report the news and inform you. I want to stay as far out of the spotlight as possible.

Still I want to personalize the newsgathering process a bit - give you a sense of what's going on behind the scenes. If I do my job right, you can look at other news coverage and say "aha! That's why that story came out the way it did." I also try to use a bit of wit and humor just because politics, like life, often is absurd.

I personally was not offended by the historic use of the Melvin Paul nom de plume.

It made it far easier to accomplish those goals and keep my name out of the news-stories. It raised accountability problems, however, and I don't disagree with the decision to end the use of the pseudonym.

But back to my problem with the governor...

I didn't like the prison site selection column because I was trying to be funny and it turned out obnoxious. I compared the politics leading up to the final choice between McCook and Tecumseh to the "Three Stooges," with the officials involved basically bopping one another over the head without accomplishing much of anything. A reader told me it sounded

"snotty" and she was right. I should have picked a better analogy (although, I haven't yet come up with one).

Gov. Nelson didn't like it because he said some comments were based upon rumor and innuendo. He protested my observation that Tecumseh backers were angered by his saying Prisons Director Harold Clarke should not reopen the evaluation process. And he objected vehemently to a statement that "others whispered that Nelson was trying to strong arm Clarke into picking McCook."

Now, I probably wouldn't have used either of those comments in a regular news story. I would have to put names to both of them.

Nelson says neither is true - that Tecumseh leaders told him they weren't mad.

And, he said, if he were strong arming Clarke, McCook would have been chosen.

All I know is that people were mad about something, and it definitely looked as if Nelson was trying to influence the decision. That's the talk that was going on behind the scenes, and that's what I try to tell you about with this column.

I remain mystified why this story turned into an epic struggle between east and west and how the politically powerful east muscled the west out of yet another juicy political plum.

Hello? Have any of you folks been to Tecumseh lately? As I've mentioned before, I'm from that neck of the woods. The story there since my high school graduation in 1979 has been one economic loss after another. Tecumseh, Pawnee City, Humboldt, Falls City - all are struggling to recover from significant economic losses in the past two decades. For the past year, the biggest story out of the region is whether to close or move Peru State College.

To me, the most burning phrase in any of the news stories on the prison site selection process was this one attributed to a Tecumseh leader: "I don't think you'd ever get a legislator to admit to it, but they refer to southeast Nebraska as the Appalachia of Nebraska."

In conclusion, there were a lot of reasons why Tecumseh was finally selected as the prison site - but I'd venture to say that southeast Nebraska's political muscle was not one of them.

It was during a press conference the day after the site selection committee announced it was tied between McCook and Tecumseh when Nelson said he'd advised Clarke not to reopen the evaluation process.

I came back from that press conference thinking Nelson was talking in circles. He'd said Clarke should rely on the already developed numbers, which gave McCook a slight edge. But he wouldn't say he thought McCook should be selected.

Whatever it was he was trying to do, it didn't work.

Main Street improvement offers much for community

The Nebraska Lied Main Street was our guest speaker's topic at the monthly membership lunch on Wednesday of this week. Scott Sewall, Director of the Nebraska Program, addressed twenty-six interested Chamber and community members.

Created in 1995, the Nebraska Lied Main Street Program was designed to help communities under 50,000 population rebuild downtowns and to re-establish the downtown as a community focal point.

According to Sewall, the Main Street Four-Point Approach is a community and economic development effort based within the context of historic preservation. The process is incremental and long-term; there are no quick fixes. This

Chamber Corner
By: Gaila Gilliland
Executive Director

plan allows for compatibility between existing downtown's current physical environment and new development.

By applying the principles of the Main Street Approach, a community can re-establish its self-reliance and rebuild its downtown based on downtown's traditional assets: personal service, local ownership, unique architecture and a sense of community.

The Main Street Four-Point Approach utilizes four elements to create a positive image for downtown. Organization means getting everyone working toward the same goal by building consensus and cooperation among the groups having important stakes in downtown. Promotion means selling the image and promise of Main Street by marketing the district's unique characteristics to shoppers, investors, new businesses and visitors.

Design means getting Main Street in top shape by creating an inviting atmosphere through window displays, parking areas, signs, sidewalks, street lights and landscaping. Economic restructuring means helping existing businesses expand and recruit new ones to respond to today's market. Main Street programs help convert unused space into productive property and sharpen the competitiveness of business enterprises.

The Wayne Area Chamber is currently a Lied Main Street Associate member and the committee is examining, throughout 1998, the Nebraska Program. The committee will eventually make a recommendation to the Chamber's Board of Directors.

Dr. Steve Backer serves as the chair for our Main Street Committee. Eighteen interested community representatives recently traveled from Wayne to Corning Iowa to learn how the Main Street Program benefits Corning.

Scott Sewall can be reached by calling the Nebraska Lied Main Street office at 800-354-3156.

Siren policy explained

Wayne Police Chief Lance Webster said he has fielded questions about the lack of tornado sirens during the storm on Monday morning.

"Wayne was not in eminent danger from a tornado. There has been some confusion recently when radio and TV stations report that Wayne is in a tornado warning," Chief Webster said.

According to Webster, when the National Weather Service announces that Wayne is in a tornado warning, weather spotters are sent out. The warning sirens are not blown, unless there is a clear danger to Wayne.

The Police Department does not notify the Providence Medical Center, Juvenile Detention Center and the Wayne Care Center of the warning status.

Chief Webster said weather spotters are the best line of defense when severe weather threatens. In addition to storm spotters, the communications center at the Police Department has a DTN weather satellite terminal that shows statewide and area weather patterns. The satellite allows the dispatcher to monitor weather patterns well before severe weather gets near Wayne and plan for emergency action if needed.

"The satellite picture gives us great information but nothing beats dedicated weather spotters," Webster said. "The combination of weather spotters from Winside, Carroll, Wakefield and the Wayne Volunteer Fire Department and satellite technology make me confident that Wayne has one of the best early tornado detection systems in Nebraska."

Chief Webster added that he is cautious not to have the tornado sirens blow when Wayne is not in any clear danger, even though the Weather Service may have included Wayne in a tornado warning, because citizens may become complacent.

"If the tornado sirens go off, other than the first Monday of every month, people need to seek shelter," Webster said.

In addition to tornado warning sirens, the Police Department can interrupt Jones Intercable TV service. In addition to tornado warning sirens, the Police Department can interrupt Jones Intercable TV service and issue emergency broadcasts.

Car stolen in Wayne used in bank robbery

On June 26 the Wayne Police Department received a complaint of a stolen car. According to Wayne Police Chief Lance Webster, Heidi Muller of Wakefield reported the theft of her father's 1992 Buick Electra.

The car had been parked outside Our Savior Lutheran Church and was stolen shortly after 11 a.m.

Chief Webster said that while he was searching for the car, Dispatcher Maggie Bratcher was entering the vehicle in the Teletype. While doing so, Dispatcher Bratcher overheard the license plate of the stolen car being given out by the Norfolk Police Department as having been involved in a bank robbery in Pilger.

Webster said he continued to watch for the car in Wayne until it was found north of Pilger. He then authorized Sgt. Robert McLean, a private pilot, to provide aerial observation for the Wayne and Stanton County Sheriff's Offices and the Nebraska State Patrol.

Chief Webster said the Wayne Police Department has also assisted the Stanton County Sheriff's Office and the FBI in the investigation.

Acts of vandalism

Several acts of vandalism occurred in the Wayne area last week. The Wayne County Sheriff's Office continues to investigate the incident.

purchases and the second involving public works involving architecture or engineering requirements.

Approval was given to a request to acquire parts for the city's two generators. Gene Hansen, Electric Production Superintendent said that currently the city does not have any parts for the engines and that some of the parts being considered are unique to the city's engines.

Two requests for use of the city's tables were approved. The Wayne Kiwanis Club requested the use of tables for the Chicken Show and Sandra Bartling requested the use of tables for an antique show to be held in conjunction with the Chicken Show.

Doug Sturm questioned an earlier decision regarding use of tables and said he felt some type of policy should be made in the matter.

Following executive session, the council approved a resolution authorizing the sale of part of Lots 7, 8, 9 and 10 in Block 5 of College Hill Addition to Randy Pick. They also passed Ordinance 98-16 and waived the three readings directing the sale of the parcel of land.

Mayor Sheryl Lindau re-appointed Pat Garvin to the Recreation Committee and appointed Phyllis Trenhaile to the Recreation Committee to fill the remainder of Judy Koll's term.

Lifestyle

The Wayne Herald

Do you have a teenage consumer?

Like it or not, the children of baby boomers are rewriting marketing history. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the U.S. is home to almost 30 million teens. The fashion market and advertisers are keeping a close eye on this group.

A study by Teenage Research Unlimited stated teens spent $103 billion last year, $70 billion of it from their own pockets and the rest family money. Where does the money come from?

Approximately 2.2 million work full time jobs and 4.5 million work part time. Thirty-nine percent of those 18 and 19 years old have credit cards in their own name.

This age group will continue to increase until at least 2009. Teens control a large portion of American consumer market. By the year 2010 there will be 35 million teens.

Although the margin is getting

Linda Cernichowsky, Cooperative Extension, Wayne County

smaller, males earn more—$70 in 1996 versus $64 for females.

You'll find lots of teens at the mall. They visit an average of 2.6 stores per visit compared with 2.2 for other shoppers and 56 percent make a purchase during their visit compared with 48 percent of all shoppers. The teens average expenditure per mall visit is $20.30.

These teens are taking to the Web. About 19 million teens own computers and 71 percent use the Web. You might say this is the first generation of "cyber citizens."

If you have a young shopper that wants to learn more about being a wise shopper, the Nebraska 4-H program has two Consumer Management projects for young men and women. "Attention Shoppers" is for youth 8-11 of age and the "Shopping in Style" is for ages 12 years and older. Both projects help youth understand the psychological aspects of clothing selections, understanding how advertising affects our choices, reading the label and taking care of clothing, building a wardrobe, comparison shopping and other consumer issues.

More than 500 LWML members, spouses and children attended the biennial convention of the Nebraska District North at Wayne State June 26-27.

Wayne hosts LWML convention at WSC

Over 500 Lutheran Women's Missionary League (LWML) members, their spouses and children and special guests met at Wayne State College for the biennial convention of Nebraska District North.

"Living God's Vision... Our Mission" was the theme of the convention based on the Bible verse Acts 4:20, "We cannot help speak about what we have seen and heard."

While at the convention, LWMLers and attendees were entertained by the Wayne Chicken. They also had freedom moments that told them trivia and other information about the upcoming International LWML convention.

A number of sessions were held during which the LWMLers were encouraged to be missionaries.

Business conducted during the convention included the election of officers. Gwen Lindberg of West Point will serve as president. Connie Oberle of Winside will represent the Wayne Zone on the nominating committee.

The women also chose mission projects to support with their mites they collect and give to the Lord. They include scholarships, the Orphan Grain Train, Camp Luther Shower Project, Lutheran High Northeast in Norfolk, Winnebago Youth Van Project, Lutheran Deaf Ministry, Lutheran Family Services and University Chapel in Lincoln.

Keynote speakers for the convention were Ruth Koch of Ann Arbor, Mich. and Rev. Nathaniel Taylor, a native of Liberia, West Africa. Jan Rueter of Rockville, Md. was the International LWML representative.

Synod Assembly held in Kearney

Alyce and Verdel Erwin recently attended the 1998 Nebraska Synod Assembly in Kearney. Erwins were delegates to the Assembly. They went to a banquet on Friday evening. Ken Medina had the musical program.

The theme of the Assembly '98 was "Let Justice Roll." There were 729 voting members, 202 visitors and 11 youth attending.

Featured speakers were Dr. Addie Butler, Vice president of the ELCA, Musician, Ken Medema, a blind songster and story teller, and the Rev. Margaret Herz Lane, who serves a coalition of inner city congregations in Camden, N.J.

The vision for mission offering was given to support Multicultural Ministries and the Seminarians' Loan and Grant Fund.

Mission moments were presented by Liz Conner, Hispanic Outreach of Lexington; Rev. Tom LoVan, Southeast Asian Ministries, South Sioux City and Dakota City; Johnice Orduna, ACAPE Lutheran Ministry Center of Omaha, Rev. Bud Christensen, Prison Ministry at the State Penitentiary, Lincoln and Rev. Will Voss, the Lokota Indian Center and Chapel at Scottsbluff.

On Pentecost Sunday, the 158 southeast Asian people living in Nebraska and Iowa responded to Pastor LoVan's invitation by coming to be baptized in a special service at the swimming pool at Morningside College. Another service is being planned for about 60 more people.

In Bishop Jessen's report, he said, "Life is meant to be given away...The basic law of congregational life is to reach out and live, turn inward and die. Faithfulness is measured by the willingness of the church to reach out to those in need. Humans cannot live by bread alone. Neither can they live without bread." We must ask God, "Lord help me understand how you would want to use me today."

The emphasis for 1999-2000 will be "Making Christ Known in the 21st Century...Seven Day Christians."

Many resolutions were passed. The death penalty was discussed and sent back to the committee.

Among the voting members who were elected to attend the 1999 Churchwide Assembly in Colorado was Suzie Johnson, of Concord.

Barelman appointed

Jason Barelman has been named the director of career services at Wayne State College, according to Curt Frye, vice president and dean of student life. Prior to being named to the post, Ms. Barelman has served as the interim director since September of last year. She also served as the assistant director of career services from July 1996 until being named interim director.

"I think by having Jason continue her work in the career services office we will maintain the continuity of the programs that are in place and continue to provide our students with tremendous opportunities for assistance as they prepare for their lives after completing their education at Wayne State. Jason has been instrumental in developing our Cooperative Education programs and our placement services," Frye said.

Barelman joined the WSC staff in October 1992 as coordinator of the school's Cooperative Education program. Prior to joining the WSC staff she worked at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln in vocational and adult education.

"There are many things I want to accomplish here to better serve our students, particularly the graduating seniors," Barelman said. She noted she plans to increase services to seniors and to recent graduates by working closely with the alumni association. She also noted the office usually assists between 300 and 400 students each year in cooperative education programs. Barelman said she hopes to continue to see an increase in the number of students who use the office to find paid work experience related to their majors.

Barelman is a graduate of UNL, earning her bachelor's degree in Business Education in 1988, and her master's degree in vocational education in 1992. Her appointment becomes effective July 1, 1998.

He will earn credits toward an associate degree in applied sciences through the Community College of the Air Force upon completion of basic training and technical training school.

Long enlisted in the munitions systems career field.

Rev. Gary Main
Pastor honored

Rev. Gary Main, pastor of the Wayne and Carroll United Methodist Churches, has been named this year's recipient of the prestigious Harry Denman Award.

This honor is presented each year by the Nebraska Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church to one pastor who does an outstanding ministry in a selected area.

Pastor Main was nominated by a member of his congregation and selected from among many nominated clergy. It was noted in the nomination that Pastor Main is "a minister who goes out of his way to minister to every member of his congregation" and that "the members of the church can always count on his presence when he is needed."

Harry Denman was a noted Methodist lay evangelist who traveled the world sharing Christ. The award was established by the United Methodist Evangelism Foundation to honor an outstanding pastor in each conference of the denomination. A similar award is made yearly to a lay person withing each conference.

Writing Institute scheduled

Wayne State College Humanities classrooms became the setting for community leaders and teachers to develop and share ideas about how to develop writing more effectively inside and outside classrooms during the Nebraska Writing Project Rural Institute, held June 8-26.

"By providing teachers an opportunity to write, to share their writing, and to exchange ideas about writing and editing, and thus enhance their intellectual, creative, and teaching lives, The Nebraska Writing Project has served Nebraska teachers very well for many years. Wayne State College is extremely proud to be a part of this endeavor and to make the Nebraska Writing Project Rural Institute available to teachers in the region who might not otherwise be able to participate."

"This is an excellent opportunity for area teachers to explore ways to use National Writing Project methods in their classes. We're very happy to be able to provide support for teachers interested in writing," said Ed Battistella, division head of humanities at Wayne State College.

"The best teachers of writing are writers themselves. The best teachers of teachers are teachers," said Janet Gilligan, professor of humanities at WSC.

Gilligan and Bonnie Andersen served as the instructors for the Rural Writing Institute and Judy Schafer of Wayne High School and Kathy Muller of Wakefield Community Schools were the teacher facilitators.

The Nebraska Writing Project Rural Institute is a supportive writing and teaching workshop with a predictable daily structure. Each day, all members of the Institute write and share their writing with others. Each day, individual members of the Institute share their expertise, issues and questions concerning writing and writing instruction.

These activities include an EQUIP activity during which Institute participants lead the group in a writing activity or discussion and a professional development period devoted to reading, field trips, guided writing time or discussion of issues in writing: EQUIP stands for Expertise, Questions, Issues and Problems.

At the end of three weeks, an Institute Anthology which contains pieces written during the Institute will be published by the Nebraska Writing Project.

Part of the summer institute was also used to plan follow-up activities which will support participants in continuing their efforts to improve rural education. Follow-up activities include setting up small group meetings for participants in similar geographical areas to allow participants to share how their writing programs are developing, discuss selected readings they have chosen, share their own writing, complete an evaluation of the small group meetings and present a version of their EQUIP activity for their school, community or educational setting.

The Nebraska Writing Project offers several ways Institute participants can build on their three-week experience. Several classroom projects will be funded through mini-grants. The Project has an advisory board of interested teachers, who work with the director each year to plan continuity programs.

"The Nebraska Writing Project Writing Institute has existed for 20 years and this is the first time we have been able to host it here at Wayne State College," Gilligan said. "We were able to provide staff and some of the funding."

Wayne State College has been awarded a grant of $19,706 from the Eisenhower Professional Development Program of the U.S. Department of Education.

In addition to the Eisenhower grant, funding will be added from Wayne State College in the amount of $18,098 and the Nebraska Writing Project at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in the amount of $3,343.

"The Wayne State College Nebraska Writing Project Rural Initiatives" proposal was approved by the Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education at its Jan. 29 meeting.

Teachers applied by sending a two-page letter explaining what they do with writing in their classes at present, what they would like to share with other teachers about writing and what they hope to learn from other teachers during the Institute. These application letters formed the basis of phone interviews and invitations to the Institute were made following interviews. Teachers accepting invitations to the Institute gave positive reviews after attending.

"I'm re-invigorated with ideas. After this Institute, I've decided to try to throw away my red pen," said Celia McGill, a Newcastle High School teacher.

"I feel more confident in my abilities as a writer and more enthusiastic and willing to try more ideas. What I'm most enthusiastic about is bringing these ideas back into my classroom. I know enthusiasm is infectious and will carry over to students as they continue on to other grade levels," said Eliene Jager, a Winside first grade teacher.

"I now have a more positive attitude about writing. I've felt reinforcement. Whatever you do is okay, you can always improve. The Institute presented ideas in a non-threatening atmosphere. When I return to the classroom, I feel I will be able to help students express interest and the joy of reading," said Nicki Tiedtke, a Wayne/Carroll kindergarten teacher.

Other Institute participants included: Bonnie Andersen, Wayne; Janelle Eaton, Wakefield; Sheri Eaton, Emerson-Hubbard; Lisa Fricke, Bloomfield; Gaila Gilliland, Wayne; Terri Hyspe, Winside; Kathy Johnson, Wakefield; Mary Jo Krzyminski, Norfolk; Leslie Lippold, Dodge; Karen List, Norfolk; Kathy Muller, Wakefield; Rich Pehrson, Battle Creek; Rhonda Rother, Newman Grove; Terri Samuelson, Wakefield; Judy Schafer, Wayne; Lisa Scott, Palmer; and Jean Wilwerding, Wakefield.

Call the Wayne State College Humanities Division for more information at (402) 375-7394.

Winside first grade teacher Eliene Jager, right, arranged a story-reading visit by "Abe Lincoln" played by Dennis Lipp for her WSC Rural Reading Institute presentation.

Convention was interesting

It's another Monday morning, the last one in June. The weatherman forecasts 90 degrees, complete with humidity and the AC in my Chrysler isn't working. I've been reduced to driving Mike's car, which has a front seat that won't sit erect. Beggars can't be choosy and I had to be in Wayne the past Friday and Saturday.

You've heard me talk about LWML before. It's the "women in mission" of our church. We have international conventions every two years and district conventions the year in between.

I got involved in this wonderful organization because I have "friends in high places." Twenty years ago, the Nebraska district north was preparing to host the international meeting in Omaha, Virginia Von Seggern was in charge of first aid (for 7000 women). She called to say that she needed help. That turned into quite an experience. I'll try to remember to tell you about it sometime.

Ten years ago, Virginia was district president. She called to say she was in need of a Christian Growth chairman, someone who could write. This time I felt I had too much on my plate and I said "no." But, I knew this wonderful lady in Winside who led our evening LWML group and had a degree in English. Gloria Lessman said yes. And, I'm sure there have been days since when she regretted it.

By Pat Maternity

"What goes around, comes around," and about a month ago Gloria called to ask if I was coming to the convention. Since it was in Wayne, I was planning to.

Well, she had been thinking that since it was in Wayne, the home of the famous Chicken Show, the Chicken should show up at convention.

"There's a sucker born every minute," and I said it sounded like fun. In my checkered past I've been Santa Claus at a Coleridge High School Christmas party and a panda bear at an EMT gathering. The Chicken was a new challenge.

It was fun. That's quite a costume. Just like at the show, the puns kept coming.

Why doesn't a chicken coop have four doors? Because then it would be a sedan!

There were times off stage at Ramsey I suspected they would have baked chicken, but I didn't miss any cues and I only flubbed one line.

I had a wave of homesickness when I first walked into the Val Peterson Center. I have many memories of wonderful happenings there: "Community and children's theater, music contests and camps and concerts. Even walking by the track, I could see the ghosts that inhabit every high school gym in the Lewis and Clark Conference.

For me, the high light is always the communion service, especially the music. This year, the speaker was a native of Liberia, West Africa. As he spoke of civil war and refugee camps, I could only imagine the culture shock he must be experiencing in the U.S.

All presenters, including him, received Husker pillows by Restful Knights. And lots of us were sporting purple t-shirts that said "Chicks In Mission." When you see one, stop the person wearing it and ask why it isn't spelled chicks? So good to see so many of you. Now, come and see us.

Dick DeLoughery

New staff member

Dick DeLoughery, a Wisconsin native, has joined the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension staff. DeLoughery has been hired to serve a three-year term as a Water Quality Education Coordinator and will be working throughout the 15-county Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District.

The new position was created as a joint effort between Rick Wozniak, water resources manager for the Lower Elkhorn NRD, Bill Kranz, irrigation specialist and Charles Shapiro, soils specialist for the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension. DeLoughery's position will focus on improving nitrogen and irrigation management in the area to reduce future contamination of groundwaters.

DeLoughery is currently working with other area extension staff members and farmers on about six nitrogen-related demonstration plots in Pierce, Madison, Wayne and Cedar counties. In the future he hopes to increase the number of test plots through volunteer efforts of farmer cooperators.

"Demonstration plots offer a good way to learn with farmers preferring to see the results in their local area," DeLoughery said.

DeLoughery's position is primarily funded by the Natural Resources Enhancement Fund which assesses a $1 per ton tax on fertilizer purchases in the state.

He and his wife, Janet, are currently living in Wisner. They are the parents of a daughter, Lea, a recent graduate of Harlan High School.

A native of Spencer, Wis., DeLoughery obtained his bachelor's and master's degrees in agronomy, then spent two years as a crop consultant for a private firm in North Dakota. He was then self-employed as a crop consultant in Orangeburg, S.C. for six years. He and his wife returned then to the Midwest to continue their studies. Based in Harlan, Iowa, since 1990, he continued his crop consulting work while finishing his doctorate in agronomy from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He was employed by Iowa State University extension for the past three years as an area crop consultant.

DeLoughery is employed by the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension. His office is located at the Lower Elkhorn NRD office in the Lifelong Learning Center in Norfolk. He can be reached at (402) 370-4061.

Acreage reports due soon

The final date to submit 1998 corn/grain sorghum, soybeans, CRP and other crops (other than small grains) acreage reports, is Aug. 3, 1998. Nebraska Farm Service Agency (FSA) State Executive Director Mark Bowen said: Acreage reports are a producer's certification to FSA of what crops are planted on farms for a current year.

Passage of the FAIR Act of 1996 has significantly changed acreage reporting requirements for producers who receive program benefits from FSA administered programs. The filing of a crop acreage report is voluntary. However, acreage reports are required for producers to qualify for some program benefits.

Annual acreage reports are required for farms for which any producer seeks a 1998 commodity loan. Any producer who might apply for a commodity loan through FSA must have a crop acreage report on file for the year the grain is produced. Producers should contact the local FSA office if they plan to apply for a grain loan after harvest.

Acreage reports are required to be filed for CRP.

Acreage reports may be filed by any producer who receives a share of the crop. Producers are cautioned that late-filed certification fees apply to farms and/or crops certified after Aug. 3, 1998.

Contact the Wayne County FSA at (402) 375-2453, extension 201 for additional commodity loan or certification details.

Grasshopper control needed

Grasshopper management and control must start now, University of Nebraska-Lincoln extension entomologist Keith Jarvi said.

"Given the mild winter, a large percentage of the grasshopper eggs, laid last fall in undisturbed soil like roadside ditches and crop borders, have survived," Jarvi said. "The first of four damaging species started hatching in mid-May, and by now, all four types of nymphs are in the stage of growth where they are easiest to control."

The migratory, differential, two-striped and red-legged grasshopper nymphs do not yet have wings, so farmers should look for populations in areas of undisturbed soil, Jarvi said. He suggests that producers scout for grasshoppers, which should be about a half an inch long, by walking through fields and border areas and estimating the number of hoppers that jump per square yard.

"Grasshoppers prefer a variety of host plants, including crops, for feeding," Jarvi said. "Areas with past hopper problems re probably more at risk, but if this is a high population year, hoppers could damage not only wheat, alfalfa, and corn but other crops, trees, and shrubs."

Jarvi provides the following chart as a treatment guide:

Border treatments should control grasshoppers if applied before the insects move from hatching areas into crops, Jarvi said. A border treatment of 150 feet should be adequate depending on the size of the grasshopper source area. Each spray should be effective for 7-14 days. Multiple border sprays may be necessary in areas with higher populations, and crop margins must be constantly monitored to determine whether or not grasshoppers have reentered the field.

Entomologist Keith Jarvi can be reached at (402) 370-4061. Further information is available through the weekly IPM Cooperative Extension newsletter and through local extension offices.

Treatment Guidelines Based on Number of Grasshoppers (nymphs and adults) per

Grasshopper Population Category	Field	Field Margin	Treatment Necessary
Non-economic	0 to 2	5 to 10	No
Light	3 to 7	11 to 20	Depends on size, species, type of crop
Moderate	8 to 14	20 to 40	Probably
Abundant	15 or more	41 or more	Yes

ROCK FIND

While sitting on some mud rock which was delivered to their farm, sixth grader Melyssa Deck picked up one that just didn't look like a rock. She and her family, Rod and Patty Deck and sister Michelle, took the find to Ashfall Fossil Bed by Royal where they showed it to Dr. Mike Voorhies, a paleontologist with the University of Nebraska State Museum who was working at the Ashfall site.

Dr. Voorhies examined her find and determined it is actually a "prehistoric ice-age horse molar tooth." He said it was a very good find and told Melyssa to "keep digging and looking."

Keifer leaves for Navy duty

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class David Keifer, son of Loren and Shirley Keifer of Laurel, recently departed on a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea and Arabian Gulf aboard the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Keifer is one of more than 5,000 Sailors and Marines aboard the ship, which departed its home port of Norfolk, Va. to lead the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower Battle Group. The battle group is comprised of 10 tactical air squadrons, seven surface combatants and two submarines. It will relieve the USS John C. Stennis Battle Group.
