There was a large turn out for the Wayne JC Fireworks display held the evening of July 3. This year's event was located south of Hank Overin Field in Wayne.

Dr. Mash honored recently for 'A Decade of Achievement'

Dr. Donald Mash was honored with a farewell luncheon titled "A Decade of Achievement," on July 7, at the Wayne State College Student Center. In addition to a farewell, the luncheon was intended to recognize Dr. Mash's commitment to regional service and his dedication to community and economic development in northeast Nebraska.

An award was presented to Dr. Mash for his leadership in rural development for Nebraska and the nation by Don Macke, executive director of the Nebraska Rural Development Commission.

Macke said the award symbolizes the role Dr. Mash played in helping Wayne State College become a leader in helping regional communities. Macke said the effort he started here is being looked at as a model by others, even other countries.

Six speakers made remarks representing segments of Dr. Mash's work in development.

Dr. Mash responded to the speakers remarks and said he has fashioned himself as a "economic geographer."

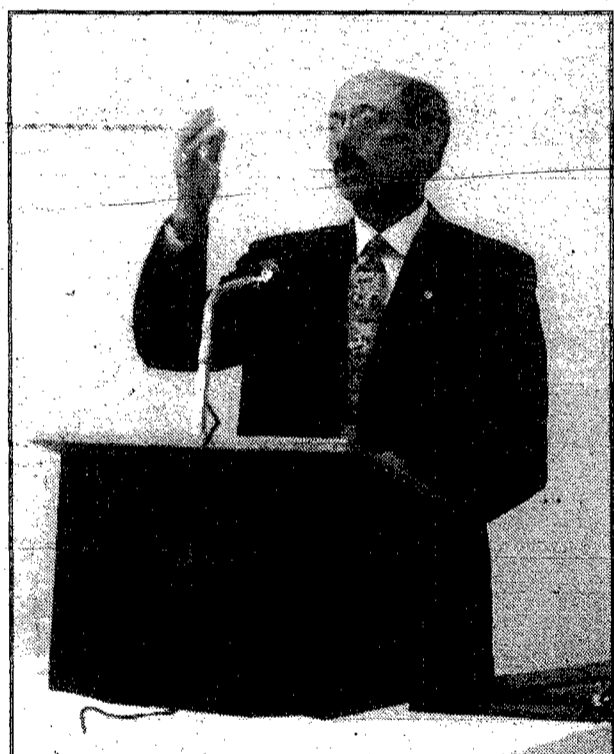

He said he began to recognize how appreciative communities were when the College brought programs and services into their region.

Dr. Mash said, he simply attempted to be a part of a team.

"I began to talk about WSC as the most visible outreach of state government," Dr. Mash said.

He described his years in northeast Nebraska as "a wonderful time period to be here."

Research takes on global nature

By Kristine Kopperud
For the Herald

With her wavy hair skipping across her shoulders and her hazel eyes laughing in her sun-swept face, Simone Holt seems brimming with hearty Midwestern charm. But her greeting lifts from her lips with distinctive Aussie flavor. "Nice to meet you," she says, the vowels twisting behind her ready smile. She came to Nebraska to study, but Nebraskans may be the ones to taste a foreign culture.

Holt, a native of Queensland, Australia, will conduct graduate research this summer on the effects of heat stress on feedlot cattle with Dr. Terry Mader, beef specialist, at the Haskell Agricultural Laboratory near Concord. Mader, who spent 1994-95 researching feedlot cattle in Australia, is co-supervisor of Holt's work toward her Ph.D. degree from the University of Queensland-Gatton.

"Our winter [in Australia] is just starting, so my research in Nebraska will be my second set of summer trials. I'll skip winter this year," Holt says with a smile.

Nebraska is "very, very green" to this Australian. "And everything is so close," Holt adds. "We have to drive almost two hours to get to the nearest town, and even then all they have is a pub... and no movie theater," she laments.

She forgets to add, however, that her home, a farm in Queensland, a province on the northeastern coast of Australia, is but eight hours from one of the seven natural wonders of the world, the Great Barrier Reef in the Coral Sea. "I prefer Stradbroke Island [Straddie, as she calls it]" Holt says. What's there? "Nothing. It's a tiny piece with a lot of camping on the beaches and a pub overlooking the ocean. It's only two hours away, and it's very inexpensive."

A twenty-five-year-old honor student and the youngest of four children, Holt grew up with livestock on her family's farm. "We always had cattle until the drought [which raged for nearly seven years]. Now all we keep are some horses, a little dairy heifer and a fat little murray grey heifer," Holt says, a grimace of mock disgust contorting her smile. "That stupid thing [the murray grey] was a gift from neighbors because I pulled a calf for them. My mother says that because it's a gift,

Informational meeting held

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

"Education is key" was the message presented to those present at an informational meeting to discuss the Wayne Middle School. The message was directed at both plans for the Middle School and the education of the students in the facility.

Approximately 100 persons were on hand to share opinions and ask questions concerning the upcoming bond election.

Angelo Passarelli, a representative of RAMBO, the firm presented a six point Master Plan for the future of Wayne Community Schools.

The points include two options for the Middle School, completing renovation at Wayne Elementary, relocating four of the module buildings to Carroll, building a small addition to Wayne High School for band, science and art classrooms, improving the high school track and demolishing the former Middle School if necessary.

Passarelli also discussed the history of past bond issues and shared with the audience the time table for a bond election and construction/and or renovation.

A $7.9 million bond issue in 1994 failed by a narrow margin. It would have resulted in an increase of 39 cents per $100 of valuation.

A 1996 election called for an $8.2 million project which would have resulted in a 35 cent per $100 valuation tax increase.

The current project calls for two plans. The first is a $7.3 million project which would involve renovation of the existing Middle School as part of the district's Master plan. This plan would result in a 28 cent per $100 valuation increase in levy.

The second plan would allow for an additional $500,000 to build a new Middle School and complete the Master Plan.

Those in attendance had a number of questions and comments about both plans, including cost, design and the time table for renovation or construction.

The Wayne Community Board of Education could approve the ballot resolution at its July 13 meeting. The issue will go before the voters on Tuesday, Sept. 29.

The actual ballot language is not yet known, but those in attendance were assured that the ballot will include a place for a 'no vote.

Duane Schroeder, who spoke for the Citizens for Renovation of the Middle School, said his group had consulted an independent architect who had arrived at a figure somewhat less than that of the RAMBO estimate.

Schroeder also asked Passarelli whether it is possible to seek a different architect/contractor to do the work.

Among questions asked by audience members was that of air quality in the building should the former Middle School be renovated. Passarelli assured everyone that the building would have windows, heating and cooling systems and a ventilation system to address these concerns.

Also discussed were the advantages and disadvantages of each of the plans, including the distance to travel between the high school and Middle School, the money savings in renovation and the pre-servicing of a historical building.

It was noted that if the Middle School is renovated, the teachers would move back and forth between buildings and students would remain in the buildings.

Passarelli said that prior to the bond issue, extensive efforts will be made to inform the patrons of the district on the options. He indicated that three committees are being formed for this purpose.

"The Communications/Enabling committee's job will be to inform the public, not sell," Passarelli said.

The six areas of this committee are recruiting volunteers, verifying voter registrations, completing target mailings, canvassing neighborhoods, providing literature drops as necessary and helping raise funds for the campaign.

Also needed will be a Communications/Parents committee. The duties of this committee include recruiting volunteers, contacting all parents, staffing booths and events, holding a senior information night, staffing public meetings and helping with fund raising.

Duties of the Publicity Committee include recruiting volunteers, writing/developing a theme and brochure, developing a slide show and video, soliciting endorsements and signature ads, making presentations to civic clubs and holding coffees conducting neighborhood and home visits.

Following more than an hour's worth of comments and questions, those in attendance were asked to get involved with the campaign in some way by contacting the school at 375-3150.

Chicken Show offers fun for all

Months of planning go into the Wayne Chicken Show each year. This year's events are scheduled for Friday, July 10 and Saturday, July 11.

In fact, people started working on coordinating the different events for this year's show right after the 1997 Chicken Show was over.

Karen Shattuck is chairperson of this year's Chicken Show. She said that one of the changes in this year's show compared to ones in the past is expansion of the area where Henoween is usually held.

Instead of centering Henoween mainly in the Riley's and Carhart businesses area the event will be spread out more this year. There will be activities on east and west Second Street to give people a chance to stroll around more and get away from congestion in one area.

Another change in the Friday schedule will be Kids games included into the scheduled activities.

There will be an information booth set up at Godfathers to aid in answering peoples questions.

Another new addition is a dunking booth which will highlight the dunking of local law officers.

Elva Mathre, a resident at the Wayne Care Centre, dances with The Chicken while he was strolling through the town preparing for this weekend's activities.

Richard Kimbrough will present Country Tales and Truths on the main street located at the corner of Second and Logan during Henoween activities on Friday night at 7 p.m.

The craft show which will be located on the north side of Bressler Park will include more than strictly chicken related items this year. There are 14 vendors signed up so far for the craft show and more are possible.

A listing of Friday night activities include Henoween on Second Street, People's Choice Award on best decorated downtown window, arts and crafts booths at 212 main, Cornhusker State Games Torch Run, Cluck Cluck Golf, face painting, ice cream social games, Kiddie Tractor Pull, Volleyball tourney, 3 on 3 Hoops Tournament, NESTalgia Night, Kiwanis Cluck, and Teen Dance.

Saturday's activities include Tour de Chicken Bike Ride, Wayne Classic Softball Tourney, Ormelet Feed, 3 on 3 Hoops Tournament (scheduled two different times throughout the day) Rooster Crowing Contest, Quilt Show, Fly In and plane display, Chickens on Display, Antique and Collectible Show and sale, Egg-citing area performers, Chicken Flying Meet, Volleyball Tournament, Youth activities, Kite Show and EGG-lifting demonstrations, Chicken Hat Contest, Free ice cream, Chicken feed, Most Beautiful Beak Contest, National Cluck-Off, Water Fight, Best Chicken Legs on Humans, Great Chicken Shoe Chucking Contest, Hard Boiled Egg Eating Contest, Chicken Song Contest, and Egg Drop/Catch.

The annual Chicken Show Parade will begin at 10:30 a.m. and will follow the same route as in years past.

There will also be an information booth set up at Bressler Park.

Shuttle vans will be available to all events. Shuttle stops will be on the east side of the park (9th and Lincoln), the high school parking lot, the airport, and downtown. The latest updates can be found at <http://www.thenetpages.com/chickenshow> on the web.

sent a wonderful picture of professional experience. Many volunteers gave time which fit beautifully into the picture.

"I appreciate having been a part of this. I look back on my time here as the highlight of my professional career," Dr. Mash said.

Loren Kucera thanked Dr. Mash for his flexibility in working with the Nebraska Business Development Center. Kucera is director of the Center and a WSC alum.

Another WSC alum, Lance Hedquist, congratulated Dr. Mash on his achievements. Hedquist serves as South Sioux City administrator.

"Wayne State College exudes with pride reflective of the positive proactive image and direction set by Dr. Donald Mash both on campus and throughout this great state of Nebraska. The regional programs such as the Public Policy Institute, Bureau of Community and Economic Development, the Tri State Graduate Center, Center for Cultural Outreach and the Social Sciences Research Center are all examples of how Wayne State College has postured itself as an institution of dynamics - one that responds to the needs of Nebraskans," Hedquist said.

"The tremendous growth of students, minority students, programs, endowments, off campus courses, technology improvements and more at Wayne State College did not occur by chance. They occurred by choice. Congratulations to Dr. Mash on inspiring Wayne State College for this last decade," Hedquist said.

"We will miss his leadership role in economic and community development and especially his leadership for all of higher education including community colleges. Dr. Mash is the ultimate CEO for regional public higher education," said Dr. Robert Cox, of the Tri-State Graduate Center, Sioux City. Cox is also a WSC alum and retired Northeast Community College president.

"He's done such a super job taking a college that was on a down slide and brought it not only up-to-date, but has positioned it for the 21st Century," said Pat Engel, 17th District Legislator. "He has been very convincing that Wayne State College is a catalyst in Northeast Nebraska for educational opportunities and economic development."

"Dr. Mash's leadership in collaborating efforts between Northeast Community College and Wayne State College in educational programs has resulted in a transparent transfer arrangement between the two schools," said Jim Underwood, president of Northeast Community College. He added Mash's involvement in Northeast Nebraska will be missed.

Connie Keck, director of the Bureau for Community and Economic Development at Wayne State College and Nebraska Development Network president stated Wayne State is fortunate to have many offices on campus that are involved in regional service including the NBDC office, The Center for Cultural Outreach, our co-op education department and the Social Sciences Research Center to name a few.

"Your vision for Wayne State College 10 years ago remains the same today - student development and regional development. Eight and one half years ago, my office was opened. It started with a generous grant from US West. US West believed in your vision and leadership and supported my office for several years," Keck said.

"During your tenure at Wayne State College we have had the opportunity to host governors, Lt. governors, senators, congressmen and state senators. We have had the opportunity to welcome the executive directors of the Nebraska Rural Development Commission and Nebraska Diplomats. We have even had the opportunity to visit with people from Australia and even as recent as last week we hosted a delegation from the University of Georgia," Keck said.

"We have held rural development conferences. In fact, the first rural development conference held in Nebraska was held at WSC in 1989. It was organized by the group known then as the Northeast Nebraska Rural Development group. This group was the model for the statewide organization called the Nebraska Development Network. We have started the Nebraska Development Youth Network - northeast region and have turned our rural development conferences into future conferences," Keck said.

"Because of your vision, your leadership and your commitment to regional service and community and economic development - Wayne State College is truly becoming a regional public college of national distinction," Keck said.

"Looking back 10 years ago, the economy of northeast Nebraska wasn't the best. Dr. Donald Mash had a vision of bringing people together and resources together," said Bob Ost, remember 10 years ago and see where that planning has led us - to networks like the Nebraska Development Network and other projects.

"We've given a number of grants to Wayne State College. We believed in Dr. Donald Mash, as a leader he can do it. There are a lot of great ideas, but not a lot of great leaders. We felt very strongly about what Dr. Donald Mash was doing," said Kent Popken, director of public policy for US West.

The belief US West officials expressed about Dr. Mash as a leader was echoed by others through letters sent from Gov. E. Benjamin Nelson, Congressman Doug Bereuter, Senator Chuck Hagel and Tony Raimondo, chairman and CEO of Behten Manufacturing, Columbus.

But the heifer is a minor headache in comparison with the labor required for her first research project last summer. "I did everything myself," she says, proud of the accomplishment. "I fed those animals every single day, cleaned out stalls twice a day, treated them, moved them in and out of trial stalls and took readings, sometimes every hour for 24 hours."

At the Haskell Lab, Holt has assistance with her cattle testing. "I was so surprised when Terry [Mader] said that I didn't have to take care of the animals every day - that's someone else's job!" Holt says.

Given her rural background and that her favorite foods, Mexican and "barby" (barbecue), translate to American cuisine, Holt claims that adjusting to Concord, Nebraska's physical location is the least of her problems. "The language is so frustrating," she says, rolling her eyes.

"The men with caps and jackets [valets] at the airport [in Los Angeles] started yelling at me about some yellow line, which I found out was the curb. They looked at me like I was stupid or something. I had no idea what I had done wrong," she says, whirling in her chair, reenacting the confusion.

On the American side of the language barrier, Mader, Holt's host, can translate her "Aussie-isms." "I have an entire book on their idioms," he says in his own Southern drawl. "Have you heard her say, 'righty-o' yet? That means 'okay.' 'Ta' is thanks, and 'good on ya' is 'good job.'"

Driving also vexes Holt. Mader insisted that she practice driving on the "right" side of the road before her first day at the lab. "Driving on your side of the road is so backwards," Holt exclaims. "Thank God the pedals are in the same place, or I'd really be in trouble."

Coupled with Holt's humor is a seriousness that catapulted her from undergraduate work to a Ph.D. program. "In Australia, if you are first class honors, you can skip 'graduate' classes and move to Ph.D. research," she explains. "It's simpler than the system you have here."

Mader adds that the difference between Australian and American educational systems, as well as cattle production and marketing differences between the two countries, will shape Holt's work. "It [Holt's project] is one of many important international links between research programs at the graduate level," Mader says. "Still, its success will take an understanding of the differences between research practices and the two systems."

Holt's work at the Haskell Lab will conclude in mid-September, and she hopes to complete her degree in 2000, despite the conservative opinions of her supervisors. "I'm independent," she says, her smile flashing again. "Some call me stubborn, but I like independent."

Simone Holt is spending her summer at the Haskell Agricultural Laboratory.

The ABC's of Summer: Adults, Books & Children

By Carol Rasco

"What did you do on your summer vacation?"

Unfortunately, for many American children, the answer is "I forgot."

Did you know that children who don't read during the summer months lose ground by the fall?

This "summer reading drop-off" has a predictable, corrosive impact on student achievement, particularly for disadvantaged kids. Summer reading activity can help students maintain their school year gains, catch up to grade level, or even get ahead! That's why a "grassroots movement" is sweeping America to get children reading daily, especially during the summer.

Children who are deprived of enriching summer experiences lose the most academic ground. But summer learning loss affects all students. When teachers must spend four to six weeks at the beginning of each school year reviewing, there is less time to introduce new lessons.

Child literacy activists across the nation are tackling this issue in creative ways, through book challenges, library programs, reading camps, bookmobiles and reading games at fire stations, bookstores and zoos.

The America Reads Challenge supports projects in every state to promote summer reading to tens of thousands of children. The eight week Read*Write*Now! each child earns a coupon for a free pizza at Pizza Hut. Other reading programs offer incentives through sports teams, museums and local merchants.

Reading daily with a child is the most important contribution you can make to his academic growth. Here are some fun ideas to help a child to read this summer.

"Visit the library. Allow your child to choose books that interest her him, perhaps with fun summer themes such as baseball, traveling, wildlife, and hobbies. Schedule family activities that explore these themes, such as nature walks or sporting events."

"Write to a pen pal. Encourage your child to write to a far-away friend or relative over the summer, helping as needed to address and mail it. Share the excitement of receiving and reading letters written back to your child."

"Limit television. Kids who watch too much TV often don't read enough, so limit summer viewing. Encourage reading of the TV listings in the paper or TV Guide. Watch programs together and discuss what you have seen. Rent videos based on books."

"Be creative. Have your child write and illustrate a book about herself/himself. Begin telling a story, and have your child provide the ending. Write down family stories and traditions, and read them together. Gather your child's friends to read a favorite book, then play games based on the story."

Your example has a very significant influence on your child. Let her/him see you reading, and this will give a more positive attitude. If you know a child whose parents cannot help him/her to read this summer, offer to assist. Once school starts, remember that reading daily is still important to your child's school success.

"What did you do on your summer vacation?" Help your child answer with enthusiasm. "I learned!"

Carol Rasco is director of the America Reads Challenge, President Clinton's initiative to ensure that all children are good readers by the end of third grade.

Politics can be entertaining sport

By Ed Howard
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

To properly enjoy politics as a spectator sport you have to accept certain realities.

One of these realities is that some things a politician says can just be funny.

Funny, as in, when a guy thinks he has the keen attention of a party crowd as he tells a joke, and later realizes that his fly had been unzipped.

Funny, as in, when some lout is spouting off to a small group and you realize that he has a large chunk of some gawd-awful green stuff hanging between his two front teeth.

Funny, as in, when Republican gubernatorial candidate Mike Johanns says he doesn't know if he will vote for a petition to put a lid on government revenues and then realizes a whole bunch of businessmen were listening.

Funny, as in, when Johanns reverses his field like a Nebraska T-back and says he will vote for the petition proposal if it gets on the ballot.

And, funny as in trying to imagine what went on between the time Johanns made his first comment and when he became a poster child for the petition.

It's not mean spirited to laugh. If you have any appreciation of the fact that politics is sometimes a hoot, you had to laugh when Johanns went through that little episode a week or so ago.

Democrat Bill Hoppner and Johanns had previously acknowledged that the issues represented in this petition, whose biggest backers are business types with big bucks, was a defining issue in the campaign for governor.

Hoppner had said the petition proposal would be a bad policy choice. He said why he thought it was bad.

Johanns said, during the primary election season, that state and local government needed the kind of discipline reflected in the petition.

Johanns who as Mayor of Lincoln has not been known as a waffle pudder, clearly had ascer-ond thought about the petition after he was nominated. My guess is that he found the time to read it, in detail. As a former head of the League of Nebraska Municipalities, as well as a potential governor, he might have concluded that the proposed deal might not be a good one.

So, Michael floated a trial balloon of sorts. He said he didn't know if he would vote for it, said he had not signed a petition, said the whole thing really was up to the voters, etc.

Hoppner, certainly more alert than the average dead person, jumped on Johanns' faux pas like a raccoon on pheasant eggs. And it was a Johanns faux pas, either rhetorically or philosophically, and, most definitely, politically.

Johanns supporters may wish he could distance himself from the petition plan. The Nebraska State Education Association doesn't like it, a lot of working class folk are being encouraged to see it as something intended to shelter big income and boost the property taxes of Joe Average.

And, by the way, the NSEA has not endorsed either candidate as of this writing. Hoppner may be feeling better about his chances.

Let it be noted that, compared with the political behavior we've observed in candidates in some previous elections, Johanns still took a high road. I mean, he at least stood up and said, in effect, "Never mind!" and was surely prepared for the razing he might get (but hoped he wouldn't get) from his opponents. (Some politicians in such situations might say that the reporter took their remarks out of context. Johanns avoided that silly play. Besides, he had been quoted in the Journal-Star by seasoned, veteran, legendary political writer Don Walton. Walton hasn't been accused of misunderstanding anyone since a minor incident involving William Jennings Bryan.)

The only misstep Johanns made in handling the faux pas was in reacting to Hoppner using the ammunition that Johanns had himself handed to his opponent.

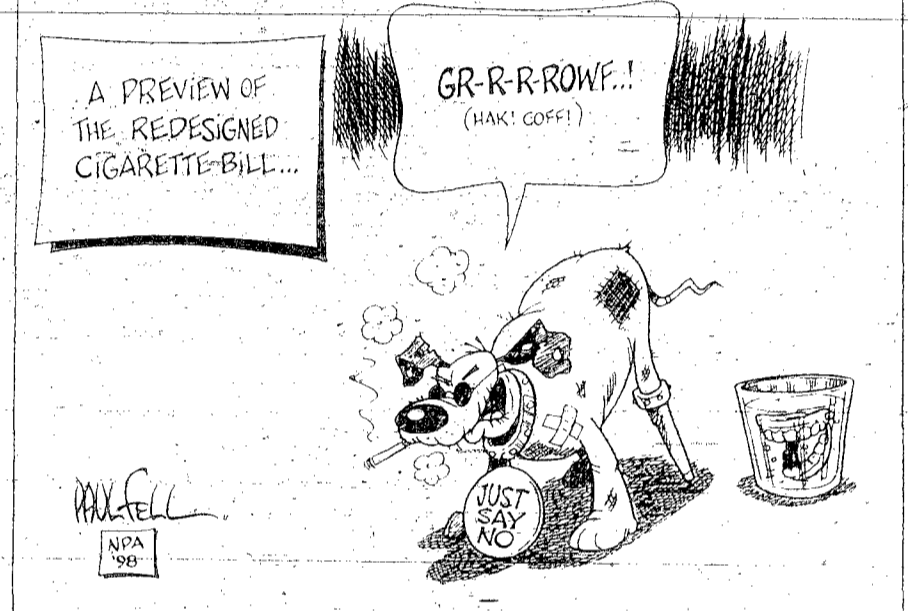

Johanns suggested that Hoppner was resorting to negative campaigning.

Piffle!

When you step in it, folks are likely to point it out. A fraternity brother may quietly whisper in your ear and suggest you need a shoe shine, so as not to alert others at the wedding reception.

Your opponent for political office is entitled to take the Hoppner approach, which is to shriek, "HEY, LOOK WHAT MIKEY STEPPED IN!" whilst holding his nose with one hand, pointing to your shoes with the other, and dancing like a meter maid on a football Saturday in Lincoln.

Besides, it's a long campaign. Who is to say that Hoppner will make it through the campaign without scuffing his wingtips?

Wayne Chamber receives tourism grant

The Wayne Chamber was notified late last week that two tourism grant applications have been awarded. The grants are awarded through the Nebraska Tourism Office with budgeted tourism grant money and through specially appropriated funds.

The first grant is for $5,000 to advertise the 1999 Wayne Chicken Show more than 100 miles from Wayne. This grant will provide a growth opportunity to the Show!

The target audience is families of all ages who live more than 100 miles from Wayne. Senior citizens are included in his target audience. In the past, 50 percent of our audience attended from distances between 50 and 100 miles from Wayne. We are ready to take the next step to attract visitors from more than 100 miles from our community.

With marketing grant assistance, we will be able to reach further to advertise on television, radio and print methods. We will continue to print brochures which can be mailed in response to advertising.

Reaching the Lincoln, Grand Island, Hastings and Kearney metro areas are important to the continuing development of the Wayne Chicken Show. Approximately 200,000 KOLN-KGIN households are outside the 100 miles closest to Wayne.

Twelve thousand brochures were printed for the 1998 Show. At this date, all 12,000 have been distributed and many mailed outside the 100 mile distance. Several hundred more brochures have been copied at our office!

With the grant assistance, we will increase the number of brochures printed to 20,000. This will insure we have a supply sufficient to respond to inquires generated by radio and television advertising. A portion of the 20,000 brochures will be taken to N-ACT's brochure swap for statewide distribution.

The second grant will help fund representatives to attend the Clamer Show in Kansas City in October. About 250 directors of senior tours will attend the trade show. What an opportunity to showcase the 1999 Wayne Chicken Show to the people who arrange tours.

Both grants require a 25 percent local match which can include in-kind. Let your senator know you support tourism efforts in Nebraska.

Graduate Program offered

The University of Nebraska at Kearney (UNK) and Wayne State College (WSC) have entered into an agreement to extend quality graduate English education to students within Nebraska's borders.

"This is one of several collaborative agreements Wayne State College has entered into in order to better serve students, the region, and the state -- and to do so with efficiency and effectiveness. Northeast Nebraska residents will be well served because they will be able to complete one-half of a master of arts program in the region; the state will be well served by the wise use of state funds and resources," said Dr. Jo Taylor, vice president of academic affairs at Wayne State College.

"I think this serves as a valuable model for providing opportunity and access to graduate programs in northeast Nebraska through cooperation and technology. I hope we can develop similar agreements in other areas," said Bob McCue, associate vice president for academic affairs and graduate dean at Wayne State College.

This joint-effort graduate program leads to a master of arts degree in English and offers students the opportunity to select from course offerings at both UNK and WSC, to work with graduate faculty from both campuses and to use library resources at both institutions. The agreement was signed in May and students can become involved with the program as soon as Sept. 1.

"The first year of the program allows enrolled students to complete work at Wayne State for a year before transferring to Kearney to finish their master of arts program," said Dr. Ed Battistella, division head of humanities at Wayne State College.

"Intended for students wanting a master of arts degree, rather than a master of science in education, the program allows students to get the program they want within their region and budget," Battistella said.

"This program also helps us coordinate our composition program with UNK," Battistella said. "We had to look at Wayne State and UNK programs and make sure there was a good fit. This type of agreement will keep us aware of changing expectations in both programs. This process has also been a good way to get to know people at another institution by working together."

"When two programs have been matched up like this, the joint program provides a smooth transfer with good advisement opportunities for students. Completing a year at Wayne before finishing at UNK helps students know what to expect from a continued graduate experience," Battistella said. "The master of arts degree presents an advantage to students interested in a doctoral degree."

Graduate assistantships are available for students through a competitive application process.

For more information, contact Dr. Robert McCue or Dr. Ed Battistella, Wayne State College, 1111 Main Street, Wayne, Neb. 68787 or call (402) 375-7393.

Kristine Flink, left, and Emily Lutt are two of the area youth who have been involved with the Christian Music Program on KTCH.

Program offers youth music

For the past several months, KTCH Radio station in Wayne has been airing a half-hour program of Christian music.

"What makes this program unique is the fact that the program is run entirely by area church youth groups.

"We were looking for something for kids to get involved in. I feel this is a way for our youth to get the Christian message to others in their age group," said Dan Baddorf, KTCH Program Director.

The Wayne Association of Congregations and Ministers is assisting with the scheduling of youth groups. Troy Reynolds, pastor at First Church of Christ has been in charge of scheduling.

"At the present time, we have six churches working together and several others have indicated an interest during the school year," Baddorf said.

"The program is completely run by area youth. They do the programming and select the music to be played," Reynolds said.

"This is an opportunity for our youth to minister to youth through the music they enjoy. It has been very appealing to the youth. I would like to thank KTCH for the opportunity they have afforded us people-stereotype music, especially rap music. But, there is good Christian music available. I would like to personally thank Dan Baddorf for letting us do our own thing with this program. It is nice to know that we have control of something," Aaron said.

Although KTCH listeners will find that the music played during the half-hour program is not the typical KTCH music, it is Christian music.

"The music is Christian music that is selected by the youth and represents the type of music that they like to listen to. All lyrics represent a Christian message," said Lori Carollo, Youth Director and Sunday School Superintendent at First United Methodist Church.

"We realize that some of the listeners may have a hard time understanding some of the words, but we want to stress to everyone that this is not bad music. This is a way for our young people to share their faith with other young people in the community in a way that is appealing to them," Lori added.

The program is aired each Monday evening, generally live, from 7-7:30 p.m. afforded us to share the gospel with others," Reynolds added.

The half-hour program includes rap, country, rock and heavy metal types of music.

Aaron Kardell, a member of Calvary Bible Evangelical Free Church, who has hosted the program three times said he "enjoys doing it" gets to play approximately seven songs during each program.

"I tell my friends to listen and I have had a number of others say they heard me. I know a lot of Craig Holstedt, pastor at First Presbyterian Church said that while he would be the first to admit that "I don't always care for certain music styles, I have found some of it to be very good. However, what is most important is what the youth think of it. We have already found that they are starting to tune in to hear what's being played."

"Our thanks go out to KTCH to have faith in our youth to try this. It has given them a chance to practice discipleship, reaching out to their friends with the Gospel in a language they understand," he added.

Are you at risk for burnout?

It's impossible to say which patterns of mismatches are more easily tolerated by workers in the workplace. But research has led us to make a few observations.

First, it is common belief that there is just one dimension to job stress, work overload. Indeed, overload is often considered to be a synonym for stress. But in a burnout model, overload is only one of six mismatches in the workplace and it's not always the most critical, especially if things are going well in some of the other areas.

Second, when jobs are scaled back to part-time, short-term, temporary, or contract positions, then the dominant mismatches become breakdown in community and absence of fairness—and as a result, the importance of material rewards increases dramatically.

Third, for jobs that are more long-term, the primary concerns are likely to be with values and fairness. No matter what else, people have to judge the job as meaningful and worthy of a full commitment of their time and effort.

Linda Grunickshank, Wayne County

Take this short "quiz" to identify problem areas in your job. How much do you agree or disagree with each of the following statements?

- Workload: "I do not have time to do the work that must be done."
- Control: "After work I come home too tired to do the things I'd like to do."
- Community: "I am my own boss when it comes to pursuing the tasks that I am assigned."
- Reward: "I have control over how I do my work."
- Fairness: "In my organization, the recognition and reward people receive reflect their efforts."
- Values: "The financial rewards of my work are sufficient."
- Community: "This organization does a good job responding to the diverse needs of its clients."
- Fairness: "Respect is evident in relationships within my organization."
- Values: "Opportunities and rewards are decided solely on merit."
- Values: "This job provides me with opportunities to do work that I feel is important."
- Values: "My values and the organization's values are alike."

The less one experiences work overload, the more one feels in control, feels rewarded, experiences a sense of community, is treated fairly and feels valued by the workplace, the less likely the propensity for stress pileup and burnout.

Attends Health/Science Meet

Trista Jaeger, an eighth grader at Winside Middle School was one of 60 eighth-grade students from across Nebraska to attend the University of Nebraska Medical Center's sixth annual Health/Science Meet in June.

The goal of the three-day educational experience is to inspire Nebraska's eighth graders, especially those from rural communities, to pursue careers in health care.

The students qualified for the meet by submitting science projects in regional science competitions held in Crete, Chadron, Kearney, North Platte, Omaha and Scottsbluff.

The expense-paid meet gives students the opportunity to participate in hands-on activities in education, research and patient care.

Activities included visiting a research laboratory and conducting science experiments such as looking at a human brain to see what causes strokes, using liquid nitrogen to freeze flowers and making slime out of household products.

Other activities included a pizza party, touring UNMC's campus and a trip to the Strategic Air Command Museum at Mahoney State Park.

UNMC, an academic health science center, is recognized nationally and internationally for its bone marrow and liver transplant programs, rural health care initiatives, biotechnology, geriatrics and cancer research.

Students in eighth grade next year interested in applying to attend the 1999 Health/Science Meet should contact their science teacher, school counselor or principal in the fall of 1998.

Information and applications for next year's event will be sent to school officials during November 1998.

Reunion and train wreck highlight week

We had a break in the humidity, which was very welcome, but it seems to be back today, July 3. Our offices were closed today, so I took the vacation time. As usual, I need it to recuperate from our extra-curricular activities.

In that mode, I'm on the couch in the new room, with the shades down, a fan blowing and a glass of ice water beside me. Yes, I do plan to take a nap. Our guests just came in the front door and I'm sure that's what they are planning. (Parents of six, ages three to 14, both teachers; they need a nap!)

I got home from Wayne at 8:30 p.m. last Saturday, made a pan of lasagna and fell into bed. It was raining, blowing and generally carrying on again. I woke up at 5 a.m. in a bit of panic because my family reunion was going to be here and now the yard was all wet.

By: Pat Motorbushy

Besides, it was going to be too sultry for some of my aunts and uncles to be outside for very long. So, I pulled out tables, hauled chairs, cleared off the coffee table and set up TV trays. I had room for 26, not-counting children.

Then, we went to 8:30 services in Weeping Water and were back home by 10. The last cousin left at 5:30 p.m. and we were due at Misty's in Lincoln by 6:30 to celebrate the 60th birthday of a cousin on the other side of the family. I fell into bed again that night.

On Monday evening, I was putting table leaves and folding chairs away when the neighbors stopped to ask if we wanted to go to a train wreck! That Burlington derailment was just five miles away, at South Bend. What a mess—cars of asphalt and grain dust and lumber all over the place.

The railroads do not clean up these things. They call the Hulcher company. There are 40 sites across the country, with cranes and caterpillars loaded and ready. Here in Cass County, there were crews from Abilene, Kan., Des Moines, Iowa and Hastings. Mr. Hulcher himself was on the site, wearing a Stetson that was, actually a hard hat!

The track was ready for use the next day, but there is still a lot of mess around. At least no one was hurt. We checked on it Wednesday evening, coming from the IMAX.

The Douglas County Visitor's Bureau sent the Cass County committee free tickets to the new elephant show at Henry Dooley Zoo. Neither of us had been in an IMAX theatre. It's amazing. There are a few perks with the Big Farmer's responsibilities.

Now for the nap, to rest-up for firecracker day. We certainly would hate to miss anything!!

Free nitrate testing available

The Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District has again hired FFA teachers to collect water samples this summer but if landowners would like to collect the samples themselves, the NRD will pay for the cost of the analysis.

Landowners interested in collecting their own samples from their irrigation wells should contact their local county Extension Office, their local Natural Resources Conservation Service or the Lower Elkhorn Natural Resources District and pick up a five ounce bottle and postage paid mailer from one of these agencies. The Lower Elkhorn NRD will pay for the cost of shipping and analysis of the sample.

Guidelines for the FREE irrigation well nitrate testing program include:

1. Sample is to be taken only from irrigation wells.
2. The well should pump four to six hours before taking the sample. 3. Try to sample when not chemigating. 4. If chemigating, take the sample upstream of the chemigation injection site. 5. Send the full five ounce bottle of water in to be tested, not just a partial bottle. 6. Fasten all lids securely to prevent leakage during shipping. 7. The sample needs to be received by the lab as soon as possible after collection, preferably within 24 hours. Try to collect the sample so that you can mail it early in the week, so it doesn't sit in the Post Office over the weekend. 8. If it is not possible to send the sample to the lab immediately after collection, refrigerate until it is sent.

The Lower Elkhorn NRD will provide results and explanations of the samples sent in. This program will be available for three years: 1998, '99, and 2000. For more information contact Skip Kahler at the Lower Elkhorn NRD.

Chicken Show hatches from Regional Arts Council project

The Wayne Chicken Show, sponsored by the Wayne Area Chamber of Commerce, is a fun event held annually on the second Saturday in July.

The first Wayne Chicken Show was held in 1981 and was intended to be an arts and crafts show. It was a project of the Wayne Regional Arts Council and its purpose was to generate grass roots interest in arts by demonstrating that art can exist around everyday objects or situations.

The theme of "chickens" was chosen because of the potential for art materials (feathers and egg shells) because nearly everyone has knowledge and familiarity with chickens, and because chickens can be considered with humor. Some contests and a parade were planned in order to make the arts and crafts show an event.

Previous years Cluck Off winners have appeared on the Tonight Show. The Chicken Show has been featured in nearly all of the larger Nebraska newspapers; on radio interviews heard in every state of the United States, all provinces of Canada, and the B.B.C. originating from Dublin, Ireland; in television news segments each year on Lincoln, Omaha, and Sioux City stations, and on NBC, ABC, CBS, and CNN; appearances on Good Morning America, the Mickey Mouse Club and a syndicated quiz show; and in articles in USA Today, and Wall Street Journal, Stars and Stripes, regional magazines, national newspaper syndications through the Associated Press and UPI.

In addition, English, Japanese, and Saudi Arabian newspaper clippings have been sent.

The primary source of funds for the Chicken Show is the sale of Chicken Shirts. Designed by Marla McCue, each year's shirt is unique, depicting the theme for that particular year. Thousand of shirts are sold each year, and calls and orders are taken all year. The 1996 Wayne Chicken Show received the Nebraska Outstanding Tourism Award.

Thanks goes to the many individuals, organizations, service groups, and businesses for their help and support to make the Chicken Show events a great success.

One of the 'Chickendale' participants entertained people in the park last year as one of the activities. There are a variety of events that take place each year in the park.

Did someone say that the Wayne Chicken Show was this weekend? Lets get going girls!
