Second in a series Additional information given on bond issue

Editors note: This is the second in a series of articles in connection with the bond issue which will be on the ballot on Sept. 29. The follows ing questions and answers are designed to help voters understand the current situation.

Q: Why do we need more space for the Middle School cur-riculum?

A. Since the original building was designed, we have added special education, speech, school psychologist, guidance counselors. reading teachers, audiologist, spe-cial math teachers, talented and gifted programs, occupational and physical therapists. Many of these require small rooms for traveling specialists. Curriculum expansion is necessary to prepare students for the 21st century.Computers and technology also require additional space. Either plan (renovation or new building) meets technology and curriculum.

Season

A. Technology requires addi-tional electrical circuits and outlets, connection of each learning space and office to each other and the outside world. Full utilization of computers to enhance curriculum is obtained only if students have access to local and worldwide networks.

Q: Where are the students of middle grades currently housed?

A: The Middle School is located the modular units south of the high school. Students move from building to building to attend different classes and activities. Some teachers from the high school teach middle school students.

Q: What is the projection for student population: A. A slight decline is expected unless there is a dramatic change in the economic climate. The largest group is now in the high. school. Q: Why did the district invest in the modular classrooms?

Black and Gold series announced

A: The modulars were pur-chased to house the faculty and students as a result of a lack of ventilation in the original building. The cost of a temporary ventila-tion system exceeded the cost of temporary modular units. Q: What is being done to meet Carroll's needs?

A: Four modulars will be moved to Carroll and installed on perma-nent foundations.

Q: How can the modulars serve Carroll if they won't meet Middle School needs?

A: They would be on permanent foundations. There is a much smaller population -45 vs. 300. Middle School students move sev-eral times a day and must tote books and supplies due to lack of lockers. Elementary students move only a few times a day. The mod-ular classrooms become a longtime space solution and dramatic improvement to the educational environment for Carroll.

Q: Will there be an air-quality problem in the Middle School if it

In other action, the council listened to a presentation by Gary Westphal from Nebraska Public Power District. He discussed elec-tric de-regulation. At the present time, Nebraska is the only totally public power state in the U.S.

Westphal explained the changes that could occur in the future, especially in rural areas such as Nebraska which currently has relatively low rates for electrical power

He stated that public power districts will need to become more competitive in keeping and re-taining customers, often by offering additional services.

Resolution 98-86 was approved, giving final acceptance to Sidewalk Improvement District 98-01 and ordering plats and schedules of assessments.

The council set Sept. 29 as the date for a public hearing regarding the proposed acquisition of real estate in Block 10 of College Hill Addition.

A request from Randy Pick to extend the time limitation for a use by exception permit at Seventh and Dearborn was granted. Due to construction on Highway 35 and Dearborn Streets, Pick has not been able to complete construction on a building at that location.

No action was taken on resolu-tion 98-90 which would have given final acceptance on Storm Sewer 97-01 Improvement District No. The city is still waiting for final testing results to come back before the project is completed.

Support new school

Dear Editor

in several weeks the people of Wayne County will have the opportunity to make a decision of major importance to the future of our schools and community.

We urge everyone to vote on the school bond issue on Sept. 29, and to support the building of a new middle-school.

The issues involved, and especially the decision between building new and renovation , is a complex A great deal of information, and misinformation has been made available. We will try to explain why we think a new building is clearly the best choice, but in a limited space many questions must remain unanswered.

So we also encourage you to get more information by attending public meetings, talking to mem bers of the school board, the school administration, or to the teachers involved.

The most important disadvantage of renovation is the location, several blocks away from the other two schools. This eliminates the possibility of sharing facilities such as band and music rooms, and requires unnecessary duplication of building space.

It also means that a significant number of students and teachers will have to move from one building to the other during the school day We had three daughters in the old middle schoo), and they sometimes had to walk to the high school as many as three times a day to attend classes and other activities located in the high school

Of course, they report that most of the students actually liked the opportunity to get out of classes by wasting 'time and dawdling along the way. But given the opportunity to remedy this problem, it seems inexcusable not to take advantage ofit

A second problem is that con struction costs are notoriously unreliable and difficult to determine in renovation of old buildings, as almost anyone who has done renovation work will agree.

A renovated middle school could easily cost far more than the $7,000,000 architects' estimate, and even far more than the cost of a new building. Or, alternatively, we would have to cut corners to stay within the bond budget and end up with a less than satisfactory build ing. This is much less likely to be an issue with a new building

Even if the estimates turn out to be accurate, the construction costs for a new building are less than $200,000 more for a completely new building than for renovation. And part of that might be recovered by the sale of the currently unusable middle school.

Staffing and maintenance costs seem very likely to us to be higher for renovation than for a new building. And even if that is not the case, $200,000 is a small price to pay for the advantages of a new school.

Additional problems with renovation are the limited space available and the hemmed in residential neighborhood location. Space for parking and for playground and recreation activities at the old middle school were already inadequate, as anyone who has picked up and dropped off children at the old middle school location, especially when buses were loading and unloading, know

Almost doubling the size of the current building could only worsen the situation. And there is no room available for future additions or expansion, or for possible additional shared facilities with the city, as would be possible at the new location

We could present a long list of other advantages that we believe that the new school offers, but you are probably already getting tired of reading this, and other long letters, on this subject.

So we will end with what is for us the strongest single argument-for supporting a new building. Virtually all of the people who have studied the issue most closely, and who know most about it, and who will be most affected by it, strongly lavor a new building.

Above all, every middle school teacher that we have talked to supports a new building over renovation. The same is true of the school administrators.

These are the people who know most about building needs, who know what's best for students, and a school board to make these kind of difficult and technical decisions. and the school board has consistently and very strongly favored a new building, as did both groups of outside consultants and architects hired to recommend what they thought the best solutions were. But above all, being teachers ourselves, we think it unconscionable to ignore the clear decision of the Wayne Middle School teachers and administrators about what is best for the future students of the school. Finally, as serious supporters of historic preservation, let us add that we do support renovation of the middle school. It should be renovated, as have many other buildings in Wayne, for a new and more appropriate purpose It might easily be used for office or retail space, for apartments (we have heard lots about housing shortages in Wayne in recent years), or for many other useful purposes. Thanks for your concern, attention, and support. Please vote for a new middle school on Sept. 29. Kent and Cathy Blaser

Capitol News — 'Tax shifts' over 'tax cuts' are shown

Statehouse Correspondent The Nebraska Press Association It's that time in the political year when there is a lot of reading to do if you're among those who try to exercise the responsibilities of citizenship with diligence.

The same is true if you don't give two hoots or a shucky darn about citizenship, but like to try to figure out what the politicos, monied interests and Various "grass roots" movements are trying to ut over on the electorate before November gets to town.

From time to time, a person who enjoys such endeavors, enough to write and report on them for three decades, may occasionally be viewed as a cynic. My own view is that experience in observing the body politic doesn't necessarily breed cynicism, but it will breed an exceedingly strong variety of skepticism.

For all of his noted curmudgeonry, demagoguery, and occa-sional ill-tempered outbursts, it seems to me truer and truer each year that the late Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff was correct when he offered this terse. response to a question about the most important elements of mak ing public policy. "It all comes down to money!"

Money, in this case meaning, the power to influence the mak-ing, giving and taking of money.

One example comes to mind, It's a small one, but it will serve a portion of the purpose sought to be accomplished herein.

The Nebraska Educational Television more (much more) than less owes its creation to Carpenter

The ETV building on 33rd Street in Lincoln is the Terry Carpenter Telecommunications Center, or some such thing. I'm not exactly certain

The reason I'm not-certain is because the sign that used to bear Carpenter's name is no in front of the building. longer There are probably several reasons for this situation. But one of them is this: Carpenter is dead! So are a lot of the powerful friends with whom he served in the Legislature. If Carpenter, et al, were alive and influential, the sign with his name on it would be there, in good repair. If it weren't, someone would likely communicate to my friends and colleagues at ETV that Big Bird would be dead before Thanksgiving if they didn't do the right thing. And even if Big Bird made it through the holidays, he would certainly starve before the next biennial budget expired. Gét it?

For many years live had an association with the Nebraska Educational Television -Network. They pay me to host a call-in program during part of the year. Not once has the brass ever suggested that I tone it down, liven it up, be nice, be tough or be anything other than on time for the program. This is by way of letting you know that I have good regard for Nebraska ETV, depend on it for part of my income, and think that it does a job worth doing. The point here doesn't have to do with ETV in particular, it has to do with what Carpenter said: most things in the area of public policy have to do with money

This is not a revelation to realists, but it is a fact that seems to be forgottén when it comes to debating public policy. Consider the thing that will be on the ballot involving telephone companies and access charges (I'm not telling you anything more; read about in the World-Herald and talk to people who can give you good opinions): It's a money deal, period. It's not unlike base ball. Companies with money are squabbling over which ones will get the bigger share of your dollars. The fight ain't about you and how you are served - it's about your money and who gets it. Yeah, I know. Someone is reading this and calling me a cynic, It's a burden I can shoulder even though my health isn't what it ought to be.

Then, there is the real biggee: the business guys' constitutional amendment to limit government revenues, while allowing for some pret-ty nice exceptions for those involved in what you could call the "economic development" end of things.

For years; some folk argued that those who worked for wages and owned homes paid too much freight to subsidize a tax system that gave the farm to, well, to farmers. Ag land was undervalued (as "undervalued" would have been defined via the terms of the then-Nebraska Constitution), ev eryone knew it and no one had the brass or the power to do anything about it.

Times changed. The glory days of tiny school district tax havens, and state aid to rural schools being a divine right with minimal respon sibility attached, are gone. So, the Legislature has been applying it self in recent years to various ef-forts aimed at curbing the growth of LOCAL property taxes. (1 always want to put LOCAL in capital letters because, I swear to you, there still are people who think the state sets property tax rates. Property taxes are LOCAL! LOCAL! LOCAL! What drives local governments crazy are state mandated programs for which locals bear the cost. That's another issue; or, at least, another column.)

But if the Legislature is going to provide state tax dollars as part of the effort to hold down local taxes, from whênce will the money come? If you're among those who think there are zillions in state government operations to be trimmed, well, as they say in the vernacular, get over it. The big state dollars are in aid to local governments, especially schools, and in social services and higher You want to cut education: You want to cut those? OK: Pick a state college or NU campus to close. What do you want to whack off of grandma and grandpa's Medicaid · package? Now, go get the votes to do it. Get_it?

comes? Sales taxes? It doesn't matter if you-want to limit government revenues in hopes of protecting your income, or if you want government to spread a sales/income tax burden statewide- in hopes of easing property taxes.

HAR BEEFE

What does matter? The fact that Carpenter was right. In the end, "It all comes down to money

Another point is that there is nothing wrong with the first point. Participatory democracy is intended to let government be influenced by those who get off their duffs and participate, to influence it in their interests. The former thought is a good evaluating what any side has to say about any of the issues refer-enced above... and probably most other issues, too. And, while they often had their admiration for one another well under control, I would also quote the late Sen. Jerome Warner, a colleague of Terrible Terry Carpenter.

Warner often said that, in his long tenure in the Legislature, he had seldom seen a tax cut. "I've seen a lot of tax shifts, from one source of revenue to another, the burden shifted from one-category of taxpayers to an-other, but I've not seen very many tax cuts," Warner said. Get it?

if not don't worry. Because, one way or another, you're going to get it, sooner or later.

Harder was 17-19 in setting with four assists while Kari Stewart was 14-14 with five assists."Schroeder led the team in hitting with four kill spikes while Jenny-Demuth and Kristin Hank had three each.

"Several athletes contributed in the win," coach Patti Cunningham said. "Strong serving took Bloomfield out of its offense but did result in several second hits being brought over the net which disrupted out team rhythm."

The Bearcats are seeking a third consecutive trip to the national quarterfinals in the NCAA-Division II ranks and they opened the season with a 55-16 thumping of Midwestern State (Texas).

NWMSU is ranked ninth in the country heading into Saturday's tilt with the Wildcats.

All-American quarterback Chris Griesen leads the Bearcats attack after a 311-yard passing day in the opener last Saturday.

The Wildcat lineup will have a few changes heading into the NWMSU contest.

Offensively, sophomore jason Gustafson returns to the lineup after serving a one-game suspension for disciplinary reasons.

He will back up freshman left guard Heath Keim. As a result, junior Tyler Last will back up right guard Curt Lessmann this week after back up Keim against USD.

Junior Fred Giraud will get his first start of the season and second of his career at running back.

BJ Helmstadter will back Giraud up after starting in week one. At wide receiver, junior Ronnie Blair will start at an outside receiver spot, ahead of sophomore Brent Litz

Defensively, junior jason Jansen moves from defensive end to defensive tackle to bolster the interior line

Junior Chris Rizzo will start at Jansen's vacated end spot. Also, junior Greg Davis will start at the other defensive end position.

Sophomore Adam Karsten, who missed the USD game recovering from offseason shoulder surgery, is listed as the second string defensive tackle, behind senior Craig Price.

At linebacker, freshman Mike Baker switches to outside linebacker, where he will back up Nate Herbst. Moving into the reserve inside linebacker position is freshman John Bohan.

"No doubt about it, they (NWMSU) are a very good football team but they are beatable," Haslam said. "They are a very consistent team that doesn't beat themselves with mistakes. We will need to play error-free football and do our jobs to have a chance."

Burnout thrives in workplace

Mismatches between the nature of the job and the nature of the person doing the job costs a high human price.

This mismatch is evident in many aspects of organizational life. The most obvious indication is when there is work overload with too much to do and too few resources to do it.

This can cause the employee to feel overloaded, which often results from downsizing. Fewer people available to accomplish the same amount of work in less time hurts quality and disrupts collegial relationships and innovation.

People want control over their work. Lack of control in the workplace means the employee isn't given the chance to make decisions, solve problems and have input in the process in achieving the outcomes they are responsible for. Lack of control is one factor leading to burndut.

Also, when employees aren't recognized for work done, the work and the worker are devalued. Most devastating for workers is the loss of self-pride an employee has from doing somethi a important, doing it well and having it go unnoticed by superiors.

Another sign of a mismatch between employee and employer is a breakdown of positive connections with others in the workplace.

Most destructive is chronic and unresolved conflict. It tears apart the fabric of support, making it less likely that people will help each other out when times get tough.

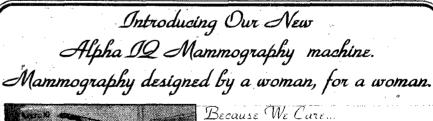

Unfairness in the workplace is another indication of serious mismatch between employee and employer. It is evident when there is inequity of workload or pay or when people bend the rules and cheat to get ahead.

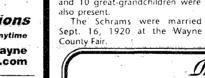

Unfairness produces a lack of trust in the organization and suggests a lack of respect from those in authority.

A values conflict may exist between work and job demands Sometimes a job can lead a person to do something that may be unethical and clashes with their per sonal values or there could be a dissension between the organization's mission statement and its everyday practices.

People do their best when they believe in what they are doing and when they can maintain their pride, integrity, and self-respect.

It's noon on Saturday of Labor Day weekend and I'm waiting lunch for two munchkins named Thomas and Alex. Their parents are going to Riverdance in Omaha. There are 72,000 people heading for Memorial Stadium and twice that many to the Sate Pair. There's also Septemberfest in Omaha. Our guests this weekend are here for a wedding and the Big Farmer is minding the antique shop today.

With all that activity around us, I'm quite content to stay at home in the air conditioning. Is this a sign of growing older? I'm grateful for the new room off the kitchen because it gives us a place for toys and they don't get scattered through the whole house. It's also a place for a desk, the ironing board and my organ. In fact, we wonder what, we did without it.

The Farm House is sporting a new root, courtesy of Merle and Scott Myers of York. It was hard to even find someone to bid on it, it's so high in the air, I look around at the new construction and marvel at the many rooves on these homes. They will certainly be a "challenge; 'too,' someday.

And then I look at corn, beans; beet, and hog prices. I shudder and wonder how many more farniers will call it quits this year. We don't own any stocks, so don't get too shook up about the Dow, but everything is inter-connected. It all looks a bit gloomy today.

The other mend I can't help being aware of is the shortage of labor. Nursing homes are turning away admissions because there aren't enough caregivers. The nearby state parks' need folks to replace the students who worked

I'm going to put lunch on the table and concentrate on optimism. It's easy to let it get away.

BELL TOLL IN REMEMBRANCE -On Sept. 2, Wakefield World War

Il Veterans joined in the observance of the anniversary of the signing of the peace treaty with Japan

Bricie Nicholson rang the bell at the Christian Church. He was in the Philippines training for an invasion of Japan.

Eugene Swanson was in the United States stationed in Texas since the war was already over in Europe,

The third WWII vet. Norman Swanson rang the bell at Salem Lutheran Church. These three churches are the only ones in town which still have bells.

The Second World War was officially ended at 9 a.m. on Sept. 2, 1945, when representatives of the Japanese government signed the surrender treaty aboard the Battle ship Missouri.

In remembrance of the sacrifices borne by Americans, the Nebraska Department American Legion Commander requested that churches across the state with bell towers ring their bells for a full minute beginning at the precise time the treaty was signed.

In making the request , the commander said, "The restoration of peace after a six-year conflict that claimed tens of millions of lives is too important to this nation and to our state to become a footnote in the history books.

The bell tolling will provide residents of Nebraska communities an opportunity for reflection on the sacrifices, the prayer of thanksgiving and for a joyful acknowledgement of merciful protection of our Creator

Each member of the class adopted a building, according to instructor Kirby Mousel, researched its history and made an illustrated drawing
