In Library of Congress Chicken Show honored

Wayne's annual Henoween and Wayne Chicken Show has been selected as one of five local festivals to be included in the Library of Congress Local Legacies Project.

The aim of the project is to document America's grassroots heritage and provide a snapshot at the end of the century of that heritage as gathered from every congressional district in every state in America.

Wayne will help represent Nebraska's First District.

Other festivals from the First District to receive this honor are the Clarkson Czech Festival in Clarkson, the Deer Creek Sodbusters Antique Machinery Show in Sterling, the Seward Fourth of July celebration in Seward and the Winnebago Pow Wow in Winnebago.

A local legacy is defined as a traditional activity, event or area of creativity that merits being documented for future generations.

Board raises questions on renovation

by Aubrey Parson
for the Herald

The Wayne Board of Education discussed concerns related to the middle school and high school renovation projects in a special meeting held on Tuesday.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss questions, address the concerns of middle school staff members and get more information on the renovation project.

Several questions were raised as to whether the designs proposed by Bahi, Vermeer and Hacker (BVH) met the regulations that were originally presented in the bond issue.

"The first time we saw architectural information was last Monday," said Phyllis Spethman, president of the Board of Education. "Many concerns and questions were raised on the part of the Board as to what was being presented to us."

Structural and placement designs in the middle school were thoroughly discussed. Dr. Joseph Reinert, district superintendent, confirmed that the middle school gym would be full-sized, with two junior high-sized cross courts. Board members had previously questioned the size of the gym and locker rooms.

Another issue was incorporating a temporary stage in the new middle school gym. Board members considered the difficulty of set-up, take-down and storage of the stage.

The placement of a computer lab and library separate from each other was another concern. Middle school teachers had previously expressed that this would disrupt the environment of a true "media center."

Board members also inquired how the architects proposed classes and programs to fit in the spaces designed for classrooms on the second and third floors. A

New business sells old items

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Stating that "this is something I have always wanted to do," Nana Peterson opened the doors of her new business, Antiques on Main on June 12.

"A number of people in town had commented that this was something they wanted in town, so I decided to give it a chance," Mrs. Peterson said.

She purchased the former Tilgner's Store at 207 Main Street in March and, "with the help of excellent contractors, Paul Lindner and Tom Hattig," began work on remodeling the building.

"This has been a family project. Our sons Matt and Sean helped Cap move and set up shelving, etc. Our daughter Amanda Holden of Boston, Mass. decorated the windows while our daughter Sarah babysat our grandson, Eric," Mrs. Peterson added.

The store currently has 30 vendors who rent booths and floor space on a monthly basis by square footage plus a commission.

Mrs. Peterson said she has collected antiques over the years and her home furnishings are antiques, but for the most part, most of the items at Antiques on Main belong to vendors.

"The nice part about the store is that most of the booths are

Building focus of meetings

The Nebraska Development Network-Northeast Region's membership continues to grow as they pull together professionals and volunteers to work on critical issues requiring collaboration needed for Northeast Nebraska communities to survive.

A monthly meeting was held at the Laurel Learning Center on June 16. Current members encourage anyone interested in community and economic development issues to join them at meetings.

A capacity building grant from the Nebraska Department of Economic Development is being used to continue the regional collaboration project called the Citestate Study, completed last year. The grant this year works to put recommendations from focus groups into action for communities. The grant is coordinated by Renay Robison-Scheer, Executive Director of the Northeast Nebraska Economic Development District.

The Development Network members are recruiting regional representation for projects. They comment that they are still in need of more resourceful and determined citizens.

majority of the classrooms are currently designed to be long and rectangular in shape instead of the traditional square classroom. In the original presentation, BVH architects had suggested capturing abandoned attic space for other uses. Dr. Reinert reported that the firm plans to use the attic for heating and air conditioning units, although the exact plans had not yet been presented to the Board. The question as to which walls in the existing middle school were load-bearing was also considered. According to BVH representatives, the load-bearing walls could not be located until the demolition plan was complete. Board members considered alternative options that could be incorporated if some of the walls were removed. Sharing space between the high school and middle school for programs such as music, industrial technology and art was also considered. Board members suggested having high school students move to the middle school to take the classes. Teachers suggested that since the classes were electives for high school students, they may decide not to take the classes because they would have to move between buildings.

Board members considered making the gym area three stories or adding rooms further to the west to create more space. The need to have a larger commons area for students to congregate during lunch and before school was also expressed. Hiring a specialist in kitchen architecture was suggested to study the plans for the middle school and the current preparatory kitchen in the elementary school. If the elementary kitchen could be updated, the kitchen in the middle school could become service-oriented only, creating more space for classrooms. Architectural designs for the middle school currently show a majority of the traffic moving from west to east, yet the proposed administrative offices are located by the existing main entrance on the east side of the school. Board members suggested moving the offices to the west side of the building where they would be easier to access for a majority of the people entering the building. In regards to high school renovation plans, Board members discussed additional costs raised due to changing the location of the home economics and science labs. The proposed relocation of the new wrestling and weight room from the middle school to the high school also raised cost concerns. Representatives from BVH will address all of these questions and concerns plus others in a special meeting to be held on Thursday, July 1 at 4:30 p.m. in the high school. All concerned parents and community members are encouraged to attend.

A number of items, including antique beds, trunks, baby buggles and dishes, as well as other collectibles, are available at Antiques on Main.

"It is also nice to see the antique collections of those people I have known for years but did not realize they were collectors." be raised was flown over the nation's capitol in Washington, D.C. on Feb. 14, 1999. Senator Doug Bereuter, First District Congressman, was responsible for the village receiving the flag. The actual incorporation date for the village of Hoskins was Feb. 7, 1899 but the celebration was planned for summer to allow more activities to be held outdoors. On Saturday morning the group has been invited to have an early breakfast at Hoskins Manufacturing. The riders are encouraged to spend the weekend in Hoskins as the wagons and trail riders will be leading the Centennial Parade at 10 a.m. on Saturday morning. They will be escorting Governor Mike Johannies and his wife through the parade. Those who cannot start the ride at Wayne, are invited to join the group at the Winside at noon.

"We are thankful for God's blessing and provision which has enabled us to build a much needed facility," Rev. Steinbach said. "God has been faithful to build a congregation, now numbering 160, which loves the Lord, has a desire to build and encourage one another and wants to reach out to the Wayne area with the message of God's love. We are not perfect by any means," Steinbach added, "but we are saved by God's grace through faith in Christ and we want to share our faith by encouraging and helping others to know the love and hope that is in Him." The old church facility at 901 Circle Drive, which was built in 1957, will be made into a house. The congregation of Praise Assembly of God Church has invited the community to attend any or all of the weekend's events. For more information, contact the church office at 375-3430 or 375-3103. # Wayne State College will host Cheerleading and Dance Camp Wayne State College will host Cheerleading and Dance Camp on June 22-25 for around 130 high school, junior high school and middle school students. Instructors for the camps will be provided by the Universal Cheerleading Association (UCA) and Universal Dance Association (UDA). "We have been holding these camps at Wayne State College for over 25 years. Campers who attend these camps learn routines, etc., that are presented all over the country, so Nebraska is right up there with schools everywhere using the most up-to-date, "in" presentations," said Frank Teach, WSC director of student activities. Around 160,000 cheerleaders worldwide are trained by UCA. Students learn how to combine stunts, transitions and dance sequences into compact, spirit-charged routines. Participants may choose to learn from a variety of dances suited for beginner to advanced individuals for timeouts, pep rallies and games. Low pressure evaluations help gauge progress and reward a job well done. Awards are given in each class daily. "UCA's instructors are the best in the business. They can take any squad, beginning or advanced and turn them into a motivated team," said Kayce Shepherd, cheer coach at Michigan State University. "UCA camp provides the direction, training and safety standards that are the driving force behind University of Kentucky's successful cheerleading program," said T. Lynn Williamson, cheerleading advisor for the University of Kentucky nine-time national champions. Dance camp will involve 15 to 45 jazz, pop, hip hop, kick, prop, novelty and lyrical routines. Classes in conditioning, dance, technique and fundamentals will be also included. Hard work and achievements at dance camp are recognized with trophies for camp routines, home routines, team drill downs, team leadership and a 110-percent award. "The staff at UDA is extraordinary. My dancers not only gained confidence, but were surrounded by positive role models all week. The staff is well trained, well prepared and extremely patient. Their generosity and spirit were definitely contagious," said Karen Wilkins, dance advisor for Mills E. Godwin High School in Richmond, Va. For more information, please call (402) 375-7322.

Capitol News —

Sales tax to increase

By Ed Howard
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The state sales tax rate is going to increase a wee bit in the near future.

That's because the Legislature set up a deal last year that decreased the tax for a specific period; then allowed it to automatically return to its previous level.

I'm not going to write numbers here. But I'll tell you that, if you don't currently know the state sales tax rate, it's not likely that you'll notice the upcoming increase, either.

Neither the executive nor the legislative branches are likely to make much of it, for reasons that are obvious. A few political operatives might try to point a partisan finger here or there, but even that is not a genuine likelihood. Gov. Mike Johanns and a majority of lawmakers were partners, one way or another, in the decision. So, judge not, lest ye be slapped around yourself in a news conference.

Let us turn now to the University of Nebraska in regards to a topic other than football.

Common Cause says NU should be person-specific when it reports its spending for entertaining lawmakers and executive branch types. The university notes that the law (as in, the law enacted by the Legislature) doesn't require such specificity.

It doesn't seem to me that it would make much difference if the university did cough up the pertinent information on who was the target of however much spending, for meals and other entertainment.

In the first place, there is no equivalent to 21 or Maxim's in Lincoln, or elsewhere in Nebraska. We're talking meat and potatoes here, or broiled chicken and salad for the types who think their diet can fool their genetics.

Dining with government types is legitimate, especially when it comes to state senators. They are busy with senatorial duties most of the day. If you want their time, meal time is a logical time to get it.

The advantage to requiring every lobbyist to report the name of every government sort for whom dinner, or a round of golf, is purchased, would be significant mostly to Capitol insiders - like reporters.

It would, for example, make it obvious if there were a chronic freeloader or two in the Legislature or elsewhere in government. I am not in a position these days to say whether such a person exists.

There were some notorious food and beverage bums in the Capitol in years past. I don't mean people who did a lot of business over meals - that's legit. I mean a couple of lawmakers (since departed) and at least one husband (also departed) who were the terror of the "I'll get the check" set.

The potentially unfair side of the equation, which undoubtedly would come into play, would be the ability of a political opponent to point to the dinner tab(s) and then reference the incumbent, as a tool of this interest or that interest.

The situation points to a reality that is proven, over and over again, in politics and professional basketball: you are stupid if you don't know the other guy is going to whine to the referees (or voters) and point to nonexistent fouls whilst feigning anguish and wearing a look of moral indignation. The former is obvious to even the slightly-alert proletarian and the latter is usually as convincing as a smile from Bill Clinton or a promise from Slobodan Milosevic.

If all those entertainment expenses were made specific, the resulting situation would likely be comparable to the tax situation.

There would be a general grumbling about it (on all sides) and, every so often, a little stink would be raised.

For the most part though, it would be like the tax system: a general annoyance that isn't generally well-understood, but is good for the occasional headline.

Chicken Show kickoff planned

Help kick off the 1999 Henoween and Wayne Chicken Show! Plan to attend a special Chamber Coffee on July 9, dressed in your Chicken Show t-shirt!

The Coffee on July 9 will be at the State National Bank park just north of the Wayne Herald. We hope lots of people will show up in Chicken Show t's from previous years.

A group photo will be snapped to commemorate this important occasion! Chamber Coffee starts at 10 a.m. every Friday morning with announcements at 10:15, and is always open to the public.

Are you known for a certain special recipe? Are you always asked to prepare the same dish because it is so wonderful? Does your family have a particular favorite recipe? Please consider entering the Cook-Off Contest on Henoween, July 9. For more information or for an entry form, contact the Chamber office at 375-2240.

While you are checking recipes, think about submitting one or several recipes to be printed in a special edition Wayne Chicken Show cookbook to be printed and sold at the 2000 Chicken Show. Again, contact the office, or simply submit your written recipes by mailing or delivering to the Wayne Area Chamber, 108 West Third Street, Wayne, NE 68787.

I hope to see lots and lots of people at the Town Hall meeting on Monday, June 29 at 7 p.m., at the City Auditorium. Co-sponsored by Wayne Industries, Inc., Wayne Area Chamber, and the Wayne Main Street in cooperation with the City of Wayne, the town hall meeting will focus on celebrating the past, looking toward the future, and identifying ways to call attention to all our community successes.

The Wayne Chicken Show as a Local Legacy will be documented for the Library of Congress. Millennium plans will be coordinated! And Wayne's participation in the 1999 Nebraska Community Improvement Program will become a reality-all at the Town Hall meeting!

Gun violence will continue

Dear Editor,

Apparently our long nightmare of gun violence is going to continue unabated, thanks to the spineless game-playing dodos in Congress who clearly are not representatives of the youth and people of this country, but instead are bought and paid for representatives of the NRA.

But let that fake Moses and the NRA sickos crow for a while longer. Eventually, we'll catch up to the rest of the civilized world and have gun laws that make sense like those in Great Britain, where private ownership of handguns and assorted firearms manufactured solely to kill human beings is strictly illegal.

Then we can add an 11th Commandment to those to be displayed on schoolroom walls: Thou Shalt Not Bear Arms.

To reduce child fatalities

Goldenrod Hills helps in drive

Each year in America, around 1,800 children ages 14 and under are killed as occupants in motor vehicle crashes. Child safety seats when used in automobiles, however, reduce infant fatalities by 71 percent and child fatalities by 54 percent. Goldenrod Hills Community Services is taking part in a campaign to reduce the number of children who are killed and seriously injured as a result of improper child safety seat use.

Susan Fink, Family Services Coordinator in the Norfolk satellite office of Goldenrod Hills, has recently completed a certification process to become a Child Passenger Safety Technician. Her certification process and week-long training included participation in two car safety events, written tests, hands-on tests and field experience.

The training course was offered by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and Nebraska SAFE KIDS. SAFE KIDS is a nationwide effort to train specialists and educate families about child passenger safety (CPS). Fink was among the first class to complete the course.

As a CPS Technician, Fink's responsibilities include participating in, conducting or supervising child passenger safety programs throughout Goldenrod Hills' 12-county service area, including Antelope, Burt, Cedar, Cuming, Dakota, Dixon, Knox, Madison, Pierce, Stanton, Thurston and Wayne counties. She will act as a resource for questions concerning child passenger safety, and has pledged to stay up to date on the subject.

The agency's car safety seat rental program recently received 120 car safety seats, granted from the Nebraska Department of Highway Safety. For families whose income is 125 percent of less of Federal Poverty guidelines, infant seats may be rented for $5, and toddler seats for $10. The deposit is refunded when the seats are returned, provided they are in good condition.

The training which Fink was provided impressed upon her the importance of correct child safety seat usage, she said. Nationally, 80 percent of car seats are installed incorrectly. At a check point in Lincoln during Fink's training, 97 percent of the cars checked had incorrectly installed child safety seats.

The most common mistakes found are that seat belts are not holding the seats tightly in place, safety belts are not correctly routed through the seats, children are not harnessed tightly into safety seats, and locking clips are not used or are used incorrectly. The ways in which infant and child safety seats should be installed vary by brands of safety seats and models of cars, Fink said.

In Nebraska, a child must be securely buckled into a safety seat until he or she reaches 40 pounds or four years of age, whichever comes first. Infant-only safety seats are used for infants who weigh less than 20 pounds, and must face rearward. Convertible seats must face forward for children who weigh between 20 and 40 pounds, and rearward for infants who weigh less than 20 pounds.

Booster seats are for children who have outgrown convertible seats, and who weigh between 40 and 60 pounds. Safety belts are for older children. The lap belt must stay low over the thighs and the shoulder belt should not cross the neck or face.

Some points to remember to be sure your child is riding safely:

"Never secure an infant in the front seat of a vehicle which has a passenger air bag.

"Never use a car seat that has been involved in a crash.

"Route the safety belt correctly through the car seat.

Correctly buckle the car seat into the vehicle.

"Get a tight fit—the seat should not move more than one inch from side to side.

"Check your vehicle owner's manual to see if you need a locking clip. Not all safety belts will secure your car seat without it.

If you have any questions, call the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's Auto Safety Hotline at 800-424-9393 or call Susan Fink at 402-371-0377.

Thanks is given

Dear Editor,

This is an overdue thank-you to Richard Metteer and his co-workers for the "good" and "thoughtful" job they did to erect a beautiful memorial on the south side of the courthouse to the people killed serving our country in wars.

Also, they put together a 200-plus page book telling of people who served and died for our country — something that hasn't been done before in our county.

These books are for sale to help defray the cost. Call 375-2386 or 375-2230 if you want a copy.

We have enjoyed looking at ours over and over.

Thank you for a job well done.

The Golden Years

At 87, Hedy Dichter devotes herself to preserving the records and reputation of her husband, Ernst, who died in 1991. They met in Austria in 1933 when he was earning a doctorate in psychology and she taught piano. Married two years later, they left for New York. Dr. Dichter soon won fame as a master of motivational psychology. "Why people are motivated to buy or do something," as his widow puts it. "It was he who coined the phrase 'put a tiger in your tank' to convey the power of a certain brand of gasoline." Mrs. Dichter is preserving his files that tell how he originated concepts such as focus groups that today "are completely integrated into American business, language, and society."

Wayne Juniors sport 14-4 record Wayne upset by Homer

The Wayne Junior Legion baseball team sports a 14-4 record through Tuesday's action as coach Jeff Zeiss watched his team compete in the Wooden Bat Tournament in Wakefield over the weekend before losing an error-packed game with Homer on Monday night.

Neihardt/Black Elk writers create at WSC

Wayne State College humanities instructors passed on knowledge of the writing process to students participating in the first Neihardt/Black Elk Young Writers Workshop held at WSC recently.

Under the direction of Nancy Crump of the John G. Neihardt Center, the workshop was made possible by a grant from the Messenger of the Healing Winds Foundation.

"It's more than just a literary project, it's a program focused to challenge young Native Americans to gain a greater appreciation of their history and culture and to inspire the students to enrich their lives through the power of words," Crump said.

She said this workshop will be a prototype for more workshops in the future.

"Wayne State College has been extremely supportive. Part of that support comes from the historical connection the college has with John G. Neihardt. This effort displays the desire of faculty and administrators to encourage young people. I think that WSC has taken a particular interest in Native American students and encouraging them. Being on campus has meant they get a chance to live in a college setting for a short period of time and get an idea of what the expectations might be at the college level," Crump said.

Jim Brummels, Eddie Elfers, Neil Harrison and Lisa Sandlin instructed a group of 17 Native American students from Central Omaha, Winnebago, South Dakota, South Omaha and Niobrara high schools.

In addition to writing instruction, students visited the Joslyn Museum, the Henry Doorly Zoo, the state capitol building, the Nebraska Historical Society and the Imax Theatre in Omaha.

"The field trips were planned to give an opportunity for recreation among students from Native American tribes and to give raw subject material for the students to write about," Crump said.

The State Historical Society tour focus was on the first Nebraskans exhibit and at the state capitol building the group met with the Nebraska Indian commissioner.

These experiences were pulled together by students during the Workshop through a focus on writing with the material they collected from their own and other Native American cultures in Nebraska and South Dakota.

Working within groups with other Workshop students has demonstrated that encouragement from their peers has been important, Crump said.

One Red Cloud student, Sesalle Red Owl said this isn't the first summer workshop she has attended, although it was the first on writing and did live up to her expectations.

"I like going all over and learning more. I love to write," she said.

Red Owl said she likes all kinds of writing and especially enjoys writing when someone gives her a topic or she is able to write about her friends. She said she enjoys it because she is able to express her feelings in writing.

"We just write about stuff to write about it and write what we feel," Red Owl said. It is how the Workshop instructors have been helping her with the process of writing.

"Actually doing the writing has been what I have enjoyed about the workshop," said Jeremiah Esser, a South Omaha High School junior.

Esser said Brummels had students choose a character, name things about that character and then build a story.

Another workshop participant, O.C. Earth of Winnebago said his story was about the students' trip to the zoo. He said he has enjoyed this entire experience.

"It's been interesting, all of it. We're learning how to put our thoughts down on paper. I've learned to remember detail when writing. I close my eyes, think about it and write it down," Earth said.

Putting ideas down on paper was also a big part of the Workshop for another student, Garan Coons of Winnebago. He said the most important thing he learned was how to move a writing project from the idea to rough draft and a final draft.

Coons plans to attend WSC in the fall and has earned a scholarship, which is unrelated to the Workshop. Coons said he decided to attend WSC because it was the right size for him, not too big and yet not too small.

"The college seems to offer a good education and help students. I'm looking forward to getting a good education and meeting new people," Coons said.

The four instructors involved with the workshop assigned writing exercises. The students had to reflect on some of their experiences and write about them, Harrison said.

"I think since it's required in all areas of life to be able to look back and try to communicate what an individual is experiencing, this Workshop will help students with more than writing," Harrison said.

"When you write something, you need to say something interesting with details. Many of the five senses can be used to collect details for writing. We're telling the students that even though the details are clear in your mind, it's important to remember you still have to write them down," Harrison said.

Both Harrison and Sandlin said as instructors, they tried to emphasize how specific detail comes in through the senses.

Sandlin said she's been pointing out to students that they need to be specific in writing and write about things that matter to them. She said their poems, essays, stories and biographies kept improving after revision.

"When they gave it time, it was amazing how much their work expands and grows like a flower does," Sandlin said.

Helping the students work on computers and with the digital camera at the college, Elfers said the students all compiled their stories and poems from the Workshop into a book. All of the students were able to take a copy with them at the conclusion of the event.

The week ended with a banquet where several of the students read their favorite piece of work. Invited guests included Charles Trimble, director of the Neihardt Foundation; Hilda Neihardt, president of the Neihardt Foundation and daughter of John G. Neihardt; Robin and Joy Neihardt, board members. Wayne State faculty members attending included Harrison, Sandlin, Brummels, Gretchen Ronnow and Catherine Rudin.

WSC instructor in charge

Wetlands project planned

Wayne State College instructor Mark Hammer announced plans for a wetland project to be located north of the tennis courts on campus. The courts are located north of 14th Street.

"The primary goal for the project is education. The wetland site will be used to demonstrate concepts for majors and non-majors in biology courses. I'm very excited about the project and the opportunity to provide a resource within a five-minute walk to the students. Prior to this project, we would have to drive somewhere for the experience. The close proximity to the college will make it ideal for students to become familiar with the wetland ecosystems and enhance their appreciation for wetlands in Nebraska," Hammer said.

Working on a connected project to discover how amphibians such as frogs will colonize the wetland will be Joni Dolezal, a junior from Homer.

The wetland project is funded through a grant from the Nebraska Environmental Trust Fund. The trust is funded by proceeds of the Nebraska Lottery and has awarded more than $36 million to environmental projects in Nebraska since 1994.

Awarded the grant in April, work will begin on the project in July. Construction will include excavating a depression of 5,000 square feet to make a very gradual slope for a maximum depth of four feet. Construction work will be completed by Milo Meyer Construction of Wayne.

Assisted by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, Hammer, selected students and volunteers to collect plant material from other wetland sites to relocate at the WSC wetland site. Some varieties the group plans to collect are cattail, sedges, bulrush and arrowhead.

"One of the challenges for the project will be establishing native while minimizing invasion of non-native plants," Hammer said. "This will be a seasonally-flooded wetland, not a pond. The marsh may dry completely in summer. This is natural for many wetlands in this region. The plants and animals that utilize the wetland are adapted to this natural phenomenon."

"We will be using natural control measures to reduce the amounts of mosquitoes at the wetland project. We will be constructing bat boxes and may possibly introduce the topminnow," Hammer said.

"The micro organisms present in wetlands break down organic matter and the plants take up nutrients which improves the quality of water. The WSC wetland may improve the quality of water running off the large parking lot. We plan to study this by testing water quality upstream and downstream of the wetland and after coming out of the wetland," Hammer said.

In Nebraska, 50 percent of native plants and birds utilize wetlands. Wetlands produce more plant and animal life per acre than cropland, prairies or forests. Since gaining statehood in 1867, Nebraska has lost 35 percent of its wetlands until 1980.

Wound Healing

Effects of Aloe Gel

We obtain two very different products from the aloe plant. One is aloe latex - also known as aloe juice or simply aloe. This bitter yellow material is a potent laxative. The other product is aloe gel - also known as aloe vera, aloe mucilage, or aloe vera extract (a diluted form of the gel). Many authorities believe that fresh aloe gel has wound healing properties. There are questions regarding the effectiveness of aloe gel in commercial sunburn lotions and cosmetics. Some individuals grow aloe house plants in order to have fresh juice from leaves for use on minor burns and wounds.

Aloe may speed wound healing for a variety of reasons. Chemicals in aloe gel may inhibit production of thromboxane which slows burn healing. Enzymes in fresh aloe gel may relieve pain and decrease redness and swelling by inhibiting certain proteases in the body and clearing superoxide radicals. The moisturizing effects of aloe gel may play a role in wound healing, and mild antimicrobial activity may yield beneficial outcomes. Few adverse effects have been reported with aloe-gel use.

Communities and regions sign up to join the NCIP

Allen, Wakefield, and Wayne are among 84 communities and nine multi-community regions signing up for the 1999 Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP), which provides state-wide recognition for outstanding community and economic development efforts.

This year, NCIP is joining state and national millennium celebrations by sponsoring one-time 20th Century Awards to commemorate 100 years of outstanding volunteer accomplishments. The awards will go to "Nebraska Communities of the Century" and "Nebraska Projects of the Century."

"We've added these to the annual NCIP awards to emphasize the major role volunteers have played in shaping Nebraska's communities throughout this century," said Doyle Howitt, NCIP advisory committee chair.

Since 1963, NCIP has teamed with community leaders and volunteers by identifying resources, creating educational opportunities and providing state-wide recognition. NCIP provides Community Development Awards for overall outstanding community development and Special Awards for community projects. The 20th Century and NCIP Awards will be presented at the annual NCIP Recognition Banquet on Nov. 18-19 in Kearney.

"Communities have shown us there are three important components to community success: volunteer and leadership development, community planning and project design and implementation," said Pamela Mulder, NCIP coordinator. "These are the criteria used in judging the Community Development Awards."

Special Awards categories include: business assistance and development, tourism, youth involvement and leadership development, public works, environmental projects and awareness, community services, parks/recreation and forestry, and arts and humanities.

The program is a partnership between the Nebraska Department of Economic Development, the University of Nebraska and the following investor-owned natural gas and telephone companies: Alliant Communications, Enron, CTE, Great Plains Communications, KN Energy, HunTel Systems, Northwestern Public Service, Peoples Natural Gas, Sprint, and US WEST.

Questions may be directed to Pamela Mulder at (800)426-6505, (402)471-6280, or e-mail: pmulder@ded1.ded.state.ne.us

Area students attend Leadership Program at Dana College June 3-6

Jeanne Allemann of Wayne High School and Katie Barg of Winside Public Schools attended the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership (HOBY) Seminar at Dana College in Blair, June 3-6.

HOBY Leadership Seminars bring together a select group of high school sophomores from throughout the state to interact with distinguished leaders in business, government, education, and the professions.

At the Dana seminar they discussed a wide range of public policy issues, from the "American Dream" to school uniforms, and from America's incentive system to volunteerism. Guest panelists included CEO's of major corporations, television personalities, educators, coaches, politicians, and attorneys.

The goal of the seminar was to provide a stimulating forum for learning about the American free enterprise anytime and the democratic process, while broadening young people's understanding of their leadership potential and quest for self-development.

HOBY ambassadors are also challenged to return to their communities to perform at least 100 hours of community service within 12 months following the seminar. They began community service on the Dana College Campus, helping with recycling and painting.

HOBY was established by veteran actor Hugh O'Brian following a visit to Africa where he was inspired by a meeting with Dr. Albert Schweitzer. "One of the things Schweitzer said to me was the most important thing in education was to teach young people to think for themselves," O'Brian said.

This marked the second year that a HOBY leadership conference was held at Dana College.

Precautions offered for safe summer in the sun

The American Cancer Society has put together the following quiz to insure a safe summer in the sun.

I can stay in the sun for as long as I want if I am wearing sunglasses. False

Sunglasses are very useful in reducing the risk of skin cancer, however, they do not provide total protection from ultraviolet rays. The best way to protect yourself is to seek shade and limit time in the sun during the midday hours when the sun is the strongest; cover up with a shirt and hat; and use a sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Remember sunglasses to protect your eyes.

Since I don't sunbathe, there's no way I could get skin cancer. False

Sun exposure can increase your risk for skin cancer, but it is not the only cause. People who spend a lot of time in the sun are at highest risk for the most common types of skin cancers (non-melanoma cancers).

Occasional exposure (such as on weekends) to strong sunlight seems to increase the risk for melanoma, a less common, but more serious skin cancer. Those who have a family history of melanoma may be genetically predisposed and should take extra precautions.

Waterproof sunscreen will protect me even after swimming or sweating. True

Remember to look at the label. "Waterproof" sunscreens may only last for an hour and 20 minutes after swimming and/or sweating. If indicated on the label, some sunscreens may protect you for longer periods of time. Be sure to reapply as necessary.

I should put sunscreen on my newborn baby so that he/she will be safe in the sun. False

Sunscreen is not recommended for children less than six months old. It is better to keep infants in the shade and covered up with comfortable clothing.

I do not need to protect myself on cool or cloudy days. False

The temperature does not matter — the ultraviolet rays do. Ultraviolet rays are the most intense when the sun is high in the sky. Take the shadow test — if your shadow is shorter than you, the sun's rays are the strongest. Ultraviolet rays can penetrate clouds so it is important to take precautions even on hazy days and days with light cloud coverage.

The only way for me to protect myself from skin cancer is to stay inside. False

It is important to be physically active to maintain your physical and emotional well-being. Just remember to limit your time in the sun during the midday hours and to wear sunscreen, protective clothing and sunglasses.

The American Cancer Society recommends regular skin self-examinations. If you notice any change on the skin, especially in the size, color or shape of a mole, see your doctor promptly.

For more information, call the American Cancer Society's help line at 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit or visit the website at www.cancer.org

Winside American Legion Auxiliary hosts Flag Day supper and program

Roy Reed Unit No. 252, American Legion Auxiliary of Winside, was host to a 1999 Flag Day supper and program held at the Winside Legion Post on June 14. There were 40 in attendance including the Unit's 1999 Cornhusker Girls State Citizen Shannon Jaeger.

Jaeger is the daughter of Daniel and Gail Jaeger of Winside. Her grandparents present included Herb and Evelyn Jaeger of Winside, and Babs Middleton of Wayne. Her parents were also present. Jaeger gave an informative report of her week's activity in Lincoln and expressed her appreciation to the Unit for having been given the opportunity to represent the Unit.

A Flag Day program of readings, songs and recordings was given with President Beverly Neel, Chaplain Doris Marotz, and member Rose Ann Janke as presenters. Additionally, members of the Post conducted a flag disposal ceremony. Serving on the kitchen committee were Marilyn Morse, Lajeanne Marotz and Doris Marotz.

Recognized for volunteer time and talents in providing the new fence as a backdrop at the Pleasant View Cemetery in Winside were Auxiliary member Judy Jacobsen and husband, Legionnaire Ray, as well as Legionnaire Marvin Anderson, and Jeff Jacobsen and Harlin Bruggler, both of Winside. These persons put in many hours in organizing and completing this community project for the Auxiliary and they are greatly appreciated.

The Unit will enter a float in the Wayne County Old Settlers Parade on Saturday, June 26, and re-enter it at the Hoskins Centennial Parade on Saturday, July 3. Unit members met on June 21 at the Co-op storage building (across from Weible Transfer) to construct the float.

The Unit will meet for its regular meeting on Monday, July 12, at 8 p.m., at the Legion Post. Installation of officers will be held that evening. Everyone is invited to attend.

Help youth realize potential

Helping young people develop to their fullest potential is a major goal of 4-H. One of the tasks of parents, leaders and adult volunteers is to help youth find out what they like to do, and help them develop their expertise in that area. Often, this is followed by success.

While it is easy for some kids to reach their potential, others might need a little more help. Parents, leaders, or volunteers can do several things to help kids reach a little farther and really "make the best better." Here are several ideas:

Show confidence:
A cornerstone of helping kids do their best is helping them believe that they are capable. This can be done in several ways.

1. Give responsibility. Giving 4-h's responsibility is a nonverbal way of saying "I know you can do this."

2. Ask 4-h's for their opinions and advice. When asking for someone's opinion, one is demonstrating confidence in their ability to make a useful contribution.

Amy Malchow
Extension Educator
4-H & Youth

3. Avoid the temptation to take over. If an adult, leader, or parent does something for a 4-h'er on a regular basis, that the 4-h'er is capable of doing independently, the 4-h'er may get the message that he/she does not have the ability to compete the task.

Build on the 4-her's strengths:
When encouraging someone to do something better, break the learning down into small steps and build upon each strength as it is developed. For example, a 4-h'er might not be able to take perfect pictures the first time they are out with a camera. However, a 4-h'er can figure out how to load the film and center their pictures. One would focus on what the 4-h'er does well and encourage them to take the next step.

Value the 4-h'er:
A 4-h'er's worth is less a matter of his or her accomplishments, and more a matter of who he or she is. Letting 4-h'ers know that one admires their success but also shares in the disappointment of their failures, helps them realize that you appreciate what they do on their own merits. The youth are more important than exhibits.

It is also important to remind the 4-h'er that mistakes are part of growing up. The key is to learn from mistakes and keep trying.

Stimulate independence:
Being able to stand on one's own two feet is essential for thriving in society. In order to stimulate independence, encourage responsibility and avoid catering to young people. By requiring that they take the responsibility for their own actions, their independence is built.

Each 4-h'er has potential and by capitalizing on their strengths, one is being encouraging and helpful. Helping 4-h'ers and youth develop to their fullest potential is a goal of the 4-h program.

President Glennadine Barker presided at the meeting which was opened according to ritual.

Ten members answered roll call. Excerpts from the President's Letter, The Merlin, were read. Of special interest was the Americanism chairperson's information relating to the significance of each fold of the flag. For example, the eighth fold honors the mother of the veteran.

Also, a letter was read from Doug Christensen, Commissioner of Education and Director of Department of Veteran's Affairs (Keith Fickenscher).

Operation Recognition is a joint program honoring World War II veterans next fall. They are asking students to help identify relatives neighbor or acquaintances in their community who served in World War II but were unable to complete their high school education.

An application form is available by contacting the school superintendent or Legion or VFW commanders.

The agenda of the 72 Annual Department Convention of Ladies Auxiliary to the VFW June 17-20 at the Holiday Inn in Lincoln was included.

Members taking part in the Memorial Day program included Neva Lorenzen, Fauniel Hoffman, Verna Mae Baier, Verna Mae

Longe, Mabel Sommerfeld, Eveline Thompson, Elaine Draghu, Julie Grone and Leona Kluge.

The Programs are ready to go to the printer.

Safety Chairman Leona Kluge reported that with the warm weather, members are to take care of air-conditioners to keep their houses cool.

It was suggested and approved to meet at the Senior Center instead of the annual July Potluck. The group will meet at noon and try to have the Girls Stater talk to them. The regular meeting will then be held in the Pool room.

Grant received for eye exams

Even if you see well, it is important to have your eyes examined regularly. Since many eye diseases have no immediate symptoms until significant damage is done, regular eye exams are one of the most important things you can do both for your vision and your overall health. Eye exams may detect cataracts, glaucoma and retinal disease, and other health disorders such as diabetes, high blood pressure and multiple sclerosis.

Goldenrod Hills Community services has received a grant from the Pearle Vision Foundation which will help to make these vital eye exams a reality for those who find it difficult to pay for exams on their own.

A maximum of $75 per person will be awarded for eye exams and/or corrective eye wear for applicants of any age whose income is within 125 percent of the federal poverty guidelines, and who is not enrolled in Medicaid or a private vision insurance program. Payment vouchers from Goldenrod Hills can be taken to cooperating opticians, with the reminder of the eye exam and eye wear costs to be picked up by the applicant.

Anyone interested in learning more about the eye exam assistance may contact Family Services Director Peggy Montgomery at 402-529-3513. Limited funding is available.

Farm Bureau and Monsanto announce local Ag scholarships

Brandon Kai of Wakefield was among 50 students receiving the new Commitment to Agriculture Scholarship.

Brandon, who will attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln wrote of his commitment to agriculture in this scholarship application essay, "Agriculture is changing at a rapid pace, and it is an exciting area to explore. I plan to help the agricultural community grow and prosper."

The 50 students receiving scholarships are from 28 major farming states. The Commitment to Agriculture Scholarships are to further their education in the field of agriculture. The scholarships are the first awarded under a new program jointly sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Foundation for Agriculture and Monsanto Company.

"Supporting education in agriculture is important for these students, their families and the successful future of American farming," said Marsha Purcell of the Foundation for Agriculture. "Tomorrow's agricultural leaders are among these students."

Commitment to Agriculture scholarship recipients are from families actively engaged in farming who will enter their first year of college in the fall of 1999 and plan studies in the field of agriculture.

"Today's announcement further demonstrates Monsanto's commitment to farmers and farm communities in ensuring fairness and a level competitive playing field," said Shelly Aden of Monsanto. "Education is our best tool in ensuring that farm communities continue to gain the full benefits of new agricultural technologies. Investing in the education of these young people will help ensure American leadership in agriculture into the next millennium."

The joint program is funded by payments received from settlements with individuals or organizations who engaged in practices that violated intellectual property rights involving patented Monsanto agricultural technologies. These technologies include Roundup Ready® soybeans and cotton and Bollgard® cotton.

Nothing Runs Like A Deere!

"Blight should be treated now"

The most common and prolific disease in windbreaks the past several years in northeast Nebraska has been Cercospora Needle Blight that affects eastern redcedar trees.

This fungus disease infects older needles of cedar and juniper trees and causes the needles to die and fall off the tree. It does not infect other conifer trees species like pines, spruces, or firs. The lower and inside foliage is infected first and the disease works its way up the tree until only a small part of the green foliage is left before the tree is killed. Usually this takes a period of three to six years.

This does provide time to spray with a copper fungicide to control the spread of the disease and help the infected trees regain their vigor and foliage.

Trees vary in their susceptibility to Cercospora. It is common to see a windbreak where one tree is completely defoliated and dead while the adjacent trees are unaffected. The cool and wet weather in the late spring and early summer that we have experienced during the past numerous years increases the humidity and makes ideal conditions for the fungus spread.

Excessive grass growth in the windbreak and around the trees will stress the trees and make them more susceptible. This is especially damaging with smooth brome grass. Finally, the close spacing of the trees in a windbreak used to create a dense wind barrier causes stagnation in the trees and weakens the trees against the disease.

Controlling the Cercospora needle blight usually takes a double approach. First, the conditions in the windbreak that encourage the spread of the fungus needs to be addressed. Controlling the smooth brome grass, cutting out the worst and very susceptible trees and thinning crowded tree rows to an eight to twelve foot spacing between trees will help.

The second action would be to spray the infected and adjacent cedar trees with a copper fungicide during mid June and again at the end of July. This will give a protective coating on the needles to reduce addition infection. Common copper fungicides to use are the Bordeaux wettable powder formulations or liquid copper fungicides like Tenn-Cop, Cit-Cop or Camelot.

To have the healthiest windbreak, a combination of the cultural control measures and the spraying of the fungicide is needed. Thin the windbreak by removing the identified trees first before spraying and there will be better coverage on the remaining trees.

Two excellent references on the Cercospora disease are available from your local County Extension office. Ask for the NebGuide Juniper Blight Diseases, #G87-858 and the NebFact Prevention and Control of Cercospora Needle Blight Disease in Junipers and Cedars, #NF99-396.

The Loss Of Smell
Although the loss of smell, anosmia, may seem a minor disability it can trigger digestive problems, depression, and can put people in danger. The inability to taste food is part of anosmia and people with it cannot detect the odor of spoiled food. They should never save leftovers for more than two days. Marking the date of storage helps. They cannot smell leaking gas or smoke so it is essential that they have carbon monoxide and smoke detectors.

How to fit in daily exercise

Here are a few suggestions from the experts at the National Cheese Institute and the American Dairy Association on how to fit 30 minutes of physical activity into your busy day.

Remember to eat a well-balanced meal filled with nutrients like calcium. For example, a turkey sandwich with one ounce of Cheddar cheese is packed with nutrients that will give you that added boost to get you through any activity:

*Enroll in exercise classes. With so many new types of fitness classes, it's much easier to find a class you like. For example, try cardio boxing or kickboxing at the local gym or other community center.

*Exercise at lunchtime. Power walk or run for 30 minutes and then eat lunch at your desk.

*Stay motivated. Instead of watching TV or taking a catnap, exercise! Go to the gym for 30 minutes of weight training or take a brisk walk around the neighborhood.

*Recruit friends and family members to take part in the fun and spend time together as you exercise. You can work together to keep each other motivated.

*Move those large muscles in your arms and legs by moderately increasing the intensity of common activities such as gardening, dancing and pushing a baby carriage.

*Walk that dog! Just 15 minutes in the morning and 15 minutes in the evening will give you the recommended 30 minutes per day.

*Plan a picnic in the park and take along the soccer ball, basketball or tennis racket. Work up an appetite playing a sport that makes your bones stronger and then enjoy a healthful outdoor meal.

*When it's raining, go power walking. Take an exercise partner along and do some serious power walking while window shopping at the local mall.

*Leave the car at home and take public transportation to work - the walk from the stop to the office will do you good.

*After dinner, go on a walk with the entire family throughout the neighborhood and to the local frozen yogurt shop. Splurge on a low-fat chocolate and vanilla swirl topped with your favorite fruit.

*Fill a backpack with cool beverages and some nutritious snacks like fruit, carrot sticks, cheese sticks or granola bars and take a hike in the local park. Bring along a nature book and identify the leaves and birds.

*Play tag with the kids in the community pool. Swim some laps or have relay races.

*Jump rope. A long time kid's favorite is an excellent calorie burner for adults too.

College students are not making the calcium grade

College students may be hitting the books, but where calcium is concerned they are skipping school. According to a survey of 100 college students, more than seven out of 10 women and nearly three out of 10 men are not meeting the Reference Daily Intake (RDI) for calcium, set at 1,000 mg, or the equivalent of three servings of dairy each day.

Focus groups revealed that many students were aware that low calcium intake may result in bone loss and osteoporosis. The authors suggest that while many college students understand the benefits of calcium, few students realize how to meet this recommendation through diet.

Daughters follow mother's habits

When it comes to eating habits, girls seem to follow their mothers, according to new research. One study indicates that daughters often mirror not only the amounts of dairy foods consumed by their mothers, but also how often they consume them, and a related study found that girls, whose mothers achieved adequate calcium intakes, also reached calcium recommendations.

4-8 consume 800 mg of calcium a day, the equivalent of nearly three servings of dairy a day and kids ages 9-18 consume 1,300 mg of calcium which equals about 4 servings of dairy.]

Cheese adds flavor to burgers

Certain signs herald the beginning of summer like the opening of swimming pools, the end of the school year and the jingle of ice cream trucks.

But nothing trumpets the season's arrival like outdoor grilling. In fact, a recent survey shows that summer is the prime grilling season with more than 50 percent of Americans grilling out at least once a week.

And what are Americans grilling? Nearly 40 percent of those surveyed "flipped" over hamburgers. Americans' love affair with the burger dates back to its public introduction at the 1904 World's Fair. But it wasn't long before Americans fell in love all over again as slices of cheese were melted atop hamburgers to create the great American classic--the CHEESEBURGER.

Although the "true" creator of the cheeseburger remains a mystery, three restaurants [The Rite Spot Restaurant (CA) 1924; Kaelin's Restaurant (KY) 1934; and the Humpty Dumpty Drive-in (CO) 1935] claim credit for breaking out from the basic burger by topping it with cheese. Cheeseburger aficionados say it doesn't matter who first "topped" the burger-only that this classic was created.

Today, it's commonplace to find burger toppings like smoked Gouda and sauteed mushrooms or mozzarella and pizza sauce. The National Restaurant Association indicates "a growing demand for gourmet toppings including caviar, peppercorns, blue cheese and jalapeno-mint glaze." Capitalizing on this trend, the American Dairy Association has created two terrific twists on the traditional cheeseburger.

Whatever the summertime activity--backyard barbecue, picnic or family reunion--grilled cheeseburgers remain a perennial crowd-pleaser. Just remember to pile it on-- American, Cheddar, and Swiss!

Bone up on calcium, exercise

The benefits of exercise go far beyond just looking good. A calcium-rich diet, coupled with exercise, can make bones stronger and help reduce the risk of osteoporosis. Unfortunately, Americans aren't getting enough calcium and exercise.

In fact, not getting enough calcium can pose more of a health threat than Americans realize. According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, osteoporosis, a bone-thinning disease, is a major health threat for 28 million Americans, 80 percent of whom are women. Most people don't realize they have this bone thinning disease until a fracture occurs. One way for Americans to combat osteoporosis and increase bone mass is to increase their dietary calcium intake with an excellent source like cheese.

"By simply adding a single serving of cheese to your favorite meal you can obtain 20 percent of the suggested daily intake of calcium needed," says Ruth Carey, registered dietitian and fitness expert. "Increased calcium intake combined with regular physical activity work together to maintain strong, healthy bones."

Make the Fitness Connection

The question becomes: how much and what type of physical activity is needed? Consider this: according to the most recent Surgeon General's Report on Physical Activity and Health, more than 60 percent of U.S. adults do not engage in the recommended amount of activity.

Fitness experts from the American Heart Association, the American College of Sports Medicine and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention suggest that everyone should do 30 minutes or more of moderately intense physical activity on most or all days of the week. The experts also say that the 30-minute of daily activity can be divided into as many as three, 10-minute segments.

"It's never too late to begin a daily exercise regimen," says Carey. "Not only will regular exercise improve health but it will make you feel better, have more energy and of course, help strengthen bones."

To help build and maintain strong bones, experts suggest weight-bearing or strength training exercises like running, walking, tennis, aerobics, and weight-training. According to the special Spring/Summer 1999 edition of

"Newsweek," regular weight-bearing exercise can boost bone density three to five percent a year.

In addition to eating a healthful, calcium-rich diet, physical activities where bones are forced to support weight makes bones stronger. Also, weight-bearing exercises appear to stimulate bone formation and strengthen muscles that help support your bones. Regular physical activity also helps to reduce the risk of falls and bone injuries because it improves coordination, balance and strength.

Cheese Please

To help increase calcium for strong bones, find creative ways to incorporate cheese into a healthful, well-balanced diet.

"With so many different varieties, it's easy to eat cheese any time of the day for a powerful nutrition boost," says Carey. "For example, add shredded part-skim Mozzarella or Parmesan cheese to your dinner salad or include a one ounce slice of Cheddar cheese on your kids' lunchtime sandwich."

Carey has developed recipes for the National Cheese Institute and American Dairy Association that are perfect to eat throughout the day and serve as an excellent source of calcium by providing at least 20 percent of the suggested daily intake. Strengthen up with:

*Super Spinach Salad with spinach leaves, shredded carrots, broccoli, mandarin oranges and shredded Swiss cheese tossed with a fat-free Balsamic vinaigrette

*Power Club, a delicious and nutritious double decker sandwich with spinach, shredded carrots, mushrooms, sprouts and Cheddar cheese on whole wheat bread (recipe enclosed).

**Sweet and Cheesy" Cracker Topper with water crackers topped with different chesses, fruit and vegetable accompanied by yogurt

The National Cheese Institute (NCI) is the trade association for manufacturers, processors, marketers and distribution of all types of cheese and cheese products. Founded in 1927, NCI has 95 member companies, which market more than 80 percent of U.S. national and processed cheese and cheese products. The American Dairy Association (ADA) is part of Dairy Management Inc., the world's largest producer-funded marketing organization of domestically-produced dairy products.

Kids need milk, not soft drinks in their diets

Kids and teens who guzzle too many soft drinks are falling short of important nutrients. A new study analyzing food and beverage intakes of children ages 2 to 18 found that kids who consumed more than 13 ounces of soft drink each day (about the equivalent of one can) had significantly lower intakes of calcium, riboflavin, vitamin A and phosphorus compared to those kids who drank one can or less each day.

Milk provides these nutrients and the authors suggest soft drinks may be replacing milk, particularly in the diets of adolescents. According to the National Academy of Sciences, teens need 1,300 mg of calcium, or the equivalent of four servings of milk each day, to meet calcium recommendations.

[Editor's note: One cup of lowfat milk provides 30% of the daily value (DV) for calcium, 24% of the DV for riboflavin, 16% of the DV for vitamin A, and 20% of the DV for phosphorus.]

Enjoying the sun

This herd of dairy cattle was photographed as they were enjoying the recent warm, sunny weather. The majority of the dairy cattle in this area are housed in confinement lots rather than allowed to graze in pastures.

Calcium important for all ages

Calcium is important whether you are two or 102 years old! As children are growing, it is especially important that they get adequate calcium to develop strong bones to last a lifetime.

It can be easy-and fun- to make sure kids get at least three glasses of milk a day to provide the calcium they need for strong and healthy bones.

Here are some quick, tasty tips to help make sure your children meet their daily calcium needs.

*Sneak it in. Boost nutrient intake by sneaking milk into your children's favorite recipes. For example, add milk instead of water when making oatmeal, soups or chowders.

*Make milk a family affair. Set an example for your children by drinking milk yourself. You will help build more strong bones than just your own.

*Add a little color. Brighten up a glass of milk by adding the colors of the rainbow. Simply add syrup such as chocolate or strawberry or add a fruit puree such as blueberry or peach to crate a colorful drink your child will love. Or, buy flavored milk, which has the same amount of calcium and other essential nutrients as regular milk.

*Chill out. Team up with your child to create a cool, refreshing, calcium-packed smoothie. Place equal parts milk and ice in the blender with your child's favorite fruit. Blend until smooth and then ask your child to put on a thick, fruity milk mustache.

*Slam dunk it. Cut up fruit and vegetables and have your child dip them into plain or vanilla yogurt. Kids will love it!

Get started increasing your kids calcium by making this recipe with your kids!

Organizations make sure Nebraskans' 'Got Milk®'

Two Nebraska organizations have integrated their programming to ensure that Nebraska's "Got Milk?®".

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council of Nebraska are United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) approved programs that ensure that the great taste and nutritional value of dairy products stay at the forefront of consumers' minds. Both programs are funded by dairy producer dollars.

Both organizations have existed in Nebraska since the early 1940s, and will maintain separate incorporations and missions. They have integrated programming to build an efficiently managed, strong presence for the dairy industry.

The two organizations will operate under the trade name American Dairy Association/Dairy Council of Nebraska (ADA/DC). As a member of Dairy Management Inc., the national dairy promotion and education organization, ADA/DC carries out national programs at the local level, as well as programs customized for the Nebraska area.

American Dairy Association of Nebraska focuses on advertising, retail and promotional programs. They work jointly with Nebraska's milk processors to carry out programs such as the "Got Milk?®" and "Milk...Where's Your Mustache?®" programs, as well as the "Behold The Power of Cheese™" program.

I want my mom

This holstein calf appears to be looking for his mother. Calves are generally taken away from the cows shortly after birth. They are then fed by hand so that the cows' milk can be sold.

Dairy Council of Nebraska focuses on nutrition education programs that highlight dairy's role in nutrition with educators, school food service personnel, health professionals, and the media.

"By integrating the programs of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council of Nebraska, we reach consumers with unified messages promoting cheese, fluid milk, and other dairy products. Ensuring that dairy products are an integral part of Nebraska's eating patterns is good for the health of Nebraskans as well as the health of the dairy industry," says JoAn Werblow, CEO of ADA/DC.

The Nebraska Dairy Industry Development Board (NDIDB) which took effect on Jan., 1, 1999 is the state promotion order that distributes Nebraska dairy producers dollars to these qualified USDA programs.

For more information on dairy industry programs, contact ADA/DC of Nebraska at (402) 592-3355 or 8205 F Street, Omaha, NE. 68127-1779.

Board members named

American Dairy Association of Nebraska and the Dairy Council of Nebraska have announced their 1999 Boards of Directors. First purchasers of milk (dairy cooperatives and processing plants) nominate dairy farmers to the director positions. Board members oversee the programs of the two United States Department of Agriculture approved promotion organizations.

The 1999 American Dairy Association/Dairy Council of Nebraska Boards of Directors are: Chairman, Doug Nuttelman, Stromsburg; Vice Chairman, Arnold Oltjenbruns, Osmond; Secretary/Treasurer, Verdell Stork, Arlington; Tammy Amen, Norfolk; Rex DeFrain, Fairbury; Randy Dodds, Belgrade; Norman Guenther, Crofton; Neil Gulden, New Ulm, Minn. (Honorary); Mike Henn, Norfolk; Loren Jons, Bonesteel, S.D; Max Kimmerling, Beatrice; Dan Mahnken, Kansas City, Mo., (Honorary); Ethan Rasmussen, Council Bluffs, Iowa, (Honorary); and Fred Temme, Wayne.

"Members of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Boards of Directors work hard to represent the interests of the dairy farmers in Nebraska. We direct the planning coordination, implementation and evaluation of programs that drive demand for dairy products for the benefit of all dairy producers in our state," says Chairman Nuttelman.

State dairy board members for 1999 are announced

The Nebraska Dairy Industry Development Board has announced their 1999 Board of Directors. Members are recommended by first purchasers of Nebraska milk (dairy cooperatives and processing plants) and are then appointed by the Governor of Nebraska.

The Nebraska Dairy Industry Development Board was implemented through the Nebraska Dairy Industry Development Act (LB275) to oversee the distribution of Nebraska's dairy check-off program funds to qualified United States Department of Agriculture programs.

The 1999 Board members are: Rex DeFrain, Fairbury; Randy Dodds, Belgrade; Max Kimmerling, Beatrice; Douglas Nuttelton, Stromsburg; Duane Sellin, Norfolk; Verdell Stork, Arlington; Fred Temme, Wayne; Joleen Tenhulzen Huneke, Wilber; Dennis Blank, (ex-officio), Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

Employees are named to newly formed groups

American Dairy Association/Dairy Council (ADA/DC) of Nebraska has announced new staff appointments. ADA/DC is a combination of the American Dairy Association of Nebraska, which focuses on dairy advertising, retail and promotional programs; and Dairy Council of Nebraska, which focuses on nutrition education programs for educators, school food service, health professionals, and the media.

Both organizations are non-profit incorporations based in Omaha. In 1999, the two integrated programming to create one efficient and effective dairy promotion program for Nebraska.

JoAn Werblow, M.S., R.D. has been named Chief Executive Officer of the two organizations. Werblow has been with Dairy Council for 28 years; first as a Program Director, and later as Executive Director.

Mary Korb, has been named Retail and Public Relations Manager for American Dairy Association of Nebraska. Korb has been with the dairy industry for two years.

Susan Drew, M.S., R.D. has been named Program Director of Communications for Dairy Council of Nebraska. Drew has been with the Dairy Council for 9 years.

Janice Strang, M.S. has been named Program Director of Child Nutrition for Dairy Council of Nebraska. Strang has been with the Dairy Council for three years.

Michael Roder, M.S., has been named Office Manager for American Dairy Association/ Dairy Council of Nebraska. Roder joined the dairy industry May, 1999.

Judy Poff has been named Program Assistant for American Dairy Association/Dairy Council of Nebraska. Poff has been with the Dairy Council for 10 years.

Lunch time

Evidence shows milk helps reduce cancer

New animal research shows that compounds found naturally in milk, called sphingolipids, may significantly reduce colon cancer tumors. Adding to the growing body of research on milk compounds and colon cancer, this study showed that three types of sphingolipids slowed tumor growth and decreased the number of tumors in different mice models. Previous research has shown that other dietary components of milk such as calcium, vitamin D, conjugated linoleic acid (CLA), butyric acid and ether lipids, may have cancer-preventative effects as well.

Super smoothie

- 8 ounces fat free milk
- 5-7 large unsweetened frozen strawberries
- 1 medium ripe banana
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 6 ounces orange juice

Milk compounds may help reduce ulcer development

In animal studies, lactoferrin, a protein found in milk, helped reduce the growth of bacteria in the stomach associated with the development of ulcers. Authors recommend further investigation of the lactoferrin in milk and its potential to prevent the development of ulcers in humans.

[Editor's note: Research shows drinking milk may offer other healthy benefits such as helping to reduce the risk of osteoporosis, hypertension and possible colon cancer.]
