Middle School parking discussed

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

Following a presentation by those involved in studying the issue, the Wayne City Council voted to proceed with drafting an ordinance in regard to angle parking around the Wayne Middle School.

Wayne Chief of Police Lance Webster, Public Works Superintendent Vern Schultz and City Inspector/Planner George Ellyson presented a concept plan for parking at the Middle School.

The plan calls for angle parking on Fourth Street, five angle parking stalls on Sherman Street and eight angle parking stalls on Douglas Street.

In addition, a limited number of off-street parking spaces will be located in the northeast corner of the block and buses will load and unload on school property rather than on the street.

Council also passed a resolution approving the purchase of property at Fifth and Walnut Streets owned by Mary Longe.

The property will be demolished and then made available for redevelopment.

Councilmen Verdel Lutt and Wil Wiseman both questioned the purchase.

Lutt said he was opposed to the city becoming involved in real estate. He told the council that this was the third such purchase by the city in recent months and felt it was not something the city should be involved in.

Councilman Wiseman said that this was not the only dilapidated property in town and wondered whether the council had a plan in place for dealing with such properties.

"I think we need to take a closer look at what the council's goal is for dealing with these properties," Wiseman said.

The council passed two ordinances at Tuesday's meeting.

The first dealt with amending the city code in regard to trees. At a previous meeting council members had suggested several changes in wording before the ordinance could be finally passed. The changes are in keeping with State Arbor guidelines.

The second ordinance granted a six month extension to the franchise agreement between the city and People's Natural Gas.

Resolution 99-48 was also passed. The resolution sets the city's property tax levy at $ 546587 per $100 of property value. The amount is 1.6 percent higher than last year's asking and will mean an increase of $ 63 per $10,000 valuation for property owners.

Resolution 99-50 was also passed, approving Eisenbraun & Associates of Yankton, S.D. as the engineering firm for the first phase of the GIS

The Wayne Power Plant will host an open house on Saturday, Oct. 9 in observance of National Public Power Week, Oct. 3-9 and to showcase the new addition to the facility. The open house will be held at the facility on South Main Street.

Power still free

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

As a joint celebration of National Public Power Week and to acknowledge the completion of the new addition, an open house will be held at the Wayne Power Plant on South Main Street.

The event will be held Saturday, Oct. 9 from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

"We are very, very pleased with the way the project has turned out and would like the community to visit our facility," said Gene Hansen, Superintendent of Electric Production for the city of Wayne.

In 1996 three generators were purchased from a nuclear power plant in Long Island, N.Y. The generators were then transported by barge and rail to Laurel where they were loaded on trucks and hauled to Wayne.

Two of the generators were installed in the south end of the power plant's facility on South Main Street. The third generator was eventually sold to Pacific Marine, Inc., a generating company for the Marianne Islands in Saipan.

Nebraska is currently the only state in which all electric utilities are publicly owned. However, debate is on-going in the Nebraska Legislature on possible changes in

Kroekers help in missions

How did you spend your summer vacation? While most of us would answer this question with tales of visiting relatives, camping, exploring amusement parks, or going on sightseeing adventures — the Kroeker Family has a different story to tell.

The family experienced four adventures of sharing God's love and His word with people around the world.

Faith, a sophomore at Wayne-Carroll High School, spent just over eight weeks preparing and traveling to Mt. Kilimanjaro in Tanzania, East Africa. Faith's mission: Share the Gospel with the people of Africa. Faith spent most of her time with the Chagga tribe. These people are very poor, living in mud huts with tin roofs and open windows and doors.

It was winter when Faith arrived with temperatures ranging from the 40's at night to the 60's around noon (if the sun was shining). Even in these cold conditions, the Chagga's clothes are very thin and ragged. Most people are barefoot or wear flip-flops.

Faith, and her team of 31 teens and 5 leaders, would share God's word with puppet shows, mimes, songs, the "Gospel" drama, and the "Jesus Film." These were all very powerful tools for the Africans who had never read the Bible before.

The Wayne, Nebraska connection to Tanzania is very strong. Pastor Samwell Kivelu, a visiting Pastor to Our Savior Lutheran Church, spread the word to his family, friends, and neighbors about Faith's arrival. Everywhere she went, people were glad to see her. Faith was also able to spend time visiting Pastor Kivelu during her stay in Tanzania.

Charity, an eighth grader at Wayne-Carroll Middle School, left July 3 to prepare and travel to Jamaica. Charity's mission: To paint the Christian Fellowship Church.

Upon their arrival, Charity and her team of 35 teens realized that the Jamaicans expected them to paint the whole church! That task wasn't accomplished. However the sanctuary, balcony, exterior walls, dining room, kitchen, surrounding wall and outside bathrooms were painted during their two-week stay.

The preparation for mission work is as important as the actual trip. Faith and Charity spent time at "boot camp" to prepare for

College formed

Final step taken

Just one year after achieving accreditation, Little Priest Tribal College marked its final step in becoming an independent college with the signing of an articulation agreement with Wayne State College. This event was celebrated by dignitaries from across the region at Winnebago on Sept. 27.

"What this means for the college is that our credits transfer like any other mainstream institution and we have control over the distribution of federal funds," said John Blackhawk, president of Little Priest Tribal College.

"These are two major cornerstones in establishing an independent academic institution."

Little Priest Tribal College also wants to thank Wayne State College for serving as their North Central Association accreditation sponsor. Wayne State College President Sheila Stearns spoke at the celebration.

"Without them, we wouldn't have been able to get to this point so quickly," Blackhawk said. "We look forward to continuing our partnership."

More than 100 students are enrolled in the school which is named after Chief Little Priest, the last war chief of the Winnebago Tribe.

Founded and operated by the Winnebago Tribe, the school opened its door just three years ago. The college takes pride in their small class sizes, exceptional academics and supportive challenging environment.

Of the Herald

Reaching their goal of paying for their new Christian Education addition, the members of the First United Methodist Church in Wayne held dedication services Sunday. Bishop Joel Martinez of Lincoln was present for the ceremony.

Keidel, Chairmen, all of Wayne, started meeting on the endeavor in 1994.

In 1995, they received the vote to follow through with the project and Peters and Associates of Omaha was selected as the architect. From January to April of 1996, they conducted their stewardship process to get the money for the addition.

their service to the Lord. The Lord's Boot Camp is designed to prepare everybody for the most primitive of that summer's mission trips. This means sleeping in tents; washing hair and clothes in buckets; adapting to heat, humidity, and mosquitoes; while building your relationship with God and your future teammates.

Creating this camp requires coordination, organization, and volunteers. This year Faith and Charity's mother, Deanna, spent three weeks volunteering at the Lord's Boot Camp.

Deanna's mission: Doing whatever was needed to help prepare team members for their assignments and "there was always plenty to do..." Deanna's fondest memories include the people she met, those people who have dedicated their lives to missions and have traveled the world to do so.

Not to be outdone by his daughters and his wife, Cal, Pastor of Calvary Bible Evangelical Free Church, spent his summer preparing and traveling to Lodz, Poland. Cal's mission: Helping citizens of Lodz speak English and develop a personal relationship with Christ.

To prepare for this mission trip, Cal and his team spent 11 weeks in Evangelism Training and in learning about the Polish culture. While in Lodz, four levels of English were taught: entry-level, beginner, intermediate, and advanced.

Pastor Kroecker's advanced class consisted of teenagers, doctors, pharmacists, and college professors. His students were multi-lingual, having learned English (and a variety of other languages) in a formal school setting and now eager to become verbally fluent in English. "Teaching conversational English helps us to build close relationships with people in order to share the Gospel with them."

Those who would like to know more about these summer mission adventures are invited to join the congregation this Sunday, Oct. 3 for a celebration honoring the Kroecker family and other Calvary Bible Summer Ministries.

The event will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Calvary Bible Evangelical Free Church at Fifth and Lincoln Streets in Wayne.

Home made ice cream and pie will be served.

Charity Kroecker sits in the room where she slept with 20 other girls. While in Jamaica, Charity helped paint a church.

Mapping Based System for the city.

Council members Lutt and Jane O'Leary voiced concern that the project should be opened to formal bids.

City Inspector / Planner Ellyson told the council that he had spoken with the Yankton firm and had seen work they had done. He also told council that the monumentation work that would be done was just the first of five phases of the project that would take approximately three years to complete. The cost of the total project is estimated between $75 - 100,000.

Sidewalk repair and construction was deferred on two separate properties. Due to a protracted dispute with a property owner and late season water main construction, the construction of sidewalk was deferred until the spring of 2000.

Building to be dedicated

Wayne State College officials will dedicate the College's newest academic building on Friday, Oct. 1, at 4 p.m. The Studio Arts Building combined an existing structure with new design components to make an outstanding teaching and learning facility.

"We are delighted to be able to have such a terrific place to work," said Pearl Hansen, interim division head of fine arts at WSC. Hansen noted the building offers unity to the art department by allowing students to create in one location rather than in five or six places across campus.

"This will greatly enhance intellectual conversations and provide opportunities for faculty and students to collaborate on their works," Hansen said.

The facility houses a computer lab for graphic design classes, studios for sculpture, painting, printmaking, drawing, as well as a metals and jewelry crafts area. Five faculty offices and a student lounge area are also in the building.

The Studio Arts Building project was funded in large part by donations to the Wayne State Foundation.

"The friends and alumni of Wayne State College contributed more than one million dollars to the renovation of the building," said Lea Clausen, director of development for the Wayne State College Foundation. Clausen commented the total cost of the project was $1,630,700.

The Studio Arts Building is located northwest of Conn Library on the WSC campus. Dedication of the building will be held at the building's north entrance. Keri Hess, a graduate student in fine arts will speak on behalf of WSC students. Remarks will also be made by Dr. Sheila Stearns, WSC president and Dr. Pearl Hansen. Lea Clausen will emcee.

Harold Frey of Pierce will be recognized during the ceremony for his contributions to this project and other Wayne State efforts. The graphic arts lab in the building will be named in his honor.

Herb and Sherry Mignery will also be recognized. Herb Mignery created the Heritage Plaza sculpture, which now stands near the center of campus. He worked on the larger than life bronze in the power plant building prior to the renovation project. The Mignerys will have the Studio Arts Building Sculpture Studio named in their honor. Following the ribbon cutting, tours will be available and a reception will be held.

Church

Sanctuary was air conditioned. In July, of the same year, a groundbreaking ceremony for the new addition was held. In May, 1997, the stained glass in the existing church was cleaned and repaired.

The new Christian Education addition was built early in 1997 and in August, of that year, a consecration ceremony took place. R. L. Fauss of Fremont did the general contracting.

Sunday School classes began in the new addition in September, 1997.

More upgrading continued in September, 1998, with painting trim and tuck pointing the brick on the original church.

The last loan was repaid in August, 1999, leaving the church debt free. Total cost of the addition and upgrading was $596,500. Money for the projects was raised through pledges from members and by money loaned by members; only a small amount was actually borrowed through a bank.

To help in the money raising process, an outside consultant was hired to help ready members for pledging. "First Fruits Sunday" was held April 7, 1996 and members were asked then to turn in their pledges. Cash on hand at that point totaled $105,000 which carried the projects awhile before money had to be borrowed. Along the way, two auctions were held to assist with the fund raising process.

The new addition consists of two levels covering 6,700 square feet and connects to the original church.

The addition includes an elevator between floors in the new section, a self-contained nursery (so adults and children don't have to leave little ones), a teachers work supply room, rest rooms on both levels, and 11 classrooms concentrating on early childhood grades and adults. (The High School grades still meet in the existing church). The library is also in the lower level of the existing church.

Becky Keidel spoke on the concerns which prompted a building committee to form and steer the adding on process. She said the Sunday School area was cramped. As those attending grew in number, there wasn't enough room to start new classes. Adult and college classes could be formed if there was more room.

"It had been on the minds of many for a long time to add on," Keidel said. "It was a wonderful, collaborative, collective effort we had in regard to the new addition. The project was supported financially and we feel good that it took just over three years to be re-paid. We were also delighted that the Bishop could attend the ceremony."

There were several activities held Sunday as part of the celebration ceremony. Bishop Martinez gave the sermon at the 9:30 service and District Supt. Marvin Koelling also had a part in the service, a mortgage burning was held, all four choirs (both of the children's choirs, high school, and adult) sang during the service and were accompanied on three pianos by Colleen Jeffries, Deneil Parker, and Shelley Gilliland, 50-year members were recognized, cake was served in the Fellowship Hall after the service, a pot luck dinner was held at noon, and a community open house was held from 2-4 p.m.

Also attending the events were former Pastor Ken Edmonds and his wife Bobbi of North Kansas City, Mo. Pastor Edmonds served from 1974 to 1983 at First United Methodist Church in Wayne. He retired in 1995 from pastoral duties and resides in Kansas City.

Public power unique to Nebraska

Public power is as unique to Nebraska as Cornhusker football. While Nebraska football has had a rich and successful tradition for decades, public power has reliably and inexpensively served the electricity needs of citizens in the state for more than 60 years. Both public power and Nebraska football are distinctive parts of the state's heritage.

In the years ahead, the role of public power in Nebraska could change. The State Legislature is studying the future of the electric utility industry and is expected to make recommendations at the end of 1999. Nebraska is the only state in the country entirely served by public power. Nebraska utilities are responsible to their owners, the citizens of the state, not stockholders. Our utilities operate in the best interests of their customers, not to generate profits for others.

Electric service is without question, a public necessity. Reliable and affordable electricity is absolutely essential to the survival of rural citizens in Nebraska. At the same time, every community in the state, from Omaha to Chadron, deserves economical electricity to meet their needs. As part of the public power month in October, we salute the utilities that collectively serve all Nebraskans.

During the early months of 2000, we can expect a healthy debate on the nature of this electric service in Nebraska - from whether to restructure the industry, to the timing of any changes that might take place, to possible forms the electric utility industry might take in the future. The results of a three-year legislative study of the industry and the discussion that will take place next year in the State Legislature are healthy for Nebraska. Successful change evolves from informed and educated discussion.

When this discussion begins to take place, we must remember the strength of public power and the benefits it provides citizens. Public power has a unique role to play in Nebraska. It helps keep many smaller communities thriving. The infrastructure to provide electricity to less-populated parts of the state can be expensive. One of the major reasons public power developed in Nebraska was to ensure these communities are served economically and reliably. We must not forget those roots.

As Governor, I plan to take an active role in these discussions as they develop between the legislature, interested parties and the public at large. I encourage each and every Nebraskan to become involved. Our citizens are the "public" in public power. Electric service in Nebraska is designed to serve all customers equitably - one of the primary goals of public power.

Today, we can be proud the reliability and cost effectiveness of electric power in Nebraska are recognized nationally. Electricity prices in Nebraska are now more than 20 percent below the national average and 12 percent below neighboring states.

We salute the efforts of Nebraska utilities during Public Power Month for helping our state achieve these competitive rates. At the same time, we must also understand that public power cannot stand still. As Nebraska's football team drives for a touchdown, so must public power drive to change and adapt to new conditions facing utilities throughout the country. Working together, we can maintain these traditions and ensure a sound and dynamic future for Nebraskans in the years to come.

Marine Pvt. David A. Lipp, son of James and Marcia Lipp of Laurel recently completed basic training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego.

He successfully completed 12 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

Lipp and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values-honor, courage and commitment, and what the words mean in gaining personal and professional conduct.

Lipp and fellow recruits ended with the training phase with the Crucible, a 54-hour team effort, problem solving evolution which culminated with an emotional ceremony in which the recruits were presented the Marine Corps Emblem, and were addressed as "Mannes" for the first time since boot camp began.

He joins 41,000 men and women who will enter the Marine Corps this year from all over the country.

It's doubtful that a Cornhusker will end up in the White House

By Ed Howard

Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Come on, come on. Get over it. What's all this stuff from Washington about Republican Sen. Chuck Hagel, or Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey, being eyeballed as vice presidential candidates?

As that comedian with the gawd awful voice likes to say "Can we talk?"

Are the Republicans, probably in the form of George Dubya Bush and his crew, going to look seriously at Nebraska's Hagel?

Come on.

They both bring some of the same handicaps to any race (or walk) towards the vice presidency. It isn't that Hagel isn't a fellow worthy of the job. He could do the job, such as it is. And, unlike Al Gore, the Secret Service guys wouldn't have to pinch him every few minutes to see if he's alive. Or, at least awake.

Ditto with Kerrey. He could do the VP job, although I could see him having some problems with some of the assignments. As in, Kerrey would likely tell the State Department to find some empty suit to go to all those funerals that are the hallmark of many a VP's career.

And, look at Hagel. He's always hauling off and telling a Nebraskan's version of the plain spoken truth about this or that.

Just recently he popped the GOP leadership in the mouth over some goofy budget plan. It was a variation on the usual congressional claptrap - hiding numbers or not counting numbers and/or counting them twice to make it look like there is a budget surplus, or a balanced budget, or whatever.

Anyone who isn't stupid knew it was the kind of arithmetic that would get an ordinary businessman sent to jail.

Both Nebraska senators have a proven gift, or fault, depending on your view, for using plain language rather than the Latin reference to bovine excreta. Thus, it isn't likely that a president would sleep particularly well with one of them just down the hall from the Oval Office - and the White House press room.

And, Kerrey!

This is the same guy who, as an up and coming young politico was pushed by powerful sponsors so he could be at a news conference with Sen. Chuck Robb at the 1988 Democratic convention in Atlanta. The idea was for everyone to give a big "Hoooo-Yah!" For Robb's proposal for some sort of mandatory service for young men.

Kerrey barely made it on time. Then opened up by saying he hadn't read all of Robb's plan, but that he didn't think much of it, based on what he had read. Bad idea, Kerrey said.

I thought Lynda Bird Robb was You'd be better off betting on Notre Dame for the national football championship!

You might also consider that given the success to date of the Freedom to Farm Act, either Kerrey or Hagel might well be hard pressed to do anything except go on record as favoring changes, at least.

Now, then. The upside has to do with the earlier comment about both Hagel and Kerrey being alive and well and demonstrating measurable personality pulse. The Democratic presidential nominee might surely find that a plus in some regard - whether it's Bradley or Gore or someone else.

George Dubya Bush might find it a relief to have Hagel around, since Hagel has a tendency to answer questions, whereas Bush likes to put a statute of limitations on them, or simply respond that, "I'm working on that."

Personally, I hope one or both of them do get the nod.

I like it when the national press has to hang around in a place where Twinkies and Berrerrites can't get sushi on every other block. (I'll give you odds that some bubblehead would ask Kerrey, right out of the box, if he had hopes of getting back together with Debra Winger).

Certainly, I've been wrong on occasion. I've got the worthless stock certificates to prove it.

But, like I said, I'd take Notre Dame and give points against a real team before I'd bet on a Cornhusker in the White House.

going to melt her eyeballs glaring at Kerrey.

Put that together with the fact that Nebraska delivers a whopping five electoral votes for the party that carries the state the ind.

Because of the fact that electricity in the state is provided by not-for-profit organizations, Nebraskans pay approximately 20 percent less than the national average for electric power and 12 percent less than neighboring states.

The city of Wayne has a contract with Nebraska Public Power to generate electricity when needed in times of peak demand or in case of electrical outages in NPPD's system.

During the past summer, the Wayne facility, which has a maximum capability of generating 21 mega watts per hour, was called into service on 18 different occasions.

"This summer we hit a peak load of 14,500 KW of electric usage, as compared to our peak last summer of 13,600 KW. This represents a six percent increase, which is fairly significant," Hansen said.

Hansen attributes the increase in part to the use of air conditioners and irrigation, but also to the fact that the city is growing.

"We have a number of businesses that have expanded as well as a number of new houses and apartments in the city," he said.

In an effort to help regulate the amount of energy used during summer heat waves, the city has a program to install load control switches on residential and commercial air conditioning systems.

"Currently we have nearly 500 systems with the switches and are looking for additional customers who wish to have the devices installed on their units," Hansen said.

The switches automatically shut off air conditioner units periodically to save on electrical consumption.

At the present time the electrical production portion of the city's electrical department has six employees with a combined total of 95 years service to the city. The electrical distribution portion of the department has five employees with 60 years of service.

The electrical distribution crews have kept busy this summer with the Highway 35 project. According to Garry Poutre, Superintendent of Electrical Distribution, the electrical portion of the project cost approximately $130,000.

In addition, crews have made improvements in Industrial Park and continue to inspect wires and poles for possible problems.

A distribution systems study is being completed to help the department with long range planning and in an effort to find out what changes are necessary for the system.

During the past year, the electrical department has completed an electric rate study to compare the cost of electric service to different customers.

As a result of the study, the city will now be using two different rates when charging customers for electricity.

A winter rate, which is generally lower, will be in effect for eight months of the year and summer rates will be in effect for four months of each year.

"The city is charged higher rates for electricity by NPPD in the summer and our new rates will more closely reflect what we are actually paying for electricity," Hansen said.

Customers will see the effects of the change on bills they receive Nov. 1.

The electrical department has in place a contingency plan to deal with possible problems that may arise in regard to the Y2K.

"We have turned in our plan to Nancy Braden, the Y2K coordinator for the city and feel that the possible worst case scenario would be that we would be called on to generate electricity for the city and surrounding area," Hansen said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Program needs volunteers

The Campus Awareness Towards Safety (C.A.T.S.) program is looking to add several members to its list of student volunteers.

Through the C.A.T.S. program, escorts are provided to faculty, students, and visitors when requested. Assistance is also provided for students with physical challenges. Volunteers are sometimes asked questions and may need to provide directions, for example.

The program, which won the Upper Midwest Region of the Association of College and University Housing Officer's Best Safety Program Award in November of 1996, serves as the eyes and ears of Wayne State College. The C.A.T.S. members walk around campus and watch for suspicious activity, potential disturbances, and physical or building safety concerns. The goal of the program is to provide a campus neighborhood watch program.

The program is sponsored by Campus Security and is supervised by Officer Jason Mrsny, with the help of several student coordinators.

Volunteers for the C.A.T.S. program are students, and many have been with the program since it started. Officer Mrsny is looking to recruit students who would be willing to carry on the tradition of the program throughout their time at Wayne State College.

Mrsny said that there are many benefits for students involved with the program.

"Many employers are asking what volunteer work has been done and what extra-curricular activities students have been involved in. Being in the C.A.T.S. program shows that the volunteer has responsibility and that they have donated their time to a good cause to protect visitors and students," Officer Mrsny said. "It is also a great way to get out and meet people."

All of the volunteers report to the officer on duty through radio communication. They are required to wear the designated T-shirts and windbreakers in order to be recognizable. They also carry a flashlight, radio and visible identification.

Currently, the program runs from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Monday through Thursday. Officer Mrsny said he would like to see interest in the program grow. With several new volunteers, he is hoping to be able to have the program run on Sunday through Thursday during the same hours.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the C.A.T.S. program is asked to contact Officer Mrsny at 375-7216 for an application, which can be delivered or picked up at the Campus Security Office in the Hahn Administration Building. A background check will be performed, as well as a basic interview.

Once a volunteer has met with Officer Mrsny and has been through the training material, he or she is paired up with an experienced C.A.T.S. member and begins their rounds during the specified times.

Students who would like to request an escort, or need the assistance of a C.A.T.S. member, may call 375-7777.

Luxford said he was proud of his team for hanging on to win in overtime. "This is the biggest win we've had for a while," he said. "We just need to keep moving ahead. We need to work on reducing the number of penalties we had (12-100) so that doesn't come back to hinder us."

Laurel-Concord will play at Plainview on Friday night.

Laurel-Concord football coach Tom Luxford talks strategy with Evan Smith (9), Adam Hartung (3) and quarterback Nathan Beckman during the Bears game with Crofton.

Wayne golfers win Metter invitational

The Wayne girls golf team captured the championship of the annual Blue Devil invite last Saturday at the Wayne Country Club.

Dave Hix's squad fired a 374 to edge Norfolk's JV's by two strokes. Columbus Lakeview was third at 383 followed by O'Neill with a 384 and Plainview at 397.

The rest of the 22-team field in order was: Columbus Scotus, 399; Norfolk Catholic, 411; Albion, 417; Pierce, 426; Wakefield, 430; Hartington Cedar Catholic, 438; Wayne JV's, 444; Elkhorn Valley, 460; South Sioux, 461; Battle Creek, 465; Humphrey St. Francis, 465; Madison, 468; Wayne JV's #2, 474; Wahoo, 484; Bloomfield, 499.

Wayne repeated as tournament champs from last year with only a one stroke difference in score.

"Our young team is playing like veterans," Hix said. "They all take it very seriously and know what potential they have."

Freshman Amy Harder led Wayne with an 87 which placed her third overall of the 99 players that completed the 18-hole round.

Harder had two out-of-bounds penalties (four shots) and she missed a three-foot birdie attempt which could have given her an 82 and a three-stroke advantage on eventual champion Melanie Coulter.

"Amy really had a good day on the greens with only 31 putts," Hix said. "Monica Novak has been the most consistent player for us and has been striking the ball with confidence."

Novak carded a 90 and edged two other players for fourth place while Kari Harder was eighth with a 91.

Karla Keller finished with a 106 and Katie Nelson, 113.

Hix said Kari Harder knows she can play better than the 91 she shot Saturday. "Kari has the game to break into the 80's if not the 70's by the end of the year," Hix added. "Karla struck the ball well but she struggled on the greens with 41 putts."

Hix said Nelson suffered her worst round of the year but with a wedding she had to attend following the tournament she had a lot on her mind.

"All of the district teams were here with the exception of Blair," Hix said. "Our next two invites will be the toughest of the year with Columbus Scotus on Thursday and Oakland-Craig on Saturday."

Hix said he was pleased with the play of his JV teams. "Megan Summerfield put together her best round of the year with a 105," Hix said. "She has moved up to sixth on our team and is pushing for that fifth spot."

The JV players with scores included: Summerfield (105); Kristin Hix (108); Erin Arneson (108); Lindsey Stollenberg (109); Kari Mitchell (110); Monica Boehle (116); Molly Muir (120); Kelly Mitchell (142).

Hix said he appreciated all of the help received from hosting the tournament.

"Our girls really appreciated the help from Troy by donating the course for the tournament, the parents for manning the concession booth and to Ken Dahl and crew for the good course conditions as well as the scorers and other volunteers."

Wayne will be the host of the district tournament on Tuesday.

Kari Harder will tee off at 9 a.m. with Monica Novak starting at 9:10 a.m.

Amy Harder follows at 9:20 a.m. and Karla Keller at 9:40 a.m. and Katie Nelson at 9:50 a.m. All 63 golfers will tee off on hole number one.

Allen gridders beaten by Wausa; Record 0-4

The Allen Eagles football team fell to 0-4 on the year with a 58-13 win over Wausa last Friday night.

The Eagles fell behind by a 42-0 margin in the second quarter before Micky Oldenkamp scored on a 68-yard kickoff return to make the half-time score, 42-7.

Allen did score first in the third quarter on a Joe Sullivan 45-yard scoring run before Wausa scored the game's final two touchdowns.

"We played a real good team in Wausa," coach Doug Wemhoff said. "They were much bigger than we were but we still played hard."

Wemhoff said his Eagles had no fumbles which was something they worked hard in practice on all week.

"We seem to get better each week on offense which is all I can ask and our kick return teams are doing a great job."

Wemhoff said his young squad is getting better on defense as well, hitting hard with the leadership of Joe Sullivan, Micky Oldenkamp and Adam Gensler.

"Defense will be the objective this week in practice," Wemhoff added. "You don't have a good chance to win a game when you get behind by 20-30 points."

Sullivan led the Eagles against Wausa with 62 yards on nine carries while Oldenkamp added 27 and Gensler, 15. Oldenkamp was 3-9 for 18 yards with Gensler, Jeff Robinson and Andrew Purnell each catching one pass.

Defensively, Sullivan had 25 total tackles while Oldenkamp added 17 and Gensler, 15. Bryan Gotch had 12 total tackles and Purnell, 10.

Allen will play Beemer on Friday night.

The Winside volleyball team won two matches at their own triangular last Thursday, moving the Wildcats record to 8-4 on the season.

Winside defeated Newcastle, 15-10, 16-14 in the first match as Julie Jacobsen tallied 11 kill spikes while Shannon Jaeger had four.

Jacobsen also had three ace serves with Jessica Wade notching two ace serves. Shannon Bowers led the team in set assists with 10 while Jacobsen had eight and Jaeger along with Wade had four blocks.

"We came out a little slow against Newcastle and never really got the momentum going but we still came away with the win," coach Tom Moser said. "Some girls that don't get a lot of playing time got to see some action in the second game and did a good job of hanging in there to get the win."

Winside then defeated Lutheran High of Norfolk, 15-6, 15-7. Julie Jacobsen notched an impressive nine service aces while netting seven kill spikes and eight set assists.

Shannon Jaeger and Crystal Jensen each had two service aces and Jaeger had six kill spikes while Jaeger added three blocks.

Winside moved its win streak to seven matches after starting the year with a 1-4 mark.

"The girls were really fired up for this match," Moser said. "We were able to run some of the special plays we've been working on and that kept our momentum going."

Winside will play at Coieridge on Thursday night.

Kari Harder rolls a putt onto the green at number nine. The Blue Devils won the 22-team meet by two strokes.

Wayne State spikers fall to Neb.-Kearney

The Wayne State volleyball team fell to 4-8 on the season after a loss to Kearney on Monday night in Wayne in straight games, 12-15, 7-15, 4-15.

The 'Cats finished with 41 kill spikes while UNK netted 61. Rayna Nelsen led WSC with nine kills while Jodie Larsen and Lindsey Koch had seven each. Kyla Batten and Melanie Kershaw each had six kills.

Kershaw finished with 21 set assists and Batten led the team in serving with two aces.

Defensively, WSC was led by Koch with 14 digs and Kershaw with 11 while Batten and Janel Moody had 10 each.

Nelsen finished with five total blocks with Larsen and Jessie Erwin notching four each.

WSC will host Moorhead State on Friday night and Minnesota-Crookston on Saturday night in conference play. Both matches are slated to begin at 7 p.m.

Wildcats lose first soccer match of year

The Wayne State women's soccer team tasted defeat for the first time this season in the conference-opener at Northern State last Saturday, 1-0.

Justin Cole's team however, responded in a big way on Sunday with a 6-0 domination over Minnesota-Morris—a team picked ahead of WSC in the preseason poll.

Northern State broke the zero-all tie in the 80th minute of Saturday's contest.

"It was a hardfought game with both teams coming in undefeated," Cole said. "It was a tough loss to swallow because I think all the ladies know the outcome could have been different."

Cole said Northern State is a quality team but WSC outshot them, 11-10. "It was a really physical, intense match that had lots of momentum changes," Cole added. "We had them on the ropes for a while but couldn't land the knockout blow. These are the types of games we have to learn to win."

WSC was led by Mary McDaniel with two goals against Minnesota-Morris while Alicia McCall, Jackie Arnold, Abbey Kalblinger and Melissa Abernathy had one each as the 'Cats pounded Morris, 6-0.

Sarah Herrick and Brienne Abshier each had two assists for the winners which improved to 6-1 on the season and 1-1 in the conference.

"I was real pleased with the way we responded against Morris," Cole said. "With the day before's disappointing loss we could have easily packed it up but we did the 'exact opposite.'"

Cole felt his team made the statement they were better than what they showed against Northern State.

Cole singled Brienne Abshier, Jill Eschliman and Kelly Rotherham for their excellent defensive play. "We've only allowed one goal in the past four games," Cole said. "Their energy and intensity make it awfully hard for our opponents to get much accomplished on our end of the field."

Cole also complimented Anna Eberle for her goal play on Sunday. WSC will host Winona State on Saturday at 10 a.m. followed by Concordia-St. Paul on Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at the college field.

Jessie Erwin and Melissa Frahm team up to block a UNK spike attempt during the second game of Monday's match with UNK. WSC fell to 4-8 on the season.

Wayne State drops fourth football tilt

By Missy Pavlish
Of the Herald

Despite a record setting day by running back Elroy Brown and a solid passing performance by Jaime Jones, the Wayne State football team slipped to 0-4 on the season with a 42-28 setback at Winona State last Saturday.

Brown, a junior from Lincoln Northeast, rambled 96 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter which was the longest run in Wayne State history.

He finished the day with a career-high 147 yards rushing.

Chaka Smith scored the 'Cats first touchdown of the game on a 78-yard pass from Jones in the first quarter which tied the game at seven.

The host team jumped ahead 14-7 by the quarter's end but WSC field goal kicker Brian Johnson booted a pair of 36-yard field goals in the second period to cut the gap to one point before Brown broke loose on his 96-yard gallop. Jones converted on the two-point attempt to give the visitors a 21-14 lead at the 6:23 mark of the quarter.

Winona State bounced back to tie the game at 21 and then scored the go-ahead touchdown with just 10 seconds left before the intermission on a 14-yard pass play.

The host team would never trail again. After the Warriors went up 35-21 early in the third quarter Jaime Jones answered with a short touchdown run of two yards to cut the gap to seven at 35-28 but the final scoring of the contest came just seconds into the fourth quarter on a 31-yard run by Carson Walch for the 42-28 final margin.

"I thought we moved the ball very well all day," WSC coach Kevin Haslam said. "Our intensity level was very high. This was the best game we've played this season."

The two teams combined for 1165 total yards with the 'Cats garnering 563 and Winona State, 602.

Elroy Brown as mentioned paced the 'Cats ground game with 147 yards while Jaime Jones added 38.

Jones was 23-44 in passing for 365 yards and a touchdown along with two interceptions.

Chaka Smith also enjoyed a career-high day with eight receptions for 187 yards while Herman Gordon had seven catches for 86 yards and Dan Pugsley, four receptions for 55 yards.

"Jaime played very well," Haslam said. "He did some good things and showed a lot of guts."

The 'Cats however, didn't have an answer for the brother tandem of Ryan and Carson Walch as the duo combined for 373 yards rushing.

Defensively, WSC was led by Antonio Jackson with 15 tackles with Ashley Touissant netting 12. Cornelius Mitchell finished with 10 tackles and Seth Last along with Jason Jansen tallied nine each. Kirk Steffensen finished with eight and John Bohan and Brian Gohr netted seven each.

Steffensen recovered Winona

State's lone fumble.

WSC will look for win number one this week to culminate Homecoming week as they entertain Minnesota-Crookston in a 12:30 p.m. contest.

Crookston comes into the contest with a 1-3 record.

WSC averages just over 400 yards per game on offense while Crookston is gaining 287 yards per game.

Defensively the 'Cats are giving up 568 yards per tilt and Crookston, 324.

Despite the 0-4 record the 'Cats are well represented in the national stats.

Herman Gordon is third in receptions per game at nine while Brian Johnson is fifth in punting at 44.1 yards per kick.

The 'Cats are ranked 15th in the country in passing at 272.3 yards per game.

Winside comes from behind in 16-13 win

The Winside football team overcame a 13-3 deficit in the fourth quarter of last Friday's game at Osmond to defeat the host Tigers, 16-13.

The news was not all pleasant however, as senior running back Jon Jaeger broke his leg in the third quarter.

The first half was a game of field goals with Winside's Dustin Wade kicking a 29-yard field goal in the first quarter while Osmond's Matt Jochum kicked a pair of field goals in the second quarter from 22 and 26 yards. The Tigers went up 13-3 after three quarters of play on an eight-yard run by Bryce Dennis.

Following Jaeger's injury the Wildcats put Justin Koch at running back and the junior scatback rambled 77 yards in the fourth quarter and two touchdowns.

Koch's first score came on a five-yard run while his second score came on an 11-yard spurt.

During the winning drive the Wildcats faced a fourth-down-and-six situation in which Adam Hoffman connected with Aaron Lessman to keep the drive alive with about two-and-a-half minutes left in regulation.

"We really played well on both sides of the ball," coach Terry Bear said after his squad improved to 3-1 on the season at the half-way point.

"It was a tough loss with Jon Jaeger as he played a major role on both sides of the ball. Being a senior team captain he did a great job of leadership and he will be missed."

Hoffman paced the Wildcats with 87 yards on the ground while Koch had 77 and Dustin Wade, 58. Jaeger had gained 21 yards before being injured.

Hoffman was 6-11 through the air for 44 yards with Aaron Lessman catching two balls for 33 yards and Mike Deck, two catches for eight yards. Ben Lienemann and Eric Vanosdall each had one reception.

Defensively, Winside was led by Jeremy Jaeger and Scott Marotz with six tackles each while Nathan Suehl had four. Adam Hoffman had two interceptions and Eric Vanosdall had one interception.

Drink More, Cut
Bladder Cancer Risk

Drinking more water, coffee, milk, soda, juices, etc. reduces the risk for bladder cancer in men according to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine. Men who drank at least eleven 8-ounce glasses of fluid a day cut their risk of bladder cancer in half. Water intake reduced the risk the most. Water intake of six or more 8-ounce cups a day cut the risk 15% compared to those who drank one cup. Not only can an increase in fluids reduce bladder cancer risk, it also reduces the risk of kidney stones.

Theatre workshop will be at Wayne State

As part of the "Lessons of the Century" project at Wayne State College, Lesley Bentley, a WSC math and sciences alumnae and Ph.D. candidate in theatre at Bowling Green State University, will be facilitating a workshop on the Theatre of the Oppressed. The workshop will be held on Monday, Oct. 4 from 12-3 p.m. in the WSC Student Center's Niobrara Room.

Based on the work of Augusto Boal and Paolo Freire, the Theatre of the Oppressed Workshop is an interactive workshop which utilizes the tools of the theatre to explore participants' relationships to oppression and social inequality.

Through the games and exercises, participants enter into a dialogue using the language of the theatre. It is quite a profound experience for most, according to Bentley.

The issues raised will come from the participants' own community and lives. Participants will be using their bodies throughout the workshop, including a warm up, bridge work, and materials generated through the activity.

Bentley will also be conducting workshops at Little Priest Tribal and Northeast Community Colleges.

Community members, high school students and teachers as well as college students and faculty are invited to attend. Bentley suggests comfortable attire and says that no previous theatre experience is necessary.

Play to premiere at WSC

British playwright and Emmy nominee Bernard Kops' latest work, "Cafe Zeitgeist," will make its United States premiere Friday, Oct. 1, in Ley Theatre of Wayne State College.

The one-hour play, set in 1944 Hungary during World War II and the Holocaust, explores the roots of ethnic oppression and prejudice.

"This is a coup for the college and for Northeast Nebraska," said Dr. Andre Sedriks, director of Wayne State's Theatre Department. "You would expect this caliber of work to premiere on Broadway or another famous venue."

"What makes this premiere even more special is the timeliness of this play. The theme gets to the core of such atrocities as those that happened this past year in Kosovo and Serbia."

Kops' focus on the Holocaust and prejudice surface in many of his other 20 stage plays and 11 novels. One of those plays, "Dreams of Anne Frank," netted Kops the 1992 Time Out Award for best fringe play.

He won a Writer's Guild Award in 1995 for the radio play, "Sailing with Homer." His 1976 Emmy nomination was for the screen play, "It's a Lovely Day Tomorrow."

Recent performances of "Cafe Zeitgeist" by a group of Hungarian Cafe Zeitgeist, Roma (Gypsy) teenagers have received critical acclaim in Europe. The teens are from Southern Hungary's Chandi School, where Kops presented workshops in drama and acting. The school is the only European institution specially devoted to educating Gypsy children, only one percent of whom complete high school.

Wayne State's premiere will be performed by Wayne State students.

The play will kick off the college's week-long, "The Lessons of the Century," which will offer Nebraskans workshops and presentations on the history of ethnic intolerance. Scholars and researchers will lead campus and community discussions on the Holocaust, current ethnic warfare in Eastern Europe and racial and cultural oppression in the U.S.

Cafe Zeitgeist will be performed Oct. 1 to 3 at Wayne State. Other activities related to "Lessons of the Century" will last through Oct. 11.

Regional Children's Choir to begin

The Wayne State College Visual and Performing Arts Office, formerly the Center for Cultural Outreach, is engaging in a community project of interest to parents and teachers of elementary-age children.

A regional children's choir will begin on Monday, Oct. 4, at 6:30 p.m. The first meeting will be in Room 105 of the Peterson Fine Arts Building. All rehearsals will be on Mondays at 6:30 p.m. for 45 minutes to an hour. The choir will initially be under the direction of Jane O'Leary, however other WSC music faculty may also work with the choir. Parents are invited to attend the rehearsals.

The choir is open to northeast Nebraska children, ages 8-12, who like to sing. Each audition will involve singing the first verse of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" as a solo for the director. The purpose of the audition will simply be to determine voice range. Auditions will be conducted and/or arranged at the first meeting.

Most of the music will be secular, but some songs that have religion or culture as their source may also be used.

A concert is tentatively planned for December.

Parents may be asked to purchase some music, which will become the property of the child. Total cost per year for each child's music will not exceed $15. Some music may be made available free of charge from other organizations.

For more information, contact Jane O'Leary at the WSC Visual and Performing Arts Office, (402) 375-7581.

Meeting challenges

Families pull together

Many families manage to stay strong and happy despite the inevitable ups and downs of life. They are able to pull themselves together to meet challenges. Faculty at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Nick Stinett and John DeFrain, researched 3,000 families to find out their secrets. Again and again the families menting underway, maybe one family member is having trouble adjusting to their friends and atmosphere. By talking out the situation and being open, other family members can help that individual work through their fears and frustrations. TIME TOGETHER was the fourth major factor contributing to strength and happiness. Quality and quantity time go hand in hand in developing strong relationships. Strong families also find a balance between togetherness and individual time. These families may find it a priority to have at least one meal a day together, before each of the individuals run to do their scheduled agendas.

SPIRITUAL WELLNESS is another factor that helps families through troubled times. Strong families have a sense of a greater good or power in life and that belief gives them strength and purpose. Families may take the time to pray together each day or attend worship together each week. CRISIS AND STRESS was seen as the sixth quality that contributed to strength and happiness in a family. When strong families suffer serious crises and stress, they cry, get angry and are depressed but they are not overwhelmed. They are able to see some good or opportunity for growth in crisis.

For example, maybe the loss of income causes economic stress to a family and often times it seems that there is not a way to get on top of the situation. However, being without the customary income may cause every family member to pool their resources and help one another out in this situation. It may even allow for more family time together.

It is almost certain that at some point in a family's life, there may be some troubled times that they are faced with, but by taking the time each day to build family strengths, it will be a little easier to work through whatever situation is brought one's way.

tioned the six major qualities that contributed to their strength and happiness.

The first quality is COMMITMENT. Family members are dedicated to each other's welfare and happiness. Their support is steady through good times and bad. They work as a team, lending a helping hand to each other.

For instance, if there is a family member who is ill for an extended period of time, often times members of the immediate and extended family work together to help out and cover the responsibilities of the ailing individual. They often times do this without even thinking twice about the added responsibilities.

The second quality is APPRECIATION. Strong families frequently let each other know that each person is appreciated. For example, maybe everyone in the household has a certain daily responsibility that they cover, without even being asked to do so. Family members may encourage others and thank them for their contribution to the family by a simple thank you or even a pat on the back.

COMMUNICATION is the third strength. Strong families spend a lot of time in conversation and exchange information and ideas. They discuss small, trivial topics as well as deeper issues.

Iron and "Restless Leg Syndrome"

Persons with restless leg syndrome (RLS) have severe pain in their legs when they sit or stand for long periods. Pain usually goes away when the legs are moved. According to a report in Age and Aging, nonprescription iron supplements may help.

Blood samples from 18 elderly individuals with RLS were compared with blood samples from 18 elderly individuals who did not have the syndrome. The RLS sufferers had significantly lower blood levels of ferritin - a sensitive measure of the body's iron reserves. RLS sufferers with the lowest levels of ferritin also had the most severe RLS symptoms.

Fifteen RLS sufferers were given ferrous sulfate (a nonprescription iron supplement) for 2 months. RLS symptoms decreased. Researchers concluded that iron deficiency, with or without anemia, is an important contributor to the development of RLS in the elderly.

Northeast Community College Ag department gets donation

Northeast Community College's agriculture department is currently boasting a new crop and irrigation technology program which was inaugurated with the donation of a new Zimmatic Center Pivot irrigation system by Lindsay Manufacturing in Lindsay and erected by Osmond's Petersen Agri Sales, Inc.

The system was recognized during the ag department's annual barbecue held recently.

Gary Parker, president of Lindsay manufacturing and Henry Aschoff of Petersen Agri Sales were honored for the equipment and time donated by their respective companies. J. Paul McIntosh, member of Northeast's Board of Governors and Gerald Petersen, chairman of the Board, presented special awards to Parker and Aschoff for their contributions.

The irrigation system is equipped with an AIMS advanced computer control panel.

"This state-of-the art irrigation system will give our students the technology needed to complete the crop and irrigation technology program," said Dr. Jim Underwood, president of Northeast. "It's a tremendous enhancement to our agricultural offerings and farming operations."

"We are deeply indebted to Lindsay Manufacturing and Petersen Agri Sales for their generosity," Underwood added.

Chuck Pohlman, dean of the college's agriculture and technology division, echoed Underwood's sentiments.

"The addition of the Zimmatic center pivot allows us to train future and present employees for irrigation companies, dealers and farmers," Pohlman said.

"This donation makes it possible for Northeast to offer a crop production irrigation technology option.

Graduates of the crop and irrigation technology program have the option of obtaining employment in production agriculture including corn, soybeans, oats, alfalfa and specialty crop production.

Agricultural seed, fertilizer and chemical companies are also seeking trained crop production specialists to work in their field scouting sales, research and marketing divisions.

Irrigation equipment manufacturing companies and area irrigation dealers are in need of technicians for irrigation system maintenance, service and construction.

During the program, students learn valuable skills in crop management, insect control, pathology, soils, irrigation, pest management, seed technology and harvesting.

With an emphasis on the business of agriculture, the crop production option also includes courses in microcomputers, farm records, agriculture business analysis, marketing, buying and leasing farmland, precision farming (GPS/GIS) and farm business organizations.

The college's farm and greenhouse give students a training ground for actual experience in the latest methods of crop production.

Vacation was wonderful

When my pager went off this morning, it was a rude awakening. A week's vacation can do that to you. It can make you wish you never had to respond to a pager again!

Mike's sister has six children, five of whom are married. In fact, the grandchildren are coming quickly. The sixth, Nate, is a twin, and works for Radio Bible Class of the Air in Grand Rapids, Mich.

He brought a girl friend to his parents' fortieth anniversary last year, and we had a feeling that he had finally found THE ONE. We thought she was very brave to come to Nebraska and meet all of his family at once.

She must have liked what she saw because she accepted his proposal later in the year. When we heard that the wedding would be in Grand Rapids, in September, we decided to take a week to explore upper Michigan

By: Pat Meierhenry

Before we could leave, on the 19th, we hosted a cousin from Indianapolis and his fiancée who came for a wedding at Mahoney on the 18th. By the time I got all the beds changed and bags packed, it was 4 p.m. when we left. Our first stop was a Bed and Breakfast in the Amana colonies.

We explored these villages on Monday, then headed north. We spent a night in Galena, Ill., across the river from Dubuque, and then drove into western Wisconsin.

A friend had suggested we stop at The House On The Rock. We knew nothing about it, but figured it was right on our way and we had no time table. This was an amazing place! All I can say is, don't miss it if you are near Madison.

Then we went on to the Dells, and drove all along Lake Michigan to the north shore, across the bridge to Mackinaw City, and eventually, to Grand Rapids.

Oh course, we did Mackinack Island and the carriage ride. We ate pastries, and fudge. We ended up at a B & B just east of Grand Rapids, a delightful Victorian country place.

The wedding was beautiful, and we got to see all the great nieces and nephews. We had a leisurely drive home, and arrived in time to change beds again! The two construction guys stayed all week and fed the cat. Now, it's back to work.

A Salute To America's Pork Industry

Research continues at Ag Lab

In these times of stressed economic conditions in the swine market, producers are looking for ways to produce marketable hogs as efficiently as possible.

Mike Brumm, Swine Specialist and Professor of Animal Science at the Haskell Lab near Concord, has been researching the effect of phytase in swine diets.

According to Brumm, "in the not too distant future, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and state agencies such as the Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality will regulate land application of animal manures on the basis of phosphorous content."

Brumm, who has been doing research for the University of Nebraska Research and Extension Center for 20 years, has been working to find ways to reduce the amount of phosphorous in the manure.

"For swine, the excess phosphorous in the manure is due to the unavailable phosphorous in corn and soybean meal. The majority of the phosphorous in these feedstuffs is in a chemical form called phytic acid," Brumm said.

Pigs lack the enzyme called phytase necessary to break the chemical bonds to make this form of phosphorous available for animal use. Thus, the phosphorous needs of pigs is most often met by the addition of inorganic phosphorous sources such as dicalcium phosphate.

It is now possible to buy phytase and add it to swine diets and reduce the amount of inorganic phosphorous added to the diets.

"This often results in upwards of at 25-30 percent reduction in the amount of phosphorous in the manure. For example, with 200 lbs. of gain, there would be a .72 lb. per pig reduction in the amount of phosphorous in the manure," Brumm said.

There is also data available for chickens that suggests commercially available phytase has an energy and lysine sparing effect.

Research at the Haskell Ag Lab is being conducted to examine the impact of phytase additions to growing-finishing swine diets on pig performance and bone strength and whether or not phytase has the energy and lysine sparing effects reported for poultry.

Swine research at the Haskell Ag Lab also involves a cooperative study with the University of Kentucky in a number of other areas.

"Research and education is most critical in these very difficult economic times of low commodity prices and increasing costs of production inputs," said John Witkowski, Director of the Northeast

Pork chops are tops

Whether you're treating loved ones or friends to a special meal on a holiday or any day, a cook-out featuring the classic American pork chop will kick off the grilling season in high style.

"The latest trend in restaurants is a return to the chop house concept of the '50s," says Robin Kline, a certified culinary professional and director to the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "This resurgence has inspired more people to use cuts like a double-thick pork loin chop for special dinners at home. The best part is that great chops are easy to make on the grill."

The versatility of the pork chop provides endless flavor possibilities for both casual family meals and elegant get-togethers. Pork chops, typically available boneless or bone-in, come in a variety of cuts, including center loin, rib chops and sirloin chops.

Five star chops-

Busy families can also rely on pork chops for a casual and fast family meal.

Perfection on the grill-

For pork chop perfection, Kline recommends the following grilling process:

*Heat a charcoal or gas grill to moderately high temperature.

*Season or marinate pork chops as desired in refrigerator for up to 24 hours prior to grilling. If you're short on time, even a quick 30-minute soak in a marinade will impart some flavor.

*Position chops directly over medium-hot coals and close grill cover; turn chops once during cooking. Grill chops to medium doneness (six to eight minutes for a three quarters inch thick chop; eight to ten minutes for a one inch thick chop; or 12- 16 minutes for a one and one half inch chop).

*To ensure juicy, tender results, pork should be grilled to an end temperature of 160 degree F. Using a meat thermometer, cook until the internal temperature reaches 155 degree F. Remove from heat and let stand for five minutes. The internal temperature will rise about five degrees after cooking.

*Perfectly cooked chops will be almost firm to the touch with a slight "give." Also look for a slight blush of pink in the center and clear juices.

Meat global demand is expected to grow

Third World countries are expected to increase worldwide demand for meat in the next century, a Council for Agricultural Science and Technology (CAST) report concludes.

"In the big picture, the report has tremendous relevance to Nebraska as one of the leading meat-producing states," said Ken Cassman, professor and head of the University of Nebraska's Lincoln's agronomy department. He was one of 13 scientists on an international task force that prepared the CAST report, "Animal Agriculture and Global Food Supply," released this summer. Cassman's research on cereal production, food security and sustainable cropping systems are cited in the report.

The report projects total meat consumption in developing countries will more than double by 2020, increasing global demand for meat by more than 60 percent over current consumption.

By comparison, people in developed countries such as the United States already eat a lot of meat. Therefore, per capita meat consumption is projected to remain flat or decline in developed countries, the report states.

The prospect of growth in foreign markets is good news for Nebraska pork producers, Cassman said. Not only will they help feed millions of people worldwide, they'll be improving children's diets in developing countries, he said.

In agricultural and scientific circles, the CAST report is significant because its conclusions differ from previous reports, which Cassman said were based on less rigorous analysis of livestock production systems.

The CAST report found poultry and pork production use total feed intake most efficiently. However, cattle, sheep and goats are almost as efficient because they mainly eat grasses and forages people can't directly consume. That has been overlooked in some other studies, Cassman said.

CAST is an international nonprofit organization composed of 38 scientific societies plus individual, company, nonprofit and associate society members. The organization's primary mission is publishing scientific reports about food and fiber, environmental and other agricultural issues. CAST reports interpret related scientific research information for legislators, regulators and the media to use in making public policy decisions.

Sausage

All-American meal with international roots

Spending time with friends and loved ones often includes good ole' American outdoor activities, like baseball and barbecue. And whether they take the form of Polish sausages, bratwurst or the common hot dog, the backyard grill usually is filled with sausages.

While a grilled sausage in a bun is the ideal outdoor food-no plates, forks or knives are required- this casual cookout cuisine also is a perfect introduction to ethnic flavors.

An American tradition-

Sausage found its way to the push-carts and hot dog stands of America in the 19th century. In 1893, sausages became standard fare at baseball parks when Chris Von Ahe, owner of the St. Louis Browns, began serving sausage links during the game. American fell in love with this easy to eat, convenient and inexpensive food. Today, American annually eat around 26 million hot dogs and sausages in major league ballparks and consume around seven billion hot dogs and sausages throughout the grilling season.

The ethnic connection-

While sausage on the grill is undoubtedly an American tradition, the origin of the links is widespread. From Germany's frankfurters to Vienna's "wieners," it is likely that the North American sausage came from a combination of eastern European sausages brought here by butchers of several nationalities.

Karen Davis, youth communications manager of the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) suggests that discovering ethnic food in the backyard with your kids is a wonderful learning experience.

"Teaching kids to be adventurous with food is a great way to get them interested in the cuisine and culture of other nations," says Davis. "And it's easy with sausages because it's a food they already love."

Check your local butcher for a variety of international options, including pork sausages from:

Poland- Pork's naturally mild flavor hits home when combined with garlic in Polish kielbasa. Grilled russet potatoes are the perfect compliment. The kids can help prepare a slaw with Poland's own carrots and cabbage.

Italy- Fennel seed, garlic, nutmeg or coriander team up with pork in sweet Italian sausage. Hot Italian sausage has red pepper for extra zest. Serve with a macaroni salad and Italian bread and have the kids pitch in by arranging an antipasto tray with fresh veggies, olives and pickles.

Spain and Mexico- Chorizo gets its characteristic flavor from paprika, ground chile, garlic, cumin and coriander. A festive salsa coupled with chorizo sausage and wrapped in a tortilla is a great Mexican combination. Offer corn chips, guacamole and orange wedges.

Great Britain- "Bangers" are mild sausages seasoned with herbs. Traditionally served with mashed potatoes and onion gravy, England's "Bangers and mash" can be transformed into a fun outdoor meal. Serve the sausages on a platter surrounded by grilled red onions and potato salad. This family-style meal is a great way to celebrate any day.

Germany- Bratwurst combines pork and veal with ginger, nutmeg and either coriander or caraway. Top your bratwurst with sauerkraut and/or Swiss cheese. German potato salad is the perfect accompaniment.

Cooking the links-

Whether you call them bangers, kielbasa, wieners, frankfurters, dogs, brats or links, grilled sausages are a mainstay of Mexican cuisine and are especially ideal for outdoor cooking. For grilling perfect sausages, Davis recommends following these simple tips:

Always grill sausage over medium heat to prevent the casing from bursting and losing juices. Sausage is finished cooking when it's nicely browned and

Go crazy for kabobs

It's ironic that a summer holiday or any day often means more labor for the family cook. This year, a meal of easy-to-make kabobs will leave time to relax and join in the celebration.

From Indonesian satay to Italian spiedini, kabobs have exploded in popularity. Why? Maybe it's because the combination of flavorful spices and thrilling appeal to our new way of eating. Maybe it's because a kabob is bite-size and fun to eat. Or maybe we all just like eating off a stick!

For your kabob cookout, treat your family to a change of pace with great-tasting pork tenderloin. Pork tenderloin is one of the leanest pork cuts available and is easy to cut into cubes.

"Pork tenderloin is a great choice for a kabob party because it is so tender and versatile," says Ceci Snyder, a registered dietitian and the nutrition communications manager of the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "It's easy to cut into bite-size cubes or strips and works well with a variety of flavors. I like to skewer the kabobs before hand and let my guests choose from a variety of marinades and sauces."

Because of its versatility, the pork tenderloin kabob is the backyard version of

"one pot" cooking. For example, cubes of pork, chunks of corn on the cob and new potatoes can all be skewered and grilled.

"Kabobs are simple to grill because the food is secured on a skewer and won't fall through the cooking grate," says Snyder. "You can use almost anything in the kitchen, mixing and matching flavors to design kabobs with alternating colors and type of food."

Snyder suggests the following combinations to spice up the grill:

Italian- Create Italian Spiedini skewers with pork tenderloin marinated in olive oil, lemon juice and herbs. Red bell pepper and onion kabobs are the perfect foil for the pork. Serve on Italian bread.

Indonesian- Indonesian satay is a skewer of high repute. Thread strips of pork tenderloin on bamboo skewers, marinate in peanut sauce and grill quickly. Rice and a cucumber and yogurt salad complement.

South American- The Argentine version of pesto is called chimichurri, which combines flat-leaf parsley, olive oil, garlic and red pepper flakes. Marinate cubed pork tenderloin in chimichurri for an hour or two before cooking, then skewer and grill. Vegetable skewers of precooked sweet potato and poblano pepper chunks complete the menu with black beans and rice.

Chinese- Grill pork kabobs marinated in Chinese-style barbecue sauce alongside kabobs of pineapple, green peppers and scallions; serve with Asian noodles for a Pacific Rim meal.

Easy eating-

To make kabobs easier to grill and eat, try the following steps:

"If using bamboo skewers, soak in water for 30 minutes to prevent charring on the grill.

"Cut pork tenderloin into three fourths to one inch cubes for even cooking.

"Cook over direct, medium-hot fire. Watch closely and turn frequently to prevent burning.

"Meat kabobs may take less time to cook than vegetable and fruit kabobs. Plan cooking times accordingly. Keep cooked kabobs warm on grill rack opposite fire.

the juices run clear.

Ready-to-eat sausages, such as Kielbasa or hot dogs, are thoroughly cooked and only need browning and warming on the grill. Fully cooked sausages can be kept up to two weeks in the refrigerator in the original wrapping or four to five days if opened.

Fresh sausages, such as bratwurst, chorizo or Italian sausage, need to be cooked before serving. Grill for 10-20 minutes, depending on shape-links will take longer than patties. Or parboil in beer or water for 15-20 minutes, then brown on the grill for five to six minutes. Fresh sausage can be kept in the refrigerator for three to four days.

"Grilled sausage is easy to prepare and provides a simple centerpiece for a casual outdoor meal. With all the varieties and flavors available, it's easy to turn this American holiday into ethnic feasts," says Davis.

Ribs serve as centerpiece to an old-fashioned feast

Ever since Adam and Eve, people have had a thing about ribs. Maybe it's the built-in handle or the fact that the sweetest meat really is closest to the bone. Whatever the reason, ribs have been a favorite food for as long as men and women have been cooking meat over a fire.

Over the years, barbecued ribs have evolved into an American food classic and a great way to celebrate.

"You can't get more American than barbecued ribs," says Robin Kline, a certified culinary professional and director of the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "Of course, depending on which American you ask, you may be talking about an entirely different recipe."

Kline hits upon a unique aspect of American rib cookery. If you ask a dozen people what they think of when you say "ribs," you get a dozen different answers. While everyone agrees that they love ribs, almost no one agrees on what are the "best." The most obvious difference between ribs is the cut of pork.

Choosing the right ribs-

The hog is blessed with an ample mid-section and 14 pairs of ribs, resulting in a variety of pork cuts to suit any rib fan:

Pork Back Ribs-Also called baby back ribs-not because they come from baby hogs, but because the rib bones are smaller than spareribs-pork back ribs are cut from the blade and center section of the loin and are known for the "finger meat" between the bones. These are favorites of rib aficionados because they're meatier than spareribs. Plan on one pound per person when purchasing pork back ribs, which generally weigh between one and one half to one and three fourths pounds per rack.

Spareribs-Cut from the belly or side of the hog, spareribs are the least meaty of all pork ribs, but are prized for their taste. Plan on one pound per serving.

Country-style-The Meatiest variety, country-style ribs are cut from the rib end of the loin. Country ribs do not come in "slabs" but are sold in individual pieces. These pork ribs are perfect for those who want enough meat to use a knife and fork. A half-pound satisfies most appetites.

Favorite flavors-

The great rib debate doesn't end with the different cuts. From the Southeast to the West Coast, each region of the country has its own favorite flavors.

Add flavor minus fat

Rick Bayless, award-winning chef, author and teacher, must be doing something right. His popular Chicago restaurants "Frontera Grill" and "Topolobampo" are packed nightly with diners eager to sample his cutting-edge Mexican fare.

Bayless' success (which includes Chef of the Year awards from both the James Beard House and the International Association of Culinary Professionals) is based on a deceptively simple precept: bold, complex flavors unencumbered by heavy, fat-laden sauces or additions.

According to Ceci Snyder, a registered dietitian and nutrition communications manager of the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC), Bayless' approach is one example of a growing trend in American cuisine: high-flavor/low-fat cooking.

"You don't have to add butter or cream to make an elegant and exciting dinner," says Snyder. "As Americans experiment with flavors and spices from around the globe, they are discovering a new type of cooking that doesn't rely on old-world techniques with so much fat."

Bayless, for example, explores the regional variations of Mexican cooking, which includes plenty of pork. He also grills a great deal. That, according to Snyder is part of his secret.

"Today's pork is a very lean meat," she explains. "And grilling is a naturally low-fat cooking method."

The grilling challenge is to add flavor to the dish without adding fat. It's one thing to enhance a dish cooked on top of the stove- you simply add spices or additional ingredients to the pan. But with grilling, is no pan. Instead you have several options with which to work:

Glazes: A glaze is a simple coating of sauce applied during the last few minutes of cooking. Usually containing a significant amount of sugar, honey or some other sweetener, glazes take on a shiny, "finished" appearance when heated and help add a "richness" that may be missing in a low-fat dish.

Rubs: The grilling "rub" has become a familiar fixture on supermarket shelves. Whether pre-packaged or homemade, rubs combine salt (sometimes sugar), spices and herbs that are rubbed "dry" onto the surface of pork. Think of rubs as a dry marinade, typically applied 10-20 minutes before grilling.

Marinades: Marinades are a great low-fat way to add flavor and moisture to food. Marinades typically include an acidic ingredient such as vinegar, juice or wine. Many cooks also add other flavors such as onion, garlic, herbs and spices.

Typically, 30 minutes to four hours is ample time for a marinade to work its magic.

Sauces: Quick flavor additions can be added to pork towards the end of grilling. Smoky barbecue sauce doctored with a few tablespoons of peach or apricot jam creates a sweet-smoky finish to a pork chop. Or glaze pork burgers with a mixture of applesauce, Dijon mustard and horseradish.

Salsas: Low-fat toppings-salsas, chutneys and relishes - which marry well with grilled pork can introduce new ethnic flavors to your table.

These mixtures simply combine a number of ingredients (usually including at least one fruit or vegetable) stirred together in advance to let flavors mingle.

Using these flavoring options, it's easy to prepare great-tasting grilled pork without many additional calories. Other important steps include trimming any visible fat from the meat, controlling portion size and choosing lean cuts of pork to begin with.

"Today's pork compares favorably in fat, calories and cholesterol to many other meats and poultry," says Snyder. "In fact, many cuts of pork are as lean or leaner than chicken-just look for the word 'loin' on the label."

Kline suggests creating a rib sampler by reasoning two to three slabs of ribs with different flavor combinations:

Memphis "Dry" style-Memphis is a Mecca of rib eating. Local Memphians are partial to a "dry" style of ribs coated with a coarse spice rub before grilling, but served without a sauce. Some cooks do baste the ribs during cooking with either a homemade pork broth or apple cider.

Texas style- Texans like their ribs just a little spicier than the rest of the country and they like the strong, smoky taste of mesquite wood. Stir diced jalapeno into your favorite bottled barbecue sauce and add some smoked mesquite wood chips to your fire.

Southern comfort- In South Carolina and Georgia, natives favor a tangy, mustard-based barbecue sauce. You can make your own by mixing one part Dijon-style mustard to one part bottled barbecue sauce. Add a touch of molasses or bourbon for an extra Southern kick.

Southwestern Chile Adobo- A classic Mexican recipe is Puerco Adobado or grilled pork ribs in Adobo sauce. Adobo is a rich, dark red chile sauce made from dried ancho and guajillo chiles, toasted spices, garlic and cider vinegar.

Pacific Rim- East meets west in his combination of a rub based on Chinese five-spice powder and a glaze featuring hoisin sauce. The cooking method-long, slow, and smoky- is 100 percent American.

Kansas City style- Kansas City is home to literally hundreds of rib places featuring their own special style of ribs. Kansas City ribs are served with a tangy tomato-based sauce and are deeply flavored with hickory smoke.

Grilling ribs right-

The secret to great ribs goes beyond a sauce or a special recipe-it's how the meat is cooked. Luckily, the right way to cook ribs also is the easy way, just follow these guidelines:

Slow cook ribs- Cook ribs over medium-low, indirect heat by banking the charcoal around the edges of a covered grill or in a 300 to 350 degree F. gas grill. Grill the ribs for one and one half to two hours. Ribs are done when you can "wiggle" the bone away from the meat. Under no circumstances should you "parboil" ribs before grilling. Parboiling ribs of ribs of flavor and is an unnecessary step.

Save the sauce- Most barbecue sauces will burn on the grill if brushed on too soon. Baste ribs with tomato-based sauces and other sauces containing sugar during the last 30 minutes of grilling or serve the sauce at the table.

Rested ribs- For extra-tender ribs, remove ribs from grill and wrap in heavy foil; place in a large brown paper bag, close bag and let ribs rest for up to an hour before serving. They will remain piping hot and will be extra tender.

Star-spangled sides-

Try one of these sizzling side dishes for a spectacular picnic on the Fourth:

Peppery cornbread- Give cornbread a kick by adding chopped and seeded jalapeno pepper to the mix, or stir some shredded jalapeno Monterey Jack into the batter before baking.

Cole slaw- No matter what region of the country you're in, cole slaw is the classic side to any picnic. Toss cabbage and shredded carrots with mayonnaise, sour cream, lemon juice, sugar, salt, and pepper. For crunch, add chopped pecans or celery seed.

Potato salad- Use your favorite recipe or stop by the deli.

Grilled vegetables- Brush skewered onions and bell peppers with zesty Italian dressing and grill.

Score a touchdown with a Cajun Pork Loin Roast

The end of summer doesn't have to mean the end of the grilling season.

Football games in September and October offer great excuses to fire up the grill and host a tailgate party to celebrate the big game and the pleasures of fall grilling.

Slightly cooler temperatures are good news for dedicated grillers. The passing to the dog days of summer means rekindled appetites and a return to more serious fare. And, of course, fall is the peak season for the bounty of the garden and farmer's markets.

"Fall is an ideal time to use the grill to experiment with new foods and grilling techniques," says Robin Kline, a certified culinary professional and director of the Pork Information Bureau (PIB) for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "People are burger-bored and are ready to sink their teeth into something new."

Pre-game Preparation-

As much fun as tailgating is, the parking lot outside a football stadium is not an ideal kitchen, so do as much preparation as possible before leaving for the game.

"I cook everything except the pork loin before I leave," says Kline. "If I want to serve food warm, I keep it in an insulated cooler lined with aluminum foil. A hot soup stored in a thermos is a great warm 'starter.' But side dishes served either cool or at room temperature taste just as good."

"A pork roast is a great choice for a fall tailgate because it's so easy to grill," adds Kline. "And the spicy flavors of a Cajun-style roast add a little warmth to the football party."

To grill the pork loin at the game, follow these easy steps:

*Start the charcoal about 30 minutes before grilling. For best results, arrange the briquettes in a pyramid at the center or to one side of the grill. When the coals are glowing and ash-covered, arrange them banked on one or both sides of the grill.

*Roasts should be cooked over indirect heat, with the pork placed on the portion of the grill not directly over the heat source. A boneless loin will cook to perfection in about 45 minutes to an hour, allowing time for pre-game kibbitzing.

*To ensure juicy, tender results, pork loin should be grilled to medium doneness—just to 155-to 160 degrees F. Use a meat thermometer to judge doneness.

*Slice and serve.

Ribs sloppy...but succulent

As any rib fan will tell you—one of life's greatest pleasures in rolling up your sleeves, tucking a napkin under your chin and sinking your teeth into a succulent serving of ribs. It can be sloppy, but that's half the fun!

Besides, it's a great excuse to eat with your fingers. Tender, tantalizing ribs come in a number of savory styles and adapt to an array of seasonings. From the down-home taste of tangy barbecue sauce to the sophisticated flavor of a mustard glaze, ribs wear their toppings well.

This booklet is designed to reveal the hidden secrets of ribs—how to choose 'em, how to cook 'em, and how to savor every mouthful!

Cook to a Slow Sizzle-

Regardless of the rib style or preparation method you select, ribs taste best when you take your time.

On the grill—ribs should be cooked over indirect heat for around 1-1/2 hours to 2 hours, turning occasionally.

In the oven—roast them in a shallow pan, uncovered or covered, for 1-1/2 hours. Baste with sauce, if desired, toward the end of the cooking time.

Smoked—slow cooking ribs in a smoker with hickory or mesquite wood provides a characteristic smoked flavor.

Moist/Dry—cook ribs by simmering gently in a combination of liquid smoke and water (one part liquid smoke to 10 parts water) for one hour. Finish off in the oven or on the grill, basted with sauce.

Savory Seasonings-

Here's where you can strut your culinary stuff. Ribs carry a wide range of flavors, so try any of the following techniques to unleash their appetizing potential.

Rub it in- Before cooking, apply a dry blend of herbs and spices to the meat. Rub in flavors such as lemon, dill, mustard, pepper—any spice combination you like!

Soak it- Create a zesty marinade to lend a distinctive flavor to rib meat. Rib marinades should include an acidic component like vinegar, wine or citrus juice; add some oil, and use herbs and spices for extra flavor. Experiment with exotic taste combinations.

Soak ribs in the marinade overnight in the refrigerator, up to 24 hours. Baste with leftover marinade while cooking. Wipe off any excess sauce before cooking to allow ribs to brown more evenly. Discard leftover marinade.

Be saucy- Rib toppings can go in any flavor direction. But wait to sauce ribs until they're almost finished cooking.

Discover the Diversity-

Some are thick, some are thin, all are delectable. Good ribs begin with five basic styles. Each has its own loyal following:

Pork back ribs, cut from the blade and center section of the pork loin, contain rib bones and the "finger meat" between the ribs. Count on one pound of back ribs per hungry appetite.

Spareribs come from the underbelly or side of the pig. Although they have the least meat per bone, spareribs are a favorite among barbecue fans. Plan on one pound per person.

St. Louis-style ribs are spareribs with the breast bone removed.

Country style are the meatiest variety of pork ribs; you'll need a knife and fork to eat them properly! Plan on a half a pound for most appetites.

Boneless: No kidding! A little creative cutting can turn a pork loin or boneless chop into tender "ribs." Just cut in long, thick strips. Roast or grill, add sauce or your favorite rub.

On the side: A little ribbing always goes well with side dishes like bread, vegetables and salads. Keep it simple—ribs are casual and unpretentious.

Cole Slaw- Toss chopped cabbage and grated carrots with sour cream, mayonnaise, lemon juice, sugar and salt and pepper. Add chopped pecans or peanuts for a change.

Potato Salad- Use your favorite recipe or pick some up from the deli.

Corn Bread- "Pepper" corn muffins with jalapeno; pieces or stir grated cheese into batter before baking.

Biscuits- Refrigerated dough biscuits can be enlivened with a brushing of herb butter before baking.

Grilled Vegetables- Skewer bell pepper pieces with onion wedges, brush with Italian dressing and grill for a great finger food to accompany ribs.

Families come together with grilling outdoors

American families keep hectic schedules, from piano lessons to soccer games to late nights at the office. All this running around makes it difficult to orchestrate a shared family meal.

However, with the start of summer and the end of school, the press of activities eases a bit, providing an opportunity to spend more time together. One traditional way that American families celebrate a calmer summer schedule is through the backyard barbecue.

Families view grilling as a relaxing activity and an entertaining way to gather for meals. According to "The Kitchen Report," a recent survey conducted by the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC), 59 percent of American families use the grill at least once a week.

"Grilling is a great way to gorge family bonds and make sure that kids are eating a nutritious meal," says Karen Davis, youth communications manager of the Pork Information Bureau for NPPC. "Pork has always been an American grilling favorite because it's versatile and has a taste kids love."

Grilling also is a great way to get your kids involved in dinner preparation. Simple chores can introduce kids to basic cooking techniques:

- *Add salt, pepper, and other favorite spices to pork burgers before grilling.
- * Create "ants on a log" with celery, peanut butter and raisins.
- *Arrange corn chips on a platter surrounding a bowl of your favorite salsa. Arrange fresh fruit cubes on a plate with fruit yogurt for dipping.
- *Set the picnic table with a paper tablecloth, plates and plastic utensils and let kids decorate with crayons or markers.
- *Pick flowers from the garden and arrange a cheerful centerpiece.
- * Toss a side salad with your favorite salad dressing.
- *Assemble s'more makings-graham crackers, marshmallows and chocolate bars-for everyone's favorite dessert.
