Approval was given to move forward on the Community Activity Center at Tuesday's meeting of the Wayne City Council.

Jon Carlson, architect for the project, was at the meeting to present the proposal for the final design of the facility. He also presented a number of samples of items such as siding, brick, flooring, carpet and paint.

He told the council that a number of changes can be made inside the building with equipment and that the plans allow for future expansion. His comments came after Councilman Dennis Linster voiced his concern that other sports, such as racketball, have not been addressed in the building design.

The council voted unanimously in favor of purchasing a new printer to replace the current printer used to print the utility bills. The cost is just over $12,800.

Ordinance 2001-04 was passed and the three readings waived. This ordinance adds definitions and clarifications to the existing city code in regard to signs.

Discussing the outcome of the District 51 building, an estimated $8.000-$10,000 is needed by District 17 to tear down building and restore land to original condition as original land deed stated. Dr. Reinert, Wayne school system superintendent suggested buying the option from the land owner that District 51 occupied and using it for storage; perhaps selling it later.

As for the interlocal agreement with the city of Wayne for the Community Activity Center, dirt, work began and access to the site is through the Wayne Elementary School lot; any damage done to school property must be restored to original condition. Also, 28 deep water wells will be installed. The wells will be used for the geothermal heating/cooling system for the CAC. On Industrial Technology savings, the board was informed of considerable savings through the ACES program and ESU#1 on software used in the Industrial Tech area.

sored through Rotary International. Her host family will be Dan and Kyle Rose.

Among items given during a special education update, Kraig Lofquist, SPED Director, told the board that three students are being transported this summer, one to the Tower School, one to Wakefield, and one locally in Wayne. There are 102 students listed in the Special Education Student Information System in the Wayne School district with 99 at the beginning of the year and increased to 111 at one time. Lori Ruskamp will replace Roger Reikofski as Student Assistant Team Coordinator in the Elementary School.

Elementary School, Rocky Ruhl, Wayne High School Athletic Director showed samples of track surfaces from Southwest Recreational Surfaces ranging from $17-$38 a square yard. An estimate from Southwest for an asphalt track to be used as a practice facility would be $206,100. With a practice facility, jumping events and throwing events may not be included in that amount.

If Wayne School system would partner with Wayne State College, there would be a financial commitment over a number of years and there would be NCAA regulations that would play a part in scheduling practice times, etc. But with WSC, Wayne School District could incur transportation costs of students to WSC for P.E. classes. At this time, students cannot meet P.E. standards because of the track conditions. Requested by the board was a timeline as to what needs to be done to help make the decision of building their own facility or being a partner with WSC. Cost estimates range from $363,300-$489,300 if Wayne School District were to build their own facility. Dr. Reinert has applied for a grant to help with costs.

Todd Barry, WSC Athletic Director, would like the Wayne School district to help fundraise the college's proposed new facility. More discussion will be held in Mid-July on future track plans.

Superintendent's report on the Middle School notes daily progress on the building. Dirt compaction in the gym did not meet requirements to support a concrete floor. Construction crews will recompact dirt before pouring cement floors.

Also at the middle school, cabling crews are beginning work on the second and third floors, painters have started on the third floor and the second floor will be next, plans are to have the elevator put in soon, and light poles will be relocated to the north where the parking lot will be. Beckenhauer Construction is still looking at a Dec. 5, 2001 completion date.

Future agenda items include lease purchases, track facility and foundation, second readings of policies 6002.6003, 6004, and first readings of several recodified policies.

There was a short executive meeting to discuss negotiations. The next meeting of the Wayne Community Board of Education scheduled for Monday, June 25 has been cancelled so the next meeting will be held on Monday, July 9 at 7 p.m. at the Wayne High School.

Painting a picture with words, Stearns told of the group traveling in keelboat (larger wooden boat) and two pirogues (smaller wooden boats) with poles pushing their way along the shore upwater in weather of high temperatures and high humidity only covering 10-20 miles per day. Hearing coyotes for the first time near the Kansas-Nebraska border, the group thought someone was taking dogs downriver on a barge as they had never heard coyotes before.

When Lewis and Clark reached the Platte (where the prairie meets the plains), crossing, Stearns said, was likely as dramatic as going over the Equator. Amazingly enough, the Platte, only 6-7 feet deep anywhere, runs 8 miles per hour (mph) and the Missouri only runs 5 1/2 mph. The Platte River is one of few rivers in the U.S. that's unchanged through the years. There are no dams or other man-made structures impeding its flow. Recently remeasured, the Missouri is the longest river in the U.S., 2,320 miles long, two miles longer than the Mississippi.

Self-sufficient, Lewis and Clark's group brought along or found items necessary for survival such as salt for preserving, fishing tackle, guns, sheets of lead for making bullets, gunpowder, steels for striking to make fire, and molds to make candles and more. Off the land, some of the food the men ate included roots, berries, elk meat and they used the tallow for making their candles. A good day of fishing at Dakota City was recorded in their journals; the group caught 300 fish one day and 700 the next. Journal writing supplies were contained in their "lap desks." Some of the supplies found in a lap desk included dried ink, quill point pens, paper, ink stands, slates, chalk pencils, pen knife to sharpen quill point pens, and elk-bound diary

Trying to keep democracy in their group, the first election west of the Mississippi was held at Elk Point, SD; our second stop. After the death of one of their men, Sergeant Charles Floyd, near Sioux City, lowa, an election was held where men voted to see who the next sergeant would be. Patrick Gass was elected. While at a conference in Montana, Stearns met Eugene Gass Painter, greatgrandson of Patrick Gass who now takes part in reenactments of the Lewis and Clark expedition such as the one held in Onawa, lowa this weekend.

Stopping at Floyd's Monument in Sioux City, Bev Hinds, local researcher and speaker since 1974 on Sgt. Floyd and Lewis and Clark's expedition, fills us in on Sgt. Floyd, his death, and the monument made and erected to him. A large man, Floyd fell ill only 99 days into their journey. Floyd was treated in the usual way of that time by being bled, purged (made to vomit and have diarrhea by taking pills). Through research it has been found possible that Floyd may have had a ruptured appendix and the "usual" treatment may have quickened his death.

Noting the change in the course of the river, Floyd was buried, dug up and reburied three times before putting his bones to rest within the core of the monument in 1900. Floyd was the only member of the party to die while on the expedition.

Hind's husband, Dr. V. Strode Hinds, historian, was president of the Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation from 1981-1982, After he passed away, a dedication was held Oct. 22, 1997 by his family, Sioux City Public Museum and Historical Association, Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation, and a bronze plaque to his memory is on the west side of Floyd Monument.

Dr. Hinds helped build the 13-ton

55 foot keelboat that's on display at the Lewis and Clark State Park in Onawa. The boats Lewis and Clark's group took upstream were manned by military and French who were experienced boatmen.

In July 1804, mention is made in Lewis and Clark's journals of the Loess Hills near Sloux City. We now know that the hills are products of the Glacial age and the makeup of the hills is unique, only being found in one other area in the world, China. The hills were produced from silt washed along mountains leaving sediment and minerals unlike composition of other hills, Also native to the Missouri is the pre-historic fish, the spoonbill, which lives off the silt it filters for nutrition. Oddly enough, the only other place in the world where spoonbill can be found is also in China.

Leaving testament to the times was the riverboat steamer "Bertrand" which sunk in the deep silt of the Missouri by DeSoto Bend and was left in an oxbow (a circle of river left by itself after the river changes its course) which helped preserve and offer access to its historical contents. Thousands of items are on display in an environmentally controlled building near DeSoto Bend for public viewing.

Visiting Onawa and boarding the full size replica of the authentic Lewis and Clark keelboat (named the "Discovery" in honor of Lewis and Clark's Corps of Discovery), with only a sail above, one gets a feel of how unprotected Lewis, Clark and their men were against the elements. With a 13 ton keelboat, two smaller boats, and an additional 13 ton of cargo, traveling upstream on the Missouri was a major accomplishment.

Preparing for their festival in Onawa, the park was alive with people dressed as fur traders, frontiersmen/women setting up booths, tepees, and preparing to whisk visitors back to the early 1800s when Lewis and Clark's group camped along the Missouri, The "Friends of Discovery" maintain a small visitor center during the summer and are trying to raise funds to house the boats and other historical display and for a large visitor center. Leaving Onawa, Stearns speaks of "Blackbird Hills," near Onawa where the Lewis and Clark expedition came across empty villages. Unknown to Lewis and Clark's

The dispatch center remodeling project marks the first time any significant change has been made to the communication center since the police department moved into the Municipal Building in the late 1970's. The newly remodeled area provides a reception area that will serve both the police department and the City Clerk's side of the building and provides a much safer and comfortable work environment for the dispatchers, This remodeling effort was a joint effort of several city departments.

Buffalo Bill (alias Bill Sanders of Onawa, Iowa) speaks to Hal Stearns and members of the tour at Lewis and Clark State Park, Onawa, where the replicas of Lewis and Clark's keelboat and two pirogues are located. A festival was held there last weekend celebrating the encampment of the Lewis and Clark expedition along the Missouri River.

Replicas of the Lewis and Clark keelboat and two pirogues are located at Lewis and Clark State Park , Onawa, Iowa, at exit 112 on 1-29, 55 miles north of Omaha/Council Bluffs or 30 miles south of Sloux City, Iowa. Sgt. Chinn will be assigning the beat areas to each of the officers this week and they will be in the residential neighborhoods.

Webster said he can't stress enough how important this Beat Program will be for the Wayne community. He said if people don't feel comfortable with the police, they may not report something that is bothering them. A person can then tend to become frustrated and angry, wondering why the "cops" don't do anything.

"By opening lines of communications between the officers and the public, the police department hopes to provide much better service," Chief Webster.

Will Davis Sav-Mor Pharmacy Fewer Antibiotics If Ear Drops Are Used First

At the Pediatric Academic Societies Annual Meeting, physician researchers indicated that 89% of children treated with pain-relieving ear drops did not require antibiotics. Fifty-six children with ear infections were divided into 2 groups and were given the pain-relieving ear drops or an oral antibiotic. Four children given ear drops did not respond to treatment, whereas 2 children given antibiotics did not respond to treatment.

In a Reuters Health report that covered the meeting, Dr. Paul Matz indicated that about half of all ear infections may clear up on their own. Therefore, "watchful wait-ing" for 48 hours — but not giving antibiotics — may be appropriate for some children. If a child is still in pain after 48 hours, an antibiotic might be given. However, an antibiotic might be necessary in only 5 - 10% of children.

What do you think of when you think of summertime? Long days at the beach new swimsuits. . . ice cream . . . vacation . . . children being out of school , . . an extremely low blood supply? For most of us, summertime is a great time of year, but it is also a season that plays have with our community's blood supply.

During the summer months many volunteer blood donors become involved in other activities that compete with the time they have to go to a donor center or community blood drive and donate blood. Business-based blood drives suffer because employees who normally donate are more likely to be on vacation or too busy catching up in the work they missed by taking time off the previous week that they do not have the time to leave their desks and go to the bloodmobile. Organ transplants, open-heart surgeries, cancer treatments, automobile and boat accidents and premature births will not wait for the weather to get cooler or the children to return to school. Our local hospitals require blood every day of the year. That is why your donation is so vital to our community . . . and to someone's life.

The Wayne Community in conjunction with the Siouxland Community Blood Bank will be having a blood drive on Thursday, June 28 from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Providence Medical Center. We invite everyone to make a special effort to take time to donate and help supply a safe and adequate blood supply to the Siouxland Community. As volunteer donors, you understand the tremendous need there is for blood donations in the community, and you know. that when you donate blood you are making the difference in the lives of others.

Capitol news Legislature adjourns for 2001

The Wayne

By Ed Howard Slatehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association They're gone. Enjoy the calm.

When the Legislature adjourns each year it is rather akin to when company leaves. Or when the kids go to bed.

It doesn't matter if you loved having them around, or wished they had left a lot sooner. Their departure is almost always the cue for a sigh of relief.

Of course, experience has taught us that there is one more possibility, bordering on a likelihood, having to do with their visit.

The company or the kids have made their exit. Then you hear someone say from the next room; "Hey! What is this stuff on the carpet!"

If you're lucky, someone only spilled something. And it didn't

The legislative equivalent is what you might call a lawmaking oopsiel-It is realized when someone peruses some new statute and finds that the law of unintended consequences is about to enforce itself.

The all-time champion episode in this category came in the 1970s. The Legislature literally repealed all of the state's "old" criminal code and passed a new one. Unfortunately, the li'l oopsie was that the new criminal code, while passed, was not enacted. That was because someone failed to put in those few little words that were supposed to say when the new laws would be laws - as in, the same day the others expired.

That one required then-Gov. Jim Exon to call a special session of the Legislature.

The most common scenario over the years, in Nebraska and other states, has involved lawmakers enacting a law, but failing to repeal the old one. The newer statute usually takes precedence, but the whole thing can drive a state agency nuts for awhile.

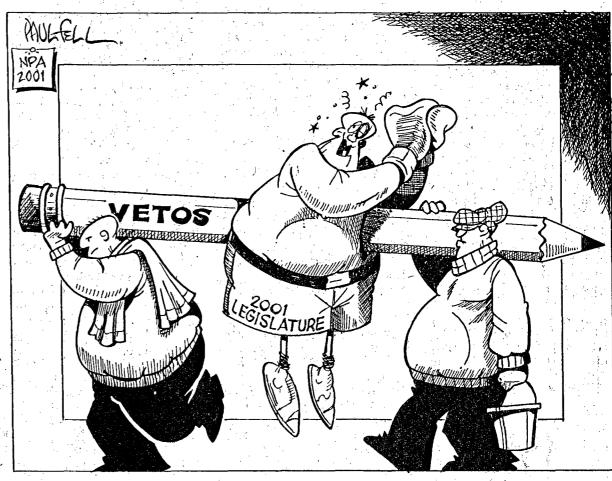

The thing is, experience also has shown that some of the all-time cake takers were the ones that weren't accidents.

involved the Legislature, or Congress, approving some new Education. Health. program. Whatever.

The old "Hooray for our side!" would follow. Usually, those would come right after a proponent of the bill took a bow for enacting what was guaranteed to be the sure and certain salvation of truth, justice and the American way.

Then, someone would notice that Those were the ones that the program, the mandate, the whole deal, didn't have any funding. Or not enough to do any good. Those situations were regarded, variously, as blessings or curses, depending on your politics.

Anyway, the Legislature went home earlier this month. Enjoy the calm. And if someone does find a stain on the lawmaking carpet, don't worry about it. The lawmakers come back to visit every year, and you can always ask them to bring along some stain remover.

The Wayne Herald, Thursday, June 14, 2001 5A) What can be done when fish won't bite

Last week my family made a road trip to Jerry's Hilltop for supper and I had the opportunity to talk with some people that I hadn't seen for a while.

One friend from Randolph mentioned that he'd read my articles, but didn't always quite agree with me on some of the things I wrote about.

I told him that disagreement was good and asked him what he was referring to?

He jokingly repled, anytime I go fishing, they always tell me, "You should have been here yesterday!"

You know there's a lot of truth in that statement! There are a lot of times that the fish have bit better yesterday or the day after you leave. I think everyone has heard that line and when you hear it, you think to yourself, "here we go again."

The big thing that we need to do when we hear that the bite is off or the fishing has slowed is to look things over and see what has changed.

It's probably not the fact that the fish have quit biting, it's probably that they've changed their pattern or what they've been feeding on has moved.

Fish will follow their food around, so if the fish are biting shallow one day and quit the next, don't keep pounding the shallow water, move deeper, chances are that the bait fish have moved and the prey fish have followed them.

Use your electronics to locate the fish and what they're feeding on.

When fish move, it's usually not very far and generally it's deeper unless there is a drastic change in the water level or temperature.

These two conditions will send fish on long distance moves and then you'll need to rethink the whole plan.

When bait fish are pressured by predator fish, they'll head for a more secure place, it wouldn't be too far and is generally a place that gives them a place to hide such as weeds, brush or rocks,

If the weather has changed drastically, the fish will go deep and generally be tight against the bottom. These are the times when you'll need to slow down the way you're

Fish in a lake will usually shut down or quit biting much more quickly that river fish, River fish aren't affected as quickly by pressure changes or other weather factors.

If the lake fish shut down, chances are that a few fish are still biting in the river.

Different species of fish react differently to weather changes. Walleyes seem to be the first to go dormant on the bottom and largemouth bass aren't far behind them. Other species such as white bass, panfish and pike will continue to bite in all types of weather conditions.

If the walleyes and bass quit biting, it's not a bad idea to switch species until the walleyes are back on the bite.

This combination is dangerous and can lead to deadly complications including strokes, heart attacks, and kidney failure. The National Kidney Foundation has Phil Griess R.P issued new recommendations that urge aggressive treatment to lower diabetics' blood pressure. They recommend blood pressure for these people should be no higher than 130 over Sunday: Worship with Lord's Supper, 10:30 a.m. Monday -Friday: Vacation Bible School, 9 to 11:30 a.m.

"Jesus to the Rescue" was the theme for Vacation Bible School at the Carroll United Methodist Church. Thirty-three children learned about rescues in Bible times and how Christ calls us to rescue others. The offering for the week was given to the Wayne County Red Cross for their rescue work.

Kathy Hochstein was director with Justin Davis, Ashley Hall, Kirby Roberts, Katie Roberts, and Andrea Simpson as teachers. Megan Frahm, Melissa Frahm, Josh Davis, Mashala Davis, Chris Shulteis, Dustin Hurlburt and Kris Roberts helped. Doris Harmer, Mary Davis, Eleanor Owens, Pat Roberts, Phyllis Frahm and Margaret Kenny helped in the kitchen. Supper was served each evening with a family potluck and program ending the week.

The United Methodist Church at Carroll held their Bible School last week with their theme being "Jesus to the Rescue." The activities concluded with a program on Friday night. The church members and children grew "leaves of money" on a Rescue Tree throughout the week and donated the money to the Wayne County Red Cross to aid when they help "rescue" others in time of need following a disaster. Kathy Hochstein, VBS Director, right, presented the donation to Lori Carollo, manager of the Wayne Red Cross. Shown with Kathy and Lori in front of the Rescue Tree are some of the children who attended Bible School.

Scout fields for insect damage

The Wayne era

farmers to be scouting their fields for insect injury, a University of Nebraska entomologist said.

STREET STREET

"There is nothing too surprising on the insect front, but farmers should be watching for insects and insect injury so they can make good decisions as to whether or not they want to treat their fields," said Tom Hunt, NU entomologist at NU's Haskell Agricultural Lab near Concord. "There may be some increased problems with a few species of pests, and there may be some problems with heavy damage scattered across the state. But I don't think we have a problem with record insect numbers across the board."

Some of the insects that may be causing damage this year include cutworms, armyworms, commonstalk borers and bean leaf beetles, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said.

"We are seeing some higher numbers of variegated cutworms in our light traps," Hunt said. "So this could be one of the insects that does do more damage this year."

Cutworms traditionally are a corn pest, but Hunt has received several calls about cutworm damage in soybeahs.

Cutworms feed at night and hide during the day, he said. When scouting for cutworms, farmers may find the actual pests hard to spot. But the injury is obvious.

"When they are small, cutworms eat small holes in the leaves of the plant, but as they grow, they can cut off the plants at the base," he said.

Corn is vulnerable to cutworm damage until it is about a foot high.

Now is the time for Nebraska Corn that follows a soybean rotation, borders a grassy or weedy area or is planted in a no-till field is most susceptible.

> "When the stand has five percent damage and the worms are less than an inch long, it may be wise to treat," Hunt said. "If the worms are over an inch long, they will pupate soon and won't cause damage after that, so it may not pay to treat." Cutworms also can harm alfalfa.

They affect new growth and can keep alfalfa from regreening after mowing.

Armyworms also may cause damage in cornfields this summer, thanks to abundant rains this spring. Armyworms, like cutworms, are most common in grassy areas and no-till fields, Hunt said. The damage consists of ragged chewing of the leaves. Sometimes leaves may be chewed until only the ribs remain.

"The corn plants are a little bit more mature by the time armyworms begin feeding, so they can handle more damage before treatment is necessary," he said. "When it appears that more than 50 percent of the stand will be defoliated, and the worms are less than one and a quarter inches long, it might be wise to treat the field.

Farmers also should begin watching for common stalk borers, Hunt said. Damage to corn generally begins at the field edge. Fields next to grassy pasture areas are most susceptible to damage.

"The moths lay their eggs in grassy areas in late summer, then larvae bore into the grasses in May," he said. "When the larvae get big enough, they may move into near-along home. We took a dozen there two years ago, and now there is another family of runza lovers in

You may ask, what was the Big Farmer doing all this time? He was invited to participate in all the activities, and elected to stay home. He's trying to get a field of wild flowers

by cornfields for a better food source. It is particularly common for stalk borers to move into corn after a nearby grassy pasture is mowed."

Stalk borers cause the most damage while the plants are small. The period of greatest risk generally falls between early June and early July. The insects feed first on the leaves, then burrow down into the stalk. Farmers may begin to see deformed or stunted plants. Some may have a twisted appearance and others may have dead hearts.

"Since the plants are very vulnerable when they are small, now is the time to begin scouting your fields for signs of infestation," Hunt said. "The decision to treat or not to treat has to be based on economics. If the price of corn is low, it might not be a good choice."

Corn rootworms already have hatched in southeast and south central Nebraska. The hatch was reported at Clay Center May 28 and at Mead May 29, Hunt said. Rootworm hatch for northeast Nebraska generally follows 10 days to two weeks later.

"If crops aren't rotated or a planting-time treatment wasn't used to control rootworms, farmers may decide to apply a post-planting treatment." he said. "There are several important variables to consider in applying these treatments, such as the availability of moisture. Farmers should contact their local county extension educators for details.'

In soybean fields, bean leaf beetles may be a problem this year. "Early beans are the most susceptible to significant damage," Hunt said, "The beetles can injure the cotyledons, leaves and stems on the small plants."

Later in the season, the leaf dam-, age looks like shotgun holes. Once, the beans form true leaves, up to 50 percent of the plant can be defoliat, ed before treatment is pecessary and economical, Hunt said, ma yesta "Sometimes these guys worry people more than they should," he said. "A soybean field can look pretty bad with leaf beetle damage before any major problems arise."

Friendship is priceless

Arizona.

Some of the fun has gone out of the College World Series with the defeat of the Huskers today; by one measly point. After losing to Rice by one, I had great hopes about beating Tulane. But, it's already been a CWS for history, with Nebraska going the first time ever and a sitting president throwing the first ball. Lots of excitement.

One more thing my twin and I did to celebrate our mutual birthdays was to take in the annual concert by the Lincoln Continentals at the Lied. These are about 40 or 50 Barbershoppers who make beautiful music. This year's program was all Broadway show tunes, and it was fun.

The next day, it was church, a quick lunch, and to the airport; with a stop for frozen runzas to take started, and ne and a friend made a tour of the place with a sprayer full of Round Up. Plus, there were some Nebraska baseball games on the radio. He's been one of the fans all spring. I got an e-mail from my friend the other day saying Happy Girlfriend's Day!

Laughter makes the world a happier place. Friends are like wine; they get better with age. Sometimes you just need a shoulder to cry on. Great minds think alike, especially when they are female!

Each' summer for the past two years a group of young Native American students have traveled to Wayne State College to participate in a science activities camp through a partnership effort with other schools,

The camp began as a segment of HPPI (Heath Professions Partnership Initiative), a five-year grant project of the University of Nebraska Medical Center with funding by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

"This program is something that we really cherish at WSC. Not only are we working to graduate minorities, we seek to encourage them to pursue medical professions," said Dr. Jogindar Johar, dean of math and science at WSC.

"HPPI was designed to encourage partners at all levels of education (public schools, community colleges, four-year undergraduate colleges and health professions training programs at UNMC) to work together in creating a health careers pathway for Nebraska Native American students. Although HPPI funding has ended, several HPPI activities including the Wayne State summer science camp will continue with the help of various partners in the program who attended a meeting at Wayne State on May 10," said Dr. Dave Carver director of the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) Health Professions Partnership Initiative.

Wayne State will continue funding the camp, which will enable 15 students in grades 4-6 to participate in learning activities within the Summer Leadership Camp at Wayne State College, June 18-21. The HPPI advisory board team of four members from the American Association of Medical Colleges and the Robert Wood

Johnson Foundation were on the WSC campus recently to assess the program's effectiveness. The advisory board visit included the following visitors to campus: Dr. Dave Carver, UNMC; Sharon Frenchman, Dean of Continuing Education at Little Priest Tribal College; Lois Colburn, Deputy of the American Director Association of Medical Colleges (AAMC) and National HPPI Director; Dr. Ella Cleveland, Evaluation Coordinator for AAMC; Dr. Zen Camacho, Rice University and Dr. Karine Crow of Washington State University.

Omaha Nation School representatives included Sherri Atherton, dents have learned. Wayne State's Dr. Mark Hammer will become the new director of the program.

Hammer accompanied the students to the Ashfall Fossil Beds State Historical Park last year with a presentation that included Native American uses for plants and work on the Internet. During the span of the project, a number of Wayne State faculty members have instructed students at the camp.

"Work needs to start early with these students. They need to feel safe in an environment that shows they can succeed. This experience builds a commitment and passion for learning within these students," Colburn said.

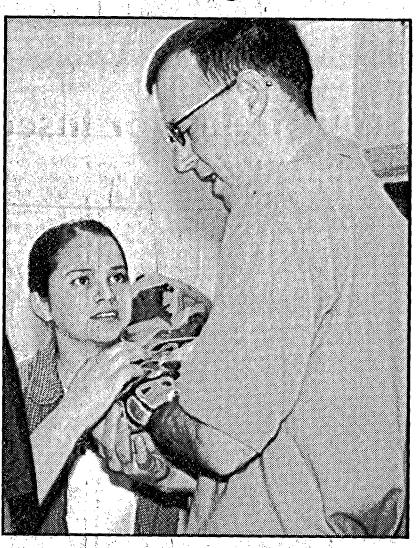

"I talk to a lot of young people," Mitchell said. "There seems to be a lack of exposure to math and science, It is important to make them aware of math and science opportunities. Great emphasis needs to be placed on the support system for these students."

HPPI began in January 1996 when UNMC received a $350,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the 'nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to health and health care. Partners in the Initiative have been UNMC, the Nebraska Indian Community College, Wayne State College and various other colleges and universities. Other, entities involved from the start of the program included the Macy, Winnebago and Santee school systems and nations.

"We were one of 10 original projects accepted from among many others applying for funding. We were also the only funded project at that time to specifically encourage more Native American programming at all levels of education. Our main goal is to have communication among the partners working together to get Native Americans into health professions. We have had tremendous support from Wayne State College through Dr. Jogindar Johar and Dr. Paul Karr. They deserve recognition because they have been with the project from the beginning," Carver said.

"This has been a great learning experience for students. I have been very fortunate to have a group of faculty members willing to create fun activities to allow students to enjoy math and science," Johar said,

The HPPI camp has provided an opportunity for the students and schools to become familiar working with individuals at Wayne State College. Wayne State has also made use of opportunities to make return connections with some of the students.

Winnebago students have returned to Wayne State for sessions with math-science division faculty. In March, Dr. Shawn Pearcy was able to again work with several students who also attended the HPPI workshop. Some of the students also attended Aquafest, another learning experience for grade school students on campus.) Dr. Paul Karr and Dr. Todd Young have also been visiting area schools with science demonstrations this spring.

"The students worked well with the WSC faculty members presenting workshops. I'm also proud of my colleagues for sharing their knowledge in such creative and understandable ways," Karr said.

Carver noted the importance of WSC's role in educating Native Americans.

"These students do best in small groups with the kind of support that WSC offers," he said. "The College's location is convenient. The College is small and oriented toward teaching rather than research. There appears to be a great deal of student focus and attention to advising which could help our (Native American) students be more successful."

Award-winning workshop returns

Seventeen students from 11 tribes participated in the Neihardt/Black Elk Scholar's Project, June 3-8 on the Wayne State College campus. An annual effort, the project earned the Nebraska Center for the Book "Jane Geske Award" for 1999.

Under the supervision of Nancy Gillis, director of the John G. Neihardt Center, the pilot workshop was made possible by a grant from the Messenger of the Healing Winds Foundation and is under the direction of the Institute of Vision and Learning through the John G. Neihardt Foundation.

The students who are housed on campus spend time with WSC faculty members. Faculty members involved were Gretchen Ronnow, Neil Harrison, Ed Elfers and Don Hickey. Graduate assistants Patrice Troutman and Trenton Muth also assisted. Another WSC graduate student, Odell Santos, and Gretchen Lees, an instructor from Red Cloud Indian School, were chaperones.

"It's more than just a literary project; it's a program focused to challenge young Native Americans to enrich their own appreciation of history and culture and inspire them to use the power of words," Gillis said, "This year we are adding an art component with Judith Berry of Wayne State College. We try to add something new each year to broaden the students' experience."

The sophomore, junior and senior students represent Dakota, Lakota, Mandan, Omaha, Oglala, Ponca, Rosebud, Standing Rock and Winnebago nations.

"The workshop will help with writing skills and help me express what my feelings are," said one of the participants, Codi Blackbird, a Cheyenne River senior of the Omaha nation, Macy. "The college is great. I'm comfortable being here. It feels like I'm at home."

Victoria Red Legs, a Standing Rock senior from Oglala, S.D., said she feels the workshop will also help her to become a better writer and help her prepare for college.

Other workshop participants were: Clementine Bordeaux, a Red Cloud senior from Pine Ridge, S.D.; James Brugh, a Mandan-Hidatsa junior from Lincoln; Teo Cook, a Yankton Sioux Tribal member and Stevens High School sophomore from Rapid City, S.D.; Donnel Irene. Ecoffey, a Red Cloud Indian School Oglala junior from Wounded Knee, S.D.; Grant Sparks Freemont, an Omaha senior; Stacey Grant, a Lincoln Northeast sophomore

Students put together a collective chapbook of their work at the end of the week with the help of Elfers of the WSC Humanities Division.

"Wayne State College has been extremely supportive," said Gillis. "Part of that support comes from the historical connection the College has with John G. Neihardt. This effort displays the desire of faculty and administrators to encourage young people. I think that WSC has taken a particular interest in Native American students. Being on campus has meant they get a chance to live in a college setting for a short period of time and get an idea of what the expectations might be at the college level."

This year the group toured of the state capitol in Lincoln and a visited the Nebraska Indian Commissioner. They also attended the State Historical Society Museum and an open air jazz concert.

"The field trips were planned to give an opportunity for recreation among the students and to give raw subject material for their writing," Gillis said. "It is an intertribal experience that at the same time gives students an introduction to college."

The Clint Jakeman Memorial Award was earned by Scott for her composition, "Decapitated." Scott's work was selected for the award by her peers.

If you would like to observe the decision-making processes that affect drinking water quality, please attend the regularly scheduled meeting of the Village Board/City Council. If you would like to participate in the process, please contact the Village/City Clerk to arrange to be placed on the agenda of the meeting of the Village Board/City Council. Este informe contiene informacion muy importante sobre el agua que usted bebe. Traduzcalo o hable con alguien que lo entienda bien.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and cas production and mining activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. FDA regulations establish limits for contaminatinants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemothertapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbioal contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

The City of Wayne is required to test for the following contaminants: Coliform Bacteria, Antimony, Arsenic, Asbestos, Barium, Beryllium, Cadmium, Chromium, Copper, Cyanide, Fluoride, Lead, Mercury, Nickel, Nitrate, Nitrite, Selenium, Sodium, Thallium, Alachlor, Atrazine, Benzo(a)pyrene, Carbofuran, Chlordane, Dalapon, Di(2-ethylhexyl)adipate, Dibromochloropropane, Dinoseb, Di(2-ethylhexyl)phthalate, Diguat, 2,4-D, Endothall, Endrin, Ethylene dibromide, Glyphosate, Heplachlor, Heptachlor epoxide, Hexachlorobenzene, Hexachlorocyclopentadoeme, Lindane, Methoxychlor, Oxamyl (Vydate), Pentachlorophenol, Picloram, Polychlorinated biphenyls, Simazine, Toxaphene, Dioxin, Silvex, Benzene, Carbon Tetrachloride, o Dichlorobenzene, Para-Dichlorobenzene, 1,2-Dichlorethane, 1,1-Dichloroethylene, Cis-1,2,-Dichloroethylene, Trans-1.2-Dichloroethylene, Dichloromethane, 1,2-Dichloropropane, Ethylbenzene, Monochlorobenzene, 1,2,4-Trichlorobenzene, 1,1,-Trichloroethane, 1,2Trichloroethane, Trichloroethylene, Vinyt Chloride, Styrene, Tetrachloroethylene, Toluene, Xylenes (total), Gross Alpha (minus Uranium & Radium 226), Radium 226 plus Radium 228, Sulfate, Chloroform, Bromodichloromethane, Chlorodibromomethane, Bromoform, Chlorobenzene, m-Dichlorobenzene, 1,1-Dichloroprophene, 1,1-Dichloroethane, 1,1,2,2-Tetrachlorethane, 1,2-Dichlorophane, Chloromethane, Bromomethane, 1,2,3-Trichloropropane, 1,1,1,2-Tetrachloroethane, Chloroethane, 2-2-Dichloropropane, o-Chlorotoluene, p-Chlorotoluene, Bromobenzene, 1,3-Dichloropropene, Aldrin, Butachlor, Carbarryl, Dicamba, Dieldrin, 3-Hydroxycarbofuran, Methonyl, Metolachlor, Metribuzin, Propachlor. Source of Drinking Water

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and groundwater wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity. The source of drinking water used by the City of Wayne water system is Groundwater.

Drinking water is provided by the following: Permanent Use Well 541 G-028980 located at City of Wayne. Permanent Use Well 651 G-28981 located at City of Wayne. Permanent Use Well 701 G-062208 Icated at City of Wayne. Permanent Use Well 702 G-062209 located at City of Wayne. Permanent Use Well 881 located at City of Wayne. Permanent Use Well 901 located at City of Wayne. Source Water Assessment Availability

At this time, Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality (NDEQ) has not completed a source water assessment. However, NDEQ has prepared a wellhead protection area. For more information, please contact the NDEQ Groundwater Section at (402) 471-0096. Contaminants Found in Drinking Water

City of Wayne

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at (800) 426-4791. Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban storm water runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban storm water runoff, and residential uses.

Note: The state requires monitoring of certain contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants do not change frequently. Therefore, some of this data may be more than one year old.

MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology MCLG (Mximum Contaminant Level Goal): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

AL (Action Level): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow. ppm: Parts Per Million ppb: Parts Per Billion ppt: Parts Per Trillion Pci/L: picoCuries Per Liter (measurement of radioactivity)

Nitrate in drinking water at levels above 10 ppm is a health risk for infants of less than 6 months of age. High nitrate levels in drinking water can cause blue baby syndrome. Nitrate levels may rise quickly for short periods of time because of rainfall or agricultural activity. If you are caring for an infant, you should ask advice from your health care provider.
