Kerry Langemeier, 19, was found at 11:30 a.m. after his vehicle was spotted from the air by a Nebraska State Patrol helicopter. The car was found near Nebraska Highway 84 near Bloomfield.

Langemeier was reported missing after he was last seen leaving his brother's home in Bloomfield Saturday at 4 p.m.

Langemeier, who is diabetic and was without medication, apparently suffered a diabetic reaction while driving, losing control of his car and going down a steep embankment. His car could not be seen from the highway.

Langemeier was transported to Mercy Medical Center in Sioux City, Iowa where he was listed in critical condition with several broken bones in his hip, leg and hand, cuts and bruises.

He was alone in the car at the time of the accident.

Weather slows progress

Work has begun on the Community Activity Center located near Wayne High School. Crews have been hauling and leveling dirt before the actual construction begins. However, this week's rains, totaling nearly 2 1/2 inches, have caused some delays while crews wait for the ground to dry out.

Utecht develops software to assist college students

Ronald Utecht, a 1978 graduate of Wayne High School and the son of Melvin and Delores Utecht of Wayne, was recently featured in an article about his teaching.

Utecht is a professor of chemistry and bio-chemistry at South Dakota State University.

According to an article by the SDSU University Relations, "Utecht, in his 13th year at SDSU, blends the traditional lab exercise with modern instrumental methods of data collection and analysis. His approach differs from simulated laboratory exercises that are gaining popularity at some institutions. With a simulation, students simply work at a computer and click on a simulated beaker to virtually mix chemicals and then watch a pre-recorded video of the expected results. In such situations, according to Utecht, students lose the tactile experience of laboratory work.

"I don't like simulations, especially for a university like SDSU," said Utecht. "We expect our students to complete hands-on work no matter what their major is. What I've done is combine the actual laboratory experience with modern methods of data collection and analysis to provide an experience that's more suited for what our students will be doing in the real world once they graduate. Even in their freshmen chemistry experience, they are using equipment that one would expect to find in a modern chemistry lab."

One obvious advantage of Utecht's software is students will know immediately whether their results are correct without waiting for the teaching assistant to intervene.

Jim Rice, professor and head of the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry, like the versatility and interaction the software package brings to the students.

"This offers students a true collaborative experience," he said. "It gives an opportunity for the students to work together in a way that's often difficult in freshmen labs."

Outdated Sunscreens

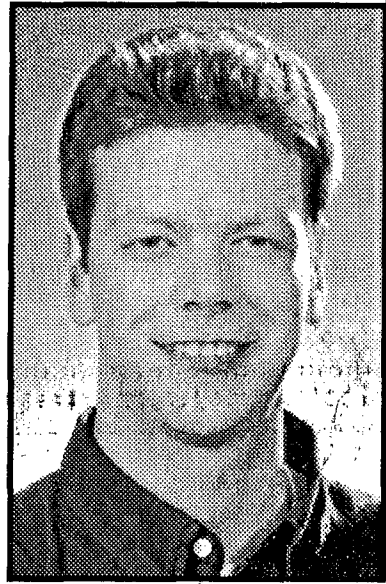

Long-term, unprotected exposure to sun accounts for 90% of skin cancers. Sunscreens deteriorate and lose activity over time. It is important to have fully active sunscreen and avoid sunburn. Discard any unused sunscreen that is over two years old or any that appears discolored. Some sunscreens are marked with an expiration date. Sunscreens deteriorate more rapidly if not stored in a cool place. Your pharmacist can help you find the sunscreen best suited to your needs.

Years went by and Matthews's desire to meet Dangberg's family was always in the back of his mind. Matthews was uneasy about finding Dangberg's family because his friend's death left him ridden with guilt as he was alive and he felt he should have been there to help his friend so he wouldn't have been killed.

A number of years ago the Dangbergs ran a notice in a military magazine "Screaming Eagles" wanting anyone who knew Dangberg to please contact them.

found Dennis Dangberg of Winside, Robert's brother. Matthews got in Matthews arrived in Wayne with his wife, Irma, his brother Pee Wee and wife, Berniece, and Matthew's sister, Margaret Sanders and husband Foster. While here, the group also visited with the Langenberg family.

Shaking his head in disbelief, Gilbert Dangberg said, "this is really something. Who would have thought after all these years Matthews would have looked us up."

Matthews notes he made the right decision to contact the Dangbergs and sums up their first visit to Nebraska as a really great experience. The group praised the Dangbergs and Langenbergs for being really nice. The only thing the southern group can't understand is "how Nebraska can have so many cornfields and not serve any grits."

Robert Dangberg, left, and Bobby Matthews prepare to leave with others in the 101st Airborne Mobile Unit (Screaming Eagles) on a mission while they were stationed in Viet Nam.

Matthews never saw the notice.

Finally, on Memorial Day, 2000, Bobby and his family were on vacation in Florida when they saw a segment on television about the mobile wall of names of servicemen killed in action being taken around the U.S. and a close up of his friend's name came on the screen. Bobby decided the time had come to look up the Dangbergs.

Typing in Robert Dangberg's name on the Internet, the family contact with Dennis, they phoned each other a number of times plus Dennis told Henry Langenberg's (of Hoskins) son, Gene, about Matthews and he starting phoning him too. In fact, Gene and his brother-in-law recently stopped in to see Matthews and family while they were visiting their family members in Spartensberg, S.C. Then in April of this year, plans were made for Matthews' and family to come to Nebraska to visit.

OTC Nutrient Shown to Help Osteoarthritis

Osteoarthritis, the common arthritis type that affects most of us as we age, has been shown to respond favorably to an over-the-counter (OTC) nutrient that is readily available in US pharmacies. This is good news for the 40 million Americans with osteoarthritis because the only alternative is aspirin or other antiinflammatory agents that just relieve pain - and often cause side effects.

In a 3-year study described in The Lancet, European researchers investigated the effects of the nutrient glucosamine sulfate. Approximately 100 persons with osteoarthritis took 1,500 mg of glucosamine daily; and about 100 took a placebo. Persons who took the placebo experienced significantly more cartilage degeneration than did those who took glucosamine. Glucosamine promotes production of proteoglycans, water-retaining molecules that are building blocks of cartilage tissue that is critical to joint function.

Soldiers are on duty

It's six in the morning-ready for a run. The mountains to the west blend into semi-arid flat land-but this isn't Colorado. And it is also not Nebraska.

Today, I begin my daily run inside the wired confines of Camp Able Sentry in Macedonia. Nebraska Army National Guard soldiers are in charge here processing soldiers, equipment, and supplies for U.S. Armed Forces in Kosovo. CAS (the acronym for the camp) because of its mission is supposed to be well away from the "front lines." But front lines in the Balkans have always been difficult to define, and today, CAS happens to be very near fighting between the Macedonian government and Albanian rebels.

One-fourth mile into my run I hear what sounds like a small airplane flying around the airport nearby. No-it's a pilotless observation craft airborne so its controller can practice landings (this is a potential war zone).

Otherwise the area has an almost eerie stillness-no wind, no traffic, no trains, no bustle of day-to-day activity in the local economy like back home.

Three quarters of a mile I hear and begin to see two Macedonian Soviet Hip helicopters starting engines to begin a mission. They are parked just outside the CAS security fence. The Albanian rebels leave the U.S. military alone; the Macedonians know this and take advantage of the situation by parking near the CAS compound to protect their valuable helicopters from attack.

One mile, artillery fire a few miles away abruptly breaks the quiet (wow-this IS a potential war zone). The calm and businesslike atmosphere within the CAS compound can lull one into complacency. Make no mistake, Macedonia is where the action is right now and sometimes it is not that far from Camp Able Sentry.

Indications of the unrelenting effort to assure protection of our soldiers are all over-manned and armed observation towers, sandbag reinforced bunkers, armored personnel carriers ready to move on order, barricade wire and concrete "dragon teeth." Personnel assigned to CAS always carry weapons and ammunition at their sides.

One-and-a-half miles-flowers: poppies. No other symbol so poignantly summarizes the death and destruction throughout the twentieth century in Western Europe. Ethnic and political struggles that ignited before WWI continue into the new millennium.

My second mile completes a circuit of the camp. It's a place that hundreds of thousands of American soldiers from past wars would quickly recognize.

Camps very similar to CAS existed to marshal forces for Desert Storm, in Vietnam, Korea, and WWII. Communications dishes jut out at a couple of points but otherwise the features common to all base camps exist here.

Sandbag reinforced bunkers, vehicle parking areas, large supply depots, barracks, the humorous white point signs (San Diego 6900 miles away, Omaha Nebraska 6368 km west), and rock lined building frontages.

But one significant difference subtly distinguishes CAS from its predecessors. The peacekeeping effort in the Balkans is not front-page news. Our brave Nebraska soldiers at Camp Able Sentry perform Herculean duty virtually unknown outside their immediate families. They organize and send supply convoys to a base camp in Kosovo daily. They may have close to 3,000 soldiers at CAS preparing to move to or out of Kosovo. Right now they do this fearful that the local conflict could possibly affect CAS.

They proudly serve at a tremendous sacrifice to personal and professional lives by home. They left families and jobs to fulfill their obligation to the Nebraska National Guard. One member missed his daughter's high school graduation. The company that employed one member went broke-he has a job to find when he returns. But none complain.

Camp Able Sentry has a permanent party consisting of over 550 active and reserve component personnel working together as one, integrated team. This is the nature of today's armed forces. Our Nebraska Army National Guard soldiers are every bit as professional, trained, and ready to serve as their active component compadres.

My reason for traveling to CAS was to boost their spirits and let them know Nebraska stands behind them all the way.

After a couple of circuits around Camp Able Sentry seeing and thinking about what they are accomplishing the "tables have turned"-mine are the spirits being raised. I'm proud to see soldiers from Nebraska so fully engaged. I'm proud that Nebraska soldiers are such solid professionals. I am proud to be a part of the greatest and most compassionate military the world has ever known.

Debating the gambling issue

By Ed Howard
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

Tom Osborne has faced some big challenges in his life, both personal and professional. None of them were any bigger than the one he has picked for himself as a freshman member of Congress.

Osborne wants an act of congress to bar gambling on amateur sports. That means he wants a federal law to bar the gambling on amateur sports that now goes on in Nevada and is sanctioned there by state law.

The objective fact is that nothing in Osborne's past - not the fight against heart disease, not the national football titles, not the difficulties in dealing with players who had personal and legal problems - compare to the uphill battle he has chosen for himself this time.

Americans like to gamble on college sports. Americans do gamble on college sports. Americans will not stop gambling on college sports, regardless of what Congress says or does.

There are a variety of political realities at play here. There is the amount of political juice the Las Vegas crowd can muster. There is the common sense factor, ever a variable, in Congress: There is the reaction, whether small, medium or large, of the public.

No one other than crooks wants to see college games corrupted by gambling. The thing is, there are loads of crooks out there, and they have loads of money to offer players, officials and anyone else who might be willing to shave a point, throw a contest or whatever. But the fact is that if all the crooks in America moved to China tomorrow, there would still be billions of dollars wagered on amateur sporting events, both high school and college.

Osborne and his allies in this fight could find themselves in the position of those altogether sincere prohibitionists who fought the fight, good or otherwise, to ban the sale of alcohol in the United States. They could win a battle and not make a dent in the war.

From this corner, it would seem that the only hope for diminishing the influence of gambling on athletic contests rests with individual conferences, programs, coaches and players.

Congress has the power to put a halt to legalized amateur sports betting that goes through Las Vegas - just as it had the power to outlaw the sale and distribution of alcohol in the 1920s.

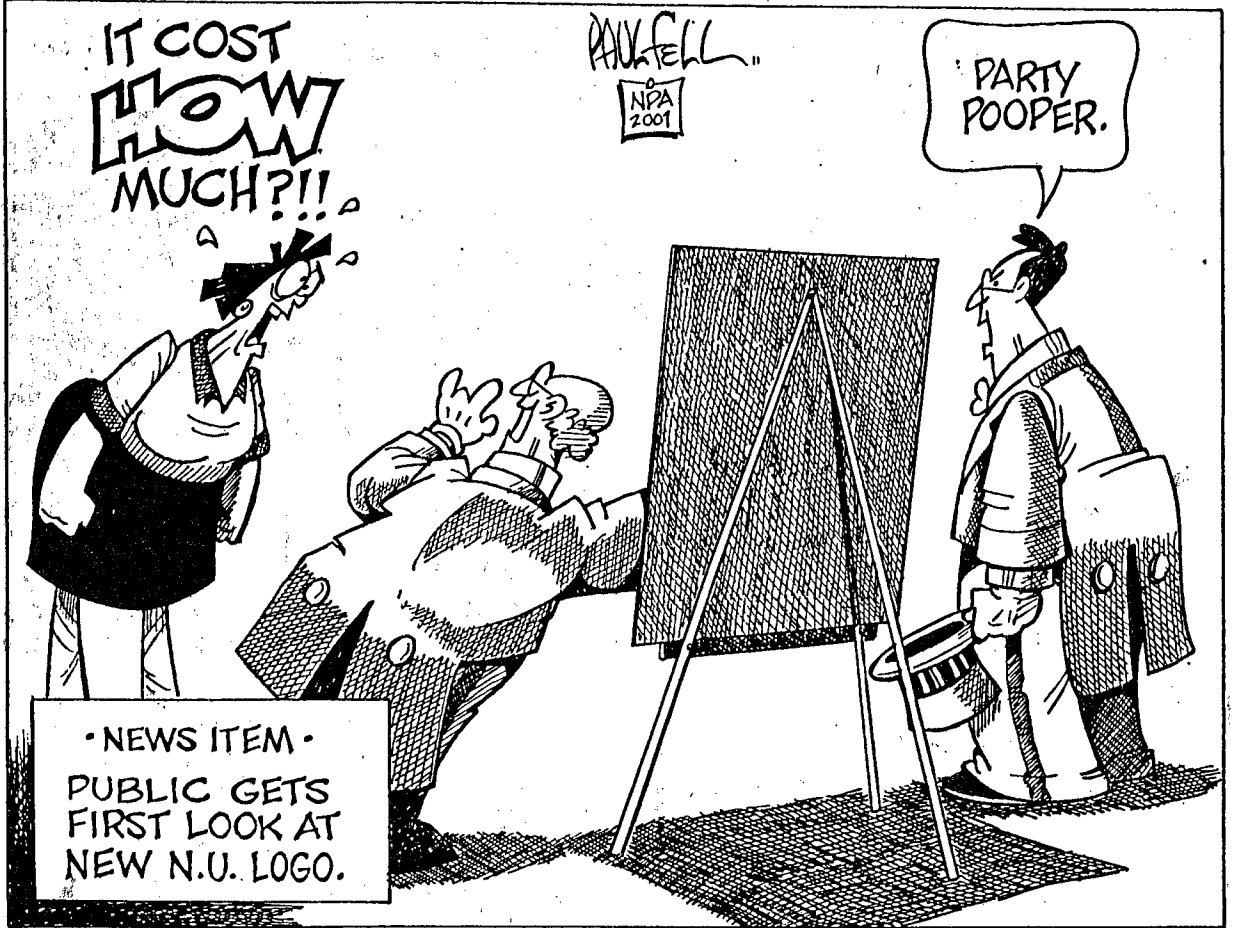

What Congress cannot do is halt the flow of gambling dollars, any more than it can halt the flow of alcohol.

The cost of government is always a sensitive issue in Nebraska. Thus, it was no surprise when any number of people appeared aghast when the University of Nebraska said it would be spending something like $40,000 to change the NU logo.

Only a part of that sum went to the outside firm that came up with the new logo, but it is altogether understandable that some folk reacted negatively to it.

With all the talk about excellence and creativity and such at NU, it is natural for some of the citizenry to ask: "Couldn't some of those guys at the University have done this in their spare time?"

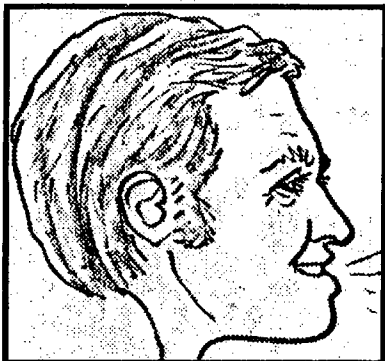

Main Street Focus

By Leo Ahmann

The Fourth of July already . . . time goes by much too quickly. And with the passing of the Fourth, that means the Chicken Show/Henoween is upon us.

Don't forget to attend the downtown Henoween activities Friday night (the 13th). (This is my last chance to "pitch our product!") Henoween activities include a talent show, the Wayne County Jaycees kids' game, the Eastern Star's always delicious pie and ice cream social (which will be selling out of the Main Street Office this year), the world's largest chicken dance contest, art, food and craft vendors and concluding our activities will be a teen dance in the auditorium and also some games, located on Pearl Street, for those young people.

The Chicken Show on Saturday, July 14, at Wayne State College, will include all the usual food, fun and contests. The parade sounds like it may be one of the largest ever. All we need now is the continued cooperation of Mother Nature and your attendance.

We hope you noticed the gazebo being constructed in "The Park" and some of the other work being done in that area. By the way, have you noticed all the blooming Wayne Greenhouse planters downtown and the plants and flowers in the State National Bank Park, next to the Wayne Herald? Just a few of the pleasant sights that a visitor through Wayne is greeted by.

Be sure to take a peek at the newly erected poles in the alley ways between The Diamond Center and Schaeffer's Maytag and across the street between The Ren and Inventive Communications. The first banner will be up soon!!! Thanks again to Vern Schultz and his city maintenance staff, Garry Poutre and his city electrical staff, Gerhold Concrete, Gary Van Meter and Jeff Morlok and his staff at Otte Construction, for all their work.

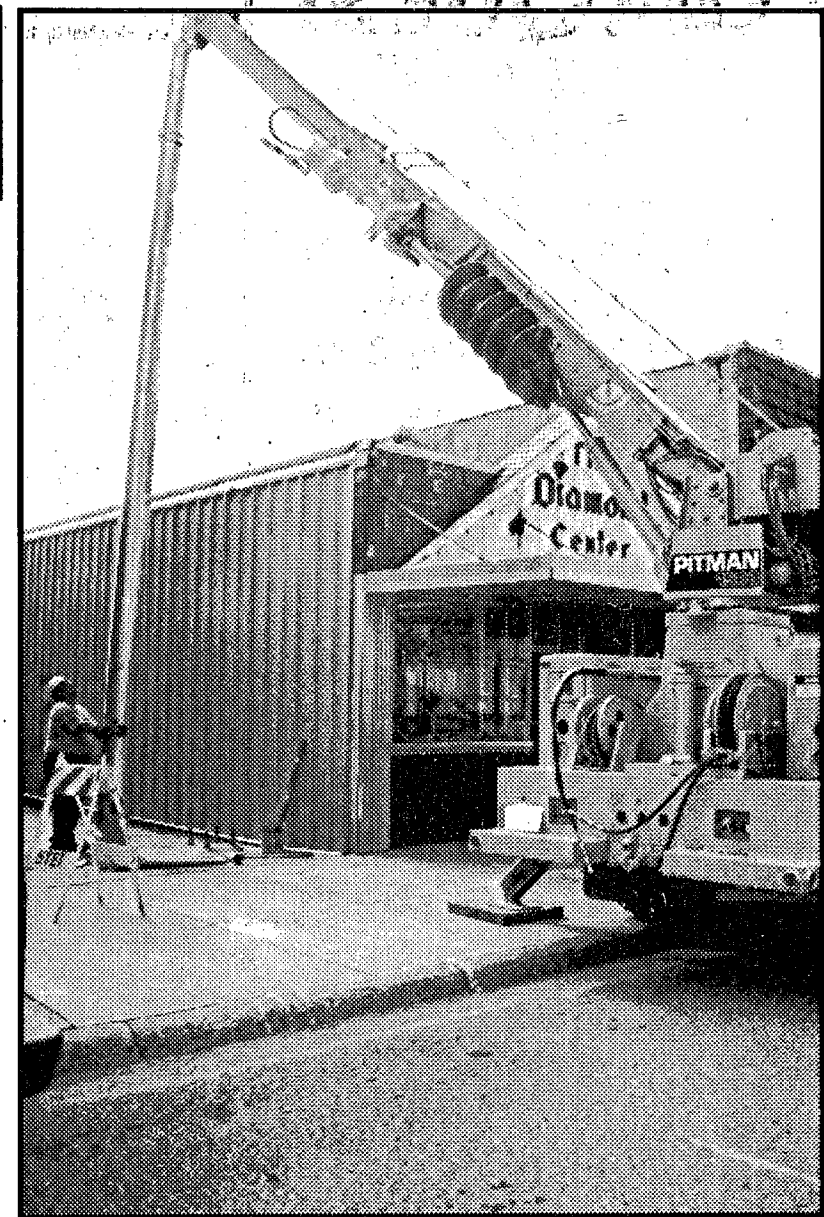

This week I'd like to visit with you about being a volunteer . . . not necessarily just with the main Street Program, but with any group, club, church or organization here in Wayne. The Main Street Program could not, would not, function without the terrific support of our volunteers. The majority of our volunteers also operate a full time business. It's truly amazing the time and work they donate to our program.

Volunteers are actually motivated by many different things: Common Goals - people working for the same thing; Activism - some people are doers and see volunteering as the best way to accomplish something; Altruism - some people are just natural givers; Self Esteem, Patriotism, Career Goals - some people see volunteerism as a way to build a solid resume, plus many other reasons.

There are a broad range of volunteer activities from which to choose. Volunteers do not have to have any special skill or reason to participate, we'll just be happy to have you involved. Any group that asks for volunteers is just asking them to take responsibility for their community. See you soon?????

Henoween Talent Show . . . prize money . . . ENTER NOW !!! Contact the Main Street Office at 208 N. Main or call 375-5062.

Until next time . . .

Planting the poles

City crews worked last week to install the poles in the 200 Block of Main Street. The poles will be used display banners with information on activities taking place in Wayne.

Grant is awarded

The Wayne County Sheriff's Office is receiving grant funding assistance for obtaining one in-car video camera system, according to Fred Zwonechek, Administrator of the Nebraska Office of Highway Safety.

"This highway safety grant funding in the amount of $1,665 will aid the Wayne County Sheriff's Office in purchasing one camera system," Zwonechek said.

The State of Nebraska has qualified for additional highway safety alcohol incentive funds for the past six years. The Nebraska Office of Highway Safety has used this funding primarily to aid local area law enforcement in obtaining in-car cameras and alcohol testing equipment used to assist in the apprehension and conviction of drinking drivers.

"The continued availability of these funds, along with the commitment and dedication of local law enforcement agencies to aggressively enforce alcohol driving violations, has kept Nebraska's alcohol-crash rate well below the national average," Zwonechek said.

During the past three years, the agency has awarded funding to purchase 704 in-car camera systems and 851 preliminary alcohol breath testing units.

FINDS TREASURE

Late Monday evening, June 25, Karen Victoria and her daughter Chelsey were out searching for the treasure after a new clue was released. The pair decided that it must be under the deck along the right field line of Eaton Field, so went home to solicit the aid of husband, Mark.

The family found the treasure, a regular baseball sitting on a support beam under the deck. They collected 400 Wakefield Dollars for their efforts compliments of a number of Wakefield sponsors and the Advance Committee.

Many Sherlocks had become discouraged in the past week to 10 days and rumors began to circulate among hunters that the treasure had been found. But, that was not the case, not until around 10 p.m.

Monday night when it was turned in.

Herbs for Health

Valerian Caution: CNS Depressants, Pregnancy, Lactation

The use of valerian as a sedative dates back to the 16th century in Asia, North America, and Europe. We know about the chemicals in valerian that seem to cause sedation (valeripatriates), but we do not understand how the herb causes sedation.

A study of 128 persons taking 400 mg of valerian extract confirmed the herb's sedative and sleep-inducing activity. Users of the extract reported significant improvement in sleep quality. Night awakenings and next-morning grogginess were rare. In another study similar results were obtained with 450 mg or 900 mg of valerian extracts. The larger dose was no more effective than the smaller dose and caused significant next-morning grogginess.

The reported dosage for valerian ranges from 400 mg to as much as 3,000 mg taken as often as 3 times daily and at bedtime. Use in pregnancy or by lactating women should be avoided because of insufficient information. Valerian use may potentiate the sedative effects of CNS (central nervous system) depressants.

Wayne's 18-under and 16-under teams place runner-up

By Gabe Musselman
For the Herald

The Wayne 18-under team continue to roll through the season this week by going 6-1, with a second place finish in districts with wins over Logan View, two against David City, Scribner/Snyder, and regular season wins over Tekamah and Herman.

Wayne kicked off the week with a 5-1 victory over Tekamah.

Brandy Alexander led the way on the mound by pitching a complete game for the win with six strikeouts.

Beth Sperry provided the hot bat by ripping three doubles.

Band plans reunion

The Leafy Spurge Band returns to the stage for a rare performance on Friday, July 13 at Riley's Ballroom in Wayne.

For more than a quarter of a century, the band has entertained audiences throughout the Midwest.

With its roots (no pun intended) firmly in traditional country music, they grew through the "country rock" movement of the late 1970's and early 1980's, developing a high energy mix that ranged from Hank Sr. to the Rolling Stones, never selling out to the "Pop Goes the Country" sounds of the late 1980's for those who remember the Urban Cowboy thing. By the time the "new traditionalist" movement, as it was called by Nashville, began in the 1990's, the "Spurge" as they had come to be known by their many fans, had outlasted three major changes in the country music industry and was still wooing crowds with its undeniably unique style.

The band has worked on venues with an impressive list of entertainers that included Brooks and Dunn, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Asleep at the Wheel, Marshall Tucker, Merle Haggard and many others.

The band will perform for one night only at Riley's Ballroom.

Steer clear of products promising miracles

Fraudulent health products aren't as uncommon as one might think. Promotions for these products are found daily in newspaper and magazine ads, infomercials and on the Internet. Consumers who use these products often waste their money on ineffective goods that may harm the body and keep them from using traditional, proven treatments. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration urges consumers to watch for potentially fraudulent products and avoid using them. Be suspicious of products that claim to cure a variety of unrelated diseases, especially serious ones, such as cancer or diabetes. No product can treat every condition and many diseases can only be controlled, not cured. Promotions that use personal testimony also should be viewed critically. Testimonies lack scientific backing and people favorable experiences may be caused by remission or use of approved medical treatments, not the fraudulent product itself. Be wary of products that claim to cure or bring relief quickly. Few diseases can be fixed quickly, even when using proven treatments. Remember, the words "in days," actually can refer to any amount of time. "Natural" products attract attention because they sound safer than conventional treatments. However, 60 percent of over-the-counter drugs and 25 percent of prescription drugs already are based from natural ingredients. Treatments that claim to be "new discoveries," "exclusive products" or "miracle cures" are suspicious. If the product cured a major disease, it would be widely reported in legitimate forms of media, not on a web site or a late-night infomercial. Also be cautious of products that are based on "ancient remedies." Some herbs used in the past for medicinal purposes have risks identified only recently. Money-back guarantees aren't as generous as they seem. People who market fraudulent products rarely stay in the same place for long and customers have difficulty contacting the company when something goes wrong. If a treatment sounds too good to be true, it probably is. If consumers have any doubt about a product's validity, they should do the following:

- Get opinions from a doctor or other health professional;
 - Contact the Better Business Bureau or a local attorney general's office to see if others have filed claims against the company promoting the product;
 - Check with health professional groups, such as the American Medical Association, American Diabetes Association or American Dietetic Association to obtain resource materials about diseases and their proper treatments.
 - Talk to professionals at a local FDA office and see if the agency has taken action against the product or its marketer.

Mosquito prevention begins in the backyard

Nothing ruins an outdoor celebration faster than a swarm of mosquitoes.

Homeowners who want to keep mosquitoes from ruining a summer barbecue should check their backyards first, Dave Keith, a University of Nebraska urban entomologist said.

"Most mosquito problems originate in standing water near the home," Keith said.

Any source of standing water is a breeding ground for mosquitoes, he said. Homeowners should flush or refresh stagnant water in bird baths and drain children's wading pools or old buckets and tires. Do so often to prevent the mosquito larva's main food source, algae, from growing, Keith said.

"Walk around the neighborhood and point out problem areas to your neighbors, too," he said.

Most of Nebraska has received above-average rainfall this summer so it may be difficult to eliminate mosquitoes in moist or flooded areas. However, it's possible to get bitten less, Keith said.

"The best protection is clothing," the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said.

He recommends wearing light-colored long pants and long-sleeved shirts and spraying clothing with small amounts of chemical repellents containing DEET or permethrin. DEET also can be sprayed on skin, but "don't bathe in it," Keith said. A drop or two should do the job. Choose a repellent with a low percentage of DEET, especially if kids use the product.

"It's best to treat clothing rather than skin whenever possible, especially for kids or if you are sensitive to DEET," he said.

People also reduce their chances of getting bitten if they work outdoors when it's sunny or breezy, Keith said, and avoid going outside in early evening, when mosquitoes are most active.

Don't ignore Financial Privacy statements

If you're tempted to throw away those inserts or mailings from banks and other financial institutions, don't. They can help you protect your privacy.

These privacy notices explain a federal law that gives consumers more freedom to decide how financial service companies use their personal information. Financial institutions have been mailing these privacy notices in recent months.

Kathleen Prochaska-Cue, a University of Nebraska family economist, said financial institutions commonly give customer information to companies within their corporate families. Some also sell it to other companies that use the information for marketing purposes. A customer's income, assets and debts may be some of the details shared.

The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999 allows consumers to limit the personal and financial information that financial service firms share with outside companies. Financial institutions must notify customers of their privacy rights by July 1.

Customers who opt out of sharing information will likely receive fewer credit card solicitations and advertisements for financial services, Prochaska-Cue said. Those who want information about new products and services probably will continue receiving it if they don't opt to limit information sharing.

The law applies to banks, savings and loans institutions, credit unions, insurance companies and securities firms. It also applies to some retail ers and car dealers that collect information for credit arrangements.

Consumers should read these notices carefully, especially if they're considering "opting out," Prochaska-Cue said.

There isn't a standard privacy form or notice. Consumers need to follow instructions that each notice provides. The notice should explain what kind of information is collected and to whom the information may be provided. Notices also should indicate what information customers can restrict and provide a way to do so, Prochaska-Cue said.

"But if consumers want to opt out, they have to do it themselves," she said. "The bank won't do it for you."

Consumers can't prevent all personal information from being shared, she said. An institution may provide information to outside companies as part of normal business. For example, many banks hire firms to handle data processing for checking account statements or electronic banking transfers.

Information that is publicly available, such as phone numbers or home mortgage records, also can be shared.

The law's potential impact will depend on consumers' opinions about information sharing, Prochaska-Cue said.

"Attitude is a big part of this -- how do you feel about information being shared without your direct permission to do so?" she said.

GARDEN CLUB

The Hoskins Garden Club met at the Shirley Mann home on June 28 for a dessert luncheon.

President Hildegard Fenske opened the meeting with a quote from Martin Luther, "God creates out of the dry, dull earth so many flowers of such beautiful colors, and such sweet perfume, such as no painter nor apothecary can rival. From the common ground God is ever bringing forth flowers, golden, crimson, blue, brown and of all colors."

She also read a poem entitled "Summer Sun" by Robert Louis Stevenson.

Shirley had some questions about several patriotic songs and the group sang "America the Beautiful." Esther Rechterman shared the poem entitled "How to Plant a Garden."

Roll call was answered by telling of a favorite holiday of the year.

Secretary Christine Lueker read the minutes of April meeting and gave the treasurer's report.

Business matters included contributing $5 to the Wayne County Fair for the best over-all rose and planning a tour at Gail Korn's Garden Perennials in July.

Christine presented the comprehensive study entitled "A Place For Swindling Spirits and Flutter Bys."

Hildegard gave the lesson on "Baskets that Bloom" and "Perking up Climbers."

The Watchword for June was "Laughter is the sunlight of the soul."

Following the meeting, the group visited the Norfolk Art Center to enjoy the display of Herb Mignery's sculpture collection.

The club members plan to have a tour on Thursday, July 26.

June was a hectic month

It's Monday morning, the second of July, and Nancy at the bank in Hoskins says Wayne County had lots of rain last night. Hopefully, it's moved this way, because I can hear thunder.

I'm glad the month of June is over. It was a bit hectic for this old "retired" lady. One of the hospice nurses in Lincoln was on vacation the last two weeks of the month, so I worked there six days.

A family in Lincoln had a sixtieth wedding anniversary celebration for their parents at Platte River Park. They made reservations here for the honored couple on Friday and Saturday months ago.

Then, about three months ago, an 80-year-old lady called from Connecticut. Her family lived in Omaha when her children were small, and she still has friends there. Her son resides in San Jose, and her daughter in rural North Carolina. Both are married, with children.

Her plan was for them to meet in Nebraska and "bond". She wanted Mahoney; but, of course, was way too late. We were the next best.

4-H'ers take part in Horse Show

Wayne County results are: Junior Western Pleasure, over 14 hands — Red: Matt Davis, Carroll; Karissa Meyer, Wakefield; Mariah Meyer and Jamie Sellin, Hoskins.

Senior Western Pleasure, over 14 hands — Red: Josh Davis, Carroll.

Junior Western Horsemanship — Red: Matt Davis, Carroll; Karissa Meyer, Wakefield; Mariah Meyer and Jamie Sellin, Hoskins.

Junior Reining — White: Jamie Sellin, Hoskins.

Junior Poles — Red: Matt Davis, Carroll; Karissa Meyer, Wakefield.

Senior Poles — Blue: Josh Davis, Carroll.

Junior Barrels — Red: Matt Davis, Carroll; Karissa Meyer, Wakefield.

Senior Barrels — Red: Josh Davis, Carroll.

Josh Davis qualified for the State 4-H Horse Exposition in Senior Barrel Racing.

By: Pat Meierhenry

We've had nine people before; but, usually, half were very small: in cribs, play pens, etc. They were to be here for a week. She thought the kids could use hideabeds, mattresses, whatever. As a parent, I knew I wouldn't want two teenagers sleeping in my room for that long.

And the teens would certainly not want those kind of accommodations for very long. Besides, we would need to put the elderly couple in our room for the two nights they would be here; and we would be in the hideabed in the family room. What to do?

Our neighbors have two air streams. I don't know why, but they do. They left yesterday on a 60 day trip to Newfoundland, with the bigger one.

Yes, they could park the smaller one on our yard. Voila! The two teenage boys could sleep there.

So, it all worked out. The second family leaves today. And I will be very glad they're lovely people, don't get me wrong. But they have taken over my house, and my refrigerator, and my kitchen.

No one came to breakfast at the same time. Half, especially the teens, didn't eat what I prepared. They emptied the cookie jar. (Yes, I offered.) They drank only bottled water and "soda." The empties are running over in the pantry. The trash just piles up. And one guy insists on smoking in one upstairs bathroom! I mean, isn't the porch good enough?

Our well almost didn't keep up, and the electric meter must have been running at top speed. Yes, we took in a lot of money. No, we won't do it again. You know me, I always have to learn the hard way.

Have a happy, and safe Fourth of July!
