Area residents responding to the events of Tuesday waited in long lines at area gas stations to fill tanks before expected gas hikes went into effect. Citizens all over the country were glued to radios and TV's throughout the day, to learn about the events of the terrorist attacks. Nearly everyone had a friend or relative who was closely affected by the disaster.

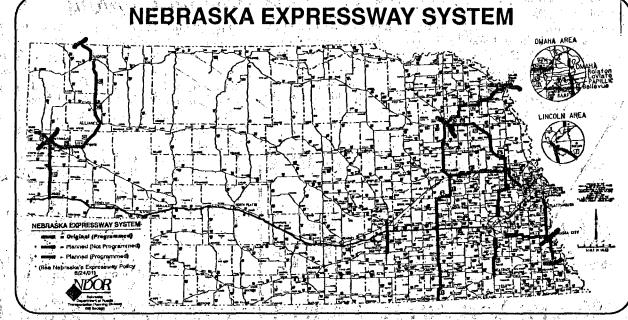

Town hall meetings are planned

Town hall meetings are planned this winter for communities along Nebraska Highway 35 from South Sioux City to Norfolk for public input into a Nebraska Department of Roads corridor study that will propose beginning points and a general outline for the route of the proposed four lane Highway 35 Expressway.

Nebraska Department of Roads Director John Craig and State Highway Commission Chair John Kingsbury of Ponca, met with Highway 35 Expressway officials in Norfolk last week to propose the meetings and announce the new Department of Roads policy regarding future Nebraska expressways that was adopted unanimously at the Commission's August meeting.

In 1988 the Department of Roads created a list of 600 miles of Nebraska Highways that would be upgraded to four lanes over a 25-year period. Highway 35 from South Sioux City to Norfolk was not included on the original list and no additional roads would be added until the original list was constructed.

The new Expressway Policy established a second category of Planned Expressways to recognize unlisted segments of highways that are showing significant increase in regional and local traffic,

The map above shows highways in Nebraska that are under consideration for improvements.

America rocked

Pardon me for jumping into another section of the newspaper for my column this week but the events of the week have been anything but ordinary.

National news is not something you'll generally see a lot of in weekly papers because after all, that's what you have the daily papers for. Very seldom do weekly papers add something to a national event that you don't already know.

NAMES OF CONTRACTOR

However, America was rocked on Tuesday by heinous and cowardly people. Granted, the events took place out east but the after shock was felt by every man, woman and child in this free country, through fear, sadness, anger and for many, all of the above.

Fear was generated through not being able to understand how four commerical airlines could be hijacked in our country at virtually the same time.

Sadness came from the elevated loss of life of innocent people of which we'll not know the exact numbers for many days and maybe even weeks.

Anger was sparked from watching the repeated clips of the planes crashing into the world trade center, crumbling one of the United State's most recognizable skyscrapers to a mass pile of rubble.

Anger was also evoked from the pictures on television of Palestinians dancing and celebrating in the streets because of our tragedy.

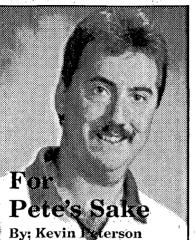

People that hide behind their religion for excuses such as hatred are cowards. I can't imagine, as mortal as I am, a God that would promote mass destruction of innocence unless that God is one of evil.

As we at the Wayne Herald went about our business as usual on Tuesday, it almost made us feel guilty that we were able to carry on while Americans were dying in masses because of cowardly acts.

Ironically, Tuesday was September, 11 with the numerical numbers being 9-1-1. Though the sun shone brightly across our great state, it was dark and gloomy in the minds of those who stopped to think for one second about what was happening in the eastern part of the United States.

The United States will find who targeted the assault on America and proper punishment will be handed out.

In the meantime...God Bless America!

Capitol News Cutting Nebraska's budget

By Ed Howard Statehouse Correspondent

The Nebraska Press Association

Fate led a couple of Nebraska governors, who happened to be Democrats, to situations that demanded cutting the state's budget in big, big ways.

Now, fate (otherwise known as the economy) might be preparing to give Republican Gov. Mike Johanns the same opportunity. Frankly, it's an opportunity that most chief executives could gladly live without ._

Between federal programs that have to be partially funded with state dollars, and state programs that literally are vital to local governments and various elements of the citizenry, the state actually doesn't have a lot of wiggle room.

Johanns, like most candidates for governor, talked during, his campaign about how he worked as mayor of Lincoln to lead a successful budget-reduction fight, And with a budget the size of the state's spending plan, why, he'd have himself a regular field day.

Almost all politicians say that stuff. Most of 'em don't do it; and don't try. Former Democratic Govs. Bob Kerrey and Ben Nelson didn't have a choice, nor did the Legislatures with which they served, Tough economic times demanded that both governors, and the Legislatures with which they served, cut every program that could stand it, and virtually wipe out others. Remember this: The popular myth aside, Nebraska government does not have a lot of money tied up in state government operations compared with most states (Mississippi might be an exception here) Nebraska spends a very small amount to keep the wheels of state government turning.

Nebraska spends its state dollars on aid to local governments (especially education) and social services, such as health care and other relief for the poor. If the economy necessitates a round of budget cuts, look for brick and mortar projects to be thoroughly combed, for the University of Nebraska and the state colleges to be examined with a fine-tooth comb, and for promised, future spending to be re-examined more carefully than that imaginary "federal surplus" we've been hearing about for years.

SIGN RIGHT HERE!

Suggestions to Consider Before You Sign Your Name Your signature may be required on a contract when you buy a car, join a health club, or agree to purchase other goods or services. The document you sign will state what your obligations are, as well as what the seller will be required to provide to you. It is up to the consumer to read, and to be sure he understands, any document before affixing a signature.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office receives calls every week from Nebraskans who misunderstood the terms of a contract. Other consumers have changed their minds, and would like to know if they can cancel a contract they have already signed.

Sometimes consumers find that they have entered into a contract without even realizing it. Signing what appears to be a contest entry form may indeed change the consumer's long distance telephone carrier. A check received through the mail may appear to be a "free gift", but the endorsement signature may obligate the consumer to make regular payments to the business that issued the check for a service he didn't understand he was agreeing to purchase. Here are some suggestions to consider before you sign your name to any agreement or contract: 25 C. 15 (A.

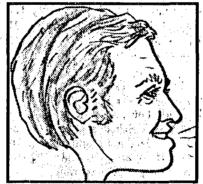

- Read the agreement or contract thoroughly and be sure you understand all of the provisions.
- Never be rushed into signing your name, and think twice before signing when you are told the offer is good only if you sign now, A legitimate business will give you time to consider the proposal.
- If there is anything in the document you do not understand, take • :it to someone else to review, or consider having a private, licensed attorney answer your questions.
- Be sure that any verbal representations given by the business are written into the contract. The business may not be obligated to honor promises not contained in the document.
- Do not sign any agreement or contract that is not completely filled in, and be sure to keep your copy. An unscrupulous business may fill in a higher price or interest rate than was mutually agreed to, or may indicate a longer term contract than you were told verbally.
- Before you sign your name, ask about any cancellation . provisions and be sure any provisions stated verbally are also included in the written contract.
- Remember that a contract is a legally binding agreement. Cancellation provisions written into the contract must be honored by the business. But if there are no written provisions for cancellation, you may well be bound by your signature. For more information about this or any other consumer issue contact: Office of Attorney General Don Stenberg, Consumer Protection

"This response has been similar to that of the flight 232 disaster," said Jan Twait, executive director of the Siouxland Community Blood Bank. "We will extend donor hours as needed, and we encourage outlaying communities to donate at local mobile drives over the next few weeks."

Blood collection hours at 1019 Jones Street in Sioux City will begin at 7 a.m. and go to 6 p.m. or later if need be. Because it will take weeks to replenish the blood supply, the blood bank will have mobile units in different communities over the next few weeks.

There are local mobile blood drives scheduled: Providence Medical Center in Wayne on Sept. 27 from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m., at Wayne State College on Oct. 9-10 from 10:30 a.m.- 4:30 p.m., at Laurel Methodist Church from 9 a.m.-3 p.m., and at Providence Medical Center on Oct. 25 from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

Because air transport is not currently available, highway trans-

Discipline helps consumers avoid major credit problems

By Ashley Anderson IANR News and Publishing Put away the plastic.

That's the advice of Kathy Prochaska-Cue, a University of Nebraska family economist who has noticed a growing number of consumers getting into credit card debt.

"It's getting to the point where people are maxing out several cards and losing track of what they truly owe," Prochaska-Cue said. "Making minimum payments each month isn't enough."

Two types of consumers seem particularly vulnerable to credit card problems: those who use credit to buy unnecessary extras and those who pay bills on credit when they get into a cash-flow crunch, Prochaska-Cue said.

"It's so easy to pull the plastic out because there's a surreal element to it," she said. "You separate yourself from the reality of paying for the item.'

Becoming a disciplined shopper may help an impulsive buyer avoid credit problems, Prochaska-Cue said, but the solution may be more difficult for those who need money to pay their bills.

People with bills past due need to find a way to make them current, she said. Then the consumer can make a plan to avoid that situation in the future, such as getting another job or cutting expens-

Those who have gotten into severe debt should seek help from a non-profit credit counseling agency, such as Consumer Credit Counseling of Nebraska Inc., Prochaska-Cue said. Consolidation loans also may be beneficial, but they're not for everyone. Making one payment instead of several is the advantage of a consolidation loan, but the loan also extends the consumer's debt into the future and it takes longer to pay off, she said. Loans usually have interest rates up to 30 percent.

"Research shows there is a high probability that people may get into deeper trouble than before,' she said. "The theory behind consolidation loans is to give people breathing room so they can attord basic expenses, but then they feel like they can afford more credit and end up spending more."

Consolidation loans only benefit those who have the discipline to avoid added debt, she said.

Prochaska-Cue said a strict budget can help consumers eliminate or stay out of credit card debt no matter what their financial situation may be.

Consumers should add up the credit they owe, not including mortgages, and track spending patterns to decide what can be cut from their budget.

"There isn't a quick fix once you get into the credit card hole, and you'll have to live at a basic level for awhile," the NU Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources specialist said. Prochaska-Cue offered these shopping suggestions to control spending habits: • Make a shopping list and stick to it.

Shop alone to avoid buying pressure from kids or spouses. • Put extra, nonessential items in the shopping cart's child seat. At the end of the shopping trip, choose one item to keep and put the rest back. "Make your expenses match your income. It sounds very simple, but it's hard for people to do," Prochaska-Cue said.

This column is written occasionally to inform the Wayne area as to what types of reading material and other items are available at the Wayne Public Library.

""Books are to be called for and supplied on the assumption that the process of reading is not a half-sleep; but in the highest sense an exercise, a gymnastic struggle; that the reader is to do something for himself, " — Walt Whitman

Wayne Public Library is excited to announce the availability of a new collection. The Parenting Corner opened for business in the Children's Room on Sept. 1. This collection of books and videos is designed to assist parents and caregivers in dealing with the problems and joys of raising children. Wakefield News

Mrs.Walter Hale 402-287-2728

RECOGNIZED FOR 40 YEARS

The National Weather Service (NWS) recently presented Paul Burman with a 40 year service certificate. David Theophilius, meterorologist in charge of the Weather Service office in Valley made the presentation.

Also present for the presentation were Terry Landsvork, cooperative program representative for northeast Nebraska at Valley, Greg Harmon, meterorogist in charge of the weather service office in Sioux Falls, SD., Burman, Theophilus, Marla Doxey, data acquisition program manager at Hastings, and George Matuella ofNWS data acquisition program from Valley.

As the official NWS cooperative Weather Observer for Wakefield, Burman has used NWS equipment to measure and record precipitation amounts in addition to high and low temperatures on a daily basis at his residence since November of 1960. Of the nearly 10,000 cooperative weather observers in this country, Burman stands out as an elite member of this outstanding group of volunteers, stated Theophilus.

In 1978, Burman was recognized as one of the nation's top 25 volunteer observers, when the NWS presented him with the John Campanipus Holm award. Nine years later he was one of only five observers presented with the nation's most prestigious awards honoring cooperative observers. The award is named after the statesman-scientist, Thomas Jefferson for unusual and outstanding achievements in the field of meteorology.

The data provided by cooperative observers is used extensively by the National Weather Service, State Climatologist and numerous others in the public and private sectors. It eventually becomes a permanent part of the climactic record for the local area.

The observers record a variety of weather elements such as precipitation, temperature, river levels, evaporation, coil temperatures and severe weather phenomenon.

Official weather observations were first taken in the Wakefield area by Mr. J. H. Weaver in 1894.

There are over 300 official volunteer cooperative weather observers in he state and nearly 10,000 nationwide. Observers are located at private residents,' ranches, farms, municipal facilities, utilities, dams, parks, game refuges, radio stations and many, other locations.

The Department of Commerce, The National Weather Service and the State Climatologist greatly appreciate this service and extend their congratulations to Burman for a job well done.

Not only has Burman provided his weather data to the National Weather Service, but also to The Wakefield Republican for a weekly column for 40 years, and the past 16 years he has also shared his weather information with Sioux City television station KTIV channel 4.

Burman began keeping weather records on Nov. 9, 1960. He calculated that over the 40-plus years he has made 14,867 daily temperature and precipitation observations and nearly 10,000 trips to the thermometer each morning and evening for temperature settings.

LANGUAGE SKILLS

Estella Ortiz works on her language skills with instructor Pam Boehle at the Wakefield Family Resource Center. The Resource Center has reorganized their Adult Basic Education Program which is a cooperative effort by the Center with Northeast Community College of Norfolk, the Wakefield Community School and Even Start,

The program offers adults the opportunity to take General Education classes and English as a Second Language (ESL) classes. Boehle said there are currently about 13 active students in the classes, 10 in ESL and three working on their GED.

The ESL class is working with a number of language and communication skills, according to Boehle, such as different kinds of occupations, completing applications and forms, seasons, holiday, time and writing letters and addressing envelopes. The ESL students recently toured the Wakefield Post Office.

The GED students have worked with a wide range of skills from algebraic equations to interpreting and evaluating information to advancing writing skills, Boehle said.

Classes are held weekdays at the center and anyone interested in furthering their education is encouraged to contact the center for times and more information. WEST COAST GET TOGETHER

LONG DISTANCE LEARNING Some Winside High School students are experiencing a new method of classroom teaching, Long Distance Learning. Though the process has been done in other schools before, this is the first year it has been implemented in Winside.

"This is a two way audio and video system that can link up to four locations together at once," said High School Principal Ron Leapley, "Each of the students has a microphone so they can ask and answer questions with the teacher and other students. We are currently receiving Spanish I from Wayne State College; Spanish II from Yutan with an instructor we've hired from Omaha; and Vocational Agriculture from the Howells High School.

Winside is part of a consortium of 30 other schools, plus Wayne State College and Northeast Community College, which are linked together by Fiber Optic Cable. The Spanish I class coming from a Wayne State instructor is also being received in Pender during the same time as Winside. There are four television screens in the Winside classroom one showing the instructor, one showing the students in the Pender class and one showing the Winside students. The fourth television is available if another school also wants to hook on.

"We pay a fee to WSC for the use of their instructor and we pay the instructor at Yutan, but because Howell's is part of our consortium, we don't have to pay them. As part of the program though, Winside, is obligated to provide a class from here, so, Mrs. Fuhrman, our Guidance Counselor, will be offering the "Career's class second semester," says Leapley. "If our students are interested in a particular class that we don't have an instructor for, we have a list of

"Dr. Feidler said I had cataracts. Then I had to have laser to have a film removed from my eye. Everything came out real well.

I stalled a little bit but Dr. Feidler said it would help me to have it done. In time, it would have really bothered me.

I would push people to have it done. It's a blessing for you to be able to use your eyes. Cataract surgery has come such a long way. It's so simple now.

We like Dr. Feidler real well, We started with him many years ago and we have never changed. Wonderful staff here, too."

Entries needed for science awards

Middle school students participating in the Bayer/NSF Award are proving that they are the "Innovation Generation," creative, community-minded young people using science and technology to develop intriguing solutions to some of the nation's most pressing and poignant problems,

Now calling for entries for the 2001-02 school year, the Bayer/NSF Award is an exciting real-world experience that draws students of all interests and ability levels to science and community service. Past participants have tackled problems ranging from helping deaf athletes communicate with coaches and tapping intoa new power source for low-income families to building affordable housing on a Native American Reservation.

Last year, nearly 2,000 students competed nationwide, brainstorming, researching, testing and working with community mentors to tackle the problems that matter most to them. Three to four middle school students and an adult coach constitute a team: teams do not need to be affiliated with a school.

Ten finalist teams and their coaches win a week in Walt Disney World® Resort where a panel of engineers, research scientists and educators evaluate their entries. Winners receive US Savings Bonds of up to $5,000 for first, second, and third place, and one team wins the $25,000 Columbus Foundation Community Grant, seed money to bring their project to life.

way to focus on resources and to create a clearer future. It is a multi-step process with key elements focusing on: process of growth, impowering congregations to manage situations, redefining situations as opportunities, increasing leadership capacity within a congregation and renewal of purpose and mission.

Herald

The Bridge Builder program has impressive success for congregations across the nation. This process of helping congregations can have a profound impact for the renewal of purpose and mission for church families. The 20 people that have received the training are now capable of serving through the Bridge Builders system.

Tips shared for saving on insurance

Ways to save on your auto insurance policy? Want to save money? Here are some suggestions to help you save on your auto insurance policies. Auto insurance premiums can vary from company to company and from coverage to coverage, so be sure to shop around.

1. Comparison shop- Use consumer information provided by your state's insurance department. These guides tell you what coverages you need and show you sample rates, usually from the biggest companies. The Nebraska Department of Insurance has a 2001 Auto Rate Guide online at: www.nol.org:80/home/NDOI/broch ure/autoguid/guide.htm

2. Ask for higher deductibles-When you file a claim, a deductible is the amount of money you pay before your insurance company pays for the rest of the damage. Higher deductibles mean lower premiums. For example, increasing your deductible from $200 to $500 on collision coverage could reduce your premium by as much as 30 percent.

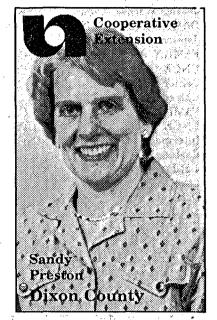

3. Drop collision and/or comprehensive coverages on older cars-If you own a car that's worth less than $1,000, you'll probably pay more for the coverage than you would ever collect on a claim. Some people are comfortable dropping collision and/or comprehensive coverage at an even higher car value.

Although insurance companies use their own criteria to determine fair market value for vehicles, you can find out how much your car is generally worth by checking with your bank or using the Kelley Blue Book, also available online at www.kbb.com.

Other online sources include: www.edmunds.com and www.nadaguides.com.

4. Buy a "low-profile" car- Cars that are expensive to repair or that have a high theft rate generally have higher insurance costs. Check insurance rates when you are shopping for a new or used car. 5 Take advantage of low ance companies offer discounts to drivers who put fewer than a predetermined number of miles on their vehicles each year. And with gas prices approaching, and in some cases, exceeding, $2 per gallon, carpooling or can help you save more than just premium dollars.

6. Consider insurance cost when making a move- Costs tend to be lowest in rural communities and highest in cities, where more traffic congestion occurs and the likelihood of theft increases.

7. Ask about discounts for automatic seat belts or air bags or antilock brakes. Your insurance agent should let you know about these discounts when you purchase your coverage. Most policies give discounts for air bags and automatic seat belts.

8. Ask about other discounts-Some companies offer, discounts for insuring more than one car, also insuring your home with them (known as a multiline discount), having no accidents in three years, being a driver over age 50, taking driver training courses, and having antitheft devices. Plus, remember good-student discounts when you're insuring a teen driver.

To enter: Students and coaches can call 1-800-291-6020 for details or visit www.bayernsfaward.com for more information and an entry form. The deadline for receipt of all entries is Jan. 31, 2002. Enjoying God's billboards

An addendum to last week's column: how about the woman on the bridge, threatening to jump; and folks in cars blocked from access honking, cursing, and yelling at her to jump? Wouldn't a boss understand being late to work?

STREET STREET

And, an additional observation regarding how we dress for work: "Working Woman" magazine found that where dress-down policies exist, there is an increase in tardiness, absenteeism, and "flirtatious behavior."

A comment on the weather: it's amazing what an inch and a half of rain can do to revitalize a lawn. We were very dry. We didn't see any of the stuff in Lincoln on Saturday night of the game, either; but I'm sure a lot of high school games were played in mud on Friday.

Which brings me to football: wasn't the first half great? It gives us hope for K State and Oklahoma. Brother Jim was elated because the Gamecocks managed to squeak by Georgia again; and on Sunday, his Raiders did the same to Jon's Chiefs.

I've enjoyed "God's billboards"

the last couple of years. They're the black boards with white letters that proclaim some fun, and not so subtle messages, like: "Loved the wedding, invite me to the marriage," and "Think it's hot down here?" Finally, someone forwarded me the whole bunch, and I sent them on to Jim. Now, I get calls on his cell phone while he's hopping around South Carolina, reporting what he sees on Baptist Church signs. Last week it was, "Wal-Mart's not the only saving place!" This week it was, "Sometimes, it takes six strong men to get a guy to church." I countered with "If you can't talk to people about God, talk to God about people." That was on the Lutheran Church in West Point, which has a long history of these. Some others were: "Let's meet at my house before the game," and

"Read the Book. There will be a test.' We actually had company for Sunday dinner yesterday, and I made an old-fashioned pot roast with carrots, potatoes, and gravy; with pie for dessert. And then, we visited all afternoon. Gosh, growing up, we did that every Sunday. In fact, the Big Farmer's cousin, Charlotte, who was here on Saturday for lunch, remarked about the same thing. Too bad we lost that custom. We don't seem to have time to "neighbor" anymore. Guess we will just have to visit at the game, or via email. But it's not the same as sitting on the couch, over coffee. We'll try to do more of that this fall.

Postscript on Tuesday morning: what kind of hate/anger would cause a person to fly a plane directly into a tall building, knowing you would die also?
