WSC School of Education and Counseling receives award

At a recent meeting of the Region III Chapter of the Nebraska Association of Elementary School Principals, chapter president Sherri Fillipi of South Sioux City presented a "Friend of Education Award" to the School of Education and Counseling at Wayne State College.

The award was made in recognition of the many contributions Wayne State has made to K-12 schools throughout northeast Nebraska. These include Teacher World, a new week-long teacher recruitment project; the Northeast Nebraska Teacher Academy, an innovative substitute teacher program; a compacted English as a Second Language endorsement program offered in multiple sites each summer, a project that enables schools to quickly prepare teachers for rapidly-changing demographics in the region; and for hosting and orchestrating the Northeast Nebraska Elementary Leadership Conference each year.

"This award is a great honor," said Paul Theobald, dean of the School of Education and Counseling. "Next to teaching excellence, service to the communities and schools of northeast Nebraska is our highest priority. An award like this makes the effort of some really wonderful professors worth it."

Honoring those who served

Carroll school closes its doors

By Clara Osten
Of the Wayne Herald

After 86 years, the doors closed on the Carroll school for the last time on Friday. Students performed the usual end-of-school activities, including the annual picnic, for one final time.

Declining enrollment in recent years has led to the closing of the school.

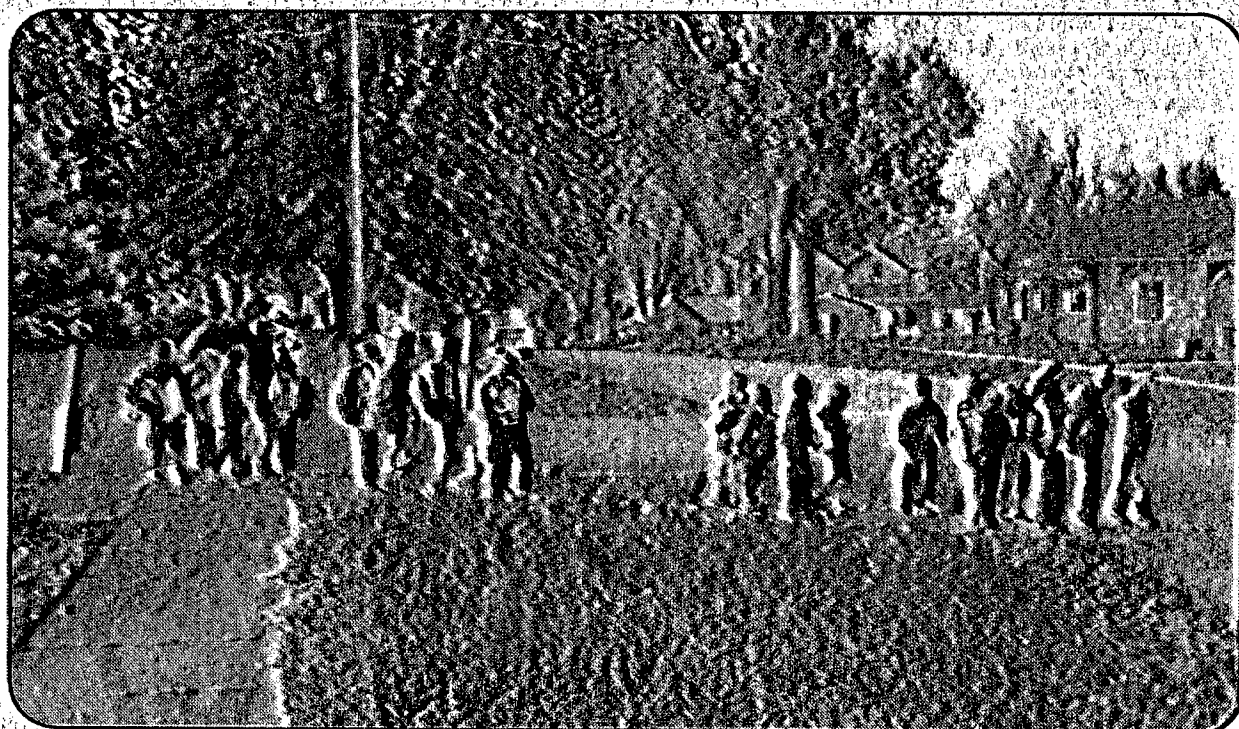

Students in the school will now go to Wayne Elementary and Laurel-Concord schools.

The Carroll district has been in existence since 1887 when boundaries were set and District #52 was established. At that time there were 14 pupils in a one-room school.

The school, originally located in the northwest section of town had to be moved when the railroad came to town. The price for this move was $110.

J.J. Gildersleeve, the first teacher for the Carroll school, was paid $40 per month.

In 1900 a two-story frame building was constructed. Students in grades one through five were on the lower floor and students in grades six through 10

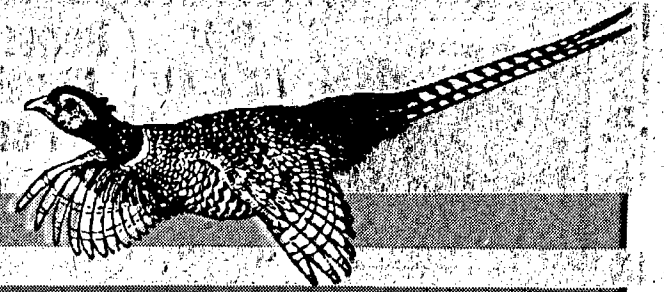

Children line up on the last day of school for activities planned including a final school picnic as the doors of the school in Carroll closed Friday, May 24.

Rural student rotations are conducted

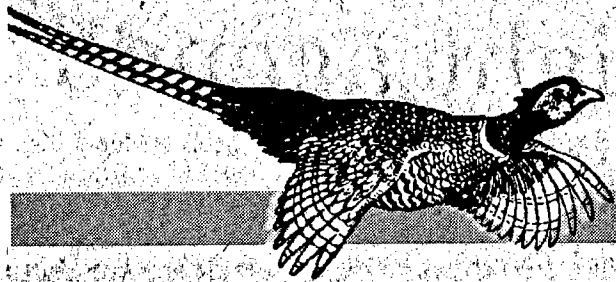

Fulfilling her health care education requirements for University of Medical Center (UNMC) was Marybeth Junck of Carroll who worked with Julie Schlomer, ARNP, Midwest OB/GYN, in Norfolk from Jan. 14 - May 7. Junck, a student in the UNMC College of Nursing, worked in Norfolk as part of her rural clinical rotations. Deborah Yahn of Sidney, a University of Nebraska Medical Center student in the College of Pharmacy, will be working with Will Davis RPh of Say-Mor Pharmacy from Aug. 5-30, as part of her health care education requirements at UNMC. UNMC students work with health professionals across Nebraska as part of their health care education requirements. Student rotations are part of the UNMC Rural Health Education Network (RHEN), an innovative program developed to help address the shortage of health professionals in rural Nebraska. Students represent the colleges of dentistry, medicine, nursing, pharmacy and the School of Allied Health Professionals. The purpose of RHEN is to change how and where primary care students at UNMC are educated. RHEN was developed to expose students to a rural health setting with the idea that if students receive their training in a rural area, the chances are much greater that they will return to a rural area once they complete their training.

The search for bigfoot

Suppose you're swimming happily in the deep blue waters near Hawaii when you remember the warning issued by the locals. Beware the great yawning mouth of the open water.

Would you be afraid? Or are you the type to shrug it off, thinking, "That's just a nutty legend"? Well, next time you're swimming in Hawaii, remember this: In 1976, just a year after the shark scare fest Jaws came out, researchers hauled a previously unknown creature from the ocean depths. They called it a megamouth shark (it had swallowed their sea anchor and it measured 14.5 feet and weighed 1,650 pounds—nearly as big as one of the largest great white sharks ever discovered.

Jimmy Jo's Jams
By James Shanks

Are you a believer or a skeptic? Maybe you spotted Bigfoot once when you were camping or had your toe nibbled by the Loch Ness monster. If so, I want to know! The same goes for the notion that someone would find a living version of a creature thought to have died out with the dinosaurs. Any person with all her marbles would probably think, "Hum Bug How ridiculous."

Yet this very thing happened with the discovery of an ancient fish in December 1938. A museum curator just happened to spot a gorgeous, 5-foot-long blue fish in a trawler's haul in South Africa. Experts confirmed it was a coelacanth (see-la-canth)—a fish that paleontologists believed went the way of the dodo about 70 million years ago.

With discoveries like this written into history books, I'm starting to understand why people dedicate their lives to finding Bigfoot and the Loch Ness monster. If crazy, fantastic creatures have been found before, why not these? Especially since there's some evidence that Bigfoot and "Nessie" do exist, such as the famous Patterson Film, which depicts the creature believed to be Bigfoot slouching through the Northwest woods.

In my pursuit of the truth, I called a friend of mine who lives in South Dakota. He seems to know something about everything and has done more things than I can recall. "Do we know anything new about Nessie?" I asked. Turns out he had planned a trip to find Nessie last year, but the funding is just not there for Loch Ness anymore," he said.

People have better luck with land-based creatures like Bigfoot. (They call these creatures Sasquatch in Canada, by the way. So if you're in Canada and happen to see one, be sure to use the right name. It might be insulted otherwise.) Last September, a group of researchers made a big discovery in southern Washington state: a half-body print that may be an impression of Bigfoot's rear end and legs.

The print was found in the Skookum Meadows area of the Gifford Pinchot National Forest. Researchers made a plaster cast of the print for future study. In case you were wondering, Bigfoot has more than just big feet.

What would we do if someone were ever to catch a Bigfoot? Are we really ready to be Han Solo to this North American Chewbacca? Would we put him in a zoo? Teach him to speak? Let him vote? Give him that heart-to-heart interview with Barbara Walters? I would pay money to see that. Give Jay Leno a chance to have him or her as a guest on the "Tonight Show". The possibilities are endless.

Many believe Bigfoot is a giant, unknown primate—possibly a missing link between humans and our ancestors. If Bigfoot is almost human, does he get almost-human rights? Like the right to sometimes hold the remote control?

It's a lot of fun to think about discovering a real-life version of what seems to be a mythical beast. It's been done before, and we're discovering new animals all the time.

So if you see me out one evening with my butterfly net, creeping through the edges of plowed fields, don't laugh, the fun is in the chase.

Capital News

Fiscal problems loom

By Ed Howard
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

The state might well be faced with an oncoming train in the form of more fiscal problems.

Listening to Gov. Mike Johanns last week, one was put in mind of the old Guy Clark song about a boy who saw his first diesel roar across the rails.

Look out, here she comes, she's a-comin'!
Look out there she goes, she's gone!

It wasn't bulletin news when Johanns said that another special session of the Legislature—the second in as many years—could be called to consider further reductions in state spending.

The economy is down, so tax receipts are down, so the state treasury isn't getting the revenue that had been projected. Nebraskans who are awake and even mildly cognizant of what's going on around them know all those things.

The potential for real news remains, however.

First, there is the business of the sputtering but ongoing referendum petition. If it succeeds, Nebraskans will have a chance to repeal the higher taxes approved by the 2002 Legislature. We should know in July if that effort, torn though it is by internal strife, succeeded.

If the referendum does win a place on the November ballot, what might it mean to the discussions of further budget cutting for a special session that could be called in say, July or August?

Interesting, eh?
There the Legislature would be, confronted with greater and greater need for greater and greater budget reductions; but lawmakers wouldn't even know if the state could depend on the higher revenues the recent tax increases were intended to provide.

How's that for a rough row to hoe?

No one can predict what will arise from a legislative session. But it would seem, at least in this corner, that lawmakers would not be inclined toward approval of more or higher taxes.

That situation would leave budget reductions, and budget reductions alone, as the route to fiscal salvation.

The debates would be long. The decisions would be difficult. The lobby would be mobbed.

established by Crete Carrier Corporation in memory of Jim Melcher of Stranton. Jim's brother Ted is involved in the trucking business and Jim had an interest in the trucking industry in that he was responsible for the dispatch of all the trucks of Noreco Mills delivering feed to livestock growers.

Don't forget about your neighbors

City Council
The City Council will meet Tuesday, June 11 at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall at Third and Pearl.

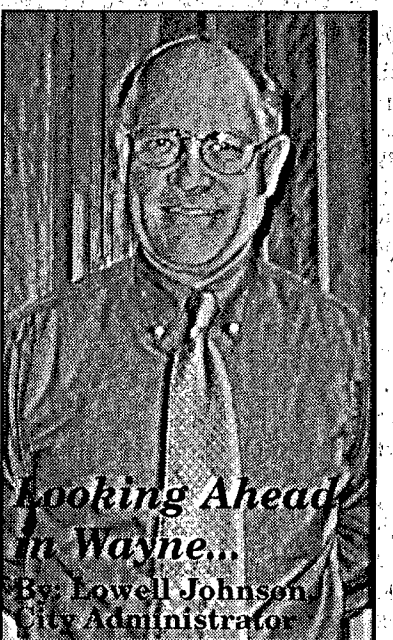

Good neighbors
Stand across the street tomorrow and take a look at your own yard. Like what you see? That is what the neighbors see and what drivers see when going by.

This is that 'tween' time of year when the snow isn't covering things up and nature is growing things like crazy to beat the competition and get established for the summer. If we live out in the country, we can create our own yardscape and few people care. If we live in town and someone lives 10 steps away, it affects the neighbors.

The rules for living together in Wayne have been developed over the years and generally work pretty well as the City Code. It describes what the community has defined as nuisances and includes abandoned appliances and furniture, unlicensed cars, lumber and assorted car parts and debris scattered around or piled, piles of anything that attracts insects or rodents or wild animals, and unmowed grass and weeds.

In the city office we field some complaints this time of year about folks who are getting behind in the yardscape category and we refer those to the police department beat officers assigned to those neighborhoods. About 90 percent of the issues go away with a phone call or personal contact, for those that don't we move to the legal notice process and finally clean up the problem and bill the property owner if necessary. If the owner doesn't pay we file a lien against the property and recover when it is sold. We hate to do that. All in Wayne looked pretty good for Memorial Day this year. After last September, Wayne looks like not only a pretty place, but a pretty good place to live. Enjoy your neighbors.

In 1909 the 11th grade was added to the school and in 1913 five students completed school through the 11th grade. In 1914 a brick building was constructed at a cost of $19,000. It contained seven classrooms, an assembly room and a full basement.

The class of 1915 was the first 12th grade class to graduate from Carroll High School. Classes for grades kindergarten through 12th grade were held in the building until 1958 when District 52 merged with District 17 of Wayne to form the Wayne-Carroll district.

The class of 1958, made up of nine seniors, was the last to graduate from Carroll High School. At that time, the students in grades nine through 12 were moved to Wayne and the district became a K-8 district until 1967.

It was then that seventh and eighth grade students began being bussed to Wayne for classes. Since 1970 the school has been a K-4 district with David Lutt as principal.

Several long-time employees of the school shared memories with those attending last week's picnic.

Sharon Olson, who taught third and fourth grade in recent years and has been a teacher at the school for 28 years said that as each year's high school seniors are announced, she remembers those who have attended the Carroll school by sending them a picture of themselves when they were her students.

This year she sent pictures to Kayla Schmale, Jessica Claussen, Devin Bethune, Andrea Bethune, Lindsay Stoltenberg, Tim Puntney and Andrea Simpson.

Betty Morris, who served as head cook for 39 years until her retirement, said she has been "coming to this school for more than 50 years, over a half a century."

During this past school year, 22 students attended classes in Carroll. They and the three teachers and other staff members will now be taking a trip in a different direction when school bells begin ringing in August.

The contents of the school will be auctioned off on Sunday, June 2 with the building being sold by sealed bid.

Council has light agenda

By Clara Osten
Of the Herald

In one of the shorter meetings in recent weeks, the Wayne City Council passed several resolutions and took action on another item during Tuesday's meeting.

Following a public hearing, the council approved a resolution to allow for National Functional Classification Revision for several streets in Wayne.

Vern Schulz, Public Works Superintendent, told council members that he and Lowell Johnson, City Administrator, had visited with officials in Lincoln about the situation and were advised that for new roads to be classified, others would have to lose their classification.

The streets involved include Sherman Street from Seventh Street to 12th Street, 12th Street from Sherman to Main Street and 14th Street through Wayne State College.

The streets to be re-classified include Country Club Road from Highway 15 to the proposed end of Claycomb Road and Claycomb Road to Providence Road.

The re-classification of the roads would make them eligible for federal funding for future improvement projects.

Also passed at Tuesday's meeting was Resolution 2002-33 which accepted a bid of $19,731 from Midwest Masonry Restoration Co. of Parkston, S.D. for tuck pointing work to be done on the City Hall.

An additional $2,000 will be awarded from the State of Nebraska for Senior Center congregate meals following the passage of Resolution 2002-32.

Discussion was held but no action taken at the present time on an item designed to amend the city code in regard to the display and sale of merchandise with restrictions in the central business district.

Several council members voiced concern about dealing with the situation on a case-by-case basis and Councilman Verdel Lutt said he felt it was a waste of time to deal with the situation now when it might change when work is done on the highway through Wayne in the near future.

The council voted unanimously to retain Johnson Erickson O'Brian for engineering services for the design and construction of a water main from Well #6 to the 16 foot main in the Highway 15 Right-of-Way and from that point to connect with the city golf course irrigation line.

The council also approved Mayor Sheryl Lindau's appointment as fire chief for the department for the upcoming year.

The council's next meeting will be Tuesday, June 11 at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

WSC student attends training

Beth Johnson of Wayne, a senior business administration/marketing major with a minors in art and online media at Wayne State College, was among students who attended a four-day direct marketing institute in Chicago early this spring. Most meetings and lectures were held in the R.R. Donnelly Building, the largest printing company in the U.S.

She earned a scholarship valued at $2,000 from the Direct Marketing Educational Foundation (DMEF) and R.R. Donnelly with a portion provided by the Wayne State College Foundation.

"I was amazed to learn how large the field of direct marketing really is. I was also impressed by the quality of the speakers," Johnson said.

"They were marketing professionals, working in several areas of the direct marketing field. They shared information about current trends and new innovations in direct marketing. Several of the speakers shared insights about how the Internet is becoming an important direct marketing tool and is revolutionizing many of the ways businesses approach direct marketing today."

Johnson is a junior business administration/marketing major from Wayne. She is involved in the honors program, Alpha Lambda Delta National Honor Society, the Cosmic Ray Observation Project, Phi Beta Lambda professional business organization, the Art Club, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Campus Crusade for Christ.

She was inducted into Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges in 2001 and is active in her church. She is the daughter of Carl and Peggy Johnson of Wayne.

After a nomination by Pat Lutt, assistant professor of business and technology, Johnson wrote essays, sent her resume and completed applications to gain acceptance to the institute program. Lutt and Dr. Kenn Hallgren worked together on selected WSC applications with the best interest of the students in mind.

"The goal of the institute is to introduce students to the basics of direct and interactive marketing," said Hallgren, WSC business professor. "Students have an opportunity to work in teams. Sessions include database and relationship marketing; consumer psychology and the customer life cycle; direct marketing media including mail, catalog, telephone and interactive; creative topics including offers and testing; applications of marketing; the job search and how to market yourself for students to become aware of the many career opportunities in the field."

Habitat

'If you plant it, they will come'

As many of you know, over the years, I've worked with the Soil Conservation Service (SCS), Natural Resources, Conservation Service (NRCS) and the Natural Resources District (NRD).

Habitat improvement was one of the projects we worked on. Good habitat not only gives wildlife a place to thrive, the cover created by the habitat helps to prevent erosion and filtered out sediment protecting our ground water.

If you're going to have good habitat, you need to do it right. Establishment of good habitat requires a little time and pre-planning.

Establishing good habitat is more than working up the soil and throwing out the seed.

Recently, I spent some time with Ron Edwards, President of Nature's Own and had the opportunity to talk with him about what is needed to create good wildlife habitat. Ron has been in the business for over 13 years and has helped to establish some of the finest and most productive wildlife habitat areas through out the U.S.

I asked Ron what a person needed to do to get started on their way towards establishing a good wildlife planting and habitat?

Ron stated, "pre-planning is an important part of planting wildlife habitat. You need to decide what type of wildlife you want to attract, how large of an area you want to put in and what your long term goals are."

If you want to establish habitat that will attract upland game, you'll plant a different mixture than you would for deer or turkeys. This is the reason that there are different mixtures for individual species. There are mixtures for upland game, deer, turkey, doves and waterfowl.

This is not saying that upland game won't visit a turkey or dove planting, but each species has certain wants and needs and the individual mixtures are planted with each species in mind."

Ron indicated "the area doesn't need to be real large to be effective, it needs to be in an area that the deer, turkey etc. are using. If it's good habitat and the wildlife is near by, they'll use it."

The important thing that you need to do prior to planting habitat is to make sure that your ground preparation is done correctly. To begin with, you need to take a soil sample to find out what is lacking in your soil.

Without a soil test, you may do everything right, but since the soil is lacking some mineral, your planting won't reach its full potential, so knowing what's needed and adding it to the soil will help to assure a good stand.

In the spring, you'll want to work have the ground worked three to four inches. The soil temperature should be in the mid 50's to assure proper germination.

'Of the Outdoors'

Adding a starter fertilizer or pre-plant fertilizer is also very important! These along with the other minerals needed can be purchased from your local co-op or agri-chemical dealer.

Depending on the size, you can seed the area with a broadcast spreader, three point hitch seeder or chest spreader. You'll want to make sure that you seed according to the manufacturers recommendations. If you use too little seed, weeds will become a problem. Densely planted habitat will out compete weeds and in areas that have a good stand, weeds won't be a problem."

Once the seed has been planted, you'll want to rake or drag the area to incorporate the seed into the soil.

If you have access to a roller or packer, it's not a bad idea to run over the area a couple of times to assure a good firm seed bed.

As the season progresses, if for some reason weeds become a problem, mowing will help with weed control. Mowing will stress the weeds, but the forbs planted for habitat will survive and once the weeds are knocked back the forbs will fill in and eliminate the weeds.

The food plot should produce for three to five years, but once the stand starts to thin, it's a good idea to inter-seed into the plot.

You can lightly disk or drag the area after you've mowed or baled the existing forbs in the plot. Once this is done, you can broadcast the seed into the existing plot."

I've hunted with Ron in some of the plots that his company has established and these plots attract upland game, deer and waterfowl, making them the most productive wildlife area in the area.

Ron's company, Nature's Own has a large 30,000 square foot facility near Manteno, IL, and they're continually testing and improving their habitat mixtures, running 60 to 100 research plots near their facility to assure that Nature's Own has the highest quality seed that can be offered.

If you'd like more information on planting or improving wildlife habitat, check out Nature's Own web site at: www.habitatseeds.com

Sok receives scholarship

Josh Sok was the 2002 Nebraska Ornithologist's Union Scholarship recipient. Sok was engaged in a number of N.O.U. activities during the weekend of May 17-19.

On the 17th, there was a banquet at the Elkhorn Valley Museum and Willetha Lueschen Bird Library. Following the banquet, there was a photo presentation by Bub Blake of Chambers (who contributes to Birder's World and Nebraskaland Magazine) that centered on Cranes and various waterfowl.

On May 18, Sok accompanied a group led by Mark Brogie, (Science teacher from Creighton) to Niobrara State Park where 124 bird species were identified. Dr. Roger Cutshall of Winside also led another group to the Grove Lake area where they identified 60+ species of birds that same afternoon.

At the evening banquet held at Northeast Community College Lifelong Learning Center, the group was entertained by Neal Ratzlaff and his slide presentation on "The Birds of the Lewis and Clark Expedition." Sunday's activities concluded with another field trip and meal at the Learning Center.

Sok was presented with an annual student membership in the organization. He is the second Winside Biology student in the past two years to earn the scholarship. Steven Fleer was last year's recipient. Josh is the son of Paul and Kim Sok of Winside.

Munter receives recognition

Adam Munter has been named an All-American Scholar by the United States Achievement Academy.

The USAA has established the All-American Scholar Award Program to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the academic disciplines. The All-American Scholars must earn a 3.3 or higher grade point average. Only scholars selected by a school instructor, counselor or other qualified sponsor are accepted. These scholars are also eligible for other awards given by the USAA.

Adam, who attends Wayne High School, was nominated for this national award by Rocky Ruhl.

His name will appear in the All-American Scholar Yearbook, which is published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. Certainly, winners of the All-American Scholar Awards should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects All-American Scholars upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other qualified sponsors. Once awarded, the students may be recognized by the USAA for other honors.

Adam is the son of Jake and Terri Munter of Wayne. His grandparents are Jim and Marcile Thomas and Bonnie Munter, all of Wayne.

Herbs for Health

Hot Herbal Beverages Increase Cancer Risk

In North America the most commonly consumed "herbal" beverages are coffee and tea extracts. Potential benefits include the mild stimulation due to caffeine. Also, numerous antioxidant nutrients in tea - especially green tea - may provide a variety of health benefits including prevention of certain types of cancer. However, the habit of drinking very hot tea or very hot coffee, with milk, was found to increase the risk of developing cancer of the esophagus.

Researchers reporting in International Journal of Cancer found that the risk was four times greater than if these hot beverages had not been consumed. Interestingly, drinking warm tea or hot black coffee was not found to increase esophageal cancer risk. An increased risk of the cancer also was identified among South Americans who drink a hot beverage known as mate - a type of tea that is consumed through a straw, putting hot liquid directly on the esophagus.

To put their findings into perspective, the authors noted that 90% of all esophageal cancer is due to tobacco smoking and alcohol drinking.

Use of Medicine for Depression More Common Today

According to a report in The Journal of the American Medical Association, only 7 out of 1,000 persons in the US were treated on an outpatient basis with medicines for depression in 1987. Ten years later, in 1997, 23 out of 1,000 persons were treated on an outpatient basis for depression - a threefold increase. Any stigma associated with having depression and/or receiving treatment for depression seems to be declining.

Various treatments are available in depression care. Among the most common are medicines and psychotherapy. According to the report, in 37% of individuals treated for depression received medicines in 1987. By 1997 this number doubled to 75%. The availability of newer medicines (called selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors) with fewer side effects and less complicated dosage regimens is one reason cited by the report authors for this increase in medicine use in depression.

WANT TO REDUCE UNWANTED MAIL? The Direct Marketing Association Can Help

Consumers can greatly reduce the amount of junk mail they receive in their mailboxes by taking advantage of a free service offered by the Direct Marketing Association.

Registering with the Direct Marketing Association Mail Preference Service will remove your name from Direct Marketing Association members' mailing lists. This service can substantially reduce the amount of national advertising mail you are now receiving. The Telephone Preference Service of the Direct Marketing Association will remove your name from members' telemarketing lists as well.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office can provide post cards pre-addressed to the Direct Marketing Association to assist in removing your name from mailing and telemarketing lists.

Registering with the Mail Preference Service and Telephone Preference Service will not eliminate all unwanted mail and telemarketing calls, but it can significantly reduce the number of contacts. Businesses who are not members of the Direct Marketing Association may continue to contact you through the mail and by telephone. Local and home based businesses may not be DMA members.

Any time you complete a warranty card, purchase a magazine subscription, order from a catalogue or complete a market research survey, you run the risk of having your name added to another list of names that may be offered for sale to other businesses.

If you do not want your name and other personal information to be sold by the companies you do business with, request that your name be removed from customer lists that may be rented or sold to other marketers. Information about how to opt out of marketing lists is often provided on companies' materials and order forms.

Those marketers who are operating contest scams or other scams are not likely to belong to the Direct Marketing Association. This means that even after you register with the Mail Preference Service or the Telephone Preference Service, you may continue to receive scam attempts through the mail and over the telephone.

You may tell telemarketers who call you to put you on their "Do Not Call" lists. Keep a note by your phone with the company name, name of the person you talked to, and date of the call. If a telemarketer from the same business calls you again, make a note of the date and report it to the Federal Trade Commission, Consumer Response Center. The phone number is 1-877-FTC-HELP.

If you would like to register your name with the Direct Marketing Association Mail Preference Service or the Telephone Preference Service call or write to the Consumer Division of the Nebraska Attorney General's Office for a pre-addressed post card. A card should be filled out for each member of the household, and cards should be re-submitted annually.

For more information about this or any other consumer issue contact: Office of Attorney General Don Stenberg, Consumer Protection Division, 2115 State Capitol, Lincoln, NE, 68509, (402) 471-2682, Consumer Protection Line - 1-800-727-6432. Website address: www.ago.state.ne.us.

Allowing adolescents to make decisions will help them in the future

Adolescents need help from their parents to make the right decisions for the future. Today's youth have more decisions to make and are expected to learn more at a younger age. With a high percentage of single-parent consistent in enforcing their rules. Parents also need to realize as their children get older and more mature, they may want to discuss why they have to follow certain rules. Parents need to be open and flexible in discussing their rules and in getting input from their children when making rules. If teens disagree with certain rules, parents need to explain to their children why they enforce the rules they do and keep the lines of communication open.

Parents shouldn't be disappointed if their children don't agree with everything they say. Research shows - regardless of quarrels in children's adolescent years - families continue to be close.

LB branch honored for service

Aid Association for Lutherans/Lutheran Brotherhood (AAL/LB) has recognized AAL Branch 9784 in Allen for its effectiveness in bringing AAL/LB's charitable resources straight to its members' own community.

The branch received a Superior rating, the highest given by the fraternal organization, for its community service efforts.

AAL/LB is a fraternal benefit society that was formed through the merger of Aid Association for Lutherans (AAL) of Appleton, Wis. and Lutheran Brotherhood (LB) of Minneapolis, Minn. at the beginning of the year. The organization is honoring its branch members for their service to Lutherans and to others in their communities during 2001.

To achieve a Gold Star rating, the branch must conduct regular business meetings, an election and a planning meeting and sponsor at least one benevolent, one educational and one member welcome or membership growth event. Three additional activities of any combination must be conducted to receive this superior rating. The branch must submit an annual financial report and achieve an average of two volunteer hours per benefit member in the branch.

AAL/LB's more than 11,500 branches throughout the country meet regularly to carry out a variety of volunteer efforts, fund-raising projects and educational programs to help themselves, their communities and the people in need.

Aid Association for Lutherans and Lutheran Brotherhood merged Jan. 1, 2002 to create Aid Association for Lutherans/Lutheran Brotherhood (AAL/LB), the largest fraternal benefit society in the United States. Composed of nearly three million members, the organization offers a broad array of financial products and services, as well as charitable programs, to Lutherans, their families and their communities.

Osteoporosis - Not Just a Women's Disease

Over 2 million men in America suffer from osteoporosis and millions more are at risk. Osteoporosis is a disease that causes the bones to deteriorate and break easily. Ways to help prevent bone loss include: not smoking, not drinking excessively, a healthy diet with plenty of calcium and vitamin D, and exercise. The best exercise for your bones is weight-bearing exercise. Walking, jogging, stair climbing, dancing, tennis or weight-lifting are good. Be sure to check with your doctor regarding the exercise so as not to put excessive strain on your bones.

OFFICER GIVES ADDRESS

Lt. Col. Richard L. Trail, US Air Force, retired, gave the Memorial Day Address at the Wakefield Cemetery. Also delivering Memorial Day remarks was the former American Legion Commander and Wakefield resident, Duane Tappe, who now calls McCook home.

Trail, who also lives at McCook, grew up in southwest Nebraska. He was appointed to the very first class to attend the brand new Air Force Academy in Colorado following his high school graduation in 1955.

He completed his training at the Academy in 1959 and entered pilot training, and was assigned to Strategic Air Command to fly KC-97 tankers. In 1964, Trail upgraded to the new KC-135 jet powered tanker which is still used today.

During the Viet Nam conflict he spent 450 days flying refueling missions in Southeast Asia. Trail and his crew earned the MacKay Trophy in 1967 for flying the most meritorious flight during the year.

Trail completed 25 years of active duty in 1979. He returned to Nebraska to operate his family farm near McCook. He retired from farming in 1997 and since has taught college classes; is an active flight instructor and regularly flies as a corporate pilot.

Also taking part in the Memorial Day service was the color guards and firing squad of the American Legion Post 81, Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 5765, their auxiliaries and the Sons of the American Legion Squadron.

Pastor Bruce Schut of St. John's Lutheran Church gave the invocation. Band members from the Wakefield School, under the direction of Jim Jordan, played the National Anthem and Taps. Legion Commander Jim Clark made introductions and read the Roll Call of Deceased Veterans.

PURCHASE TREE

The fifth grade class at Wakefield Community School purchased a Royal Red Oak Tree in memory of one of their teacher's husband.

Terri Samuelson's husband, Lyle, recently died and her students came up with the idea of a tree outside the classroom window as a special gift to their teacher.

Country Nursery of Wayne planted the tree May 21 as the students, Mrs. Samuelson and the other class teacher, Mrs. Garwood, watched.

HONORARY MEMBER

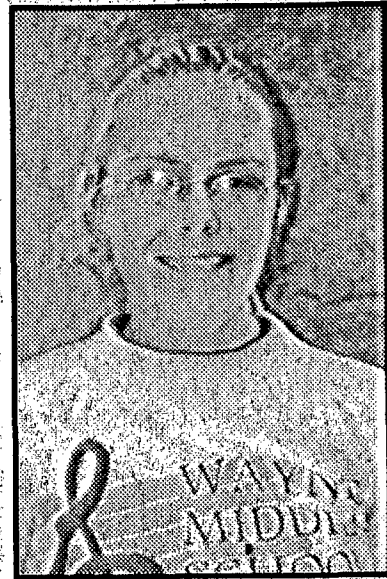

The National Honor Society of the Wakefield School tapped Tom Eaton as their National Honor Society 2002 Honorary Member. Making the presentation was Toan Nguyen, president of the National Honor Society.

The National Honor Society has been naming honorary members since 1969. Individuals are selected for their contributions to education and community, for their characteristics which symbolize the National Honor Society.

FRIEND OF EDUCATION

Alice Johnson was selected to receive the Friends of Education Award during Honors Convocation held recently. Making the announcement was Kathy Mitchell, a member of the school staff and the Wakefield Education

Emily Bruflat

Bruflat's poem is selected for publication

Emily Bruflat's poem entitled "Wild Horses" was selected for the fall edition of "A Celebration of Young Poets," a publication devoted to the writings of students in grades 7-12.

Her poem follows:

Wild Horses

Thundering across a sunlit prairie, Silhouetted against the pastel sky. Wild horses break through the silence, Galloping for the freedom that exists in their souls.

One shining star appears in the twilight horizon, The sunset duplicates on an advancing stream. The leader strikes his hooves against the heavens, Never angry, only wild, only free.

The sun sinks beneath the boundless meadow, The horses' shadows wither to nothing, The taste of liberty lingers in the calmed air, A great freedom that belongs to their wildness.

Deep blue clouds uncover a pale orange moon, The horses splash through its glittering reflection. A gentle breeze blows through their wild manes, As they run on into the night.

Pure black bodies race over endless hills, Twinkling stars shining in their savage eyes. Running not from a threatening danger, But in a pure joy of being free...

Association.

Members of the Association, Board of Education and school administration make the selection for the annual award which was begun in 2000.

Alice was cited for her volunteer work at school since she retired as an instructor.

BRENDA MEIER RECOGNIZED

Midland Lutheran College recently honored Brenda Meier with the 2002 Outstanding Young Alumni Award. Brenda is the daughter of Maxine and the late Harold Meier of Wakefield.

The recipients of the award are chosen for their personal and professional achievements since graduation from Midland College. Brenda earned her degree in 1993 and is also a graduate of Wakefield High School.

She joined Lutheran World Relief in Baltimore, Md. in September, 2001 as a Communication associate for parish projects and partnerships.

She previously served as creative service coordinator for Bethphage in Omaha and as communications and publications manager for Nebraska Lutheran Outdoor Ministries.

She received an Association of Lutheran Development Executives (ALDE) Creativity Award and two honorable mentions in 1998.

In 2001, she traveled to Tanzania on two Nebraska Synod trips to visit in Companion synod, the Northern Diocese of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Tanzania. She researched the needs for services and education for the people with disabilities there and developed a ministry partnership between Rejoice! Lutheran Church of Omaha, Bethphage and the Nebraska Synod to provide school supplies for students at two parish schools for children with disabilities.

Itching drives one nuts

You've heard of Chinese water torture? Well, I can do one better: itching! The medical term is pruritus; either one can drive you nuts and have you begging for mercy.

Did you ever consider that the skin is the largest organ of your body? For the past three weeks, my skin has been itching. Not my arms and legs, which one could scratch in public; but my torso, including some areas that are definitely off limits.

It started the night before the Big Farmer's surgery. I was having trouble sleeping anyway, and the itching didn't help. By the next night when I went to bed, I was exhausted, so I slept. But, every time I was awake, I scratched.

Finally, the next day, after he got back to his original room, I looked at the offending locations. Red blotches, everywhere! I hurried to the nearest drug store and bought Benadryl and began popping it. It didn't faze it.

Mike's "hospitalist" suggested Peppid because it is also an antihistamine antagonist. I bought it, and some Caladryl lotion. I still itched.

I bought Ivory detergent and washed all underwear, without fabric softener. Finally, I left the hospital on Friday afternoon, determined to call a doctor.

First, the Ashland clinic, where Mike is a patient and I have worked. No doctor there that day. Then I tried the office of the Gyn gal I see once a year. The message said they closed at 2:00 on Friday. It was 2:30. In desperation, I called the office of the medical director at Tabitha. He ordered a prednisone dosepack for me at the local pharmacy and I picked it up on the way back to the hospital.

All weekend, I itched, on Monday morning, I camped out on the door of the local clinic in Louisville. I talked the receptionist into letting me see the physician's assistant first; I think she could see I was close to tears. He ordered an injection.

Finally, the redness subsided. I got the bill a week later; $20 for the shot, $56 for five minutes with the PA!

It's better, but I'm still itching. Now, I know how Job felt. And, I'm wondering how long this is going to last. At least we are out of the hospital, and I'm free to scratch!

'Ag Pen Pals'

Local family serves

The Randy and Shari Dunklau family of Wayne have been Ag Pen Pals with students at Fontanelle Elementary School in Omaha during this past school year.

The Dunklau family has been exchanging letters with fourth graders taught by Mrs. Janhs.

Ag Pen Pals is a project of Nebraska's Agriculture in the Classroom Program, which seeks to help young Nebraskans learn about the importance of agriculture and how it affects their daily lives. During the 2001-02 school year, 2220 classrooms and 220 farm and ranch families have exchanged at least three letters, describing life in the country or city and answering each other's questions. Many Ag Pen Pals also correspond via e-mail, videos, photos and classroom visits.

Shari Dunklau said the students were most interested to learn about all the things soybeans can be used for.

"It was interesting to me that the students that most of the students had never even been on a farm," Dunklau said.

In addition to the letters, the Dunklaus sent the students photos and received cards and pictures from the students.

The market was steady on Thursday's stocker and feeder sale. There were 900 head sold.

Good and choice steer calves were $90 to $100. Choice and prime lightweight calves were $100 to $110. Good and choice yearling steers were $70 to $80. Good and choice yearling heifers were $70 to $78.

Butcher hog head count at the Norfolk Livestock Market on Tuesday totaled 607. Prices were $1 to $1.50 lower on butchers and steady on sows.
